Patient observers of the heavens will have an opportunity of witnessing a brilliant display of meteors next month when the earth passes into showers of the fast moving fiery bodies. From August ninth to August fourteenth the display will be at its best and each evening in the eastern heavens the blazing meteors will be seen darting across the skies and leaving bright trails behind.

Life at Charleston Lake just now is one glad sweet song, in the melody of which all lake dwellers and passing pilgrims join. A good boat livery would increase the number of transient visitors.

Mr W. H. Hanson's new summer home at Derbyshire's Point, Charleston Lake, is now taking form and promises to be one of the most beautiful and substantial cottages at the lake. Its situation is charming. The Point is well timbered, has two little bays, a spring of pure cold water, and the land slopes gently down to the water's edge. Behind, the wooded ledges of High Rock make a suitable background for this comfortable home.

School children in Germany are taught to swim safely by going through the motions without entering water. This system was advocated and practiced by the late Dr. R. K. For some time Mr Oliver Hayes has been suffering with a complication of diseases and on Monday his physician, Dr. Harte, called in consultation Dr C. M. B. Cornell of Brockville. From appendicitis, an abscess had formed, and his removal to a hospital was decided upon. The automobile of Mr Francis Sheldon was secured and in this the patient was conveyed to Athens station and thence by evening train to Brockville, Dr Harte accompanying the patient. The ambulance of St. Vincent de Paul Hospital met the train at Brockville and conveyed him to that institution where an operation was performed a few hours later and the abscess removed. The patient stood the ordeal well and reports this morning are to the effect that he is resting comfortably.

Sweet Miss Margery

"It is very bitter to me, Vane, to have to stoop to deceit; but it is a deep wound to my pride, that Stuart, my son, should so far forget his dignity as to think of such a girl for his wife. You are prompted by the best and noblest feelings, Vane; but I can not bring myself to submit to this degradation even for a minute. Stuart must know the truth—must know how I judge him in this."

"Vane rose hurriedly from her seat. 'I know you are right, Aunt Constance,' she responded quietly, though she was inwardly disturbed by Mrs. Crosbie's words; 'but consider, Stuart is impulsive, as strong-willed as yourself, if you cross him in this, who knows but that he may do something rash—perhaps marry the girl without delay, and be separated from you forever? Is it not wiser to act cautiously, to be careful and politic? I do not advocate too much warmth on your part; meet Stuart coolly; but at the same time throw no obstacle in the way. Believe me, dear auntie, you will be relieved of all anxiety if you do this.'"

"But what do you propose?" asked Mrs. Crosbie, resuming her seat, and Vane saw that her advice had taken root.

"We must let the separation come from her," she answered, quickly. "It will not do to send the girl away—that would put a stimulus to Stuart's determination. No, he must be disillusioned, and that will not be a difficult matter, I should imagine."

Mrs. Crosbie was silent for a few moments; she was irritated and displeased more than Stuart imagined, but she was at the same time determined to do her duty. She should stoop to humiliate himself in this way. Vane's words fell with good effect upon her ears. Had her niece not been at hand to smooth matters with gentle tact, she would not have been to restrain her anger. Something of the wisdom of the girl's advice came home to her as she mused. She saw that Vane was urged by jealousy and pride to break off this terrible connection, but she was quite wrong in her conclusions as to the source of that jealousy. She judged it to be solely the outcome of love for her son, and she thought came as soothing balm at such a moment. Once let them despatch that girl, and the marriage she had planned would take place.

Vane watched her aunt intently. "You will consent?" she said softly, breaking the silence.

"Yes," Mrs. Crosbie answered abruptly.

Vane made no immediate reply, but her heart thrilled with satisfaction. Now she must conjure up all her power to defeat Margery Daw. Plan after plan followed each other through her mind; but she could arrive at none better than tramping on the village roads with darts and stinging which would linger longest. Before she began the fray, however, she must see Stuart, breathe in his ear that she had succeeded with his mother, and thus allay any suspicion he might entertain in the future that she was through instrumentally that his love-dream had been broken.

"Yes," said Mrs. Crosbie again. "I will set as you suggest. I see plainly the wisdom of such a course. Were I to display the anger I feel, the consequences might be worse than the present state of things. My attitude towards you must separate him from this girl!"

Vane felt, and kissed her aunt.

"I am glad you see the matter as I do, Aunt Constance, I feel I am right. Stuart must be saved from this; and if we work well, we shall do it. Now I must start for the village. Remember, you will not let your anger be seen."

"It will be difficult, perhaps," returned Mrs. Crosbie; "but there is too much at stake, and I will control myself."

Vane moved away slowly, leaving the mother plunged in bitter thought, and she put on her prettily smiling triumphantly at her own image in the mirror, and, drawing on her gloves, passed along the corridor till she reached Stuart's door.

She knocked softly, and whispered to the servant—

"Is your master awake?"

"Yes, miss."

"Ask him to come to the door for one minute, if he can."

Vane fastened the last button of her glove, and then stood waiting, a picture of grace and beauty, as Stuart moved slowly into the doorway.

by false vows, which were laughed to scorn perchance with his cousin when he had left her. She did not doubt the truth of the words she had just heard; they had been spoken so naturally, the outcome of the speaker's knowledge. Had he not seen the lovers together? Was he not in the house, with every opportunity of judging? Now all was explained. Stuart had made his accident a pretext for leaving her in her sorrow without word or sign. Her youth, her joy, her light of life was gone, and henceforth she was alone in the world. Her heart raised a cry against this man. Why had he so ruthlessly robbed her the charm of childhood, and given her the sorrows of a woman? Why had he left her in her innocence, content in her humble life?

"During the last three months Margery had lived in an atmosphere of indescribable happiness. She did not stop to reason with herself as to whether Stuart Crosbie's comings and goings had not an unspoken interest for her. She had welcomed him as her friend, the dearest in truth she possessed, and the day in Weald Wood, and then what joy filled her being! Stuart loved her. The truth was revealed to her; the key to her contentment—her joyous spirits never saddened save when by the sick woman's couch—was grasped. And now all was at an end. An indescribable pain pierced her heart; she never realized till now how deeply her affections were centered in him. Her shamed modesty recalled the words she had spoken, the looks she had given, the kisses she had stolen from her lips, and at each thought she grew fainter and pressed her small hands against her heart to stay its throbbings. She could think of nothing but the two figures standing in Weald Wood, with the sunshine overhead; and the picture brought a flush of shame to her face, a weight of unspoken grief to her heart, the cottage gate at last, and advanced wearily to the door. The reality of Mrs. Morris' death came to her then in all its bitter force. In all the days of her childhood, who trouble had overtaken her, she had sought the gentleman whose couch now stood blank and empty, and had found solace in his chair, the faint breeze stirring the curls on her forehead.

"O God, I am so young, so young! I am not used to tears at night. Instead of slumber, nor to pray! With sobbing lips and hands outwring; and, uttering a bitter cry, Margery buried her face in her hands till the paroxysm was passed.

Fatigue and sorrow had told upon her, and she rose from her knees, looking with her white tear-stained face, the ghost of the lovely girl a week before. Her tears had relieved her, the dull pain at her heart was gone; but the passion of her grief had weakened her, and for many minutes she lay back in a chair, the faint breeze stirring the curls on her forehead.

Presently the sound of footsteps aroused her, and, looking up, she saw Reuben Morris enter the garden, accompanied by a young man who, despite his handsome face, was certainly of a plebeian stamp. The two men were talking earnestly, and Margery noticed with a pang the stoop in the sturdy shoulders, the worn face of the bereaved man. She had always loved him, though the link that bound her to the dead woman was wanting in her affection for him; and she forgot her own sorrow for the moment in thinking of his.

She was leaning back in the shadow, and neither perceived her; but her ears caught her own name; and, too weary to move, she remained in her seat.

"Then you have not spoken to Margery yet?" she heard the young man question.

"No; but I shall do it before night-time. I can not bear to think of quitting her, poor lamb! But there's many here as'll be good to her, and I can not stay in the place; it would kill me."

"You will be a loss, Morris," returned the stranger. "Have you sent word to Sir Hubert's steward about going?"

"I've just come from him. He spoke very kindly, and tried to persuade me to stay on; but my mind is fixed, and I was firm. Sir Hubert and my lady are not coming home, after all, he tells me for which I am sorry, as Margery would—"

Margery rose and moved into the doorway, holding out her hand to the speaker.

"I have heard what you have been saying, Dad Reuben—calling him by the name she had given him when she was a child.

Reuben Morris drew her toward him.

"My poor lass!" he said, gently. "How worn and tired you look! I meant to have spoken to you to-night, Margery."

"Tell me now," she urged, giving her hand to the young man.

"I am going away, Margery," Reuben replied. "I can not stay here. The sight of all she loved would kill me; so I am just going to leave it all; and I start for Australia at the end of the week. I have been up to Farmer Bright's, and Mr. Robert has walked back with me to talk it all over."

"Australia!" repeated Margery, drawing closer to him. "So soon?"

"Yes, lass, I must go. I had an offer through Farmer Bright to go up country to a man who wants a stock driver. It isn't quite that takes me, Margery. I must quit Hurstley, or I shall go mad. But we must think of you, lass?"

Hubert's steward will find me another home till Lady Coningham comes back, and—"

"Yes; my mother has sent me here with a message to you, Margery," Robert Bright said quickly. "She wants you to come to her for a month or so."

"What is very kind," she answered, "but 'Wilt thou go, lass?' asked Reuben, gently.

"Margery drew a quick breath. 'I can not answer now,' she said; 'tomorrow, I will tell you, Mr. Robert.'"

"Oh, there is no hurry," Robert returned, heartily. "Mother will welcome you gladly whenever you come."

"Wilt thou go to-morrow and she'll be with you," Reuben said in the young man's ear, and Margery turned inward again; then he added, in a louder tone, "I must go up to the Weald for an hour, to see the men. Get thee some rest, lass."

"I will stay here, as Margery will let me," Robert Bright said, placing one foot on the door-step and glancing into the room.

Reuben had moved away down the path, and the sight of the girl's pale, drawn face, and listless, drooping figure, stirred the heart of the younger farmer.

For weeks past he had grown to watch for this girl. Her rare beauty and delicacy were as something heavenly in his every-day life.

"You must not fret, Margery," he said, as kindly as he could; sympathy, always difficult to him, was almost impossible now. "You are looking very pale and ill."

"The girl raised her hands, and pressed them over her hot eyes; then she rose with a faint smile, and drew nearer to the door, leaning back against it with a weary little sigh.

"I am very tired," she said, wistfully, "and the heat tries me."

"Come to my mother, and she will nurse you; you do not know what a clever doctor she is. Come! Let me take you away with me—I will borrow a cart from some one in the village. Do come, Margery!"

Margery shook her head.

"I can not go," she answered slowly. "Do not think me unkind; I can not go."

His face fell, and there was silence between them for a few minutes. Her heavily fringed lids drooped over her eyes, and so he gazed, whilst the love ruing within his heart urged him to take his frail sad being from sorrow to happiness. Suddenly it grew so faintly that he could not see her hands, he grasped her tenderly.

"Margery," he said, "my darling!"

Margery tremblingly withdrew her hands, and her eyes met his glowing ones, with horror and distress in their depths. She had never dreamed of this. She had never thought of being so loved, so loved, so loved, but in love—love from him, when every pulse in her beat only for Stuart! It was a horror—a sacrifice!

Robert Bright saw her light shudder, and he tried once more to grasp her hands.

"Forgive me, Margery," he said, hurriedly. "I would not have spoken so soon, but something within me forced me to do so. I could not bear to see you looking so pale and ill. You want comfort now, so I spoke, Margery. I love you! My darling, I love you so dearly, give me one kind word; but I love truly—you can not know how truly, Margery!"

But she had drawn back, and with her face buried in her hands, had sunk into her chair again. As she felt his touch on her shoulder, her hands dropped, but her head was still lowered.

"You must not say such words," she said faintly. "Dear Mr. Robert, forgive me, but I can not hear them."

"I am a brute to tease you," he broke in, quickly; "but oh, Margery, I am not same just now, I love you so dearly, give me one kind word."

"I can not, I can not!" she cried. "You must not hope, Mr. Robert. I—"

"Not hope!" he repeated, blankly. "Not hope! Do you mean that, Margery?"

"Yes," she answered, putting one hand to her heart to check its tumultuous throbbings. "Yes; I mean it. I like you—you are so good; but love—"

"The sadness of her accent touched him.

"Then forget it all," he said, huskily. "Love does not kill. I shall get over it. And yet—" He hesitated, looked once more at her drooping figure, and then went on hurriedly: "Don't let this stop you from going to my mother, if you care to do so. I have to run up to London to-night. We should not meet."

Margery rose and held out her hands to him. In an instant he had them pressed to his breast, his eyes fixed on her face; but there was no indication of what he sought in her pallid cheeks and trembling lips. He loosened his grasp.

"Then," he said, slowly, "there is no hope, Margery?"

"None," she murmured, faintly.

Robert Bright pressed his lips to her hands, and the next minute she heard his step grow fainter and fainter along the path, and then the click of the gate told her that he was gone.

Margery sat on, dazed, almost stupefied. Then gradually memory came back to her, bringing in all its bitterness, the old pain of the morning, with a fresh pang of sorrow for the man who had just left her. She felt at though she had been cruel to him. He had been so earnest, so eager, and yet there was no hope. No hope! Her heart echoed the dismal words. Life that had been so bright and beautiful was now dark and drear as winter gloom. She sat on, heedless of time's flight, vaguely watching the sun touch the trees with its afternoon gold, and sadly musing on the dark mysterious future that stretched before her. At last she woke from her sad thoughts. The click of the gate had caught her ear, and she realized that the afternoon was nearly gone.

"It is Dad Reuben!" she murmured; and, rising, she dragged herself from the chair and stood, looking pale and ill, as a shadow fell over the door way.

"I retract my first opinion," she said to herself; "the girl is absolutely plain."

Some vague instinct called Margery's pride to arms. This woman hated her, she felt, though their eyes had met but once before. She drew herself up, and, resting one hand on her chest, faced her unwelcome guest. What had brought her to the cottage? Margery felt her limbs trembling; but her face showed no sign of the agony in her heart.

"Yes," she said, steadily, "I am Margery Daw. Do you wish—"

"First, let me express sympathy for you in your loss," commenced Vane, modulating her voice to soft accents. She saw at once that Margery regarded her as an enemy; but she did not intend to allow that thought to become rooted. She must clothe her darts with kindness, and with her sweetest words thrust her dagger into this girl's heart. "None can know but those who have suffered what your grief must be," she finished gently.

Margery's head drooped. Had sorrow already destroyed all her good impulses? She was prepared for war, and she met with sympathy and tenderness!

"You are very good," she faltered.

Vane advanced into the room and pulled forward a chair.

"May I sit with you for a while?" she asked. "It is not good for you to be alone like this."

"I like it," answered Margery, turning her lustrous eyes upon her guest; and, as Vane saw their beauty, her brows contracted, and she realized that her first judgment regarding this girl had been right, after all.

Her mood changed. When she had considered Margery plain, a half-contemptuous thought had passed through her mind to wound yet retain her sweetness. Now she felt she cared not how hard she struck to relieve the jealousy and dislike that rankled in her bosom. (To be Continued.)

FISH. (By F. C. Langworthy, expert in charge of nutrition experiments, U. S. department of agriculture.)

Meat and fish are both flesh foods and are so similar in chemical composition and in methods of preparation that there is ample reason for the general feeling that they serve the same purpose in the diet and may replace one another at the convenience of the housekeeper and the preference of the family.

The ways in which fish are so well known that they do not need mention in detail, but it is perhaps worth while to direct attention particularly to the food value and palatability of salt and smoked fishes as reasonably inexpensive articles of diet. A quart of milk thickened with flour and mixed with one-half pound of dried fish (cod or haddock) makes a compound which contains more protein than a pound of steak and as much as a pound and a half of sirloin steak. The addition of hard boiled egg, which is a common accompaniment, further increases the protein value. Two eggs would bring the food value up to that of about 1.4 pounds of round steak of about 1.2 pounds sirloin steak. The fish dish would serve more persons than the steak and cost less.

Where Asparagus Grows Wild. Asparagus was not introduced into Britain by the Romans who applied the term asparagus to tender shoots which, according to Juvenal, grew on mountains (Montani asparagi). The plant is certainly native with us and occurs sparsely on the eastern and southern coasts of England at Anglesy and Penryn in Wales and around Wexford and Waterford in Ireland. It is no longer found on Asparagus Island, near the Lizard, as all text books of English botany assert, but still grows profusely on some neighboring cliffs of Kynance Cove.—From the Westminster Gazette.

The Rhine Maidens ate potatoes and all manner of starchy foods. "In order to preserve theunities!" they explained.

"Theunities!" repeated the then world, in great perplexity.

"Yes. Only very stout songstresses will be able to do full justice to the trilogies and things which are destined to be written about us!" declared the Rhine Maidens, with prophetic discernment.

SPOILED BY COMPOSITOR.

An editor was sitting in his office one day when a man entered whose brow was clothed with thunder. Piercingly gazing at a chair, he stamped his feet on the floor, and sat down.

"Are you the editor?" he asked.

"Can you read writing?"

"Read that, then," he said, thrusting at the editor an envelope with an inscription on it.

"That's not a 'B.' It's an 'S,'" said the man.

"Oh, yes, I see. Well it looks like 'S' for Sinner, or 'S' for Sins, or 'S' for Sinners," said the editor.

"No, sir, replied the man; 'nothing of the sort. That's my name—Samuel Briner. I knew you couldn't read. I called it a fool.' (The editor coughed.)

"I don't remember it," said the editor.

"Of course you don't, because it went into the paper under the villainous title of 'Sincere to-morrow.'"

"A blunder of the compositor, I suppose, sir, and that is what I am here to see you about. The way in which that poem was handled was simply scandalous. I haven't slept a night since. It exposed me to derision. People think me a fool." (The editor coughed.)

"I wrote it, read this way: 'Lying by a weeping willow, underneath a gentle slope.' That is beautiful and poetic. Now, how did your vile sheet represent it to the public? Lying to a weeping widow, mine your! A widow! 'weeping widow, mine your! A widow! Oh, thank and lightning! This is too much!"

"It's hard, sir—very hard," said the editor.

"Then take the fifth verse. In the original manuscript it is as plain as day-light. 'Take away the lying money. It is only glittering dross.' In its printed form you make me say 'Take away the lying honey; put some flies in for the bees. By George! I feel like it!'"

"But oh, look at the sixth verse. I wrote, 'I'm weary of the tossing of the ocean.' 'weeping widow, mine your! A widow! Oh, thank and lightning! This is too much!"

"He is out just now," said the editor.

"I will," said the poet; "and I will come armed."—Tit-Bits.

HOW TO OBTAIN A GOOD COLOR

Treatment to Restore the Blood Supply That Has Been Most Successful.

There is only this to tell people who are pale, weak and bloodless. You are pale and weak because you haven't blood enough and you can't be better until your blood supply is increased. You should not lose any time in increasing your blood supply, for people who neglect anaemia, often slip into a deadly decline. When you have increased your blood supply you can reasonably expect to have good color, to have lost that breathless feeling, to have a good appetite and get good nourishment from your food. Now the only quick and all-ways effective way to take a supply of new rich red blood is to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose helps to make new blood, and this new blood makes new color, and brings back health and strength to every organ and every part of the body, making weak, ailing people bright, active and strong.

This has been proved in thousands of cases, of which the case of Mrs. George Clark, Abbeville, S. C., is a fair example. Mrs. Clark says: "After spending two years and six months in a hospital training for a nurse I began to fail in health, was very pale, and had no energy. After graduating I came to the United States, and as the successor of British Columbia to take up my profession as a private nurse. The first case I took I found I was not able to go on with my work. Doctors' tonics failed me and acting on my own judgment I purchased a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had finished them I was really surprised at the result. The color came back to my face. I gained in strength and by the time I had used nine boxes I was back at my work as a nurse. I have since married, but still have my friendly feeling for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Hot Spell in South Carolina. Governor Cole L. Blease yesterday addressed two immense and enthusiastic audiences of cotton mill workers in Spartanburg county, at Cowpens in the morning and at Drayton-mills in the afternoon. Both addresses were said by those familiar with the Governor to be characteristic of the man.

At Drayton he denounced the negroes whom he called "apes and baboons" and for whom he said the most effective remedy was "a little gunpowder and a few bullets," openly gave his approval to condoned manslaughter committed by the whites, and defended the paroling of convicts and justified his other official acts. He also denounced the newspapers, especially the Columbia State and the Spartanburg Herald, which he said were "the most wicked and malicious organs of the University of South Carolina and Dr. S. C. Mitchell, president of the university, deeded that he had sold pardons and declared that if he should be impeached he would go to the United States Senate as the successor of Senator F. E. Tillman.—Spartanburg Herald.

"Oh, he's a discoverer of new Kumbrents."

EX-PENSIVE. (Philadelphia Record.)

Blotts—Bjones always looks so pensive when he speaks of his ex-wife.

Slobbs—Well, if you know the amount of alimony he has to pay I guess you'd think she was rather expensive.

HAPPY DAY! (Life.)

Mrs. Benham—I believe in the equality of the sexes.

Benham—So do I; I am looking forward to the day when your harem skirts are advertised like trousers, at '99 cents a leg."

NOT UP TO HIM. (Puck.)

Teacher—Tell me! How do you prove the earth is round?

Dull but Smart Pupil—I never said it was!

SHREWD PERSUASION. (Washington Star.)

"How did you convert young Mrs. Torkins to your votes for women idea?" asked one suffragette.

"I designed a perfectly fetching campaign costume and showed it to her."

KNEW HOW TO BELL GOODS. (Boston Transcript.)

Saleman—You'll find these good wearing socks, sir.

Customer—Rather loud, ain't they? Saleman—Yes, sir. But that keeps the feet from going to sleep.—Tit-Bits.

METHOD IN HER TIGHTNESS. (Exchange.)

Nell—When she is so stout I wonder why Ethel laces so tightly.

Belle—The man she is engaged to has such a short arm.

STRENUOUS ACTION. (Pittsburg Gazette.)

Tailor—Has Mr. Owens taken any action on that bill of his yet.

Collector—Yes; he kicked me out the last time I called to collect it.

ESSENTIAL. (Washington Star.)

"Do you think the study of Greek has practical value?"

Tom—Oh, my yes. Why, she's bluish crimson if she saw a pile of undressed lumber.

SOME SAY IT'S CROOKED. (Baltimore American.)

"Pop, is the world round?"

"That, my son, depends on who gives the answer. The extreme optimists say it is sometimes square, and the majority of pleasure-seekers declare it is very flat."

UNUSUAL. (Pathfinder.)

Jorkins—How did you ever come into possession of such a cheap-looking umbrella as that?

Dorkins—Why, I got this umbrella in a very peculiar way—I bought it."

QUICK, WATSON, THE NEEDLE! (Philadelphia Record.)

Hoax—Here's an article written by a scientist who says that insects bite of emotions. He claims he has frequently seen a mosquito weep.

Joax—Well, I've often seen a moth ball.

HE HAD ONLY HEARD. (Buffalo Express.)

"Are your neighbors gossiping?" asked Billings.

"Some of them must be," answered Gittings, "judging by the amount of information about them that my wife reports to me."

Valuable Advice to Mothers.

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidences of Grippe, Sore Throat, or sickness of any kind, get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline, and give internal doses of ten drops of Nerviline in sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Nerviline, which has been the great remedy for children in Canada for the past fifty years. The 25c bottle of Nerviline.

DEATH AT FRANKVILLE

There passed away at his residence two miles east of Frankville, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Mr. Samuel Hanton, one of Kitle's well known and highly respected citizens. He had been a sufferer for some time with cancer. Last fall he underwent an operation at the Brockville General Hospital.

Deceased was born on the farm where he died 62 years ago and with the exception of a few years spent in the Southwestern States has always lived in this vicinity. He was a veteran of the Fenian Raid of 1870, serving with old No. 3 company, 41st Battalion, Prescott and Cornwall. The company at that time was one of the finest with headquarters in Frankville. Mr. Hanton was also a justice of the peace, being appointed by the Whitney Government. He was secretary-treasurer of the school board for the last 17 years. He was a Conservative in politics and a member of the Anglican church, where the funeral was held.

Besides his sorrowing widow he leaves to mourn his loss two sons, W. M. and Meredith, who reside at home; three brothers and two sisters, who all reside near Frankville with the exception of one sister who resides in the west.

THE MOTOR BOAT

Writing on the fascinations of motor boating, Dr. Marc G. McElhinney of Kingston states: Motor boating is the most varied, most enjoyable, most carefree and most versatile sport known to man. It opens up a fresh interest at every turn, gives opportunity for taking a wide variety of chances and develops the power of description, especially in the matter of vituperation and other sorts of red-hot language that a man, once caught in its coils, can have small hope of escape. Moreover, he does not want to escape. All that he feels is necessary to complete happiness is a larger or a faster boat. With us Canadians, love of the water is a race instinct, a legitimate heritage from the peoples from which we are sprung. We love water so that we always want to be near it or on it, and even refuse to take our whiskey without it. There is a lot to learn about motor boating, a lot that cannot be got out of books. A man may fake knowledge on many subjects and pass, but if he tries the game in motor boating, he falls down hard. This is why motor boatmen are a pretty decent lot. They are there with the goods, and what they do not know they are willing to ask. Some sailors of windjammers sneer at the power boat, hinting that it is too free from danger and needs little handling. Let such make Kingston in a lively southwest in a motor boat and he will get all the action and interest that he can hold for the time and distance.

FOUNDED HOTEL DIED

JEANNE MANOUE AND HER DEVOTED LIFE IN CANADA.

French Women Who Suffered Vandalism in Montreal Recently Tamed With Is One of the Most Magnificent Characters in the History of the Dominion—She Served the Sick and Wounded for Thirty Years.

If the purpose of those, who a few nights ago, tampered with the statue of Jeanne Manoue, which adorns one of the four corners of the Maisonneuve monument in place d'Armes, Montreal, was simply to work destruction upon one of the most beautiful specimens of the sculptor's art in Canada, then there are vandals in our midst who would have been fit members of that barbaric horde that early in the middle ages poured over the Alps, over-ran Italy, and sacked Rome.

However, the purpose of the vandals was not accomplished, and the beautiful bronze figure remains, to adorn the monument which commemorates the founding of Montreal two hundred and sixty-nine years ago this month.

The work to which Jeanne Manoue devoted her life and her means was that of nursing the sick, soothing the infant and needy, and binding up the wounds sustained by those, who, in almost daily conflict, were holding the little outpost of civilization against the onsets of the relentless Iroquois. Jeanne Manoue was the Florence Nightingale of the Iroquois, the prototype of the trained nurses whose services form so large a part of the work of mercy carried on to-day in our great hospitals.

Mademoiselle Jeanne Manoue belonged to an honorable family of Negonville, near Langres, France. She was born in 1806—two years before the founding of Quebec. She received the education of a young gentleman of her time. Her constitution was delicate, her manners graceful yet dignified. Though an earnest devotee, she felt no vocation for the cloister; and yet, writes her biographer Fallou, while "still in the world" she led the life of a nun. She had read accounts of the missionary work carried on among the Indians of Canada; her enthusiasm was kindled, and she journeyed up to Paris to seek advice respecting her engaging in the work. She received encouragement from high ecclesiastics, and a letter of recommendation from the Bishop of Montreal, which she carried with her. Well supplied with money for her pious work, she went to Rochelle, from whence the ships sailed for Canada, and here she fell in with the party about to set out for the wilderness for the purpose of establishing a colony among two hundred miles beyond Quebec, on the island formed by the junction of the two great rivers of the west and the north—the Island of Montreal.

On May 16th, 1872, they embarked for Montreal, the little flotilla consisting of a pinnace, a flat-bottomed craft moved by sails, and two rowboats. On May 18 they landed on the Island of Montreal as the spot where, thirty-seven years before, Champlain had chosen as the site of a settlement.

In the following year a French lady of rank, Madame de Bouillon, gave forty-two thousand livres for the building of a hospital at Ville Marie. The enclosure within the palisade stood near the river, and in the spring it was in danger of inundation, and in fact, during the first winter the high water caused by a thaw nearly flooded the place. There was also a room to spare within the palisade, and the hospital was accordingly built on higher ground adjacent. In order to protect it against the Iroquois it too was surrounded by a palisade, and, in time of danger, a part of the garrison was detailed to defend it. The hospital was intended not only to nurse sick Frenchmen, but to nurse and convert sick Indians.

Among the notes to one of the volumes of the Relations in this tribute to Jeanne Manoue. She "was at one time the main support of the Montreal colony. Besieged by the Iroquois in 1651, and at all times exposed to their incursions, the new settlement was in danger of destruction; Mlle. Manoue furnished Maisonneuve with 22,000 livres from the hospital endowment, with which to raise and equip soldiers for the defence of the town. In the following year she visited Paris, and procured the recognition of the Montreal Society, which had become greatly reduced, both in numbers and funds. Later she had much to do with bringing from France the nurse of St. Joseph. For the latter she procured an endowment from Madame de Bouillon. The establishment of these nurses, her administration of the hospital (in which they succeeded after her death), and her share in the management of the colony placed great burdens on the shoulders of Mlle. Manoue, but she discharged her duties with enthusiasm, conscientious devotion, and excellent practical judgment."

These were dark years for the colony. Danger was ever at hand, and at times destruction seemed inevitable. Its prospects were far from hopeful, and what was left of vitality was in the enthusiastic Mademoiselle Manoue. She earnest and disinterested soldier Maisonneuve, and the priest Olives, and his new Seminary of St. Sulpice.

During these years of struggles and danger Jeanne Manoue remained at her post, administering the affairs of her hospital, and with her associates nursing the sick and wounded, and caring for the needy and homeless. And so passed the life of this heroine of the early years of Montreal, and it is because of this work that in the group of statues that forms the monument commemorating the founding of the city, a place has been given to the figure representing the first nurse in Montreal, and the founder of its first hospital. Jeanne Manoue's remains were buried in the chapel of the Hotel Dieu—Montreal Standard.

Nichol and bisznth both have the peculiar property of expanding as they become cool.

He was a veteran of the Fenian Raid of 1870, serving with old No. 3 company, 41st Battalion, Prescott and Cornwall, The company at that time was one of the finest with headquarters in Frankville. Mr Hanton was also a justice of the peace, being appointed by the Whitney Government. He was secretary-treasurer of the school board for the last 17 years. He was a Conservative in politics and a member of the Anglican church, where the funeral was held.

Besides his sorrowing widow he leaves to mourn his lost two sons, W. M. and Mer-dith, who reside at home; three brothers and two sisters, who all reside near Frankville with the exception of one sister who resides in the west.

THE MOTOR BOAT

Writing on the fascinations of motor boating, Dr. Max G. McElhinney of Kingston states: Motor boating is the most varied, most enjoyable, most carefree and most versatile sport known to man. It opens up a fresh interest at every turn, gives opportunity for taking a wide variety of chances and develops the power of description, especially in the matter of vituperation and other sorts of red-hot language that a man, once caught in its coils, can have small hope of escape. Moreover, he does not want to escape. All that he feels is necessary to complete happiness is a larger or a faster boat. With us Canadians, love of the water is a race instinct, a legitimate heritage from the peoples from which we are sprung. We love water so that we always want to be near it or on it, and even refuse to take our whiskey without it. There is a lot to learn about motor boating, a lot that cannot be got out of books. A man may fake knowledge on many subjects and pass, but if he tries the game in motor boating, he falls down hard. This is why motor boatmen are a pretty decent lot. They are there with the goods, and what they do not know they are willing to ask. Some sailors of windjammers sneer at the power boat, hinting that it is too free from danger and needs little handling. Let such make Kingston in a lively southwest in a motor boat and he will get all the action and interest that he can hold for the time and distance.

JEANNE MANCE AND HER DEVOTED LIFE IN CANADA.

French Women Whose Status Vandalized in Montreal Recently Tampered With Is One of the Most Magnificent Characters in the History of the Dominion—She Served the Sick and Wounded for Thirty Years.

If the purpose of those, who a few nights ago, tampered with the statue of Jeanne Mance, which adorns one of the four corners of the Maisonneuve monument in place d'Armes, Montreal, was simply to work destruction upon one of the most beautiful specimens of the sculptor's art in Canada, then there are vandals in our midst who would have been fit members of that barbaric horde that early in the middle ages poured over the Alps, over-ran Italy, and sacked Rome.

However, the purpose of the vandals was not accomplished, and the beautiful bronze figure remains, to adorn the monument that commemorates the founding of Montreal two hundred and sixty-nine years ago this month. It is not to be forgotten that Jeanne Mance devoted her life and her means was that of nursing the sick, succoring the infirm and needy, and binding up the wounds sustained by those, who, in most daily conflicts, were holding the little outpost of civilization against the onsets of the relentless Iroquois. Jeanne Mance was the Florence Nightingale of Ville Marie, the prototype of the trained nurses whose services form so large a part of the work of mercy carried on to-day in our great hospitals.

Mademoiselle Jeanne Mance belonged to an honorable family of Nogent-le-Roi, near Langres, France. She was born in 1636, two years before the founding of Quebec. She received the education of a young gentleman of her time. Her constitution was delicate, her manners graceful yet dignified. Though an earnest devotee, she felt no vocation for the cloister, and yet, writes her biographer Failon, while "still in the world" she led the life of a nun. She had read accounts of the missionary work carried on among the Indians of Canada; her enthusiasm was kindled, and she journeyed up to Paris to seek advice respecting her engaging in the work. She received encouragement from high ecclesiastics, and from ladies of rank, wealth and seal. Well supplied with money for her pious work, she went to Rochelle, from whence the ships sailed for Canada, and here she fell in with the party about to set out for the wilderness for the purpose of establishing a colony almost two hundred miles beyond Quebec, on the island formed by the junction of the two great rivers of the west and the north—the Island of Montreal.

On May 8, 1642, they embarked for Montreal, the little flotilla consisting of a pinnace, a flat-bottomed craft moved by sails, and two rowboats. On May 18 they landed on the Island of Montreal as the spot where, thirty-one years before, Champlain had chosen as the fit site of a settlement.

In the following year a French lady of rank, Madame de Bouillon, gave forty-two thousand livres for the building of a hospital at Villa Marie. The enclosure within the palisade stood near the river, and in the spring was in danger of inundation, and in fact, during the first winter the high water caused by a thaw nearly flooded out of place. There was also no room for the patients, the hospital was accordingly built on higher ground adjacent. In order to protect it against the Iroquois it too was surrounded by a palisade, and, in time of danger, a part of the garrison was detailed to defend it. The hospital was intended not only to nurse sick Frenchmen, but to nurse and convert sick Indians.

Among the notes to one of the volumes of the Relations in this tribute to Jeanne Mance, "was at one time the main support of the Montreal colony. Besieged by the Iroquois in 1651, and at all times exposed to their incursions, the new settlement was in danger of destruction; Mlle. Mance, furnished Maisonneuve with 22,000 livres from the hospital endowment, with which to raise and equip soldiers for the defence of the town. In the following year she visited Paris and secured the reorganization of the Montreal Society, which had become greatly reduced, both in numbers and funds. Later she had much to do with bringing from France the nuns of St. Joseph. For the latter she secured an endowment from Madame de Bouillon. The establishment of these nuns, her administration of the hospital (in which they succeeded her after her death), and her share in the management of the colony placed great burdens on the shoulders of Mlle. Mance, but she discharged her duties with enthusiasm, conscientious devotion, and excellent practical judgment."

These were dark years for the colony. Danger was ever at hand, and at times destruction seemed inevitable. Its prospects were far from hopeful, and what was left of vitality was in the enthusiastic Mademoiselle Mance, the earnest and disinterested soldier Maisonneuve, and the priest Oliver and his new Seminary of St. Sulpice. During these years of struggles and danger Jeanne Mance remained at her post, administering the affairs of her hospital, and with her associates nursing the sick and wounded, and caring for the needy and homeless. And so passed the life of this heroine of the early years of Montreal, and it is because of that work that in the group of statues that forms the monument commemorating the founding of the city, a place has been given to the figure representing the first nurse in Montreal, and the founder of its first hospital. Jeanne Mance's remains were buried in the chapel of the Hotel Dieu—Montreal Standard.

ANALYTICAL CHEMIST TELLS OF PATENT MEDICINES

A graduate in organic chemistry, who has made a study of many of the best-known patent medicines on the market, states that many have virtue, but as a rule people have to pay for a lot of unnecessary expense. The following is the recipe of a well-known secret preparation, and is known by authority to be one of the best stomach and liver tonics. It is prescribed by many of the best physicians.

This mixture cures constipation and biliousness. The recipe—
Fluid Extract Cascara . . . . . 1/2 oz.
Syrup Rhubarb . . . . . 1 oz.
Carriana Compound . . . . . 1 oz.
Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla 5 oz.

Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.
An eminent authority, who has made a careful and scientific study of the relative values of drugs having a specific action on the kidneys, bladder, and liver, pronounces this an excellent combination.

You can buy the ingredients separately and mix at home.
Cut this formula out and save it.

CROPS IN WEST.

One Thousand Correspondents Report Prospects Very Favorable.

Winnipeg, Man., July 24.—Crop prospects in Western Canada to-day could hardly be more favorable. Some apprehension was felt on account of rumors of frost in certain localities. In order to obtain reliable information, one thousand correspondents in the three prairie provinces were wired last night asking if the cool wave was having a detrimental effect on the crops. Replies are of the most reassuring character, showing that while light frosts have been appearing in a few localities they have not affected the crop in the slightest degree. Of the replies received 81 per cent. reported no frost and no apprehension of it, and of the 19 per cent. reporting frost not one indicated any injury to wheat from this source. Injury from hail has also been considerable. On the whole correspondents' reports show that the cool wave is beneficial. Consider the cool wave as beneficial.

THE DOUKHOBORS

Doing Well on the British Columbia Fruit Farms.

Their Objection to the Census Their First Vagary There.

Nelson, B. C., July 24.—The action of 1,000 Doukhobors of the colony at Brilliant, in refusing to be enumerated in the census, is the first vagary exhibited by these people since coming to British Columbia from the prairie. As a matter of fact, while the Doukhobors were not welcomed in the Kootenay, it cannot be denied that they enjoy a very different name here from that which they appeared to earn in Saskatchewan. Their holdings amount to probably 10,000 acres of fruit land, at Grand Forks, and at points along the Columbia and Kootenay Rivers near their junction, and these holdings, which are equal to 1,000 ranch tracts of ten acres, are the most scientifically developed fruit tracts in the Province. In the irrigated district of Grand Forks they irrigate, and the Columbia and Kootenay River bench lands near Nelson, which do not require irrigation, they are clearing and planting to fruit on an enormous scale. They have the largest acreage of grapes at Brilliant anywhere in the Nelson district. Everything they do is done in a business way and in the best way, and when their young orchards come into bearing, they will have a tremendous output. They are extensive apiarists, they operate sawmills, and they recently purchased a power sawmill at Nelson, and now operate it. No case of crime has ever been attributed to them. If their projected school is built at Brilliant this season they already have a hospital, the only one in the Nelson and District Canadian Club has been raised in regard to them will overcome. The census trouble was brewing for some days before A. B. Duckstead, Census Commissioner for the Kootenay and Boundary, felt it necessary to get instructions from Ottawa. The Grand Forks colony was enumerated without trouble. With the Kootenay Doukhobors, however, after 500 had been enumerated, an aged firebrand made a stand for his rights, and the whole matter was off. A fear that Peter Voronin, whose hold on the Doukhobors here is far from absolute, has designs to entrain them into military service, is supposed to explain the stand taken.

FARMERS BANK.

Lindsay Committed for Trial—Halton Farmers Testify.

Toronto Despatch—Evidence in the preliminary hearing of Mr. W. J. Lindsay on a charge of conspiring to obtain the certificate of the Farmers Bank was taken before Magistrate Denison in the police court yesterday morning from a number of farmers of Halton County who had purchased shares and got rid of them through the action of Mr. William Laidlaw, K. C., but whose names as shareholders were submitted to the Treasury Board with the application for the certificate. James Murray, Milton, swore that he subscribed for $2,500 worth of stock at the request of Mr. Lindsay, who told him that Dr. Stewart had taken $10,000 worth. He cancelled the $2,500 and only $1,000 worth. He then got out of the contract. He found that Dr. Stewart had not subscribed. Mr. W. A. Dixon, Nelson, obtained $5,000 worth of stock on the understanding that Mr. Lindsay would later take $1,500 of it from his hands. He never had to pay for it. Mr. W. R. Travers, former General Manager of the Farmers Bank, testified that the names of a number of those who went before the Treasury Board before the certificates was obtained, and that they had received their money back. "Lindsay," said Mr. Travers, "knew of it in speaking to me of these names he said, 'leave them there.'"

GOOD CROPS.

Burned-out Pastures Revived and Grain Greatly Benefited.

Guelph, July 24.—On the whole, I think the crops of Ontario will be up to the mark of last year," said Prof. C. A. Zavitz this afternoon. "The recent rains, of course, had their greatest influence on the pasture, which was being badly burned up by the heat, causing the shrinkage in the milk supply which was felt all over. Next to this, the greatest influence will be on the potatoes and root crops and corn, which were badly in need of rain. The grain crop is very well advanced, and it would not do so much good to the roots. We are to-day thrashing one winter wheat, and the yield is good, while the quality is up to the mark. The straw of the winter wheat is uniformly good over the Province, except in some districts where it was winter-killed. The spring wheat straw is short, but the heads are filling out well, and the yield of grain will be good, though the straw will be light. Harvesting is largely commenced in this section, including Wellington, Perth, Waterloo, and on to Middlesex, and the harvest is a good one, and on the whole the crops will be well up to last year's, except in straw. Apples, the principal orchard crop in this district, will be light. Raspberries are fresher in flavor since the recent rains," concluded Prof. Zavitz.

ONCE A SLAVE.

Death of Lady Em, Consort of Former Emperor of Corea.

Seoul, Corea, July 24.—Lady Om, consort of Emperor Yi Hui, who abdicated in 1907, died yesterday. Lady Om was a palace politician of great skill. She was attendant upon the Queen of Corea, who was murdered. She gained the favor of the Emperor and was finally compelled to flee the palace. After the death of the queen she was restored to the court, with the rank of an Imperial Concubine. This conferred imperial rank upon her two children. She was originally a slave, who became a power in the court.

HERE'S LUCK.

Port Burwell, July 24.—Rivalry between the Dominion Natural Gas Company and the Medina Natural Gas Company has resulted in a reported offer of one of the companies to give gas users of Port Burwell, Ont., not only free gas, but also a premium of one cent per thousand feet to all those who will sign a contract for one year. Since the war between the two companies started the price of gas has been cut in half, dropping from twenty cents per thousand feet to ten cents. The latest offer to pay the citizens for using the gas is the result of one company's offer to supply it free. Both companies have franchises in Vienna and Port Burwell.

HEBREW PARTY

United Hebrew Political Society of Montreal Wants Representation.

Peter Berceovich Points to 125,000 Hebrews in Canada—Unrepresented.

Montreal, July 24.—The formation has just been completed of one of the most powerful political organizations that any Canadian city has known, the United Hebrew Political Society. In the only riding in which its influence will be felt it controls at least 5,000 votes. Its financial standing is very secure, every man in the Jewish community having contributed something. It proposes to have a candidate in the field at the next general election and will play a prominent part in municipal politics. The first effort at formation took place last January. Since then the system has been built up and today the association embraces every Hebrew society of any description in the city. The synagogues, the athletic organizations, the literary societies, the benevolent associations are all affiliated and the organization has become big and powerful. The organization has chosen its candidate in the person of the chairman, Peter Berceovich, B. C. L. Mr. Berceovich stated to-day that as yet he had neither accepted nor refused the offer.

PEACE AGREEMENT

President Taft Anxious That France Should Sign.

Ratification With Great Britain Delayed in the Meantime.

Washington, July 24.—Events are shaping so that it would not be surprising if the delays arising in the closing days of the negotiations in the general arbitration treaty should make it impossible to conclude them before President Taft leaves for his summer home in Beverly, Mass. Although the British Government has already practically given its assent to the treaty, it is the wish of the President and Secretary of State Knox that this important agreement be given a truly international character, which can be had only by the adherence of more than two of the great powers. The desire has been made known to the French Government and Ambassador Jusserand, now in Paris, is laboring to induce his Foreign Office to give its assent to the adherence of France.

MRS. BOOMERHURT

Well-Known London Lady Thrown Out of Cart When Horse Ran Away.

London, Ont., despatch: Mrs. H. A. Boomer, President of the local Council of Women, and one of the best known charitable workers in Canada, was seriously injured in a runaway in South London this afternoon. She was driving in a two-wheeled cart with Miss Parsons, governess in the household of Col. Cartwright, and a grandson of the colonel, when a dog, owned by Colonel Cartwright, which had followed the party, snatched the pony on the felloe. The horse made a sudden plunge and ran away, throwing the occupants of the cart out at the corner of Bruce and Cathcart streets. Mrs. Boomer, who is over 70 years old, alighted on her head against a telegraph pole. She was so badly hurt that Dr. Niven, who attended her, says it will be some days before the extent of her injuries are known. Miss Parsons' hand was broken and the boy escaped unhurt.

BAKER'S HEIRS

Held Meeting in Toronto—Want to Get Big Philadelphia Fortune.

Toronto Despatch—A gathering of St. George's Hall yesterday of some two hundred descendants of Colonel Baker, a multimillionaire, who died in Philadelphia a couple of centuries ago, arranged for the purpose of making a united effort to have his will probated, proved a failure so far as the primary object was concerned, and the meeting ended in confusion. The estates for which the heirs, who number about 1,000, are seeking, comprise properties in the heart of the city of Philadelphia, in various parts of the state of Pennsylvania and also in Germany. At the time of Colonel Baker's demise, over two hundred years ago, they were valued at between $50,000 and $100,000. After spending years investigating the properties, Mr. Rennie stated that he believed the total value was $200,000. Mr. Andrew A. McHugh, a State detective, who has been working on the case since August, 1910, and has arrested several alleged fakirs who claim to be able to restore the millions to the rightful heirs, attended the meeting yesterday. He was also very optimistic regarding the possibility of recovering the lost fortune.

SNUBBED EX-SHAH

Persian Premier Told Him He Didn't ObeY Pretenders.

London, July 24.—A despatch to the Times from Teheran says it is reported that Sipahdar, the new premier, and leader of the Nationalists, has received a telegram from the ex-Shah ordering him to maintain order until the ex-Shah arrives in Teheran. Sipahdar replied that Persia obeyed the constitutional monarch, and would never tolerate pretenders. The incident has a peculiar significance, as Sipahdar's loyalty to the constitution, the despatch says, has not been entirely above suspicion.

KILLED NEAR KENORA

Stepped Out of Way of One Train and Was Struck by Another.

Kenora Despatch—Hubert Reeves, a native of Espoon, England, who came to Canada about a year ago, and who has been employed as chairman of the C. P. R. engineering staff, this division, was instantly killed yesterday morning. Mr. Reeves was walking on the track near Pine, Ont., when No. 3 passenger train approached from the east, passing a freight running on the second track from the west. Mr. Reeves started to leave the track but had hardly gained the space between the two rails, when he was caught by the front of the engine and thrown down the deep embankment. He was brought to the hospital here with both legs broken and a severe head wound. He died early this morning. He was twenty-eight years of age.

NOTED MAN DEAD

Dr. Baldwin, Chinese Missionary, Passes Away at East Orange, N. J.

East Orange, N.J., despatch: The Rev. Dr. Caleb Cook Baldwin, who passed half a century as a missionary at Foochow, China, and for whom the Baldwin Library was erected in that city, is dead at the residence of his son here, from infirmities incident to his advanced age. He was born near here in 1820. Two children were born to Dr. and Mrs. Baldwin in China, and it was necessary, owing to the hostility of the Chinese, to build a wall of masonry around their home for the protection of the first child, who is now Mrs. Harriet Gerry, of East Orange. Dr. Baldwin compiled a dictionary of the principal dialects of Southeastern China, and translated the Bible into Chinese.

FELL OVER BANK

Engine and Tender Tumbled Over Bank of Welland Canal.

Engineer Smith, of Sarnia, Drowned—Navigation Blocked.

Port Colborne despatch: At half past 11 last night, a Grand Trunk engine and tender tumbled over the bank of the Welland Canal, drowning the engineer, Charles Smith, of Sarnia, and giving the fireman a bad ducking. The engine had just taken water at the tank, which is about 100 feet from the bank of the canal, when the accident occurred. The train was a freight, westbound. While the train was standing, the canal bridge was swung open to permit a tug, the Schofield, to pass up the channel. Apparently, the engineer was not aware of this fact, for he slowly started forward. The bridge had not closed when he reached the bank, and both engine and tender tumbled over, carrying the engineer and fireman with them. The fireman evidently saw what was coming, for he jumped wide of the wreck and was rescued without great difficulty. The engine, however, was killed. None of the cars in the train went over with the engine on account of the very slow rate of speed at which they were travelling. Navigation of the canal will be completely blocked until the huge bulk of the engine can be removed.

Geo. W. Glover Files Amendment to Suit in Eddy Will Contest.

Concord, N. H., July 24.—William F. Chandler to-day filed with the superior court as counsel for George W. Glover in the suit which seeks to set aside the will of Mary Baker Eddy as it is ordered to be administered by Henry M. Baker, executor, interesting final amendments allowed by the court. At various times since last February, when the original suit was filed, the plaintiff and defence have filed documents and this was the final day for the plaintiff, two more days being given the defence to close its pleadings.

ETHEL ESCAPED.

Celebrated Actress Not Interviewed About Divorce Case.

New York, July 24.—Ethel Barrymore, the actress, whose Pacific coast tour was suddenly ended last week, just after the announcement that she was seeking a divorce from Russell Coit, arrived in New York yesterday on the Twentieth Century Limited, and escaped an army of newspaper men and friends by the unusual feat of making that last train stop at 125th street. The stop made the train several minutes late, but it enabled Miss Barrymore to evade questioners and to take a later train for Toronto, where her baby boy has been in the care of a nurse ever since the first rumors of marital trouble. Representatives of Charles Frohman, under whose management Miss Barrymore is starring, planned the escape from interviewers with such cleverness that the actress was on her way to Canada while her husband was still making a tour of the big New York hotels in the hope that he might, by a personal appeal, effect a reconciliation.

Western Miners Reject Proposal For General McNamara Strike.

Butte, Mont., July 24.—The proposal to declare a general strike in Canada and the United States on the day the trial of the McNamara brothers opens in Los Angeles was voted down by 172 to 124, after heated discussion, at last night's session of the convention of the Western Federation of Miners. It was finally voted to levy a monthly assessment of 25 cents on each member, the assessments to continue as long as the Executive Board deemed necessary, for the purpose of a defense fund.

ADAMS' BIRTHDAY RECORD.

Braintree, Mass., July 24.—The birth records of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, both of whom served as Presidents of the United States, and of John Hancock, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, narrowly escaped destruction in a fire which practically destroyed the Braintree Town Hall last night. The loss is estimated at $200,000.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Springfield, Ill., July 24.—The big turbine engine in the Illinois Traction system power house at Riverton exploded last night, wrecking the plant, killing two men, and injuring two others. Both the injured men were employed in the engine room. The cause of the explosion has not been learned.

TWO STORMS.

Lightning Storms Strike New York and Scare a Lot of People.

New York, July 24.—Two electric storms burst over New York City to-day. Some buildings were struck by lightning, and there were calls for the fire department, but several slight blazes were extinguished without serious damage.

When lightning ran through a big apartment house in Brooklyn, it wrecked the telephone switch board and stunned the operator and drove nearly a hundred occupants out into the rain, many in their night clothes. Physicians were called to attend several hysterical women.

GRAND LODGE OVER

Toronto Gets Next Meeting by a Very Large Majority.

W. D. McPherson, M. P. P., is New Deputy Grand Master.

St. Catharines despatch: The fifty-sixth annual convention of the Grand Lodge of Canada, for Ontario, A. F. and A. M., was brought to a close last night.

Hamilton and Port Arthur made a strong bid for next year's meeting, but the insufficient hotel accommodation they had to contend with here led them to follow the advice of retiring Grand Master MacWatt and select Toronto. The vote was: Toronto, 629; Hamilton, 275; and Port Arthur, 154.

There was a keen contest for the office of Deputy Grand Master. Most Worshipful Brothers McPherson, Toronto; Shaw, Kingston; Luke and May, Ottawa, contending.

May went down in the first ballot, Shaw having 328, and McPherson and Luke 375 each. An adjournment was then made for dinner, after which the balloting was resumed, McPherson winning on the third ballot by a small majority.

The formal installation of Grand Master White took place immediately after the election.

Messrs. George S. May, Ottawa; J. A. McFadden, Toronto; R. H. Revell, Walkerville; C. W. Haentschell, Haliburton; and George Naylor, Ingersoll, were appointed to the Board of General Purposes.
