But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health and Stopped Her Pains.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it that at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my house-work, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My Aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the credit."

Thousands of American women give this famous root and herb remedy the credit for health restored as did Mrs. Kimble.

For Love of a Woman;

New Romeo and Juliet.

CHAPTER VI.

A BUNCH OF VIOLETS.

Lord Cecil drew a breath of relief.

"They are always together; they go from theatre to theatre. He is a very extraordinary old gentleman, and very trying at rehearsals, so I've heard the actors say; but he knows all about it, quite as well as the stage-manager."

At this moment the two London critics came up for a drink, and one of them bowed to Lord Cecil.

"Quite an eventful evening, my lord," he said, with the easy respect of a fellow-Londoner.

"Yes," said Lord Cecil. "It is a great success, I suppose. Do you know who Miss Doris Marlowe is?"

The critic shrugged his shoulders.

"Haven't the least idea. Quite a stella incognita, but she will not be so after to-night. We shall see her in Drury Lane before many months are passed."

"Who was that?" his friend, the other critic, asked.

"Lord Cecil Neville," was the reply.

"The hier to the marquise of Stoyke. A splendid fellow, and, strange to say, not a bit spoilt, though all the women make a dead set at him."

"The Marquis of Stoyke," said the other, thoughtfully. "That old villain! And this is his nephew. He is immensely good-looking."

"Oh, a splendid fellow. Did you ever hear that story about him—"

And they moved away.

Lord Cecil drank half his soda-and-brandy, and then went back to his box.

Meanwhile, a thrill of excitement seemed to run through those engaged behind the scenes. A theatre is rendered famous by its actors, and it seemed that the Theatre Royal, Barton, was going to be made celebrated as the place of the first appearance of a great actress.

"If she can only carry us through to the end!" muttered Jeffrey, as he paced to and fro, his hands clasped behind his back, his eyes flashing fire.

"Oh, she'll do it," said the manager, who happened to hear him. "Don't you be afraid, Mr. Jeffrey; that young lady is a genius. I knew it from the first. She will carry it through to the very last. And about the engagement now? You make your own terms, and I'll agree to them. You'll find me straight and honest."

But Jeffrey paced on. He was an old theatrical hand, and he knew full well that a Juliet may score in the balcony scene and let fall in the later and most important ones.

But there did not seem much fear of failure with Doris.

Off the stage, and in her dressing-room, she was quiet and subdued; but the moment she got on the boards her eyes flew to the centre box, and she seemed to draw inspiration from the handsome face that leant forward in rapt, almost devout, attention.

The play proceeded. The great scene, in which Romeo takes leave of Juliet, his newly-made wife, went with a rush. The audience cheered until it was hoarse. Thrice the young actress was called to the front, and everybody who had brought a bouquet flung it at her feet.

Jeffrey, pale and statuesque, implored Doris to be calm.

"It is not all over yet," he said, warningly. "There is the last scene. Remember what I taught you. It is the last scene in which a Juliet who is a Juliet declares herself. Do not let their applause make you forget what is due to your art. I would rather that they remained mute and silent, Doris."

And for the answer she simply smiled. She did not tell him that while she could see a certain face in the centre box all would be well.

The pause before the last scene arrived. The whole house was talking in excited whispers. To the Barton folk, ardent theatre-goers as they were, nothing like this had ever befallen them. A flutter of excitement ran through the house, and amongst the crowd thronged the lobbies Lord Cecil walked about, as excited as the rest.

Suddenly, as if he had been stricken by an idea, he turned up the collar of his coat and made his way through the press to the streets and looked about him eagerly.

Some women selling oranges came hurrying up to him, and amongst them a woman with a basket of violets.

He bought the whole contents of her basket, and bade her tie them together. Then, with the flowers in his hand, he went back to the theatre; but, instead of going to his box, he made his way to the stalls and stood close to the orchestra.

The last scene came on. Again it is unnecessary to describe it. The grim and solemn vault, the beautiful figure of the girl in the death-throes, the terrible agony of Romeo, were all here, rendered real and life-like by the genius of the actors.

Spellbound, the house watched and listened in profound silence; listened to the passionate, despairing plaint of Romeo, and the deeper agony of Juliet, who awakes to find her lover dead.

Never, perhaps, since the play was played, was actress more touching, more tear-compelling than Doris Marlowe that night at the Theatre Royal, Barton; and as her last words died away in solemn silence, a great sob seemed to rise from the crowded house.

Then the sob gave place to a thunder of applause. Once more the sober audience seemed possessed by a spirit of delirium; men sprang to their feet and waved their hats, women rose and waved their handkerchiefs with which they had wiped away their tears; and cries of "Juliet! Juliet!" resounded through the theatre.

A pause, and presently Romeo appeared, leading Juliet by the hand.

The audience stormed and cheered as on man, and those who had not already thrown their bouquets to her threw them now.

She was pale to the lips, and the blue eyes looked almost black as she bent them on the cheering crowd, and like a queen bowed beneath the tribute of their devotion, she bent her girlish head low.

She had nearly crossed the stage, had reached the spot exactly opposite that on which Lord Cecil stood. Then, and not till then, he raised his bunch of violets and tossed them at her feet.

She paused a moment in her triumphant progress—for it was nothing less—then stooped and picked up the rought-and-ready bouquet; Romeo's arms were quite full.

For an instant her eyes rested on Lord Cecil's face, then, as if with an involuntary movement, she raised the bunch of violets to her lips and passed off, the side wings engulfing her.

Three times more they called her, as if they could not let her go from their sight, and thrice she came before them, and, modestly, girlishly, bowed her acknowledgements.

Then—tired, hot, and thirsty—the crowd began to disperse.

Lord Cecil Neville alone remained on the spot from which he had thrown his bouquet. He could scarcely believe that it was over until the attendants began to cover up the seats with their calico wrappings, and, taking the hint, he made his way out.

The groups of people he passed through were talking about her triumph. He caught a word here and there, and, all unconsciously, found himself at the stage-door. At least, he thought, he should get a glimpse of her as she drove away from the theatre.

Meanwhile, behind the scenes the greatest excitement prevailed. There had never been a Juliet like her, they were declaring; and they prophesied a success in London which should even eclipse that of Barton.

And Doris, looking pale, stood, smiling dreamily through it all. Even while Jeffrey paced to and fro in her dressing-room, too excited for speech, she remained calm and serene, wrapped in a kind of spiritual veil.

Managers, actors, thronged round her with congratulations even the old dresser declared, with tears, that nothing had been seen like it.

At last, the porter announced that Miss Marlowe's fly was waiting, and Jeffrey took her away from the excited crowd.

"Draw your cloak well round your throat," he said, as anxiously as if she were so fragile that a breath of wind would sweep her away. "Give me those violets to hold for you," he said.

She drew her hand back, almost with a gesture of dread, and a dash of colour came flying into her pale face.

"No, no; I can manage, thanks," she said, quickly. "How sweet they smell, do they not?" and she held them up to him for a second.

"Yes," he said, absently. "Were they thrown with the rest?"

"Yes," she said, in a low voice.

"Some one of the poor people in the pit, I daresay you don't agree with me?" and she smiled.

"But I do," she said, averting her face. "Yes, I think them worth all the rest!"

They had traversed the long passage by this time, and reached the fly. Jeffrey put her in carefully, and was himself following, when he stopped suddenly, frowning and biting his lips.

"Doris," he said, "you leave all to me? You leave all to my judgment, as hitherto? You are a famous woman now—or will be to-morrow—and may like to be independent. Would you rather wait till to-morrow and make your own arrangements with the manager, or shall I, as of old—"

"Jeffrey!" she broke in, with a reproachful look in her eyes.

"Very well," he said. "Brown has made me a very large offer for a month. I put him off just now, but I think I will go back and accept for you. I shall not be many minutes."

Doris leant back, and, closing her eyes, pressed the violets against her

of their devotion, she bent her girlish head low.

Doris leant back, and, closing her eyes, pressed the violets against her cheeks. She could see the handsome face all aglow with excitement and admiration as he raised his right arm and flung the flowers; she could see it at that moment, and the mental vision shut out all the rest of that eventful night.

Suddenly she heard her name spoken beside the carriage window, and leaning forward, she saw, in real earnest the face which had been her inspiration. It was Lord Cecil Neville's.

"Miss Marlowe," he said, leaning forward and speaking quietly, pleadingly. "Don't be angry. Pray forgive me. I could not pass on without saying a word—one word of thanks."

"Thanks!" she murmured.

Her eyes were lifted for a moment to his ardent face, then dropped to the violets and rested there.

"Yes. I was in the theatre," he said. "You did not see me, of course; but I was there, and—I can't tell you how we all felt, how we all feel. It was superb: any way— But there; I can only thank you."

"You have done that already," she said, with a smile, as she raised the violets.

Lord Cecil Neville blushed. I am afraid it would be rather difficult to get credit for this statement in certain quarters in London.

"I couldn't get any better ones," he said, apologetically.

"No," she said, "I think you could not. Yes, I saw you in the theatre," she added, as if she had been thinking of his first sentence. "Were—were you surprised, or did you know?" and she glanced at him with a half-curious smile.

"Surprised!" he said. "I could scarcely believe my senses. I had no idea, until I saw you on the stage, that you, who were so good to me yesterday, were a great actress."

"I am not," she said, in a low voice. "I am only a very little one. To-night I succeeded; another night I might fail." A faint shadow came on her face, as he looked puzzled; then she smiled, as she broke off, to add, "I have something of yours."

"Yes—my heart!" was his mental comment; but he said aloud, "Of mine?"

"Yes," she said. "A handkerchief. I haven't it here," and she smiled again. Then suddenly her face grew crimson, for she remembered that she had left it in the bosom of her dress. "I—I will send it to you if you tell me where."

"Let me call for it," he said, eagerly.

Doris's brows came together, and she shook her head gently. She knew that Jeffrey's welcome to a stranger would be a rough one.

Following yesterday's announcement we are organizing a Syndicate between now and July 31st, accepting amounts from $50 to $500 to buy in whatever good bargain stocks there may be floating around, such as Perfection Tire, Mineral, Industrial, etc., and hold them for higher prices in the Fall. The holdings will then be marketed and the Syndicate will be dissolved on December 31st, and all profits divided before January 7th equally between this Company and the Syndicate members.

As this Company can use any shares we purchase, at the prices we shall pay, we hereby guarantee to all members the safety of the Syndicate investment, so that it is only a matter of how much our profit will be within the six months.

We extend an open invitation but do not intend to urge anyone. Full particulars if interested.

Crowning Act of Dishonor.

Sinking of German High Seas Fleet, Described by English Artist.

By Bernard F. Gribble, R.A.

(English Marine Artist Employed by the American Government to Paint the Surrender of the German Fleet.)

Scapa Flow, June 21—Under command of Second Lieutenant C. Leeth we were simply cruising around, as it happened I was only just in time to get the drawings I wanted. About 11.45 I noticed German sailors on board the Frederic der Grosse throwing baggage into boats which were already alongside the vessel. I remarked to Lieutenant Leeth: "Do you allow them to go for joy rides?" He replied: "No, but, by jove, it looks as if they were."

Then after a moment's hesitation Lieutenant Leeth exclaimed: "My word, I have got it. I believe they are scuttling their ships and are abandoning them."

By this time the Germans were throwing their baggage into the boats at great speed and simultaneously we observed that the same thing was happening on board the Frankfurt, which was on our right at that moment. We made straight for the nearest vessel, which happened to be the Frankfurt, and Lieutenant Leeth ordered his men to get their cutlasses and rifles ready. He then shouted an order to the Germans who were now in their boats to return to their ship at once. The German sailors apparently had thrown their oars away and they shouted back "we have no oars." A British sailor then shouted to them and he threw a number of oars into the water. There were two boats approaching and the German officers were extremely impudent. Standing on the bows of their boats they shouted, "Can't you take us aboard into safety?" Lieutenant Leeth replied, "No, return to your ships at once. If you do not I will fire on you."

Germans Wave White Flags.

It then became necessary to open fire and the Germans were seen to wave white flags. One German officer shouted: "You have killed four of my men and we have no arms. I want to look after the men." Our officer shouted to them: "You look after them by getting them back to the ships." The officer said: "We can't go back, they are sinking." Lieutenant Leeth said: "You must go back and prevent them from sinking." The Germans replied: "It is not our fault, we are carrying out our orders." By this time the Frederic der Grosse had listed over to port, in a few minutes went down. Her crew had succeeded in getting around into the open and we managed to get their boats in tow and messages were signalled to the coast guards requesting them to mark the fleet. It took about two hours, however, before the first of the destroyers arrived. The Germans in their boats were very daring and endeavoured to come along side our vessel. One of the crew however, kept them off by threatening them with a revolver.

By the time the Brummer, a cruiser of the Emden class, had begun to turn over and sink and the first destroyer of the British fleet arrived just in time to see her go down. The German crews, who were in the open sea, cheered as they saw their ships go down. One of the German battle-cruisers, I think it was the Hindenburg, hoisted the German ensign and I noticed that all the German vessels had been flying two code flags at the peak. The upper flag was a white ball on a blue pennant and the lower was a yellow and blue pennant. I had noticed on the previous day that the same signals were flying. They were flown by the Emden and apparently answered by all the German vessels. As we were turned towards the Seydlitz we saw her turn right over, but she did not sink altogether and she was still visible above the surface.

We kept on signalling and using hooters in order to get the other guard ships to come round and we had to keep passing over the surface where the vessels had gone down. We passed several abandoned German steam pinnacles from different battleships but there was no one on board them and we concluded that several of the Germans had been drowned as there were a number of lifeboats floating about. We then observed that the Emden was in trouble, and H. M. S. Shakespeare, one of our destroyers, ran alongside her to endeavour to take her in tow. We then returned to the Ramilles and transferred to her a number of wounded Germans whom we had removed from German boats. Returning to the scene, we picked up a few more, including their baggage and put them on board our flagship. We next proceeded to the Emden and at this time there was a great deal of confusion. Our vessel ran into the Emden, smashing her gangways but we ultimately managed to beach her. I noticed that Admiral Reuter's flagship was flying his flag, which is a black cross resembling a Maltese cross on a white ground with two black balls.

Huns Celebrating On Board.

When we got alongside the Emden I peeped into her fore-castle and I noticed it was gaily decorated with flags and bunting, and there was a distinct odor of tobacco and spirits. Evidently the Germans had indulged in an orgy the night before. It appears that the whole thing was carefully arranged and timed to the minute. One thing I noticed was that notwithstanding the thrilling and dangerous character of the proceedings, the German officers were wearing yellow kid gloves and smoking cigars. Although the Germans declared that they had no arms, I have good reason to believe that automatic pistols were found in the possession of the officers. While our rifle fire was proceeding, there was a good deal of crossfire which lasted for, I should think three-quarters of an hour, and it is impossible to say whether the Germans actually did use firearms, but probably some shots came from the Germans. Their intention evidently was to keep out to sea as long as they could in order to give their vessels time to sink.

British Admiral Expected Scuttling. Mr. Gribble said that two days before the incident occurred he had a chat with Admiral Freemantle who said to him:

"You will probably see some very interesting episodes because we do not know what may happen. It seems possible that the Germans may do something."

"I said, 'would it be possible to remove the crews of the vessels?'" "Yes," replied Admiral Freemantle. "I had thought of that myself, but it would have to be very carefully planned and a subtle move to manage it in time, because they may leave one or two men stowed away to do the trick even if we were to put an armed escort on the ships."

"On Saturday evening I had a long chat with different officers and they all expressed great regret at not being present from the beginning of the incident. Admiral Reuter and his staff and the whole crews were placed on board the Revenge for the night and arrangements were made to take them to Invergordon on the following morning."

I think the most interesting and impressive part of the whole proceedings took place on Sunday afternoon on board the Revenge when Admiral Freemantle had the whole of the German officers and men paraded on the quarter deck and addressed Reuter and his staff. The Germans were lined up under a military escort of marines with fixed bayonets and Admiral Reuter was ordered to stand in front of his staff. Admiral Freemantle then delivered a short address which was translated by a captain of marines. Admiral Freemantle, addressing the German admiral, said:

"Before I send you ashore as a prisoner of war I would like to express to you my indignation of the deed which you have perpetrated and which was that of a traitor violating the action of arrangements entered into by the Allies. The German fleet was in a sense more interned than actually imprisoned. The vessels were resting here as a sort of good will from the German Government until peace had been signed. It is not the first occasion on which the Germans have violated all decent laws and rules of the seas. We have had on many occasions to regret the fact of having to fight a nation which takes no notice of civilized laws on the high seas."

Reuter Takes Full Blame.

After this address Admiral Reuter made a short speech in which he said:

"I take the entire responsibility for what has been done. It was done at my instigation, and I feel that I was perfectly justified in doing it and I feel sure that in similar circumstances every English sailor would have done the same."

The ceremony was tremendously impressive and appeared to touch all our sailors who witnessed it. The German officers were then ordered to get their baggage and they were transferred to a boat. Admiral Freemantle ordered Admiral Reuter and his staff to be taken on a launch to a place near Invergordon. The other officers and men were landed at Invergordon. One thing that had struck me about the German sailors was that they appeared to be very poor specimens of the German type and they seemed to be devoid of discipline. During the ceremony of the quarter deck they did not salute nor stand at attention until ordered to do so. The German officers, however, were a more healthy looking type of men. Everything possible was done for the wounded men. I think one man died on the Ramilles.

Saw No Red Flag.

It was most surprising to observe how swiftly the vessels sank. Most of them turned over to the starboard and then disappeared. I don't think the dramatic spectacle could have been witnessed very clearly from the shore. There has been mention of the hoisting of a red flag, but I don't think that is correct. I saw no red flag. There were only the German admiral's flag and signal pennants. It seems clear that the whole incident was carefully prearranged and that the Germans had known exactly when our fleet would be at sea. It is also rather suggestive that quite recently Admiral Reuter removed two thousand of his men from the ships and sent them home. I can quite understand that the Germans may have been feeling the monotony of their existence at Scapa Flow. There is very little comfort on board the German warships. The German navy was apparently built solely from the fighting point of view, and there does not appear to have been much consideration given to the comfort of the crews. All the available space on board is taken up with the working plant and guns, and a feature of the vessels was the manner in which they were heavily armored. I think the whole incident created a curious feeling of surprise among our sailors, who appeared to be unable to realize that a fleet of magnificently constructed vessels could be got rid of so simply without even showing fight. I noticed that Admiral Reuter's staff wore iron crosses. I think Admiral Reuter's decoration was an iron cross of the first degree. At sunset there was apart from a portion of one of the vessels which had not completely sunk, nothing to be seen on the waters which in the morning had borne the German surrendered fleet.

SOME FIGURES.

No amount of figures can tell, in full, the part which the British Empire played in the late war, but the use of them, when compiled with care as to detail, can be tremendously informative, and in employing them, if only for the sake of comparison, much that is interesting and strongly indicative of the great burden borne by Britain and her Dominions, can be learned. That the Empire did mightily and magnificently cannot be gainsaid. Upon Britain, as a whole, the great burden of maintaining her Allies was placed, and not for once did the nation weaken or refuse its responsibility. It gave the impetus which brought the conflict to a victorious end, and no matter how gloomy the outlook, at any time, Britons everywhere were cheerfully optimistic and determined to see it through. The figures given for recruiting in the army raised in the United Kingdom measures the effort made there to carry on. When war began in 1914 there were in England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales a military force of 733,514 officers and men. Up to the conclusion of hostilities the total number recruited in the British Islands was 5,704,416, and those out of a population of 47,000,000, or roughly twelve per cent. of the whole, a truly wonderful response to the call for men. In addition to these, however, there were thousands of men employed in the navy and merchant marine, which makes the percentage still more great.

The figures of enlistment in the Dominions and Colonies are not, perhaps so definite as those of the home land, but from first to last, according to the most recent tables published, Canada had under arms 628,964; Australia, 416,809; New Zealand, 220,099; South Africa, 136,070; Newfoundland, 11,922 and the other Colonies and Protectorates 12,000, the total Dominion forces being 1,425,864. The white fighting military forces of the Empire, aggregated the monster total of 7,130,280 men. Added to these there were 1,401,350 Indian troops, and 122,837 colored soldiers from various parts of the Empire, making the grand total of the Empire, under arms, 8,654,467. This gigantic army was distributed over the whole of the fighting areas in Europe, Asia, Africa, and the isles of the sea. In France, which was the chief theatre, there were from the beginning to the end, altogether, 5,399,563, the maximum strength at any one time being 2,046,901. The number sent to the aid of the Italians against the Austrians was 146,764, with a maximum force engaged of 132,667, no small help to our gallant Allies in defeating the soldiers of the Dual Empire. In the Near East the number throughout was 404,287, with a maximum fighting strength of 285,021. The campaign in Gallipoli took 468,987 men, the maximum strength being 127,787. The Mesopotamian campaign called for 889,702, the maximum strength there being never less than 447,531. In Egypt and Palestine there were employed throughout 1,192,511 men, the fighting maximum being 432,857. In the other numerous theatres of war, 475,210 troops were engaged the maximum of strength being 293,095.

The British casualties in the various theatres of the war are given as follows: France and Belgium, 2,724,203; Italy, 6,926; at the Dardanelles, 119,578; Balkan Campaign, 28,092; Mesopotamia, 111,549; Egypt and Palestine, 59,296; East Africa, 19,572 and in other battle areas, 3,748.

Had the other bigger Allies put an equal number of men under arms, the world itself would have shaken under their tread. By its gigantic effort the British Empire proved that the regard of its citizens for the rights and privileges which they enjoyed under its constitution, was no vain boast, and in shedding their blood that the same principles belonged to the world at large the men who died, appreciated that humanity would be blessed and happy because of the maintenance of the British ideal.

The figures used in the above article are taken from a recent issue of the "Round Table," the statistics published in this journal being particularly complete and accurate.

LURIDITY.

Our worthy and esteemed contemporary, The Advocate, is highly indignant and waxes wrath because the Telegram made a beat on the Flat Island affair. Yesterday's issue is chock full of lurid articles which breathe threatenings and slaughter and invoke the aid of legal machinery to squelch and altogether put the Telegram out of business. Editor, staff and office correspondents have freely taken up their hymn of hate, and have strafed this paper to—we hope—their hearts' content. If it were honest newspaper criticism that prompted all these assaults, it would not matter, but the articles are too much tinged with political malice to have any effect or to detract in any way from the enterprise which won for the Telegram the journalistic scoop of the year.

St. Bon's "Old Boys" Thanksgiving.

Permission has been secured for every ex-pupil of St. Bon's who volunteered for service in "Ours," to wear his uniform at the Thanksgiving ceremonies, that take place at the College on next Monday. A large photo will be taken of all who attend, making a special feature of those of our boys, in khaki, who were privileged to return home. A list of autographs, will also be made for filing in the College Archives, so that the historian of the school will have the completest data available. The Association is famous for the Mon Camaraderie of its gatherings and the presence of so many boys from the front this year, will lend an added note of pleasure. This will probably be the last occasion when so many of our returned veterans will foregather, and every preparation has been finalized to make it a historic one.

At the Majestic.

"The Woman's Law," a picturization of Maravene Thompson's great novel, will be shown at the Majestic Theatre to-night, starring the famous stage and screen actress, Florence Reed. The story is an interesting one, well shown and vividly pictured. The photograph of this picture is splendid, as all who are acquainted with the subject will instantly perceive. A dissolute young New York millionaire has forfeited his wife's affections by his notorious infidelities. His wife centres her attention on her young son, and withdraws from society with a sense of shame for her husband's misconduct. Here we have a situation from which all manner of predicaments may arise, and the story, as it follows, is one that should be seen by every man and woman of the world who claims to have an understanding of the big things in life. This is the most powerful picture, possibly, in which the versatile Florence Reed has appeared, and she has not only sustained her old reputation, but made a new one in it. The usual comedy will also be shown.

Insane Jealousy.

Yesterday's Advocate might well be termed "Jealousy Issue." It was almost full of interesting articles and letters written on the scoop secured by the Telegram reporter, and judging from the number, length and warmth of them, the insane jealousy that inspired the writers, of which there were two—the editor and another—was so deep-seated, so intense, so seething, and so white hot that it is easy to imagine the articles and letters being written while their authors fairly ground their teeth in rage and mortification. The Advocate has been caught napping, and the thought is so bitter that yesterday's "Jealousy Issue" resulted. This old trouble is well known by now; and the Advocate would do well to take the advice of the ones that get the scoops,—pay more attention to NEWS and less to petty politics, and your columns will benefit. When another paper, which has reporters that know how to get news scoops, beats you badly, don't whine and snarl and radiate hate and jealousy and evil, but get new reporters in the place of dead heads and stiff that think more of how to get other things than of securing news for the readers of their paper. Think it over, Sonnies.

Firemen Want Increase.

Monday the Fireman's Union held a special meeting to consider the matter of making a demand for an increase of wages, for board money when in port, and for overtime. President F. J. Woods was in the chair. The meeting was unanimous in voting for an increase of wages. The schedule was fixed at $75.00 a month, $1.00 a day board money while in port if meals are not served on the ship, and fifty cents an hour for any work between watches. The meeting decided to ask the N. I. W. A. of which the Fireman's Union is a local, to present their claims to the owners of Steamboats.

More Congratulations.

Dear Sir,—Yesterday's edition of the Evening Advocate can be considered the dirtiest, rottenest and filthiest of its many issues of like nature. No matter where the reader would turn he found either a letter or an article about the excellent reports gotten and published by your reporter who was down in Bonavista Bay on the warship Cornwall. What is wrong with the Advocate, anyway? Surely it has sense enough to conceal its jealousy, instead of using up the whole of its pages in low abuse and filthy nonsense. The Telegram has them licked, sir, and that's why they're yelling. Why didn't the other papers send down a reporter each to get the news of the affair? Was it because their reporters were too sleepy or was it because they were too slow to ask the authorities for a place on the ship that went down? At any rate, Mr. Editor, the Telegram has scored, and that's why people buy the Telegram—they're sure to get all the news that's going. Let me congratulate you.

DELIGHTED.
St. John's, July 9.

New Motor Sprinkler.

The Municipal Council has recently imported a motor sprinkler, and yesterday afternoon it was used for the first time, being run across Duckworth and other streets. In appearance it is similar to the usual big motor truck, was built by the International Motor Co. has a capacity of 1000 gallons, may be used for oiling as well as watering, is driven by one man only, is speedy, economical and efficient, and is undoubtedly the best investment the city has made for a long time. The "Mack-Car," as it is named, does the work of 6 ordinary sprinkling cars, requires less labor, and is guaranteed to last for years. It cost $8,000. Underneath the water container is a force flusher, and every morning at 5 o'clock water Street is to be flushed by the sprinkler. Yesterday's trial was thoroughly successful, and a long and useful career is predicted for the "Mack-Car."

St. Bon's Sports.

Should the present disagreeable weather improve in any way this afternoon, the annual field sports of St. Bon's College will be held on the Campus. Many interesting numbers are down on the programme, notably football fives, over the result of which the enthusiasts are greatly concerned. Teas and other refreshments will be served, and if the weather man can be induced to smile pleasantly, an enjoyable evening is in store for the petrons.

Further Postponed.

The Flat Island case came up before the court at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mr. W. R. Warren, K.C., for the prosecution, moving for a further postponement of the trial until 8 other warrants, which had been sworn out, could be served and the arrests made. Mr. R. A. Squires, K.C., for the defense, opposed the motion, stating that to postpone the trial would be to spoil the summer's fishing for his clients and for others, not connected with the case, but dependent upon some of his clients. The court granted the postponement, the date being set for Tuesday, next, at 10.30 a.m., bail being renewed from week to week, instead of from day to day, as formerly.

From Labrador.

The s.s. Terra Nova, Capt. Kennedy, arrived from Labrador ports last evening, having gone as far north as Smokey, and landed all crews and fishing gear. The steamer left here three weeks ago, and from the outset met with fog, ice and storms. Only by the utmost care was the ship navigated to Battle Harbor, and even worse conditions were encountered on the trip further north. The captain reports that the coast is packed with ice north of Smokey. From Grady, south, on the return trip, loose ice was scattered about, and there was every evidence that the floe was going to pieces. Only a few of the schooners had reached north of Frenchman's Island when the Terra Nova was coming up the coast. According to reports brought along by the captain, there is scarcely a sign of fish on the Labrador coast, not even at Battle Hr. The season, however, is not considered late and indications point to a good fishery.

SENATE READY FOR PEACE TREATY

President's Authority Asked--Ratification By Germany To-Day --- Dempsey and Charpentier Next.

WILL HEAR WILSON IN OPEN SENATE.

WASHINGTON, July 8. The Senate made ready to-day to receive the Peace Treaty from President Wilson, and to take up without delay and open the bitterly contested question of its ratification. In disregard to precedent it was voted unanimously to open the doors to the public when the President makes his address Thursday submitting the treaty and assuming for its acceptance. To the same purpose plans were made by the printer and to circulate many thousands of copies for the information of the country. The decision to hear the President in open session was reached without suggestion from him although it was understood to square with his address. Open sessions during the entire ratification debate are expected by the leaders of other sides, and the Foreign Relations Committee may also open its doors during some of its hearings.

WANT JOBLESS STRIKERS REINSTATED.

WINNIPEG, July 8. Six International Union officials headed by R. A. Riggs, ex-M. L. A. agent in Western Canada for the Dominion Trades' Commission to-day made representations to the Government and employers to effect reinstatement of strikers now jobless.

RATIFICATION BILL PRESENTED.

BASLE, July 8. The bill of the German Government, providing for the ratification of the peace treaty, according to a report from Weimar, will be presented to-day to the constituent committee of the National Assembly. The question will be discussed on Wednesday by the entire assembly.

ALMOST HALF A MILLION.

TOLEDO, Ohio, July 8. The gate receipts of the heavy weight championship contest between Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard here Friday, July 4, were officially announced to-night at approximately $425,000. The attendance, promoter Tex Rickard said, was between 20,000 and 21,000.

MESSAGE BY DIRIGIBLE.

OTTAWA, July 8. The first British airship to cross the Atlantic brought a message of good wishes from the King to the people of Canada. The message was addressed to His Excellency the Governor General and reads as follows:—Buckingham Palace, June 28th, 1919. To His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, G.M.G., C.V.O., Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Canada: I take this opportunity of sending by the first British airship (R-34) to cross the Atlantic, a message of good wishes to the people of Canada from the Old Country. (Signed) George R. I.

PRESIDENT WILSON HOME.

NEW YORK, July 8. Escorted by a fleet of warships, the George Washington, bringing President Wilson home from France, arrived in New York harbor early this afternoon.

ADVISES DELAY.

WASHINGTON, July 8. A delay of at least forty-eight hours in the start of the return flight of the British dirigible R-34, was recommended to-day by the weather forecast to the ship at Mineola, Long Island, by the Navy Dept.

ON AMERICAN SOIL.

NEW YORK, July 8. Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion, has received an attractive offer to meet Georges Carpentier, of France, European title holder, but will only box him on American soil, according to a message received here to-night from Jack D. Kearns, Dempsey's manager.

AFTER WILSON.

WASHINGTON, July 8. After arrangements were completed to-day for the appearance of President Wilson before the Senate Thursday to present in open session the treaty with Germany, Senator Sherman, Republican, of Illinois, introduced a resolution asking the President for the authority he had undertaken to impose upon the people of his country and to make its Government subject to the League of Nations. A preamble said the President with four other citizens have assumed at the Paris conference to represent the United States Government and asked that the constitutional authorities for this and the other acts mentioned be cited under the rules. The measure went over without action.

Message by Parachute.

Last night, the Prime Minister, Hon. Sir M. P. Cashin, received a message from Grand Bank given below. It was accompanied by an explanation to the effect that this and two other messages were dropped on the evening of last Friday by the big British Dirigible R-34, while she was over Grand Bank. A parachute, or a small contrivance used by air craft, was employed for this purpose, and the parachute was picked up the same evening, but the messages which it contained had blown away and were not recovered till yesterday, being handed in to the postal telegraph office at Grand Bank at 4 p.m. The message reads as follows:

"From Dirigible R-34 via Grand Bank"

"From General Seely, Air Ministry, London.

"To Prime Minister, Newfoundland. "Please accept my best wishes conveyed to you by R-34. Please acknowledge receipt.

"JOHN BERNARD SEELY."

General Sir John Seely is the Under-Secretary for the Air Ministry in London, under whose Department the recent voyage of the big Dirigible was projected, and this message may be regarded as another manifestation of the courteous desire on the part of the Imperial Authorities to include the Oldest Colony of the Empire in the epoch-making aviation events now occurring.

Sir Michael Cashin sent the following reply this morning:

"General Seely, "Air Ministry, London.

"Thanks for your message dropped by Dirigible last Friday. It was blown away from parachute and only recovered yesterday. On behalf of colleagues and country please accept warmest congratulations from Newfoundland on success of Dirigible's flight, which forms yet another aviation triumph for "Britain.

Last Night's Results.

Wanderers . . . . .003 102 02X—8 runs
B. I. S. . . . .001 200 040—7 runs

OFFICIALS.

Umpire Chesman (at the plate).
Umpire Power (on the bases).
Scorers: Channing and Merner.

THE DOPE.

The air was blue at St. George's Field last night. Whether it was because of the lowering skies, the cold east wind, or the Irishmen's mordant criticism of Ches's pronouncement of strikes we know not. Anyhow, blue was the motif in colour and deed, and the Wanderers certainly gave the Irish fans the blues and turned them green with envy when they nosed them out by one run in the eighth inning.

But then, fans old enough to be the fathers of baseball could explain to any of the Irish fans that there is no sense in arguing with Sir Frederick. It's only a good waste of alimony power and no little nervous vitality. To be brief, it is merely a rapid waste of time.

If your thumpers fail to thump, if your pitchers hit a slump, if you lead and lose your trump, Always blame it on the ump.

For the first two innings no score was recorded, both slabmen getting in extra good work.

What the French Did Not Do.

(From the Indianapolis News.)
The French may have stoned the Hun delegates, but they didn't kill any babies, they didn't lay waste the land of an innocent people, they didn't attack helpless women and children, they didn't resort to barbaric methods of dealing with prisoners, they didn't sink ships with helpless men and women and babes. They may have raised welts on the heads of two Huns, but they didn't disfigure them for life, they didn't cut off arms and legs, gouge out eyes and maim the defenceless that fell into their hands, they didn't bomb unfortified towns and cities. The French may have bounced a pebble off the square-heads, but they didn't bomb hospitals, they didn't attack the Red Cross, they didn't nail kittens and babies side by side on barn doors. Well, it isn't so hard to forgive the French for the moment of indiscretion after all. And then it is to be remembered that the outbreak of the war the Huns used a good deal of rough stuff in connection with the departure of the Allied ambassadors.

In the Irishmen's fourth, Wallace hit to centrefield, scoring Brazie and French.

A passed ball in the fourth let Hartnett get in.

O'Donnell's base-stealing in the fifth was a revelation, but he was left to die a lingering death on the third sack when O'Reilly vainly swished the ozone.

Pitcher Smith's two bager in the Wanderer's sixth let in Brett and Hartnett.

The seventh produced no results, both moundmen pulling the one-two-three stunt.

Then the Gallant Harps started a batting fest which really should have put the game on ice for them. O'Reilly's liner let Brazie in; Connolly brought in French; Wallace again hit for two bags scored O'Reilly.

ly, and Delaney's sacrifice let Connolly score. All this was amid the great jubilation and loud huzzas of Ireland's fandom. Then, a bone was pulled; O'Reilly coaching third, with one man down, sent Wallace home on O'Leary's pop fly, enabling the Hartnett crew to pull a double play.

Excitement was now intense with the B.I.S. leading by one run. Brett hit safely, stole second, and on Hartnett's liner reached third. Brazie unfortunately dropped the ball after tagging Brett at the plate and Ump Chesman was obliged to reverse his decision, thus tying the score. Hartnett stole third, and Burton's bunt allowed Hartnett in.

In the ninth, with 1 run to tie, and 2 to win, Brazie reached first safely, and was on second when O'Leary struck out; Power's fly was nabbed, and French (after fouling four or five) let a sweet strike get past him.

The B.I.S. will certainly have to improve their batting, as last night found them failing to hit in the pinches.

The Wanderers show considerable improvement on each appearance, and the genial Tim seems to be getting in his old-time generalship.

HOW THEY STAND.

Wanderers . . . . .	4	2	2	.500

NEXT GAME.

The game to-morrow night should prove the most exciting of the whole series when the Cubs and Red Lions will clash in the second game of Round 2. Should the Lions get through it will put them well in the lead, while a loss for the Cubs will make them the lowly lizards of the League. It is hoped that the god of the weather will be propitious enough to throw the fans with a lovely balmy evening. To-day on the street the Lions have slightly the shade in the betting.

Playing by Proxy.

Praying by electricity is practised by the Buddhists in India. The prayers, written on long paper bands, are wrapped round a wheel, and each turn of the wheel is equivalent to one repetition of the prayer. The pious native believes that the greater number of revolutions of his prayer-wheel the better will his prayers be answered, and he either turns it by hand, or lets the wind or water turn it. The watercourses of India are now being harnessed for the purpose of producing electricity, and but for the thoughtful care of the Government the native would be deprived of one means of turning his prayer-wheel, especially in the hot weather. The Government, to overcome this difficulty, and safeguard the religious customs and traditions of the natives, compels the electric companies to equip the wheels with motors, and supply the necessary current to turn them during the dry season. This is to be done free of all charge to the natives.

Why Do We Wait?

Why do we wait till ears are deaf
Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
When not a whisper can be heard

Why do we wait till hands are laid
Close-folded, pulseless, ere we place
Within them roses, sweet and rare,
And illies in their flawless grace.

Why do we wait till eyes are sealed
To light and love in death's deep trance,
Dear wistful eyes—before we bend
Above them with impassioned glance

Why do we wait till hearts are still
To tell them all the love is curd,
And give them such late meed of praise,
And lay above them fragrant flowers?

How oft we care, careless, wait till life's
Sweet opportunities are past,
And break our "alabaster box
Of ointment" at the very last!

Oh, let us heed the living friend
Who walks with us life's common ways,
Watching our eyes for look of love
And hungering for a word of praise!

British-Made Laboratory Glass.

According to an article in the London Times of recent date, the manufacture of laboratory glass started at Sheffield since the war has made substantial progress, though much remains to be done if the industry is to be commercially sound and able to compete in the world's markets. Prior to the war there was no manufacture of laboratory glass in Great Britain, and the whole process, hitherto confined to Germany, had to be discovered and workers especially trained. With this object, a department of glass technology was opened at Sheffield University with the support of the Government, and to-day the department is turning out work said to equal anything Germany ever produced. The experimental nature of the work has made the cost of production heavier than the German article, and to help this a glass research association is being formed. The British Government has been asked to provide $264,987 over a period of five years, and the manufacturers will contribute a further sum of $121,662. It is said that the first attention of the association will be directed to problems of machinery and labor-saving devices.—Scientific American.

The Watch Across the Rhine.

(From the Philadelphia Press.)
They are getting the German throne ready for a come-back, and the ex-Kaiser is getting ready to reoccupy it. No matter what sort of combinations are made among peace inclined nations, it is evident they have got to stay on the job of watching the Huns as long as there are any Huns left to watch.

Expedition to Labrador.

The advance guard of the Labrador aerial expedition, commanded by Captain Daniel Owen, of Annapolis, arrived there Saturday afternoon. Captain Owen expects to make a trial flight to Halifax to-day. The personnel of the party includes Major Flynn, late of the United States Intelligence Service, Lieuts. Smith, Beeler and Cormack, of the United States air force, and a wireless and photographic expert, Mr. D. M. Graham, of Boston, is also here to take charge of the physical comfort and welfare of the men, as well as to attend to transportation. Several other officers are expected about the end of the week.

The expedition will sail on the steamer Granville, which has been chartered for the trip. Two Boston press men are expected to arrive Tuesday, and the moving picture men who are to accompany the expedition will reach Annapolis on Wednesday next. Two planes are being taken to Labrador. It is said that the expedition will cost nearly $200,000.—Recorder, June 30th.

Beet Sugar Cement.

An interesting by-product of beet sugar is cement. The scum which collects in boiling 100,000 tons of sugar beets contains about 6,000 tons of carbonate of lime. When this calcium carbonate is mixed with clay and burned, a very good cement is obtained.

Yesterday's Footer.

The Cornwall and city association football teams clashed yesterday afternoon at St. George's field, with the result that the boys from the ship carried all before them and won by 4 goals to nil. The play was lively and clean, and the visitors proved themselves real sports. To-night at seven o'clock, weather permitting, they will play the Star eleven, while to-morrow afternoon the Cadets from the cruiser and the C. E. I. will try results. Two fast games are expected.

Hot at Practice.

The various rowing teams are now hot at practice on the Lake, and last night the Togo, Mary, Myrtle and Shanandthe were out, two truckmen's two mercantile, two amateurs, two juvenile, and three factory crews took trial spins. The "Cadet" is engaged for nearly every item of the program, while the Nellie R. and the Red Lion and Mary are chartered for three. Several crews are desirous of rowing in the "Guard."

Manager Going North.

Mr. Ralph Parsons, Manager of the Newfoundland-Labrador branches of the Hudson's Bay Company, leaves in a day or two for Montreal, where he will join the company's steamer Nascope, which will sail North from there. Mr. Parsons was North on her last year.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

Personal Mention.

Mr. S. Gordon, of Hr. Grace, arrived in the city by yesterday's shore train. Mr. Harry Howlett, of Teillingate, is at present in the city on business. Dr. N. S. and Mrs. Fraser left by this morning's express for Glenwood, where they will spend a few weeks salmon fishing. Mr. A. M. Marshall, of Chicago, and A. G. C. Paine, of Ottawa, are at present in the city, and are guests at the Balsam Place. Miss Pearl James, daughter of the Editor of the Telegram is spending a part of her vacation with relatives at South River and Carbonear. The sloop Cecil and Belle arrived here yesterday from Port Union with a cargo of codfish and herring which she will discharge at Baird's premises.

The Last of the Run.

An outport man was in town this morning, with a large number of salmon peel ranging from three to five pounds in weight, which he quickly disposed of for twenty cents a pound, thus making a good day's pay. Catelli's Milk Macaroni is best. jly2,4,5,7,8,9

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

BODY MUSCLES AND CHARACTER MUSCLES.

RUTH CAMERON

That a body muscle grows stronger in proportion as one uses it, is a truism. That a mind or character muscle also grows stronger comes very close to being the same. And yet, though we all acknowledge the latter truth as a theory I am not sure we all realize its full force as a fact. Recently I have seen in a magazine article on Luther Burbank, an extremely interesting example of the growth of mental muscle by usage. He bred with thousands of plants. Burbank, as you doubtless know, was the first of the horticulturists to breed with hundreds and thousands of plants instead of with tens or dozens with which the plant experts before him had been content. Naturally he was only able to keep his mind on three or four of these experiments at first. To-day he can give all the necessary attention to four thousand experiments at one time!

Fads and Fashions.

Cuffs are very tight. The tiered skirt is smart. Dotted material is a favorite. Belts continue to be string-like. Ribbon sashes have fringed ends. Knitted fabrics increase in favor. Small hats place their ornaments low. Sports satin and crepe combine well. Collars on wraps are larger than ever. Real Irish is seen again on lingerie. Skirts have no suggestion of flare. Undenially the collar has returned. Metal cloths are run with satin stripes. Hats made entirely of ribbon are being worn. Fiber silk corduroy is one of the new fabrics.

concludes the biographer, "responds with increasing vigor and strength, so his mental equipment grew as he made greater demands upon it."

The First Victory Like the Famous First Olive.
Every victory you win over yourself, whether it is over mental laziness or over some defect in your character, makes the next victory easier. When you are trying to establish a good habit or get rid of a bad one, remember it is always the first victory that is hardest. And the best part of it all is that not only does one victory make the next victory in that particular line easier, but makes self-conquest in any line easier.

The Accurate Bed Maker Becomes The Accurate Teacher.
For instance, suppose you have a tendency to haste and inaccuracy. If you train yourself to make the beds or do the dishes with care and nicety instead of in the hurried, casual way that is your instinct, that will help you to put more care and accuracy into your college work, or your typing, or your school teaching, or whatever line of endeavor you take up. Of course, the reverse is true—slovenliness, relaxation of moral standard in any line, weakens the whole fibre of your character.

LUCK.

I often hear of lucky guys, for whom the fates have no rebuke; while some laboriously rise, they gain the summit by a fluke. They canter gaily up the road, unscarred, unbruised, while luckless men, are chafed and wearied by their load, and lost, or foundered in the fen. But when I meet the lucky cuss, and analyze and parse his curves, I find he's like the rest of us—he only gets what he deserves. He is a gent who sanely plans to gain an honor or a buck; and so he climbs while also rans are grumbling sorely of his luck. He is a hustling delegate who is resolved to work and win; he moves along while others wait for some fake ship to saunter in. His wholesome ardor never flags he yields to no fell circumstance; while human failures shake their rags and say they never had a chance. The kind of luck this fellow sees will stick with him through life, I guess; for it is based on qualities that evermore command success. The faker with the gilded brick may think he's lucky for a day; but all his profits vanish quick, and all his honors fade away. Luck's not confined to neighborhoods to humble shack or fretted hall; if you're the guy who has the goods you'll find luck at your beck and call.

Wants Destruction of Churches.

The New York Herald Says: It is impossible for any decent man to read the appeal of Mr. H. S. Andrews to his fellow Catholics in the United States for aid to rebuild the ruined and looted churches of Northern France without feeling bitter indignation against the sacrilegious Germans who throughout the war showed that they had as little respect for religion as they had for human rights of any sort.

Here are the facts. More than four thousand churches, chapels, vestries, and clerical houses were destroyed, most of them simply through hatred and for no military purpose whatever—in other words, unnecessarily. Another thousand were reduced to ruins. The ancient and lovely vessels, vestments, laces and linens, objects essential to or associated with public worship in these churches, were either destroyed or stolen and carried off to Germany. In the diocese of Amiens 212 churches were completely destroyed; in that of Arras, 220; in Chalons sur Marne, 30; in Soissons, 305; in Rheims, 100, and in Verdun, 150.

THE MISER'S MISTAKE.

He looked upon the dollar as a treasure in itself. He carried home his money and he kept it on a shelf; He heard his loved ones pleading for a little bit of joy. But he'd rather own a dollar than a happy little boy contented. And he'd rather have a bankroll as the symbol of his life Than a proud and smiling lady who was glad to be his wife. He worshipped gold and silver which in musty vaults are stored. The little joys his children sought he could not well afford; He'd rather keep his money than to change it into mirth. And laughter and contentment and the things of real worth; He'd rather have the dollar than the thing that it would buy; He could hear the clink of silver, but was deaf to every sigh. He never learned that money in itself is metal cold. That the joy of its possession in its sum is never told. That it must be changed to dresses and to toys and ribbons pink. If a man would know the sweetness of the music of its clink; That the way to think of money is in terms of pleasures new. And the lives which can be brightened by the good that it can do. He is happiest and richest who finds money-happiness. In the glad hearts of his loved ones who are sharing his success. Who goes forward dollar-seeking, not for sordid wealth alone. But to give more and to do more in the circle where he's known; And I'm sorry for the mortal who can hear his children sigh. But would rather have the dollar than the joy that it would buy.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE PRINCE AND THE BAR.
About a month ago I stated that the Prince of Wales was shortly to be called to the Bar and admitted as a Bencher of the Middle Temple. His Royal Highness has just indicated that it will be convenient for him to visit the Middle Temple for this ceremony in the early part of July, and that so soon as he returns from his present tour in Cornwall and Devonshire he will affix a definite date. His Royal Highness will be received in the historic old hall of the Middle Temple by the Benchers and members of the Inn, and an address of welcome will be made to him by the Treasurer, Lord Coleridge. A guard of honour of the Inn of Court Officers Training Corps (the "Devil's Own") will be mounted outside the hall, and the Prince will inspect this prior to the ceremony taking place. The procedure to be followed on this occasion will be very similar to that observed when the late King Edward became a Bencher of the Middle Temple in 1861. When he was an undergraduate at Oxford the Prince of Wales took a special course in Constitutional Law, so that he is not entirely without qualifications for his new dignity.

ROYAL VISITORS.
The Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden and their family will arrive in this country very shortly to stay for a few weeks with the Duke of Connaught, and will probably join the royal party at Ascot. When the then Princess Margaret of Connaught mar-

THE PRESS AND WHITEHALL.
Some of the journalists who have been working in Government Departments as publicity managers are being invited to become permanent officials. Their work has been so useful during the war that the Government proposes to keep them going in peace. The publicity man in Whitehall was entirely a war product. It was Lloyd George, when he was starting his great munitions campaign, who first saw the importance of placing propaganda in the hands of skilled journalists. In the old days the idea of employing men from Fleet Street in Whitehall would have caused the collapse of the hideous type of civil servant. The newspaper munitions campaign was a brilliant success, and before many months every war department had its publicity branch, and wherever a new office was started the Journalist always had his room. From the very beginning of the Food Ministry had a particularly large and active press department, and most journalists going to it for information would agree that it was of the greatest value. In any case, the pre-war attitude of Whitehall to the journalist, a compound of superciliousness and negation worthy of a Front Bench answer to tiresome questioners, is gone. The war has shown even Whitehall the extreme importance of keeping in touch with the public, and if possible of forestalling criticism, through the press. Nothing so disheartened American and other foreign journalists here as the cold-shouldering they experienced in Government offices. The officials have learned better now.

STOCKINGS OR NONE?
The Central Empires have left off stockings because they had none to wear. In France fashionable women from choice have discarded stockings in favor of the highest and most be-ruffled shoes. Sometimes they wear a sort of net made in the shape of a stocking, which has wide meshes and is really only the ghost of a stocking. Even in London the thinnest of women's stockings could hardly go much further, and a suggestion has been made that black-leaded legs should suffice. The process, says the humorists, would have all the effect of silk stockings, and would never need mending. At this rate it looks as if there will soon be profiteering in wool.

NEW OPERA STARS.
The first month of Convent Garden Grand Opera has been notable for the number of newcomers to the firmament of operatic stars. These have been chiefly masculine. During the long waits between the acts controversial conversation in the stalls, as well as among the music students in the gallery, is all on which of the three new tenors is the coming Cassio. Many champion the young Irish-Lancashire man, Thomas Burke. The Italian patrons of the opera hall him as their own, since he was trained in Italy, and made his name at Milan. There are others prepared to fight, and die if necessary, for the cause of the young Frenchman, Ferdinand Anseau, and in the stalls one evening I heard three Society dames espousing the cause of the young Greek, Ulysses Lappas, to their menfolk. "He looks a hero and sings like one," was the unanimous opinion of the ladies.

TINY WATCHES.
Expensive watches are coming into fashion again among women, after being superseded during the war by the time-keeper of purely utilitarian design. The tendency is to make them as small as possible, and the most popular idea is that of tiny silver watches—square, octagonal, rectangular, or round—worn on a wrist band of black watered ribbon. Another tiny watch is shaped as a globe, about as big as a child's marble, which can be worn in a buttonhole. Watch chains have still to come into fashion again.

THE OPEN-AIR HABIT.
While private enterprises have been going very slowly, a good deal has been done officially to meet the growing demand for open-air cafes in London. It is only in the public parks and places where there are Government refreshment houses that the demobilised Army can follow the habits it learned on the Continent. So successful is the undertaking carried on by the National Kitchen Department of the Ministry of Food that extensions are gradually being made, and shortly an open-air cafe will be opened on Primrose Hill. Notwithstanding the evidently growing demand, private firms continue to invite their customers to eat in crowded rooms and stifling atmospheres, and refuse to contemplate the Continental plan. The chief objection raised is that English weather is not kindly disposed to these innovations, and that the dust, and smoke of London pervade everywhere, and would make it impossible for people to enjoy their food. People who have become accustomed to the outdoor habit point to innumerable places in London where a start might be made, and the common excuses are scouted as but specious inventions when they obviously do not apply to the officially managed eating places in the parks. There is abundant evidence of the popularity that would attend open-air cafes, for at the Government establishments, in spite of atrocious services, there is always an enormous demand for tables and places.

THE O. M.
The giving to Admiral Beatty and Field Marshal Haig of the Order of Merit brings the list of military members up to seven. The civil members are twelve, consisting of four statesmen (Lord Moery, Lord Bryce, Lord Haldane and Mr. Balfour), four scientists (Lord Rayleigh), Professor Henry Jackson, Sir Joseph Thomson, and Sir Archibald Geikie), two authors (Thomas Hardy and Sir George Trevelyan), and one musician (Sir Edward Elgar). The expectation is that Lord Grey's name will soon be added. There is no woman.

JERU BACK FROM THE WAR.
Ordinary mortals who have outlived early dress of emineence and ground and lofty tumblers in popular circles are finding London's street traffic rather trying just now. Since the arrival of the motor car, the motor bus, and the motor cab, the average pedestrian has never been quite free to take his own time at crossings. He has, however, to be even more lively in his movements—much more lively indeed—now that Jeru is back in his old place with experience of the war to help him along. The busman seems to move at a greatly accelerated pace from point to point, and he has obviously developed new views as to how to pick up new passengers. When you venture into the roadway and raise a hand in order to stay his progress, he fixes you with a steady eye and then goes through an evolution which closely resembles an attempt to run you down. But he does not really run you down. What happens is never very clear, but you find yourself safe and sound and upright on the platform of the vehicle, whose pace has apparently never slackened. It is a trying game, but no doubt Londoners will get used to it.

Rough on Phyllis.
"Mr. Wimble, may I look at your watch?" said little Jimmie.
"Yes, my little man," said Mr. W., smiling at Jimmie's grown-up sister.
"You mustn't worry Mr. Wimble," said Phyllis, in a sweet voice. "And, Jimmie, mother said you were to go to bed at eight o'clock, so come an' now."
Jimmie set his angel face into a grizzle.
"Shant!" burst out the youngster. "I want to see you two play cards."
"I'm shocked at you being so naughty," gravely spoke Phyllis. "And we are not going to play cards."
"Oh, yes you are," bawled out Jimmie. "'cos I heard ma say to pa that she hoped you'd play your cards well to-night!"

The Budding Financier.
In a certain large business house the chief is a very busy man indeed, and at the same time a very peppery individual. So large is his concern that it is quite impossible for him to keep in touch with the many details of his business, and one of the departments he leaves to his manager is the payment of his clerks. But about a month ago one of his men bearded him in his den and broached the subject of an increase of salary. His wages had stood at £150 a year too long to please him.
"All my clerks are paid what they are worth to me," snapped the old man, "and I look upon your application as a piece of impertinence?"
A happy thought struck the clerk. "Two hundred and fifty a year, sir," he replied.
"Um!" replied the old man. "Well, that is all I have to say to you. Send in the manager."
The manager entered shortly afterwards.
"Make Brown's salary £200 a year," said the magnate. The manager was about to offer an explanation. "Do as I tell you," thundered the old man. "I'll teach the upstart to dictate to my wha salary to pay my people."

ed and put under control.
Your warfare upon the seas has been a policy of murder and barbarism which had it not taken place would never have been believed to have been possible. Women and children and neutral travellers have been murdered whenever the chance presented itself.
Your treatment of prisoners of war alone will damn your country for generations.
The writer of this is the senior of our firm. His eldest son was a wounded prisoner in your hands, and we know at first hand to what depths of inhuman methods in that direction you can go. The writer's second son, a medical student doing his humane work in Army Medical at Gallipoli, was killed in the field by your associates, the Turks, who were, until you showed yourselves, the bloodiest murderers of Europe—your very fit associates.
If your country—wanting war—had waged it with some sort of chivalry, as has been usual in the case of civilized nations and savage races, whether the Allies had won or lost, at the conclusion a peace would have been made and a mutual respect or regard born in an honorable feud would probably have grown into a mutual friendship. You preferred the methods we have briefly alluded to, thereby making your name and reputation loathed and detested.
None of us here want your products, your countrymen, nor your communications.—The Times.

German Trade Overtures.

A STRAIGHT ANSWER FROM AUSTRALIA.
The following correspondence has passed between a German firm in New York and a firm in Australia:
New York, Dec. 24, 1918.
Gentlemen—We take the liberty of sending you herewith enclosed a copy of our wholesale price list, and call your attention to the fact that the products therein listed, and which were formerly manufactured by E. Schering, Berlin, Fabrik von Heyden, Radebul, and Goedecke & Co., Leipzig, are now manufactured in the U.S.A. either by ourselves or under our direct supervision.
Judging from inquiries received from time to time, these preparations have been difficult to obtain in your markets for a considerable period, and then only at a premium.
The purpose of this communication is therefore to acquaint you with the fact that we are in a position to take care of all requirements for these products, and, with a few exceptions, at the normal pre-war prices.
We solicit your inquiries, and will be pleased to quote special export prices for larger quantities than specified in our list. We can also supply clinical literature on any of these products.
Hoping to have the pleasure of hearing from you, we are,
Very truly yours,
SCHERING & GLATZ,
Messrs. Schering & Glatz,
150-2, Maiden-Lane, New York,
N. Y., U. S. A.
Sirs—We have to acknowledge yours of December 24, informing us that firms formerly manufacturing in Berlin, Radebul, and Leipzig are now manufacturing in U. S. A., under your supervision, "that their products with a few exceptions are at normal pre-war prices, that our inquiries are solicited, and you hope for the pleasure of hearing from us," &c.
Before your country decided to commit the greatest crime the world has known, and which they launched in August, 1914, our firm had dealt with yours and similar in Germany for nearly 50 years. Your products we admired and largely used, your travellers we welcomed, your countrymen who settled here we made friends of and admitted to our clubs and homes.
In your wicked madness you opened the war hoping that by deceiving your friends, dishonoring your treaties, outraging any small neutral nation that stood in your way, and by committing every crime and bestiality you could think of, to win through by brute force. Your spies were in every land; here they were unmask-

Jottings for July.

(John O'London's Weekly.)
One of the favorite stories of the late Mr. G. W. E. Russell was the following. On the back of a seat on the esplanade at a small seaside town he saw these words:
Presented by Alderman Buggins.
"The sea is his and he made it."
Willie was disgusted to find that he got no marks for his little essay: "The earth revolves on its own axis 365 times in 24 hours. This rapid motion thro' space causes its sides to perspire, this is called dew."
The Duchess had called in the Bishop to talk to her little granddaughter who frequents the stables a lot and had picked up the stablemen's language.
Taking the little girl on his knee, the Bishop said: "And now, my dear, a little bird has whispered to me that a little girl I know sometimes uses naughty words."
Little Girl: "Oh, it was it that damned sparrow?"
They were short of an oarsman and the Stroke of No. 1 boat went to look for a man. He asked the first likely-looking man he met whether he was an oarsman. "No," was the answer; "never bin on an 'orse in me life."
Mr. Chauncey Dewey used to tell a splendid story of a Chicago man who died and found himself in another world. He was walking about when a fellow-countryman noticed him, linked an arm and said, "Well, sonny, how do you like it?" "Oh, it's bully," said the Chicago man. "Heaven is a durned sight better than Chicago." "Heaven!" exclaimed his companion. "This ain't Heaven!"
Miss Compton in a happy little speech recently touched on the subject of gratitude, which evidently is not the prerogative of the human species. She told the following tall tale, says the Evening News, of a grateful rattlesnake.
"Rescued from a trap and taken home by a peasant, the praiseworthy creature later proved its thanks by securing a burglar. It coiled the upper part of itself round the burglar's neck, and hung its tail out of the window, where it rattled for the police!"
Different people have different conceptions of the new England that is to arise out of the war. Here is what a major would like:
Inefficient Major, promoted by accident, no decorations, not so young as he used to be, wants job; salary every consideration; not too much work.—Box T.250, The Times.
Two days later he followed up this advertisement by another:

Inefficient Major wishes to thank the many strangers for their so kind inquiries after his job which he has not yet obtained. As these were so numerous he is unable to answer them all personally—this would entail too much work.—Box T607, The Times.

Diner: "I'd like a juicy, tender steak, medium done, with a lump of fine butter on top."
Waiter: "That would be very nice, sir. And now what will you have?"

A peppery old gentleman happened to traverse a road where several houses were being built. Suddenly something hard descended with terrific force on his head. He looked up to the top of the building, where several men were at work.
"You have dropped a brick on my head!" he roared.
"Oh, it's all right; we've got plenty more here," replied a voice.

The following story was told by the late Ian Watson, to illustrate the brevity with which the Scotch conduct their conversation. A man had borrowed a pot of green paint from a neighbour. As it had not been returned, the man thought he would pay his neighbour a call.
The man's wife answered his knock at the door.
"Good evening, Missus."
"Good evening."
"Is Tam in?"
"Aye."
"Can A' see him?"
"No, ye canna see him."
"But I want to see him."
"Ye canna see him the night."
"Why not?"
"He's deid!"
"Deid?"
"Aye! he's deid."
"Sudden?"
"Vera sudden."
"Did he say anything about a pot of fireen paint afore he deid?"

First Waiter: "Did that Aussie offer tip you well? You served him mighty quick."
Second Waiter: "Tip! I should say he did. He told me if I didn't step lively he'd blow my whiskers off with his revolver."
Rector: "Those pigs of yours are in fine condition, Jarvis."
Jarvis: "Yes, sur, they be. Ah, sur, if we was all on us only as fit to die as them are, sur, we'd do!"

ROUGHING IT IN A "CARLINGTON."

Roughing it, where the roughing it is roughest—tracking round the lakes—up the mountains—on a long hike—anywhere you go, the CARLINGTON will prove a goodfellow pal worth taking along—an un-wettable barrier between you and the weather.

When you tighten the belt around your CARLINGTON before you get after your dinner—hunting it—fishing it, you just don't care what kind of weather comes, because you know the CARLINGTON will never back down from our Guarantee. The oiled silk lining in this Master Trench Coat just keeps the rain sliding off the duck's back—and that's where you fool the rain. And the thickness of the wool cloth that goes into every CARLINGTON, and the fine lining close to your backbone, gives you that nice warm feeling that you get inside your winter coat—and thought you couldn't get inside of anything else.

It feels so good to be inside this Prince of Rain Repellers while the weather man is working overtime outside—and you with your belt tight and your big reefer collar tickling your ears, you act like a kid with a new toy.

Guess you won't worry much about roughing it on vacation once you hitch up with a CARLINGTON.

For any old job—motoring, camping, hunting, fishing; for any old weather, rain, hail, snow—the CARLINGTON will so fit into your scheme of things that you'll find it as handy as a medicine chest—and you'll bring it around with you wherever you go, just because you feel safe having it with you—a pal you can depend on when the whole blamed world seems to go crooked on your week-end!

We'll have a private showing of the CARLINGTON for you—BUT, DO IT NOW!

HIS PREFERENCE.
A farmer took his wife to a good concert, and, after listening with apparent enjoyment, the pair suddenly became interested in one of the grand choruses.

"All we, like sheep, have gone astray."
First a sharp soprano voice exclaimed, "All we, like sheep;" next a deep voice uttered, in a most earnest tone, "All we, like sheep."

Then all the singers at once exclaimed, "All we, like sheep."
"Well, I don't," exclaimed the farmer to his partner. "I like beef and bacon but I can't bear mutton."

Thrilling Rescue

Crew Had Lost Hope—Landed at Hull.

A thrilling experience at sea in which they had a narrow escape with their lives, befell the crew of the sailing ship Mabel Davis, who were landed at Hull to-day, by the steamer Henry T. Scott. The rescuing steamer only got them aboard in the nick of time, for they had been on their water-logged vessel eleven days, which was then on the point of foundering in the Atlantic. During this anxious period the crew were continuously in turn at the pumps to which they were tied, or they would have been washed overboard. Capt. A. Saunders and the crew of the Mabel Davis had made a plucky and determined effort to keep the water under, but it had gained on them, and they had about abandoned hope when the steamer Henry T. Scott, bound from New York to Hull with general cargo and wood, was attracted by a light sent up from the doomed sailing ship. The westerly gale was still blowing and seas running mountains high, but at no period of the eleven days was it possible for a small boat to be launched, and it was realised on board the steamer that if they attempted to launch a boat it would last but a few minutes. The Mabel Davis had managed to carry enough water to keep her bow to the wind. The problem was for the steamer to establish communication with the sailing vessel in such a raging sea; the captain of the Mabel Davis said that he had been 27 voyages, and had never experienced such a storm, and the captain of the steamer agreed it was the worst storm he had experienced in the Atlantic. The sailing vessel was helpless, but with commendable seamanship, the captain of the steamer kept his ship stern on to the bow of the sinking craft, and with a hundred fathoms' life lines, with lifeboats were thrown from the steamer, and eventually hooked aboard the sailing vessel, and the shipwrecked crew fastened the lines to the life jackets they were wearing. In turn, they jumped into the sea, and were drawn up, through a hundred fathoms of water to the steamer, and pulled aboard, the marvel being they were not dashed against the ship's side.

April 15th, with a cargo of salt for Newfoundland. They called at Gibraltar, and left on April 17th, and were 23 days out, and near the Banks of Newfoundland when they met a terrific westerly storm. For eleven days they lay too, keeping the vessel's bow to the wind, but seas washed over them. With the strain the vessel began to leak, and though all hands were kept at the pumps night and day the water began to gain on them gradually. It was not till eleven days had elapsed that they sighted the lights of a steamer, which proved to be the Henry T. Scott, at 2 a.m., and sent up flares. At the time they were slowly sinking. The steamer stood by, but could make no rescue efforts till daylight. The mate explained how they put on their life preservers and were pulled through the sea. "It had looked very dreary for us, with our vessel sinking under us, and no hope of getting off, but still pumping for dear life. It was pretty good getting all seven of us off a wreck in a storm like that without a mishap." The steamer carried a motor engine, but had no attachment for the pump. The "Mail" discussed with the mate, a smart young man, the airman at Newfoundland, and the mate expressed the hope that Hawker would not have the bad luck to come down on such a sea as they had experienced. The shipwrecked men are all Newfoundlanders, and with the exception of the captain, who has been in Hull previously shipwrecked, had not hitherto been in England. They were Captain A. Saunders, Ernest Spencer (mate), Herbert Barrett (bosun), Alex. Newell, Leonard Smith, Andrew Seaward (seaman), and John Curtis (cook). They spoke highly of the generous treatment accorded them on the steamer. The sailing craft foundered after they had been rescued. The shipwrecked men lost all their belongings.

At Hull they were accommodated at Mr. Blyth's boarding house, Hummer Dock-street, and will be sent on later to their homes in Newfoundland.—Hull Daily Mail, May 19, 1919.

A TERRIFIC STORM.
Ernest Spencer, the mate, told the "Mail" that he was nearly drowned, and that he only got two glimpses of the steamer, as he was pulled through the sea. He also said that the Mabel Davis left Santa Paula, Spain, on to Sir Edgar's influence that the captain and men obtained passage by the trooper after spending 36 days in England, worn out by constant but futile applications to the Board of Trade, the officials of which were crassly and openly negligent and careless of the shipwrecked mariners' condition. Captain and crew alike lost everything they possessed, the master's loss being especially severe as all his instruments and charts went down with the ship.

77 Trees in One Day is Wilhelm's Record.

AMERONGEN, Holland. — Seventy-seven trees sawn in one day is the best record attained by Wilhelm Hohenzollern since his flight into Holland and his semi-imprisonment in the Castle of Amerongen. On May 14th he completed the sawing of 3,000 trees. The last of these was cut into about thirty small blocks, which were taken to the ex-Kaiser's apartments in the Castle and there marked by his own hand with the date of the occurrence.

On this occasion, as when the one thousandth and two thousandth trees were cut, blocks were presented as souvenirs to several members of his suite and to the workmen in the castle garden who helped in arranging the trees for sawing. Most of the remaining blocks were then packed in a case and sent off to Germany for distribution among those who have remained true to the memory of their former ruler.

Many efforts have been made by visitors to Amerongen to obtain possession of one of these blocks, but all efforts to purchase them from their owners have been futile. It must not be imagined that the trees in question are giants of the forest. Most of them are mere saplings. The ex-Kaiser complained about the smallness of the trunks brought to him, and recently some trees of from three to six inches in diameter have been placed on the sawing block for him. He sometimes becomes very nervous when working at his self-imposed task and is inclined to snap a sharp remark not to the liking of those aiding him, whether they be ordinary laborers employed by Count Bentinck or members of the former monarch's suite. This occurs occasionally when a bent tree trunk is placed on the block, and in order to avoid such occurrences orders have been given that only straight trunks be brought into the shed, so that when they are laid on the block ready for sawing they shall not move. The trunks are all marked in advance with white chalk at the places where they are to be sawn. On the day when the ex-Kaiser completed his three thousandth tree there was a narrow escape from a tragedy in the grounds of the castle. Cynthia, the former Kaiserin's dachshund, was accompanying its mistress in the garden, when it perceived the castle cat, Poesje, the mother of a litter of four kittens. When Cynthia approached the basket where the kittens were lying Poesje sprang at Cynthia's nose. A shriek from an attendant did not frighten the cat. The ex-Kaiserin became terribly excited, and someone cried "Kill the beast!" This, however, was unnecessary, as a gardener crept from behind, seized Poesje by the neck and carried her off to a stable, to which her kittens were also carried. Since this she has been locked in the stable. Cynthia at last accounts was still suffering from several severe scratches.

Telephone System Vices.

We are glad to see that the "Daily Telegraph" has called attention to a subject which is causing great and growing resentment among business men. The telephone service has never been good. Since the war it has been deplorably bad, and since the armistice it has been worse than ever.

The vices of the telephone service are, at bottom, those of nationalised business generally. It is nobody's interest to show enterprise. It is to nobody's detriment to be a little slack. A certain standard must be observed by each individual, but beyond that the usual incentives of reward and punishment have no effect.

But a little slackness in every individual means a very great slackness in the aggregate, and when the position is complicated by real and unusual difficulties the slackness rapidly assumes monstrous proportions. The complaint against the telephone service may be easily summarised. It is next to impossible to get a telephone installation; there is constant trouble in using it when got; the charges are unduly high; the operators are constantly giving wrong numbers; "number engaged" is a formula often used when it cannot possibly represent the fact; the time occupied in getting trunk calls is altogether absurd; complaints are received with polite indifference; there is no redress for very substantial loss owing to the failures of the staff, this latter complaint applying also to letters and telegrams.

The Postmaster-General overcharges you, and you must pay, or give up your instrument. He wastes your time and your money, but you have no redress. Further, there is no flexibility of charges, such as obtains in private enterprise. A villager with a telephone has to pay absurdly in proportion to the actual use he makes of it as compared with the dweller in a big town.

Such are the defects of an undertaking of the kind most appropriate for State management. We cannot expect the Government, having acquired a monopoly, to part with it. But the stagnation and even the deterioration of the telephone service since it came under official control is surely a warning against experiments with industries in which everything depends on the intelligence and initiative of the individual.—Evening Standard, London, Eng.

Preparing for Ocean to Ocean Flight.

WASHINGTON, District of Columbia.—Tests are now being made with the new United States Martin bomber aeroplane to determine its fitness to attempt a trans-continental flight within the next week or ten days. Capt. Roy Francis, who will pilot the machine from New York to San Francisco, California, will give it the first long-distance trial by flying from Dayton, Ohio, to New York this week, according to present plans. The manufacturer's tests last Saturday were satisfactory.

After reaching New York the date for starting for San Francisco, provided the machine has functioned properly in all preliminary tests, will be determined by weather conditions. It is planned to start when the weather is fair over the whole course. The flight of 2750 miles is scheduled to be made in 32 hours, with only one stop, at North Platte, Nebraska. The first leg of 1500 miles successfully flown, will surpass the flight from Newfoundland to the Azores by the United States navy seaplanes.

The hardest part of the trip will be from North Platte to San Francisco, 1241 miles, across the Sierra Nevada mountains. Landing places in case of trouble are numerous from New York to North Platte, but in the last half of the flight the mountains offer few suitable open spaces. However, several flights across the Sierras have been made, the most recent effort by Lieut. William Hamm McR. Beck in a De Havilland four plane. His observations are available for the guidance of Captain Francis. Lieutenant Beck covered 545 miles from Sacramento, California, in 321 minutes. It was necessary to fly at an average altitude of 11,000 feet. The Allegheny Mountains in the east present comparatively little difficulty, as they can be crossed at an altitude of less than 3000 feet, and the distance is much shorter.

Both military and commercial flying are expected to profit greatly by this flight from ocean to ocean. A successful flight from North Platte will show that the United States Army has a machine capable of effective operation for 1500 miles within an enemy's lines, while regular freight and passenger service will be proven practicable, and doubtless soon will be maintained along the route to be established by Captain Francis.

Its Own Driver.

Two farmers had been enjoying a festive evening, and both of them "had done themselves remarkably well," to use an expressive phrase.

They had a drive of five miles before them, and it was a very dark night, but the horse knew the way. Side by side they sat in the cart, and went along at a spanking pace. At length they swung round a sharp turn in a most alarming manner, only just missing the gatepost by an inch or two.

"Gently, George, gently round the corner, old man," murmured Bill. "What, haven't you got the reins either?" he said.

Premier Clemenceau of France says: "We have waited forty-nine years for this moment," speaking of the announcement that Germany would sign the peace treaty.

On the other hand the British press is profoundly distrustful of Germany, as it has a right to be in the light of the sinking of the German fleet interned in British waters. It is held that we cannot afford to regard the Germans otherwise than as treacherous until the last penny is paid, and most of us will agree that this is a fair diagnosis of the German situation.—Burlington Free Press.
