SEE BRILLIANT FUTURE FOR CANADA OF 25,000,000 PEOPLE

R. S. White, Editor-in-Chief, Montreal Gazette, Sir John Aird, President Canadian Bankers' Association; E. W. Beatty, President C. P. R., and Sir Henry Thornton, C. N. R. Head, United in Optimistic Outlook.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—The Commercial and Financial review for the year 1924, a supplement included with this morning's issue of the Montreal Gazette, contains a number of highly informative articles by nationally known authorities and Canadian public men generally.

R. S. White, editor-in-chief of the Gazette, deals succinctly with "the year in retrospect" and finds consolation in the reflection that 1924, with all its faults, "might have been worse." Mr. White sees in the increased favorable balance of foreign trade a helpful agency, but deplores the paucity of immigrants into Canada in the past twelve months, and the departure of Canadians to the United States. Not until there is a modification of the direct Federal taxation, however, can Canadians expect to find business materially improved and cost of living reduced, he states.

New Taxes

"It is not adequately appreciated," the article says, "that almost one-half of the Federal revenue of Canada is received from taxes that did not exist ten years ago."

Sir John Aird, President of the Canadian Bankers' Association, presents a survey of the financial outlook, and observes the continued rise of sterling toward parity, a hopeful augury for the future of Canadian and world business. He instances that the return of the pound to its proper figure will make it easier for Great Britain to find a market for Canada's great wheat exports while with the resumption of the gold standard, Sir John expects that Canada will throw down the bar on the export of gold, openly declaring a return to specie payment. The fact that the Federal Government have been able to float a $100,000,000 loan inside Canada within the last few months, while the Canadian Pacific Railway borrowed $20,000,000 of new Canadian money a short time ago, is regarded by Sir John as an excellent criterion of Canada's monetary condition.

Common Responsibility

E. W. Beatty, K. C. President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, dwells on the mutual responsibilities of the railways and the public. He points out that the railways are making an unfair profit. The needs of national development, he says, demand that the railways of the country have the wherewithal to meet service needs in advance of their actual requirements.

Mr. Beatty touches on Canada's return to normal progress will be assured.

New Era

Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and President of the Canadian National Railways, sees Canada on the threshold of a vigorous new era, and points to western Canada's betterment in agricultural conditions as an index of what the entire country will share in.

Sir Henry notes that the Empire Settlement scheme, which was to care for 3,000 British families in three years, will have exhausted that quota in two, and he applauds the "aggressive immigration programme for 1925 announced from Ottawa during the past two weeks."

Needs Man-Power
What Canada needs most, says Sir Henry, is man-power. The country is capable of caring for 25,000,000 people and if that were the population of the country, most of the Dominion's economic problems would fade away. He ends his survey with a message of hope.

Inevitable
"It is inevitable that people shall come to Canada to live. We have a great country, and we have the inestimable advantage of living under the best of flags. A land so favored as Canada cannot call in vain for people to come and occupy it, and I venture the prediction that once the wave starts it will overshadow that great pouring-in of settlers that marked the peak of Canada's pre-war prosperity."

UNKNOWN MALADY KILLED WILD BEASTS

Science Unable to Discover What Killed Mammoths of America.

Mammoths and mastodons, numbering thousands, which once roamed the western plains of America, penetrating to Alaska and as far east as New York, died under the blight of some mysterious power of nature, something that the science of man has not yet been able to discover, according to Prof. Clinton R. Stauffer, geologist at the University of Minnesota. Not only the elephants of North America, but the horse and the fierce saber-toothed tiger, his early contemporaries, died and vanished in a way that has not been explained.

Three natural assumptions, that they died because of climatic changes; that their proper food vanished; or man slew them must all be abandoned, Dr. Stauffer declares.

"At least some of these creatures lived into post-glacial times when the climate was much what it is now, and all could stand temperatures even colder than those of the modern age," says Dr. Stauffer. In the stomach of a mammoth found frozen in Siberia where he had died, was a meal of vegetation such as still grows. He was the same type of animal that lived in North America. Primitive man lived when these creatures died, but with his small numbers and crude weapons, he stood as much in danger of them as they did of him. He did not slaughter them as his successors did the bison.

The only modern parallel for such a disappearance in North America is that of the passenger pigeons. Man slaughtered these by the million, but it has never been established that this carnage alone caused their final extinction.

Dr. Stauffer inclines to the belief that a pestilence caused the disappearance of the mammoth. Sighs, although he sees no reason why all should have succumbed to the same disease, nor does he think they all perished at the same time. But they all live at the same time, and all vanished, possibly 100,000 years ago. The horse alone repopulated part of North America after escaping from Spanish invaders in the sixteenth century. He then proceeded to flourish greatly.

Since last summer when the discovery of several Jeffersonian elephants in Minnesota was reported by geologists, the number has increased to 30. Formerly only about half that number had been known in Minnesota.

American elephants were visitors from far away Egypt in the first instance, Dr. Stauffer says. From Egypt they spread to France and through-out Europe and Asia, finally crossing Behring Straits to Alaska. Thence they wandered over North America. North American types included the mastodon and two mammoths, elephants and bison.

Still another type was found in South America, to which it had wandered from the Northern continent, Dr. Stauffer asserts.

IMPROVED POSITION OF NATIONAL LINES

Prime Minister Tells Of Work Accomplished Since Co-ordination.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, speaking to an audience of four thousand people at Massey Hall, said in part:

"I think it is generally admitted that it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to have secured a training, and temperance to carry out the gigantic task of co-ordinating and controlling the several lines comprising what is now the Canadian National Railway System than Sir Henry Thornton; and I think Sir Henry Thornton will be the first to say that in the discharge of his highly responsible and arduous duties he and his Board of Directors have been given by the Government, a perfectly free hand."

The showing with respect to the Canadian National Railways is, as yet, far from what we would like to see it, and what it should be if the railways are to become a national asset, as we believe they will become, if given a proper chance, instead of remaining a national liability, as up to the present they have continued to be, but it is showing vastly more favorable than that which existed at the time we took in hand their co-ordination and consolidation and placed their management in the hands of Sir Henry Thornton. An examination of the operating deficits of the Canadian National lines (not including the Grand Trunk) shows the following improvement in recent years:

1921	$6,092,901
1922	$7,736,318
1923	$6,018,119
1924	$2,852,274
1925	$3,696,911
1926	$2,779,350

C. N. R. BROADCASTING FROM

MONCTON STATION IS HEARD

AT ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE

CNRA Is One of Most Powerful Broadcasting Stations On North American Continent.

Montreal, Jan. 19.—Moncton has again added to its laurels as one of the most powerful broadcasting stations on the North American continent, the radio department of the Canadian National Railways, which operates CNRA, having received advice of three new long distance receptions.

H. A. Deverber, of Rocky Mountain House, near Brazeau, Alberta, reported having heard clearly a concert broadcast from Moncton. That letter was followed by one from Harold Hale, of Hylleville, California, and then came one from the director of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium at San Juan, Puerto Rico, who wrote to the effect that the anniversary concert and addresses of Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and president, and S. J. Hungeford, J. E. Dalrymple and W. D. Robb, vice-presidents, were clearly heard and "greatly enjoyed."

The reception of Moncton station in California indicates that the station can reach great distances and that CNRA may be heard in farther continents. Moncton and Ottawa stations of the Canadian National Railways have already established quite a reputation for reception in the islands of the south Atlantic and the Caribbean Sea, Cuba and the Dominican Republic having previously established successful claims for recognition.

There is an even greater touch of romance, however, in reaching Rocky Mountain House from Moncton. This is one of the farthest points west in Canada to be touched and Mr. Deverber, whose receiving set found the voice of Moncton, is a former resident of New Brunswick. It is probable that Rocky Mountain House suggests nothing more than a mere name to many people in Canada. Yet more than a century ago it was a place of importance as a post of the far northwest Trading Company, and it played a part in the discovery of Athabasca Pass by David Thompson early in January, 1911.

SALE OF LAND
Official notice was given by the Department of Lands and Forests of Quebec of the decision to lease by auction on January 30th of two blocks of forests in the Basin of Blue River at Grand Pabos, Gaspé County, Quebec, and another on the north shore of the Marguerite River. The latter covers an area of 50 square miles. A deposit of $5000 must be made and the auction will have on the stampage due more than $100 per 1000 feet. The area of the limits located at Grand Pabos is 19 square miles.

AN OPPORTUNITY
Canada has been invited to participate in the exhibition which is to be held under the auspices of the American Institute of Architects early this coming spring. The exhibition will be held at the largest ever held on this continent and will have representative designs from England, France, Italy, Spain and many other countries. The space designated to each of the exhibiting countries will be limited to two hundred feet. The invitation to the Canadian architects has been accepted by the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada which body has appointed a Selection Committee for the detail work of the Canadian exhibit whose members include P. E. Nobbs, Montreal, convenor; John S. Archibald, Montreal; Henry Sproul, Toronto; and John M. Lyle, Toronto. It has been decided that the Canadian exhibit will take form of scale enlargements measuring 20 inches by 16 inches of executed work. It is also hoped that the Canadian exhibit on this occasion will be up to the high standard that exhibits of all kinds

THE CONNECTING LINK

Judging from reports in the Quebec press it would appear that the Hon. L. A. Taschereau, premier of that province has at last turned his eyes toward one of the richest, and yet, most neglected parts of his province. In representations made by him both directly and indirectly to the Federal Government he has bronched the matter of the Gaspesian railways being taken over by the government. Last week at the banquet given in honor of Premier Mackenzie King in Quebec, Mr. Taschereau again expressed the hope that the government would further consider the matter of incorporating the Gaspesian railways into the government railway system. From his exalted position in politics, Mr. Taschereau may be in possession of knowledge in connection with this matter which is denied the layman but as far as can be seen at present there is small hope of any such move in the near future and it appears that those who seem so anxious to help the Gaspesian Peninsula are going the wrong way about it.

In the first place the Gaspé railways are not begging to be bought. In recent years these roads have made truly remarkable progress. They have surmounted many obstacles and forged ahead in spite of the difficulties under which they have been working. Nearly the entire roadbed of both railways has been ballasted, and much of it re-ballasted, in the past few years; new locomotives have been acquired and the service improved in numerous other ways. And all this has been accomplished through their own earnings. No other government-operated branch-line can boast of such a record.

Having gone thus far and now being in a position to make money and constantly improve their service it is little wonder that the owners of the road are hesitant about selling out. On the other hand the government has its own views and there the matter remains—at a deadlock—indeinitely. But fortunately, for the cause of progress, there is usually more than one way of meeting an issue. And in this case there is a promising alternative.

In his representations to the Federal Government Mr. Taschereau has emphasized the opportunities for the development of the rich territory of the Gaspé Peninsula which would be presented by the acquisition of these privately owned roads. In this he merely re-echoes the belief of the inhabitants of that district. To this may be added the possibility of a through railway service from Gaspé to the New England States and a picture of unprecedented progress and development is drawn—except for the connecting link. And that link is the proposed inter-provincial bridge across the Restigouche River. This proposed structure, linking two rich provinces is the key of the whole situation. With this project successfully consummated, the problem of better transportation along the Gaspé Coast would be easily solved. With the opportunities for increased revenue that would follow through the opening up of the Gaspé territory, the government would be in a position to bring the railway merger to a head in a decisive and satisfactory way. And Premier Taschereau's own province would undoubtedly fall in for the largest share of the benefits. In the light of these considerations it is only fair that now, since New Brunswick promoters in the bridge project have gone almost as far as they can, that the province of Quebec should take the lead and formulate plans for the furtherance of this progressive merger. In this however, it appears they need some outside pressure to strengthen their proposals. It is to Municipal Councils, the Board of Trade and business interests in this part of the country to furnish this and there is no time more opportune than the present.

the guest of his parents Postmaster A. J. and Mrs. LeBlanc this week while the County Council was in session.

Mr. Robert Ed of the Parsons Ed Co., Ltd., Construction Engineers, Moncton, was a guest at the Queen Hotel this week, preparing to rush the work at the new Court House as soon as the weather moderates.

In addition to the travelling public many old friends were sorry to learn of the recent loss by fire in New Richmond, P. Q. when the Casapedia House became a total loss. Previous to the eighties what became a splendid Hotel was the farmer's home of one of the most hospitable families of Gaspesia, and naturally the same courtesy of the past was continued when the travelling public patronized the first real Hotel of the place. It is to be hoped that Mrs. Robertson who was so successful in her management of the Casapedia House, will rebuild on the same site, which is one of the best.

There is generally a big storm in the shiretown when the County Council meets in January; but this year we are favored with excellent weather and the municipal politicians are really enjoying their stay in Dalhousie in which town the old hospitality of the past is still manifest.

H. B. Anslaw, Editor and Manager of the Campbellton Graphic was in town this week attending the sessions of the Restigouche Municipal Council. W. H. Wallace of Campbellton arrived in the shiretown on Wednesday to address the members of the Restigouche Co. Council on the question of a Municipal Home in the County of Restigouche.

Among the visitors to Dalhousie on Wednesday the following registered at the Queen Hotel: D. A. Stewart, M. L. A., M. A. Kelly, H. J. Currie, Campbellton; McAllister and Felix Uffman, Jacquet River, N. B.

SEVEN YEARS OLD

SAVED COMPANION
 Edmundston, N. B., Jan. 19.—En route to school across the ice of the Madawaska river here recently, Jerome Sullivan, aged nine, had the misfortune to break through a hole in the ice into thirty-five feet of water.

A companion, John Driscoll, aged seven, with great presence of mind for one so young, immediately stepped to the edge of the hole where young Sullivan was struggling in the icy water, which had all but submerged his head, and securing the latter by the coat was able to drag him to safety. The boys were soon within reach of shelter and proper care which followed prevented any serious developments as a result of the accident.

Instead they are preparing to install a radio set in the church and in that manner get their sermons out of the air. While advocates of the plan have pointed out that by means of radio a greater variety of sermons will be available and by exceptionally able preachers, the opponents foresee serious consequences if the machine happens to get tuned in on a jazz orchestra concert or some such programme in error.

AND INSTAL RADIO
Boutetouche, N. B., Jan. 17—Reports from Castville, N. B., in this county, are to the effect that members of one of the church congregations there have about decided to resign their visiting preacher. Instead they are preparing to instal a radio set in the church and in that manner get their sermons out of the air. While advocates of the plan have pointed out that by means of radio a greater variety of sermons will be available and by exceptionally able preachers, the opponents foresee serious consequences if the machine happens to get tuned in on a jazz orchestra concert or some such programme in error.

OBITUARY

Archdeacon Bliss.
There passed away at Port Elmsley, Ontario, on Wednesday morning of last week, Archdeacon Charles Vaughan Bliss. Almost three years ago the deceased suffered a stroke which affected his speech and forced him to give up active work in the parish of St. John's, of which he was the rector for 15 years, coming here from Almonte. He was not only the rector of the parish, but gave of his time and means unstintingly and unostentatiously to every worthy cause. He was elevated from canon to Archdeacon about five years ago, and carried the honors with the dignity which became it. His wife passed away six years ago, and during his long illness at Port Elmsley, he has been tenderly nursed and cared for by his two daughters, Misses Kathleen and Clara Bliss, who had been his faithful attendants and constant companions up to the time of his death. The members of the family who are left to mourn are Misses Kathleen and Clara Bliss at home; Miss Mary Bliss who is in charge of the Soldiers' Memorial Hospital of Campbellton, three sons, C. Liden, Neapan; Vaughan, Fort William and Hamilton at Ontario. There are also two brothers, Mr. W. D. Bliss, Ottawa and Mr. Aldon Bliss, Vancouver.

"After taking Two Bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health"

Carnol is one of the finest remedies ever discovered for use by the expectant mother. There is no time in a woman's life as most trying period, but she must consider also the health of the unborn child. Read what Carnol did for Mrs. P. "My wife, about two years ago, just before our baby was born, was suffering from anemia and indigestion. She could keep nothing on her stomach. We tried a great many so-called remedies, phosphates and even bitters, iron and wine, but to no effect. One day I went into one of our local drug stores, Crawford's, by name, and asked him to give me a reliable tonic for my wife. He handed me a bottle of Carnol, recommending it highly, and told me to give it a fair trial. After taking two bottles my wife made rapid progress back to health. The color came back to her cheeks and her appetite was completely restored. We find Carnol almost invaluable for our baby. It serves as a useful medicine, especially at teething time, and we are never without a bottle in the house. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to recommend the merits of Carnol. As a body builder, nerve remedy and a wonderful restorative in all run down conditions, I don't think there is any medicine anywhere equal to Carnol."—Arthur I. Perry, 327-10th Street, Brandon, Manitoba. 5-24

RAZ-MAH GUARANTEED RELIEF

A Romance of the Spanish Main CAPTAIN BLOOD

By RAFAEL SABATINI

SYNOPSIS

Peter Blood, a young Irish physician, is arrested and accused of treason for treating wounded in the battle between Monmouth rebels and the soldiers of King James. He is brought to trial before the bloody Lord Jeffreys and is sentenced to death after a prejudiced travesty of justice. King James, however, realized the need of man power in his colonies and he orders the convicted rebels sent to the Barbadoes. Blood, with his friend Jeremy Pitt, is placed in a detachment and shipped to Bridgetown. When the rebels-convict are drawn up for inspection in the slave market, Arabella Bishop, niece of Colonel Bishop, the military commander, draws his attention to Blood and he is purchased for the sum of one pound because of his skill as a physician. Later with Blood given the run of the town as a doctor, Arabella and he meet, but Blood in his bitterness over his position, misunderstands the character of the niece of his master.

Chapter VI. SYMPATHY.

One day, towards the end of May, the Caravel, in Caribbea Bay, the Pride of Devon. She had been in action off Martinique with two Spanish treasure ships. One of the Spaniards had fled from the combat.

Steed, after the fashion of most colonial governors, gave the Pride of Devon shelter and every facility to capture and carry out repairs. But, before it came to this, they fetched from her hold over a score of English seamen as battered and broken as the ship herself, and together with these, some half-dozen Spaniards in like case. These wounded men were conveyed to a long shed on the wharf, and the medical skill of Bridgetown was summoned to their aid. Peter Blood was ordered to bear a hand in this work, and, partly because he spoke Castilian (and he spoke it as fluently as his own native tongue) and partly because of his inferior condition as a slave, he was given the Spaniards for his patients. They were shunned, however, by all those charitably disposed inhabitants of Bridgetown who flocked to the improvised hospital with gifts of fruit and flowers and delicacies for the injured English seamen.

Rising suddenly from the redressing of a wound, a task in which he had been absorbed for some minutes, he saw to his surprise that the lady, detached from the general throng, was placing some plantains and a bundle of succulent sugar cane on the cloak that served one of his patients for a coverlet. Peter Blood stood and gazed a moment. The lady, turning now to confront him, her lips parting in a smile of recognition, was Arabella Bishop.

"The man's a Spaniard," said he in the tone of one who corrects a misapprehension. She frowned and stared at him a moment, with increasing laughter.

"So I perceive. But he's a human being none the less," said she. "Your uncle, the colonel, is of a different opinion," said he when he had recovered. "He regards them as vermin to be left to languish and die of their festering wounds."

"Why do you tell me this?" "To warn you that you may be incurring the colonel's displeasure. If he had his way, I should never have been allowed to dress their wounds."

"And you thought, of course, that I must be of my uncle's mind?"

"I did not willingly be rude to a lady, even in my thoughts," said he. "But that you should bestow gifts on them, considering that if your uncle came to hear of it—, He paused, leaving the sentence unfinished. "Ah, well: there it is!" he concluded.

"First you impute to me inhumanity, and then cowardice. Faith! For a man who would not be willingly be rude to a lady even in his thoughts, it's none so bad." Her boyish laugh trailed out but the note of it jarred his ears this time.

"Sure, now, how was I to guess that—that Colonel Bishop could have an angel for his niece?" said he recklessly, for he was reckless, as men often are in sudden penitence.

"You wouldn't, of course. I should not think you often guess aright."

Without another word or so much as another glance at Peter Blood, she swept out of the place.

Peter fetched a sigh.

CHAPTER VII. PIRATES

There was, too, a new hope. There were two doctors in Bridgetown, both free men, and they were feeling the rivalry of this new rebel-convict slave, whose earnings for services went to Colonel Bishop. To rid themselves of his rivalry, they proposed to Peter Blood to finance his escape from the island. He enlisted his good friends, including Jeremy Pitt, whose skill as a doctor was well known, to guide the sloop which they were to purchase. But the plan miscarried in that Kent the overseer, suspected Pitt, and Colonel Bishop ordered Pitt to the stocks, where he had him whipped soundly.

Even while Jeremy was being prepared for the lash, the colonel looked seaward and saw in the roads, standing in for the shore before a gentle breeze that scarcely ruffled the surface, a stately refulgent frigate, flying the English ensign. So leisurely an advance argued a master indifferently acquainted with these waters. The colonel withdrew when his passion had been satisfied by Pitt's punishment, and there in the stocks Peter found him, and set about giving him succor as a doctor and as a friend. Pitt's pillory seemed to end all hope of escape. It was now Peter's hope to save his friend from death. And, while he stanchied the flow of blood, his thoughts, grim and hopeless as they were, were interrupted. He felt the shadow of Colonel Bishop upon him.

"What the devil are you doing here?" Mr. Blood turned to face him, and over that swarthy countenance (which indeed, by now was tanned to the golden brown of a half-caste Indian) a mask descended.

"Doing?" said he blandly. "Why, the duties of my office."

"I said he was to have neither meat nor drink until I ordered it."

"Sure, now, I never heard ye."

By sunset two hundred and fifty Spaniards were masters of Bridgetown. The Spaniards were dispersed, and at Government House, Governor Steel, supported by Colonel Bishop and some lesser officers, was being informed by Don Diego, of the sum that would be required in ransom. For a hundred thousand pieces of eight and fifty head of cattle, Don Diego would forbear from reducing the place to ashes. And what time that brave and courtly commander was settling these details with the apoplectic British Governor, the Spaniards were smashing and looting, feasting, drinking, and ravaging after the hideous manner of their kind.

Mr. Blood, greatly daring, ventured down at dusk into the town. What he saw beheld him in haste, and when in a narrow street a girl hurled white-faced out of that hell again, into him, wild-eyed, her unbound hair streaming behind her as she ran. After her, laughing and cursing in a breath, came a heavy-bodied Spaniard. Almost he was upon her, when suddenly Mr. Blood got in his way. The doctor had taken a sword from a dead man's side some little time before and aimed himself with it against an emergency.

As the Spaniard checked in anger and surprise, he caught in the dusk the livid gleam of that sword which Mr. Blood had quickly unsheathed. "Ah, here, here!" he shouted, and lunged forward to his death.

"It's hoping I am ye in a fit state to meet your Master," said Mr. Blood, and ran him through the body. He did the thing skillfully: with the combined skill of swordsman and surgeon. The man sank in a hideous heap without as much as a groan.

Mr. Blood swung to the girl, who leaned upon him and sobbing against a wall. He caught her by the wrist. "—and then he ran after the white-faced, physically sick Mr. Blood, down almost at a run up the hill towards Colonel Bishop's house. He knocked, but had to knock again, and get on his knees before he was answered.

"Who is there?" The voice was Miss Bishop's, a little tremulous, but unmistakably her own.

"It is I, Peter Blood," he gasped. "What do you want?"

At the sound of her voice, the girl Mr. Blood had rescued peered up through the gloom. "It is I, Mary Trill!"

After a brief pause the door opened wide. Mr. Blood stood in followed by his distraught companion, who, following him, said:

"Whom have you here with you? What servants?" he demanded sharply. The only male was James, an old negro groom.

"The very man," said Blood: "Bid him get out the horses. Then away with you to Speightstown, or even farther north, where you will be safe. Here you are in danger—in dreadful danger. The devilry's only beginning. In God's name, madam, take my word for it, and as I bid you."

"He—he saved me," sobbed Miss Trill.

"Let that wait," snapped Mr. Blood almost angrily. "Will you please call James, and do as I say—and at once!"

"You are very peremptory."

"Yes, yes," the girl cried, shuddering. "Do as he says—Oh, for pity's sake, do as he says!"

The horses came at last—four of them, for in addition to James' own, Mr. Blood had brought with him. Miss Bishop had her woman, who was not to be left behind.

Mr. Blood lifted the slight weight of Mary Trill to her horse, then turned to say good-bye to Miss Bishop, who was already mounted. He said it and seemed to have something to add. But whatever it was it remained unspoken. He went off briskly in the direction of the stockade, where his fellow-slaves awaited him in deep anxiety and some hope.

CHAPTER IX. THE REBELS' CONVICT. There were, when the purple gloom of the tropical night descended upon the Caribbean, not more than ten men on guard aboard the Cinco Ligas, so confident were the Spaniards of the complete subjection of the islanders. As a matter of fact whilst the main body of the Spaniards feasted and rioted ashore, the Spanish gunner and his crew were feasting on the gun-deck upon the wine and the fresh meats fetched out to them from ashore. Above, two sentinels only kept vigil, at stem and stern. Nor were they as visitors as they should have been, or else they must under cover of the darkness come have observed the two wharves that under cover of the darkness came gliding from the wharf, with well-greased rowlocks, to bring in silence under the great ship's quarter.

From the gallery after till hung the ladder by which Don Diego had descended to the boat that had taken him ashore. The sentry on guard in the stern, coming presently round this gallery, was suddenly confounded by the black shadow of a man standing before him at the head of the ladder. It was Peter Blood.

The sentry on guard in the stern, coming presently round this gallery, was suddenly confounded by the black shadow of a man standing before him at the head of the ladder. It was Peter Blood.

The wooden taffrail was a low one, and the Spaniard was taken completely by surprise. Save for the splash he made as he struck the water, narrowly missing one of the crowded boats that waited under the counter, not a sound announced his misadventure. Armed as he was with corset, cut-throat, and headpiece, he sank to trouble them no more. With a few minutes they had swarmed board the narrow gallery and crouching on the quarter-deck itself.

Betrayed by Trust

He was a burglar. After effecting an entrance into a bank he found his way easily enough, to the strong room. When the light of the lantern fell on the door he saw this sign written in red letters:

"For a moment he ruminated. 'Anyhow,' he reflected, 'there's no harm in trying it if it really is unlocked.'"

He grasped the knob and turned it. Instantly the office was flooded with light, and alarm bell rang loudly, an electric shock rendered him helpless, while a panel in the wall opened, and rushed a bulldog which seized him firmly.

An hour later, when the cell door was closed on him, he sighed: "I know what's wrong with me. I'm too trusting."—Answers

COMING LECTURE A LITERARY TREAT

J. L. Paton, M. A., Eminent English Educationalist To Speak Here Soon.

Citizens of Campbellton who enjoy a lecture of high tone and distinct educational value, delivered with the sparkling oratory which holds an audience spellbound, will have an opportunity of hearing something particularly fine on Monday Feb. 2nd, when Mr. John Lewis Paton, M. A., one of England's most eminent educationalists, will lecture in the Opera House here. Mr. Paton has come to Canada on the invitation of the National Education Council which was organized a few years ago and which has been instrumental in arranging several lecture tours by famous British speakers. It will be remembered that last year Sir Henry Newbolt and Sir Michael Sadler tour Canada under the auspices of this educational organization and that both these distinguished speakers evoked much favorable comment from the press of leading cities throughout the Dominion.

The local committee to whom Campbellton is indebted for this coming treat consists of Mr. H. F. G. Bridges, Chairman; Messrs. M. A. Kelly, J. T. Hebert, and H. M. Armstrong and Mrs. D. A. Harquail, Mrs. H. Lunan and Mrs. L. J. Ruet. Mr. Paton's address bears the intriguing title of "The Gates of Leisure" and under this heading this eloquent speaker will deliver an address that will be classified as a literary treat. The proceeds will be divided equally between the two local hospitals.

Sketch of Speaker Mr. John L. Paton, the retiring High Master of Manchester School, has come to Canada at the invitation and will spend a year in the Dominion of the National Council of Education on work of a general educational nature.

Mr. Paton's career in the educational world of England has been unique, and among many great schoolmasters his work has been outstanding. He commenced his own education at Hulle Grammar School, Birmingham at Nottingham and Shrewsbury and is a brilliant graduate of St. John's College, Cambridge, earning off the Chancellor's Medal for Classics. As a teacher he has been singularly successful, beginning his career at Leys School, Cambridge followed by ten years as Sixth Form Master and Town Tutor at Rugby, one of the famous English Public Schools. Mr. Paton is best known however, for his work as Head Master, first for five years at University College School, London, and then for which his name is now inseparably connected with the long period of twenty-one years connected. Mr. Paton comes to Canada fresh from a great educational experience, with unbounded energy and enthusiasm.

It is hoped that from this great experience much of the value may be gleaned. He is in every way representative of the Public Schools of England, but at the same time has an intimate and thorough knowledge not only of educational systems and methods of his own country, but of the Continent of Europe.

Mr. Paton will spend approximately a month in each Province where his services will be available through various Local Committees of the Council.

It's a case of when star supports star in the William Fox production, "My Husband's Wives," which will be shown at the Opera House next Monday and Tuesday. Shirley Mason is the star of this film and Bryant Washburn, long a star, is her leading man.

SAD NEWS

It appears, unfortunately, that the reports recently afloat, particularly in Toronto, that it is intended to dispose of the mileage of the Canadian National Railways in the United States are without foundation.

That is the statement of Sir Henry Thornton, and it will be a disappointment to the public. By the sale of the railway lines Portland, Me., would cease to be a winter port of Canada, and Canadian business which is now done through the Canadian ports of St. John and Halifax, as it should be done.

Wednesday Morning.

Council assembled at 10 a. m.

The minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

The Secretary of the District Board of Health, A. McG. McDonald was requested to give his annual report.

Mr. McDonald stated that during the past year there had been considerable small-pox in the county. Fortunately circumstances were such that the epidemic was checked with all expense of $50.00. If this had been dealt with as in previous years, he would venture to say the accounts would have totalled $5000.00. Dr. Cyr had done good work. He vaccinated five hundred persons in the districts affected.

There was a considerable discussion upon health matters in general, at times becoming quite warm. Couns. Montgomery, Miller, Murchie were the leaders against the Board of Health while Couns. Firth, Gillis and the Secretary answered for the Board.

The chief subject was whether or not the Sub District Board of Health lists, etc. 95.00.

should pay the bills of the doctors who visited diphtheria cases, when said visits were not paid for by patients' fathers. The Board contended that these bills should not be paid. If they were it meant a very heavy increase in amount needed to run the Health Board.

The Board estimates for 1924-25 were $3000.00.

The Council adjourned until 2 p. m. Wednesday Afternoon.

Council re-assembled at 2 o'clock.

The minutes of the forenoon session were read and approved.

Dr. F. J. Desmond, Chairman of the Sub-District Board of Health was requested to present his report.

Dr. Desmond said that he had been requested by the Minister of Health, Hon. Dr. Roberts to present the matter of District Health Nurses to the Council. He said the councillors were all aware that the Rockefeller Foundation had offered $1500 and necessary expenses per nurse, for a period of two years, if the council would bind itself to carry on the work for an additional two years. He spoke strongly of the good done by district health nurses and hoped the council would favor the plan.

On motion of Coun. Gillis, Mr. W. H. Wallace was given an opportunity of addressing the council upon the matter of a Municipal Home. He quoted statistics to show that such an institution was a paying proposition and suggested that a committee be appointed to get with a committee of the Campbellton council to look into the matter and report at a future meeting.

A letter from Dr. Landreux asking for a refund of $25.00 advanced upon recommendation of a poor commissioner to pay expenses of taking two children to home in St. John was read and on motion refund was ordered, to be charged to Addington.

Felix Ullman of Jacques River presented a petition asking that his assessment be reduced $200.00. Referred to Durham Assessors.
