Palpitation OF THE Heart, Nervous Exhaustion AND Stomach Trouble.

Richard, Mass. My daughter, Mrs. Mars, has been suffering from the above diseases for several years and employed all the leading Physicians in the United States and specialists in Boston, but got no relief. They said it was caused by a bad state of the blood. She could not sleep nights; bowels constipated, and palpitation of the heart so bad she could hardly walk. She has taken 4 bottles of Skoda's Discovery, and Skoda's Little Tablets. Now she can work every day, eat well and sleep soundly. I can never express my gratitude. MRS. S. E. CROWELL, Rockland, Me.

POETRY.

The Reign of Autumn.

The rust is over the head of the clover,
The green is under the gray,
And down the hollow the fleet-winged swallow
Is flying away and away.
Faded are the roses, dead are the roses,
The glow and the glory gone,
And down the hollow the fleet-winged swallow
Is flying the way of the sun.
In place of summer a dread new-come
His solemn state renews;
A crimson splendor instead of the tender
Verdure and morning dew.
But oh, the sweetness, the full completeness,
That under the reign are born!
Russet and yellow in apples mellow,
And wheat and millet and corn.
His frosts so hoary touch with glory
Maple and oak and thorn;
And rising and falling his winds are calling
Like a hunter through his horn.
No thrifty sower, but just a mower,
That comes when the day is done,
With warm a-beaming and gold a-gleaming,
Like sunset after the sun.
And while fair weather and frost together
Color the woods so gay,
We must remember that chill December
Has turned his steps this way.
And say, as we gather in the house together,
And pile the logs on the hearth,
Help us to follow the light little swallow
Even to the ends of the earth.

SELECT STORY.

HIS OPPORTUNITY.

BY HENRY OLEMENS PEARSON.

Advancing with dignity and care, he knelt on the plank flooring, oblivious of the water that was wetting his knees. Getting in the proper position, he attempted to force one of the plugs into the open mouth of the pipe. For an instant it stopped the stream, and he removed his hand and raised the hammer to strike a heavy blow, when the gathered force blew the plug high in the air, and the fountain played on as before. The hammer fell on the top of the pipe, splashing the water full in the face of the vengeful rumseller. Still on his knees, he hunted for the other plug, and after a long search discovered it. With extra care, he placed it as before, and again raised the hammer, and the plug leaped into the air as before.

Pfaff was provoked. His plan for bursting the pipe had failed. He grew angry and threw the hammer away. A man of his inexorable pertinacity, even though drunk, would not give up a scheme unless forced to. So he looked around for something else with which to wreak his spite upon the spouting well. Far and near he hunted, picking up stones, and rejecting them, as unfit for his purpose, and growing drunker every minute.

At last he found a short piece of board, and, clasping it firmly, tottered back to the point of attack. Just how to use the board puzzled him. At first he placed it against the pipe, and strove to bend it, and perhaps break it off. Then he carefully put it down upon the top of the pipe, deftly eking the stream from its perpendicular, and causing it to spout out from under the board at an angle. As the covering was so slanted that the stream was turned away from him, he imagined that he had succeeded in stopping it, and, in the excess of his zeal and joy, vowed to stay there all night and tire the thing out. For several minutes he held the board in that position, then he began to grow weary. The night breeze made him shiver. In his wet clothes, unused, as he was, to any sort of exposure, there was danger that he would catch cold. His arms ached, and from the effort required to hold the board.

His fertile brain finally hit upon an expedient by which the subjugation of his enemy could be accomplished, and, at the same time, his own comfort be secured. He would sit on the board. Carefully turning round, at the same time holding his improvised seat in its place, he gently lowered himself to it. The feat was almost accomplished when one of those unaccountable lurches, by which drunken men are apt to upset their best laid plans, overcame him. He lurched, the board slipped off on the further side of the pipe, and, losing his balance, he sat squarely down, with his back against the pipe, closer than was comfortable, for so near did he come to sitting on the pipe, that the round iron arm forced its cold eighteen inches of length inside of his short coat and vest, and now was playing away in the back of his neck, as untamed and free as ever.

With a gurgling cry, the water-logged rumseller attempted to break away, but the firm iron held him fast. His coat and vest most unfortunately for his comfort, were of first-class material. Both were buttoned and no matter how much he tugged and pulled, he was held tight. Although the water was rapidly soaking him it was also bringing on a terrible chill. With all his might he struggled, trying to tear himself away from the ceaseless shower, bath. At first he was either too proud or too much befogged to call for assistance, but as he began to realize his desperate condition he raised a husky, wavering cry.

"Boisterous Steep Street, accustomed to the most unearthly sounds from droves of brass, would never note that thick and choking wall. Perhaps the fact that he had caused so many helpless ones to cry for aid, and had shown no pity, would now, in some judicial way, hinder his own rescue. Not that Pfaff entertained any such thought, He was simply groveling in his fears, and lifting up his pitiful voice hoping some one would come to his relief.

As we have said, Chamberlain was a sound sleeper. The noise of the Street had not during the whole night disturbed him; but now as the morning was drawing near, he stirred and became wakeful. First he heard the shrill voice of the barnyard fowl, far down the hills, then a faint, quavering cry that sounded human. In his drowsy state, the two sounds were confusedly mingled. That they might actually mean anything, he did not realize.

One was to him as meaningless as the other, both came to him from the misty land of dreams where the strangest occurrences awaken only calm surmise in the mind of the dreamer.

"Help! help!" came the faint voice. With the most dispassionate interest, Chamberlain wove this cry into his morning dreams, growing a little more conscious, till at length he began to think that something was the matter. Suddenly rousing himself, he sat up and listened. The quavering wail that he now heard made him leap to the floor and throw up the window. He naturally looked toward the fountain, and in the moonlight saw a figure bound to the planks, with writhing and calling piteously.

Hastily donning his clothes, he ran downstairs and stood by the dripping man. He disengaged him from the pipe, and drew him from the steady flowing water. From head to foot the rumseller was soaking wet. As soon as fairly released, he rolled over in a faint, a chill, or something similar, straightening out as stiff as a board. Realizing the preciousness of time, if the man was to be brought out of it, Chamberlain put forth all his strength, and lifting him, bore him the short distance between the fountain and his boarding-place. The German was a heavy man, and the feat was no small one, but it was successfully accomplished, and it was success fully accomplished. Chamberlain, panting with the violence of his exertion, stood in the dimmutive entry, and, calling to his landlady, awakened the household.

"I can't have him here," said Mrs. Bowman, when she learned who it was. "He has done harm enough to me and mine, without my helping him."

"You have no objection to my putting him in my room till this faint is over?" asked Chamberlain.

"Yes, I have," said Chamberlain, sternly, "a few minutes' delay will cause the death of this man. Are you prepared to assume this responsibility?" The rigid form was laid upon the bed, the soaking clothes were removed, and warm blankets were wrapped around the cold figure. It seemed impossible for warmth ever to return to the chilled and livid body. A doctor had arrived and was active in his directions for his resuscitation. At length the brisk rubbings, the ceaseless efforts were rewarded. Pfaff opened his eyes and uttered a groan. Chamberlain's eyes, its mishapen shadows, had a weird air that greatly enhanced the romance of the scene. Now that he was

"Now I s'pose he can go?" said Mrs. Bowman.

The physician turned to her, a rebuke in his eyes. "Has the man no money?" he said. "Money I yes!" was the half-hysterical reply. "He's rich, but he couldn't stay here if he were a king. He is a murderer! He killed my husband by selling him rum. I begged him to stop, and he laughed at me. My nephew is in jail to day because he sold him liquor and got him crazy drunk, and he did what he never would have done in his sober senses. No! I say he shall never stay under this roof, no not if he were dying!"

Pfaff opened his eyes and looked at the frantic woman, then shivered and turned away.

"I don't blame her," said the doctor. Now that I recognize him, I see that it is the rumseller down below. I don't blame the woman for hating the sight of him."

"But can he be moved?" asked Chamberlain.

"Certainly not. Her hysterics will wear themselves out in a few minutes, and then she will have to listen to reason. But, if I am any judge, this man will be in a high fever before the day ends."

CHAPTER XIX.

Chamberlain's love of adventure would not long permit him to leave unexplored a place so interesting as the rear yard of the file-works. Often since he had "shadowed" Tam as far as the hidden gate, had he planned to visit the enclosure some night and find out for himself all it contained. He determined, also, to learn for what purpose some of the buildings in that section of the works were used. The workmen did not seem to know, for he questioned them. That there was something secret going on in them he was sure; but in what line, he could not decide; nor could he formulate the vague suspicions that the words of the little Scotchman had sown in his mind. To tell the truth, he was sorely puzzled by the conduct of the agent, who appeared so courteous and kindly. Of late he had sought Chamberlain when it would not be noticed by the workmen, and had impressed him with his desire to see the mill folk raised to a higher level. So earnest did he seem, that when with him, Chamberlain believed him to be sincere; but when alone, he found the old doubts asserting themselves, and the fragmentary sentences of Tam with the plainly uttered opinions of the laborers, came back in full force and shook his confidence.

After the store had been gutted, he had gone to Lamson and had received his sympathy. Indeed, the agent expressed strong indignation; and yet appeared so hopeless of finding out who did it, that Chamberlain even in his presence began to doubt his honesty. Lamson declared that Pfaff was at the bottom of the outrage; but in the same breath said that the rascal was so wily that a skilled detective would be baffled by his way of working. Chamberlain made little or no reply to the queries of the agent, as to what he intended to do with the store, and refused to accept the kind offer to relieve him of the lease.

The care of Pfaff, who was in a high fever at Chamberlain's lodging, made it impossible for him to visit the mill yard as soon as he had planned. For fear of occupying a lounge, on the lower floor of the lodging-house, while the delirious rum-seller occupied his bed, he, however, took the first opportunity to steal away to reconnoiter. On this occasion he started at nine in the evening and made his way boldly through the mill village, answering the halls of fellow-workmen, but refusing to stop for friendly converse. Passing through the ample yard that enclosed the front buildings, he soon came to the foot path where first he had become acquainted with Tam. Having carefully taken bearings on his last visit, he was able to go straight to the small gate, and raising it, to enter the forbidden enclosure. Once within, he carefully laid the board down into its place and stood looking about him. The yard, with its heaps of debris, its huge boilers, its mishapen shadows, had a weird air that greatly enhanced the romance of the scene. Now that he was fairly within it, Chamberlain somehow lost his imaginative expectations, and felt that he might after all spend his time in a fruitless quest. He argued to himself that things nowadays happen as they should, running in the everyday, practical rut, and never turning aside for the delicious adventures of which one reads. Even as he entertained these thoughts, so discouraging to the adventurer's cause, he heard a quick step on the footpath, and then someone fumbled for the gate-board.

Noted by Chamberlain moved aside, and concealing himself behind a hogshead, awaited the new comer. A moment later a figure passed through the narrow gateway and strode across the yard. Even in the dim light he recognized Sam Patman. In great surprise, Chamberlain followed at a distance, feeling that he was on the verge of a discovery. Sam skirted one of the buildings, crossed the yard, and stopped in front of a shed, upon the door of which he knocked.

"Enter," said a voice that was easily recognized as Tam's.

"Well, old man, how goes it?" asked Sam, opening the door and disappearing.

"All right. So you haven't forgotten Tam? Well you are a guide lad, Sam, and the Lord will one day bless you for your kindness to a poor, daft body like myself."

I should be a pretty mean chap if I didn't stick to an old chum," answered Sam heartily. "I don't forget the good turns you did me years ago, Tam; they are all down in my memory."

"Does Lamson never wish to have me removed now?" was the anxious query.

"He hasn't said a word about it for months," replied Sam. "I told him that when you went, I went."

"Ye were aye generous. A man with so gude a heart as you, Sam Patman, should not rest till he had given it to the Lord."

Chamberlain expected some jeering reply, for he knew of Sam as one who made fun of religion unsparingly, and whose jokes were repeated from one end of the works to the other. He was therefore astounded to hear him say—

"I would if I could, Tam; but I am too deeply involved in certain affairs to make it possible. No man can serve the Lord and the devil at the same time,—that is, no man but Lamson."

"He will reap his reward; let us not trouble about him. The question concerns you now. Do you believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?"

necessary for the work, and were supposed to be store houses. A peculiar double rap, accompanied by a low whistle, caused the door to be opened, and the giant passed from view. At the opening of the door, Chamberlain caught a glimpse of a well-lighted room, in which about a dozen men were working. Just what they were doing, he was unable to discover in the brief interval between the opening and closing of the door.

For some minutes he stood in contemplation, waiting for the return of the door, but in this was disappointed. Advancing very cautiously he tried the door through which he had disappeared, but it was firmly fastened. Up and down the length of the building he passed, looking for windows that should enable him to catch a glimpse of the life within, but in vain. Baffled and puzzled, it seemed almost a freak of the imagination, for he could not hear any noise of tools, nor the least conversation. By placing his ear close to the wall of the building, however, he could detect a faint throbb, like the beating of his own heart. This, he decided, must come from a small engine; yet no sign of escape-pipe or exhaust was to be seen.

At last, grown bold by his freedom from danger, he decided to make use of the double rap and whistle that Sam gave, and take the risk. It was a fool-hardy thing to do, but a knowledge of Sam's true character kept him from fear of bodily harm. Stepping up to the door, he raised his hand to give the pass rap, when it was caught away, and a voice whispered—

"George Chamberlain, are you daft?" Turning with a start, he stood face to face with Tam.

"Come awa', man, till I talk with you," said the little Scotchman.

Astonished by the sudden appearance of the little Scotchman, Chamberlain followed him in silence. No word did either speak till they were safe in the tiny shed. Then Tam said—

"Master George, what in the world were you about? Would you put yourself in peril?"

"Why do you call me 'Master George'?" asked Chamberlain.

"Are you not George Chamberlain?" "I am his son."

With a sudden, frightened shyness, Tam arose from his seat as if to flee.

"I thought you were Master George," he said, hoarsely.

"Do not go, Tam. You were my father's friend, can you not be mine? My father, George Chamberlain, is dead."

"Poor lad," said Tam, forgetting his fear; "I remember, now, to have heard of the death of your father; but I'm no' quite right in my mind, and I forget much that passes. When I saw you, I thought that you were he. You favor him greatly."

Tam sat fingering the lapel of his coat, manifestly uneasy. Chamberlain watched him, wondering how he could gain his confidence, and learn something of the clandestine work of the night gang that were in the stone building. He saw that the little Scotchman distrusted him, and had half a mind to escape.

"Tam, things are going wrong here in the works. Lamson is playing a shrewd game, by which he makes money which should be turned into the hands of the company. Now what is it?" he said suddenly.

The little Scotchman hesitated, and looked longingly at the door.

"I daur not tell," was the muttered reply.

"But isn't it right that I should know? Am I not wronged by your silence? I am in the mill, daily, I know that something is brewing. You were my father's friend; can you not be mine?"

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 6, 1893.

A Policeman Wanted.

We have heard the opinion expressed quite often of late that the time has come when our town needs the services of a policeman. Wolfville is probably no worse than other towns of similar size in the province, but that a large amount of unnecessary noise and rowdiness prevails on our streets during the evenings cannot be questioned. Any person who has consented to be out after night-fall can substantiate this. In consequence the reputation of our town suffers. Strangers notice it and are not slow to talk it into our people awake to the necessity of reform. They have too long shut their eyes to the existence of the evil, and deluded themselves with the idea that there was no need of a police service. We are not in a position to give an estimate of the probable expense of supplying such a service, but believe the town can afford the necessary expenditure. The Acadian freely offers its columns for the discussion of the subject as well as any other that may affect the public weal. We trust one-time will give the matter the attention it merits, and that something may be done to bring about a more satisfactory state of affairs in this regard.

The fall and winter time-table of the W. & A. Railway took effect on Monday last. The Flying Bluebonnet, one of the finest trains to be found on the continent, and which has been well patronized and greatly appreciated by the travelling public, made the last trip for the season on Saturday last. The morning train from Kentville leaves that place at 7 o'clock, and Wolfville at 7.20, arriving at Halifax at 10.40. Returning, leaves Halifax at 4 p. m., arriving at Kentville at 7.40. The express from Halifax leaves that city at 7.45 a. m., Wolfville at 9.35, arriving at Annapolis at 1.35 p. m. The express coming east leaves Annapolis at 12.45 p. m., Wolfville at 3.44, Halifax being reached at 7.30. These hours are all local time, one hour ahead of railway time.

Winnipeg is making rapid strides. During 1890, the new buildings erected numbered 400, and it is expected that this year's record of building will exceed that of 1890 fully 25 per cent. The value of the new buildings erected in 1890 was in round figures $400,000; in 1891, $600,000; in 1892, $900,000, and this year will reach close to $1,500,000. The new buildings this year include a court house, military barracks, a bank, two school houses, a church, a Jewish synagogue, etc., while the C. P. R. shops, a Baptist Church, the Hudson Bay building, two large flouring mills and several business blocks have had extensive and costly additions made upon them.

The Post Office department has issued a notice stating that the inclosing of a letter or any writing serving the purpose of a letter in a newspaper, or in any other article of mail matter passing at less than retail rate, is an offence at law punishable by a fine of not less than $10. Several convictions have lately been had under this section of the Post Office Act, and postmasters are requested to exercise the utmost vigilance to prevent frauds of this character. A question having been raised several times lately as to the postage rate on cut flowers, postmasters have been informed that cut flowers are classified as fifth class matter rate 1 cent per ounce.

The shipment of cattle from Montreal this season, up to the present time is 15,300 short of last year. Whilst last season to date there were 208 vessels sailed for the other side carrying cattle, compared with 183 vessels up to date of this year, being a decrease of 25 steam ships. Notwithstanding that the shipments of cattle to the old country have been rather stagnant for some weeks past, the shipments now seem a little more alive and hopeful, for during the present week eleven boats will leave the port for the other side with all the spaces taken up. There have been 1,228 horses shipped compared with 1298 last year.

The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen will meet at the World's Fair on October 13. An interesting occurrence will be the attendance of John Finlayson and J. S. Davidson, who are probably the oldest trainmen in the world. They both ran the train in Nova Scotia over half a century ago which was propelled by Semson, the locomotive now on exhibition at Chicago. It is intended to have the old engine steamed up, and let Mr. Finlayson and Mr. Davidson take one more ride on their old-time locomotive. Mr. Finlayson is now eighty-five years old, and Mr. Davidson is ninety-one.

Frank Leslie's Weekly, through its publisher, W. J. Arkell, has offered a $1000 prize to the winner of a trial of speed between the crack locomotives of England, France, Germany and America now on exhibition at the World's Fair. It is intended, if possible, to have the New York Central crack engine No. 999 represent the United States in the race, unless a faster engine can be produced by another railroad, which is doubtful. Mr. Daniels, of the New York Central, and Mr. Arkell have started for Chicago to confer with the representatives of the foreign roads there.

It is stated that the plant for the new Liberal paper at Canso has been ordered from the Dominion Type Foundry company, of Montreal, and the initial number of the new publication may be looked for at an early date.

Jottings from the Seminary.

After four weeks work in the Seminary, under conditions somewhat changed from the past, we are able to report that a spirit of industry and content prevailed at the school, and as a result good progress is being made in the various departments of study.

One of the aims of the school is to re-educate the students to the work of providing suitable entertainment for cultivated, intelligent people. To this end the Pierian Society has put forth efforts in the past, and judging from the program of its first meeting this year, we should say the school is in a position to maintain if not improve upon, its past record.

We have made the most of our rather scattered fine days for outdoor work and recreation. The Geology class made a trip to Horton Bluff not long since, where much was learned from that fine exposure and some good specimens were collected. Other excursions will be made from week to week, as long as the weather permits.

The students showed their appreciation of the variety of recreation afforded them in the gift of tennis equipments, by the promptness and enthusiasm with which they organized, and began the game. A match on Sept. 24, resulted in victory for Miss Anderson and Miss Shand, in one set, and Miss Miller and Miss Reynolds in the other. The players showed much spirit and skill during the game, and were heartily applauded by both teachers and fellow-students.

In addition to the resources we have among ourselves for enjoyment, our friends have contributed much to our pleasure. We are indebted to the members of the Baptist church for a very pleasant reception given to the school on Sept. 28. A more than usual degree of sociability characterized the gathering, and all spoke of having a good time. Very many of the pupils and teachers availed themselves of the opportunity for seeing some fine fruit, flowers, vegetables and birds at the Kentville Exhibition. Through the courtesy of Prof. Eaton, an attendant was provided for the different parties of students, so that accurate information in regard to the exhibits was easily gained and time was saved for seeing the town. Whatever comes at this time of the year to brighten school life helps materially to sustain interest in the school. Pupils who are away from home for the first time realize this.

A Hint to Manitoba.

The rapid development of Canada's dairy interests is a valuable standing object lesson. Within a few years one branch alone, that of cheese making, has grown from comparative insignificance until now it has reached an export trade of over $11,000,000 annually. This is a result which speaks volumes for the intelligence, industry and steady persistence of those engaged in the dairy interest. By close study of the requirements of the British trade, and the attention of an article suited to it, Canadian dairymen have succeeded in selling in British markets on an average 96,029,853 lbs. of cheese for the years 1889, 1890 and 1891, as compared with 75,094,648 lbs. sold by United States dairymen.

The cultivation of the British market is a very important matter to the farmer and also to the business community at large. The lesson to be learned from the successful development of cheese making is that a diversity of income is what the farmer should seek to effect. The day is gone by when wheat raising is to be relied on to provide the necessary annual revenue. Mixed farming is the successful farming of the future, both in the older and newer provinces. There are many outlets for the enterprising producer. For instance, why should not Manitoba be a great pork producing province, as well as a great wheat producing province? Usually there is a certain amount of frosted wheat harvested which Manitoba farmers have to sell at very low prices on account of the freight being the same on these low grades as on the choice hard grades. Happily the harvest there this year shows little or no frost of it. What the farmers there need is some means of compressing the bulk, and no better method could be adopted than of making bacon of it. Wheat, on account of the amount of starch, mixed with oats and peas, is regarded by pork packers as the food to make the very finest quality of pork. Manitoba can grow abundance of all kinds of coarse grains, which, mixed with the residue of frosted wheat, should fatten thousands of hogs and also the pocket books of the farmer who engages in the industry. Large packing houses should be established in Winnipeg, Brandon and other centres to put up prime bacon and pork.

The British market will take all choice products. The yearly imports of bacon, beans and pork into Great Britain are approximately 600,000,000 lbs. This market is open to producers of bacon and pork, as it is to producers of cheese, and if the former industry is taken up and pursued systematically, results as satisfactory as those already reached in the latter should be attained.—Empire.

An Electric light of 40,000,000 Candie power has recently been put on the tower of Penmarck Light house on the coast of Brittany; its rays can be seen sixty-five miles. It is the strongest light in the world. The largest light in the U. States can only be seen 28 miles.

Waterville.

The apple canning business has reopened here again, under the management of Mr. Roode, who conducted the business here last fall, with much success. He is a live man and attends to business sharply. Mr. Byron S. Johnston, of Maplewood, was here on a visit for a few days. While here he purchased a house and lot, which he intends to make his home as soon as he can arrange his affairs here he is so that he can leave. His brother, E. F. Johnston, a graduate of Ann Arbor University, intends practicing his profession of attorney at law, in Boston. Mr. H. Best has just returned from a visit to Boston and vicinity. Mr. Thomas Lawson is building a large store at Buckley's Corner, near Grafton. He is pushing the job right along, just like him.

Cambridge.

The ladies of the Baptist church held a pie sociable at the hall Saturday evening. The night was so stormy that it was repeated Monday evening. The weather again was very disagreeable, but a goodly sum was realized for the purpose of repairing the meeting house. F. R. Rochford will shortly erect his new dwelling house, near the station. O. B. Woodman is getting out the frame. Mrs. Jennie E. Cox now at the Windsor Collegiate school, made a flying visit home on the 28th ult. Mrs. Alice Gridley, of Yarmouth, is spending a few days with her cousin, Mrs. J. Howe Cox. A. S. Banks is loading a car potatoes for W. W. Pines, who is visiting the World's Fair. The forest fire we had last summer is causing some trouble legally. We are anxious to know how it will terminate. Miss Ethel L. Cox is teaching in Harbottle. Miss Jennie Webster teaches in Brooklyn St. Miss Jennie Craig has gone to Nictau to teach the school there. James Craig and Miss Eunie Caldwell have charge of the school in Hants Co. A. West is teaching in Hants Co. The late heavy rains have flooded the meadows, causing damage to the after feed. In one case a farmer had to take his cattle off at midnight on account of the rapidly rising water. Craig Caldwell has been seriously ill with typhoid fever, but is now convalescent.

Rev. J. W. Manning preached on missions at the Baptist church last Sunday evening. Mrs. Houghton has moved into her new house on Oak Hill. Mrs. Offie Masters has returned home after a sojourn. The St. Andrew's church closed $200 at their meeting held in Parker's rink Sept. 21st. The rink was tastefully decorated with spruce and autumn leaves, which they have kindly lent for their Methodist sisters who intend holding a tea meeting there next Thursday, Oct. 5th. Rainy weather seems to make the fish bite, from the number of men and boys who are daily angling for the smelt and tommy-cod. Miss Lily Shaw has returned home from a pleasant trip to St. John, and Portland, Me. The Kay St. Methodist church intends meeting on Thursday next. Mrs. Will Balcom has returned home from a visit down the line. Mr. Edward Sweet is building a new house on Water St. Mrs. Gordon Davison left for Australia via England Sept. 24th. Mr. Davison is detained in Hantsport until next spring by the building of his new store on William St. Mrs. John Andrews intends leaving for a visit to her daughter, Mrs. E. Shaw, in Walton. Mrs. Charles Cochran and Mrs. Margaret Cochran are visiting friends in the village. Miss Cowen of Toronto has returned home, after a pleasant visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Churchill's. We are glad to know that Mr. W. Whitman is recovering after a severe illness. Owing to cold weather and the absence of the furnace, school is usually closed at recess.

Magazine Review. The Delinquent for November is the first of the three Great Winter Numbers, and is a splendid specimen of this popular magazine. All the needs of ladies, misses, and children are fully considered in the first for the coming season, which are sensible and beautiful in themselves, and are most attractively displayed. A special article on Dinner and Evening Gowns will be appreciated, at this time, as well as the original Fancy-Dress and Dinner. The Tennis article treats of Mixed Doubles and Tournaments. There is a well-written paper on Children's Associates, and an original Fancy-Dress Drill for an equal number of boys and girls. An article valuable to the housewife is her suggestions is called A Winter Comes On, for the American reader of Household Renovation deals with walls and floors. Around the Tea Table treats of current fancies, the Floral article for the month is on the culture of Lilies, and entertainment for Autumn days and relaxation for the longer evenings is provided in A Harvest Home and A Geography Party. In addition there is continued instruction in Netting, Knitting, Crocheting, Lace-making, etc., etc. This magazine should be in the hands of every housekeeper. One year's subscription, One Dollar; Six Copies, 15 cents. Address orders to The Delinquent Publishing Co. (Ltd.), 33 Richmond St. West, Toronto.

Catholic Americans have in Donahoe's Magazine a publication that they show to their Protestant friends with pride. No magazine is more American, more progressive, or broader than Donahoe's, and its spirit does its supporters credit. Its work of interpreting Catholics thought, work and method, for the American reading public is of incalculable value to its people. The October number is probably the finest for there are no dull or senseless pages. No man, whatever his race or belief, can look it through without finding something of interest to him. Artistically it is inspiring.

We regret to notice that the aged statesman, Sir Oliver Mowat, premier of Ontario, is in very poor health and has been advised by his physicians to take a complete rest at a sanitarium, which he has decided to do. Sir Oliver is one of the few remaining fathers of the confederation and is without doubt the ablest man in the liberal party in Canada today. His continued ill-health or removal by death would be a severe blow to the party in Ontario. Minard's Lotion is the Hair Restorer.

The Lunenburg Academy was destroyed by fire on Thursday of last week at 10.30 p. m. It is supposed that the fire originated from a defective flue or stove. Everything within the building including furniture, books and apparatus was burned. The loss will reach about $10,000, partially covered by $8000 insurance. The wet weather and the fire department saved the town from a general and terrible conflagration. The adjoining buildings including the Methodist church were saved by the indefatigable exertions of the firemen and citizens.

The new plate-glass windows in Mr. C. H. Borden's 'gent's' outfitting store present a very pretty appearance. New gilt signs have been placed in the windows this week in a very attractive manner. Mr. Borden is showing a very pretty assortment of goods, and his windows now present an artistic and attractive appearance.

Last Friday evening a sociable was held in the vestry of the Baptist church. It was quite largely attended by the members of the congregation and the students of the Academy and Seminary. During the evening refreshments, in the shape of fruit of various kinds, were partaken of and helped to make the gathering justify its name.

Overcoats for the Fall and Winter, just opened at Borden's.

Probably as fine a show of Ribstone Pippins as can be found are to be seen on a long row of these trees on the property recently purchased by Mr. Edgar Lewis, of Cumberland. They attract attention by being uniformly highly colored and even sized. The trees are heavily laden. We understand Mr. L. will erect a fine residence next spring. This orchard comprises the western half of the well known Fritz property.

If you want a Tweed Waterproof Coat in the latest style call at Borden's.

It is said that the widow of George Alexander, the colored man who was killed at the colored settlement a short time ago by a Windsor and Annapolis train, is taking out letters of administration preparatory, it is averred, to suing the railway for $10,000 damages. She is said to allege that the train's whistle was not blown, the brakes were not put on and the crossing where the man was killed was not provided with proper guards.

Men's Youths' and Boys' Suits, Overcoats and Reefers—A Complete Stock—at the Glasgow House.

After service in the Baptist church last Sunday evening, Mr. G. E. Bishop found that a mean and dangerous trick had been played upon his horse. The traces had been unfastened and the carriage had rolled back till the shafts slipped from the tops and fell beside the horses' hind legs. The carriage was attached to the horse only by the breeching straps, and the reins which were around the leader. The horse, a young and valuable creature, stood quiet; but it is surprising that he did not kick everything to pieces and injure himself. The result, fortunate as it was, makes the trick appear no less vicious.

Meeting of Town Council.

The regular monthly meeting of Council was held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 3d. Present, the Mayor, Councillors Thomson, Sawyer, Geo. W. Borden, C. H. Borden, and the Recorder. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Received verbal report of Coun. Borden re Maggie Droghan and Spencer family. Resolved that the Recorder be instructed to look into the wills of the late Dr. C. DeWolf and DeWight Dewolf in reference to bequests to Maggie Droghan, and obtain from the executors a statement in writing of their doings therein.

Read letter from agent People's Bank, Wolffville, re the taxation of the Bank; and referred to the Recorder.

Reports of Street Committee and Poor Committee read and adopted.

Communication from George Harvey and Harris & Harvey with reference to school tax read. Resolved that the Clerk be instructed to advise that while the Council regrets the apparent injustice done, in their opinion the only recourse of the complainants is against the former owners or occupants of the property.

Accounts of A. E. Murphy, J. E. Eagles, J. L. Murphy, Bowes & Son, T. McAvity & Sons, Aubrey Brown, Davison Bros., Wm. Stairs, Sons & Morrow read and referred to proper Committee.

Resolved that as Messrs. Duncanson Bros. have failed to obey resolution of the Council passed on Sept. 5th, with reference to the removal of the slaughterhouse, the Town Clerk is instructed to take the necessary steps to enforce the resolution.

Read petition of Methodist church regarding the nuisance of stable, etc., of L. E. Duncanson on Chapel street. Resolved that the Clerk be instructed to reply to the letter and state that the matter of the barn has been referred to the Health Inspector, but that he has not yet reported to the Council; and that as regards the other nuisance the Council has no power to deal with it.

Resolved that the Chairman of the Water-works Committee be instructed to enquire further about a siren whistle for fire alarm and report as soon as possible. Resolved that the Clerk be authorized to ask prices from N. S. Printing Co. Bowes & Sons, J. J. Anslow, Davison Bros. and others, for printing 200 copies of town bye-laws, and to get work done to the best advantage.

Resolved that the Town Clerk be instructed to notify the public of the necessary facts connected with the dog tax.

The Plum and Its Uses.

Our plum is the cultivated plum of the garden, whose parent is a native of Asia and southern Europe, but which has taken so kindly to the conditions of soil and climate in our newer world that many of the choicest varieties seem almost spontaneously produced here, varieties surpassing in beauty and flavor the most noted plums of France or England.

The most important form of the plum in commerce is that of prunes, as they are exported from France, Turkey, and our own California to every part of the world. The finer class of prunes passes through a very careful course of treatment before being put into the market. The plums are gathered when just ripe enough to fall from the tree on being slightly shaken. They are all picked by hand, care being taken not to gather them until the sun has entirely dried off the dew. They are then spread in shallow baskets, and kept in a cool place until they become very soft, when they are shut in a spent oven for 24 hours, then taken out, carefully turned and, the oven being reheated, slightly warmer than before, returned to it.

This operation is again repeated, when they are taken out and left to get quite cold. The next step in the process is "rounding," an operation consisting of turning the stone in the plum without breaking the skin and pressing the two ends together between the thumb and finger. Twice more they are then submitted to heat, after which they are packed in jars or boxes for sale.

In southern France a spirit is obtained, by fermenting the bruised pulp and kernels of the plum with honey and flour, and distilling the mass.

She Can Do Anything.

Women have met with success as representatives of the advertising department of papers and magazines, and as solicitors of advertising. I have in mind one paper whose business affairs, as far as advertising went, were entirely in a woman's hands, and she brought it by her unaided efforts to a paying basis. She was a thorough business woman, fully understanding what she was about, and she was also one of the cheeriest, sunniest, little bodies that ever lived. Everybody liked her, the austerest men would soften at her pleasant ways, and she was always a welcome visit wherever her business took her. She was essentially womanly and refined in dress and manner; and with all her cheerfulness and jollity she had a certain dignity which commanded instant respect. I knew a woman, a year or two since, who controlled all the advertising on the line of the New York and New England railroad. I do not know whether she still has the contract; but she was very successful, and very much liked. She had an office in Boston, and everyone who wished to do any railroad advertising on the line that she represented had to go to her. She had a large patronage, and it was at the head of Mrs. Sadie Joy White in the Golden Rule.

Decline of Profanity.

The habit of swearing is dying out. It was within the memory of those who do not think themselves old very common. I have heard on what I am sure is trustworthy authority, of a clergyman of late generation, who summoned to breakfast while at his morning devotions, turned upon the unfortunate messenger with the exclamation: "D—n you! How dare you interrupt my prayers!" Much less extreme cases are known to many of us which would now be simply impossible. Are we becoming more pious? That is not the general impression. It is the fibre of the race softening! That is often maintained, but I do not think successfully. The civil war is just over. Or are we, as the Frenchmen and women did long ago, learning more adequately to master the resources of our own tongue, and becoming independent of this crude and rather stupid—call it nothing worse—device?

A Newspaper Sensation.

COLLINGWOOD, Sept. 25. A big sensation was created in this vicinity a couple of weeks ago by the Collingwood Bulletin's account of the case of Mr. Valentine Fisher, who has been cured of ediacia of nearly thirteen years' standing, by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Everyone who talks with Mr. Fisher is speedily convinced that his was a marvellous cure. The general conclusion is, that there may be many more like him, who are using remedies for rheumatism, sciatica, dropsy or other diseases, but fail to obtain relief, because they do not attack the seat of the disease, which is in many of such cases, the kidneys. Anyone who doubts the efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills, may be convinced by writing to Mr. Fisher himself, or William Williams Esq., Principal of the Collingwood Collegiate Institute, Capt. F. A. Bennett, or A. H. Johnson, Esq., all of whom are well acquainted with Mr. Fisher, and know the history of his illness.

He Died Happy.

Human nature is a queer thing. A man died in New Jersey not far from here who was worth $100,000 and had no near relatives. About an hour before he died he asked for a workman who occupied a little room on the place. The physician and nurse assumed that he was dying. Dives was about to give that little room to the workman who had served him so faithfully for so many years. "Lasarus," said the dying (that was not the workman's name, however), "from only paid me $4 on the last rent, and in case I die I want to have things straight, you know, so I'd like you to pay the other $2. The money was paid, and a few minutes after clutching it Dives breathed his last apparently happy."

Tobacco Filth.

I never saw a clean person who used tobacco. Like drunkards, they advertise their sin in their person. They generally have three fashionable accomplishments: viz.: They look nasty, act nasty, and smell nasty. Some of these persons realize these facts, and attempt to disguise their habit, and especially its odor, by using various perfumes, but in vain: the "profane stench" will out. As many of these tobacco pickles seem to see themselves with difficulty, we annex an average picture for their contemplation.

The chewer looks old prematurely, has a sallow skin, lank, gloomy features; irritable temper, and unattractive smile; the whole countenance has a stupid, heathenish expression; the butternut-colored lips and mouth, its corners dripping down and staining the beard and beard the bristle teeth; the intermittent discharge of tobacco juices everywhere—public and private—in the kitchen, in the church, in and on the stove, on the floors, carpets, sidewalks; on himself and on other people; the taking in, twisting about, and unloading the quidly grit; the sickening hawking; the harsh, nasal voice; the whole body, breath, perspiration, clothes—saturated with the most abominable odour which impregnates the subject, and pollutes everything about him. These (together with that fashionable refinement which ornaments his apartments—even churches—the spittoon, with its pestilential mouth bejeweled with cigar stubs and tobacco quids, complete the picture.

The smoker and snuffer each present a little different picture, but both are about equally filthy and heathenish. The unseemly pipe, cigar, and cigarette; the sucking and puffing; the selfish insistence of the smoker, in forcing the poisonous smoke, after having been in his dirty mouth and diseased lungs, into the clothes, food and drink; into the apartments, face, mouth, and lungs of clean persons—ladies and children especially—may be more fashionable, but not more clean.

The snuffer changes the seat of war to the nose, which he makes a point of great interest; on which he bestows great pains, feeding it, snuffing it, staining it, blowing it, and wiping it almost constantly. What an undesirable qualification in a cook must the use of tobacco be in any form! I specially smoking, snuffing, and snuff-eating—everything must have a tobacco flavor!

Imagine a smoking and snuffing cook making bread or pastry, cooking meat, etc., her head bent over her work, mouth ornamented with an ancient pipe, which she fills betimes; and then to take a pinch, or wipe the opaque drop which collects on the point of her nose; or, yielding to the force of gravity, falls into—

What a prince of dirt follows, then, is he who uses tobacco in two or more ways! Reader! Do you use tobacco? We have given your picture as clean people see you. What does God think of your nasty idleness? Pure boys and girls, shun tobacco—those who use it, and the places where it is sold! It pollutes body, mind, and soul.

The Devil's Own Business.

There is no better kind of testimony than that of a person who is fully acquainted with all the facts. Here is a succinct statement from the lips of a liquor dealer. The Christian Advocate says: "The terrible evil of the saloon is illustrated in the statement of an owner of a costly and attractive building formerly used as a saloon in New York city, but who has gone out of the dreadful business. The statement comes to us with apparently accredited authority: "I have sold liquor," said Mr. —, "for eleven years—long enough for me to see the beginning and end of its effects. I have seen a man take his first glass of liquor in my place, and afterwards fall into the arms of a suicide. I have seen men after man, wealthy and educated, come into my saloon who cannot now buy his dinner. I can recall twenty customers worth from $100,000 to $500,000, who are now without money, place, or friends."

Phillips Brooks believed in "fanaticism" and "cranks" as these words of his testify: "If ever a cause justified fanaticism, the temperance cause does. To me there is nothing more disgusting or more dishonouring to the cause of humanity than the selfish, ease-loving, luxurious man, indulging in dissipation, and denouncing temperance fanaticism."

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Minard's Liniment is the best. Women spend money on some things as worthless as whisky.

Garfield Tea cures sick-headache. About all the buried treasures most people have are good resolutions they have put away.

Minard's Liniment cures La Grippe. "Well Anna have you found the roe for my hair yet?" "Yes, madam; but now I cannot find the hair."

Garfield Tea is sold by all druggists. A lawyer encountered a burglar in his house the other night, but the burglar was a active fellow and the lawyer didn't get a cent.

Minard's Liniment, for Rheumatism. "It's a funny thing that what is the sailor's joy is the actor's sorrow," mused Haverly. "What is that?" asked Austen. "A light house."

Minard's Liniment is the Hair Restorer. "Father: 'A hundred dollars for a suit of clothes I never paid that for a suit in my life.' Son: 'Well, you'll have to begin now, father: there is the bill.'"

Employer: "You put that note where it will be sure to attract Mr. Smith's attention when he comes in didn't you?" Office Boy: "Yes, sir, I stuck a pin up through it, and put it in his chair."

A Graduate of Toronto University says: "My children have been treated with Scott's Emulsion from their earliest years! Our physician first recommended it and now whenever a child takes cold my wife immediately resorts to this remedy, which always effects a cure."

Assuming the working age to be 20 to 30 years of age and counting only male workers, 440 persons live on the labor of every 100 workers.

"Do you call this a hand of picked musicians?" said the hotel manager to the leader of a summer band. "Ach, dot vos so; I bick 'em mine sellet," replied the bandmaster. "Well, then, you picked them before they were ripe."

Pale, drooping girls, worn weary with a burden of disease almost greater than they can bear, should take the most restorative and health giving medicine. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a certain cure for all those diseases peculiar to women. They restore the blood, build up the nerves, and leave happiness and health when used. Sold by dealers or sent on receipt of price ($0.50 a box or 6 boxes for $2.50) by addressing Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Brockville, Ont.

About 600,000 people are added to the population of London every year, while the outcome of those moving from the city is comparatively very small.

In many countries the rainbow is spoken of as a great bent pump or syphon tube, drawing water from the earth by mechanical means. In parts of Russia, in the Don country, and also in Moscow and vicinity it is known by a name which is equivalent to a "bent water pipe."

W. J. GARRETT, of Pembroke, Maine, U. S. A., writes to say that he suffered for years with Dyspepsia in its worst form, which finally developed into Jaundice. He was treated by the most skillful and nervous of the best of the best, but made him startle and tremble. He tried doctors and many remedies without receiving benefit. Three bottles of Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic and a box of Hawker's Liver Pills cured him and restored him to health. He says I continue to use the Liver Pills and find them a sure cure for sick headache, sour stomach and pains in the back and head.

"He says he owes you a liking, does he. Well, you'll never get it." "How do you know?" "I'm his tailor."

An organ being some time ago introduced into a parish church in the north of Scotland some of the members took offence and left. One of these soon after let her mother and inquired, "Het'te the organ gettin' on?" "Oh, fine," was the answer, "jest blawin' awa' the chaff and keepin' in the corn."

C. C. RICHARDS & Co. Gentl.—My daughter was suffering terribly with neuralgia. I purchased a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT and rubbed her face thoroughly. The pain left her and she slept well till morning. Next night another attack, another application resulted as previously, with no return since. Grateful feeling determined me to express myself publicly. I would not be without MINARD'S LINIMENT in the house at any cost.

A Christening Incident.

Sometimes in English country parishes, where the clergyman has been accustomed to have his own way, he protests rather vigorously if the name proposed does not suit him. Occasionally, however, he does so on false premises. The late Dean Burgon when curate in Berkshire, was requested by a village couple to christen their boy "Venus" or as they called it, "Ananus."

"Are you aware," he said, "that you are asking something ridiculous as well as extremely wicked? Do you suppose I am going to give a Christian child, a boy, the name of a woman in heathen mythology? How did such a monstrous notion get into your head?" "Please, sir," said the father, "we want him called after his grandfather."

"And do you mean to say that the grandfather was named Venus?" "Yes, sir; there he is, sir." A poor old man, looking very unlike Venus, hobbled out of the crowd. "Do you dare to say you were christened Venus?" asked the indignant clergyman.

"Well, no, sir," was the respectful answer, "I was christened Sylvanus, but they always call me Venus."

One Honest Man. To the Editor of THE ACADIAN: Please inform your readers that I will mail free to all sufferers the means by which I was restored to health and manly vigor after years of suffering from Nervous Weakness. I was robbed and swindled by the quacks until I nearly lost faith in mankind, but thanks to heaven, I am now well, vigorous and strong. I have nothing to sell and no scheme to extort money from anyone who however, but being desirous to make this certain sure known to all, I will send free and confidential to anyone full particulars of just how I was cured. Address with stamps: Mr EDWARD MARTIN, (Teacher), P. O. Box 143, Detroit, Mich.

"What a superb face," said one Boston girl to another as they stood before a marble head of Minerva. "Yes," said the other. "What a nose for spectacles."

MILK.

My delivery wagon calls twice daily, delivering milk to my patrons at 4 cents per imperial quart. I use a milk cooler or aerator which method keeps the milk pure and sweet from 24 to 36 hours longer than without its use. It also frees the milk from all animal heat, from the odors of the stable and from the taste of turnips, pasture or silo feed. I invite inspection of my stables and dairy.

During this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical practitioners, but without producing any improvement.

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it until now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is as sweet as a baby's. In short, your medicine has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspepsias can be cured by its use.

The Groder Dyspepsia Cure Co.

GENTLEMEN.—I am 71 years of age. Have been afflicted with sick headache most all my life, which developed into Dyspepsia of a mild type about twenty years ago, and has continued to grow worse until during the past seven or eight years I have not been able to take a drink of cold water or milk, as they would produce severe pains and sometimes vomiting. I have been subjected to severe pains in the chest, with dizziness, which have been more frequent during the past three or four years. My month was furred up in the mornings, accompanied with bad breath. My case was yearly growing worse.

During this long period I have tried many popular medicines, as well as prescriptions from the regular medical practitioners, but without producing any improvement.

In the fall of '92 I concluded to try a bottle or two of your medicine and such were its effects that I continued it until now I can drink cold water or milk without any inconvenience. Those dizzy pains are all gone and my mouth is as sweet as a baby's. In short, your medicine has cured me and I am sure that all Dyspepsias can be cured by its use.
