IN THE TOILS; But Happiness Comes at Last.

CHAPTER XXVI. THREATENING CLOUDS. With all his free-and-easy manner, Lord Heatherdene was proud and haughty by nature, and in nothing was his pride more evident than in his wife. He had trusted her so entirely, too! Refusing to hear, even from her own lips the story of her own life. How often she had determined, with a fearful dread of some such discovery as the present; had determined to tell him everything, but he had always prevented her; always put off her confession by some simple assertion of his absolute trust and confidence in her. And she had been tempted, too easily, by her love for him, to let the past rest. He was still ignorant of the dark secret which she carried in her bosom, day and night. And now had come Mr. Hastley Derrick, who could and would, doubtless, betray her.

"No!" she murmured. "From me, first, and alone, shall he hear the truth. I will tell him to-morrow, and leave him."

Even as she made the resolve, she heard his footstep in the next room, his own room, and he knocked at the door. With a guilty stare she rose and opened it.

"Not in bed yet?" he said, putting his arm round her. "How tired you look, my darling! You are quite cold, too! We have had something too much of this merry-making. You must get a good night's, or rather a day's, sleep."

Then he kissed her and wished her good night, and left her. She had not uttered a word, only clung to him—clung to him with infinite humility and love. When he had gone she undressed and got into bed, and sheer exhaustion forced sleep upon her.

CHAPTER XXVII. WAIT—AND WIN. THERE was very little of early rising at Livermore Castle the next morning, and the breakfast room was untroubled by visitors until noon.

A little after twelve Olive came down, and her appearance was greeted with a volley of inquiries and congratulations. "Was she not tired? Really and truly not quite too exhausted? And what a success it had been!—the most delightful and charming ball they had ever known!"

Groups of ladies scattered about the room, in their piquant morning robes, and taking chocolate and coffee, but very little substantial, by way of breakfast, from dainty porcelain; all began to attack her, after the fashion of ladies after a ball. Olive walked from one to the other, smiling, and her pale face did not challenge marked attention among so many. There were two or three gentlemen lounging about—among them Harry Fitzgerald, who, of course, came up ready to play the part of devoted slave.

Fitzgerald's devotion was so palpable, honest, and above board, that the place of cavalier servant had become his by the right of custom. He new came forward, not disguising that he had been waiting for her; and a small table was placed by his direction in the window, and a little service tea placed on it.

Olive thanked him; and Fitzgerald, seeing her look round the room, at once divined the object of her search, and answered her eyes.

"Heatherdene has gone out with Hastley Derrick, strolling round the castle, I think, showing Derrick the improvements in the stables. Do you want him?—I'll find him."

"No," said Olive; her face, which had grown even paler than before as she heard that Derrick and her husband were together. Had he betrayed her already? "No, I only wanted to know about the tenants' fete to-day."

"I think I can tell you," said Fitzgerald. "They've made me a sort of master of the ceremonies," and he took out his notebook. "Yes, there are some sports in the morning—some of the people have gone down to look on; dinner at two in the large marquee, a steeplechase, and some flat races, quoits, throwing the hammer, a tea, fireworks, and ball."

Olive smiled. "Poor master of the ceremonies!" she said. "Don't suppose we are inensible of, or ungrateful for, your kindness, Mr. Fitzgerald. I am afraid that we take advantage of your good nature. I do not know what we should have done without you."

Fitzgerald's eyes brightened; a word of praise from her was all he wanted—full reward for a mountain of trouble.

"I'm only amusing myself, I give you my word," he said. "A born busybody; must interfere in everything. Ah! here's the duchess and the earl. Well, your grace, how are things going since I left?"

"Capitally," said her grace; "they are now jumping in sacks, an amusement which seems to me to provoke merriment in the spectators and exasperate Providence at one and the same time. If there are no broken limbs at the close of the day, I think the local surgeon will have every right to feel disappointed. And how are you, my dear Adrienne—tired?—ah, yes, they tell me you young folk kept it up till a most unwholy hour. The earl and I made our disappearance at a comparatively early period."

"Deserters, who should be tried by court-martial," was the comment. "Small hours don't suit old bones," said the earl, who looked as fresh as any, and fresher than many of them. "We have been down to the park," he said, looking round. "Some of you young ones will find your lost roses down there. Mr. Fitzgerald, there were anxious inquiries for you—"

"I am going now, my lord," said Fitzgerald, looking wistfully at Olive. "Can I get you anything more, Lady Heatherdene? Will you come down to the park presently? I have told them to have some carriages ready in case any of the ladies would rather ride. Shall I send a brougham for you?"

But Olive, transferring the question to those around her, elicited the opinion that they would rather walk. At last Fitz tore himself away, and left the earl standing by Olive. The old man laid his hand gently and caressingly on her head.

"What a pale lily it is this morning!" he said. "A little fresh air will do you good. Where is Charlie?"

"With Mr. Derrick," said Olive. "Ah!" said the earl, with a smile; "a most amusing fellow. I am very glad he came down. Did you ask him to stay? Yes, I remember. Very amusing; reminds me of Green, of the Blues—Evergreen they called him—you don't remember him, of course, my dear; a man always ready with a repartee or an apropos story. You'll like Mr. Derrick, I think."

"I will go and get my things on," said Olive, rising with downcast eyes. "You will come, Lady Maud?"

"We will all come now you are going," was the reply, and they went upstairs to dress.

On the terrace they found some half dozen gentlemen sauntering about, enjoying the morning cigars, which were instantly flung aside, and the whole party walked down to the park. It was a glorious morning, and the sun shone down upon a scene made gay and inspiring by the crowd of holiday makers scattered about the gorgeous marquee. The athletic sports which the duchess considered so tempting to Providence, were in full swing; and in a circle formed by the spectators, tenants, servants and laborers, and many visitors who had driven from all parts of the neighborhood, the program which Fitzgerald had drawn up was in due progress.

The appearance of Lady Heatherdene and the castle party was the cause of great excitement; the proceedings were suspended while three hearty cheers were given. Then Fitzgerald came up with a silver tankard in a velvet stand in his hand. "Prize Number Six, just won. Will you give it to the winner, Lady Heatherdene?"

Olive looked round for one of her guests to occupy the post of honor, but they resolved that she should bestow the prizes; and Olive, amid a general cheer, handed the tankard to the winner, a young farmer, to whom the prize acquired an additional value from the fact of its reaching him by the hands of the Lady Heatherdene. There were other prizes to be given, and Olive found out the young bride and created her the Queen of Beauty in the tournament of strength and skill.

"Your appearance has made the fete a success," said Fitzgerald. "You will stay and see the races, Lady Heatherdene?"

"Yes, if they all like to do so," said Olive. "There is to be an additional steeplechase for gentlemen riders," said Fitzgerald. "That was made up this morning at a suggestion of Mr. Derrick's. He and Heatherdene are going to ride."

Olive looked up with a little start. "There is no danger," said Fitzgerald quietly. "There is nothing formidable excepting the water jump, and Heatherdene has hopped over impediments of twice its breadth. Do not be nervous, Lady Heatherdene." Olive blushed. "I am not nervous—yes, I am," she

All Children Love "Syrup of Figs" for Liver and Bowels

Give it when feverish, cross, bilious, for bad breath or sour stomach.

Look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

said, with that sweet, sudden smile. "I am always nervous of any real or apparent danger for Charlie—you know how reckless he is, Mr. Fitzgerald."

"I know, and as he is not alone in that falling, I had the course pretty plain and straightforward."

As he spoke, Lord Heatherdene and Hastley Derrick came riding up; they had been trying two hunters they intended to ride in the afternoon.

Hastley Derrick uncovered and pulled up his horse with the ease and aplomb of a skilled horseman. He looked just as usual, fresh and keen and capable, as if he had gone to bed with the birds on the preceding evening.

"Well, Ad," said Charlie, bending down in his saddle, and looking at her with the ever-unchanging smile of tenderness and love.

"Feel in trim this morning, Lady Maud? I see you have been creating confusion and discomfiture among the buccles! The handsome fellow has completely lost his head, and declares that he will jump twice the distance for a word from you, to say nothing of a more substantial prize. What do you think of the steeplechase? We have put one up for ourselves. Derrick and Hamilton, and Fitz—you are going to ride, Fitz?"

Fitzgerald hesitated a moment. "You will ride, Mr. Fitzgerald," said Olive. "You were telling us yesterday how well that black horse of yours could jump."

"Yes, I will ride," said Fitzgerald, as a matter of course.

"The black, Irish horse I saw in the stable, Fitzgerald!" said Hastley Derrick, speaking for the first time. "Scarcely up to the work, is he?"

"I've seen him do worse," said Fitzgerald quietly.

"Betting already?" laughed Charlie. "Come, I'll open the ball. Derrick, Fitz's nigger, though quiet-looking, is dangerous. I'll bet you an even pony."

"And I another," said Fitz. "Taken with you both," was Derrick's quiet reply.

Olive looked up with an interest that was rather over-proportioned to the subject. But to her strained mind it was her husband and her friend against the man she feared and distrusted, and she felt as if more than a mere steeplechase hung upon the result. Moved by a sudden impulse she turned to Lady Maud.

"Why should we not have a little excitement, dear? I will risk a box of gloves on Mr. Fitzgerald's black horse."

"Very well," laughed Lady Maud, and very soon dainty pocketbooks cropped up, and gloves were being wagered in every direction. The impromptu steeplechase seemed likely to become rather an important matter; the crowd got word of it, and immediately after the dinner in the marquee they rushed back to the course, and were betting eagerly.

Derrick and Fitzgerald were the favorites; Lord Heatherdene's weight told too much against him to allow him much chance against the lighter Derrick and Fitz; but there were many, who, remembering Lord Heatherdene's pluck and his neck-or-nothing style, backed him with cheerful confidence.

The 'Florizel' Inquiry.

Thursday's Proceedings.
Dunfield, Griffiths, examined by Mr. Dunfield, said:—I am 24 years of age. I live at Long Harbor, P.E. I was a second class passenger on the Florizel on her last voyage. I was going to New York. I went to bed when she left the harbour and slept all night. I had a little seasick when I got up. I went on the smoking room deck. My room was No. 37. I came out to the room and somewhere. I did not know anyone on the ship. I did not know anyone on the ship, either passengers or crew. I came out on the lee side and saw the smoking room deck. About 40 people were there. I was the last to leave the smoking room deck. I was there about half an hour. There was a woman near me. I saw several others on the lee side. They were all washed away while I was there. There were three heavy seas came. I was washed to the lee side and down the gangway. I was taken off my legs. I was next washed forward. I was speaking to a man, he was I think a member of the crew, when I got up. I climbed over a boat that was across the deck. I was picked up and brought to the Marconi room where I came to. There was no confusion as far as I know. No one was refused admission to the Marconi Room.

To Mr. Warren: I was the last left on the smoking room deck. The man with a grey coat on was taken with the second sea. He was fairly tall and lightish. It was daylight. (Mr. J. S. Munn was the man described by witness.) There was also a woman. The woman was a short woman and about 35 years of age. I was fully dressed with the exception of my socks.

To Mr. Warren: I came up against a big crowd when I left my room. I did not have a lifebelt on.

To Mr. Warren: I did not know the man Daughines.

To Mr. Blackwood: There was a life belt in my room. I don't know how many life belts. There was a man from Torbay in the room with me. I do not know his name. I heard her strike. There was no one called me. I heard someone say the ship was ashore.

Alexander Fleet, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I am 24 years of age. I am a native of St. John's. I was a waiter on the Florizel for two years. I was in room 29 when she struck, balling water out which came through a broken port hole. I went to watch at 11 o'clock. A man named Daughines and Capt. Belliveau occupied the stateroom. Daughines was alone in the room. I went on the boat deck when she struck. I went to the boat where the carpenter was. He told me to get an axe. I got an axe but when I got back the boat was gone. I tried to get back to my room to get my coat. Gordon Ivany was my room mate. Coming back I stood on the lee side of the smoking room. Gordon Ivany was with me. Several passengers were there. Some of them made an attempt to get forward. After getting forward I stayed outside the fiddley for while and then went to the Marconi Room. The fiddley was full when I got there. Thomas Hennesbury and I left for the Marconi Room together. I never saw him after. The Marconi room was filled it could not hold any more. There were two women in the Marconi Room. No one was refused admission to the Marconi Room.

To Mr. Warren: I did not hear Mr. Snow, the Purser, call the passengers. I was dressed in a pair of overalls at the time. I don't know of there being any women on the lee of the smoking room.

John Johnstone, examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I am 22 years of age. I am a native of St. John. I was pantry waiter on the Florizel. I came off duty at 8.30 and got up again at 4.30 to look after the storeroom, as there was work to be done there. On my way I met Stanley Squires, he said we had struck ice. I met Miss Denief and also Mr. Moore near the smoking room. I stayed in the lee of the smoke room till about 6.05 when I made my way to the Marconi Room. I did not see anyone inside the smoking room.

I was washed down among the crowd on the lee side of the smoking room. I cannot say if anyone was washed away at that time. I picked myself up again. Miss Denief asked me to look after her and I did the best I could. Harry Snow was on the lee of the smoking room and told me he was looking after two women. Miss Denief came along with me to the Marconi Room. There was lots of room in the Marconi Room. Timmons, the oiler, had the door in his hand when I got there. Miss Cantwell came alone to the Marconi Room as far as I know. I did not hear her make any remark. As soon as they heard her voice she was admitted to the room.

To Mr. Gibbs: Miss Denief was very lightly clad. Considerable water had come down stairs when I saw Miss Denief. She said, "Save me." I said "I will do my best," and helping her upstairs I assisted her to the lee side of the smoking room. I grasped the rail with one hand and Miss Denief with the other. In getting forward to the Marconi Room we encountered considerable wreckage such as broken awnings, etc. When about the centre of the engine room sky-light three seas overtook us, I grasped the sky-light with one hand and held Miss Denief with the other. We were both drenched with the sea. There was two blankets in the drawer of the Marconi Room, one was given to Miss Cantwell and the other to Miss Denief. The reason why Timmons held the door was to keep the water out. I know Mullenwey died in the Marconi Room, he was very lightly clad. I do not know what time he died. The carpet on the Marconi deck was tacked up to replace the broken door. I have no idea how the sea was between 2 and 4 on Sunday evening.

To Mr. Warren: My duty does not take me to any stateroom. Mr. Gardiner was in the Marconi Room, he had a wrist watch and told me the time. He said it was 6.05 o'clock.

James Dwyer, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield: I am 26 years of age. I am a native of St. John's. I was a waiter on the Florizel for the past 7 years. I got up about 4.15. There was a little leak in one of the rooms so I got up to see about it. I went to No. 1 room which was occupied by Mr. Munn to see if he wanted anything. Major Sullivan just came out. Major Sullivan was fully dressed. Mr. Munn was in bed. I asked Mr. Munn if he wanted anything. He said no, and remarked that the ship was rolling heavily. My duty is to clear away the Social Hall. While I was at work down the alleyway on the port side, the ship struck. Some one sang out it was ice. Afterwards I heard someone say it was the rocks. The Purser gave me orders to get the passengers out. I went to every room and told them to get lifebelts on and get out as the ship was on the rocks. I had ten rooms to attend to. I then went down and got an overcoat for myself and came up on deck just as the lights went out. I went to the lee side of the smoking room. The three engineers were there and also Johnson. It was dark. I did not see any women or children. I got on top of the smoking room. There was two there I recognized Mr. Moore and Miss Barrett. They were fully dressed. I did not see any dead bodies. I saw the smoke room deck starting so I got down and hopped over to the Marconi Room. When I got there it was filled. The only person I saw near the fiddley was Mr. Burnham. The Marconi Room door was washed away. I was holding on to it at the time. There were only five men on the fiddley. I was on the fiddley from before noon on Sunday till rescued. It was very cold in the fiddley. We warmed ourselves with a tarpaulin. We started a watch for an hour on and an hour off. Mr. James and I took the first watch and Major Sullivan and Mr. Burnham took the other watch. When off watch we covered ourselves with the tarpaulin. At night we altered the watch to half an hour. Mr. James was on the job all the time. He kept us in good spirits all the time.

To Mr. Gibbs: I have been Captain's Steward ever since Capt. Martin has been on the ship. I was in his room last, shortly after the ship left. I usually found the Captain on the bridge at 10 o'clock at night and at 5 o'clock in the morning. It was my duty to bring him a cup of tea at those hours. Since the war began I have not known Captain Martin to take off his clothes while at sea. I saw Mr. Munn come out of his room and go to the room where his little girl and her nurse was. I did not see him after.

To Mr. Warren: Betty Munn's room was No. 18 on the starboard side. I did not see Mr. Munn on the smoking room deck. I notified all those in my section to put on left belts and get on deck. There are extra life belts for children kept in the locker of the wardrobe and are very easy to get at.

To Mr. Gibbs: I saw Johnstone with Miss Denief in the lee of the smoking room. Miss Denief would have no chance of getting to the Marconi Room without his help or the help of some one else.

To Mr. Blackwood: I did not see any one in the smoking room. I was not there. My rooms were 1 to 9 and room 20. Those who occupied the rooms in my section were:—

- No. 1. Mr. J. S. Munn.
- No. 2. Major Sullivan and Mr. J. P. Kieley.
- No. 3. Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Smythe.
- No. 4. Mr. A. Ledingham and Mr. R. Wright.
- No. 5. Mr. Daley and Mr. P. J. Larcy.
- No. 6. Mr. E. Froude and Mr. J. Miller.
- No. 7. Mr. T. McNeil and Mr. J. McCoubrey.
- No. 8. Mr. W. Moore.
- No. 9. Mr. W. Earle and Mr. M. O'Driscoll.
- No. 20. Mr. John Parsons, Corp. Snow, Mr. R. Burnham and Mr. Chown.

All were in their rooms at the time she struck except Mr. Kieley and Major Sullivan.

Henry Dodd, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: My age is 21 years. I am a native of St. John's. I was mess-room steward on the Florizel. I was on her 7 or 8 months. I was turned in at the time she struck. I woke up at about 4.40 when she gave a heavy roll. She hit just shortly after. Faddy Lynch was in the room with me. I went to the kitchen and saw the baker and just reached there when she struck. I looked down in the engine room and saw it fill up with water. It was about ten minutes after she struck. I

A 15 YEARS' FIRE

Just think! That is the time through which Mr. H. C. Buckley endured all the fiery torture of itching, burning eczema. His life was a perfect misery until Zam-Buk—the great, herbal skin cure—brought complete relief.

Mr. Buckley, who lives at 461 East Broadway, Portland, Oregon, writes:—"For fifteen years I suffered with eczema, and although I tried many so-called 'eczema cures,' nothing seemed capable of dealing with a case like mine. It was not until I had Zam-Buk recommended to me that I began to have hope. This wonderful skin healer soon brought about a change for the better. As I persevered with Zam-Buk the burning sensation got less. I found Zam-Buk wonderfully soothing. Gradually the patches of soreness and the inflammation were reduced, and complete and permanent cure finally resulted. I would strongly advise all afflicted with eczema to give Zam-Buk a trial. It will give them satisfaction. They will not be disappointed."

No skin disease can resist the potent healing forces stored up in Zam-Buk, which is unequalled for old wounds, ulcers, abscesses, bad legs, scaly sores, blood-poisoning, piles, scalds, burns, cuts and all skin injuries. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box.

then made for the deck going over the smoking-room stairs. I got Mr. Cantwell and Miss Denief were in the Marconi room when I got there. I remained there till I was taken off.

To Mr. Blackwood—I worked with Mr. Butler before I went to sea. I was speaking to him before we sailed. The three of us went out on the deck. I was washed away from them. I had hold of Mrs. Butler's hand and Mr. Butler had hold of the other hand.

To Mr. Gibbs—They were starting to dress when I went to their room. I did not have life belts on. Mrs. Butler did not have much clothes on. Jacob Finsett, ship's carpenter, examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I am 32. I belong to Safe Harbor, near Greenspond. I am ship's carpenter of the Florizel. I have been five years with the Red Cross line and was on the Stephano and the Florizel. I came off duty at 8.30. It is my duty to stand by the anchor and windlass when leaving the dock. I was called at 4.40. I was in bed in the meantime. The cargo was loose in No. 2 hold. I did not do anything with the cargo as I did not have time. By the time I got dressed she struck. Dooley called me and told me the cargo got loose. I went on the saloon deck after leaving my room. The bosun left the room with me. I heard the captain say to get the boats ready. I was cutting away the cover off a boat when the sea took her away. I then held on to the rail around the Marconi room. I hung on there for quite a while and watched a chance to get on the bridge. The lee side was blocked with boats so I had to go round to the port side to get to the bridge. I saw the chief mate, Mr. Crocker and others there. I went down to the captain's room and went back again to the bridge. A sea then came and knocked me down; when I got up everyone was gone but Mr. Ledingham. I then went forward on the main deck to the oilers' room in the forecastle and stayed there till I was rescued. Joseph Bird was there. Mr. Ledingham came there after. I did not hear Mr. Ledingham say he was going to follow me forward.

To Mr. Gibbs—My duty is to stand by the windlass till she was out of harbor, and then go around and examine the hatches. I am on watch all day. The ship was going all right when I turned in. The water was covered with slob or slob. I have been on her 3 1/2 years. I was ten springs to the sealfishery. The slob would not interfere with the speed of the Florizel.

Albert Fagan examined by Mr. Dunfield: I was born at Brookfield, St. John's West near Bowring Park. My room was No. 38. I was in bed at the time she struck. I thought she struck ice. I did not get out of bed. I heard some one say she was ashore. R. J. Fowler was in my stateroom. I said to him she is ashore. He said she is going through ice. I got up about 5 minutes after. When I got out the lights were gone and about a foot of water was in the alleyway and in my room. There was something blocking the companion way. I held to the rail that runs across the ship. I got to the lee of the smoking room. I held on for 15 or 20 minutes. There was a lot of people there. I saw one woman and a man. I took him to be her husband. The man was washed off his feet and taken away. Shortly after the woman was taken away. I got forward to the fiddley and found it was filled up. I went to the Marconi room. Outside it were 3 or 4 men holding on to the rail. I held on there for a while; when they went in I followed them. It was not quite daylight when I got to the Marconi room. I saw two women there on Sunday. I heard some one try the door. I heard some one say "the place is filled up," but I think the party who applied was let in after.

To Mr. Blackwood—I am quite sure some one said "the room was filled up," or something similar to that. The door was opened about a minute after. I do not know who was on the door. I am not sure if the two women were in the room at the time. I was not called by any of the officials at the time the ship struck. I did not put on a life belt. I knew it was there; we had been talking about it during the night. Two life belts were there.

Alfred Thomas Hatchard, examined by Mr. Dunfield: I am 33 years of age. I am a native of Poole, England. I was gunner on the Florizel. I belonged to the British Royal Naval Reserve. I joined the Florizel Nov. 21, 1917. She carried two gunners. We had all daylight watches of four hours at the guns and also kept watches at night. My first night watch was 12 to 4 o'clock on the last voyage. I am 18 years going to sea. I was in the trawler section in 1916 and came to Portsmouth in Jan. 1917 and was sent to Halifax in June last year. I was yachting and sometimes steamboating prior to the war. I had the 1 to 2 o'clock lookout and the 3 to 4 lookout. I was standing by in the other two hours. When I came on watch it was blowing hard and snowing. She was making her usual course. She was not taking spray over the bow. I did not see any lights during my watch. There was something we thought was a light. I could see about a mile. It was not snowing about the time I supposed I saw a light. The second officer said he thought he saw the light. I told the captain I thought I saw a light, but as I did not see it the second time I thought I must have been mistaken. Both the second and I thought we saw the light. The reason I did not report it at first was because I thought it was imaginary. I observed the light about abeam. I heard the captain ask the mate if he saw a light. He also asked me and got the glasses and looked himself. I took it that the captain was making his usual enquiry. I did not catch the exact words the captain said. I don't remember seeing Mr. King with the glasses.

Patriotic Fund.

Adopts Resolutions on Death of Late J. S. Munn.

A meeting of the Trustees of the Patriotic Fund was held in the Board of Trade Rooms Wednesday afternoon, there being present Mr. John Browning, Acting Chairman; Hon. Dr. Lloyd, Prime Minister; Hon. Mr. Justice Kent, Hon. W. J. Ellis, J. Harvey and Mr. G. Winter, Mr. J. R. Bennett, Minister of Militia; Dr. V. P. Burke, M.B.E.; Messrs. C. P. Ayre, E. A. Bowring, A. Macpherson and W. S. Monroe, and Sir P. T. McGrath, Hon. Secretary. The latter, in the absence of the Chairman, Sir Edgar Bowring and the Vice-Chairman, Hon. Mr. P. Cashin, both out of the Colony at present, called the meeting to order and proposed that the chair be taken by Mr. John Browning, who has been acting as Chairman of the Executive Board for some time past, which motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Browning, on taking the Chair explained that the meeting had been called for the purpose of taking some fitting action in relation to the death of the late J. S. Munn, Honorary Treasurer, and stated that appropriate Resolutions would be submitted to the meeting for consideration. Hon. Dr. Lloyd then moved the following Resolutions: WHEREAS the late John Shannon Munn was, from the beginning of the war until his untimely death in the recent Florizel disaster, associated with this Board as Honorary Treasurer of the Patriotic Fund and as Honorary Treasurer of the Finance Committee;

AND WHEREAS his performance of his duties in these capacities was marked by unselfish devotion to the tasks he had thus undertaken, and by an administrative efficiency which won general recognition, as well as by wise and prudent counsel, sound judgment, and courteous recognition for all claimants, and unremitting attention to all calls on his time and energies;

AND WHEREAS his demise deprives the Board of one of its most capable and energetic members, to whose co-operation in its work for years to come it had looked forward with confidence;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that this Board hereby places on record its deep sense of appreciation of the admirable services rendered by the late Mr. Munn in the performance of the laborious, exacting, and highly responsible duties attaching to his office in connection with this Board, and its heartfelt sorrow at the untimely decease of one who was a foremost worker in the Colony's war effort;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that this Board tender its sincere sympathy to his relatives in their bereavement.

He prefaced this by a brief but apt address, in which he reviewed with much feeling the career of the late Mr. Munn who, when he (Dr. Lloyd) came to the Colony 25 years ago as a teacher in Bishop Field College, was one of the pupils there, being for a time in his class, and whose career he had followed both as a schoolboy, young man, and principal in the business community with the closest interest, and whose splendid qualities he extolled. He paid special tribute to the self-sacrificing labors of the late Mr. Munn as Honorary Treasurer of the Patriotic Fund and the Finance Committee, and felt that even now it would be dimly realized what a loss he would be both to philanthropic effort in the Colony and to its business interests as well.

Hon. Justice Kent, seconded the motion in another appropriate address in which he, too, spoke of the many admirable traits of the deceased gentleman, reviewed his excellent services in connection with the Colony's war endeavors since the opening of hostilities and spoke especially of the sympathetic and kindly spirit exhibited by the late Mr. Munn toward all whose circumstances required them to see him in the presentation of their cases for assistance or in regard to matters arising out of the expenditures under the Colony's auspices. The motion was then carried unanimously.

The Chairman next invited nominations for the position of Hon. Treasurer rendered vacant by Mr. Munn's tragic death, and intimated that his associate in the firm of Bowring Bros. Mr. E. A. Bowring, who had been acting as assistant to Mr. Munn, would be willing to assume the position, and he (the Chairman) thought that in view of the experience already gained by Mr. Bowring regarding the work, no better choice could be made; whereupon it was proposed by Hon. Justice Kent, seconded by Hon. Dr. Lloyd and carried unanimously, that Mr. E. A. Bowring be appointed Hon. Treasurer.

Vice-Chairman, Hon. M. P. Cashin, is frequently prevented by pressure of his official duties from attending the weekly meetings which deal with applications for assistance, rendering it necessary for some temporary Chairman to be appointed by the Executive Board from time to time, resented in a suggestion that the two unofficial members of the Board at present, Messrs. W. B. Grieve, O.B.E., and John Browning, be appointed Vice Chairman of the Fund, together with Hon. M. P. Cashin, and a motion to this effect proposed by Hon. W. J. Ellis and seconded by Hon. J. Harvey, was also carried by acclamation.

A vacancy on the Executive Board having been caused by Mr. Munn's demise, and the experience the past year or two having shown that owing to the absence of some of the members at various times it was desirable to have an additional nominee thereon, it was proposed by Mr. C. P. Ayre and seconded by Mr. A. Macpherson that Hon. M. G. Winter and Mr. W. S. Monroe be appointed thereto; which motion was unanimously adopted.

The fact that the Chairman, Sir Edgar Bowring, is absent from the Colony part of the year, and that the

They come in Black, White, Pearl Grey and Fawn. Cut to hug the vamp and fit the shoe perfectly.

Dutch Shipping.

The addition of one million tons of Dutch Shipping to the depleted carrying capacity of Great Britain and the United States will be a valuable acquisition to the Commerce of those nations, and incidentally will be of much benefit to their allies. The effect of this volume of shipping for freighting purposes will be immediately felt and will undoubtedly prove of incalculable service. The ravages of the submarines have been, perhaps, more costly than represented, and even when the figures which are permitted for public consumption have been considered, the losses caused by the operations of enemy underwater boats have been colossal. That the destruction of allied ships has constituted a grave difficulty and opened the eyes of many who were at first inclined to pool pooh the idea of bringing Britain to her knees, is now accepted. The daily destruction of tonnage since the opening of the unrestricted U boat campaign has in the total amounted to enormous figures and notwithstanding the speeding up of shipbuilding the drain has not yet been met. Nor can it. A ship a day would not make good the loss. But on this point the assurance comes from the best of authority that the peril has been held. Even so it has not altogether passed, consequently there is little wonder that Great Britain in conjunction with the United States has at length commandered all Dutch shipping lying in the ports of both nations. It is not certain that Great Britain would have done this of her own initiative, but with the United States in entire accord, she could do no less. Perhaps in the earlier days of the war if more drastic measures had been adopted toward small countries which were running with the hare and holding with the hounds, another phase would have been entered upon, for it is now history that the Imperial Government allowed itself to be bluffed by every little insignificant neutral in Europe, and Holland was no exception. Neither hostile nor friendly to the Allies she undoubtedly made good to Germany and with her aid the Hun was able to forestall, and, in some cases, checkmate many of the allied moves. At the present juncture Holland friendly or Holland hostile is an advantage, either way. Much talk has been made in the Dutch parliament of this action in taking over Dutch shipping, and it is to be expected that the Holland pro-German will now be in his element. Yesterday's dispatches indicate the trend of the speeches made, and should Holland now make up her mind to take sides it will matter little to the Allies on which side of the fence she drops. Naturally we would rather have her with us, but in any case she is between the upper and the nether millstones and her attitude may make no little difference ultimately. Should she throw in her lot with the Central Powers, her unprotected coast line will be subjected to the attacks of the British fleet. On the other hand should she decide to come in with the Entente, her borders will be invaded by Germany. In any case the Dutch are in a peculiar position and whichever way they drop the Allies will have the advantage.

The Ships Are in the Fat

In relation to the sealing voyage The town felt in the blues But since Eric got from Bishop All the latest sealing news. Eyes are bright and cheeks are glowing. And each heart goes "pit-a-pat." There's a message from the flag That the ships are in the fat. You may talk of games of hockey. And of plays and nickels, too. But the news that came last evening It puts life in me and you; Changing names of streets and gables, It shows that the ships are in the fat. For we're glad to know for certain That the ships are in the fat. It seems that our hardy sealers Will spend little time in "bunks." For the "swives" as thick as burgeo And the slaughter "in the punks." And they tell me up at Bowring's That the men use "gun and hat." And the slaughter "in the punks." Since the ships are in the fat. Now St. John's is getting busy. For each skinner draws his "blade," And the sparks from steels are flying. For they soon shall ply their trade Peeling "pelts" upon the South Side From the "harp" the "hood" and "cat." And the country is delighted Since the ships are in the fat. March 22, 1918. JAMES MURPHY.

Babykin Talcum is the special Nursery Talcum prepared by Lassell's. It has all the good qualities of Masscuta and Field Violets, but is specially adapted for babies and young children. Price 25c.

Shorthand Successes.

By a late mail from England the following young ladies, members of the Sloan-Duployan Shorthand Society, and pupils of the Presentation Convent, Cathedral Square, received diplomas from the Headquarters of the Association, Ramsgate, England: Speed Certificates—Misses Olive Hayward, and Mary O'Brien. Reporting Diplomas—Misses Doris Rennie, Violet Tavernor, Gertrude Oliphant, Bride Savage, Margaret Shortall, Alice Dunn, Kathryn Thistle, Alice Kelly, Mary Knight, Kathleen O'Donnell, Lizzie Dobbin, Hannah Wayte, Rita Power. Learner's Diplomas—Misses Vera O'Dwyer, Nellie Netton, Jean Hayward, Jean Wright, Elsie Wylie, Genevieve James, Bessie Holland, Mollie Lawlor, Rose Edstrom, Annie Moore, Master Jack Carey also obtained a Learner's Diploma. Since the pupils of this Convent joined the Sloan-Duployan Shorthand Society last year they have been very successful—in the June competition Miss Lizzie Dobbin secured a silver medal for Accuracy and in the December examination the Silver Medal for Accuracy was won by Miss Madeline Lawlor.

COMMERCIAL HOCKEY.—At 10.15 at the Prince's Rink last night a game of hockey was played between a team of employees of the Royal Stores and the junior office hands of the R.N.C. The game which was fast and interesting resulted in a win for the R.N.C. by a score of three goals to two.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES GARTERS IN COWS.

Council Meeting.

The claim of Messrs. Kent and O'Brien in connection with contract for hauling stone was finally disposed of.
The Colonial Secretary wrote that financial matters affecting the Government and Council as set forth in the Council's letter of the 13th inst., would be brought before the Executive. He also acknowledged receipt of the Council's estimates of expenditure and income for 1918 also a balance sheet for 1917.
On conditions that certain rates are agreed to, Bowring Bros., Ltd., will receive a water supply to their seal factory on the Southside.
The matter of the petition of residents who reside on the eastern section of the LeMarchant Road between Hamilton Street and St. Clare's Home, protesting against the re-naming of that section as Patrick Street, was again dealt with. The petitioners claim that under the Consolidated Statutes of 1872 permission was given to open up a street running from Freshwater Road to the Gas Works fire break and to be called the LeMarchant Road. Mr. P. A. Morris, solicitor of the Council, when holding that office, pointed out that the Act of 1872 was repealed by act of the Legislature in 1902 which defined the LeMarchant as running from Freshwater Road in a straight line to Hamilton Avenue. The final map of the LeMarchant as named of Patrick Street was confirmed by the Council.

We understand the regular confirmation service will be held at Easter.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.—We understand a number of residents residing on that section of the LeMarchant Road between St. Clare's Home and Hamilton Street, which has been changed by the Municipal Council to Patrick's Street, have refused to acknowledge the same and will not accept the Council's tax bills bearing the address of Patrick Street. They claim that the accepting of the Council's tax bill is an acknowledgment of the change of name from LeMarchant Road to Patrick Street. The question now is in which street do they live on.

SAVE the BARLEY BABIES

1's Tins.      2's Tins.

FOR INFANTS, NURSING MOTHERS AND INVALIDS.

It has all the strength and vitamins of the whole grain. Vitamins are the life-giving elements which are largely in the bran. A human being cannot live without vitamins. If we bolted Brooks' Barley it would be finer, but the wonderful life-giving elements would be largely lost. In countless comparative tests physicians have found that babies build much better on Brooks' Baby Barley than on any other barley or infant food.

Brooks' Baby Barley used as a thickener for soups and white sauces has none of the pasty taste of ordinary flour. It is delicate in flavor, easily digested and very nourishing. If you would have the best possible results use "Brooks' Baby Barley."

Another Newfoundland-lander Honored.

Rev. Edward Galway Appointed Rector of St. James' Catholic Church, McMechen, Va.

The subject of the appended article which is taken from the Wheeling Register, (March 2), is a native of St. John's, being a son of Mr. D. Galway, so well known in this city, and is another evidence of the recognition of Newfoundlanders in other lands.

Rev. Edward Galway, recently appointed rector of St. James' Catholic Church, McMechen, was tendered a reception last evening by the members of the congregation at St. James' hall on Garfield street. The affair was arranged as a surprise, as a welcome to the new pastor, by the ladies of the church, and a large assemblage gathered to greet the honored guest.

Members of the church committee called at the rectory and escorted Father Galway to the reception hall, where he was received and given a most hearty welcome. Father Galway gave a short talk, thanking the members of the congregation and the citizens of McMechen for their hearty welcome and the many courtesies extended him in coming into their midst.

In speaking of his leaving St. Joseph's Cathedral, the reverend speaker said the separation was not so easy, after nineteen years where he had formed many associations and friends, but with it all he never felt he was going among strangers; that he knew a great many of the people and that he was going among friends.

He recalled that he offered mass here 18 years ago, when St. James' parish was but in its infancy, and that he was proud to be welcomed back, this time as its pastor. He expressed his appreciation and that he was greatly pleased with his new surroundings. At the conclusion of his talk he was greeted with a warm and hearty welcome.

The committee in charge were: Mesdames J. Finnegan, George Patrick, Dan Greshner, Geo. Burkett, Jas. Mitchell, Charles Moore, John O'Brien, Joseph Kerns, Peter McKee; Misses Margaret Connors, Clara Havelley, and Ella Donivan, assisted by Messrs. Martin Connors, John O'Brien, Richard Lowe, Edward O'Malley, Jas. Finnegan, George Patrick, D. E. Greshner, Charles Welch, Charles Bowman, Charles Coffman, Henry Kordie, John Kordie and Sam Maibod.

Demonstrated New Life-Saving Device.

Inventor Demonstrates S.O.S. Suit Before Officials at Halifax.

Halifax, N.S., March 12.—Before several hundred persons who stood shivering on McFatridge's wharf, the Furness pier, and nearby places of vantage, J. E. Lepage yesterday afternoon demonstrated his new life-saving device, the S.O.S., a one-piece garment made of waterproof material. Mr. Lepage remained in the water over twenty minutes, and although the temperature of the water was 34 degrees, he was feeling quite comfortable and warm when he removed his suit on board the tug.

Among those who witnessed the demonstration were: Deputy Mayor Colwell, Controller Murphy, Alderman Gillis, Captain Rudolph, Harbor Master; Major A. R. Brennan, Lieut. V. Morris, Dr. P. A. MacDonald and S. A. Clarke, of Ottawa.

Mr. Lepage removed his fur coat, and according to those who timed him, it took him exactly fifty-one seconds to put on his S.O.S. suit, adjust the head gear and prepare for the water. Having done this, he then jumped into the harbor from the stern of the tug. After being in the water a few minutes, Mr. Lepage made several attempts to put his head below the surface, but on each occasion was not successful owing to the buoyancy of the kapok, with which the suit is lined. He then floundered around and appeared to be quite at home in his S.O.S. suit.

Being Governed By Signs.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Yesterday I caught myself doing a queer thing. I was trying to get a letter (which I had left out) in to just the right place in a page of typewritten copy, and I was saying to myself, as I struck the key, "Now, if this goes in the right space that will prove that a certain thing I have made up my mind to do will come out all right." What nonsense! And what very common human nonsense! I spoke of it before a group of people, last night, and four out of five laughed in the understanding way that says "I've been there, too."

It would be right to go, if she caught the train.

One of them told of a recent experience. She had been debating whether she had a right to leave a sick child to accompany her husband on a much looked forward to outing. The child had the best of care, and it seemed the thing to do. So she decided to go, but all the time (I know mothers will understand) she could feel a terrible pull at her heart-strings. She had to drive some distance to the station, and there was some question about making the train. "If I miss the train," she said "it will mean I wasn't meant to go. And if I get it, it will mean it was right for me." And she felt comforted!

In one of Margaret Deland's books, the heroine has been urged into an unhappy marriage by the man she does not love. He knows she wants her freedom, and knows that he should give it to her. But so far as lies in such a man, he loves her very dearly; and the struggle between the better self which she has awakened in him and which bids him free her, and the old selfish self which wants to keep her whether or no, is terrific. Finally, he comes home one night and, finding her sitting in the dark, flings out of the room in a rage saying, "Why didn't you light the lights?" His rage was not because she did not light the lights, but because he had promised himself that if he found her sitting in the dark, he would offer her her freedom. (And he did.) Presumptuous and Cowardly. I suppose leaving such things to chance is a peeping through of the old conception of the fates. But when you stop to think of it, it's rather presumptuous to expect Omnipotence to talk with us through foolish little signs like that. Isn't it a sort of cowardice, not to make up ones mind to do whatever ones conscience and reason dictates and then do it without waiting for any such shove? Of one thing I am sure: that it is a bad thing to let oneself get into this habit of indecision, for it is next door to a disease.

Your Boys and Girls.

There is a large class of parents who are positively brutal with their little ones. Instead of using reason with a child, instead of being self-controlled and patient, they plant dread in the plastic mind and, though they may not know it, these nervous shocks in early life account for many a mental wreck in later years. A child quickly comes to understand reason, if reason is applied. He is keenly receptive to truths and to the right way of doing things. He deserves to have mysteries explained to him and he is entitled to legitimate reasons when he is told he must not do certain things. It is unfair to insist that he must not do certain things solely because the parent tells him not to.

Our Daily Story.

SEEING IS BELIEVING. Grisley Clammer started to his feet, his face so full of apprehension that there was barely room for his features.

"Help!" he cried. "My picket has been poked! The man that was sitting next to me—where is he?" He was gone!

"But he must be in the train somewhere—it hasn't made a stop yet!" exclaimed Clammer. "Only I haven't the slightest idea what he looked like. Did anyone notice him particularly?" "I'd know him again in a second," spoke up an excited little man with all his bottom buttons gone. "He was a very tall, stout man with a gold tooth and a nose shaped something like a radish."

"I paid particular attention to him—I could pick him out among a thousand," said a tall man with eight pencils sticking out of his vest pocket. "He was short and slender, with a mole on his neck just behind his collar button."

Milady's Boudoir.

WELL GROOMED NAILS. Nothing adds more to the beauty of the hands than well kept nails. While it is almost impossible to improve the shape of the hand itself, much can be done with the expenditure of a very little time and trouble, to improve the shape of the finger nails. No matter how rough your work, your hands and nails can be kept in good condition. With a little study and practice you can care for them yourself as well, and almost as quickly, as a professional manicurist. Your manicuring outfit should include a sharp pair of scissors, an ivory cuticle knife, a bundle of orange wood sticks, a bundle of emery boards and a little polishing powder. Before attempting to treat the nails, soak the fingers in a little warm, soapy water. This is to soften the cuticle and make it more pliable. Next cut the nails, if that is necessary, following the shape of each finger tip so that the top of the nail and the end of the finger may be an even line. Long and pointed nails are in very bad taste and should not be sought for. When the cutting has been done, take an orange stick and pass it gently under the skin at the base of each nail, raising it carefully so as to thoroughly loosen it. Great care must be taken not to bruise the skin in any way. When the cuticle has been thoroughly loosened, press the skin back with the ivory nail trimmer until the half moon is visible at the base of each nail. Next comes the removal of any stains. To get these out rub the nails lightly with a piece of lemon. Should any small pieces of skin adhere to the nail, dip the orange stick in lemon juice and rub them. Lastly comes the polishing. For this smear a little powder over the nails and rub with a piece of chamolis.

CONSERVING HENS.

They've handed down a stern decree, the conservation boosters; that hens immune from death must be, though we may shoot the roosters. S a y s Hoover and his merry men, whose ukase must be heeded, "It is a sin to kill a hen, when eggs are good beneath one's belt, the textbooks all determine, and when they're stale they'll do to peck the peace fan and pro-German. We'll put the 'Tentons in a box, and buy our men more bullets, if we kill off the crowing cocks, and spare the cackling pullets." And now, in every butcher's store, from Waterloo to Wooster, the helpful hen is seen no more, but there's a stack of rooster. Oh, lead the roosters to the block, for rooster meat is corking, the Leghorn and the Plymouth Rock, the Brahms and the Dorking! Oh, give the roosters chloroform—too ancient for behoarding; and eat them cold and eat them warm, their feathers use for bedding. I bake, upon the kitchen fire, a fowl of proper gender; I also cook a rubber tire, which is a bit more tender. I chew the rubber tire a while, and then I chew the rooster, and say, "I've Hoover skinned a mile, as conservation booster!"

Fads and Fashions.

Black tulle over silver cloth makes a pretty evening dress. Covert colored cape suits have fronts filled in with lacy jabots. The hem of your handkerchief can be embroidered in coin dots. Some of the new hats have brims that roll under instead of over. Spangles outline the seams of some of the soft evening gowns. Soft ties of bright colors are frequently worn with the serge dress. Figured lawn makes the prettiest summer dresses for the small girl. Double-faced satin in pastel shades will be used for evening wraps. Pretty undersleeves of lace or silk peep out from under the cloth sleeve. Charming chapeaux are of soft satin twisted into bows bordered with colored straw. Sashes of colored broadened tissue are fashioned in one with the bodices of evening gowns. Have your smock made of organdy. It will be pretty worn with a plain linen or cotton skirt. Many layers of different colored chiffon are used in making the bodice of a very pretty evening dress. Scallop the child's dress around the bottom and bind the edges of the waist with color matching the scallop. Tucked and shirred vests are worn by small girls when the serge dress seems to need a touch of lightness. In spite of all that is said about narrow skirts it looks as if they would be of comfortable, but not extreme, slimness. A pretty dress for the little girl is made with skirt of blue chambray and waist of dotted percale, the dots matching the blue-of the chambray.

Dover and other towns on the east coast of England. The doors and windows of the houses at Dover, for instance, were continuously shaking by the heavy concussions. The firing which was the heaviest that has been heard in this district from such a distance, began at three o'clock this morning and lasted at brief intervals until 7 a.m.

FIERCE GERMAN ATTACK.

LONDON, March 21.
The German attack against the British lines to-day was on a larger scale than any made thus far during the war on any part of the West front, Andrew Bonar Law, spokesman for the government, told the Commons. Our outpost troops, he added, have been withdrawn on one part of the line, which was lightly held.

BRITISH LINES PENETRATED.

LONDON, March 21.
By employing masses of troops,
supported by great weight of artillery,
the Germans appear to have penetrated the British front line at certain points between the Scarpe and Ven-adulle, says Reuter's correspondent at the British headquarters, telegraphing
this evening from the British army headquarters in France. The Germans to-day launched a heavy attack on a wide front in and near the Cambrai sector. This assault bears all the car marks of being the beginning of the enemy's grand offensive.
Fighting is proceeding from a point to the northward of Lagnicourt sur-ward along a curved line to Souchez Wood just below Gouzeaucourt. The German forces advanced behind a smoke barrage along the ridge running northward from Gouzeaucourt and Gaucho Wood. The German attack in this region wasn't unexpected.
This line is about 16 miles in length.
The Germans launched the first assault on the ridge land running north from Gaucho Wood. This ridge extends about three miles to the northeast, and ends near the southern end of the village of Gonnelleu. The attack was apparently directed at the angle formed with the former British line by the new British lines as they were established after the sudden offensive led by General Byng on Nov.
22nd, 1917. The fighting extends around the arc of the circle into which the British lines were pushed after the German counter offensive and continues for a distance of about four miles to the northwest of Woe-uvre, the northern limit of Byng's offensive. The Germans have employed gas shells freely, and a constant stream of high velocity shells have broken with frightful concussion far back of the British lines. The bombardment began in earnest at 5 o'clock this a.m., and about five hours later the enemy forces hurled themselves on the British front line trenches north of Lagnicourt and Louveral, the latter place lying west of Bourisies. At the same time other German forces advanced behind a smoke barrage along the ridge running north from Gouzeaucourt. It may be said that the attack in this region was by no means unexpected by the British, in that they had made great preparations to meet the un-sleight.

Newfoundlanders!
Take Notice.

A conference was recently held between representatives of the Governments of Canada and the United States with respect to bringing about a material increase during the ensuing year in the output of the North Atlantic Fisheries, at which time the fact that the crews of the United States fishing vessels are recruited, to a large extent, from the maritime provinces of Canada, was taken into consideration.

On May 1st, 1917, a new United States Immigration Law went into effect which prohibited the entry into the United States of non-citizens who are over sixteen years of age and unable to read, besides there are other features of the law which made it unlawful for fishermen to enter for the purpose of joining vessels in the ports of that country for which they had been engaged.

With a view to overcoming these phases of the law, bona fide fishermen who seek entry into the United States in pursuit of their calling, will,
for the time being, be considered as seamen and regarded as exempt from the operation of the literacy features of the Immigration Law, and will be admitted provided they are in possession of good health and character.

United States Immigration officers at Halifax and Yarmouth, N.S., and St. John, N.B., have been given appropriate instructions by the Government officials in Washington, and they are prepared to take care of all fishermen of the class mentioned, who apply for entry into the United States.

All fishermen who contemplate taking advantage of the opportunity offered, should provide themselves with three unmounted, unfinished photographs, measuring 2 1/2 x 3 1/2, and call at one of the offices mentioned prepared to pay the head tax of eight dollars, this amount to be refunded upon compliance with certain conditions which will be made known to them by the United States Immigration officers.

Fishermen who attempt to enter
the United States for the purpose of joining vessels therein, without complying with these regulations are
quite sure to experience delay, as it
will be necessary for the border officers to return them to one of the points mentioned.

During the past season it became necessary for the United States Immigration officers to refuse admission to many fishermen because of the Immigration Law, and the foregoing presents to the natives of our maritime provinces who have been accustomed for a number of years to enter
the United States for the purpose of engaging in the fishing industry, a happy solution of the difficulty.

Fishermen who attempt to enter
the United States for the purpose of
joining vessels therein, without com-
plying with these regulations are
quite sure to experience delay, as it
will be necessary for the border officers to return them to one of the
points mentioned.

A Minister's Evidence.

That Piles or Hemorrhoids, can be Quickly Cured—Justified of the Peace Cured Many Years Ago.

There has come to use recently these two letters from prominent men who bear unquestionable testimony in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment as a prompt and lasting cure for piles.
These men give their evidence freely because they know what it means to suffer from the tortures of piles and then be cured. They feel it a duty and a pleasure to let others know how they, too, may be cured.

Rev. Frank N. Brown, Methodist Minister, Priceville, Ont., writes: "In the winter of 1912 I was stationed in Cobalt. I went for a snowshoe tramp one day, and sat for only a few minutes on a cold stump waiting for some comrades to catch up to me. From sitting on the damp stump I contracted piles, and suffered so severely that it caused me great pain to walk.
A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I immediately purchased a small box, which very rapidly effected a cure. I always keep a box on hand and find it excellent for any kind of wound or sore."

M.C.L.I.

The subject debated last evening at the M. C. L. I. was "should clergymen take an active part in politics." The affirmative was led by Mr. W. Drover, assisted by Messrs. T. Soper and R.
Hearder. The affirmative started by defining politics as the science of government which has to do with the regulation and government of a nation or state. The question they contended was of such a broad nature that a clergyman could not even take part in advocating laws, relating to social moral reforms without taking part in politics; that it was essential for him, if he were to work with best interests to all, to be active in politics. The negative which was led by Rev. L. G. Hudson, supported by Messrs
W. Clarke and Wm. White, contended that a clergyman's business was preaching the Gospel. If clergymen were to take an active part in politics, he would always be working against some section of his parishioners. The debate was a very interesting one, the following taking part in the general discussion:—Messrs. F. G.
Bradley, S. Woods, A. E. Hayward,
C. C. Pratt, G. P. Jones, C. Bowden, B.
Edgecombe, Sam. R. Penney, H.
Wyatt. Rev. J. H. G. Way presided, and at the close addressed those present. The debate was won by the negatives. The subject of debate next week will be "What Newfoundland as an independent Dominion can offer to its present and future citizens opportunities for advancement equal to those of the neighboring Dominion."

on February 24, 1914. After many roundabout travellings it reached Pet-

there to Boston took but a short time, compared with the other routes, and the post mark of that city is dated February 11, 1918. Nine days after wards it reached St. John's, having been three and one quarter years on the way from its original post town.
It was opened by the censor en route
but otherwise reached the addressee in good condition. This is certainly a record.

GREAT BATTLE

Now in Progress.

May Have Decisive Results British Everywhere Prepared.

SUMMARY OF OPERATIONS.

Exactly twenty-five months after the Germans began the historic battle of Verdun, the thunder of their guns deepened into a tempest of fire along the British front in Northern France, and they began what may be the greatest battle of the war; a struggle which may lead to assaults which will shape the destinies of millions of peoples over the coming centuries. The attacks were made on a scale hitherto unknown during this war of major offensives; it was over a front of 50 miles. Official reports are very brief but correspondents at the scene tell of the terrific storm of artillery fire which burst over the lines held by Field Marshal Haig's men. The bombardment began at 5 o'clock Thursday morning, just before the early spring dawn was breaking over Eastern France. Shells of large and small calibre were rained upon the lines held by the British for about five hours, and then the German infantry stormed out to make the first assault. The Germans, favored by the wind, moved forward under cover of a pall of smoke, which hid the assaulting columns from the eyes of the British holding the lines. Describing the battle, Andrew Bonar Law informed the House of Commons that lightly held portions of the British line had been withdrawn, but said that there was no need for alarm on the part of the country. An Associated Press correspondent at the British front reports that the attack there had been expected and that great preparations had been made to meet it. The brief official report says the Germans penetrated into some British positions. Nor were the German efforts concentrated upon the front held by the British, for early Thursday morning they assaulted the French line near the village of Ornes, at the northeast of Verdun, and claim to have penetrated a considerable distance. Near Rheims the French were also subjected to an assault, but here the artillery bore the burden of the fighting. These attacks at Verdun and Rheims, however, may be considered for the time being as mere diversions to the principal attack, which has been loosed against the British. They would serve to keep the French forces at Verdun and Rheims from being transferred to the British sector if that part of the battle line should show any signs of bending back. Nothing has been expected to show that the Germans would make an assault on the American held trenches in the Lorraine and Toul sectors. Acting on the theory that troops which hadn't had experience in engagements of the first degree might be found to yield easier than the French, the Germans have called on the Austrians for assistance in their effort to carry the battle to all Entente Allies, for official reports from Berlin say, for Austria-Hungarians are engaged all along the Western Front, and it is probable that the great Austrian howitzers of Skodas have been used against the strongest sectors of the British lines. French official reports state that the Germans have been sanguinarily repulsed in a number of engagements, notably on the Verdun and Lorraine fronts. The city of Kherzon, 82 miles northeast of Odessa, has been captured by the Teutonic forces. This is an important commercial town and possesses a fine harbor. Two German destroyers and two torpedo boats are believed to have been destroyed in the naval battle off Dunkirk. The Germans came out from one of their bases in Belgium and commenced to attack the city of Dunkirk. French and British torpedo boats trapped the enemy warships and visited sound punishment upon them. One British boat was damaged in the fight. Ostend was bombarded by the British monitors on Thursday, and British seaplanes dropped shells on Heligoland. The British Embassy at Washington has announced that since the beginning of the war 11,057,572 tons of British shipping has been destroyed, and during the year 1917, $230,025 tons, or over half the total loss during the conflict was destroyed. American forces engaged in a raid east of Lunenburg, at one point fought hand to hand with the enemy. A brief artillery fire preceded the raid which was carried out in conjunction with the French. Reports from Amsterdam say that semi-official negotiations for peace are on foot between Germany and the Entente, and that Germany has evinced a strong intention for peace. This report doesn't coincide with the reported telegram from Emperor William to Schleswig Holstein Provisional Council in which he said the prize of victory must not and will not fall us. There can be no peace but one which corresponds with German interests. Reports from Buenos Aires are to the effect that the S. S. Amazon, a liner of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. has been sunk by a submarine, but it is said that all aboard were saved.

GENERAL HAIG'S REPORT.

LONDON, To-day. Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters, France, describes the German offensive as comprising an intensive bombardment by artillery and powerful attacks on a front of 50 miles. Some British positions were penetrated, but the German losses are declared to have been exceptionally heavy. On no part of this long front of attack did the Germans attain their objective. The text of the statement reads: At about 5 o'clock this morning after an intense bombardment of both high explosive and gas shells on our forward positions and back areas, a powerful infantry attack was launched by the enemy on a front of 50 miles, extending from the Oise, in the neighborhood of Laferre, to the Gansee River, about Croisilles. A hostile artillery demonstration has taken place on a wide front north of Labasse Canal and in the Ypres sector. The attack, which for some time past was known to be in course of preparation, has been pressed with great vigor and determination. Throughout the day in course of the fighting the enemy broke through our outmost positions and succeeded in penetrating into our battle positions. In certain parts of the front the attacks were delivered in large masses and have been exceptionally heavy. Severe fighting continues along the whole front and large numbers of hostile reinforcements troops have been identified, including units of the Guards. Captured enemy maps, depicting the enemy's intentions, show that on no part of the long front of his attack has he attained his objective.

BRITISH WERE PREPARED.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE.—The two vast forces have been locked in a bitter struggle over a wide front for hours. The bombardment was of most terrific nature and finally enemy infantry drove forward against numerous points on the Cambrai sector. The preliminary bombardment had extended from a point below St. Quentin, north to the River of Scarpe, and at last reports sanguinary fighting was in progress as far south as the region of Hargicourt, and as far north as Bullecourt. Early stages of work seem to indicate that the enemy was trying to drive a wedge on both sides of the Cambrai Salient, south of the Salient near Hargicourt and Renssay. The British had been looking for this attack to-day. Not only have prisoners declared that yesterday or to-day would mark the beginning of the offensive on this front, but abundant signs of enemy smash against this sector, which was the scene of the last great battle in the British theatre, prove that the Germans were as thoroughly prepared as possible and in consequence the British had taken steps to meet the blow.

MONITORS BOMBARD OSTEND.

LONDON, To-day. An Admiralty statement says: Ostend was bombarded this afternoon by our monitors with successful results, and prior to the bombardment four enemy aircraft were destroyed by our naval air squadron. The enemy aircraft attacking the British machines while spotted for the bombardment with the result that another enemy machine was destroyed. British seaplanes engaged in recent reconnaissance in Heligoland light attacked enemy mine sweepers with machine gun fire. There were no casualties on the British side and all our machines returned safely.

LONDON PHEGMATIC.

LONDON, To-day. Although the battle is being the greatest struggle of modern history and may, perhaps, settle the result of the war, the English people preserve the same quiet calm, they have worn for four years. There are no signs of unusual excitement or nervousness in London, and no crowds outside the newspaper offices or elsewhere. The statement made by Bonar Law in the Commons was circulated in hotels and other public places, and that is the last news the majority of the people will have of the greatest struggle, before they see the morning papers. Law's words have carried much assurance, as the Germans had talked so freely about their great offensive, that many people thought they were making a feint to conceal some other policy, and some looked for a campaign against Salonika instead of a big attack in France. Reports have been circulated that the Germans have built a large number of tanks and support tanks, but the British who first launched this weapon are not likely to be stopped by those, nor is it conceivable that they will be behind in numbers or improvements. Extensive preparations have been made by English hospitals to receive the trains of wounded from Channel ports which follow every battle. The first of them is expected to-morrow.

NO CAUSE FOR ANXIETY.

Bonar Law said in the Commons that this attack was expected, and there was nothing in the nature of a surprise about the attack. Bonar Law reminded the House that he had given warning a week ago, that if such an attack occurred, the attacking party would gain a certain amount of ground, and the Government's information so far didn't lead to believe that anything beyond that had happened. I am sure, with the knowledge beforehand of what has happened in like attacks on either side, continued Bonar Law, that the House and country will not be unnecessarily alarmed by information of that kind. Our staff and the Versailles Council naturally have been considering what might happen in the event of an attack, and I may tell the House that this attack has been launched on every part of our line, which we were informed would be attacked, if an attack were undertaken at all. I might say that only three days ago we received information in the Cabinet from headquarters in France that they had definitely arrived at a decision that an attack would be launched immediately, and as they were prepared to meet the country need have no cause for anxiety.

ASTRAY AGAIN.

AMSTERDAM, To-day. Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has telegraphed to the Posen Provincial Council as follows: God willing, we will also overcome the enemy in the west and clear the way to a general peace.

ENEMY'S PURPOSE CHECKED.

LONDON, To-day. Reuter's telegraphing this evening says: Our counter measures have not yet been developed and the correspondent adds, therefore, it is difficult to define our position but apparently the enemy's purpose has been to launch converging attacks on two flanks of the Lesquiers Salient in the hope of cutting it off. There are unconfirmed rumors that the enemy has employed tanks.

IN THE EAST.

LONDON, To-day. There has been great activity by aerial forces operating on the Macedonian front, according to an official report from Saloniki. The report says our airplanes dropped bombs on the stations at Augusta and Porna and near the latter place a train was attacked by machine gunfire from a low altitude and the engine was seen to jump off and the train was derailed. Subsequently it was bombed. Another airplane directed machine gun fire from an altitude of three hundred feet against a Bulgarian company of soldiers billeted in Berea. A hostile machine which was shot down fell into Lake Dorian.

STAKING THEIR ALL.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS.—It is too early yet to predict the outcome of the first few hours of the struggle in which vast forces and every conceivable engine probably is employed. On general principles, however, it may be stated that the great concentration of the attacking forces will probably result in our defensive line being pushed back in places but this would merely be history repeating itself. This much is certain, that at no period has the British war machine been in such perfect condition and never before has there been a higher morale or greater optimism among the British troops. The general impression on the front is in agreement with that of the Germans, that this is the decisive contest of the war, but on the British side there is no doubt that the declaration will eventually be in the Allies favor. Germany is staking everything on this play, and if in this great attack fails to break her way through, it is believed Germany will be finished, for they have nothing further to offer, except a gradually weakening defence. The bombardment to-day was one of the most intense seen along this front, for, as has been generally expected, the Germans depended on short, heavy artillery work to carry their troops forward, and large quantities of gas were used at various places and extraordinarily high velocity shells have been whizzing across the back areas since daybreak. The Germans had made a great concentration of guns for this attack and every one of them was brought into play at the outbreak. It was reported that one German tank was seen in action, but this is not verified, although it would cause no surprise if true. The sky was heavily overcast all day, rendering aerial observation difficult.

William Dooley, arrested on Wednesday of this week and who was yesterday charged with manslaughter appeared in court this morning at 10.55. On motion of his Counsel Mr. W. J. Higgins, His Honor Judge Morris conceded to Mr. Higgins request for bail and fixed the amount at $10,000, $5,000 for the accused and two sureties for the amount of $2,500 each. Immediately the proceedings opened, exception was taken by Counsel to an article which appeared in yesterday's Telegram relative to this case. It was pointed out that the article referred to was incorrect and would create a bad influence on the public who would read the article referred to. His Honor thought that some restitution should be made by the representative of the paper if present. At the conclusion of proceedings Mr. Higgins informed His Honor that Mr. Gardner, the representative of that paper was in court and was not in any way responsible for the paragraph referred to.

Llewellyn Club.

There was a large attendance at last night's meeting of the Llewellyn Club. Dr. Jones presided and introduced Mr. W. H. Jones, who was the speaker for the evening. Mr. Jones took for his subject a "Resume of 33 years work in connection with soldiers' homes." He spoke of the various places in which he had worked, viz. Litchfield, Salisbury Plains, Giralda, Sharnass, Gravesend, Chatham and St. John's, Nfld. In connection with the work he had done, he spoke of the leading men of those countries and his personal acquaintance with them. He spoke of the interesting anecdotes which he had heard. He spoke of his work in connection with the survivors of H. M. S. "Magenta" and "Magnificent" at Gibraltar, both of which came to grief in the Mediterranean. He then dealt with the Newfoundland disaster and the various wrecks including the latest, the Florizel. The lecture was very interesting and thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. At the conclusion a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. W. H. Jones for his interesting lecture.

OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. J. P. Powell, Genl. Superintendent, Reid Nfld. Co., City.

Dear Sir,—The Executive of the N. I. W. A. has heard the report of the deputation appointed by the Association to discuss with you the question of increased wages for our members employed by the Reid Nfld. Co. We gather from the report that you are unable to say when your Company will be prepared to begin discussion of this matter, or even to promise that any increase will be given. This is, to say the least, very unsatisfactory.

The impression has got abroad that the Company is trying to gain time in order to spread dissension in our ranks. Color is given this idea by the report we have received that your Assistant has been discussing matters with our members on the railway in a manner calculated to set one class of employees against another.

We recognize the difficulties in the way of a complete and full adjustment of all the demands made by the employees. We ask you to tell us definitely when you will be ready to discuss them. In the meantime, cannot you make some modus vivendi for the present, and give all our members employed in the service a flat or percentage increase at once to tide them over until matters are finally adjusted?

Your Company has increased the rates since August 1914, in some cases over five hundred per cent, in nearly all cases considerably more than they were when the war began. Yet some employees have received increases as low as six per cent, and some, we are informed, have received absolutely nothing in the way of increase.

We contend that the services of your employees are just as valuable to-day as they were in 1914. Why, then, should they be paid for at a less rate of value? It is useless to say that more money is paid for them. The most ignorant has learned by bitter experience that the money standard is a false one by which to estimate value. Our dollars are of little more worth to us than francs and quarters were before the war.

Pending the discussion, some arrangement must be arrived at. We wish to be fair and equitable. The Manager of the Ropewalk trusts to express himself to our deputation, writing under date March 7th: "Please allow me to say I am very glad to have had the opportunity of meeting you and that I fully appreciate the good sense and fairness displayed by you at our interview."

If we would continue to deserve this certificate of fairness, we must be fair and just to our fellow-members, and in order to do so we must insist that we receive a definite promise that all increases, when made, shall be paid as from the first February.

Justice shall be done, though the heavens fall, and the Association will see it done, and will take every lawful means to attain its object. If you oblige us to resort to a strike we are not afraid to use the weapon, but would much prefer that the matter be amicably adjusted. Kindly let us know before Friday night's meeting.

Yours truly,
W. J. NAUFFETS,
Secretary.

March 13, 1918.

(Copy)
Mr. W. J. Nauffets,
Rec. Sec'y N. I. W. A. City.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 13th, it is quite true that I am not yet able to say just when we shall be in a position to discuss your proposals. It is a comparatively simple matter for a business like the Ropewalk, which is practically all under one roof and is making money, to take up a question of this kind and deal with it promptly but it is a very different proposition in the case of a concern with an immense body of workmen, scattered all over the country, doing different classes of work, and living under varying conditions, especially when that concern is actually losing money year after year.

There is no basis for the impression that we are delaying discussion of the matter in order to spread dissension in your ranks.

We are trying, and have all along been trying, to get the data upon which we can base a fair and just revision of wages, and until these are complete it would be merely wasting time to discuss the subject piecemeal. I would remind you that this Company's policy is to give its employees good wages, steady employment and fair treatment, and I think its reputation in that respect is fully attested by those who have worked for it.

Yours truly,
J. P. POWELL,
General Superintendent.

March 15th, 1918.
