DR. SHERWOOD'S GALVANIC EMBROCAT ON—It is now generally admitted by the learned and scientific, that the mysterious power called Gulvanism or Magnetism is, in fact, the principle of Viralley or Life, and that disease, in fact, the principle of Viralley or Life, and that disease, in many of its most painful forms, is entirely owing to the many of its most painful forms, is entirely owing to the many of this Galvanic or Magnetic power in its beathy proportions. It, then, we can, readily supply this wondrous Power, when it is thus deficient, we can successfully combat disease, and this has been fully and perfectly attained by this most wonderful scientific discovery, of combining Magnetism or Galvanism with a Fluid which has cost the inventor of this Remedy years of stady and labor.

Here may be seen the mouser of Madrilene life champaigning up to the eye in the creaming and beading froth of ever re-newed existence. Here such a stranger with mantillas newed existence. Here the scholars with mantillar fastened by enermous pins, gold or torquoise Instelled by eigermous pins, gold of torquoise headed, with pendant chains of great length; and the merreilleux with all his wardrobe on his back—a coat of a long (so called) English cut, a waist-coat down considerably below the hausehes, and a chain reposing on the abdomen, and tueked up with the waistcoat-button. This is now derigueur. Here the manolo may be seen with his round-peaked velvet hat, knowingly tufted, and his trousers small at the knee and large at the ancie (the invariable test of a manolo.) Here may be seen Asturian aurses in their magnificently showy costumes, lalling high-born babes to sleep, and seen Asturian nurses in their master to sleep, and here, amid the enormous pressure of the fair, may be here and there spied a Parisian bonnet, looking quite loin amidst the more attractive mantilus, and bull-fighters dashing like madmen to the circus.—Hughes' Overland Journey to Lisbon.

KNOWLEDGE AMONG MILITABY OFFICERS.—
Then arose a discussion as to what was a lady's full dress; in the course of which the Officers showed themselves so well versed in the matters of muslins and silks, that Constance (rankly told them that her private opinion was, that they had all served a year or two with Howell and James before they entered Her Majesty's service. Captain Bohun smiled at this panegyric; for the rest, they laughed loudly, and told her she was very severe. "Come, now, let us talk of something wise," said Constance. "Who has read the Bridgewater Frutuses?" Everybody laughed at the notion: it was quite amusing. Mr. Sinclair and he payer read at all, which was very nossible. KNOWLEDGE AMONG MILITARY OFFICERS.-

is a temple where all arts, and styles, and tostes, and beauties, seem united in one exquisite whole. Like the enamelled illuminations on the pages of an antique manuscript, all, though gorgeous and an antique manuscript, ait, though goige of standing glowing, is subdued and kept down into such perfect harmony, that in the general effect, there might seem rather an absence of brilliancy than a redundancy of ornament; yet every part of St.

Apropas of this start to push out of the push of the soldier who bestrode the charger. He was a semarkably hardsome outh, quite an exquisite, an accorable, with cont-black moustaches and repule, and snow white powdered hair,—a come bracion that certainly gives a pinuste expression to the countenance, which all the sacchesnut hair or raven locks in the world, however redundant, however silky; can never impact. Headen, at animous well with the come and bearing at a suited so well with the come had been invented on purpose to show off the other. However, to my story, you may well magice that the old cripple had not let the prot, however well satisfied she might be at the the mexpected generosity of Signes, without leidening the air with curses upon the head of the young gurdeducops. She was a firth har, blanched, and lame; and it was fearful to hear her, as she tossed her rags abifupon the wind, utter such a well maledictions, in a screaming, discordant voice, that the blood has need to histen. The soldier sat in calm defiance on his saddle, in the practical statitude imaginable. With this she hobiled away, and we also turned aside in disgust, while the young man remained immovable and unconcerned, as though the nords had not been addressed to him at all. The event I have been relating took place before the breaking out of the revolution. Now rejoice, and listen, thou porthers believer in propiecy and witches. The very day after the return of the King and Queen in m Versailles, when traversing the Place Louis Quinze, M. dr. THE WOLVES OF THE AMERICAN PRAINTES.

—The suggesty of solves is almost incredible. They will remain round a hunting-camp and follow the hunters the whole day, in bands of three and four, at less than a hundred yards' distance, stopping when they stop, and sitting down quietly when game is killed, rushing to devour the offsi when the hunter retires, and then following until is wounded, they immediately pursue it, and not unfrequently pull the animal down in time for the hunter to come up and secure it from their ravenional. - Medical Times. Of the rival elerical candid te, he spoke as the "dulle t soul that ever mounted to ther;" and inveighed against Drs. Tillutson and Stillingfleet as the poorest writers in the English language. The Bishop of Bristol he called a fansite in lawn slewvs; because he had directed the Liteny to be read, not channed. King William, according to him, desired to be de Witted, for he made ususe but fanatics Bishops, adding, "I could have pardoued that King all his willanies, if he had not left us the accursed I gaey of the Hanoverian succession." The orthodox divine placed the portrait of this schismatical Dutchman, together with that of Oliver Cromwell, in a sort of holy alliance, behind the door of his study. An orator so given to is wounded, they immediately pursue it, and not unfrequently pull the animal down in time for the hunter to come up and secure it from their ravenous clutelies. However, they appear to know at once the nature of the wound, for it but slightly touched they never exert themselves to follow a deer, chasing those only which have received a mortal blow. I one day killed an old buck, which was an poor that I left the carease on the ground untourhed. Six copoles, or small prairie wolves, were my attendants that day, and, of course, before I had left the deer twenty paces, had commenced their work of destruction. Certainly not ten misnutes after, I looked back and saw the same six leping after me, one of them not twenty pards behind me, with his noce and face all besmeared with blood, and his belig swelled almost to bursting. Thinking it scarcely possible that they could have devoured the whole deer in so short a space, I had the curiosity to return, and, to my astonishment, found actually nothing left but a pile of bones and hair, the flesh being stripped from them as clean as it arraped with a knife. Half an hour after, I killed a large black tail deer, and, as it was also in miserable condition, I took merely the fleecey (as the mean on the back and ribs is called,) leaving four lifthes of the animal antouched. I then rethat of Uliver Cromwell, in a sort of noty antiner, behind the door of his study. An orator so given to railing a dunserupulous censure could not fail to meet with partisans in the city, where politics ran high; he was chosen by the Lord Mayor to preach the annual sermon at St. Paul's, on the anniversary (as the ment on the back and rive is cause,) leaving four-fifths of the sningl untouched. I then retired without distance, and, sitting down on a rock, lighted my pipe, and watched the operations of the wolves. They sat perfectly still until I had with the contribute the perfect of the still until I had with the annual sermon at St. Paul's, on the anniversary of the gunpowder plot. To the delight of many civic dignities, the pulpit pamphleteer applied to Lord Treasurer Godolphin the well known nickname of Volponé, from the Fox of Ben Jonson, a play then f. quently acted, and with the clever tricks of whose cozening usurer the audi new ere probably familiar. Whether published at the request of the Lord Mayor or not—the thinid official disclaimed his permission—the sermon was read as never assemble had been read b fore, and ministers injudiciously elevated the author to a more existed stage than his own pulpit. King William showed better sense, when his consent was asked before impeaching a divine. Having inquired fravio some threescore yards, when they scamp red, with a flourish of their tails, straight to the ored, with a flourish of their tails, straight to the deer. Then commenced such a tugging and starting and biting, all squesking and swallowing at the same monient. A skirmish of tails and flying hair was seen for five minutes, when the last of them; with slouching tail, and evidently ashamed of himself, withdrew, and nothing remained on the ground but a well-picked skeleton. The Character of Granville Share.

The grandson of an Archbishop of York, the son of an Archdeacon of Northumberland, the tather of a Prebendary of Durham, Granville Sharpe, desending to the rank from which Inase Walton rose, was apprenticed to a linen-draper of the name of Halsey, a Quaker, who kept his ship on Tower-Hall. When the Quaker died, the indenturen were transferred to a Presbyterian rot the same craft. When the Fresbyterian retired, they were made over to an Irish Papist. When the Papist quitted trade, they passed to a fourth misster, whom the apprentice reports to have no religion at all. At one time a Socianan to, k up his ab de at the draper's, w d assaulted the faith of the young apprentice in the mysteries of the Tri. ity and Atomement. We presume that Mr. George Brown will immediately send in his, and we wait to see whether Messrs. If they do not, we can pretty well guess what public opinion will belt We are told that the Board of Works actually

The care of the mierce's shop engaged no less then seven years of a file destined to be held in grateful remembrance as long as the language or the history of his native land shall be cultivated among men. The acut eighteen were so sumed in the equally obscure employment of scierts in the office of ordnance. Yet it was during this period that Granville Sharpe disclosed to others, and probably to himself, the nature, so singular and so lovely, which distinguished him—the most inflexible of human wills, united to the gentlest of human hearts—an almost audacious freedom of thought, combined with profound reverence for hour authority—a settled conviction of the wickedness of our race, tempered by an infantine credulity in the virtue of each separate member of it—a burning indignation against injustice and wrong reconciled with pity and long-suffering towards the individual oppressor—all the sterances which Adam has bequeathed to his sous, wedded to all the tenderness which Eve has transmited to her daughters—Edinburgh Raviere.

The old Parzendes—His countenances to judge by the most authonic portraith of this prince, had none of the meditative character of that of sold the whole of the materials of the old Court Hodses for $401 In Mr. Brown's estimate, the course they would, being on the spot, and much of them quite at to be again worked up, have been worth mere to the contractors for the new buildings than to any other parties; but this is the way in which things are done in Canada. The people have to pay through the nose for every lling they want.

The ot.D. Parrander. Herein.

The ot.D. Parrander. His countenance, to judge by the most authentic portraits of this prince, had none of the meditative character of that of Charles the First, whom the Chevalier was popularly said to resemble: neither had it the awestmess, which is expressed by every feature of that unhappy Monarch, nor had his countenance the pensiveness which wiss upon the beholder who gazes upon the portraits of Charles. The eyes of the Chevalier were light hazel, his face was pale and long, and in the fullness of his lips he resembled his mother, Mary of Modens. To this physiognomy, on which it is said a smile was rarely seen to play, were added; according to the account of a contemporary, from whose narrative we will borrow a further description, "a speech grave, and not very clearly expressive of his thoughts, nor over much to the purpose; his words were few; and his behavior, and temper seemed always composed." What he was in his diversions we know not here was no room for THE COMERS HASSINGS .- We have been told that the Petitions to the Executive, praying for a commutation of the sentences of death passed upon Shutts and Lacoste at the last Criminal Assizes have received many signatures in this City. We believe that there is no doubt whatever but that Strutte is a madman, and that he was insane when the marder on his comrade was perpetrated; that he had been insane for a long time previous to the thoughts, nor over much to the purpose; his words were few; and his behavior and temper assemed always composed." What he was in his diversions we know not; here was no room for such things. It was no time for mirth. Neither can I say I ever haw him smile. Those who speak so positively of his being like King James the Seventh, must excuse me for saying that it seems to say they either never saw this person or never saw King James the Seventh; and yet I must not conceal that when we saw the man whom they called our king, we found ourselves not at all animated by his presence; and if he was disappointed in us, we were tenfold move so in him. We saw nothing in hith that looked like him; some sited if he could speak. His countremance looked extremely heavy. He cared not to come strood among us solders, or to see using the either we have done. At the approaches that he sent us but five thousand men or good troops, and never himself come, we had done other things than we have done. At the approaches and either lose his life or gain a crown, I think; as his affairs were situated, to ma can say that his appearing grave and composed was a token of his want of thought, but rather of a significant anxiety grounded on the prospect of his inevitable. murder, and so insone that he ought never to have been at large, and particularly not in a barrack room, full of deadly weapons. We understand that the damage done to Mr Phillips' distillery, at St. Hyacinthe, by a mob of riotous teetotaliers, was much exaggerated in the first accounts; but the whole affair only goes to prove that people, who make a niosy profession of their temperance in the matter of strong drinks, are very often frightfully intemperate in other matters, a position we have often assumed.

THE SNOW DROP. November, 1850. Montreal: R. W. Lay.

We have received this month's number of this receilent Magazine for the younger branches of our families. Its greatest attraction is a very spirited and well executed wood cut of St. Andrew's Church in this city, the work of Mr. Welch. This building, which is probably in more correct architectural design than any ecclesiastical erection in the city, is now rapidly approaching tunes of this once prosperous, but now distressed tendency and we recommend our readers to pay Colony.—Halifax Colonist. completion, and we recommend our readers to pay visit to it. The style is that used in England during the earlier part of the 13th century, though during the earlier part of the 13th century, though it is somewhat modified in the interior, to suit the forms of Presbyterian worship. The arrangement of the pews, galleries, and pulpit, strikes us Many were disappointed in getting tickets. as being needlighty hanny. The windows are de-corated with stained glass, principally of the three primitive colors, used by the ecclesiastical design ers of old times to denote the Holy Trinity, but there is not so much of it as to have a gaudy effect. St. Andrew's Church is ninety feet long, and sixty-five wide inside—the centre of the ceiling rising to the height of forty-six feet, and having sitting room for about nine hundred and fifty persons. The Architect is Mr. G. H. Smith, who has produced some very beautiful designs for Churches.

We are indebted to Mr. R. W. Lay for some very excellent letter and note paper, bearing a very pretty vignette of St. Andrew's Church.

We are again indebted to the politeness of Mr. Doane, Agent of the Rutland & Burlington Raiload, for late Boston papers.

We would call public attention, and the notice f our friends generally, to the extensive sales of Crockery-Ware, held every evening at the Auction Store of Mr. J. Jones, Notre Dame Street. The endless variety, excellent assortment, and cheapness of the articles there offered, are rarely to be met with.

ST. HYACINTHE.—A correspondent from this village writes us that Bishop Bourget has been there on the subject of the late outrage. He says:—

says:—
I enclose you all that can be interesting, which is the result of the visit. This, in my humble opinion, is not what it should be. Reseme that we were misinformed, when we stated that the meeting at Noble's Tavern, Vaushan, was called by Mr. Price's friends; or if a pas, certainly there must have been great miscal-culation, for the County Roads were a principal subject of discussion, and never was unhappy Minister more in reilessly handled, than was the unfortunate Commissioner of Crown Lands, by hother fortunate Commissioner of Crown Lands, by both fortunate Commissioner of Crown Lands, by both Tories and Radicals.

At this meeting, which was very respectably attended, some further strange developments were made, illustrative equally of the blassings of Responsible Government, an honest Minister and Radical disinterestedness. Mr. Franklin Jackes, Washen of the County, after alluding to the Residual disinterestedness. Mr. Franklin Jackes, the Warden of the County, after allading to the efforts of the Council, and his own exertions to obtain the Roads from the Government, strongly supported the plan of the proposed road, as thereby the farmers would be rendered independent of the monopoly, which through the scandalously partial conduct of the Ministry, now has possession of Yenge Street. He did not confine his remarks to the Inspector General, but stated that when he mentioned the subject to the Hon. J. H. Price, who, as Member for the Riding, might have beef supposed to have some regard for the interests of his constituents, he was met with the question,—a Do you suppose that I amgoing to break up the Mr. Jackes said—'Talk of ktesponsible Government is responsible Government. I should like to know to whom Mr. Hincks is responsible?"

Mr. Hincks defies all responsibility, and, after having done whatever pleases him, in utter defiance of law, justice, and public opinion, will say very quietly—well, gentlemen, if you don't want me, I'll go! and out be gress, having spared no pains in feathering his nest—leaving the how to future investigation. Mr. Jackes aliuded also to another matter without expressing what it was particularly—but which we hear is as follows:—He was summoned to a special interview with Mr. Hincks, and—what for? merely to tell him that if the Council would give Mr. Beaty two hundred and fifty pounds, the Council should have the Roads, and further stated that he (the Inspector-General) would find the money! Let our readers ponder would find the money! Let our readers ponder these things, and weigh the blessings first above alluded to—Expendi Hanibalem, &c.

A portion of the North American Fleet, under the command of Lord Dundonald, left the harbor on Tuesday, bound for Bermuda. We understand that although advanced beyond the ordinary span of life, his Lordship's mind is wonderfully active and vigorous; and that he has been accumulating, from every source at his commend, every variety of information connected with our resources, and other important interests regarding Nova Scotia, as one of the most valuable appendages of the British Crown. We have not abandoned the hope that his Lordship may again visit us, but we feel assured that we shall, in some abandoned the hope that his Lordship may again visit us, but we feel assured that we shall, in some shape, profit by the knowledge he has acquired during his brief stay at this portion of his command. We have reached a crisis in the condition of Nova Scotia, and it is all important to have made known to the Government and people of England, through a channel far from any suspicion of political bias, our position and capabilities as a Colony, and the causes which have led to the evils now impending over us. No authority or as a Colony, and the causes which have led to the evils now impending over us. HALIFAX, November 12. Nearly the entire business part of Fredericton, N. B., was destroyed by fire yesterday. It com-menced near the Methodist Church, and burned to Front Street, and through to the rear of the town. Three hundred buildings are reported to have been destroyed, amongst them many of the principal stores in the city. Neither the loss nor the insurance can be ascertained yet. Vast amounts of property are uninsured.
