THE HEIR OF Lancewood

CHAPTER XXXIX.

"Man proposes, Heaven disposes." Never was truer proverb than this. Time passed, Lady St. Just's two boys grew in beauty and intelligence, the world went well with her. She was happy now that there were times when she even forgot the sin of her lifetime, when the shadow fell so completely from her that she no longer remembered that it existed, when she was so entirely, so completely happy that she forgot everything else but the sunny present.

She heard at rare intervals from Gerald, and his letters were so sad, that they made her unhappy for days after they came; they always ended in the same manner, by his telling her that before he died he hoped to see England again, and herself also.

She was not ungrateful to him, but those letters saddened her so greatly that she wished they would not come. Had her sin prospered? It seemed like it. At times she grew frightened at her own happiness. "Has Heaven pardoned me?" she asked herself when she looked round her. "Has Heaven forgiven me?" she asked herself, when she looked on the face of her best-loved child.

Lord St. Just had always made it a point of being in London for the season. He had a magnificent mansion there, Herton House, a fine large house near Hyde Park. There all the leading men of the day rallied round him. There, too, his beautiful, graceful wife held her court—the graceful dark-eyed woman whose bearing and manner were as those of a queen. To know Lady St. Just was to proclaim oneself known. Second-rate people did not frequent her house—it was not the resort of the light, the gay, or the frivolous; the talented, wise and noble met there, and she had some reason to be proud of the society she gathered around her.

Until the day of her death she remembered one May morning when the sun was shining brightly, and she was in the breakfast-room of Herton House waiting for Lord St. Just. The room was a beautiful one, gay with rose-hued chintz and white lace—gay with scented flowers and the small fire that burned in the grate. The open windows looked into a square, pretty garden all filled with roses and mignonette. Lady St. Just's favorite flowers. One dark and one gold-ore little head peeped in at the door, and Vivien, who was looking at the flowers from the window, did not see her sons.

She was looking more beautiful than ever on that fair May morning.

"Catarrhzone" Prevents Bad Colds Strengthens Weak Irritable Throats.

Employs Nature's own Methods and is Invariably Successful.

Few will escape a cold this winter, but almost many colds run into Catarrh.

Neglected Catarrh is the straight gateway to consumption.

Catarrhzone is a germ-killer—destroys microbes that cause Catarrh.

It heals and soothes, relieves the cough, gives throat and lungs a chance, cleanses the nostrils, clears out the phlegm.

You feel better in an hour.

In a day you're greatly relieved, and on goes the curing of Catarrhzone till you're well.

No treatment so direct. Catarrhzone goes right to the spot—acts

The fresh, perfumed air brought a color to her face, her dark eyes were filled with happy light, her mouth wore a grave, sweet smile, the wondrous wealth of dark hair was simply arranged—a rose with a deep glowing heart was its only ornament, and a rose nestled in the bodice of her white dress. Tall, graceful, the years seemed to have fallen from her as she stood there dreaming with a happy smile on her lips.

Presently she heard a noise, and, turning, saw the little ones behind her. They were handsome children. The eldest boy, Francis, was as fair as one of Guido's angels, with golden curls and a rosy face, the youngest had his mother's dark eyes and dark hair, a mouth like a cloven rose, a noble face like Vivien's, full of fire and intelligence—a child that one knew by instinct would grow into a noble man. The elder was five years old, the younger four, yet they were almost the same height.

"Mamma," cried the children, as Lady St. Just turned round, "we have run away from the nursery. Let us have breakfast here with you?" Then, because she knew she loved the younger one best, she kissed the elder one first. Taking them both by the hand, she led them to the window and showed them some of the pretty opening buds.

"You shall stay with me," she said. "Papa will be here soon; you shall take breakfast with us, because you are good."

She little dreamed as she spoke what would happen before that breakfast was over.

CHAPTER XL.

As he entered the room, Lord St. Just thought he had never seen so pretty a picture as the beautiful, dark-eyed mother and the lovely laughing children presented. He went up to them, and tried laughingly to clasp all three in his arms. He partially succeeded.

"Now," he said, "I hold in my arms all that is loveliest, most precious dearest in the wide world. But we must have some breakfast, children," he added, "these fresh May mornings make one hungry."

The breakfast-table was a pretty sight in itself, with its costly silver, delicate china, flowers, and richly cut glass. Lady St. Just took her place with a child on each side of her. They talked and prattled gayly. Lady St. Just smiled as she listened, when a footman entered with the letters.

"Place them here," said Lord St. Just; and then he turned laughingly to his wife. "I always think it a sad pity that letters should come at breakfast time," he said; "there is sure to be at least one unpleasant one amongst them, and that spoils the rest."

"I hope there is no unpleasant one there," replied Vivien.

Lord St. Just seemed in no great hurry to look at them; he enjoyed the prattle of his children.

"Give me the stamps, papa," cried little Francis, who had a fine collection in a private box.

"Let me read the letters first, Frank," he replied laughingly; "then you shall have them all."

He turned over the envelopes carelessly.

"Here is one from Ryan," he said. "He will be coming next week; one from your jewelers, Vivien; and one for you in a hand I do not recognize. What a clear, bold, legible hand!"

"The Lady St. Just, Herton House, Hyde Park."

He gave a large white envelope to little Arthur.

"Give that to mamma, Art," he

"Will you come to me at once, Lady St. Just? I am dying, and I cannot die until I have seen you. Come alone—I have something to say. Do not delay—come to-day."

"From your devoted

"GERALD DORMAN."

The address given was Victoria street, Regent's Park. The writing on the envelope was strange to her, that in the letter she recognized as Gerald's—faint, crooked, almost illegible, still she knew it was his.

Then he was in London—he had returned from America! How strange that Gerald should be dying, and she not know!

He had something to say to her. What was it? A deadly, horrible fear that she could not describe, and for which she had no name, came over her; a sudden subtle instinct told her that what he had to say was concerning her sin.

He could not die until he had seen her. Why? She did not hold the peace of his soul in her hands. Why should he say that? Then she reproached herself for having a foolish fear. He had loved her very dearly, this poor secretary; he had loved her with a mad, insane worship. He wanted only to look on her face again and bid her an everlasting adieu.

She said to herself, "Down with this foolish coward fear!" What could there be to say concerning her sin? It was repented of; the poor boy was dead—the whole matter buried long ago. What need for fear?

"I will go at once," she said.

She rose from her seat, but was compelled to wait some little time; she trembled like an aspen-leaf.

After a time she walked up to her room. She met Lord St. Just on the stairs, and turned away lest he should see the pallor of her face; then she looked after him.

"Adrian," she said, "I shall not go out riding with you this morning. I am going out about some business of my own."

"Very well, my darling," he replied, carelessly. "I cannot attend to my letter while the children are here—we must send them away."

"Never mind the letters, Vivien," returned Lord St. Just. "Nurse will be here soon—the letters can wait."

So she played on with the little ones, while the letters lay on the table, among the one with the large white envelope. She had given one careless glance at it, but the hand writing was quite unknown to her. It was so plain, bold, and legible, that in her own mind she decided that it was a begging letter—they were generally far better written than any others; and in her own mind she decided also that whoever wanted help, should have it.

"Then the game ended. Nurse came for the children, and they were dismissed with a hundred loving caresses.

"I am all in ruins," said Lady St. Just, with a smile—the rose-leaves were scattered all over her dress, the masses of dark hair were all unfashioned—"and I made such a careful toilet this morning," she added. "Those children grow so strong Adrian."

"They have nothing else to do but grow," said Lord St. Just, cheerfully. Then he bent over his wife. "You are always lovely, my queen," he said. "I like to see you with your hair loose. The children know what suits you."

"You are a flatterer, Adrian," she said, as Lord St. Just in his turn quitted the room.

She stood before the mirror, fastening the shining mass of hair—a sweet, noble woman; and she forgot all about the letter.

She saw it when the servant came in to clear the table.

"You have forgotten this, my lady," he said, handing it to her.

"My begging letter," she thought to herself. "Now let me see who is in trouble."

She stopped for half a moment, as her husband had done before her, to note the clear, bold handwriting, then she opened it—opened it with the May sun shining in and the rose-leaves lying around her—opened it with a smile on her lips which was never seen there again.

The room seemed to whirl round her, a red mist settled over the white pages, then died away, and the letters stood out in characters of fire.

said; but the child, having his own little notion of fun, said—

"Mamma, see if you can get this," and ran away, trying to hide himself behind a large chair.

It was but an invitation to romp, and Lady St. Just rightly judged it to be so. Mother and child played with the letter. It was terrible—although a child played with the gleaming handle of a sword that was about to slay him.

"Now Art, give it to me," said Lady St. Just; and the boy, knowing at once when she meant what she said gave it to her.

But he was not to be cheated out of his romp—he made a grasp at the rose in his mother's dress, and scattered the red leaves far and wide. Vivien ran after him, caught him in her arms, and kissed him.

"You little rogue!" she said. "Adrian, I cannot attend to my letter while the children are here—we must send them away."

"Never mind the letters, Vivien," returned Lord St. Just. "Nurse will be here soon—the letters can wait."

He could not die until he had seen her. Why? She did not hold the peace of his soul in her hands. Why should he say that? Then she reproached herself for having a foolish fear. He had loved her very dearly, this poor secretary; he had loved her with a mad, insane worship. He wanted only to look on her face again and bid her an everlasting adieu.

She said to herself, "Down with this foolish coward fear!" What could there be to say concerning her sin? It was repented of; the poor boy was dead—the whole matter buried long ago. What need for fear?

"I will go at once," she said.

She rose from her seat, but was compelled to wait some little time; she trembled like an aspen-leaf.

After a time she walked up to her room. She met Lord St. Just on the stairs, and turned away lest he should see the pallor of her face; then she looked after him.

"Adrian," she said, "I shall not go out riding with you this morning. I am going out about some business of my own."

"Very well, my darling," he replied, carelessly. "I cannot attend to my letter while the children are here—we must send them away."

"Never mind the letters, Vivien," returned Lord St. Just. "Nurse will be here soon—the letters can wait."

So she played on with the little ones, while the letters lay on the table, among the one with the large white envelope. She had given one careless glance at it, but the hand writing was quite unknown to her. It was so plain, bold, and legible, that in her own mind she decided that it was a begging letter—they were generally far better written than any others; and in her own mind she decided also that whoever wanted help, should have it.

"Then the game ended. Nurse came for the children, and they were dismissed with a hundred loving caresses.

"I am all in ruins," said Lady St. Just, with a smile—the rose-leaves were scattered all over her dress, the masses of dark hair were all unfashioned—"and I made such a careful toilet this morning," she added. "Those children grow so strong Adrian."

"They have nothing else to do but grow," said Lord St. Just, cheerfully. Then he bent over his wife. "You are always lovely, my queen," he said. "I like to see you with your hair loose. The children know what suits you."

"You are a flatterer, Adrian," she said, as Lord St. Just in his turn quitted the room.

She stood before the mirror, fastening the shining mass of hair—a sweet, noble woman; and she forgot all about the letter.

She saw it when the servant came in to clear the table.

"You have forgotten this, my lady," he said, handing it to her.

"My begging letter," she thought to herself. "Now let me see who is in trouble."

She stopped for half a moment, as her husband had done before her, to note the clear, bold handwriting, then she opened it—opened it with the May sun shining in and the rose-leaves lying around her—opened it with a smile on her lips which was never seen there again.

The room seemed to whirl round her, a red mist settled over the white pages, then died away, and the letters stood out in characters of fire.

"Will you come to me at once, Lady St. Just? I am dying, and I cannot die until I have seen you. Come alone—I have something to say. Do not delay—come to-day."

"GERALD DORMAN."

The address given was Victoria street, Regent's Park. The writing on the envelope was strange to her, that in the letter she recognized as Gerald's—faint, crooked, almost illegible, still she knew it was his.

Then he was in London—he had returned from America! How strange that Gerald should be dying, and she not know!

He had something to say to her. What was it? A deadly, horrible fear that she could not describe, and for which she had no name, came over her; a sudden subtle instinct told her that what he had to say was concerning her sin.

He could not die until he had seen her. Why? She did not hold the peace of his soul in her hands. Why should he say that? Then she reproached herself for having a foolish fear. LATEST From the Front.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

OFFICIAL.
LONDON, Aug. 30. The Governor, Newfoundland: The French Government report artillery duels at various points. There has been a successful bombardment of the enemy's lines in the north. The Russian Government report retirement of Russian forces in Galicia. The retreat in the Middle Niemen also continued. Fierce fighting is taking place between the Vlna River and the Niemen.

ADOPT CHANCELLOR'S VIEWS.

BERLIN, Aug. 30. It was understood to-day that Germany's course with regard to the Arabic case has been decided upon, and that it is in line with the recent conciliatory statement made by Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Chancellor. This development followed the return to Berlin of Chancellor Admiral Von Tirpitz and other participants on the eastern front. No official statement was made regarding the German decision, but there seems to be good ground for the belief that the Government have adopted the viewpoint set forth by the Chancellor.

BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE STATEMENT.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The British Foreign Office to-night issued the following statement: Judgments have recently been delivered by the German prize court at Hamburg in the cases of the steamships Maria and Batavier. The Maria was a Dutch vessel carrying a cargo of wheat shipped from Portland, Oregon, to Belfast and Dublin. She was captured by the German cruiser Karlsruhe, on the Atlantic, September 21st last and sunk. The Batavier was a Dutch vessel bound for London and was captured in the North Sea on March 11th, and taken to Zeebrugge on suspicion of carrying contraband. The sinking of the Maria is justified by the German prize court on the ground that having regard for the place of capture, the commander of the Karlsruhe was entitled to search the vessel into a German port or a port of the allied powers, and so acted in pursuance of article 11 of the German naval prize regulations. This was said not to require any further explanation, and payment of indemnity.

to the owner was refused. Judgment show that considering the question and destination of conditional contraband, the German prize court held that it is to be guided by a communication of the chief of the general staff of the navy, addressed to the Court on August 17th, 1914, concerning ports to be regarded as fortified places or as bases of operations or supply for British armed forces, issued by supreme command. As the court in other cases held that such places as Ipswich, Poole, Barrow-in-Furness and Grangemouth were bases or fortified places, it may be inferred that these were also included in the list referred to. In order to rebut the presumption set up, and that conditions contraband destined for such places is intended for military, not for civil use, the court held that counter proof must satisfy the most rigorous condition, and it would only be possible to furnish it in rare cases. With regard to the cargo of wheat aboard the Maria, they held there was no means of ascertaining—with the least certainty—what use the wheat would have been put to on arrival at the vessel at Belfast, or whether the British Government would not come upon the scene as purchaser. The effect of these decisions appear to be to abolish the practice of distinction between absolute and conditional contraband of war.

REFUSE TO MAINTAIN RELATIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The National Union of Paper Workers has taken the initiative among British Trade Unionists in refusing to maintain relations with the German and Austrian Labor Federations. The decision was taken in connection with an invitation to a conference at Switzerland with the object of reviving international Trades Union Executive of the Paper Workers' Union replying to the invitation, said the organization decided it would never again agree to sit in conference with representatives of a nation which applauded the wholesale murder of 1,400 unarmed women and children when the Lusitania was sunk without a moment's warning. The executive of the Union proposes calling a conference in London or Paris for the institution of a new international Secretariat from interest in which German and Austrian organizations shall be excluded.

DETAINED AT KIRKWALL.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The Norwegian steamer Selma from Olveston for Denmark, has been detained at Kirkwall by the British authorities.

ARTILLERY ACTIVITY.

PARIS, Aug. 30. Violent artillery fighting took place yesterday evening at many points in the Argonne district, as a result of which the trenches of the Germans were seriously damaged, according to the French official reports this afternoon.

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S REPORT.

LONDON, Aug. 30. A report from Field Marshal Sir John French was given out by the British War Office to-night as follows: Since my last communication of August 18th, there has been no fighting on our front to record. There has been a certain amount of mining activity, but conditions generally have been normal. Both on the 18th and 21st we succeeded in shooting down enemy aeroplanes. On the 25th our heavy artillery set fire to a railway train at Langemark Station (about five miles northeast of Ypres). The same evening our Royal Flying Corps co-operated with our allies in an aerial attack on Foust, south of Hurst, which was successfully carried out, without loss to any machines.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, Aug. 30. While reports from the eastern war theatre, embracing the region from Courland to southeastern Galicia, indicate that the Germans and Austrians are still pressing the Russians hard in combat, or tenaciously following them on their retreat, military observers here are hoping the approaching equinoctial season will limit any further forward movement of the Germans, and force them to be content with the fruits of their past successes when the winter season falls upon them. Both Berlin and Vienna lay emphasis on the statement that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's forces along the Dvina River and Courland, have renewed their activities, which were brought to a sudden halt recently with the success of the Russians holding Riga as a menace to Von Hindenburg's rear. In Southwestern Russia, Brest-Litovsk region, the Austrians and Germans are chiefly concerned in driving Grand Duke Nicholas's armies further into the Eripta marshes, evidently with the purpose of repeating the early success of the Germans in the Mazurian Lake in the region of East Prussia.

To the northwest, in the sector lying only a short distance east of the East Prussian frontier, Berlin reports the advance of the Russians and the capture of the town of Lipsk, lying just west of the fortress of Grodno, upon which the aims of the Germans now are evidently centred. With the opening of the autumn months military observers are directing attention to the fact that the Russian equinoctial storms are soon due to begin. They assert that they are in the danger limit of military operations in the eastern field. It is recalled by some of these observers that the autumnal equinox marked the turning point of the Napoleonic campaign. The first warning was the light snowfall, preceding the equinox, but soon afterwards heavy snows fell and with them came disaster to Napoleon. Desperate fighting continues in the Dardanelles, in the vicinity of the spot where the British recently made their landing. Turkish reports claim the recapture by Ottoman forces of allied trenches with heavy allied casualties. These claims, however, have not been conceded by Britain. Military operations in the western field have been confined to trench fighting.

Italians claim their forces are slowly advancing northward.

DOCTORING.

"Your stomach needs a long vacation," remarked the cultured Doctor Tubb; "it's had no rest or recreation since I first you learned to swallow grub. Day after day you devour a bag of bits, to cure me of my ills and woes, and let me have my pies and fritters and sirloin steaks and things like those?" But, with a sternness truly Roman, the doctor says, "That will not go; an outing for your tired abdomen—that is the only cure I know." "There is no comfort now in sickness, since doctors have so honest grown; they say, 'If you'd get well with quickness, you'll have to leave the pies alone; you'll have to diet like the chickens, each day ten miles you'll have to walk, and go to slumber with the chickens, and leave your couch at four o'clock.'" "I'm looking for a learned physician who'll drive my aches and ailments hence, who'll recognize my dire condition, and give me dope, not common sense."

COLLECTIONS SHORT—Owing to small amount of coal imported this year as compared with last year there is a general deficit in the coal duties collected by the Municipal Council to date. The importations last year were much above the average, and as the winter was comparatively mild there was a much greater supply in the city last spring than on previous years.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Miss Greta James was in town last week from Han's Harbour, on a visit to her uncle, Mr. John Brunlee, who was ill, but who is we are glad to say able to be about again.

A quantity of sheets, quilts, etc., belonging to a resident of Rocky Pond Road, and left out on the clothes line one night last week was stolen, and is a great loss to the owner. It is a pity light fingered gentry who do such acts, and those who steal and destroy turnips, etc., could not be detected and severely punished as a warning to themselves and others.

Miss Mollie Kent, daughter of Sergt. Kent, Placentia, arrived in town on Saturday evening, and left this morning for Bay Roberts to resume her work as teacher of the R. C. School there.

Misses Kathleen and Gerlie Casey left by this morning's train for Brigus to resume their work of teaching.

The C. of E. Sunday School Picnic will be held to-morrow if the weather is favourable, and if not it will be postponed until Wednesday.

Mr. A. Collis returned from a business trip to New Harbor and vicinity on Thursday. He left this morning for Carbonara where he has some work to do at piano tuning and repairing.

Mr. Alex Noel, of the Post Office Staff, returned to St. John's by the afternoon train, having spent a very pleasant time with relatives and friends on the South Shore.

STEPHANO'S REPAIRS Being Rushed.

The work of repairing the S. S. Stephano, which is now into dry dock at New York, is being carried on, we learn, with the utmost despatch in order that the ship may be able to resume the Red Cross route as early as possible. She is hoped to leave New York again for Halifax and this port on September 11th. It is expected that quite a lot of freight will accumulate at the American port while the Stephano is off the route, although she will not be missed very much in the emergency, as there is a tourist traffic for this season is practically over.

Drowning Tragedy.

From Mr. Joseph Jarvis we learn particulars of a drowning accident, which occurred recently at Lunenburg, Barque, near Lunenburg, on the S. W. Coast, and in which James Raoul, aged 20 years, lost his life. Deceased had left his home to visit his brother at Roundabout. He met another comrade with his brother and all three went to the strand nearby to have a bathe. He was unable to swim and accidentally went beyond his depth. An alarm was given to several others who were on the strand, but before assistance reached Raoul he had succumbed after struggling in the water for fully twenty minutes. His body was found floating on the surface, face upwards, by Robert Raoul, brother of the deceased and a young man named Pike. The sad event has cast a gloom over the settlement.

EDISON AND ORVILLE WRIGHT ON AN IDEAS BOARD.

"A Board for the development of inventions is being organized by the Navy Secretary, Mr. Daniels, in the hope of finding an effective defence against submarine attack and of solving other problems of naval warfare," says the Daily News. "Mr. Edison and Mr. Orville Wright (the famous aeroplane expert) have already consented to become members of the Board, whose functions will include the reception and testing of suggestions from private individuals as well as from officers and men of the Navy, the object being to mobilize in the interests of national defence the inventive genius of the entire nation. It is expected that the Board will also be joined by Mr. Henry Ford, the motor-car manufacturer, Mr. Cooper Hewitt, the electrician, Professor Lewis Johnson, and others."

Obituary.

MR. JOHN HENRY LOCKYER.

On Friday morning, the 13th inst., after a long and painful illness, caused by cancer of the stomach and paralysis of the right side, there passed away to the Great Unknown the person of Mr. Jno. Henry Lockyer. He is hoped to leave New York again for Halifax and this port on September 11th. It is expected that quite a lot of freight will accumulate at the American port while the Stephano is off the route, although she will not be missed very much in the emergency, as there is a tourist traffic for this season is practically over.

MR. PATRICK J. DAVIS.

At Fox Harbor, Placentia Bay, on the 20th inst., the grim messenger—Death—summoned to his eternal home one of our most highly esteemed and successful planters in the person of Mr. Patrick J. Davis. For the past two years, that death-dealing machine, consumption, has been making an inroad into Mr. Davis's health, and although all hope of recovery has long since been given up, it was with highly commendable fortitude and patience he bore his sufferings to the end. Deceased was only in the prime of life, the thirties, and leaves a widow and three children to mourn. The writer joins with the many friends who are extending sincere sympathy. —COR.

Conscription.

A great agitation is being carried on in England in favor of conscription. The most prominent of the newspapers favoring its adoption are the Times and the Daily Mail, while the radical press the Daily News in London and the Manchester Guardian in the provinces are opposed to it. According to the London Globe, a majority of the Coalition Cabinet favor it, and that majority includes the Unionist Lord Curzon, the Liberal Winston Churchill, and the Radical Lloyd George. The most prominent of the anti-conscription Liberals are Asquith, Grey, Harcourt, and the Unionist, Balfour. The most significant statement of all is that Lord Kitchener is undecided, and that his pronouncement, either one way or the other, will have a deciding effect on Cabinet, Parliament and people. The significance of the statement lies not in the accuracy of the declaration that the Secretary of War is undecided, for we do not credit that avowal, but in the light it throws on his attitude. It shows that he has kept silent while the controversy has been raging, and that the judgment of the man who has a genius for making armies has not yet been given. He has taken no part in the agitation for or against conscription, and has been giving the voluntary system a fair trial, and withal he has worked wonders with it. When Great Britain entered the war, while she placed her unrivalled naval force at the disposal of her allies, and thus prevented the destruction of French shipping, the annihilation of the French Navy and the devastation of the Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts of France, she did not undertake to contribute to the land forces of her allies more than about 120,000 men. But she has done far more. Her casualties alone double the amount of her undertaking, and to-day she has more than a million soldiers in the different theatres of war and in training or reserve another two million soldiers. Speaking generally some three million men have been enlisted since the declaration of war under the voluntary system. The voluntary system has called for adjustment. In some districts, coal mining and engineering, enlistment has been curtailed by the authorities and soldiers have been sent back from the trenches and training camps to work in the mines and the munition factories, where their services would be more beneficial to the conduct of the war. From the first days of the war, Kitchener has been insistent on his forecast that the war would be a long one and that he must call for more and more men, and at intervals he has made it plain that he is not yet satisfied that the response to his several calls have been inadequate. Volunteering or conscription can only bring men together. A multitude of such men is but a mob. That mob has to be organized, equipped with clothing and peared they certainly got a great reception. The sketch simply had the house in rows, and the Rossleys assisted by Jack Russell put it over in great style. Mr. Jack Russell, in his character descriptive songs was perfect. There is no doubt he is one of the finest artists ever seen here. Everybody should hear his great songs, a moral and lesson in every one. The pictures were all good. The great feature film "A Sporting Chance" held the audience highly interested. Until the arrival of new performers, Jack and Marie Rossley and Mr. Jack Russell will produce sketches, songs, dances, record shows all the time.

TWO VOCALISTS COMING TO THE NICKEL.
 Patrons of the Nickel attended last evening's performance at the popular Theatre and were highly pleased with the show. The three-part Vitaphone feature story entitled "Underneath the Paint" was one of the best stories ever given there. The story is intensely interesting and the acting was near perfection. Helen Gardner, who is in the leading role, acted gracefully the well-known "Goddess" and was attractive and the other pictures were good. This evening the programme will be repeated. To-morrow "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be repeated. Messrs. Huskins and Cairns are coming to the Nickel and will appear next week. Mr. Huskins is a lyric tenor and Mr. Cairns a baritone.

Undesirables Rounded Up.
 Two well known characters in police circles who visit anywhere and everywhere they please, were found in a stable on Lime Street at an early hour this morning by Constables Greene and Walsh of the police night duty. The undesirables who were asleep in hay when discovered, were quickly removed and escorted to the police station. They were arraigned before the magistrate to-day and sent to jail for thirty days. Such undesirables usually make hay barns their place of residence where they are a danger to the community in case of fire, and the police deserve credit for rounding them up.

392nd Day of the War

TO-DAY'S Messages.

10.45 A.M.

THE SOUTH WALES STRIKE.

LONDON, To-day. The efforts of the Government to avert a spread of the South Wales coal strike, led to protracted meetings at the Board of Trade Chambers yesterday between Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade and David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, and representatives of the miners and coal owners. At the conclusion of the conference no official announcement of the result was made. According to one report the coal owners agreed to the inclusion in Runciman's recent award of those workers to whom the award did not extend, which would mean the strike is settled. According to another report a hitch has arisen in the negotiations which will render necessary another meeting with Runciman this Tuesday morning. Twelve thousand miners are now on strike in the coal fields.

NO REPORT FROM SUBMARINE COMMANDER.

WASHINGTON, To-day. Press despatches from Berlin, saying Germany has decided upon a policy in connection with the sinking of the Arabic in accord with the recent statement of the Imperial Chancellor, were noted with satisfaction yesterday in official circles here. The Chancellor said if it developed the German submarine commander had gone beyond instructions Germany would not hesitate to give complete satisfaction to the United States. So far officials here know the submarine commander who attacked the Arabic has not yet reported to Berlin. Until this report has been awaited for a reasonable time the Washington Government does not expect the promised formal communication from the Imperial Government. One despatch reached the State Department to-day from Ambassador Gerard, but Secretary Lansing said it threw no light on the situation.

THE CONSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN.

LONDON, To-day. The Globe asserts now that it is certain a majority of the Cabinet, led by Lord Curzon, Lloyd George and Winston Churchill, favor conscription. Those still opposed are Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, Simon Harcourt, McKenna, Redman and Balfour, while Lord Kitchener is undecided. The press generally is of the opinion the Kitchener holds the key of the situation and that he will be able to convince Parliament and the people for whichever side he declares. Gibson Bowles, the well-known naval expert, leads an agitation, daily becoming more insistent, demanding an extension of Sir Edward Grey's remark, replying to Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, that the freedom of the forward Lumber Co. had committed suicide yesterday near Cape Charles and that the body was recovered this morning. No particulars of the tragedy were received.

Brutality as a Policy.

(From the New York Tribune.) The abominable thing about the destruction of the E-13 was the wantonness of the deed, the savagery with which the German turned his machine guns on the unfortunate and helpless crew after the vessel had been abandoned. The murderous method of German naval officers is one of the most remarkable phenomena of the present war. There can be little doubt that it is deliberate. Quite apart from the exploits of the submarines, it is apparent that great pride is taken in destruction even when nothing is gained by it. The Germans have rarely taken prisoners at sea or even attempted to make rescues. When British destroyers set out to pick up the survivors of the Blucher the incident was described in the "Deutsche Tageszeitung" with the contemptuous remark that they "had nothing else to do." The deed was regarded, in short, as a confession of weakness. In their helplessness on the sea the Germans seem to have grown desperate; but it is peculiarly difficult to account for the slaying of the defenceless men of the E-13, because there was nothing whatever to be gained by the slaughter. In a word, it is clear that brutality is a deliberate and carefully considered policy of the German navy.

A German Tribute.

Max von Harden, a German journalist of note, pays a remarkable tribute to the British, and which, coming from a German, is simply marvellous. He says: "Any German, who has seen on a Swiss mountain railway next to a Liverpool tailor got up like a lord, or has regarded our comic papers as a fount of wisdom, thinks he knows Britain and the British. They have Hucker's souls, and are decent, and cowardly, are unsober, surly, and splenic, never aspire to higher things, have minds only for sport, foolery and money-making. That is the popular view. . . . Let us give praise where it is due. Hucker's souls! It was not of their country and tills that they thought when they

RUSSIANS DEFEAT TURKS.

PETROGAD, To-day. The following official statement has been issued at the headquarters of the Russian army: On the entire front there have been only minor engagements and changes. During the recent fighting up to August 22, we made prisoners, 84 officers, and 3,000 men, while our cavalry pursuing the Turks on the roads to Boutak sabred over 2,000. We also captured 12 guns and a quantity of war material.

ARABIC INCIDENT CLOSED.

LONDON, To-day. The German Government considers the Arabic incident closed, and has declared its willingness to punish the commander of the submarine which sank the steamer, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

GERMAN MILITARY DISSATISFIED.

AMSTERDAM, To-day. According to a correspondence received here from Berlin there is reported to be considerable feeling in German military circles because of Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's so called weakness towards the United States.

AUSTRIANS RETREAT BEFORE ITALIANS.

MILAN, To-day. The Austrians are in full retreat at two points. One is in the Valsugano, where they are blowing up bridges and viaducts and destroying all roads and railways as they retire. The other is in the region of the Upper Isorno where the Italian Alpines are wresting an important mountain summit from the Austrian grip.

GLENCOE PUT BACK.—The Glencoe, which left Burgeo at 12.20 p.m. yesterday going west, had to put back a few hours afterwards owing to the heavy sea raging on the coast. She was at Burgeo all night and it is presumed she left again early this morning though she was not reported up to 1 p.m. to-day. She is due at Port aux Basques this evening.

Hot Roast Turkey and Chicken Suppers served at McGARRY'S Cafe until midnight. Also, Afternoon Tea served for Ladies and Gentlemen from 4.30 to 6 p.m., until further notice.

MAN SUICIDES.—Deputy Minister of Justice Hutchings received a message to-day from Battle Harbor, via a boat brought by Mr. Grieve, J.P., intimating that a man named Moses Bright, of the schr. Lilla Young, belonging to the forward Lumber Co., had committed suicide yesterday near Cape Charles and that the body was recovered this morning. No particulars of the tragedy were received.

Household Notes.

Frozen rice pudding makes a wholesome and cooling dessert for a hot day. Toasted crackers spread with peanut butter makes a good luncheon sandwich. Underwear should be ironed on the right side; colored clothes on the wrong side. Slices of onion placed over the lamb before it is roasted will give it a good flavor. Use as little flour as you possibly can in making corn fritters, and they will be tender. Apples and onions shredded together make a sandwich filling that many people like.

DIED.

Yesterday afternoon, of meningitis, George Blatch, son of Janie L. and W. H. Peters, aged 5 years. This morning, after a long illness, Jessie A., second daughter of the late John and Grace Lester. Funeral at 2 p.m. on Thursday, from her late residence, Mount Pearl.—"News."

imperilled their national life and sacrificed their sovereigns by the hundred million to destroy Bonaparte, to whose overwhelming will they alone among the peoples of Europe would not submit themselves. And if in some dark hour the foundations of the British Empire should be threatened, strong men of Anglo-Saxon stock will hurry to its aid from every corner of the globe to show to mankind at large that the might of this people is indeed unconquerable."

The Battleship of the Future.

Comes now C. W. Miller, of North Pittsburg, an inventor with an imposing array of patents behind his name, to suggest a fighting craft that, in the opinion of disinterested experts who have examined his plans, bids fair to revolutionize all ideas of modern steel-clad battleships. Profiting from the lessons of the present war, in brief Mr. Miller would build a vessel costing one-third that of the modern super-dreadnought, having greater speed, one revolving turret, two or four sixteen or eighteen inch guns and a little steel plate. In other words, his ship would be designed solely for speed and gun range. He argues that two twenty-mile guns could outfit anything else afloat, because the ship's speed would enable it to pick its own range, escape if worsted, and at the same time throw enormous shells into an opponent not even visible from the decks. The Miller craft would be a combination of the battle cruiser and the old-type monitor. Keeping out of range of an enemy fleet, only poor marksmanship would prevent it from picking of the foe's boats and sinking them one at a time. With a speed of twenty-eight to thirty-five knots, easily possible because of the boat's lightness and great engine capacity, it could, with its big guns, sink the enemy without itself being exposed to the fourteen and fifteen-inch guns now placed on dreadnoughts. The one turret would be revolving and disappearing. Hydraulic pressure would raise and lower the turret, as it would the bridge, or conning tower. With the turret lowered, the Miller craft would present to the enemy only the bare surface of its deck. The guns would disappear within the turret. With Diesel engines for power and oil for fuel, Mr. Miller figures that the ship could carry enough fuel to take it around the world. With only one turret, the space available for fuel, engines and other machinery would be ample. As the inventor points out, such a craft would not be for joy riding, but for fighting and running. It would be a solid, substantial, efficient fighting machine and nothing else. A few small guns, projecting from side turrets, would serve to keep off the attacks of small craft. With six five-inch guns on each side the Miller craft would keep torpedo boats and submarines away. The two sixteen or eighteen inch guns would be reserved for long range fighting. Mr. Miller says: "Summing up the advantages of such design I point out that there would be: "At least a fifty per cent lowering in cost and possibly more saving than that. "A corresponding saving in time of construction. "Less room required for fuel and greater efficiency of fuel application. "A considerable reduction in the number of men required to man the boat, therefore, a lower cost of operation, provisioning, etc. "A greater elasticity of action owing to speed and lightness of craft. "A gun range of such character as to eliminate the necessity of huge batteries of guns of lower efficiency and the effectiveness of which is quadrupled by the revolving turret method of installation. "Comparative immunity from attack and disablement is not at the present time obtained under modern methods of construction, but is manifestly available by the disappearing turret and conning tower application."—St. Louis "Republic."

Are You in Love?

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The two biggest things in life are Work and Love. I do not think anyone can deny that statement. Every year, my every day that we add to our lives, only makes us realize a more thoroughly that these are the big realities.

Yesterday as I was going over my collection of beautiful and inspiring thoughts I was interested to see how many I had unconsciously selected on these two subjects.

And because I feel so sure that they are the universal vital subjects I am going to pass some of these thoughts along.

"To-day I'll give you the utterances of some of the big minds and hearts on love. Some other day I'll tell you what they have said about work."

"The night has a thousand eyes, And the day but one; Yet the light of the bright world dies With the dying sun."

"The mind has a thousand eyes, And the heart is but one; Yet the light of a whole life dies When love is done."

"The control of sensuality develops the deeper feelings of love."—Ellen Key.

"Love is an egotism of two."—La Salle.

"Beloved, let us love so well Our work shall be the better for our love And still our love be sweeter for our work."—E. B. Browning.

"Man's love is of man's life a thing apart, 'Tis woman's whole existence."—Byron.

"Life is a flower of which love is the honey."—Victor Hugo.

"His kiss was on her lips before she was born."

"It is astonishing how little one feels poverty when one loves."—Bulwer.

"The reason why lovers are never weary of one another is this—they are always talking of themselves."—La Rochefoucauld.

"Love is a nuisance and an impediment to important action."—Lord Bacon.

"Love is strongest in friendship, friendship in possession."—Emerson.

"A woman whom we truly love is a religion."—Emily De Girardin.

"Love is the greatest thing that God can give us, for Himself is love; and it is the greatest thing we can give to God, for it will also give ourselves and carry with it all that is ours."—Jeremy Taylor.

"The French are now placing on the market a preparation containing the extract from Henna leaves, which is having a phenomenal sale. This preparation is called Salvia and is being sold with a guarantee to cure dandruff and to grow hair in abundance. Being daintily perfumed, Salvia makes a most pleasant dressing. Sold by your druggist. A large, generous bottle for 50 cents. All kinds of left-over jelly will mix and make a good cake filling."

"Beloved, let us love so well Our work shall be the better for our love And still our love be sweeter for our work."—E. B. Browning.

World's Greatest Wesleyan.

About Dr. Waddy Moss, the New Methodist President. To be elected President of the Conference is a great honour a Wesleyan can obtain. It makes him, for the year during which his term of office lasts, the most powerful Wesleyan in the world. He has domain over something like 2,300 ministers, 531,000 church members, over seven thousand Sunday schools with upwards of a million scholars and teachers and nearly nine thousand places of worship in Great Britain alone. No better indication than these figures can be given of the strenuous year in front of Dr. R. Waddy Moss, the distinguished divine who was recently chosen as President for this year. Few men, during the last twenty years exerted greater influence in certain circles of Methodism. Yet he has worked so quietly and unobtrusively that he is even now only slightly known to the Wesleyan public as a whole. A Minister at Nineteen. When he was only nineteen Dr. Waddy Moss was accepted for the Wesleyan ministry. He laboured in classical Oxford, and afterwards among the hard workers of Bramley, the clog-clad millhands of Burnley, the lace-workers of Nottingham, and the toilers in the mills at Bradford. Dr. Moss has written many books. One published in his early days at Didsbury College urged the students to become evangelists. The whole college became divided into four mission bands which carried on Friday night services in village chapels, cottages, and other places for two years. One very cold day Dr. Moss was conducting a service in a little village chapel. The stove was burning badly, and the place became filled with blinding smoke. Indeed, people and Warrants to be Issued at Once.

For Tory Politicians in Manitoba. Winnipeg, Aug. 27.—There will be no delay, said Hon. A. B. Hudson, Attorney General, when asked as he stepped from the train to-day how soon warrants would be issued for arrests in connection with the Parliament Buildings contract. Mr. Hudson said he had not seen the full text of the Mathers Commission report. He wanted to review this carefully before outlining his plans. He stated, however, that there would be no hedging. The guilty would be punished, irrespective of rank of former power. "The task," he said, "was somewhat unpleasant. It was not pleasing duty to prosecute to the full extent of the law those who had once sat in high places, but although the ordeal was bitter, it would be carried on to the end."

King Gustav Had a Narrow Escape.

Stockholm, Aug. 27.—King Gustav had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday at Jerna. As he was entering his car to proceed to Stockholm the train started with a sudden jerk throwing him down. His foot was jammed between the car and the platform and he fell heavily. He was picked up quickly, however, and assisted into his car. Except for a slight lameness he is little the worse for the accident.

"Don't Worry."

Don't worry about things that you can't help. Worry kills success, some people are worrying all the time about some things that have happened or might happen. Drive out of your mind completely your past troubles and misfortunes, they cannot be helped now. Usually the coming events that you worry so much about are not really so bad when they actually happen, and many times the thing most dreaded and worried about never happens. You will get a lot of undesirable things passed out to you in your life which you can't help, and all the worrying you do over them simply a waste of energy, which might be better employed in the solution of problems of real help to your present and future.

To-Morrow's Scrap.

The liveliest scrap that has ever taken place on a Newfoundland diamond is booked for to-morrow afternoon at 2.30, when the Red Lions and Wanderers will try conclusions. It is generally agreed upon among supporters of the game that the Wanderers depend on the Championship, and with the Pennant within easy reaching distance both Mers. Hants and Hiltz are working their teams over time. The Lions have, every season, been in the running for the "rag" well up in the schedule, but when the final scenes were closing they drop just before the tape is reached. However their supporters now think that their "pinx" has finally been eliminated and are therefore hopeful of success to-morrow. The Wanderers will be Cooney and Hiltz for the Lions and King and Ford for the Wanderers. We will publish full lineups to-morrow.

Some Boat.

One of the fastest and prettiest motor boats ever seen in Nfld. is a fitting description of the new Hydroplane just finished by Mr. Bob Sexton. This boat though very small, being only seventeen feet long, is capable of making 30 miles per hour, and was ordered by Mr. Wm. H. Trask, Manager of L. M. Trask & Co., who will use it as a pleasure boat. The workmanship is excellent throughout, and all fittings are polished brass giving the boat a handsome appearance. The boat has now the distinction of having built the fastest raceboat, rowboat, and motor boat in Newfoundland.

EVEN HEDIN MAY COME ACROSS. Berlin, Aug. 26.—Sven Hedin, the Swedish explorer, who has been writing pro-German articles, was at Novogorodsk when the Emperor arrived there last week. Learning that he was there the Emperor called for him and an animated conversation followed.

Later Sven Hedin was asked what the topic of conversation had been, but declined to divulge many details. He said, however, that the Kaiser had broached the subject of an American lecture tour, but he would not say how far the subject had been carried. He remarked that a former friend of Theodore Roosevelt had proposed the same sort of a tour to him and added that the former friend and Mr. Roosevelt were no longer on good terms.

The Valor of Our Fathers.

London Times:—Twelve months ago the Germans chose to assert, and they do believe, that the valor of our fathers had departed from us. They have begun to learn what the race they so traduced can do and can endure. It is written large and plain in the trenches of Flanders and on the heights of Gallipoli. It will be writ deeper yet as the drafts which we are making on the manhood and on the inexhaustible resources of the Empire give us fresh armies to fight on for what with one accord we hold to be the sacred cause of human liberty and of the world's civilization. No struggle less great than this could have brought out in equal fullness the latent qualities of the race. That the war has accomplished and is accomplishing. It has proved that we are as we have ever been, true sons of the men who have humbled all that strave for a lawless domination over Europe. Come what come may, we shall "quit us like men."

How Aero Propellers Are Made.

An Ordinary Wooden Propeller Costs From £20 to £30.
 The efficiency of the complete aeroplane largely depends upon its propeller, and great care is therefore taken with its design and manufacture. The design depends upon the power of the engine, the speed and purpose of the aeroplane, and the number of revolutions the propeller must make, which varies between 500 revolutions and 1,200 revolutions per minute. It acts in precisely the same way as the screw of a boat or an ordinary screw in a piece of wood, the wood being represented by the air or water, as the case may be. It screws its way into the air and draws the aeroplane behind it.

Here it would be as well to differentiate between tractor and propeller. The tractor is in front and draws the aeroplane behind it. A propeller is behind and pushes the aeroplane along. A full-size drawing of one blade of the proposed propeller is made, and the shape of every four or six inches along its length determined.

Usually Made of Mahogany.
 Then templates or gauges are made for each point which the finished propeller must exactly fit. All the blades whether two, or four, will therefore be exactly alike, which is very important. The blades too, will be made sufficiently strong, not to "flutter," that is, vibrate, and so run out of truth, or the efficiency will suffer. They are usually made of mahogany or walnut, well seasoned, evenly grained, and free from knots.

The difficulty of getting a plank of mahogany 10 ft. long, 1 in. thick and 1 ft. wide to fulfill the above conditions may be understood, and five to ten planks are required for each pair of propellers, which are made in one piece.

Each is first of all planed quite true and then glued, the faces being well rubbed together to insure a perfect joint. For in addition to the heat of the engine, which tends to warp the planks, the vibration from the engine also tends to separate them. In some cases they are also pegged. When all the planks are glued together, clamps are put on, and the whole left under a heavy pressure for two or three days until perfectly set. Then the central hole for the engine shaft is cut, for this must be exactly central, and all parts are measured from this.

It is then roughly cut to shape and allowed to settle for a few days. The idea of this leaving it is that the strains released by the large amount cut away may "settle" down and not affect the shape and truth when finished. It is for this reason that solid blocks are not used for propellers, but separate plans laid grain across grain. This process may take place twice or thrice.

Blades Sometimes Covered With Canvas.
 It is finally carefully cut to shape, and the gauges before mentioned used to insure that all the blades are alike, and then polished and varnished. Occasionally the blades are covered with canvas, but this is not general, as it has been known to work loose.

A patent was taken out some time ago to deposit metal upon the finished blades. Metal propellers have been tried, but the wooden ones at present hold pride of place. A wooden propeller of 8 ft. diameter would weigh between fifteen and twenty pounds, and cost from twenty to thirty pounds sterling.

As the propeller usually suffers in the event of a hasty descent it is one reason why flying is so expensive.

When a recipe calls for a cupful of anything it means a half-pint—an ordinary cup filled level.

Sees Quick Finish With Cotton Contraband

Only Substance for Munition Making Which Germany Can't Supply, Asserts Sir William Ramsay.

London, August 11.—At the meeting held to-night to impress upon the Government the necessity of declaring cotton contraband of war, Sir William Ramsay, the eminent scientist, declared cotton was the only substance required for the manufacture of munitions with which the Germans could not supply themselves. He said no chemical products can take the place of cotton in propulsive ammunition and that ammunition made from used cotton is not as effective as that made from unused cotton.

Sir Charles Macra, president of the Master Cotton Spinners' Association of Great Britain presided at the meeting and Sir William was the principal speaker. An inspired statement published in most of the newspapers this morning deprecating the agitation to make cotton contraband and intimating that negotiations with the United States on this subject were proceeding, had the effect of lessening interest in the meeting. Both the presiding officer and chief speaker were insistent, however, that immediate action should be taken.

In opening the proceedings, the president of the Cotton Spinners said he had no doubt the manufacture of explosives had consumed a large part of the cotton surplus created by the war, and added: "We must utilize our command of the highway of the sea, both practically and diplomatically, to prevent cotton reaching enemy countries, while at the same time acting fairly in the interest of neutral countries."

He was sure the Government had given anxious consideration to this most complicated problem and said there was no doubt that during recent months the stocks of cotton accumulating at Liverpool had shown an improvement was taking place, but that it was absolutely necessary that strong and well considered measures should be carried out to keep cotton from countries with which Great Britain is at war.

Sir William Ramsay, who seconded a resolution which was passed demanding that cotton be declared contraband, asserted that while substitutes for cotton could be used in making nitro-cellulose, none of them had what was called the "ballistic power" of cotton, and if anything else was used by the Germans it would necessitate enlarging the chambers of their guns and altering the sights of their rifles, an expedient which not even Germany could be prepared to adopt in the course of a great war. He declared that cotton was going into Germany by devious routes. It was said, he said, to Dutch and Swedish companies under a guarantee that it would not be sold to Germany or Austria. While technically this guarantee was not violated, Sir William contended, it was in reality a subterfuge, for the Dutch and Swedish consignees sold the shipments to Swiss companies, who, in turn, sold them to Great Britain's adversaries.

The estimate was made by Sir William that a thousand tons of cotton is used every day of the war, and he protested that it was grossly unfair to the English soldiers and their allies that Great Britain should continue to supply Germany with this commodity. "Had cotton been stopped at the beginning of the war," he said, "we might reasonably expect to see the war nearing an end."

A letter from Lord Beresford was read at the meeting in which he said if cotton had been declared contraband last February the war now would be approaching its final scenes, and added:

"Cotton is still entering Germany. She might just as well be allowed to import shells. Neutral powers should be informed that we intend to maintain our maritime rights as a belligerent. Of what use to us is the mastery of the sea unless we profit by its advantages?"

"We do not wish to hamper the trade of the great English-speaking nation across the Atlantic. There are difficulties, but difficulties were created to be faced."

The solution of the problem proposed by Lord Beresford would be for the British Government to buy up the entire American cotton crop and resell afterwards, even if at a loss.

Household Notes.

Onions sliced very thin add a good flavor to any green salad.
 Put a bag of sulphur in the bird cage in summer. It will drive away lice.
 When making salmon salad, add a hard-boiled egg or two, carefully diced.
 To overcome the habit of biting the finger nails, soak them in liquid quinine.
 Lamb is not lamb unless the bones are small, and good lamb is pale red in color.

Canadians For British Plants.

Ottawa, August 25.—William Windham who with G. N. Barnes, M. P., came to Canada last May on behalf of the British Government to secure skilled mechanics for British arsenal and naval works, called on the acting Premier, Sir George Foster, this afternoon to report the success of the Commission's efforts. Messrs. Windham and Barnes sail for England at the end of the week, having secured altogether 1710 skilled iron and steel workers, mostly riveters and turners, and all of these have now left for England under contract with the War Office.

Every man before being accepted was given a thorough test as to his experience and ability to perform the highly skilled work required of them in Great Britain, in connection with the manufacture of war munitions. About 80 per cent. of them have had previous training in British munition or naval works, and all are guaranteed return passage to Canada after the war is over.

Mr. Windham says that these 1700 men were picked from about 15,000 applicants from all parts of Canada, the rejected applicants being turned down as not fulfilling the tests of skilled workmanship regarded as essential. He and Mr. Barnes have visited every industrial centre in Canada and believe they have picked up every man available. The 1700 men secured, says Mr. Windham, are worth at present to the War Office in connection with the speeding up of munitions output, two or three times that number of men on the firing line.

What's a Sardine.

Rudyard Kipling forgot sardines. He said, "East is east, and west is west, and never the twain shall meet," or something like that. However, as far east as London and as far west as San Francisco have met in a question common to certain personsages at both these places, namely, "What the dickens is a sardine, anyway?" Comes Sir R. Finlay, K.C., before a King's Bench Division Court and declares that the word sardine is vulgar as compared with sardine. The horrible vulgarity of this word sprat (we blush as we read it) revolted his clients to such a degree that they preferred to use the word sardine on their labels. They were proceeded against for selling these fish, tinned and preserved in oil, under the word, so much more acceptable to polite ears, sardines. The learned Sir R. Finlay, K.C., argued that in England a sardine was a sardine whether it was a sardine or not, that is, if it was prepared in a certain way. Mr. Walter, for the respondent, said the trade in these goods was over a million pounds yearly, and they were under contract with the War Office and the Admiralty to supply large quantities. The Lord Chief Justice said he could not help that. All they had to do was to put labels on stating that what they were selling was really "Norwegian sprats." Not so long ago the New York "Journal of Commerce" said that this Government had decided that the "California sardine" is not a sardine and has no right to take that name; that the fish is a "stoleporous." Well, from San Francisco, F. E. Booth, president of the Monterey Packing Co., has written rebuking the "Journal of Commerce" for its interpretation and declaring that what was decided was just this, that certain California anchovies, which have heretofore been marketed as "sardines," should hereafter not be so designated, and he says the decision in question has no reference to the large California sardines (Clupea Sagax or Sardinia Caerulea), which are of the same sub-family as the European pilchard. The large California sardines, rather than the species involved in the ruling, are now extensively sold all over the United States.

TRYING TO ADJUST RATES OF EXCHANGE.

London, Aug. 19.—Negotiations are proceeding among the leading financial and governmental authorities in regard to the problem of American exchange rates, but there are so many details to arrange that it is not expected a definite announcement will be made for some time, unless the Treasury, in view of the seriousness of the situation, should decide upon quick action. The belief prevails in financial circles that America, as a matter of self-interest, would prefer to take a dollar loan of one two or five years duration, rather than such a huge quantity of gold as Europe apparently is willing to supply to ship. Nearly $2,500,000 already has been sold from the Bank of England since last Saturday and opinion favors a loan or the establishment of a credit as likely to cause less disturbance in the money market and speculation in New York.
