NIGHT BATTLE RAGES

Enemy Driven Back After Advancing From Cumieres Village.

LONDON, May 31.—After the dying sown of the violent battle which raged in the vicinity of le Mort Homme yesterday, the French counter-attacked the Germans and captured a strong field work which the enemy had constructed on the slopes southwest of Le Mort Homme, and took 220 prisoners and seven machine guns. They also took 25 Germans prisoner in a surprise attack on the slopes southeast of Le

The Germans violently bombarded the region of Avocourt and Hill 304 with shells of large calibre.

Across the Meuse on the eastern bank the rival artilleries actively shelled each other on the line between the Meuse and Fort Vaux, but no infantry action was fought. The French guns fired on and dispersed German concentrations porth of the Rois des Fosses.

Violent Night Battle.

The infantry fighting in the Mort Homme region hast evening and night was quite violent. The Germans brought fresh troops into action and they at first made headway south of Cumieres Village and on the ridge sast of it, but a counter-attack drove them back to the southern outskirts of the village and the rapid-fire French runs annihilated their detachments on the ridge. Large numbers of men were amployed by the enemy in his attacks sast of Le Mort Homme and on French positions in Cumieres Village. the house of lords today the condition of British prisoners in Germany, Baron Newton, under-secretary for foreign affairs, said their condition was much better than at the beginning of the war, and that it was unjustifiable to contend that Germany discriminated against British prisoners.

Moreover, Baron Newton added, it was cruel to suggest, as had been done, that British prisoners were literally starving. Every week 100,000 parcels went from England to Germany, which was an average of three parcels per man per week. It was an exaggeration to say that without these parcels they would starve, because there were 1,000,000 prisoners in Germany who received no parcels.

They say that they have consolidated in the region of Asiago and Arsiero, driving the Italians from Gallio, northeast of Asiago, and storming positions on the heights to the north-ward. His Party Landed on Elephant Island After Ship Was Crushed.

TRIP IN SMALL BOAT

Twenty-Two of Party Left Behind in Need of Speedy Relief.

LONDON, June 1, 3.07 a.m.-Lieut. Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, has arrived safely at Port Stanley, Falkland Islands.

The announcement came as a com-plete surprise, following as it did upon the statement of Premier Asquith in the house of commons today that a committee had been appointed by the admiralty to give information concerning the measures necessary for the re-lief of Lieut. Sir Ernest Shackleton and those of his men who are maroon ed in the Antarctic. Mr. Asquith said parliament would be asked to German Army in East Africa parliament would be asked to Austria-Hungary Will Be portion of available men was retained for home defende.

The news that Lieut. Shackleton was safe reached London shortly after mid-night. The message was from the explorer himself and announced his arrival at Port Stanley.

Ship Crushed in Ice.

The message said his ship, the Endurance, had been "crushed" in a Weddell Sea ice fice last October, but that it drifted until midwinter, when he and his party landed on Elephant Island, in the south Shetland group.

The explorer left in a small boat with five men a week later to summon help, leaving 22 men behind. All of them were well, but in a situation which demands the quickest possible rellef.

The message from Lieut, Shackleton was dated Port Stanley, May 31. It said that he left Elephant Island April 24.

Quick Action Needed.

The gravest fears had been entertained for the explorer during the past two weeks, owing to the absence of news from the Endurance.

The news of the safety of Sir Ernest and the small party with him has not lessened the necessity for relief, which is even more pressing now on behalf of the men left behind in the ice on Elephant Island, probably scantily provided with provisions and other necessities, as well as in behalf of the Ross Sea party, which was stranded on the great barrier thru the breaking away of the relief ship Aurora, which returned to New Zealand early in the year.

Ernest Shackleton's expedition which had as an object the crossing of the Antarctic continent from Weddell Sea to Ross Sea, started from England in August, 1914. Sir Ernest with one section of the party went to Buenos Ayres and the other section to Tasmania. At Buenos Ayres, in October, 1914, Sir Ernest sailed for Weddell Sea. The other party later proceded from Tasmania by the steamer Aurora for Ross Sea, where it was hoped that Ernest and his party would join it after crossing the continent.

Early in the present year the Aurora returned to Port Chalmers, New Zealand, having broken adrift in the ice on May 6, 1915. Eight of her men were ashore when the vessel broke away, and nothing has been heard fram Shackleton and his companions at the Ross Sea base.

The fact that the section of the expedition headed by Shackleton returned to its virtual point of departure means that the expedition failed in its primary object. ldren will be up in arms against' them, Therefore, every man allable is needed for the army.

The violent battle of Trentino still rages, with the Austrian troops they had evacuated Punta Cordin, on the Asiago plateau, and evacuated drew on the southern slopes of this mountain. But in the Lagarina Valley, their ground and annihilated the powerful storming columns of Austrians the Taro Brigade won distinction by sallying from their trenches and pursutheir part, make boastful claims and speak of "conquering" the following Punta Cordin and Monte Priafora. They assert that since the offensive be-

What appears to be the actual case in the Trentino is this: The Austrians began the battle by attempting to force their way down the Adige by carrying the Italian positions in the Lagarina Valley. These have been solidly held for over a week, and so following the line of least resistance the enemy has spread out his attacks like the Germans did before Verdun after they were halted on the line Cote du Poivre (Douaumont ridge), to Vaux and were compelled to divert their surplus forces to attacks on the western bank of the Meuse. The Italians, on their right wing, like the French, on their left wing, have withdrawn from their forward covering positions. Some of the places mentioned by the Austrians as captured were among the eight towns and other positions abandoned in the No Man's Land, between the two armies. The Austrians now speak of their efforts as being directed merely to the "expulsion" of the Italians from Austrian

In the struggle before Verdun the French utilized the lull in the German attempts to capture Le Mort Homme by rushing a strong field work which the enemy had just constructed on the southwestern slopes of this position, and with it they captured 220 Germans and seven machine guns. The lines about Cumieres were the centre of the latest furious struggle. The transition stage between war of position and war of manoeuvre which the fighting here has reached was shown by the ability of the Germans to make some progress in their assaults from the southern outskirts of the village towards Chattancourt and by the swing of the pendulum backward when the French rallied and forced the enemy to retreat to the village. The fact that German detachments were able to progress along the Meuse under cover of a fog and appear on the heights of Chattancourt station before they were observed and "annihilated" by the French artillery is also signifiof the transitional condition of the fighting. The Germans have so far shown nothing original. One day they attack Le Mort Homme with great fury and intensity. The next day or week they attack Hill 304 and Avocourt wood and so on in rotation.

Various interviews, including that of Count Tisza, Hungarian premier, hinting at peace and stating that Germany has gained all she has desired, etc., that have been sent out from Berlin, are undoubtedly in part published for the purpose of educating the German public for a new phase of the war as understood by the central powers, the final embarking on a defensive policy purely and simply, in order to conserve their remaining reserves. Germany has been denied the occupation of Paris and the capture of Verdup; she will be denied these objectives unless some extraordinary accident happens, and so she has to prepare for resistance to the allied offensive. But she is being thrown on the defensive after her offensive powers have about exhausted, and a defensive in the latter stages of a war never wins it if the enemy knows his business.

Gen. Smuts, commander-in-chief of the British expeditionary force in East Africa, reports that he has carried the invasion further into the interior and that the column which is advancing down the Panagni River has reached the south end of the Egare Mountains and has got in touch with enemy near Nikocheni. The big seven-act feaure, "Sherlock Holmes," will continue to be presented at the Strand Theatre for the remainder of this week. It is proving a great attraction, and no wonder, for it is one of the strongest and best photo-plays that have been seen in Toronto for a very long while. The photography is just about as near perfection as motion picture photography can be. The story is one of the tensest interest thruout, interest which never fails or flags for a second. William Gillette, in the title role, is Conan Doyle's inimitable creation to the very life, and Maupain, playing opposite to him, makes an ideal "emperor of crooks." The Goldberg Boob comedy, which also figures on the bill, has a laugh in every second. Next week the Chaplin fans will have a turn, for "Police," Charlie Chaplin's latest, and (it is said) his best, will be presented at the Strand, and howhere else in town, the first half of next week.

MADISON THEATRE.

Having established herself as ope of the most brilliant actresses of the screen by her wonderful performance as the wife in "The Golden Chance," beautiful the Ridgley will be received." by her wenderful performance as the wife in "The Golden Chance," beautiful Cleo Ridgley will be zeen as a bold, bad bandit at the Madison on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "The Love Mask," which was written especially for her by Cecil B. DeMille, director-general of the Lasky Company, and Jeanie MacPhorson, author of "The Golden Chance." Dressed in true western bandit style, the fair star drops from an overhanging limb to the top of a stage and holds up the passengers. Miss Ridgley and Wallace Reid, who is co-starred with her in this production, are supported by a cast of unusual excellence. Also on the bill are a Paramount Travelogue and comedy "Oh, Doctor," with Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare.

Women Workers of Earlscourt Receive Complaint From Sergt. Wooding.

A meeting of the Independent Women Workers' Association of Earlcourt was held yesterday afternoon in Little's Hall, corner of Ascot and Earlscourt avenues. Vice-president Mrs. L. Harlan'i occupied the chair in the absence-thru illness of President Mrs. Frank Powell.

Secretary Mrs. Goddard reported having received a complaint from Sergt. Wooding of the non-receipt of a number of parcels of comforts sent thru the organization to him since the latter part of last year, altho he states parcels sent the same time to his comrades were received. It was decided to write military headquarters in London requesting an investigation.

Much activity in the preparation of comforts for the Earlscourt men at the front was reported by the convener of the patriotic branch of the association, and a large quantity of manufactured woolen goods, sox, tobacco, etc., was handed in. It was decided to despatch another consignment at an early date.

OPEN AIR PATRIOTIC MEETING IN WEST END

Rousing Addresses Delivered at Big Rally for Two Hundred and Twentieth. A grand open-air patriotic open-air meeting was held last night at New Toronto in the interests of the 220th Overseas Battali on. A large crowd was present, and much enthusiasm manifested. Lieut. J. W. Pickup occupied the chair, and read a poem written by a young lady who signed herself "One Who Would Go If She Could."

In the glow of a fine May morning the crowds made a memorable spectacle, and nothing was lacking in the demonstrations of the people's appreciation of the men who are on their way to fight the enemy. Woodstock men followed shortly after the train from Tillsonburg steamed in, and were expected to arrive in London at 10.30. Sharp at 8 o'clock Col. McMullen and officers had the men of A and D companies on the parade ground, and, without any ceremony the men were marched off to the station.

A RECENT railroad catastrophe has been attributed in part to a hungry, tired tower man, who, forgetting to set this gigmais caused a and suffered delusions.

"Feed the Brutes."

The results of these experiments are confirmed by your everyday experience. A man may come home to his dinner grouchy, cross, excitable and almost maniacal. He may says things he is afterwards sorry for, but as the meal progresses he "loosens up." His smile widens with his girth, for food soon converts the "hungry beast" into a man that is after Caesar's own heart, "fat, sleek-headed, and such as sleep o'nights."

Shipwrecked sailors, like typhoid fever victims, become delirious for want of food. When provender and water are wanted by the human tissues the memory, intellect, imagination, perception and the like are thrown out of gear because the mind somes as much from any other set of human structures as it does from the

The brain is the last part of your anatomy to be hurt by hunger. Yet the mind shows alteration at the very first pang of hunger. The brain and herves are least damaged, while the muscles, senses, flesh and blood are injured soonest. This confirms the discoveries of the last dozen years that the brain and nerves are merely path-ways of communication between thought and action, sensation and

In the intellectual conditions which follow hunger there is the same disturbance and disorder of thought found when the alcoholic intoxication is present. There is irregular memory, want of will power, loss of moral responsibility, unsteady conduct, visions and hallucinations.

Hunger, it seems, plays pranks of many kinds upon the minds of men. Perhaps this explains why overfed men sometimes are foolish. Too much food acts just as too little does. It prevents the dissues from getting their needed pabulum.

The Amateur Gardener

THE amateur gardener is often puzzled to know what to grow and what not to grow. Showants such plants as will give the greatest amount of satisfaction with wants such plants as will give the greatest amount of satisfaction with the least attention, but—she does not know what kinds will answer her purpose best. What shall she select? If she wants a fine show of color without gaudiness she cannot do better than chose three colors of phlox drummondi—the rose-colored, the white and the pale yellow. Such a combination is as charming as it is restful to the eye and one will never tire of it.

If she desires a brilliant bed she restul to the eye and one will never tire of it.

If she desires a brilliant bed she should use petunias—the crimson, the purple and the white in combination. These will bloom thru the entire season, but not as freely after the middle of August as during the mid-summer season unless the old branches are cut away and new plants are allowed to renew themselves, as they will in a short time, if given a chance to do so.

Another good plant where brilliance is desired is calliopsis. The rich yellows and browns of this flower can be greatly heightened by using a scarlet flower with it—either geraniums or salvia splendens.

For low beds under the windows of the living room nothing is better than the good old verbena.

For beds fully exposed to hot sunshine there is no flower quite equal to portulacca.

For edging beds sweet alyssum, purple and the white in combination. These will bloom thru the entire season, but not as freely after the middle of August as during the mid-summer season unless the old branches are cut away and new plants are allowed to renew themselvos, as they will in a short time, if given a chance to do so.

For low beds under the windows of the living room nothing is better than the good old verbena.

For beds fully exposed to hot sunshine there is no flower quite equal to portulacca.

For edging beds sweet alyssum, candy-tuft and ageratum will be found extremely satisfactory. All three are low growing plants of compact habit and profuse bloomers. And all three are of the easiest culture. An especially pleasing combination is a bed of single pink geraniums, bordered with pale lavender ageratum.

No collection can be considered complete that does not include the nasturtium. This is one of the all sround kind of flowers—good for cutting, fine for garden desoration and so easy to grow that a child cannot fail with it.

Another excellent stock is ton week stock. This has the merit of being a late bloomer. It is generally in its prime along about the time frost comes. Its flowers of white, pale pink, rosy lilac and yellow are borne in long spikes that make them fine for cutting, and they are as fragrant as a carnation.

Watch the plants when they are coming into bloom and pull up every one that bears a single flower. The doubles only are worth growing.

If there are many boxes to fill, I should strongly recommend nasturtiums, for a porch there is nothing better, and if you will use the soil from the florists for your boxes, they will grow wonderfully, will either hang or climb as you want them to, and you will not only have many flowers for your boxes but you can pick a bouquet every day.

Little Stories Told in Homely Rhyme

THE OLD CHOPPING BOWL

Copyright, 1916, by the Author, Bide Dudley.

SEE it in the cupboard yet 'mid pans in bright array-a memory' that cannot fade, the years have passed away—so chipped and cracked from blows amiss, but still remaining whole to do its duty ev'ry week—that wooden chopping bowl. How well those old familiar sounds in memory I hear! No grander notes could ever fall upon the youthful ear. How sweet the scent that filled the airal arising with the knife to herald hash—the country hash—one joy of rural life! How Rover used to sit and watch for pieces of the meaty too tough to yield to human teeth; just right for dogs to eat! And Tabby—how she'd purr about beneath the chopper's chair and watch the werk with eye alert to see she got her share! Such homely sights as hose today are very seldom seen. The bowl and knife have given way unto the deft machine. But who can say the hash today has a reached the goal of that which mother used to make to make ever reached the goal of that which mother used to make to music of the bowl?

But it was only a few days ago that Chase got his first real scare. The story, entitled, "The Jungle Hero." provides for a number of scanes at a zoological garden, in one of which, while Chase is passing the cages of lions, he is struck at by one of the beasts.

To discover the actual facts concerning the future activities of Miss Mary Pickford, star of the Famous Players Company, is a task requiring the prescience of a chess player. Last week there was every indication that the favorite player would shortly sever connections with the organization with which she has long been affiliated, but at the present writing it seems probable that she will head a company of her own, which will, however, be connected with the Fanous Players on a fifty-fifty basis as in the past, when pictures featuring Miss Pickford and produced by that company were half property of the actress.

According to her attorneys, Little Mary's company is being reorganized, and, while it will not be known under her name, will be a new concern, the pictures in all probability bearing the trade-mark of the Famous Players. She will, it is understood, retain her independence as a star. What the new company will be called is as yet undecided.

As to her negotiations with the Vitagraph Company, which were evidently quite well along, nothing definite can be learned. Of course, if the new organization is a fact, as, according to Miss Pickford's counsel, it is, this would end the negotiations. From J. Stuart Blackton's offices, however, the word comes that the matter has not been concluded.

From what is now stated, it is apparent that the new company has been in process of organization for a month and will be in such shape that details of its personnel and plans can be made public within a few days.

MAE MURRAY'S SUCCESSES

Mae Murray, the beautiful and talented young actress who scored such a wonderful success in a recent Lasky production of colonial days in Virginia, will shortly be seen in another picture entitled "Sweet Kitty Bellairs." which deals with English "West Countree" life in the eighteeath century. In "To Have and to Hold." Miss Murray occupied the leading role for the first time in her career, playing opposite to handsome Wallace Reid, and in the part of Lady Jocolyn Leigh caused quite a sensation among moving picture critics.
