Ultima Veritas.

In the bitter waves of woe,
Reason and tossed about
By the sullen winds that blow
From the desolate shores of doubt:

When the anchors that faith had cast
Are dragging in the gale,
I am quietly holding fast
To things that cannot fail.

I know that right is right,
That it is not good to lie,
That love is better than spite,
And a neighbor than a spy:

I know that passion needs
The leech of a sober mind:
I know that generous deeds
Some sure reward will find:

That the rulers must obey,
That the givers shall increase,
That Duty lights the way
For the beautiful feet of Peace.

In the darkest night of the year,
When the stars have all gone out:
That courage is better than fear,
That faith is truer than doubt:

And fierce though the winds may fight,
And long though the angels hide,
I know that Truth and Right
Have the universe on their side:

And that somewhere, beyond the stars,
Is a love that is better than fate—
When the night unlocks her bars
I shall see Him, and I will wait.

Interesting Story.

Jeanie's Success.

Amid the buzzing and humming of a hundred looms in a large cotton mill on the banks of the Clyde stood Jeanie Anderson, on a summer afternoon. A bonny, blithe, blue-eyed lassie, with bare feet and sleeves rolled above her elbows, she sang cheerily over her work as her watchful eyes followed the flying shuttle, and an unflinching web of cloth was slowly rolled away.

The long day's work was nearly done; the heat was oppressive and the smell of machinery stifling, and few of the weavers were as absorbed as Jeanie. Chattering with one another, or taking a furtive breath of air at the window, they thought of the breezes among the hills and longed for the wearisome toil to be ended.

Suddenly a diversion was caused near the door by the entrance of a short, thick-set lad, his face and clothes smeared with oil and soot.

"Bonny Charlie's bow awa'," sang Jeanie's clear bird-like voice; and she did not look up to see the eager, listening faces, scarcely a dozen feet from her, as some news of evident importance was told by the lad, who held the swinging door in his hands while he spoke and then hastened away.

A moment after, the iron tongue of the great bell sounded the welcome notes of release; speed was slackened, and the noise of the hundred looms died away.

"Jeanie, whar's Robert McFarlane gaein'?"

The refrain, "Should he no come back again," was on Jeanie Anderson's lips as she looked up from adjusting her loom, surprised to find herself surrounded by a dozen questioning girls.

"Whar's he gaein'?" she repeated. "Aye," said Janet Ross. "He pit in his notice the night. Sandy Bayne tek us the noo."

A deep red flush burned on Jeanie's cheek as she turned quickly away from those curious looks.

"Ye can speer him yersels," she says, in a low, hurt tone, so full of dignity that her companions felt the barrier with which she strove to screen herself from their curiosity, and drew back to question and wonder among themselves, in their blithe Scotch fashion, before they were fairly out of her hearing.

Jeanie, knowing she was watched and discussed, quickly put on her shoes and stockings, pinned a tiny shawl about her shoulders, and, drawing her hat well over her face, slipped out, down the great thronged stairway,—relieved to feel the air on her flaming face,—and hastened on till she left the gate and the noisy crowd behind her, and turned into a street by the water's side which led toward her home.

"Jeanie, lassie, I can' nigh missin' ye," said a clear, manly voice behind her.

Jeanie did not look up, but quickened her steps still more. Robert McFarlane, walking by her side, his keen eyes blazing with excitement and his tall, athletic frame telling in each impetuous movement of some repressed emotion which touched his being to its depths, seemed scarcely conscious that the young girl turned her face from his.

"I hae news for ye, Jeanie," he said, eagerly.

She did not answer.

"I hae pit in my notice the night," he went on.

"That's na news to me, Mr McFarlane," she replied, now looking at him defiantly. "It's the crack o' the hail mull."

"Ah! dinna be offended, Jeanie," he said, pleadingly, recognizing at once her anger and the cause of it. "Jamie Dobson bruch me a letter frae Mr Carmichael tae come to Edinburgh, and I couldn' wait the man's man tae pit in my notice. Ika day is precious, lassie. Think o' the lang years to come and all I hae to crowd into them."

He clasped his hands tightly, as if he would clutch already at those coming years which were to bring so much to him; then bent down and poked into Jeanie's face. Tears were in the bonny blue eyes; the flush of resentment had already faded, and Robert was forgiven.

He had been her friend for seven years, since she, a tiny lass of ten, fatherless and motherless, had come trembling one winter's morning to the mill, to seek work to make her way alone in the world. Robert McFarlane, a strong, kindly lad of fifteen, had helped the little orphan over many of the rough spots in her hard life; and in those seven years of friendship had grown to a deeper feeling, till now they looked forward to sharing life together some time. It still seemed a long way off, for the young man had a purpose first to be fulfilled.

Years ago, a faithful godly minister had lived his simple, self-sacrificing life in a romantic parish in the Highlands, and, dying, had prayed his widowed daughter's only son, then an infant, might follow in his footsteps. This prayer had been a solemn consecration to Robert McFarlane. His mother died while he was yet a little lad, and he went into the mill with the determination to earn enough to educate himself for the ministry.

To the lowly, God-fearing Scotch the sacred profession of minister is invested with solemn awe and reverence, and young Robert kept his life stainless and true, feeding himself over shadowed by the sacredness of that to which his grandfather had dedicated him. He had taken a winter occasionally to attend school, and all his spare time was spent in study.

His little board of money grew year by year, till it was nearly enough for the cherished purpose: and then came a terrible trial. The bank in which it was deposited failed, and for a few days it seemed to Robert McFarlane as if the solid earth had failed from under him.

Then came sweet Jeanie Anderson, pleading to her friend to take her little more, saved also for years. She had meant it should help him some time, and she had no one to provide for but herself. Her grateful love would take no refusal; and after much importunity, the proud young man accepted it as a loan, feeling that it would be injustice to Jeanie to refuse, and so put of for many more years the time when he could provide for her altogether.

This was two years before the summer day when Robert McFarlane "pit in his notice." He had purposed to go to Edinburgh the coming autumn and pass his examinations for college; but Mr Carmichael—a wealthy gentleman who had become interested in him—now invited him to come at once and share three months' tutoring with his son before the college opened.

What a wonderful opening it seemed to the young man, so full of eager longing to set out upon his life's work! This was the news he had for Jeanie Anderson. All the rest—his hopes and purposes—she had known so many years that they were a part of her life as well as his.

So they walked along together and talked cheerily, though the shadow of the coming separation was over both, until they parted at Mrs McPhee's cottage, where Jeanie had her humble lodging and shared a little attic-room with Mrs McPhee's lame daughter, "limpin' Kirsty," as she was called.

Six weeks later, early one damp, drizzling morning, Jeanie Anderson, wrapped in her plaid, was hastening to the post to mail a letter before mill hours. Kirsty McPhee had written it for her the evening before; and her fair flowing hand was considered quite marvellous among her companions, to many of whom the art of penmanship was far more difficult than weaving.

Though Jeanie could read fairly well, she had little practice in writing in her busy mill-life, and Kirsty could do in an hour what would cost her many evenings of labor. There was nothing to write except that she was well and glad Robert was getting on so finely, and a few bits of Rutherglen gossip.

She never thought of putting in her letters anything Kirsty or anyone else might not know; so she had no feeling but that of pride that Robert should get such a finely-written letter, as she took a last look at it before dropping it into the post.

"Jeanie Anderson," said a voice at her elbow, "that's limpin' Kirsty's writin'." A gran' minister's leddy ye'll be when ye canna even write yer ain letters. Robert McFarlane'll no want ye when he gets his head fa' o' learnin' and fine ways in Edinburgh."

Jeanie dropped her letter. The bell was ringing, and without answering the unkindly words, she walked quickly away and was soon at her looms.

"Why are ye no singin' the day?" asked her neighbor; but Jeanie only shook her head. A heavy load rested upon her heart; her brain was whirling between the glancing shuttles; bitter, despairing thoughts were woven into the fair fabric beneath her fingers.

In one moment a revelation had come to her, as such things often do; every hour it became clearer; the clanking machinery sounded it, the bells rang it, and the busy looms hummed it to her. She had been quite content to live and work for Robert, thinking only of his advancement and rejoicing in his opportunities. Thoughts of herself as his wife had been so vague and far away that her simple mind had really never grasped the fact in all its bearings.

He, too, had seemed content with her; but now, with clear vision, she saw the years bringing to him more knowledge, culture, and contact with refined people, while she went on just being an ignorant mill-girl, with stained fingers and untutored mind.

She could not have put these thoughts into words. She only said over and over to herself, "I'm no fit for him," and in her brave heart grew the thought of noble renunciation. She knew it would come to that when she could gather strength and courage for it. She would not hinder Robert in his grand career, as such a life of hers must hinder him.

So the weary day closed in and night came. Kirsty McPhee slept soundly on her hard bed, while Jeanie Anderson knelt by the little window and looked out into the night. It seemed very strange now that she should have been so blind all these years. Perhaps in a few days she would be able to spill out her own little private letter to Robert McFarlane, which would give him the freedom that would be best for him.

Sleep came at last as she rested her head on the window-sill, and her last conscious thought was of Miss Agnes Carmichael, who had been so kind to Robert.

In the cold, gray twilight, between the waking and sleeping, an angel came and whispered to Jeanie Anderson; so she said herself in after years.

How much of this was due to her own great longing, Jeanie never knew. She took it as coming from above, as all good gifts do. At night, when she and Kirsty were all alone, she put the great throbbing pulse of her heart into these simple words:

"Kirsty, I'm no' quite satisfied wi' myself; I want to learn some things. Ithera has done it, and my writin's vera bad."

"I'll learn ye," said Kirsty, condescendingly.

"Ye'll no' learn me," replied Jeanie, bluntly, but not ungraciously; and she said no more then of her plans to Kirsty, though they had already taken definite shape in her mind.

In one of the finest houses in Rutherglen Mrs Philagry kept a fashionable school for young ladies. At the door of this august and aristocratic personage beheld little Jeanie Anderson, in her best attire, on the half-holiday afternoon of the following Saturday. She had an instinctive sense that Kirsty, clever as she was, could not give her all she wanted; and she had planned everything very clearly in her own mind.

What her board and lodging cost, and what she meant to send monthly to Robert, taken from her good wages, would leave a fair sum for her purposes; and she could go without new clothes and ribbons.

So, when the grand Mrs Philagry, in her silks and laces, swept down upon her, she modestly asked if there was an evening class she could attend, as her days were spent at the mill, and she was "verra backward at the learnin'" and "couldna writ."

Mrs Philagry could not look down into Jeanie's honest heart and see that her simple desire was to get the best. If she had, she would not have believed it.

"We draw the line a long way above mill-girls," she said, coldly; and then, with cruel words about impudence and the folly of aspiring above one's station, she closed her stately door upon Jeanie, who, with her hopes crushed, her heart aching, and tears rolling down her cheeks, walked on, she scarcely knew whether, till she found herself in a quiet street where there were few houses, and those with gardens and hedges about them.

Suddenly a little "ame cadden canary" bird flew over the hedge at her side, and hopped at her feet. She stooped and took the tiny creature in her hand. Some one was robbing aloud in the garden; and, after listening for a moment, Jeanie turned and went in at the gate. She saw a little cottage covered with vines, a quaint, old-fashioned garden, and two ladies in a rustic arbor; one rather elderly, in an invalid's chair, and the other, somewhat younger, reading aloud.

The reader lifted her eyes with a gentle smile, conscious of a presence, though Jeanie's light footfall made no sound on the grassy walk.

"I hae found the bit heartie," said Jeanie. "He hopped over the hedge till me."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—We would suggest that the government establish a semaphore system at the Port Williams bridge with a despatcher in charge to give crossing orders to teams travelling over it. After night it is funny to see the teams trying to decide whether to back out or lay down to let each other pass on the bridge. Perhaps the bridge will expand enough when hot weather comes to allow ordinary light carriages to pass.

—As a correspondent in another column says we have frequently called attention to the state of that bridge. That street is one much travelled and the nights lately have been very dark. Fortunately only temperate men live on that street else long ere this an accident must have occurred. It certainly does look as if some action should be taken in the matter to make the Commissioners do their duty.

—We sometimes wonder after anniversary is over and we read the ravings of the city reporters over our pretty girls, if the city girls are really such unattractive beings. To read their reports we would think they never saw a pretty girl except when they come here. But perhaps beauty is so plentiful in this county that it becomes common with us and ceases to attract attention.

—The New Star came out last week much enlarged and improved in appearance. It now has 32 columns and is without doubt the best paper published in Kentville. The ACADIAN congratulates the Star and wishes it continued prosperity.

—Speaking of the New Star we noticed also last week an item copied verbatim from the ACADIAN without being credited. This is very wicked and the New Star man must not do it any more. The New Star or any other paper is welcome to our Wolfville items but it must give us credit for them. Probably in the present instance it was an oversight of the editor.

OBSTRUCTION IN THE GASPEREAU RIVER.—We learn on good authority that in plain violation of the law the GasperEAU River is completely closed to fish at what is known as Dodge's Mill, a little below the Lake. There is here no fish-way nor any pretence of one and it is difficult to understand why expensive fish-ladders are required at other mills and not here. We respectfully ask the attention of our Inspectors of Fisheries to this obstruction. With all the mill-dams and saw-dust now tolerated in this river it will not be long before the valuable fisheries of the GasperEAU river will be completely ruined.

—When the Americans allow women to vote how are they going to find out who of them are old enough to vote?

MOUNT ALLISON.

The Anniversary Exercises of the Mount Allison Methodist Educational Institutions were held last week. The weather was beautiful. All the institutions have done good work during the past year. The following graduated: A. P. Barnhill, St. John; Arthur C. Borden, Wolfville; Harrison Cross, Hillsboro; Hedy Hallet, Devonshire, Bermuda; J. Chipman Hartley, Woodstock; Charles H. Huestis, Halifax; Miss Bessie Narraway, St. John; Charles B. Nicholson, Wincetor; Arthur L. Robinson, Moncton; A. B. Tait, Dorchester; Walter A. Taylor, St. John.

The following honors have been awarded in the collegiate department: Mathematics—H. B. Tait, Dorchester; Classics—W. H. Taylor, St. John; English—C. H. Huestis, Halifax; R. J. Mosher, Newport, N. S.; H. Harrison, P. E. I.; Philosophy—H. Gross, Hillsboro; J. C. Hardy, Woodstock; A. P. Barnhill, St. John; Natural Science—H. C. Taylor, Florenceville, N. B.

Miss Hattie S. Stewart, B. A., of Sackville, takes the degree of M. A., and Rev. Frederick Wright, M. A., of Sydney, C. B., that of B. D.

Miss Stewart, who graduated in 1882, was the first lady graduate in Arts and also is the first lady to take the degree of M. A. in the Provinces.

A departure worthy of note is the framing of a new course of philosophy and history for the successful completion of which the degree of Ph. D. will be given to masters of arts of any recognized university.

Prof. Burwash is to take the chair of natural science next year, vice Prof. Laird, who has resigned in order to pursue a course of study in Germany.

Rev. Byron Borden, B. A., succeeds Rev. D. Kennedy as principal of the Ladies' Academy. The total number in attendance at this institution this year is 115, of whom 90 were boarders. The degree of mistress of liberal arts was conferred by Rev. Principal Kennedy on Miss Minnie Freeman, of Lunenburg; Miss Sarah Shenton, of St. John, and Miss Tweedle, of Wallace. The graduates in Music were Miss Minnie Coleman, of Albert, N. B.; Miss Ontario Elliot, of Moncton; Miss Ella M. S. Hawkins and Miss Annie Florence Huestis, of Halifax; Miss Alice William, of Yarmouth, and Miss Phiney, of York, P. E. I.

Misses O'Hara and Sharpe received testimonials for proficiency in art work.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A RATEPAYER SPEAKS.

To the Editors of the ACADIAN.

DEAR SIRS,—I have noted with interest your repeated calls to the Commissioners of Streets to repair that bridge in the side-walk near the Baptist Church. That place is getting more dangerous and disgraceful every day and some of these dark nights some one will fall in there and the county will have a nice bill of damages to pay. There seems some doubt as to whether it is private property or public but there is no doubt as to its being on the public highway and therefore under the direct care of the Commissioners. The bridge too across the street, has holes in it.

Wouldn't an action for criminal negligence against the board be in order?

RATE-PAYER.

INFORMATION WANTED.

To the Editor of the ACADIAN.

Before we were blessed with a Municipal Council, there were always displayed in certain public and conspicuous places lists of those persons who liable to pay taxes, with the amounts placed opposite the respective names. Under the new regime no such lists exist, or no one knows where they are to be found, if there are any. All the information that can be obtained upon the most diligent and persistent inquiries is, that possibly there is such a list at the house of the Collector—the very last place in the world where it should be. Give us back our taxes, whatever may become of the Council, or we will soon have nothing to pay either with; or rather let there be some change in the law to prevent public business from being done in secret—as is largely the case at present.

SHEEP FARMING IN NOVA SCOTIA.

There is not any doubt but Nova Scotia is a sheep farming country, and yet the majority of farmers do not seem to appreciate the value of such a benefit they derive over other provinces. Generally speaking there are few Nova Scotia agriculturists who seem to take any particular interest in improving the sheep flock of our country. It is not because they are ignorant of their mistake, but is only for the want of a little ambition on their part. The farmers must not be afraid to speculate the money they have made in good sheep when they will get larger interest in return than the banks are giving or can give them. What particular breed is most adapted for this Province under geographical and climatical influences? Some will patronize the Cotswold, Oxford or Leicester, while others will say we want a mountain sheep, like the Southdown or Cheviot. The argument can only be solved by analyzing the different breeds and their characteristics and find which would be the most beneficial to our Province. Comparing Nova Scotia with other sheep countries, we find the Southdown and Mountain and Cheviot hills, in England, are to be compared with our country; therefore there should not be the slightest doubt either the Southdown or Cheviot must be the most profitable sheep for Nova Scotia. The standard points of the Southdown and Cheviot sheep are not universally known in Nova Scotia. Below are the points which are recognized by the leading stock-raisers of Ontario:—

Standard Points	Maximum Value	Southdown	Cheviot
1. Early Maturity	200	180	100
2. Weight of Fleeces	150	80	60
3. Permanency of Character	80	75	70
4. Quality of Wool	70	65	28
5. Weight of Flesh	50	50	33
6. Constitution	40	38	30
7. Reliable Breeders	40	40	25
8. Impressive power	40	50	35
9. Freedom from Disease	40	40	38
10. Hardiness	40	30	25
11. Quality of Flesh	30	28	15
12. Prolificity	30	25	30
13. Forager	30	13	8
14. Disposition	20	20	10
15. Good Mother	20	10	8
16. Least Offal	20	18	10
17. Length of Wool	20	35	20
18. Uniform Fleeces	20	15	10
19. Cost of Production	20
	1,000	$37	$85

If the Standard points are to be relied upon, there is not the slightest doubt existing but the Southdown is the sheep to represent our Province.

Sheep farming cannot be profitable if management and feeding are forgotten. The yards should be comfortable and sheds accessible to them, where they can run in and out at their liberty; they keep better in that way than any other. So long as sheep are protected from winds and storms, they are better in the open air than shut up. There should not be more than fifty, or at most sixty, in one yard. There is not any class of stock that is more sensitive to foul air than sheep.

The care of ewes with young is a thing that is very often neglected—an important consideration, as the lambs are sometimes the only profit yielded by the flock. When fodder is high or wool low, the fleece will barely pay for food and attention. It must not be forgotten pregnant ewes require the same food as at all other times, but caution is necessary to prevent injury or abortion, which is often the result of excessive fat, feebleness or disease. The first may be remedied by spare diet, and both the last by restored health and generous food.

Dogs are the greatest nuisance a farmer has to contend with who keeps sheep. Sudden frights, as from dogs and strange objects; unwholesome food, great exertions and blows in the regions of the foetus produce abortion. There is not any better food for sheep than good upland hay composed of clovers and nearly all cultivated grasses. Bean and pea straw are very valuable, and especially the former, which if properly cured, they prefer it to the best hay. Roots should be given to them occasionally for a change, especially to the ewes after lambing, if this occur before putting them on pasture. It is a great mistake many are ignorant of, that is giving them too much grain; it is not at all suited for strong sheep. "It is too rich and should be given sparingly, except to the lambs, old ewes and feeble sheep." "SHEPHERD."

EUREKA!

Found! a Plum Tree that will not Black Knot!

The Masters Plum Tree has stood the test 40 years in Kentville, King's County, Nova Scotia. Chas. A. Masters, of Kentville, found this tree growing on lands now owned by Judge G. A. Blanchard forty years ago, and removed the tree to his garden in the village, where it now stands a healthy bearing tree, and is now owned by me. There are scores of trees throughout the village in bearing from 4 to 20 years old which bear every year, and not a vestige of black knot appears on one of them. The tree is an annual bearer of rapid growth, growing tall not spreading. The Plum is quite large, purple color, and of excellent quality. It is the best preserving plum grown, and sells higher than any plum brought into the market. Last year, while the crop was immense, this plum readily brought $4.00 per bushel, $2.00 more than any other variety offered for sale. We have several hundred first class trees to offer for the Fall planting. That this is the best and most profitable Plum Tree to plant that is grown in the Dominion of Canada, and that it will not black knot we refer the planters of this delicious fruit, to F. S. Masters, Barnster, of whom we purchased the original tree; also to Chas. A. Masters, G. A. Blanchard (Judge), J. R. Blanchard, H. B. Webster, M. D., J. E. Mullooney, M. D., Otho Eaton, John Byrne, T. E. Smith, J. A. Shaw.

Mr Baxter and Miss Dickie were unhurt but Miss Baxter falling under the carriage received severe injury. Dr Borden fortunately was just ahead and placing her in his carriage drove her home to Canning. We are pleased to learn that she is recovering.

W. M. Sandford, agent for S. L. Cannon of the New England Nurseries, Rochester, New York, is staying in Wolfville for a month taking orders for small fruits, shrubbery and ornamental trees. Patrons can rely upon getting good reliable stock, as the firm is well known in King's Co. and throughout Nova Scotia.

We are sorry to learn that Dr. F. W. Borden, of Canning met with a serious accident last Sunday. We are unable to get the full particulars but as near as we can learn he had been visiting a patient and was coming down the North Mountain when part of his harness broke. His horse took fright and ran away throwing the Dr out and injuring him severely. We wish him a speedy recovery.

MARKET REPORT.—Some time ago we promised our readers a report of the Halifax markets, but until now have not been able to give it. We have now made arrangements with Messrs Bently & Layton, a thoroughly reliable firm, and will be able to give a corrected report every week. The senior member of the firm is Mr John H. Bently, who formerly lived in Wolfville, and is well and favorably known in this County.

Great age carries with it a certain respectability whether it attaches to a person or thing. This is seen particularly in the case of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, which is the most marvelous internal and external remedy ever discovered. It ought to be kept in every house.

If farmers and others continue to buy dust and ashes put up in big packs and sold for condition powders it won't be our fault. We have exposed the swindle time and again. Sheridan's Powders are the only kind we know of worth carrying home.

BERWICK ITEMS.—The Surveyors of Highways are tearing things to pieces about our streets this week in order to have the streets and side-walks looking as nice as possible for Camp-meeting.

Thomas Dykins, one of the employees in the steam saw-mill of F. A. Clark & Sons, had the index finger of his left hand so badly jamed that Dr. Middleton had to amputate it close up to the third joint.

The fruit trees of this place show splendid indications of a large crop, and, although the weather has been very cold, the crops are in a very forward condition for the time of year.

Business is very good considering the dull times, and everything is moving along splendidly.

Thirty years study and experiment have been given to perfecting the formula for Parsons' Pills, and the universal judgment of the highest medical authorities, scientists, and men of learning, is that our formula is the best yet devised by the brain of man, and should rank with the wonderful discoveries of the world. No family should be without them, for there is no other remedy in the world capable of conferring so much benefit, excepting, possibly, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. The information contained in the wrapper around each box is worth ten times the cost of a box of pills; it shows how to avoid and how to cure all manner of diseases, and how to correctly interpret the symptoms thereof. WHO BIDES HIS TIME.
 Who bides his time, and day and day
 Faces defeat full patiently,
 And lifts a mournful roundelay,
 However poor his fortunes be—
 He will not fail in any realm
 Of Poverty—the paltry dime
 It will grow golden in his palm,
 Who bides his time.

Who bides his time—he tastes the sweet
 Of honey in the saltiest tear;
 And though he fares with lowest feet
 Joy runs to meet him drawing near.
 The birds are heralds of his cause,
 And, like a never-ending rhyme,
 The road-side bloom in his applause,
 Who bides his time.

Who bides his time and fears not
 In the hot race that none achieves,
 Shall wear cool wreaths of laurel, wrought
 With crimson berries in the leaves.
 And he shall reign a goodly king,
 And sway his hand o'er every clime
 With peace writ on his signet ring,
 Who bides his time.

VICTOR HUGO'S DEATH-BED.
 "Hush," said they, "make no noise—the poet is dying." And they stood reverently and watched the coming of the death angel. Even the winds were hushed; they had stolen in softly, and asked the morning sunbeams what it all meant, and the sunbeams had told the winds that the death angel was coming to take the poet away, and so the winds stood still in great wonderment and sadness.

But the death angel did not come.
 His grim shadow did not steal athwart
 the morning sunbeams nor chill the gentle winds that hovered round the poet's couch. Withal the poet was dying and there was sadness everywhere. Suddenly a thousand voices filled the chamber with sweetest music.

"How strange and yet how beautiful," thought the people. And the dying poet thought so too, for a smile came and rested on his venerable face, and his lips moved as if they would echo that sweet music. They were the songs the poet had sung; all over the world had they been and every human heart had they touched, and now they had come back to bear the poet's soul away. What could be more beautiful than that?

And the poet went with his songs, the hoary father with his children, and entered into his rest. From that still chamber was the weary soul borne away upon the thousand singing voices, and the clouds stopped in the sky to hear the wondrous music.

So shall they come to thee—thy songs,
 O Master Poet—and, lulling thy wearied soul to sleep, shall bear thee with sweet music to eternity.

ROWING.
 It is said that the muscular strain endured by competitors in an ordinary boat-race is twenty-four times as great as that endured by a good mower working in a heavy field of grass. But in the case of the rower, the strain is so divided among different sets of muscles that it is felt scarcely more than the mowing.

Again, it is said, that if of two men of equal strength, one works as hard as he can at pumping, and the other at an oar, the latter produces force in a ratio of five to two compared with the former.

It is because rowing brings so many muscles into play that it is so fine an exercise, and in it a man can exert all his strength without feeling more fatigue than an ordinary amount of labor would entail.

Bell-ringing stands next to rowing as an exercise in bringing a large number of muscles into action, but it is not so feasible nor so pleasant as that sport which invites those who practise it to the cool waters of rivers and lakes in the summer weather, "when the woods are green."

1885-CALDWELL & MURRAY.-1885

To our Customers in Wolfville and elsewhere.
 We have not had time to paint our Store, whitewash the hitching post, or straighten up our wood pile this spring, but we have cleaned up the old paint, washed the windows, and are selling that unsightly pile of wood as quickly as we possibly can.

What has kept us so busy? Why we have been selecting, receiving and putting in shape one of the finest stocks of Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, an Furniture, etc. that we have ever had the pleasure of showing in this place before.

We are a good deal like the proverbial singed cat, better than we look,
 and don't try to look better than we are.
 We now ask you to come in and see for yourselves that we can back up what we advertise.

Seasonable Dry Goods,

In Dress Goods we have a splendid variety of shades in the following fabrics:—Ottomans, Nun's Cloths (plain and fancy), Serges, Sateens (plain and

 WOLFVILLE, APRIL 16.

THE BOOKSTORE!

Eagle Building, Wolfville, MAY 19th, 1885.

Riel has been captured and the papers announce that the Rebellion in the North West is practically at an end. This is encouraging news and makes all loyal people feel good, but it is only a cipher in comparison to the joy we have felt during the last few months as we have supplied our customers with Room Paper at less than cost and seen them depart full of that joy and happiness which can only come to those who feel that they have done a good deed.

True it does not pay in dollars and cents to sell at cost but it does pay in the satisfaction we have of making families happy and homes clean, and pleasant.

And still the great work goes on. People are coming daily and hourly to buy. They do so and go away happy. Probably never in the history of Wolfville has Room Paper been sold so cheaply as now. We have been (and will continue till our present stock is exhausted) selling our papers at the same prices as we paid for it at the factory in England.
 You cannot afford to lose the opportunity.

Just think of it, Room Paper at one-third the price you have been paying all your lives. Oh verily, in the words of Burdette, what is home without its wall paper.

We have no second price and ours is a "bona fide" cash sale. Come early! come 3 or 8 times a day, but come! and we will make you smile.

Ever keeping in mind the fact that we must work for the welfare of our customers we have after two years of patient waiting been enabled to secure the services of Mr. John F. Herbin to carry on a Watch Making and Jewellery business here. We can assert confidently that although he has spent two years and a half in the west he is perfectly harmless and that he can clean and repair your watch and repair your Jewellery with that neatness and thoroughness which can only be attained from a life-long study and practice of the trade. Give us a call and see for yourself.

All his work is guaranteed and must give satisfaction.

When you come for your room paper at one-third the usual price bring that watch that wont go and that clock that points to half past six and strikes 25 when it is only 3:15 and you will be able to get to Church in time to make a full inventor of Deacon Smith's wife's spring bonnet and silk dress and Squire Jones' whole outfit before your beloved pastor has thought of commencing on sixtieth. Oh yes time is a great herb but must be correct in its habits to be properly appreciated.

By the way, if John wants a new School Book you might also bring some change with you for we can fit him all out for the next term in about two minutes; and who knows but that he may some day be some kind of a governor if he lives and uses our books to advantage.

Ours is a work of love and we are bound to do it so long as people have homes to beautify, children to educate, and watches, clocks and Jewellery that wont keep time.

Don't forget, we live in the Eagle Building and it is next door to the Oni in H. use.
 Beware of cheap imitations. Ask for the Western Book & News Co.'s and see that our name is on the sign over the door. None other is genuine.
 Yours, muchly,
