The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

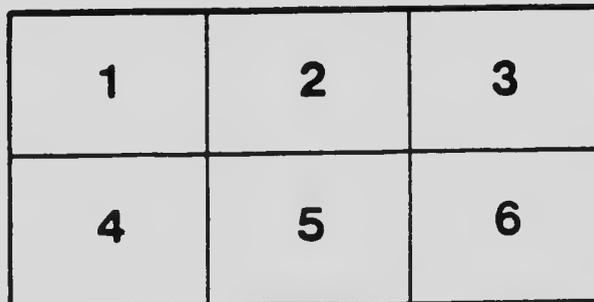

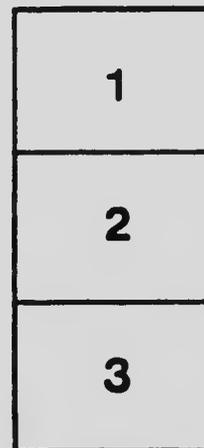

British Columbia Archives and Records Service.

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol \rightarrow (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ∇ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the method:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

British Columbia Archives and Records Service.

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole \rightarrow signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ∇ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

B. C. Prohibition Act Condemned by Labor Councils

"Whereas the electors of British Columbia are to be asked to pronounce upon the British Columbia Prohibition Act at the forthcoming general elections in this Province; and

"Whereas organized labor, through its representative bodies and leaders, have placed themselves upon record as opposed to sumptuary legislation of this character as being not only totally inadequate to accomplish the aim professedly sought, but also harmful to the best interests of organized labor, entailing, as it does, unemployment to members with consequent impairment of its numerical strength; be it, therefore,

"Resolved, That the Trades and Labor Council of Vancouver, B.C., in harmony with representative bodies of organized labor elsewhere, places itself upon record as opposed to the proposed 'British Columbia Prohibition Act,' and to the principle involved therein."—"B.C. Federationist," July 21, 1916.

Victoria and Vancouver Trades and Labor Councils place themselves on Record as Opposed to the BRITISH COLUMBIA PROHIBITION ACT

NOT ONE WORD IN FAVOR

A very peculiar feature in connection with the consideration of the British Columbia Prohibition Act by the Provincial Legislature is that during the many times that it was before the House for discussion, not one single word was uttered by any member of the Legislature in praise of the Act, or in defence of the principles enunciated by the measure. The Bill came up, as usual, for first, second and third readings, as well as lengthy discussion in committee stage. Yet not a member of the House, Conservative, Liberal, Socialist or Independent, advocated or described it as a Prohibition Act in any sense of the word or outlined in what way the legislation would be for the best interests of the Province. No one spoke in favor. Every speech or remark made in the Legislative Halls was against the Bill, its principles were denounced and ridiculed, every section criticized and declared ineffective to obtain the result pretended by its originators—the prohibition of the sale or use of liquor.

B. C. PRODUCTION IN 1915

The total value of live stock produced in British Columbia in the year 1915 was $8,797,875, as against $6,044,423 in 1913.

Total horticultural products increased to $1,642,300, as against $1,120,268 in 1913.

Dairy products increased from $2,593,404 to $3,034,340 in the same period.

The grand total of agricultural production for 1915 was $31,127,801, as against $26,222,033 in 1913.

Agricultural Products from Foreign Points into British Columbia (Customs Returns).

The total value of these for 1915 was $2,941,163, as against $7,133,777 in 1913, which is very largely accounted for by the increase in home production during this period.

Agricultural Imports from Other Provinces in Canada into British Columbia.

Year 1915	$13,493,807
Year 1913	$12,936,980

The growth of the Department of Agriculture has been continuous since the year 1908, when there were eight Government officials.

In 1915 there were 45, the majority of these being trained experts attached to the Horticultural, Fruit Inspection, Dairy, Poultry, Live Stock, Soils and Crops, and Entomological Branches.

In recognition of the increasing importance of the agricultural industry in British Columbia, the Legislative Assembly has voted increased appropriations during the same period, whilst under the provisions of the Agricultural Instruction Act, the Dominion Government also makes a substantial grant to this Province in aid of agricultural education and demonstration work.

Some of the chief activities of the Department are concerned with Farmers' and Women's Institutes, which receive a small grant, and for whom the Department arranges a series of lectures and demonstrations on agricultural matters twice a year, covering all the chief districts.

Field crop competitions are also held, and these have proved very popular and have a strong educational value.

THE AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS in the Province are in close touch with the Department. Judges are furnished free of all cost to those holding fairs each year, whilst grants in aid of buildings and prize lists are awarded annually.

Other objects of activity include the administration of the Noxious Weeds Act, the Pound District Act, Bee inspection work, and the collection of agricultural statistics, which has now been systematically carried out since the year 1912.

Chief Branches of the Agricultural Department

HORTICULTURAL BRANCH.

This Branch is responsible for apple packing schools, pruning schools, the judging of horticultural exhibits at fairs, precooling, cold storage and transportation investigations, variety yields, garden competitions, blight control work, orchard demonstrations, experimental orchards, control of insect pests and diseases, and the advertising and marketing of British Columbia fruit in the Prairies.

The horticultural products of this Province have made good records, not only in the Dominion but in the British and Australian markets, and with the coming into bearing of thousands of acres of young orchards, the pre-eminence of British Columbia fruit will be emphasized still more in the near future.

2,360 cars of fruit were produced in 1915, as against 1,290 in 1913.

FRUIT INSPECTION BRANCH.

Headquarters at Vancouver, where all importations of nursery stock, etc., are examined and fumigated, and under whose control a number of sub-stations are established for the inspection of fruit and vegetables imported into the Province.

LIVE STOCK BRANCH.

This Branch includes the following divisions: Veterinary, Dairy, Poultry, Soils and Crops. The most important work has been done in the testing of cattle for tuberculosis and the inspecting of dairy premises during the last few years. Cow Testing Associations have been organized and records obtained of the profit or loss of each individual cow.

THE POULTRY DIVISION conducts an annual Egg-Laying Contest, and is responsible for much instructional and demonstration work.

THE SOIL AND CROP DIVISION handles field crop competitions, boys' and girls' crop competitions, demonstration stations, and the erection and filling of silos.

The mild climate of this Province, together with the wealth of forage and grain crops produced in the rich alluvial valleys, provide the most favorable conditions for the development of the dairy cow.

The average annual production per cow is higher in British Columbia than in any other Province of Canada.

The total area under cultivation in 1915 was 288,770 acres, being an increase of sixteen per cent. over the year 1913.

British Columbia's Timber Farm

100 million acres of British Columbia's area consists of forested mountain slopes and plateaus, which cannot ever be used for agricultural purposes. A tree is really, however, only a giant plant, and the principles governing the growing of a forest crop are similar to those for ordinary farm crops. To make and keep these mountain lands productive, so that they will help to support a population, the forest must therefore be treated as a crop which must be seeded, tended during the period of growth, properly harvested, and manufactured and energetically marketed. If this is done successfully, these lands will forever provide means of a livelihood for thousands of woodsmen, trainmen, boat crews, sawmill men, carpenters, cabinet makers, and the numerous other workers required in the forest industry. They will also yield a very large revenue to the Province and materially reduce the amount which must be collected by direct taxation.

The Government has already made a good start in this timber farming business. The scaling of wood cut, and the collection of revenue has been systematized, some improvements in the method of harvesting have been made, a rough classification and inventory of the forests is over half completed, fire protection has been greatly improved, and material progress achieved in developing a market for the forest crop.

No other province or state on the American continent has attacked its forest problem with such energy as British Columbia. But it is a monumental task, and to be worked out successfully must have the interest and help of every citizen. If you wish to know more about British Columbia's forest problem, or the plans and work of the Government to solve it, or about any of the products of the forest, address the

Trades and Labor Council

ORGANIZED FEBRUARY, 1880

Chartered by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada

DECLARATION OF PURPOSES

For the purpose of extending, strengthening and perpetuating the organization of labor in the City of Victoria and surrounding districts; to improve its present social condition; to resist the impositions of additional burdens; to mitigate the evils of unjust legislation; to work for enforcement of existing laws favorable to labor; to oppose immigration of Asiatics and any other nationality of a lower standard of living than obtains in Canada; to work for the establishment of as near as possible of a six-hour day in all branches of industry; to disseminate knowledge, and in every practical way advance the material welfare of the wage-earners, individually and collectively.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

1. Free compulsory education.
2. Legal working day of six hours, and six days to a week.
3. Government inspection of all industries.
4. The abolition of the contract system on all public works.
5. A minimum living wage, based on local conditions.
6. Public ownership of all franchises, such as railways, telegraphs, telephones, water-works, lighting, etc.
7. Tax reform, by lessening taxation on industry and increasing it on land values.
8. Abolition of the Dominion Senate.
9. Exclusion of all Asiatics.
10. The Union Label to be placed on all manufactured goods, where practicable, and all government and municipal supplies.
11. Abolition of child labor for children under sixteen years, and the establishing of equal pay for equal work for men and women.
12. Abolition of property qualification for all public offices.
13. Voluntary arbitration of labor disputes.
14. Compulsory vote and proportional representation with grouped constituencies and abolition of municipal wards.
15. Direct legislation through the initiative and referendum.
16. Prohibition of prison labor in competition with free labor.
17. Equal suffrage for men and women over 21 years of age.

OUR IDEALS

There are many important questions that arise in human affairs; questions that vitally affect the whole mass of mankind. In answering these questions, men are prone to base their replies upon the effects they desire to produce that will result in their own advantage. In the scheme of human affairs, it is necessary that we consider all causes that act upon the whole body of mankind; what the effects are or will be upon the race as a whole, which is of more importance than the promotion and advancement of individuals.

In order that we may be better qualified to answer these important questions that arise, which are of such vital importance, it is necessary for us to consider humanity as a whole. What is human life? What are its necessities? What is its destiny? These are the basic questions that must be correctly answered before we can hope properly to answer those minor questions that, while of secondary consideration, are of vital importance, in that they affect the everyday conditions under which the whole race must exist.

To enter into the consideration of these questions, in this relative order of importance, we must first consider what is human life? In doing this it is not necessary to enter into a discussion of the origin of man, whether man, as he exists, as we know him, is the product of evolutionary laws, or the being of divine creation, are matters of no consequence, and in reality have no real bearing upon the fact that must be weighed in the balance of reason.

Antecedents, with all this formative influence, have produced man, as we must consider him; that he is the product of evolutionary causes, none will deny, that these causes have operated to influence his physical appearance and his mental development is beyond question. These facts being clearly established, prove conclusively that under the right influences, under properly operating causes, man can be changed to a large degree, and it rests with man himself whether he shall continue to evolve into a higher order of being or sink back into a lower order of mentality and physical imperfection.

As all evolutions result from an operative cause, it will be wise to consider what causes are operative now to influence man's life, and if those causes are found to be detrimental, that they are repressing and distorting, then it is the duty of mankind to remove the causes that are retarding the growth and development of the race.

Human life is largely made up of our mentality. Our mental development gives us greater perception, enables us to conceive bolder and broader ideals. It permits us to judge more equitably what is absolutely right between man and man, and allows us to perceive the injustice of many things called legally right.

Human evolution has always been along the lines marked out by those whose perceptions enable them to see a higher and more equitable adjustment of social life. The race has progressed only as the majorities become conscious of their greater needs, as pointed out by those of greater perception. The ideals conceived by these leaders of thought have formed the ideas of the mass; justice which becomes the basis of action.

Thus we see that ideas are the causes responsible for man's advancement. A higher order of intelligence makes for the conception of higher ideals, and, therefore, for greater advancement of the race. In order that we may attain greater intelligence, every influence should be used that will aid to intellectual growth. Mental growth does not end with school instructions; schools are only the primers of life, and fit the mind to receive the greater lessons that are taught by contact with the world. To the end that men may attain and assimilate these lessons, it is necessary that they be not required so to exhaust themselves in physical labor that they lack the vital energy necessary for mental action.

Nor is clear, deductive thought possible when the mind is beset with worrying thoughts of how to meet the needs of the physical body for food, clothing and shelter. Under the spur of their needs they are often led to acts of violence in protestation against conditions that deprive them unjustly of an opportunity to acquire the things they require to sustain life.

Thus we see that intellectual growth requires not only proper condition of the physical, but of mental conditions, that will permit men to enter into a calm yet energetic analysis of the causes that operate to influence his life, and that will enable him to grasp the full import of the ideas that have been put forth as ideals that will lead men to a more perfect social and industrial life.

The necessities of man can not be confined to the needs of the physical alone. The mere satisfaction of the animal requirements for food, clothing and shelter no longer suffices. We have evolved to higher planes; we are conscious of other needs in order that we may more fully enjoy our lives. This is purely a mental position, but as all of our sensations are purely mental, there is no other means of our measuring the good or the bad; we must judge all things from their effects upon our mentality.

We desire the things that add to our pleasurable sensations and seek to avoid the things that give us pain. Our being demands these pleasures; they have become real needs of which we are always conscious. These needs are not for physical pleasure, but for those things that are beautiful in form and coloring, for things that create thoughts of greater achievement, that carry us out from ourselves and make us a part of the universal brotherhood.

The laboring people are becoming more and more intelligent. They are becoming conscious of their need, and they are also awakening to a full realization that their labor creates enough to give them all that their physical and mental needs require. They are beginning to realize that they are deprived of the means of satisfying their needs, through the operation of unjust laws. Their acts will be governed by their ideas as to justice and right. That they will follow the lead of those whose ideals are built upon the broad foundations of human progress, whose ideas are typified by the statue of justice with the blindfold removed, that she may see how to strike behind the shield of gold, is the logical conclusion of reason.

That men will continue to advance to higher planes of civilization is dependent upon the ideals conceived, and accepted by the minds of the majority, as embracing a more exact and perfect form of justice between the component parts of society. That the leaders of thought, the philosophers, the real reasoners of the race, have given the masses a new ideal of what is right and just between men, is the great factor that must be considered in connection with the evolution of humanity.

This ideal is slowly being accepted by the masses as their just rights. Their minds have conceived the greater truth; they are becoming conscious of an unjust condition. They are giving physical evidence of that consciousness, and thereby propagating and enlarging the growth of the idea in the minds of others. Soon the necessary majority will have accepted this ideal, and mankind will move forward to a new position in social existence.

The rule of chiefs, kings and other potentates has been rejected as against the best interests of the masses. Men are beginning to measure laws by their action upon the lives of the majority. They are beginning to judge all things by the results, manifested in conditions under which the masses exist. They are conscious of their needs; they are growing conscious of their power in mass action. They only await the full revelation and realization of that power.

With the coming of perfect understanding of their power, they will move forward with that irresistible force that crushes all opposition. This is the inevitable result of the action of the mass mind as opposed to the individual mind, the larger, greater force will predominate in human affairs just as surely as it governs in physical matters. It is the unavoidable law of cause and effect.

Thus we conceive that human society of the future will be based upon the philosophical ideal of the present. The ideal is that the welfare of the majority shall not be sacrificed longer to the selfishness of individuals. The human endeavor produces enough to supply the needs of all mankind, and that conditions or causes that prevent the masses from obtaining the satisfaction of this requirement will be removed by the mass action.—"The Railroad Trainman."

I PROTEST

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

To sit in silence when we should protest
Makes cowards of men. The human race
Has climbed on protest. Had no voice been raised

Against injustice, ignorance, and lust,
The inquisition yet would serve the law,
And guillotines decide our least disputes.
The few who dare must speak and speak
again

To right the wrongs of many. Speech,
thank God,

No vested power in this great day and land
Can gag or throttle. Press and voice may cry

Loud disapproval of existing ills;
May criticize oppression and condemn
The lawlessness of wealth-producing laws
That let the children and childbearers toll
To purchase ease for idle millionaires.

Therefore, I do protest against the boast
Of independence in this mighty land.
Call no chain strong which holds one rusty
link,

Call no land free that holds one fettered
slave,

Until the manacled slim wrists of babes
Are loosed to toss in childish sport and glee;

Until the mother bears no burden, save
The precious one beneath her heart, until God's soil is rescued from the clutch of greed

And given back to labor, let no man
Call this the land of freedom.

RESOLUTION Concurred in by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, Held at Vancouver, September, 1915:

Whereas, the workers are made up of both men and women, many of the women working in the home, but a rapidly growing number are working in the mills, factories and stores where the conditions are wholly beyond their control; whereas, it has been proven in countries where all the workers are enfranchised, the workers are better prepared to improve their conditions than in countries where only a part have the vote; whereas, this "World War" has impressed on us that women are concerned with all human problems the same as men, we are convinced they should have the same privileges in determining the solution of these problems; therefore, be it resolved, That this Congress in convention assembled, instruct its Executives and all its members to urge upon the Dominion Government the necessity of enfranchising the women of Canada.—Concurred in.
