Remains of Pope Leo XIII. Immured in St. Peter's

(Catholic Standard & Time)

Promptly on the stroke of midday, Saturday, July 25, the body of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII. came to an end. It was estimated that at least 80,000 persons had passed the catafalque since the preceding Thursday morning. In handling this vast throng the Vatican officials were assisted by a large body of Italian troops, whose incursion of the Papal precincts constitutes one of the historic incidents of the occasion. Inside the basilica during the days of the exposition of the remains all was solemnity of the most earnest type. St. Peter's at all times is impressive, but during these it was touching. The Pope lay on a black draped bier behind the open-work iron gates, so his face could be plainly seen. It was sadly changed from the day when as Pontiff, he entered the church triumphantly. He was robed in white, with a red cape with white lace, a gold mitre and red gloves. In his clasped hands were a crucifix and a rosary. He was surrounded by twenty great candles, with three wicks each, symbolic of the Trinity. Four noble guards kept watch, as motionless as their dead master, seeming carved in wood. All was marked by the greatest simplicity and the absence of ostentation.

As the faithful filed past many whispered blessings and prayers were heard. Meanwhile through the distant vista kneeling and moving forms were seen at the various chapels, the sound of intoning coming as a fitting accompaniment to the solemn scene. The whole feeling was summed up in the words of an old peasant: "My son soon enter paradise." There was great disappointment among the devout Catholics because they were not allowed to kiss the slipper of the dead Pope. The custom hitherto has been to place the body so that the feet were close to the grating and the mourners could kiss the cross on the sole of the slipper. Pope Leo's body was a yard distant from the grating. Among the visitors on Friday the second day of the exposition, were Mgr. Kennedy and seventy students of the America College.

At noon on Saturday those who lingered at the gates of the chapel of Holy Sacrament were ordered to leave. Ten minutes later Italian infantry and gendarmes poured out of the basilica and lined up on the steps. As the last company came out the outer gates were closed and the body of the late Pope was left to those who had watched him in his lifetime. The preparations for the evening's immurement were then immediately begun.

Laid to Rest.
This closing scene at sundown was weird and profoundly impressive—worthy of the historic basilica and the noble life of the greatest of modern Popes.
The vast spaces of St. Peter's were dimly lighted when the diplomatic corps, the Papal court and seven hundred invited guests, representing chiefly the old nobility, were admitted. There were two thousand spectators, men in uniform or evening dress and women in black, but they were lost in the shadows of the Cathedral. Guards were still watching with halberds and drawn swords beside the dead Pope in the chapel of the Holy Sacrament, and around them was a radiance of yellow candle light. There was also a misty light in the chapel of the choir, and fifty-five gilded lamps were burning around the marble balustrade of the Confession of St. Peter. In solemn silence the approach of the long procession from the hall of consistency was awaited. It was a mournful file of ecclesiastics and soldiers, tramping slowly into the basilica, but more mournful than the sombre vestments was the sorrowful, sighing, like "Miserere," sobbing far and wide with unceasingly and weird pathos.

Cardinal Rampolla, as archbishop of the basilica, was waiting outside the chapel, in violet robes, surrounded by the chapter of the Cathedral. The work of the removal of the bier was executed by eight sodari, or Pope's carriers, attired in their brilliant red brocade costumes. Then to the strains of the "Miserere" which rang dolefully through the lofty edifice, and preceded by a glittering cross, the procession slowly left the chapel and went up the church. It was a meditative spectacle deeply impressive. Several hundred men and boys were seen by the light of the burning torches. Choirs sang, ecclesiastics, canon, and students were in violet and black, the Noble Guard in red, the gendarmes in green and the dignitaries of the court in mediæval costumes. The body was carried across the church to the Confession of St. Peter where the Pope had often prayed at midnight by the traditional tomb. Here the coffin was lowered to the ground for abolition, and then was carried back through the church to the chapel of the Choir, which from semi-obscure, flashing into the brilliancy of the suddenly turned on electric light. Here all those who had received invitations were stopped remaining in the main part of the building behind a double line of the Swiss Guards, in their peculiar yellow, red and black uniforms and armed with halberds and serpentine swords.

In the chapel the music changed to notes of joy and triumph, and "In Paradisum" rang out with telling effect. From the outside the fire bells of St. Peter's rang out their accustomed salute to the coming night mingling harmoniously with the music of the choir.
The scene in the chapel was most remarkably effective. The bier bearing the body was received by Cardinal Oregio. It was placed in the centre, backed by an altar with a beautiful image of the Madonna, before which were burning four immense candles in silver staffs. Around the two sides of the chapel, in the choir seats, were thirty-six Cardinals, all wearing violet robes except Cardinals Gotti and Parrotti, who wore the white manes of their order, Cardinal Martinelli in black, as an Augustinian, and Cardinal Vives Tuto in Franciscan brown.
The body was sprinkled with holy water, abolition was given and the foot of Leo XIII. was kissed for the last time by Mgr. Domenico Cagliano Master of the Chamber Bilelli and Count Camillo Picoi. The Major-domo then covered the venerable features and hands with a white silk veil, which covered the whole person.
Fire was lighted in a brazier and blown by a bellows, the sparks rising almost to the ceiling, while Mgr. Bartolini read for twenty minutes the Oratio Breviis eulogising the dead Pontiff, and Notary Popsoli, 84 years old, read out the burial record a service which he performed upon the occasion of the deaths of Pope Gregory XVI. and Pope Pius IX.
The Mgr. domo of the basilica, aided by the Noble Guard then laid all that was mortal of Leo XIII. in a egyptian coffin lined with red satin and bearing on the cover an inlaid cross, the entire Sacred College and Prince Colonna rising to their feet as a last tribute and sign of respect.
When the body had been carefully put in the coffin, it was entirely concealed with the rich velvet covering which before had been put on the bier. The major-domo put beside the body two silk purses containing coins of silver and medals struck during Leo's pontificate. A eulogy written in magnificent Latin and setting forth the great events of Pope Leo's life and reign, enclosed in a metal tube, was also interred with the body.
When all had been arranged the supreme prayer was said and the benediction given, all present joining. Half-expressed sobs were heard on all sides.
The second coffin was of lead and very heavy. On the cover at the head was a cross, just below which was a skull and crossed bones, while below these were the arms of the late Pope with the triple crown, but without the keys, as they signify infallibility.
On the second coffin was a plate bearing the following inscription: Corpus Leonis P. M. Vixit An. MCIII M IV E XVII Eodem Universi Prefati An. XXV Mense & Obiit Die XX Julii An. MCIII.
The Mgr. domo of the chapter of Basilica lighted a brazier which was used in covering the coffin, producing sounds and sights strange to hear and see in a church. The two coffins were inclosed in a third case of polished walnut without decorations.
The sad duties were softened and soothed by the sweetness of the singing and the prayers of the clergy.
When the last supreme moment came the heavy coffin, weighing in all 1,222 pounds, were rolled out of the chapel, preceded by the mace bearers, the choir singing as they went, followed by all the Cardinals. Pallies were attached to the coffin, and soon to the strains of the Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel, it was hoisted into the stone sarcophagus above the door, where it will remain until the erection of a tomb in the Basilica of St. John Lateran, which was chosen by the Pope himself as his final resting place.
The last function was performed by the mason, who bricked up the opening and set a marble plate with the inscription "Leo XIII. Pont. Maxima front of the sarcophagus."
Lax-Laxer Pills cures Bilelessness, Sick Headache, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Water Brash, Bowel complication, etc. They do not grip, or sicken. Small and easy to take. Price 25c.

The Conclave.

The general services having been concluded, and ten days including the day of the Pope's death having passed, on the morning of the eleventh day the cardinals gather in the basilica of St. Peter, and the cardinal dean there celebrates the Mass of the Holy Ghost. When this is ended, and while the hymn Veni Creator is being sung, they proceed to the Conclave in the Vatican palace. Here, when they reach the chapel of the Conclave, the dean of the Sacred College recites the prayer Deus qui corda. Then the pontifical constitutions concerning the election of the Sovereign Pontiff are read, and the cardinals promise under oath to obey them. Once having entered the Conclave, as seems to be agreed upon by nearly all who have written upon this subject, they may not leave till after the election of a new Pope.

The rules of the Conclave are many and rigorous. We have not the space at our disposal to enumerate or describe them all. Suffice it to say that they are admirably adapted to prevent the slightest fraud on the part of any one who for any reason should desire to act dishonestly or induce another to do so, during the deliberations of the Sacred College assembled to elect a Pope. The Australian system of voting as established and practiced in Massachusetts, well as it safeguards the purity of the ballot, is a loose and inadequate system indeed, compared with the system of elaborate devices, physical, moral and religious, which beget and protect from the least suspicion of unfairness or unwarranted interference the balloting of the Roman Conclave.

As an instance of the severity of the rules governing a Papal election it may be mentioned that the windows of that part of the Vatican palace which is set apart for the Conclave are wall-d up, and all doors leading to the Conclave are closed, except one which is doubly locked and only opened to permit a sick cardinal to leave or a late arriving one to enter. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that in case of sickness, when a cardinal is compelled to leave the Conclave, he is not allowed to return, though a cardinal just arriving may enter the Conclave up to the time of the election. The key of the inside lock on this door is kept by the cardinal-camerlengo; that of the outside lock by the Governor of the Conclave who is usually a prelate chosen for the position by the cardinals before they enter. Food with whatever else may be necessary, is introduced through a turning box which is also doubly locked, the key of the inside lock being kept by the master of ceremonies, and that of the outside by the prelate appointed for that purpose.

That a strict watch may be kept on the food, and that no letter or message of any kind may be transmitted to or from the cardinals or any of the Conclavists, guards are stationed on the outside are appointed to watch the entrance and the turning box, and to examine thoroughly everything that is sent to or from the Conclave. Under pain of perjury and suspension they are to use the greatest diligence in examining the food and other things as well as the persons who enter or leave the Conclave, that no letters or other signs may be transmitted either way. If any of the servants or other conclavists are found delinquent in this respect, they are subject to punishment, and no cardinal is allowed to intercede in their favor. Inside the Conclave each cardinal is allowed to bring two servants. If aged or infirm cardinals need a third servant the concession may be granted. Besides these personal servants there are several other officials and attendants who serve the cardinals in common. All are subject to the restrictions of the Conclave.

It will be seen from the foregoing rules, (and there are many besides), that almost everything that human foresight can accomplish is done to render fraud a physical impossibility. Still further to safeguard the ballot, every cardinal takes a solemn oath before voting, calling upon God to witness that he chooses the person whom before God he judges ought to be elected.
The immediate act of balloting is, as with everything else connected with the Conclave, governed by exact rules.
As soon as the tellers find that some candidate has received two-thirds of the votes, his name is declared. The junior cardinal-deacon then rings a bell and the master of ceremonies and the secretary of the Sacred College enter the Chapel. The cardinal-deacon with two others approaches the elected cardinal and asks him if he accepts the Papacy. If his answer is affirmative, the cardinal-deacon asks him what name he intends to take; and of his choice and of the other events the secretary makes proper record. Two cardinal-deacons then conduct the Pontiff behind the high altar, where he puts on the pontifical vestments. He is then seated before the high altar, and receives the homage of the cardinals, and "the ring of the fisherman" is placed on his finger. Then the first cardinal-deacon, preceded by the choir singing "Ego Sacrodes Magister," goes to the balcony over the entrance of the palace, and announces "a great joy" to the people—election of a new Pope.

All Stuffed Up
That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.
No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, poisons the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.
To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.
"I was ill for four months with catarrh in the head and throat. Had a bad cough and mixed blood. I had become discouraged when my husband bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and persuaded me to try it. I advise all to take it. It has cured and built me up." As he was riding, the Premier was unharmed, and one of those accompanying him was hurt. This attempt upon the life of the Prime Minister has caused great excitement in France.

A COLLISION occurred on the electric railway between Boston and Providence on Monday which resulted in several people being killed and seventy-five seriously injured. There were 160 persons in one car and 150 in the other. Both cars were badly smashed. Miss Ethel Foley, of Charlottetown, was a passenger in one car and completed a rear seat. She had the great fortune to escape without even a scratch.

The reported rich strike of gold on the Horse River, a tributary of the Pelly in Yukon, was made by Mr. Robert Henderson, a Fraser County man, who was the original discoverer of the Klondike. What the strike amounts to has not yet been determined, but Fred Heavilside, who is a partner of Henderson, says that in one day's shovelling he cleaned up seventeen dollars. Henderson and his associates are greatly excited over the new find, which had been expected for several years, as the late Dr. Dawson reported the country to be well mineralized. Hundreds of people are leaving Dawson as fast as steamboat facilities will permit.

A YOUNG man named Jack Fogg, blew his brains out in a B. N. E. R. boarding house early on Wednesday morning. The man was not noticed and the body not found till the room was being cleaned up after breakfast. He left two letters written in French in his room, one addressed to "Father and Mother," and the other to the "Public." The latter stated that he was tired of the world and had come to the conclusion that the world was against him. He also intimated that he had committed many sins. It is known of the unfortunate young man. His parents are believed to live in Algeria; and the man employed about the wharves said he had seen Fogg in the steved department of the ocean Halifax.

CONSERVATIVES ORGANIZE.

Everything now points to a general election in the near future. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has decided to appeal to the people, before they have time to fully realize the infamy of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme.

Canada is face to face with one of the gravest crises in her history. It is the duty of every voter to assist in defeating a government whose record abounds in broken pledges, and who seeks to impose on Canada a very heavy burden.

The Liberal machine, which will commit 'any crime to win power, must be beaten if the true welfare of Canada is to be safeguarded.

THE WEEK IN PARLIAMENT.

The week in Parliament was one of the most exciting in its history. The announcement of the government's policy in respect to the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme was promulgated many times before it was eventually made by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on Thursday. The day, however, was rendered necessary by the failure of the minister to agree as to the terms of the contract.

According to the Premier's statement little consideration has been given to the bill. He declared that it was a time for action and not consideration. That a measure involving the expenditure of from $75,000,000 to $80,000,000 is not worthy of deep and mature thought, will doubtless prove a remarkable proposition to the majority of Canadians.

Under the terms of the agreement the government will build a line from St. John's to Winnipeg, and from there to the Great Trunk Pacific. The wholehearted support of the government will also guarantee the bonds of the company for a line from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast, amounting to $10,000,000.

the opposition, pointed out the iniquitous character of the measure, which in addition to costing a vast sum, will destroy the Intercolonial Railway, in which $20,000,000 of Canadian money is invested.

It was established by official figures that out of 40,000,000 bushels of western grain, only six per cent. was forwarded to the Atlantic by all-rail, showing that the Grand Trunk Pacific cannot furnish relief to the west. It has only one object, the enriching of the fortunate promoter.

CAN THIS POLICY FIND SUPPORT.

It must have been humiliating to Sir Wilfrid Laurier after promising day after day to bring down the government's Grand Trunk Pacific policy, to find himself prevented from carrying out his pledges by daily fights in the cabinet over the terms to be extended to the railway company. The Prime Minister was never sure of his premises, and while he often came fresh from the council board convinced that the scheme had been healed after a fashion, he met his ministers twenty-four hours later, only to find that new complications had arisen and new troubles had to be disposed of.

RAILWAY POLICY WAS NOT CONSIDERED.

Speaking on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill, Sir Wilfrid Laurier calmly announced to the people of this country, that without giving the question a thought, he has decided to pledge the credit of Canada for a sum anywhere between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000. The exact figures cannot be fixed, as no member of the government is able to say within $10,000,000 what the road will cost.

Sir Wilfrid considers that it would be waste of time to hold surveys of the route over which the government proposes to lay its line from Moncton to Quebec. He noted the fact that some of the earliest settlers in Canada and many trappers and hunters have visited the wilds which are to be opened up. With the experience of such men, the Premier asks, what need is there for engineers? Ordinary railway companies would satisfy themselves as to the merits of a project they had undertaken, but what does Sir Wilfrid care with the millions of the Canadian people behind him? "We have money to burn" is the motto.

"It is a time for action, not deliberation." The sentiment explains Sir Wilfrid's reason for neglecting to furnish a single figure to prove the need of a Grand Trunk Pacific. He speaks of the Indian and the Eskimo, but he does not care for the adoption of his present policy. Mr. Blair put it in a way that the scheme was as unending and indefeasible.

PRACTICAL LESSON FOR FARMERS.

The Liberal party, while it maintains the duties imposed on farmers by the National Policy, contends that it is impossible to protect the agriculturist. It is only necessary to point to the great distresses that have occurred in the importations of farm produce since the duties were introduced, to show how utterly absurd are the claims of the government. In addition to the direct protection afforded the farmer, there is an indirect acknowledgment accorded him by the establishment of manufacturing centres. Every workman and those dependent on him is worth to the farmer as a customer on the average $50 per year. Taking the population of some of the principal cities of Canada and comparing their worth to the farmer on this basis, we find the following markets established:

Table with 2 columns: City, Value. Montreal 267,730 $21,418,600; Toronto 298,049 76,243,200; Quebec 68,540 5,507,300; Ottawa 59,928 4,794,240; Hamilton 55,624 4,440,520; Winnipeg 42,540 3,387,500; Halifax 40,822 3,260,560; St. John 40,711 3,256,880; London 37,981 3,033,480; Vancouver 36,133 2,900,640; Victoria, B. C. 29,816 1,865,280; Kingston 17,961 1,436,880; Charlottetown 12,080 966,400; Guelph 11,496 919,680; St. Thomas 11,485 918,800; Sydney 9,909 790,720.

The Liberal Conservative party, by a proper encouragement for manufacturers, desire to extend these markets, but the Laurier Government is opposed to the scheme. The policy of "adequate protection" also calls for direct safeguards of the markets for farmers. By reference to the above statistics, the desirability of factories will at once commend itself to the farmer.

AFRAID OF OPPOSITION CRITICISM.

Probably no leader of a Canadian opposition has ever been treated as unskilfully as Mr. R. L. Borden was in the matter of the government's announcement of the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme. Sir Wilfrid Laurier attempted to get his scheme before the country without comment, and to do this he denied Mr. Borden the ordinary courtesy of a copy of the bill and contract before the conclusion of his speech. The leader of the opposition, however, was equal to the occasion and in a speech lasting over an hour he drove a coach and four through the arguments of Sir Wilfrid. That was an easy matter considering that the oration had been written by Edward Farrer and E. W. Thompson, the former furnishing the political matter and the latter the fireworks.

THE TALENT OF SIFTONISM.

The correspondence covering the deal by which 250,000 acres of Dominion crown lands situate in the Northwest Territories were transferred to the Saskatchewan Valley Land Company for one dollar per acre, reveals one of the largest steals ever negotiated in Canada.

CURE FOR CONSTIPATION.

Sick Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Costed Tongue, Foul Breath, Heart Burn, Water Brash, or any Disease of the Stomach, Liver or Bowels.

Laxative Pills are purely vegetable; neither grip, weaken nor sicken, are easy to take and prompt to act.

So long as he is permitted to control the Interior Department, there will always be transactions which will not bear investigation. Mr. Sifton has himself amassed a princely fortune since he entered politics, and his friends are equally fortunate in getting rich quick.

French Fishermen in England.

A novel and edifying sight was seen in St. Mary's Church, Falmouth, England, one day last April. Falmouth is the rendezvous of the French fishing fleet which every year sails for Irish waters. At the invitation of the priest of Falmouth the crews of these vessels attended church in great numbers, arrangements being made for them to sing their hymns during Mass; and the Benediction was being sung by them throughout unaccompanied by the organ or any musical instrument. A body of over 160 were present at Mass on the eve of their departure. The devotion with which they sang and heard Mass was very edifying to the natives, both Catholics and Protestants, who were admitted to the church, while the echoing of 160 powerful voices was heard far beyond the church, and greatly impressed all.
