THE SUNDAY WORLD INTERVIEWS MANUFAC TURERS AND MERCHANTS

At the beginning of this year of 1914 there were numerous predictions by bankers, and others, that the severe business depression that set in about the middle of 1913 would soon be over; that Canadian industry would soon recover the ground it had lost since the close of 1912, owing to the stringency in themoney market.

What has happened? Spring is here. This is the season when men are naturally optimistic, and look hopefully forward to better things. Now, if ever, there should be evidence of better things in store for the manu- that if officers are given the chance of facturers, the workmen, and the several millions in general who make up the population of Canada.

In an effort to ascertain exact conditions, The Sunday World has interviewed the men in Toronto who are most in touch with the situation, and their opinions follow:

"The greatest kidney remedy in the world," is what thousands of people say about "Fruit-a-tives." And it is true. "Fruit-a-tives" heals the kidneys, strengthens the kidneys, cures the kidneys, as nothing else will. All over Canada today, hundreds of people who were sick and suffering are curing themselves of kidney and bladder troubles, rheumatism and lumbago by taking "Fruit-a-tives," the famous medicine made from fruit juices.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, six for $2.50. Ottawa.

Sir Gilbert Parker's

Great New Novel "You Never Know Your Luck" Published Complete in the April Munsey

WHEN this novel goes into book form after it has appeared in The Munsey, it will cost you $1.50; in Munsey's Magazine it will cost you 15 cents, and in The Munsey you get it first.

Sir Gilbert Parker is unquestionably one of the first novelists of the day, and one of the most popular. His books, at $1.50 a copy, sell up into the hundreds of thousands—some of them as much as 400,000. With so tremendous a sale at $1.50, what ought the sale to be at only 15 cents? Four million copies, I should say, but as the edition of Munsey's Magazine for April is limited to 500,000 copies, there will be, on this theory, 3,500,000 disappointed persons.

If, therefore, you want to make sure of this new Parker novel at a cost of 15 cents, you would do well to get busy with your newsdealer before his supply of the April Munsey is exhausted.

with a full book-length novel published complete each issue, has hit a new high place in magazine making. I have been studying for a dozen or fifteen years to find a way to give the public brand-new.

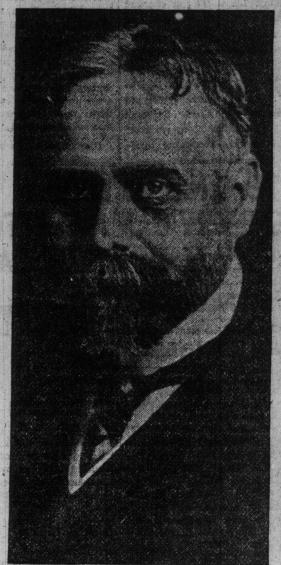

high-grade books at a price not to exceed 25 cents a copy. I have just now solved the problem through publishing them in my magazine—not serial publication, but as complete as if actually in book form. And in The Munsey they are printed on fine book paper, from large, clear type, and are profusely illustrated.

The Munsey is jam full of good stuff. Its complete novel covers only one side of it. The other side is rich in illustrations, worth-while articles, short fiction and other material—a magazine practically double the size of the average magazine.

On all news-stands, 15 cents a copy; $1.50 a year.

CURED OF DRINK BY SAMARIA PRESCRIPTION Wishes to Help Others

Mr. Roy Blanford of 706 East 10th Street, Michigan City, Indiana, has the courage to wish his name pub-lished in a testimonial he gives to the wonderful benefits of Samaria Prescription for the cure of Drunkenness. One treatment of Samaria did it.

One treatmentrof Samaria did it.

Many men have not the wish to stop drinking as Mr. Blanford had. Their system is undermined, their nerves, brain, and stomach crave alcohol. They are its slaves. They need help and in such cases, friends, wives and sisters should induce them to take Samaria or give it to them in their coffee, tea or food to ease their craving and help them to take hold and make themselves into men again. It is tasteless and odoricss.

Mr. Blanford knew he needed help and took Samaria to help him loosen the clutches of the whisky flend. It cured him and he has the courage to tel! the whole world about it and send the thanks of his wife and four children for the happy home restored to

The difference in cost between a lowpriced piano and an rtistic instrument secures, on the one hand, a piano that will give the greatest pleasure and service musically for years to come, as compared with one that becomes almost worthless in a short time, to say nothing of its inferiority in tone. A Nordheimer Piano will cost you a little more, but its superiority in tone quality and durability makes it the most economical instrument to buy.

RUPTURE

APPLIANCE SPECIALIST HERE

J. Y. Egan, the well-known ruptur appliance specialist, will be at his To-ronto office this Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Sat-Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 23 to 28. Mr. Egan says his latest inventions, the "Curatrus" and the "Curative" forms as now prescribed by many of Canada's leading physicians, are guaranteed to retain rupture perfectly, affording immediate relief. These new appliances (entirely different from anything else in the world, and not old styles offered under new names), have received the highworld, and not old styles offered undernew names), have received the highest awards wherever exhibited, and are the only appliances good and reliable enough to stand a trial. Mr. Egan claims it is entirely unnecessary for men or women to wear common imported leather-covered and hard rubber steel springs fitted with old style pads. Some of these appliances are positively injurious to health and are sure to cause kindred ailments in men and women. Mr. Egan has examined every known and advertised appliance and method for the treatment of rupture, both in America and Europe and has dozens of these old discarded appliances on exhibit in his office for inspection. Mr. Egan gives a signed guaranty contract—entitling the afflicted to a 30-day trial test of money suffering will be but a memory—Men, Wemen and Children take on a new lease of life with the fullness thereof, your dejected spirit and crushed hopes will vanish as mist before a summer sun. Mr. Egan has testimonials from our own citizens and physicians for inspection to prove his claims. Results are accomplished without drugs, injections or any other so-called drugs, injections or any other so-called foreign cure. Charges moderate—and within the reach of all. Terms arranged, if necessary. Why continue to wear old factored. Why continue to Electrical Decorative and Equipment ranged, if necessary. Why continue to wear old fashioned imported and mail order trusses when you can procure modern service and immediate relief for the same money—right here in your own city? Try reliability for a change. Do not lay this aside, tear off free coupon now.

Barney Schreiber's sale of thorobreds takes place at 1.30 p.m. on Tuesday. March 24, at Missour State Fair Grounds, Sadalia, Mo. The horses to be sold include four thorobred horses—Sain, Bannockburn, Nealen and Father Phelan—17 brood marcs, five two—year-olds, and 12 yearlings.

The two American-bred thorobred coits which were added to the Davies stable last year have developed into grand looking two-year-olds. They are as well developed as aged horses; King Hamburg is a bay, and Star Crest, who, if he lives up to his looks, should be the best two-year-old in Canada, is a chestnut. The horses in training are: Plate Glass, Dr. Neet, Volunteer, Sky Rocket, Liberty Hall, Southern Maid, Queen Sain, The Usher, Calgary, Grey Nun, Maxim Belle, First Sight, Almazement, Moving Picture, Fountain Fay and the, three King's Platers: Duke of Chester, Gold Bud and Roguish. The stable has four yearlings and three foals up-to-date, also two entries for the Hunters' Flat—Fair Annie and Beware.

The new class for thorobred addle horses at the horse show will fill a long-felt want. The indiscriminate harding together of thorobred hackneys, half-breds and cobs, having made judging a difficult task heretofore.

BUOYANT ACTIVITY IN AUTOMOBILE TRADE

Jackson Official Says Motor Car Business is Country's Barometer of Condition

Optimism is the keynote in the automobile industry. Predictions for record breaking prosperity are heard on every hand. That this confidence is based on something more than guesswork becomes apparent when one of the executives of an old, conservative and steadily successful automobile manufacturing concern says that 1914 will be one of the big automobile

According to Howard A. Matthews, treasurer and sales manager of the Jackson Automobile Company, unprecedented sales have attended this year's automobile shows. There is no let-up in the public's interest in the motor car. Incidentally, it brings out the fact that the shows have lost none of their attraction for the hundreds of thousands who motor and the greater number who hope to.

"The attendance and actual buying at the automobile shows, and the op-timism of the automobile dealers thru-out the United States, indicates a stay Young out the United States, indicates a record year in the motor car industry," says Mr. Matthews. "This buoyant activity, coming, as it does, on top of a recent tight money market leaves but one conclusion—1914 will be one of the most prosperous years in the history of the country, in all branches of industry. For when the country is industry. For when the country is buying motor cars conditions must be good, as one might say that cars are bought with the 'surplus profits.'"

After the annual meeting and banquet of the Jackson Automobile Company's principal distributors held at pany's principal distributors, held at the Congress Hotel during the Chi-cago show, Mr. Matthews said: "The most conclusive evidence of returned prosperity and its continuance can be had represented at our banquet our distributors for all of the middle west and western states including Ohio Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin. Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and Tayas. Texas. These men, who are all large and well established distributors and have a large amount of capital invested, have predicted, without an exception, an unusually large sale of cars

LONDON, March 21 .- Prince John, the nine-year-old son of King George, jumped on a bench in St. James Park the other day and shouted at the top of his voice "Votes for Women." A crowd immediately gathered, and it took an embarrassed nurse some time to get her charge back to Buckingham digest that meal and thus wonderfully rest the stomach.

In a short time the digestion assumes its normal condition and then appetite—and a good appetite, too—is the natural consequence. One may actually fluidize a few Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, place them in a glass tube with meat, grains, vegetables, etc., and these tablets will digest the centents of the tube without aid.

Just think then how quickly and efficiently they act when they are mixed with the food in one's system and what a great relief it is to the digestive apparatus to have its fluids so enriched.

SPLENDID LAND

30 CENTS AN ACRE!

Frederick C. Emery has been offered hundreds of thousands of acres of splendid agricultural, fruit and mineral land in Mexico as low as 30 cents an acre. Other properties at 10 cents and 15 cents on the dollar of these actual values.

The clear title is absolutely valid and is recognized by the Mexican nation. Foreign purchasers are perfectly safe in buying land at war prices. Then when the revolution is over enormous increase in values will come.

THE OLD SPANISH FORTUNE HUNTERS HAD NO CHANGE LIKE THIS Frederick C. Emery's plan and his proposal to investors is to invest in Mexican properties now, at war prices, through his company. Then develop them when conditions are more favorable after peace is declared.

Mr. Emery was one of the first men to realize what possibilities the war is offering investors. And his wide acquaintance in the country has led to his being offered almost bewildering opportunities to take advantage of present conditions.

Such opportunities in the past have been taken advantage of by the rich only, but Mr. Emery's plan is to give all classes of investors such an opportunity now. The small investor will be given the same advantage as the rich, and his interest considered just as much as those of the larger investor.

Millions of foreign capital will rush into Mexico as soon as peace is restored. But the greatest opportunity will have then passed. The time to invest in Mexico is NOW, while the property values are at their lowest, and while the revolution is still on.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

If so, send your name to Mr. Emery for his intensely interesting printed matter. Until permanent offices have been opened in Chicago, all communications should be addressed to Frederick C. Emery, Room 1176, Congress Hotel, Chicago, Illinois. You do not oligate yourself in any way by asking for information.

WEAR HIGHEST OF FRENCH HONORS

Many of Those Who, Like Sarah Bernhardt, Have Secured the Coveted Red Ribbon of the "Legion d'Honneur," Are of No Importance, But Some are Known the World Over.

PARIS, March 21.—When, a few weeks ago, Sarah Bernhardt—the Divine Sarah—secured the coveted redibon of the "Legion d'Honneur" shioined a by no means small company of Frenchwomen of conspicuous work in many walks of life who alreally have received the decoration. Althothe fact is realized by comparatively few, more than one hundred of Madame Bernhardt's fellow countrywomen have been so honored. Some of these women, of course, are known all over the world for their achievements, but the vast majority are of no importance, especially when compared with the great actress, who waited for so many years for the honor she so richly deserved.

Of the more famous women members of the great French order one of the most widely known is Madame Jane Dieulafoy, who was made a guember some twenty years ago. She

Jane Dieulafoy, who was made a member some twenty years ago. She enjoys the distinction of being the only woman in France who is entitled to wear masculine costume. She was born in 1852 and was educated in a convent until she reached her eighteenth year. According to the custom in those days she left the convent to get married. Three months later the war of 1870 broke out and her husband volunteered for service in the field. Madame Dieulafoy made the husband volunteered from the rhusband and asked permission to accompany him to the front. Althourse which also gave her permission to a soldier's uniform. The young eighteen-year-old heroine accompanied her husband during the whole of the campaign and underwent the same hardships and privations as the other soldiers. She had; however, over-subjects. As the circulation of "Les Annales," as the paper is generally called, is over a million a week, it may be safely asserted that two or three million French girls wait impatiently every week for "Cousine Yvonne's" article. In addition to this she personally conducts the "Answers to Correspondents" column, in which she shows herself to be a guide, philosopher and friend of almost encyclopaedic knowledge.

Young Grandmother.

All this hard work has not had the effect of "writing any wrinkle on her zure brow." She has two married daughters, and is the most surprisingly young-looking grandmother of forty that it is possible to meet. "I might truly say I was 39 for a few days longer," she said the other day, "but is it worth while?"

Besides her paper, she has founded another work of immense educational value—the "Universite des Annales." Twice a week, in the great hall of the "Annales" building, the most famous lecturers in France continue the education of the French girl, who owes a great debt of gratitude to "Cousine Yvonne."

A third eminent woman holding the

Yvonne."

A third eminent woman holding the red ribbon is Madame Vallet-Bisson, a pastellist, whose works are almost as well known in England as they are in France. As a child she showed a decided taste for drawing, and she persuaded her parents to send her to the famous "Ecole Julien" as soon as she left school. There she worked for four or five years under Jules Lefevre, who advised her to concentrate on pastel work. She scored her first success about twenty-five years ago, when she took a silver medal at the "Salon des Artistes Franceis," with the portrait of Mdlle, Rostande. She has exhibited regularly at the same salon ever since, and has taken all the possible rewards from "honorable mentions" to gold medals. For the past five years Madame Vallet-Bisson has been "hors concours." For the coming salon which will open in May, Madame Bisson is showing two portraits, one of Madame Mercadier and her little son Andre, and the other of Baroness Chamorin.

Madame Bisson and her husband, who is also a well known painter and Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, work together in a large sunny studio overlooking the Parc Moncau. They were putting the finishing touches to their exhibits for the approaching salon when the writer called.

HUERTA EXECUTES MANY OFFICERS ON SLIGHT PRETEX

Nineteen Put to Death Because They Were Former Pupils of Villa's Artillery Commander

(Special to The Sunday World) BROWNSVILLE, Tex., March 21 .-Nineteen officers were recently executed in Santiago, Tlatololco, prison by order of President Huerta, according to private advices received in Matamoras. The reason for the executions is said to have been due to the fact that officers were pupils of General Felipe Angeles, formerly professor in the Mexican military academy, and now in charge of General Villa's rebel artillery.

The public, for the present, seems indifferent as to the form of government which will come after the revolution, the success of which is expected by residents of Chihuahua. Gen. Villa's word is law now. He is the legislative, executive and judicial departments of government. He lives in a mansion, confiscated from an exiled aristocraft. He wears a wide-brimmed soft hat and a blanket like that of any peon, except that it is of rich texture. From granting permission for beggars to solicit on the streets to important questions of state, Villa is absolute.

SETTLE BELMONT SUIT OUT OF

(Special to The Sunday World)
NEW YORK, March 21.—There were indications today that the suit for separation brought by Mrs. Ethel Lorraine Belmont against Raymond Belmont, youngest son of August Belmont, might be settled out of court. An effort to come to some kind of an agreement was made yesterday before the taking of testimony, but it failed. The case was adjourned until Tuesday when Justice Greenbaum closed his court yesterday.

INCREASE RATE ON FLAX.

WASHINGTON, March 21 .- The in terstate commerce commission held today that rates on flax seed "should bear a consistent relationship to on another and to the rates on wheat and other grain," and permitted the rail-roads "to increase the rate from Minneapolis proper to Fredonia, Karsas from 15 to 201/2 cents a hundred other destinations involved, no pounds and to establish rates to all than the present wheat rates."

Public Welcomed in Big Buildings of Postum Cereal Company at Windsor, Where Canadian Demand for a Product World-Used Is Satisfied - Process Is Simple, But Absorbing—Output Trebled in Four Years.

At the end of a long carrier-belt encased in a wooden frame-work, there stands a pretty girl. On a table in front of her, at the rate of fifty every sixty seconds, that belt deposits package after package labelled "Post Toasties." Half a dozen at a time, the pretty girl places them together and lifts them carefully into a big fibre resulting product is the whole wheat tiself. This is done with ordinary mill rolls, and the resulting product is the whole wheat in pulverized form, minus only the coarse bran which is separated from it. Then the barley-malt has to be reduced to mixing consistency, and the lifts them carefully into a big fibre resulting product is the whole wheat itself. This is done with ordinary mill rolls, and the resulting product is the whole wheat itself. This is done with ordinary mill rolls, and the resulting product is the whole wheat itself. This is sixty seconds, that belt deposits package after package labelled "Post Toasties." Half a dozen at a time, the pretty girl places them together and lifts them carefully into a big fibre packing box. As each box is filled, a young man whisks it away other side of the spacious, airy

Go to another floor and see the same scene repeated. The pretty girl is quite as pretty, but she happens to be a blonde this time in contrast with her darker sister. The packages which pass into her hands from the carrier-helt are coming a little to handle at one time. The proportions have been determined by chemical experts who specialize in the nutritive value of all sorts of foods. These proportions must be exact. which pass into her hands from the carrier-belt are coming a little bit faster—fifty-eight a minute, to be exact—and they bear a different label, which is "Grape-Nuts." exact—and they bear a different label, which is "Grape-Nuts." The strong young man is there too, and does his duty, as one can see by the great pile of big boxes waiting to be wheeled right thru the door into a facight car.

Twenty-Seven Thousand a Day.

A little mental arithmetic easily enables us to estimate the full runming capacity of the Canadian Postum Cereal Company's factory at Windsor, Ont., for that is the place we are in "Post Toasties"—50 a minute—that's 3000 an hour, and 24,000 for each eight hour day. "Grape-Nuts"—58 a minute—18480 ever hour, and 27,840 per day.

And this supply helps to feed the greater part of the British Empire, for it is distributed not only all over Canada alone, but in the British Isles, England, Ireland and Scotland, as well as in Australia and New Zealand.

As this is supposed to be a concentrated story of concentrated food, the above paragraphs are intended to express in the fewest words possible some idea of the demand which has been created under the Eritish fags for two great household commodities of world-wide consumption.

Twentieth Century Methods.

The strong wheat-flour, of barley-mait flour and of the processed yeast which enters into each big sponge.

The next stage is mixing the dough after the sponge has had a chance to "set." This, too, requires exceptional care because the mixture must be of a certain consistency before it goes into the moulding machine. The moulding machine is an apparatus photo, has been specially devised for use in the manufacture of "Grape-Nuts" and its operation is interesting to watch. On the upper floor, where the mixing is done, a big trough of the flour below it and ends in the manufacture of "Grape-Nuts" and its operation is interesting to watch. On the upper floor, where the mixing to ach of the processed yeast which enters into oach big sponge.

to witness a striking demonstration of what common sense, otherwise known as scientific efficiency, will do for the food we eat, when the needs of the average human being are care-fully analyzed and studied

All May See.

The word "process" in its usual acceptance naturally suggests something secret—a formula, a recipe or a method—but there is nothing like that to keep anybody from investigating every part of every one of the six big buildings in which the Canadian Postum Cereal people do their work.

The management will show you as was shown a World representative.

was shown a World representative, the complete process of transforming the complete process of transforming the raw cereals into concentrated, palatable food, fit to grace the finest of breakfast tables.

You wil be taken to the room where the preparation of "Grape-Nuts" is begun and shown how whole-wheat flour, barley-malt flour and yeast are mixed into big sponges in a trough. But this mixing is hardly the first stage, because there are several minor.

Dust is Absent.

One thing you cannot help but notice in going thru the Canadian Postum Cereal buildings is the absence of dust. In most places where any sort of milling processes are carried on, flour dust covers everything it sight, including the miller's cap and working clothes. Not so in the Postum plant. They have a dust-consuming arrangement which sucks up every particle before it gets a chance to reach the outer air. This is only one of the many devices which are employed to insure the strictest cleanliness and general care in the preparation of "Grape-Nuts" and "Post Toasties." Nothing is handled by hand.

transparent flake. Each flake Post Toastie. Dust is Absent.

The building is of modern factory construction with plenty of light and air. The employes have the appearance of being well treated and they go about their work earnestly. The Postum Cereal Company has a way of encouraging good work by hiring selected help, paying them well and encouraging them to promotion.

Employes Given Benue.

Each employe, at the end of his or her first year's work, finds deposited to his or her credit in the bank by the company an amount equalling five per cent. of the salary he or she has just earned. At the beginning of the next year, it can be collected in cash if the employe holds the job and works faithfully. Thereafter a regular ten per cent, bonus on the regular wage is added to the weekly pay envelope and this, of course, in addition to usual increases in salary which may come from highly efficient service or other causes.

The Canadian Postum Cereal Com-pany is a fine example of systematic efficiency as applied to modern manuefficiency as applied to modern manufacturing. Perhaps the best syldence of its progress is contained in the fact that its output has been trebled in four years, since it first started running. If the people keep on eating "Grape-Nuts" and "Post Toasties" at the same rate, the present plant will soon have to be enlarged and extended.

Western Ontario Officials Want Grand Trunk to Electrify Branch.

HIGH PRICE FOR LAND

Special to The Toronto World.

BERLIN, Ont., March 20.—Three lin, Egan Mills, Doon, Blair and Galt, on the Galt and Elmira branch of the Grand Trunk, met today for the purpose of memorializing the company with a view of having the road elec-trified so as to secure in this way a intermediate points.

The delegates in their observations were unanimous in pointing out the wholly inadequate service at present given on this branch. It was pointed out that the company's argument was that with the present traffic the branch did not pay and recently dis-continued running two of their trains each way each day.

Mayor Buchanan of Galt felt that if the service was a little better the passenger traffic would be better. Geo. Tilt, township clerk of Blair, said that she people of Doon were at present suffering a great inconvenience with the present service. Homer Watson, R.C.A., Doon, told of the very inadequate service. He had found the G. T. R. never ready to do anything for the public unless it was first done for them. With a better service he was with a better service he was sure the passenger and freight traffic would increase. J. B. Hughes made the frank statement that the Grand Trunk would not do anything unless they had competition. The company the above paragraphs are intended to express in the fewest words possible some idea of the demand which has been created under the British flag for two great household commodities of world-wide consumption.

Twentieth Century Methods.

To be in line with twentieth century progress is to do the thing in the twentieth century processes, we owe such things as the moving pictures, phonographs, high-powered motorcars; and likewise, altho the comparison may seem a liktle distant at first glance, concentrated forms of nourishment.

To be able to go thru the Canadian Postum Cereal plant at Windsor is to realize that modern processes of preparing food are equally as wonderful and fascinating as the mechanical contrivances already referred to. It is to witness a striking demonstration of what common sense, otherwise have that official meet a deputation in Ottawa next Thursday.

Resolutions Passed. seconded by Geo. Klinck, Elmira, that this meeting of representatives of the different municipalities served by the Grand Trunk System between Galt and Elmira, believing that it would be desirable and mutually beneficial to have the Galt-Elmira branch of the road electrified, respectfully urge the goes again, passing thru another rolder which closes the top, seals it and wraps it in oiled paper, so that it is perfectly air-tight. Forward the belt carries the closed package, until it reaches the hands of the pretty girl and is started on its way toward a company to adopt an electric system upon this particular portion of their road and that it is further desirable to have the branch extended so as to connect with some railway system north of Elmira. Also, it was moved by, J. C. Mueller, Waterloo, seconded by Ed. Smythe, Berlin, that the councils and boards of the municipalities interested be requested to pass similar resolutions and appoint delegates to interview the officials of the Grand Trunk system with a view of furthe impressing on them the desirability o electrifying their Galt-Elmira branch. High Price for Land.

At the farm sale of J. Cressman of Waterloo Township, 36 acres of wooded land was sold for $11,000, the highest price ever paid in the county. Geo. Tilt of Blair, was the purchaser, and he informed The World that he purchased the land for a proposed purchased the land for a proposed company. The object of the company to turn it into a park. It is said to contain twenty varieties of wood, and is along the Galt branch of the Grand Trunk and butts on the Grand River. Among the border points at which unusual industrial activity is making itself felt with the approach of the spring sesson is the City of Windsor, to which a correspondent of The World paid a visit last week. Just now both the city council and the board of trade are co-operating to take the fullest advantage of the opportunities which are precenting themselves for development.

C. L. Barker has been appointed commissioner of industries and a new secretary of the board of trade, Mr. Roce, a well-known barrister, has been appointed.

During last year Windsor made very rapid progress, and a canvass of the town at that time showed that there were 140 odd factories and plants in active operation. Mr. Barker, the commissiquer made another canvass on March 1, which now shows a total of 189, and it is stated that his department is in correspondence with a number of others who are seeking locations.

"The Englishman who invests in Canadian real estate will henceforth purchase downtown and business properties in the larger cities, or probably blocks of land within the line of growth of the older and more substantial centres.

"The small English investor is out played in the old country in Toronto real estate by men who have a purchasing power to buy valuable downtown properties. The investment which seems to be appealing to the Englishman at the present time is to buy business property and erect either stores or office buildings, and I would not be surprised if considerable money were attracted to Toronto in this way.

Attorney-General McReynolds tells this on himself, says The Popular:
Some years ago he was the attorney for the defence in an important case which hinged on the testimony of one woman. Consequently, he conducted the cross-examination of the fair witness with elaborate caution.

the cross-examination of the fair witness with elaborate caution.

"How old are you?" he led off, preparing to trap her if her reply did not tally with an important date in the story she had just told.

"Fifty-four or sixty-four," she answered, flustered by the ordeal she faced.

"What do you mean?' demanded McReynolds, leaning far forward in his chair, and looking particularly stern. "Don't you know your own age?"
"I'm not sure," the woman replied doubtfully "Indeed I'm re-

Of the $87,500 Great Northern is to eceive by the end of this year, $75,and again I say, this deal is one of the best yet made in Northern Ontario. The English Company will soon make a flotation in Teck-Hughes at around $2 per share, and on this basis the 400,000 shares held by the Great Northern have a market value of $800; 000. Indications point to the Teck-Hughes flotation being over-subscribed and thus an increased value placed on the stock. As underground work continues on the Teck-Hughes, phenomenally rich values are found.

Engineers of continental reputation consider Teck-Hughes as the making of a richer gold mine than the Foster-Tough-Oakes, and these opinions are being substantiated as the drills continue to break down the rich ore at the 75-foot level in Nos. 2 and 3 veins, as well as in the new vein running parallel to the No. 3. Great Northern's holdings in this company will likely prove an exceptionally large asset, and with a clear profit of $75,006, in addition to the other valuable hold-

"THE THIRD DEGREE" AT PARKVIEW THEATRE

"The Third Degree" is a very attractive story, and is based on the play of the same title which caused so much sensation.
In the silent version of this drame none of the fine points of the story are lost. It shows with considerable clearlost. It shows with considerable clearness the police using the dreaded third degree until they obtained a supposed confession from an unfortunate young fellow who is charged with murder. It deals fully with the attempts of his wife's efforts to secure her father-in-law's help and failing him the help of their solicitor.

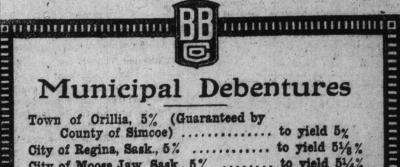

"SOME INVISIBLE HAND."

ST. PETERSBURG, March 21 .-The charges brought against the Jew Pashkoff and his assistant, Guthartz, murder case at Fastoff are evidently crumbling. The men have been released on ball to the amount of $2500 and $500 respectively.

Notwithstanding the fact that all the evidence adduced hitherto tends to destroy the theory of ritual murder, the black hundred continues to fulminate against the Jews. A Kieff journal says: "Today it is Yushinsky, tomorrow it will be Pashkoff. Some invisible hand is making our children tramble."

SUNDAY MORNING

Express Approval When New Official is Presented at Juvenile Court

Every Saturday morning some half hundred youngsters assemble to re-port at the juvenile court, but they don't always take part in very impos-ing ceremonies while in the proba-tioner's office. Yesterday morning, however, had a surprise in store, and when the boys were ushered into the court room several sentiments were expressed regarding the uncommon proceedings. "Now, boys, I want to proceedings. "Now, boys, I want to introduce you to the new commissioner," said Mr. Graham, by way of explanation, "and I want you all to take good look at him."
"As he is doing of you." replied Mr.

Boyd.

Forthwith the troupe commenced to straighten up for the ensuing performance, many of them evidently regardance and interested ing it in a most amused and interested light. Iky Goldstein headed the line and little Sammy Lavinski brought up the rear end, and all the young gentlemen in between bore names equally suggestive of the sunny foreign climes. At the close of the event the boys col-lected in little groups to discuss the affair and air their several views, but all agreed that it was a howling suc-

The case tried after the boys had heen dismissed centred in three dear little children of entirely different cir-cumstances. They are the children of respectable parentage, the father being a man earning earning $100 a month in Bracebridge. His earnings, however, go to support another woman instead of his wife and children. The court has made the order that $80 be paid a month towards the support of his two sons and little girl, who will have the protection of the juvenile court against the father.

still problematical, but that it is considerable was evident from the midnight consultations of cabinet ministers regarding the best means of counteracting the movement. The actual fact of this disaffection is the more discomforting to the military authorities since the army is already seriously short of commissioned offi-

Shortage of Officers.

According to reports the number of vacancies is rapidly increasing, and all the regular regiments which have been serving in Ulster may have to be with-drawn and replaced by fresh troops, as both men and officers have openly expressed their disinclination to take the offensive against men with whom they have been fraternizing.

This momentary shifting of the immediate crisis from Ulster to the army may give the peacemakers their desired opening.

The utmost activity prevails at the war office and in the other departments of the government affected by the apparently grave situation in Ul-ster. All the secretaries of state to-day cancelled their usual week-end day in connection with the resigna-tions of officers from the regular army, owing to their refusal to march against the Unionists in Ulster. It was reported here today that Bri-gadier Gen. Hubert de lo Poer Gough, commander of the third cavalry bri-gade at the Curragh, composed of the gade at the Curragh, composed of the 18th Lancers and the 4th Hussars, has resigned, but this was not confirmed.

Ulster Presents Martial Aspect.
BELFAST. Ireland, March 21.—Ulster this morning presented a martial by soldiers of the regular army, and other detachments were marching along the country roads with long along the country roads with long trains of baggage and ammunition carts, on their way to strengthen the various garrisons. In the meanwhile at all the Unionist centres there was great animation among the "Ulster Volunteers."

Thruout the province intense excite.

Big Military Movement. Within .4 nours over 8000 regular troops, including four battalions of infantry with machine guns, and two batteries of field artillery, all equipped for active service, have arrived in the various towns of Ulster. Still more troops are on their way to the north from the great military camp at the Curragh and from other army stations today. Orders were issued to batteries of artillery/to occupy strategic positions around Belfast.

Wait on Government.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, and his lieutenants desire the government to take the first provocative step. Sir Edward, realizing the vitalness of preventing an undisciplined outbreak as a protest against all these troop movements, today again urged the Ulstermen to keep cool during the week-end and keep cool during the week-end, and this advice up till this afternoon has been admirably obeyed.

Alexandra Theatre Will Show Broadhurst's Master Drama

The big scene in Mr. George Broad-Paid For," which William A. Brady, Limited, will present at the Alexandra Theatre this week, commencing Monday, March 20, is one of the most tremendous and staggering climaxes in modern drama. It is powerful because it is brutally and realistically true, and because it reaches into the inti-mate experience of thousands of men

The scene is one of great strength and daring, which, for over a year, has held great houses breathless. Seats will be put on sale Wednesday.

Women will find more news of interest to them in The World's magazine page every morning than in any other paper.

These bargains will be on sale all day Monday and Tuesday until the store closes at 9 p.m. Burroughes' store always remains open in the evenings.

's going to be one swatter wearing the Giants' uniform this year who, at the end of the season, when he sits down to figure up, will, if he keeps up the gait at which he is now going, have enough suits of clothes (presented to him as a result of his home run hits) to open a high-class clothing emporium on the main street of his home town. The boy who is slamming the pellet in such fashion is none other than Murray, he of the red brick top, whom thousands of fans affectionately call "Red." It makes little difference to the Red one who does the pitching. He simply peels the horsehide right off the ball every time he comes to bat, and Big Chief Meyers (shown behind the bat in the top left photo) is glad that Red belongs to the home talent and not the other team, because there will be many games during the coming season which Red will bust up with his stick.

It is heavyweight from Pittaburg, who is matched with Jack Johnson for a twenty-round bout for the world's heavyweight championship at the Vel odrome d'Hiver, Paris, on June 27th, is shown in the centre photo. Moran is very optimistic about his chances of regaining the championship which Jeffries lost at Reno July 4th, 1908. Johnson is getting old and has lost much of his speed, says Moran, and judging from what he saw of Johnson at Paris a few weeks ago, during the latter's bout with Battling Jim Johnson, there is nothing to the coming scrap between the black heavy and the white hope, but the turning over of the title by the present holder to the "scrapper" from the "Smoky City."

It was the case of a lull before the storm on Saturday. A week hence all will be excitement, bit in England and Scotland, over the National semi-finals, and yesterday's results, which pertain solely to games under league auspices, present few features of any importance. None of the positions in the various leagues are materially altered, and the places of the leaders, with the exception of Notts County, are strengthened. Blacgburn Rovers, who are regarded as likely winners of the First League in England, were again on the winning side, but also was Aston Villa and Bolton Wander-The victory of the "Trotters' Manchester is one of the most praiseworthy on the list and a careful eye will have to be kep on them in future. In running Tston Villa to a 1-0 result Burnley may be said to have done very creditily in-deed, and it suggests form that should make Sheffiell United travel all the way on Saturday next. It is a coin-cidence that out of this week's semifinals Burnley was the only club to be on the losing side, and they by a narrow majority, to the holders of the cup. Sunderland rattled up a big score against Everton, who this season have stayed in the background more than ever in their history. Chelsea did well to beat the "Rams" at Derby; white Bradford City proved too much for Sheffield Wednesday, and it would seem that McLean's return to the "Blades" has not worked much improvement. provement.

As leaders of the second division and probable champions at that, Notts County were expected to at least divide the points at Welverhampton. but the "wolves" were in one of ther hungry moode, and after a strenuous game sent the "lacemen" home well beaten. Whilst the result does not displace the county from the premier position it endangers their chances for Woolwich, who for some reason were idle on Saturday, are virtually onl two points behind them on games played. Bradford are also making good shapes for the top, and Tom Maley's team brought off one of their most creditable results when they beat ? the "tigers" at Hull. A notable result was the victory of Notts Forest, the bottom club. Since the season commenced in September last year, the Forest has only won five games, and this last one is the best of the lot.

The assault at arms which the Argonaut Rowing Club are preparing for to take place on April 24, promises to be a most enjoyable event.

Arrangements are being made with well-known local talent to produce some boxing bouts, which are sure to be most interesting.

The program will also consist of wrestling, fencing, tug-of-war, musical events, which will make this a very unique and interesting event.

The Boys' Classes.

The fifty-yard dash and 25 yards back swim were the events held in the boys' classes last week at Central Y.M.C.A. A number of the boys equaled the track record of 7 seconds flat, but only one boy bested it, M. Wilson of the Older Business Boys doing 6 4.5 seconds. A. Allan, Older School, made the best time in the back swim, doing the 25 yards in 16.2-5 seonds. Final results:

Basketball.

The new intermediate School Boys' Basketball League got under way Saturday morning at Central Y, boys' division, three close games being played, as follows: Theliming won from Taylor by 10 to 0, the winners playing very good combination. The second game was won by Wilson's team, who defeated Hambly by 7 to 0. The last game was the closest of the morning, and was between Sewell and Norman. Every boy checked back hard, Norman winning out by 4 to 0.

The first game in the senior School Boys' League was between Irwin and Huestis, and resulted in a win for the former. The first half was very evenly contested, but in the latter half of the game Irwin's team got away, winning by 12 to 1. The second game was won by 12 to 1. The second game was won by 12 to 1. The second game was won by 12 to 1. The second game was won by 12 to 1. The second game was won by 12 to 1. The second game was boys were more accurate in their shooting. The last game brought together Littingow and Mutch. The latter team checked hard and held Littingow's team to a 2 to 0 score at half time, but after the rest Litingow's team got away for 5 baskets, winning out by 12 to 4.

Indoor Baseball.

The final in the second series of indoor baseball was played in the intermediate School Boys' League Friday afternoon between Taylor and Hambly. These two teams were tied for first place and were playing off to break the tie. In the first innings it looked like Hambly to win, but Taylor's boys came strong, scoring the winning run with only one out, the final score being 4 to 2. To the ordinary, snow-bound citizen, this training grind 'neath the southern palms would be quite a treat. All expenses are paid, the best hotel in the locality of the grounds is selected and they are allowed to eat their fill. As a rule little regard is paid to diet. The men are husky, able citizens as a rule and when the first few days of stiffness wears off, they are always happy and hungry. Few managers interfere with the individual player's gastronomic tastes.

George Stalling, "master builder" of ball teams, is perhaps more strict with his men than most managers. If he wasn't he wouldn't get the results. One is sensible enough to know that condition is ninety per cent. of his stock in trade. The moment a baseball star starts to neglect his condition just so sure will he take a slump and there is no sentiment wasted on a diamond star who is on the tobogran.

The Canadian National Horse Show, which opens at the armorries on April 28, and continues to May 2, promises to be even better than the record show of a year ago. The committee in charge have added several new classes to their already well-balanced program, and, with a special feature on each evening the attendance records should be broken.

A thorobred saddle class is a new one on the list, while this year two tandem classes, instead of one, will be on the card. One tandem class is for horses not exceeding 15 hands 1 inch, and another is for horses exceeding this measurement.

> The Toronto Bowling Club Busiess Men's League finished their most exciting week of the season last Friday night, with the outcome leaving three teams tied for the top, while the next three, one or two games down furnishes a record for closeness in league ten-pin rolling that is really releague ten-pin rolling that is really refreshing at this stage of the season, and a source of much gratification to all members concerned. The teams tied for first place are R. S. Williams, winners of the second series; R. G. McLean and I. A. Steamfitters, while those forming the second trio, and all in the fight are J. Curry Co., Maybee & Co., winners of the first series, and MacLean Publishing Co., it will, therefore, be seen that only two are counted out in this eight-club league for the winning of the third and final series, and this pair, Scotland Woodlen Mills and Lang, Mack Co., altho never Mills and Lang, Mack Co., altho never hoping now to romp home with the series, will make it interesting for all front runners yet to meet to the end

Of the games rolled during the week and the one left over from Friday night of the week previous no team won all three games, showing the closeness of the race, as above quoted, while the rubber encounter in several games was only decided after the last ball was rolled. In order and begin-ning Friday night, March 13, I. A. Steamfitters won two out of three games from Lang Mack Co. in this games from Lang Mack Co, in this conflict. Frank Sherwood featured with a 627 total, with every game being over the 200 mark. Reported leaving next week for the coast this steamfitter will be greatly missed by his team, who are going in great form with a good chance for the final honors. On Monday night J. Thursday night brought together I. A. Steamfitters and MacLean Publishing Co. for the greatest battle of the week, with the former getting tre decision in the odd game only after havcision in the odd game only after having to roll off a tie in the second game, which the Publishers looked to have practically on ice in the eighth frame. The crucial period in this game came in the last inning when George Martin for McLean's, working on a double strike, had to get eight pins to the property of the p win, but "Patsy" only shot seven for the unlucky tie. In this conflict Manager George Scott of McLean's featured with a 243 count in the first game and with a 581 total was high man for the week. With Maybee & Co. to be heard from in the last scheduled clash of the week, with Lang-Meek Co. the wace now her all the Mack Co., the race now has all the earmarks of still being as close at the end of another week.

Plans a Busy Summer.

Ritchie still has the match with Tommy Murphy on his hands. After he has taken care of the New Yorker he will come east again. Judging by what he wrote me recently Willie plans a very busy summer. Unless the champ will be seen in bouts in San Francisco, Milwaukee. New York and Buffalo within the next three or four months. And in that time Willie's appoints a crowd when he is in the ring. Willie cân always be depended upon to put up an interesting battle and and the will can always be depended upon to put up an interesting battle with the best men of his class. Mr. Asche Hopes to Win Waterloo Cup

LONDON, March 21,-Mr. Oscar ische has great hopes of winning the Waterloo Cup this year. "I don't ask you to put your money on me," he remarked to a Metropolitan Press representative, as we chatted about the resentative, as we chatted about the five Australian greyhounds he bought during his recent tour in the Antipodes, "but I think I have a winner among them. Is Mrs. Asche intereste!? Very much, indeed. In fact, the greyhounds are her special pets." And Mrs. Oscar Asche, better known, perhaps, as Miss. Lily Brayton, very kindly showed her portrait, which depicts her as "Diana of the Uplands." with a couple of the candidates for the Waterloo Cup on the leash.

KING GEORGE'S RACEHORSES.

LONDON, March 21.—No racing owner in England has a more promising lot of two-year-olds than King George. His Majesty is exceptionally pleased with his stable, and it is an open secret that he is anxious to carry off one or two of the chief events of the flat racing season this year, and thus make up far his lack of success during 1918. The metropolitan press representative learns that it is the intention of His Majesty to attend the spring meetings at Newmarket, and it is hoped that Her Majesty will accompany him. Queen Mary, however, is not very fond of horse-racing altho she naturally likes to see throyal colors first past the post.

splendid chance to beat Willie in a longer bout.

However, I am not one who thinks Ad will defeat the champion if they come together in a twenty round bout. Ir fact, I think exactly the opposite. I believe the longer the fight the less chance he will have. Ritchie begins slowly and gets better as a bout progresses, and if Ad couldn't hold him even for ten rounds it would seem that twenty rounds would spell defeat for him. In the match here with Leach Cross—a dangerous man, too—the champion was going very strong at the finish, and unprejudiced eye-witness—es of the Milwaukee affair have informed me that he was strong as a built when the bell rang for the end of the ten-round set-to with Wolgast.

Baker and a few friends, and offered to show him a thing or two in the boxing line that may prove of big help to him in the future, I have been extensively "quoted" as predicting a brilliant future for the big Irishman. Some have even gone so far as to say that I have "picked" Coffey as the "coming world's champion."

It don't take much to get a sport-

"coming world's champion."

It don't take much to get a sporting writer, going. Give him a hint and he is good for a couple of columns—if his sporting editor will stand for it. Anyway, I was misquoted in regard to Coffey. What I really did tell Gibson was that big Jim had the best left-hand hook that I've seen in some time, and that if it was properly cultivated it would make him a hard man to beat after he has had a bit more of experience.

Coffey, like all the rest of the big white men of today, doesn't know what white men of today, doesn't know what to do when he gets a good punch in the body or head. And the same thing applies when he lands an effective blow on his opponent. After watching Coffey's work in the Levinsky match for a couple of rounds I advised Gibson to tell him to use his left hook oftener. Billey told Coffey to do it, and that the blow was not relished by Levinsky was evident from the way Levinsky was evident from the way he grabbed and hung on to the big fellow every time it landed. But when Coffey would hurt Levinsky with the punch he would try to sail in and fin-ish the job with rights. Now, every-one with experience in the ring knows that a fighter who has been badly stung will be on the watch for a right-hand punch, and if he can't protect himself from any other blow will

I haven't seen any of the big fellows of recent development who know anything worth while of defensive work. Judging from their actions sive work. Judging from their actions in the ring they must devote pretty much all their time in craining trying to learn how to hit, giving no attention at all to the defensive part of the science. Such a taing as foot-work among the big fellows is an unknown quantity. They meet every charge head-on, and seem to forget that there is plenty of room within the ropes to step around and avoid an occasional rush from an opponent.

Stars on Short Notice.

It is doubtful whether any team in the major league is composed of a greater lot of "misfits" than the world's champion Athletics. Peculiarly enough, nearly all the stars of this great combination played in some other position than that they occupy now, when they first broke into baseball.

Connie did a little studying, and as connie did a little studying, and as a result moved Collins to second base and sent Dan Murphy into right field. The critics took a few shots at him for apparently weakening two places on his team, but instead, this formed the foundation of the present world-beating combination.

beating combination.

When Rube Oldring went to the Athletics from Montgomery he was a shortstop. Connie tried him at that place in 1906, and then at third base; but he found Oldring entirely too fast on his feet for the infield. His hands could not keep pace with his feet. He was a fine hitter and base runner, so Mack shifted him to the outer works, and he had one of the best outfielders in the game in his lineup.

in the game in his lineup.

"Stuffy" McInnis, the man who finishes out the Athletics' $100,000 infield, came to the Athletics as a shortstop in 1909, but there was no chance for him to break into any infield position with Baker, Barry and Collins in trim. When he did get into the game he slammed the ball so hard that Connie realized that some remarkable batting material was being wasted on the bench. He cast about for a place to use him regularly, and as Harry Davis was slowing at that time, he broke "Stuffy" in as a first baseman, and now he is one of the best in the land.

Frank Baker began his career as a pitcher and thought he was cut out for that position until Buck Herzog took hold of the Ridgely team, on which Baker was playing. He soon showed him the error of his ways and made a

Two of Connie Mack's latest phenoms also started in the game in position for which they were not fitted and found themselves in time to become stars. They are Joe Bush, the sensational twirler, and one of the heroes of the last world's series, and Wally Schang, the best young catcher in Schang, the best young catcher in the game. We Need a New Civilization Says Edison

The Famous Inventor, Who Has Lived for 120 Years by Working Double Time, Declares That the Great Invention for Which Mankind Is Waiting Is a Right System of Training the Young to Understand Life.

At a time when agitative, thoughtful people are quietly forcing to the attention of the country the greatest problem that confronts it, that of adequate, efficient education this profound pro-

Few realize how hard the problem is now made by the new generation of Canadians being raised by the great throngs of parents who have come in recent years from every corner of the globe, bringing to their children instincts hard to estimate or control. The problem is peculiarly Toronto's.

Mr. Edison's interview with The Sunday World is exclusive in Canada.

By Charles Virgil Tevis. HEELS SANG as they whirled invisible machines; there was a metallic discord of innumerable grinding phonographs, the scurrying of feet was now and then audible as was the sound of voices questioning, directing. The master workman, Thomas A. Edison, was quite the calmest in the apparent confusion, and smiling, rosy cheeked, buoyant, with youthful enthusiasm.

When we could converse behind a partition, he anticipated a question, asking almost boyishly: "I don't look to be 120 years old, do I? But I have lived that long as we work on shifts of labor. I have not wasted time. . . I am just beginning to In a coming day—it was of this he talked, in certaln tones, looking beyond the concrete walls.

Altho the potentiality of Americans and I include Canadians—as human storage batteries is almost beyond computation, we are not increasing in efficiency. We have been slow to grow. We have hardly begun work on the great problems of life, those which naturally would engage our attention first. The reason for this, I believe, is our unpreparedness to think and to work at the pitch of which the human mind is cap-

"As workers, as a race, we are handicapped. The great majority of us labor under a burden of maleducation, or an entire loss of value in the years given us by nature to learn.

"As a race, also, we assimilate slowly the mental and social qualities of the hundreds of thousands of immigrants who flock to this hemisphere yearly.

The World Standard of Man

"I mean just this; the world-standard of man will be evolved from the moiling social economical and physical elements of this continent. Repetitions of history are elementally progressions; the shoot of the seed of life is always upright, and striving for greater

"Here we have the best qualities of all races; also the worst. We have come to appreciate the necessity for the encouragement of the good, and, at least the control of the bad. It is in the program of nature bound to be what we call 'the superman.'

that some time this will come to pass. The result is "In our ever-mating and re-mating of different types, different temperaments, different physical textures, a sane superior balance will result ultimately. When the brawn of generations of smithles from the north of England, or the rugged strength of the Scandinavian plowman meets with the finely tempered mentality of a French savant, or the dream-fire of some southern poet, and, in turn, with possibly the conservativeness of an inland merchant-from this melting-pot process will emerge a progeny healthy, well balanced, ambitious, imaginative, mentally capable of

"It is to this coming superman that we must look for a solution of age-old problems-world-work which we have barely approached as yet.

What We Do Not Know

"We ask every day: What is there to be done? Young men by the hundreds come to me with the question, and I put them to work, and let them go again-by the hundreds. Their heads-I speak of the majority-are full of frivolities. They do not see any beauty and delight in work. Probably because they have no idea whatsoever of how to work.

"What is there to be done? Dare we ask the question in the face of the fact that we do not know what water is? We do not know what light is; we do not know what electricity is, or magnetism, or a thousand other elements of our environment.

"The achievements for the American-to-be are almost beyond imagination, yet before he is able to utilthe his superior physical and mental sense—yes, even before he himself is possible—we need a new civiliza-

"This new civilization will recognize primarily one great fact in human nature—there are no limits to the capacity of a brain properly trained; but the proper training of the brain must be accomplished between the age of four and 16; in some exceptional cases four "There is only one way to bring about this new civilization-to discover the right system of education. The whole world awaits this discovery. There is not a country where educative methods have approached perfection, where there is not a handicap of misdirected early training. "Parents, teachers, reformers, now do not take advantage of the twelve magical years. In a general way it is appreciated that early life is the time for study and training; but the absolute necessity for cultivation of the mind and morals of the child during this period is both inadequately realized and most imperfectly applied. "Important brain cells begin to atrophy after the ages of 16 or 18. These are crippled then; natural capacity is then impossible.

"And to think of the wonderful growth of which a human brain is possible. We cannot describe it, because we cannot realize it. Even imagination fails us. Like your arm, if you should hold it in one position for a long period the muscles, which might be trained to do feats of strength, which nature meant to be developed to the height of efficiency, waste away In time they become set, or incapable of development Possibly the fingers are able to make a few simple movements. . . Thus the atrophied brain—able to perform a few simple functions, but blasted as far

Beginning at Mother's Knee

"We must begin again at the knees of our mothers. Environment will adjust itself to nature. It is to a correct interpretation of first principles that we must furn our inventive genius in order to increase our racial efficiency, and bring about a new civilization which will produce our superior man."

The master-worker paused. His reference to first principles inspired a quotation: "Train up a child the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

"Yes." he continued, "simple words. Give me the child of a Philippine head hunter, who sincerely believes in the decency of mutilating his enemies, and after the proper years of right education, that boy, contrary to all so-called instincts of his race, will shudder to his soul at a suggestion of bloodshed.

"Institutions we boast of do not teach morality. Legislatures make laws in vain. Reform movements do not reform, and all because the human animal we seek to teach, reform or restrain as a menace to society, is not mentally capable of overcoming the effects of the unused or misapplied twelve brain-growing years of his life.

"We can teach a child of four the difference between right and wrong, the same happiness of virtue, the wages of sin, or, in fine, morality.

"We can teach the same child more than the twenty-four hieroglyphics on which we base our grammar. Twenty-four cold, meaningless letters. We try to describe a giraffe with them, we use them to explain the workings of a machine, we attempt to paint pictures of the wonders of the world with them—with hieroglyphics!

A Child Must Be Shown

"Show the child the animals in their native wilds.
Show him an engine running a great min. Show him the rocks, the waters and a growing forest. Thus teach him his environment. Go out to a stagnant pool, and, under the green scum, show the life there, he sits at a table he should know how the cloth is made, how the silver is mined, be able to tell the story of the discovery of glass.

"And, no matter what the details of the new pro-cess of education will be, one most important thing must be remembered. The child must be made, at the start, to love his schooling. He must be easer to go in the morning and loath to leave in the evening. "Just what this new process of education is to be

I cannot say. Mowing pictures will help to solve the problem; dry text books never will. But this process must come even as will the new civilization."

"And then?" I asked. "Then," he replied, slowly, "we shall give Nature a chance and begin to learn."

The Marriage to Chanler.

Finally she decided to become Mrs. Robert Winthrop Chanler. It meant good deal in the way of social standing in New York and Philadelback at some of the women who had been snubby. There was no question of love. Line announced over and over again in the columns of the press that she loved Chanler, no more than she had loved Prince Alexander Bariatinski or Marquis di Rudini.

Before the wedding to "Bob" Chanler, according to the French custom, there was a settlement. Chanler said, when it was all over and he awoke, that he would have signed away his yers, threw her arms about his neck and said, "Oh, Robert, how I love

As it was he signed away nearly all his earthly possessions. He gave the bride-elect $20,000 a year, to be paid in quarterly instalments. This was the same sum he gave his divorced wife. He placed in trust for the lovely Line all his holdings, which gave him a yearly income of about $65,000.

The honeymoon was brief. The wedding took place on June 18, 1910, in Paris. A month later the bride was hurried away for an operation for appendicitis. When her husband went to call on her in the hospital he was not admitted.

The separation took place soon after. The settlement was again the question. The Chanler family gave Cavalieri something like $80,000 and made her promise to stay out of America during the season of 1910 and 1911. For this she received a sum equal to her earnings had she sung here during that time.

The divorce was granted in June, 1912. Cavalieri heard the news in London. "I am the happiest woman in England," said she, clapping her hands. Then came Muratore, Again Cavalieri has been married. And she says she loves, for the first and only time in her life She has lost all ambitions for money, for singing, for freedom. Trustees of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra are introducing two measures of reform. In Chicago as in Toronto, it has been suggested that the granting of encores, is an inartistic practice, that it destroys the logic and symmetry of the program, and pro-longs it unduly, the latter feature being largely responsible for keeping many people away who would otherwise help to swell the box receipts The other reform is that ladies should remove their hats at matinees.

Mr. Fowlston, who has only been in the city ten months, is already recognized by leading musi-clans as one of our most eminent violinists as was proved by his last recital. He possesses a voice of exceptional quality, compass and power, urder perfect control, especially beautiful in his messa de voce. Mr. Fowl-ston takes the role of Sir Olny in Harriet Ware's cantata, on Thursday, the 19th instant. He also sings four songs by the same composer, who is journeying to Toronto to accompany her own compositions. Miss Southall, who is making rapid "strides" as a concert artiste, has been heard to great advantage on several occasions, her last notable appearance being at the Convocation Hall under the direct patronage of His Honor Sir John Gibson, K. The program comprised a one-act farce, "Sentiment and Satire"; a one-act drama, "The Lap of the Gods," both by Arthur Baxter, the well-known tenor; and a paraphrase of Sullivan's "Pinafore," the libretto being written by Mr. Baxter also. Those forming the casts were Mabel Doherty, Lawrence Lugsdin, Richard Fairfax, Ern Packer, Marjorie Wilkinson, Edith Yates, G. F. Hayden, Harry Goldblatt, Wallace Sault, Fred M. Fisher, George Dixon, Goldwin Stewart, Jack Lonie, Frank Oldfield, Marjorie Gray, Laura Homuth, Harold Parsons, Arnold Davidson, and Douglas Campbell. Arthur Baxter conducted the orchestra most creditably. The leading roles were all admirably sustained, and the productions thruout made an impression that warrant oft-recurring public evenings being given by the club. was realized, and will be handed over entrancing is his voice that he can perform the feat of making a poor song seem like a good song. When sung by any other singer, "I Hear You Calling Me," for example, re-veals itself for what it is, but by his reserve and delicacy and taste, Mc-Cormack gives it a kind of distinction and charm. It has become identified with him now; at every one of his concerts he is expected to sing it. It happens to be peculiarly suited to his voice and methods.

Torontonians may well donsider themselves fortunate that, with the residents of the largest and greatest cities of Europe and the United States, they may, from the past week onward, since Thursday, when the big building on Bloor street was formerly opened by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, have an opportunity of delving into room after room of a museum filled with countless numbers of wonderful and beautiful relics of past ages. A glimpse into only the past ages. A glimpse into only the ground floor rooms of the Royal Ontario Museum opens a vista of a bewildering array, splendid armor, lovely velvets and brocades of ancient origin, and odd pottery, relics of barbarous and semi-barbarous times.

There are relics from the earliest ages of primeval man down thru the centuries to the old stone age, until one comes to the Egyptian gailery, introduced by memories of the early days of North Africa to the dawn of Egyptian civilization. The eye is caught by lovely alabasters, which, in their examination, deserve a special visit all to themselves. The mummy room is a spot of intense interest, but beyond there is a record of Greek civilization, sketched in historical relics, from the beginning in the very primitive islands of Greece thru two thousand years of development, down to the second century.

To the art of the great Etruscan civilization is devoted another room, and a splendid Italian Venus, to which one might almost attribute all the exquisite grace of the Venus de Milo, has another place of honor. From the Terra Nova to the Christian Era, the history is wonderfully read in relics odd and beautiful, collected in other rooms. In the Walter Massey Biblical collection the spread of world-wide civilization is read, and, in wonderful specimens of all manner of lighting, is shown the evolution of the lamp.

Turning aside from the wonders of the ancient civilized world, one is entranced by the splendid relics of the

Home Face Peeling Becomes Popular

No complexion treatment yet discovered seems to have become so generally and so immediately popular as the mercolized wax process. Evidently the reason is that this method actually gets rid of a bad complexion, which can hardly be said of any other. To temporarily hide or bleach the defective skin with cosmetics, cannot compare with the effect of literally removing the skin itself. Mercolized wax takes off the offending surface skin n flour-like particles, a little at a time, until there's none of it left. The new complexion thus produced exhibits a healthy glow and girlish beauty obtainable in no other way. This wax, which you can get at your druggist's, is applied at night in the same way you use cold cream, and washed off next morning. Here is one thing that actually does remove wrinkies, remove them quickly, and at trifling cost: Powdered saxolite, it oz. dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. Use as a face bath. Beware of Fake-Price Automobiles

The attractive "trading-in" values offered you by some motor car dealers are based on a fake list

Some cars that should list-on production cost--at $1800 are priced and advertised at $2400 or $2600. Thus the dealer can apparently allow the buyer from $600 to $800 more for his old car than can a dealer who sells an honestlypriced car.

But the purchaser "holds the bag." Eventually, he pays more for the "fake-price" car than he would for one legitimately priced.

Used Cars Have Known Value There is no mystery about the value of used car.

Cars of every make, of certain models, have a standard maximum market value. Poor condition of car reduces this figure. Good condition does not

Any dealer who offers more than the average known value of a used car usually makes it up in some other way. Either the car he wishes to sell is over-priced; or it is a depreciated model; or he figures on charging the buyer later for attention given the car; or he is making a quick clean-up—possibly go-ing out of business.

Be suspicious of any trade-in offer that is higher than the average offered by reputable and established dealers.

Look Ahead!

It is a well-known fact that buyers of "cut-price" and "fake-price" cars need look for nothing in the way of service or care from the dealer.

The legitimate dealer's effort is to keep you out of trouble, to have you call frequently that your car may be kept in best possible condition. The other dealer, welcomes trouble, for it enables him to charge you for work done on your car. He, expects to make his profit out of pay-work that should be free-work. Unless he sees a renair to he would prefer that you should be free-work. Unless he sees a repair job he would prefer that you never came near him again.

The phrase "Joy-Ride" is quite a modern invention of American origin, and has a rather unpleasing flavor as applied to motor care. But generally it is a variant on the ballade-phrased "There was a lover and his lass," and that, of course, is as old as the hills. The old-fashioned horse-mode has been imitated in the motor-cycle, which has an unpleasing look of insecurity.

The Usual Compromise.

They were discussing compromise at the motorcycle club. "Compromise is a good thing," said one of the boys. "Take the case of Bill Barlow, the motorcycle racer; he got married about two years ago. He and his wife, after the marriage had a hearty dispute as to whether they should buy a motorcycle and sidecar, or a small runabout, suitable to their means," he said the other day:

"The wife and I have compromised."

"What have you to compromised."

I asked. "A baby carriage," he answered, with a proud, glad smile.

A large number of the members and their friends were present at the club's annual smoking concert, which was held in the club-rooms, Friday evening, a most enjoyable time being spent by all present. Pipes and tobacco were supplied, and some real good entertainment was provided by the talent, including a couple of contests staged by members themselves in the form of boxing contests. A feature of the evenings program was the "song the work of each care."

The tourmaster has received more letters from out-of-town riders as to the club's great tour, and by the looks of things all the riders in Canada are going to go on this trip. Next Wednesday the club will present the winner of their last hill-climb a beautiful gold club button.

Everyone soon caught on to the familiar airs, and spported each number most lustily. After the entertainment a "Dutch lunch" was provided, which proved most acceptable to all. Wednesday evening, March 25, is the date of the annual euchre and dance, which is being held in the Masonic Temple, Gerrard and Logan avenue. On Wednesday evening last a cyclecar club was formed in Boston thru the call of E. P. Blake, the pioneer Boston dealer, and the organization made immediate application to Secretary F. Ed. Spooner, of the Cyclecar Association of America, and indorsed independence in race and tour control, and independent cyclecar shows for 1915. Over two score members of the trade were present and assistance was given in the formation by R. F. Kelsey, of the New York Club, and F. Ed. Spooner, president of the Detroit Cyclecar Club.

has been arranged for, and everyone is assured of a most pleasant evening. The tickets have been limited, and anyone wishing any are advised to secure same as early as possible.

Mr. William C. Dinsford, a well-known member of the club, who has been sojourning in England for the past three months, returned home last week. Bill took advantage of the opportunity while in the old land and visited several of the large motorcycle works, which proved to be very interesting.

The cyclecars exhibited at the Boston show this week include the Mercury; the Duryea, manufactured by the Cresson Morris Co., Philadelphia; the Dudley "Buck," the product of the Dudley Tool Co., Menominee, Mich.; the Merz of Indianapolis; Imp of Auburn, Ind.; La Vigne, Detroit; Economy, the car of Fred H. Parke, of Detroit; the Caconia, invention of H. H. Buffum; Twombly, of New York, and Sharon, Pa.; the Bantam, made by the Lenox Motor Car Co., Boston; the Euclid, of New York; Trumbull, of Bridgeport; and the Salvador, of Boston. An announcement will be made shortly as to the standing of the contestants in the membership campaign. There is a chance for anybody to jump in and get the coveted first prize, as the riding season is just about to open affords a good opportunity for anyone to get out in front. Application blanks, etc., may be had from the secretary.

Henry Crowther, one of the old-timers of cycling days, and for many years a salesman of machinery and engines for the Cresson Morris Co., of Philadelphia, induced that company to enter the cyclecar field, and then induced Charles E. Duryea, formerly of Saginaw, to design the Duryea cyclecar, which the company will manufacture in large quantities in an immense plant at Philadelphia. The first Duryea cyclecar was shown at the Boston Show, and attracted much attention.

Henty, the speaker, drew from the recital. An unthinking person might say off hand that here was condemnation of the moving picture shows, and that they ought to be abolished. Another and wiser one, admitting the power of the pictorial drama for evil, will see that the evil is only a perversion and that in the films there may be—in fact is in the films there may be—in fact is—as much power for good as for ill. If evil thoughts may be aroused, so also noble ones may be inspired and lessons may be taught. There is a lesson in the actual life experience that developed from presentation of the hold-up scene. If the act and punishment of the two youths who were brought under the warden's intimate view should be pictured forth, for example, there would be nothing therein but solemn warning of the dire consequences of wrong doing and crime. It would be a gruesome pre-sentation, it is true, but better such a trip in order to assist in the selection of things to photograph.

New Views of Mighty Amazon Country New to White Men.

In view of the great ardor of motion picture men to seek the new and strange, it is hardly remarkable that the latest story of daring exploration in one of the least known quarters of the world is brought by a party of motion picture photographers. Recently four men arrived in New York after months spent in the wild and absolutely unknown regions of the upper Amazon and the unexplored wilds of Peru and Brazil. Three of the party were directly interested in the film business, and the fourth man was a scientist who went on the trip in order to assist in the selection of things to photograph.

Captain J. Campbell Besley, of London, headed the party, and the other men were Franklin B. Coates and J. K. Holbrook, camera men; and J. W. Dunne, a London botanist and zoologist. The object of the trip was to make motion picture records of a region where white men have practically never been before.

Mr. Coates, in speaking of the trip, said that the party had taken over 12,000 feet of film, and that they had not only complete series and pictures showing natives and their costumes, but also views of all the animals of the region, as well as the chief plants and insects. A company has been organized and plans will be perfected for showing the pictures all over the country, with lectures explaining them.

The animal had been put thru the scene by trainers more than half a hundred times, and Mr. Kerrigan had even rehearsed the scene with it. On no occasion had it become unmanage-the. Mr. MacDonald, the director had planned that Mr. Kerrigan should open the ilon's jaws with his bare hands and then carry out the struggle with it, and that the motion-picture cameera should then stop a moment, when the lion was to be drugged. Season's Big Successes Not Open to Objection From Censorious Critics

Showing That Plays That Bear an Evil Name Soon Die Out -Rose Stahl Has Played "Maggie Pepper" One Thousand Times and Always at a Profit - News From

WITH THE GIRLS FROM JOYLAND

(Weekly Theatrical Letter by W. Bob Holland.)

NEW YORK, March 21. — Mayor Carter Harrison of Chicago has announced that he is in favor of extending the censorship exercised by the police department, to include all sorts of theatrical performances. He gives as his reason his belief that such a censorship would have barred "The Lure" and "The Passing Show," and various other plays.

Mayor Harrison is, in many respects, an excellent mayor, and there is also serious doubt as to the effectiveness of his plan. And there is also serious doubt as to the judgment that any censor or board of censors would have. Opinions differ on many matters, and on nothing so much as on questions of what is proper and what is improper; what is harmful, and what is not, when subjected to a moral test.

It seems to me that the public should be its own censor. It may take time for this system to become effective, but it will come some day, and plays that are improper will not last long, because they will do no business. And, when they cease to dobusiness, they will cease to be produced, for managers will not produce

"Potash and Perlmutter," "The Secret," "The Misleading Lady," these and a few others have been successful, and they would all be passed by the most scrupulous of censors.

Rose Stahl Makes a Record.

Selwyn & Co. have engaged H. B. Warner to head a new company that will present "Under Cover" in Chicago soon. One company is now appearing in this play in Boston. It will be seen next season in New York.

Rose Stahl has appeared for more than 1000 times in "Maggie Pepper," and it is said that she has never done a losing business for an entire week. This item is given merely to encourage those who may think the stage has gone entirely to the dogs.

George Broadhurst, who has made $102,000 a year for two years as royalties on his plays, says that the way of the playwright are not always paths of pleasantness, peace and prosperity. While his name is usually identified with plays that have been successful, he is able to recall several of his efforts which were fallures, and which the public can't remember.

Mr. Broadhurst, after one or two ures, and which the public can't remember.

Mr. Broadhurst, after one or two successes, became a producer, and he lost on bad plays what he made on good ones. Here are some of the plays he wrote, and his figures on what they cost him: "Duke of Duluth," $10,000; "The Dollar Mark," $30,000; "The Girl and the Drummer," $34,000; "Just Like John," $12,000; "Don't Weaken," $7,000.

No Rules for the Playwright.
These figures were given by Mr. Broadhurst under oath, and they are probably accurate. They are illuminating, and so are some other observations by Mr. Broadhurst. He said: "Each play must stand on its own merits. If it appeals to the public, it will succeed. Otherwise it will fail. Generally they fail to please. In this regard, playwriting is unlike the learned professions. Let a lawyer or physician demonstrate his abilities, and he is forthwith assured of a comfortable income. But the learned professions are exact sciences. There are authorities to consult, and set principles to follow. Then energy and industry will make for success.

"There are no rules in playwriting."

principles to follow. Then energy and industry will make for success.

"There are no rules in playwriting. You may write a successful play and earn $20,000 a year from three to four years, but never have another success. In other lines, when one earns an income of $20,000 a year, he is reasonably sure of its continuance. More than occasionally, the writing of a highly-successful play is a stroke of good fortune, the same as a miner's lucky strike in the gold fields. There is no way of gauging the value of a play in manuscript form.

"The most experienced manager may be wildly enthusiastic over a play, only to discover after he has invested his money, the public does not care for it."

To be sure, there have been the big ticket agencies, usually located in ho-tels, which sold tickets for all theatres at an advance of 25 or 50 cents over the high box-office rates. Those agencies served a useful purpose in being able to supply the tickets strangers wanted, without necessitat-ing trips to the theatre, and many persons were willing to pay the advanced prices for the advantages gained.

Just now, a bill is before the New York legislature, designed to regulate the ticket broker evil by licensing the agencies. The bill provides that a person or firm offering tickets for sale in any city of more than 1,000,000 population must pay a license of $250 for each theatre for which tickets are sold. The bill does not apply to the box offices located in the theatres. Klaw and Erlanger are back of the bill, and they express the opinion that it will end most of the objections to

Killing the Speculator,
The question of the immorality of plays is not the only trouble that bothers the authorities of New York. They are also greatly perturbed by the ticket speculators. For years these enterprising individuals have flocked to theatres in which successes were playing, and the casual visitor had to do business with them, or get the show alsome girls," remarked Miss Vokes, re cently. "They probably imagine tha port and make life all milk and honey Foolish supposition!

"To begin with, it requires a long time, hard study and a heap of expense in obtaining a theatrical or musical education that would fit a girl for a position on the stage, commanding $500 a week, providing she had the natural talents.

"Then there is an expense account for clothes alone. That becomes an important item, and removes consider: able molasses from the gingerbread.
"The clothes we need for our per sonal use, that is, gowns to be worn when not on the stage, cost a great deal. Then there is a hotel bill to be considered.

"The leading lady needs a maid on the stage. She is also probably ac-customed to having an attendant in her home life. Added to that expense there is an agent, who looks for his little weekly commission.
"In the end, one may figure how much there is left out of the salary of

What promises to be a veritable carnival of modern dancing will occupy the stage of the Royal Alexandra. Theatre this week, where Joseph Santley (originator of "The Santley Tango") and a company of 70 players and dancers will present, for the first time in Toronto, Philip Bartholomae's three-act musical comedy of youth, "When Dreams Come True."

As a musical comedy star, Mr. Santley is a newcomer to Toronto, although he has been seen here in melodrama on several occasions. He is a young star, imbued with the very spirit of youth, and brings to his work a buoyancy and enthusiasm that has secured for him a very enviale place as one of the most popular of present day musical comedy luminaries. Not alone is Mr. Santley young. He has been surrounded by a company of young people who dance and sing to the ravishment of youthful imagination. And, from all accounts, Mr. Santley knows how to bring the very spirit of youth into his personal performance, as well as he knows how to fill his associate players with the same juvenile enthusiasm. This may be the cause for Philip Bartholomae having named his play "A musical comedy of youth." It has a happy thought, and quito assures a happy entertainment.

Others equally well known in Miss Sanderson's support are Florence Morrison, William Sellery, Yra Jeane and Queenie Vassar, and of course a refulgent outer radience of good looking chorus ladies who add not a little to the general enjoyment. The score of "The Sunshine Girl" is tuneful to a degree as most folks know, having degree as most folks know, having a degree as a most folks know, having a degree as most folks know, havi graphs by this time. Faith Resolutions of "Hook of Holland" fame wrote it, and also collaborated on the book with Cecil Raleigh who is noted for the many Drury Lane melodramas he has written. As to the plot, well its all about a soap factory in merry England, and a dainty little Miss who works in the factory, and the heir to the factory who loves her, but can't very well marry her because of a will which turns the factory over to the employees if he marries inside of five years. So he has a friend come to the factory and pose as the real cwner, while, he disguises himself as a common workingman, and thus wins the pretty factory girl Then the librettists find a flaw in the will which enables the heir to marry his sweetnables the heir to marry his sweet- fragettes.

ever appeared in, would indicate that there has been a method in his progress, because there are very few actors who are systematic enough to take the trouble. Being methodical, however, seems to be the backbone of his personality, and he makes it a boast that he has never been out of work for more than a month or a month and a half at the outside in twelve years, simply because he went after engagements, and got

"They can talk about art for art's sake all they like," he says: "but the stage is solely and purely a commercial proposition with me. I'm in the business for the money that's in it, and if I don't keep up the artistic quality of my performances, the managers won't engage me

"Some of them will tell you that versatility is a bar to progress on the stage; but I have never found it so. I have played anything and everything I could get a chance at, in stock, on the road, or in vaudeville, and, while my specialty has been juveniles, nearly one-half of my experience has been in playing 'old men' and characters with dialect. There are plenty of them who will stay in New York, waiting for something to turn up, and they will refuse to accept anything outside the particular line of parts in which they have chosen to advance themselves; but not for me. I want to know at least a season ahead, if I can just what I'm going to do. I've got next summer fixed for stock in Rochester, under the same management for whom I worked last summer, and I'm busy right now getting next season's road tour lined up." Talking about experience and getting a start on the stage, Tom Emory emphatic: "There is nothing like the stage itself for ambitiou beginners who can beg, buy, or steal a chance to play even the smallest of parts. I started in "The White Horse Tavern' at $20 a week (this was after two years at a dramatic school, where I wasted the time and $2000), and I found that the experience I got was full of the opportunities I wanted, and I've been plugging along ever since. Influence or pull don't count for a particle in getting an engagement. You have to show the managers that you can 'get it over,' and if you can't, you might as well

Purely a Commercial Proposition

The it is a curious anomaly, Emery works harder in the summer time, when the stock season is on, and the salaries are smaller, than he does in the winter, during his road tours. In stock, the work is hard. It means getting up a new part every week, rehearsing it, and appearing in the current play eight times, and sometimes more. Between studying, rehearsing, and playing, there isn't much time left for diversion, but Emory likes it.

"At the end of a long road season," he says, "one gets pretty stale, going thru the same part so many times. The stock is a tough job to get down to at first; but after I get going it comes It's my luck to be a 'quick study,' and I enjoy it. When it's time to take the road again in the fall, I am always in good shape.

"Another thing I'm particular about, and that is, I try never to "let down my performance, for any reason whatever. Whether you're in Kanakee or New York City, you never can tell who is out there watching you. In Jacksonville, Fla., not very long ago, I learned, after a certain performance that Sam Harris, of the Cohen-Harris firm, had been in front, altho not a soul in the company was aware of it. It pays to do your best, under any and all circumstances."

Since his last season at the Alexandra with the Percy Haswell Players. Mr. Emory has been married, and his wife is not a professional. It is to her he cfedits the fact that he is saving money. When asked as to his ambitions for the future, he said he would plug along, just the same as he has been doing. "I don't feel old enough yet, to make a specialty of any line of work," he said, "altho I may do that later on."

Before leaving Montreal last week, it was reported by the Montreal newspapers that the management of the Quinlan Opera Company made arrangements to return to Canada next season, and give a season of opera in English. It is said that the former backers of both the Montreal Opera and the Canada National have manifested their willingness to furnish some kind of a guarantee, so the likelihood is that it will be "opera in English" for Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, and maybe more cities next year.

Toys began to be broken each day and every night when Wilson arrived from work he was greeted with an sppeal to repair this toy or that. He started to think. "Surely an unbreakable toy is a possibility," he mused, a mechanical butterfly. It took; his babies liked it, an almost unbelievable share of calamities.

| so did his neighbors, who wondered at his ingenuity.

"Why not patent your toy?" he was asked, and Wilson, for several years was an elevator operator in the former Saturday Night Building. His friends noted his prosperity, they passed remarks about his happy atmosphere and wondered what luck was buoying him up.

He could show a big roll of bills at any time and whenever his friends commented upon his success he just silently pointed to his horseshoe hanging carelessly on the top of his car.

'I didn' think I was superstitious, but I can't forget that since I found this horseshoe I've spent the happiest days of my life," he said to his wife on more than one

Good luck continued. In a few months a profitable deal in real estate found the elevator operator living in a farger house and cultivating a fine large garden in his spare hours. He was even thinking of giving up his old job and going into something for himself. The time had come, he thought, for a change. It had.

Absence of Symbol Soon Felt

The tucky horseshoe had become a symbol of envy in the building in which it hung. It was ayed jealously by men from basement to attic, and one day when Wilson came down to work it was gone. It had been stolen. It did not worry him-at first.

Scarcely a week had passed—it was drawing toward the end of the summer-when he was summoned home from work by a telephone call. His heart jumped into his throat and, throwing on his coat, he rushed home, only in time to feel his baby clinch his finger in a death grip and pass away. In a pouring rain he buried the child that had been the inspiration of his life and his invention. In the shadow of his greater loss, Wilson hardly thought of the disappearance of a purse containing sixteen dollars that occurred a few days after the funeral, but when two weeks later he fell and broke his arm, he began to think.

"Surely there was a magic charm about that horseslice, if calamity can fall upon me this way within such short bounds. It must be a mere coincidence and things will right themselves," he argued to himself. But they didn't.

Misfortune Tracked Him

For several weeks he stuck to his job, arm in a sling. In the meantime misfortune tracked him again. while alighting from a King street car, fell recovery, when he threw up his job at the elevator, being unable to stand the handicap of his injury. While recovering from his accident, Wilson decided to go mushrooming along the Humber River. Returning with a big haul, he gave them to his wife to cook. They were daintily fried and served, eaten and enjoyed, but within a few hours two members of the family were taken sick. A doctor was called and blamed the fungi. Symptoms pointed to the "death cup" mushroom, he told them, and although the son recovered quickly, Wilson himself was three long weeks lying between life and death, before he finally rallied and won in time to see his young son carried off to the hospital to tor of him, as he started to nail the lucky symbol on undergo an expensive operation, from which it took him

The drain on the bank account that had been collected during the years of fortune had become too heavy. Unemployment and sickness had played havoc with both physique and possessions, and the spring of That night when Wilson went home he was greeted the year found the little family pinched, the husband in by a hush and an air of excitement and soon after he a job almost mean, and the house which had given them was shown a little stranger, the first sign that good such pride the previous year, wrenched from them by

The climax had come. Wilson determined to look once more for an emblem of good luck, but for many weeks he was unsuccessful. At length, while walking along King street, he spied what he was almost desperately wanting-another horseshoe. That was five years ago. Today he has partly recovered from his losses. He is once more comfortably established, but the perimented and cudgeled his brain for an idea, and after a few nights' work, succeeded in inventing and making

"Running the Gauntlet." Some years ago I was working with the improvement gang along the Little dam on which I had my adventure had a steep bank on each side and also a slide of about thirty feet with a drop of about fourteen feet. At the foot of this drop there was very little water and some very large boulders. In order to start the timber in the mouth of this slide there were two booms fastened to the mouth of the slide and attached to the bank by two long poles fastened to the boom and to a tree at the top of the bank. I had walked down this pole several times the day previous to my adventure and had out what is called the floatwood in the pond, that is old logs, brush trees, etc., that happened to fall in. That evening we put the stopble in the dam so we could float the driftwood. There was a heavy frost during the night and when I got to the bank they had already opened the dam and the wood was going thru. I started down the pole which was holding the boom to the bank but it was very slippery owing to the frost and could not stop there, so started jumping from one log to another. I was out in the centre of the pond and, to my horfor, I could not see another big log for an instant. I then discovered an end of a log sticking out of some brush. I jumped for it, but it was log and down I went thru the brush I The crowd of people roared in held out my arms and caught the nouth of the dam. You can imagine my horror while I thought of dropping fourteen feet down among boulders to be dashed to pieces with the timber following me. "They Were Not Hungry." The most exciting moment of my tife was while soldiering in Egypt a few years ago. Not a stone's throw from the dam of Assuan was our barracks, or, rather, our mud hut. On the day in question my company found the main guard, which comprised one sergeant, one corporal and nine men. About twenty minutes' walk from the barracks, in front of the guard room, is the Nile, and a little to the right is a village. My turn on watch was from eleven to one. About a quarter past twelve I was standing at ease, half dreaming, when I started and looked over my shoulder. What I saw I never shall forget. A pack of, I should say at least fifty jackals, their eyes shining in the darkness, tearing almost directly toward me. I almost fainted, and whether the animals took pity upon me or whether the wind was blowing the other way I was too scared to find out, but the whole pack rushed past me so close that I could almost have touched the nearest with my hand. How or why they missed? me I don't know. Food must have been plentiful and in that rests 'my present existence.

An afternoon dance was given by Dr. L. Parton on Tuesday at the Arcadia Club, Bay street, to celebrate the birthday, which falls on the same day as reland's patron saint. Beautiful decorations of spring flowers and ferns were artistically carried out. Favors of all manner of quaint concetts, emblematic of the Emerald Isle, were presented to the guests as souvenirs of the day. All that is newest and most graceful in dancing was shown by Miss Helen Lee and Mr. Herman (New York.) Nothing that could add to the pleasure or enjoyment of those present was overlooked by the thoughtful host.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Bach, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bach, 29 Glendale avenue, to Mr. Ronald Leslie, L.C., M. C. V. (eldest son of the late Commodore Leslie, R. N., North Huyton, Eng.) took place very quietly at the residence of the bride at 7.30 o'clock on March 14. Only the immediate members of the family were present, owing to illness in the family of the bride. Rev. A. L. Geggie officiated. After their return from a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Leslie will reside at the Lakeview Mansions.

Mrs. Kemp was the hostess on Monday of a bridge party of seven tables, when she was wearing a lovely and becoming gown of chiffon velvet of the shade of a neapolitan violet, the corsage of lace and diamond ornaments. Mrs. MacAgy was in black with fine white lace on the corsage and diamond and pearl ornaments. Mrs. Scott Waldie, who assisted her mother, was in dark blue with a little cerise on the lace of the corsage. The prizes, silver photograph frames, were won by Mrs. W. B. Maclean, Mrs. Parmenter, Miss Evelyn Temple, Mrs. Knight, Miss Scott and Miss Mills, The tea table was exceedingly pretty with a real lace cloth over green satin with green ribbons, centred with a lareg silver basket filled with madonna lilies, tied with emerald ribbon. The lees were pale green with strawberries. All the cakes and sweets were in shades of green, and exceedingly good, being home-made. Mrs. MacAgy and Mrs. Neville poured out the tea and coffee. Mrs. Beardmore and a few others came in to tea after the game.

Mrs. Charles Nelles gave a very de-Hightful dance Tuesday afternoon at the Prince George in honor of Mrs. Douglas Bowie, from St. Johns, Que. Col. Nelles received with his wife and adopted daughter, the hostess looking exceedingly well in a pearl gray satin with draperles, and a corsage of lace with draperies, and a corsage of lace the same shade, a wide girdle of violet satin, an emerald and diamond necklace, and a bouquet of mauve sweetpeas. Mrs. Bowie was very pretty in coral satin with girdle and sash of violet and a little plumed hat to match. The private dining-room made an ideal dancing room, and the table set across the door of the large dining-room was very prettily arranged with brown willow baskets of shamrock, willow catkins and bows of wide green ribbon. Those present included Mrs.C. H. Johnston, Mrs. Frank Johnston, Mrs. Bongard, Captr and Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Geary, Mr. and Mrs. Brock, Mf. and Mrs. Barnard, Major and Mrs. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Macdonald, Capt, and Mrs. Robert Macdonald, Capt, and Mrs. Pollet, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Case, Mr. and Mrs. Montreal, wore a pretty gown of satin, draped with white, a bouquet of white roses and ferns. DOWAGER'S LONDON SOCIETY LETTER

News and Gossip of Canadians Abroad and of English People Well Known to Canadians.

LONDON, March 21.—Society has lost ; its head over the young Russian dancer, Nijinsky. Society girls waylay him with an excuse that they want his autograph. At his hotel the other night six of them formed a cordon around him plying him with questions. He is inundated with invitations, gifts of flowers and jewels, and he, undoubtedly, has cut out the airmen, even with the matrons. He is to be the lion of the season in the drawing-rooms of Mayfair if he is willing.

rooms of Mayfair if he is willing.

A duchess who was giving an impromptu party put on her cards, "to meet M. Nijinsky," the dancer having promised her he would turn up. At the last moment he forgot all about it. He was supping with a merry troop of Russians in a Bohemian restaurant when he thought of the duchess and her party. Fornwith, he went to the nearest telephone and ringing up her grace apologized profusely. He said it she asked him again he would not only go, but dance for her, so she was quite comforted the the guests were not. He looks very solemn off the stage, and does not suggest being happy. Queen Alexandra, who has heard a great deal about him from her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, is very anxious to see him dance, and it is quite likely he may be invited privately to Mariborough House to perform with his winged feet.

I remarked recently about the flasce of the Dublin season. Since then Lady Paget, wife of Sir Arthur, who holds an important military appointment in the Emerald Isle, has come forward to help the situation. She issued invitations for a great dinner party and ball, but there was practically nobody in Ireland to accept them owing to the political situation, and refusals came pouring in. What did Lady Paget do, but wire off to a troop of friends here and begged them to save the situation by going over to Dublin and bringing their smartest array. "I have never in my life been associated with a failure, and I don't want to be now," she said. Forthwith boxes were packed, engagements were broken, and twenty or thirty couples started from Euston by the mail train. The Royal Hospital, where the Pagets live, is not a big house, and the guests had to put up with some funny "shakesdowns," but everything was so joilty they did not care big house, and the guests had to put up with some funny "shakesdowns," but everything was so jolly they did not care in the least. The King, it seems, is exceedingly angry at the way the Irish aristocracy are behaving, and he is determined to do as Queen Victoria once did many years ago, send home to Dublin any Irish debutantes who may try to be presented at the Court of St. James' instead of at their own. Indeed, it is said that the lord chamberlain has already intimated in the right quarter the king's displeasure.

It is again being said that Lady Warwick is about to publish her reminiscences, which were withdrawn some years ago. She is quite within her rights, as it was not specified at the time that they should never see the light, an awful lapse for those who were concerned. Her brother-in-law, the Duke of Sutherland, who hated that any member of his own or his wile's family should come prominently before the public, is dead now, so Lady Warwick will have a free hand. But, of course, society is quaking, more especially some of the highest in the land. Lady Warwick is a good friend, but she can be a good foe, too.

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has not given us any sensation for quite a long time, is also said to have made arrangements for the publication of her memoirs. She told a friend some time ago that she was tired of dancing, and she does not see why she should not write as well as her sister, the Countees of Cromartie, whose name is well known in the magazines. Lady Constance has a fine capacity for calling a spade a spade, and she is fearlessly outspoken, which is well known to all who have met her in private life. She has a few "dearrest" enemies among society women who have "hit" her unfairly, and being a sportswoman above all things that is something she cannot forgive.

Mr. J. Obed Smith, Assistant Superintendent of Emigration for Canada, and Mrs. Smith, gave a dinner party the other evening at their house in Richmond, Surrey, in honor of the Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan and Mrs. Brown. Among the guests were Mr. Richard Reid, Agent-General of Alberta and his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Morris, whose interesting books on Canada are, by the way, enjoying quite a vogue. Since the death of Lord Strathcona Mr. Smith's duties as host to prominent visiting Canadians have been appreciably increased, tho, of course, during the last few years of his tenure of office of high commissioner is vacant the duties of official host for Canada are being well looked after. Like most Canadian women Mrs. Smith is keenly interested in her husband's mission, and works with great enthusiasm for the closer Intimacy of men and women of Great Britain with those of Canada. Visiting Canadians find a warm welcome in her Surrey home and are brough into touch with notable people here with interest similar to their own. In his early days in London the late Lord Strathcona used to say that hospitality and entertainment were essential branches of business, and many important undertakings of real value to Canada have originated over the walnuts and wine. The interest of the late Duke of Sutherland in the Dominion was, of course,

Routley's New WALL PAPERS

Are now on display and if you are thinking of decorating you should see them. The collection represents one of the most beautiful displays of imported papers that has ever been brought to Toronto—the latest creations of the leading French, German and English Mills—the best Canadian and American manufacturers are also in evidence.

Being importers and wholesalers Routleys are better prepared to save money for you on wall papers than stores doing business in the regular way. Routley's prices will bear out their fact by comparison.

You are invited to visit the store and see the display and learn what is the trend of wall paper fashions.

So it is in the present condition of the suffrage question. The points of difference and the action taken by women interested in the work women. But, if such are expecting anything spectacular, they are apt to to offer themselves to the public in any light but the dignined one in which they have appeared in every situation as public women in the past. Some of the most intellectual, broad-minded and womanly women of the dominion are leaders in what are supposed to be adverse sides, and the outlook of all is far too wide to admit of petty or selfish cause, and they want this to be brought about by altogether constitu-tional lines. This being so, any ripple which at present appears as if it might develop into something large and likely to form an insuperable obstacle to later amalgamation of forces, is an illusion. It is just possible that the present issue may be productive of a stirring up of energies, and in such a case there would be nothing to deplore.

Of the ultimate result there can be no doubt, if Toronto women are true to past traditions. There will then be no spectacle for the public other than that of a union of forces for the one end, which, despite present appearances, all workers for suffrage have in view. The men who are laboring so strenuously now in the Ontario legislature want the united support of all those for whom they are spending them-selves and their energies. That "unity is strength" is as true today as

The World Window

Canada's Greatest Scientist

Thru the regrettable death by accident of Sir John Murray, the world loses the greatest expert it had in oceanography and Canada, perhaps, the most eminent man of science she has yet produced. . In his chosen field, Sir John Murray was easily first, and his untiring industry enabled him to undertake a vast amount of work that in quantity, as well as quality, has rarely been equalled, still less exceeded. Few more fascinating narratives have been published than that of the Challenger deep-sea expedition, which introduced to expert and public knowledge many wonderful and previously unknown denizens of the abysses of the ocean. This work, and his editing of the fifty volumes embodying the more purely scientific results of the expedition, gained Sir John Murray high honors. But even this colossal labor represented only a part of the work he accomplished. Cobourg, Ontario, has right to be proud of her distinguished son.

Toronto of late has experienced an epidemic of fires, culminating in the tragical burning of one of its newest hotels and the loss of several lives. It has been followed by the usual public outcry for the improvement of building methods and the provision of more easily accessible and safer means of escape. But if experience is to be the guide, little will follow from the passing wave of popular excitement. Time soon blunts the edge of resentment, and it becomes merely a memory to be recalled only when another catastrophe wakens it to life. Reforms must come from the authorities charged with the public safety and it is to be hoped that the practical suggestions of expert officials will meet a due measure of attention. This, however, may in fairness be added, that Toronto is no greater sinner than other cities of the continent.

Preserve Provincial

Is it not time for a halt to be called on the action of the Deminion Parliament in continually sanctioning invasions on the jurisdiction of the provincial government and legislature? Here we have the hydroelectric system, owned and operated by the province for the public supply of electric power and light at cost. It aims at distributing these over rural areas, as well as in bulk to municipalities, which undertake their own local distribu-A still larger proposal is that of radial electric railways for the purpose of affording better and cheaper transportation of passengers and freight. Yet the private bills committee of the house of commons steps in and sanctions an electric railway, besides granting privileges that practically amount to blanket rights of operation within the province. To Ontario is mainly due the majority upon which the present federal government depends and the province should not only be left alone in working out its hydroelectric system, but should have its rights protected, instead of pared with 474,981 men. Women voters will hold the balance of power in every ward and the question is: What will they do with it? Chicago has not hitherto ranked high among United States cities in the quality of its administration or in the purity of its public life. No great centre of population presents sharper contrasts and a vast work must be done before its citizens can be raised to a higher general standard of civic patriotism. Interest will be focussed on election day in Chicago and on what the women vote will do for the advancement of the city.

> Municipal Weekly

On Thursday last, the first issue appeared of the Edmonton Official Gazette, a municipal weekly, which will contain verbation reports of the city council, the minutes of commissioners' and committee meetings, official reports and interesting items of news from the several departments. From time to time cuts will be published, illustrating the various branches of civic works, but at first only those will be inserted that are made for use otherwise, and therefore will not involve special cost. · As we note elsewhere on this page, Denver, Colorado has for some years been issuing an official publication of this kind semimonthly, whereas Edmonton purposes a weekly edition. The idea of a civic publication containing reliable reports of the city's business and finances, is an excellent one, and in the case of western centres should be specially interesting, in view of the extent to which many of them are placing their utilities and resources under public control and operation.

admire and appreciate, but they are even more essential to the success and reputation of any important seat of learning. In this latter regard Toronto and Ontario have already established an enviable reputation. The University of Toronto-in a peculiar sense, the provincial university—it is claimed has more students on its register than any other university within the British Empire and it carries on its teaching staff men whose scientific attainments are matters of world knowledge. Museums are as necessary to a university as are its classrooms and library, and the splendid building officially opened by the governor-general on Thursday last is in every way worthy of the province and the city. It is vastly significant, too, that its capacious halls and galleries are already

A FOOLISH OLD WOMAN

Boy Immigrants and Training

Every province in Canada, Ontario in particular, is interested in the scheme which South Australia has just initiated for the purpose of assisting British lads to emigrate to that state. The Hon. Fred Young, M.P., commissioner of lands and immigration, recently announced that all preliminaries had been arranged for the reception of the lads and for apprenticing them to approved farmers. Under the legislation passed at the last session of the South Australian parliament, the commissioner is empowered to act as guardian for the boys taking advantage of the scheme, while ample provision has been made to protect their interests, as well as those of their employers. The government, however, purposes doing more than merely placing the boys out as workers. It has undertaken the responsibility of giving them a thorough training as agriculturists, and to aid them in ultimately acquiring farms of their own.

This, we take it, is a practical and practicable method of promoting land settlement. Some prejudice has hitherto existed in Canada with regard to the encouragement of boy immigration, yet, under proper safeguards, it should result in securing a highly desirable class of settlers. If the boys are carefully selected to begin with, and are efficiently trained, they cannot but become skilled agriculturists, accustomed to local conditions and therefore in the best possible position to make the most of their opportunities. The South Australian government is circulating a pamphlet in the United Kingdom, explaining the principles of the scheme and the class of work to be expected. It also promises that every boy will receive pocket money and that the balance will be placed to his credit in the treasury, at four per cent. interest, until he is twenty-one, when the amount will be paid over. It is estimated he will then have from $350 to $500, with which he can start for himself under the state land regula-

A Municipal Dispensary

Colorado is generally recognized as one of the most progressive states of the adjoining Republic, and its capital, Denver, a city with about a quarter of a million population, is no less typical in that regard. It issues a semimonthly publication, "The City of Denver," each issue containing quite a lot of valuable information regarding the city council, its departmental administration, the public accounts, and all other branches of municipal work and enterprize. It is attractively illustrated with views of the public institutions outside and inside, the parks, the officials, the playgrounds, and the homes. Indeed, we cannot conceive of a better method of enlightening and interesting the citizens in their own affairs and the example set by Denver might be copied with advantage in Toronto and Canadian cities

In the current issue, an account is given of efficiency that prevented disaster.

Denver's Free Municipal Dispensary, opened on March 7th by Dr. J. M. Perkins, commissioner of social welfare, as a part of the health department. When the city and county governments were under separate management, the county physicians worked under the direction of the county commissioners, making house-to-house visits among the sick poor and holding a dispensary in the basement of the courthouse. When the city and county governments were combined, a new arrangement was made and the indigent patients will now be cared for at the new dispensary and visited by the county physicians. These are specialists in their various branches and serve without pay, nurses from the senior class of the hospital straining school being detailed for duty as part of their training. Especial attention will be given to tuberculosis and the diseases of child-Since the dispensary was opened it has been attended by from sixty to a hundred

Why Lives Were Saved

On Saturday, March 14th, a fire occurred in Newark, New Jersey, in the Baker Building. occupied by a waist company, with 450 employes. This building, as explained editorially in The Newark Evening News, presented unusual difficulties, owing to a rear extension — a circumstance also present in the case of the Woodbine Hotel. Before passing it as sufficient in safety requirements, General Bryant, head of the Newark department of labor, personally inspected the premises, after two inspectors had reported and found the egress unsatisfactory. He was, however, able to convince the owners, in spite of the unusual expense involved, exceptional changes alone would protect workers in the building. These included the installation of an electric alarm system, repeatedly inspected during construction, practice in fire drills and proper means of egress, including fire-proof doors and a protected outside fire escape tower with wired glass guard and a stairway wide enough to carry two persons abreast.

As a result of this careful inspection and provision, the numerous employes escaped unhurt. Without the means described, or any one of them, The News remarks: "The Saturday fire might easily have proved a tragedy. But the city department of labor did not confine itself to inspection and recommendation. The fire drills were instituted and worked out under its direction, and the safeguards thoroughly tested. The outcome, as has been said," The News proceeds, "was to save the lives of many-no one can say how many-of the girls and women who found their way out of the building without disorder and without hurt." This, we take it, is an admirable example of what can be done, even under difficult conditions, when the civic department, charged with public safety, is conducted by officials who are zealous and unsparing of pains in the discharge of their responsible duties. The News, naturally, warmly commends the commissioner for the care and

Stories of Famous Masterpieces EDITED BY DONALD G. FRENCH

8. Burke's Speech on Conciliation With America

Altho he had come to London in 1750 as a "poor and unknown Irish adventurer," his learning and talent won for him the friendship of Johnson, and set him in the way of a literary career. But Burke leaned toward politics, and, becoming secretary to Lord Rockingham, he entered parliament in 1765, under his patronage. His speeches dealing with the American war of independence are regarded as "master-pieces in the literature of civil and political wisdom." He saw, clearer than any of his contemporaries, the huge mistake that was being made in attempting to coerce Britain's colonial possessions. The true idea of imperialism — as voiced by Kipling's "daughter am I in my mather's house but mistress in my own"—was apparent to the foresight idea of imperialism — as voiced by Kipling's "daughter am I in my mother's house, but mistress in my own"—was apparent to the foresight and imaginative vision of Burke, when the majority of Englishmen thought that it was only a simple case of a perverse child who required the chastening rod. In 1774 Burke made his famous speech on "Tax-ation." By the following year it became apparent that the American colonies were on the verge of revolution, and the government began to think that reconciliation must be attempted. On the day when Franklin, the American delegate, was sailing from Portsmouth, Burke stood forth as the apostle of peace, and introduced his plan of reconciliation in the speech, "On Conciliation with the Colonies."

DASSING OVER the introduction in which he regards as a sort of "Providential" favor, the return of the bill dealing with America for further consideration, we find his statement of the question comprehensively and lucidly put in the following paragraphs:

"The proposition is peace. Not peace thru the medium of war; not peace to be hunted thru the labyrinth of intricate and endless negotiations; not peace to arise out of discord, fomented from principle, in all parts of the empire; not peace to depend on the juridical determination of perplexing questions, or the precise marking the shadowy boundaries of a complex government. It is simple peace; sought in its natural course, and in its ordinary haunts. It is peace sought in the spirit of peace; and laid in principles purely pacific. I propose, by removing the ground of difference, and by restoring the former unsuspecting confidence of the colonies in the mother country, to give permanent satisfaction to your people; and (far from a scheme of ruling by discord) to reconcile them to each other in the same act, and by the bond of the very same interest wich reconciles them to the British gov-

The house, he argued, by moving to reopen the discussion of this bill, had declared conciliation admissible; it had gone further — had declared it admissible without any previous submission on the part of the colonies. He infers that it is felt that he former mode of exerting the right of taxation was unfounded. It is not, however, his purpose to discuss the right or wrong of taxation. "I mean to give peace. Peace implies reconciliation, this is Burke's plea.

RANTING, THEN, that reconciliation is the desire of parliament, he argues: "The capital leading questions on which you must this day decide, are these two: First, whether you ought to concede; and, secondly, what your concession ought to be." In order to determine what ought to be done it becomes necessary to consider "the true nature and the peculiar circumstances of the object which we have before us."

First to be considered, he thinks, is the number of people in the colenies, and the rapid increase in the population. This considered will prove "that some degree of care and caution is required in the handling of such an object; it will show you that you ought not, in reason, to trifle with so large a mass of the interests and feelings of the human race. You could at no time do so without guilt; and, be assured, you will not be able to do it without impanity." From the statement above we turn for a moment to the historian, Green, and we find his interpretation of Burke's character illustrated by these sentences. Green says: "A nation was to him (Burke) a great, living society, so complex in its relations, and whose institutions were so interwoven with glorious events in the past, that to touch it rudely was a sacrilege. Its constitution was no artificial scheme of government, but an exquisite balance of social forces which was in itself a outcome of its history and development."

THE COMMERCE of the colonies was the next consideration. Comparing it with that of England, Burke shows that England's trade with the colonies in 1772 is very nearly as great as the whole export trade of England at the beginning of that century. America's progress has meant increased prosperity to the mother country. The agriculture of the colonies he shows to have rapidly increased—fisheries are of great importance. It is a great and prosperous and rapidly-growing country. "America, gentlemen say, is a great object," he remarks. "It is an object worth fighting for," "Certainly," says Burke, with a touch of sareasm, "if fighting a people be the best way of gaining them." He thinks it is not, and he further observes that the use of force alone is but temporary-"it may subdue for a moment; but it does not remove the necessity of subduing again." The result is uncertain; force impairs its object by the very endeavors to enforce it. He says, too, "We have no sort of experience in favor of force as an instrument in the rule of our colonies." Truly, they had not. Force had been used successfully to conquer lands, never to retain colonies - that is, not colonies peopled by men of British descent. And, from this argument, is a natural transition to the next, when he says in effect; "Remember, that in dealing with the colonists, you are dealing with lishmen, like yourselves; men to whom liberty is as dear as it is to you." But we cannot follow the whole speech in detail - the purpose of this article is to give you a general idea of its scope and style, and, possibly, to encourage you to read it for yourself. Burke sums up the phase of the discussion on the liberty-loving spirit in this way: "Then, sir, from these six capital sources; of descent; of form of government; of religion in the northern provinces; of manners in the southern; of education; of the remoteness of situation from the first mover of government; from all these causes a fierce spirit of liberty has grown up."

CONTINUING his discussion, he enters fully into his plan of dealing with America, quoting precedents, suggesting alternatives. disposing of objectives and viewing the subject from every possible angle. The resolutions moved by Burke were, as might be expected, of such a tenor as to leave the handling of the affairs of the colonies almost entirely within their own hands, in accordance with the theory stated in the body of his address: "Perhaps, sir, I am mistaken in my idea of an empire, as distinguished from a single state or kingdom. But my idea of it is this; that an empire is the aggregate of many states under one common head; whether this head be a monarch, or a presiding republic. It does, in such constitutions, happen that the subordinate parts have many local privileges and immunities.

Whether we study this as a document of political wisdom, or a piece of well-constructed and logically developed argument, it has great value and many useful lessons.

Best New Book How a Book Gets Written

Prize-Winning Review By Allegra Cronk "The Inside of the Cup'

DEAR FLORENCE: Strange to say, I was just reading the "Inside of the Cup" when your letter came, and I shall do my best to give you a short review. The book is primarily a religious discussion, but a small golden thread of romance is woven into it, too. The romance is woven into it, too. The author, Winston Churchill, says that this solution of the church problem is his own view after years of experience and reflection. He puts his arguments into the mouth of Mr. Hodder, an Episcopal clergyman, who had been called to a most orthodox and dignified church in a large city. After two years the rector becomes discouraged at the lack of growth in the church, and, by a series of incidents, he discovers the causes. He likewise finds that in being orthodox he has shut himself from the problems of the day. He reads the modern criticisms and feels that all belief is gone, then he reads William James and others, and the rebuilding process begins. Finally he decides that religion must be along the lines of reason, and that personality is the keystone of it. He preaches his belief boldly, and is opposed by Mr. Parr, who represents the grasping and demoralizing power of wealth. The arguments between these two are strong and carefully thought out. Each man is forceful, indomitable, and Mr. Parr, in the city that he practically owns, finds himself, for the first time, beaten, the he refuses to acknowledge it. author, Winston Churchill, says that the first time, beaten, the he retuses to acknowledge it.

The greatest character in the book is Horace Bentley, the man of poise, the unobtrusive philanthropist, who lives simply and gives himself daily to the needs of others. His whole personality radiates power and peace—"He seems like God to me," says the rescued woman. The recsays the rescued woman. The rector comes under his influence at the time of his greatest discouragement, and finds there a firm belief in humanity and an unfaltering faith in God. Horace Bentley is evidently the author's ideal of a Christian, thru whose life others may know God.

2/2 2 THIS BOOK is rather too long for a modern novel, the the interest never flags. Every sentence breathes sincerity, and the reader's sympathy is enlisted whether his opinions agree or not. I am not a theologian, and cannot criticize Mr. Hodder's explanation of the creeds. But it must appeal to the reason of all when he says that only when the government becomes a Christian organization, and a de cracy will there be a solution for the suffering and sin of humanity. Likewise the fact that as long as money is the ruling power there will inevitably follow the "survival of the fittest."

Many would feel that the book is unfinished, but so is the working out of the problems he suggests, and Churchill has wisely left something to the imagination. This is the best new book, and you must surely read it if you have to take a day off.

Sincerely, Allegra Cronk.

... THE ABOVE selection is taken from "Elegy, Written in a Country Churchyard," by Thomas Grey. In the poem the poet first describes the quiet country nestling down to repose after the usual day's work. His quiet sollioquy then takes his thoughts back to the forefathers of the land, who lie asleep eneath the cool turf o'er which they once had walked with the lively step of youth, while endeavoring to eke out a livelihood when the country

yet was new. The great solitude then arouses his sympathy for those who, perhaps, have longed to achieve great things, and to become great men in the world, and their opportunities being imited, or, perhaps, circumstances o'er which they had no control forced them to be content with merely dreaming of the big world. It is a very beautiful part in its touching sympathic simplicity, and behind it lies the secret of many lives that yearned for greater things, and the suggested possibilities of those who were resigned to their lot

Kate Douglas Wiggin Tells History of the Writing of "Wait-still Baxter."

HERE AND when was "Wait-still Baxter" written? On reflection it occurs to me that I shall always think of this as my one and only "hotel book." Almost every page of my work has hitherto been done at my country house in Maine, but among the very few places left in the busy noisy world where an author can work without interruption, is a hotel. One can get solitude, freedom and concentration not only in some idyllic hostelry far removed from cities, but also in some sky-parlor in the very heart of a roaring, hustling, luxury-ridden, pleasure-seeking civilization. I chanced to be in Garden City for a few days' rest last January, and took some of my favorite brown envelopes full of notes with me, merely to re-arrange their contents, nothing being further from my intention or desire than writing a book; but no sconer did the name "Wattstill Baxter" meet my eye on the outside of one of the envelopes than it began at last to tell me a story for which L had been waiting. I fought against it, but it insisted and persisted until I returned to fown in a very rebellious mood with three finished chapters in my traveling bag. hostelry far removed from cities, but My home duties and my home my nome duties and my home pleasures had a tendency to interrupt my work at that season of the year, so in order to satisfy the claims of the story, which by this time had taken absolute hold on me, I persuaded an obliging landlord to give me a large vacant room, where in a sunny hor window. me a large vacant room, where in a sunny bay window I installed a writing-table, pen and ink, a screen and a scrap basket—five articles with the help of which any author ought to be able to write a fairly decent book! (Perhaps you will say the more he uses the scrap basket the better the best in likely as the best of more he uses the scrap basket the better the book is likely to be!) Here the story grew until it was about one-half finished. Its next stage of development was in a little sitting-room on the Lusitania sailing from New York to Liverpool, and the next in the Northern Countles hotel in Belfast, Ireland, where I wrote regularly from ten to one in the mornings, and finished my days at delightful Irish tea and dinner narties.

The book was now approaching an end, and taking advantage of a fortnight's golfing holiday on the part of my husband, I immured my-self in a favorite London hotel, and, secreting my very existence from all my friends, worked unremittingly until I brought the story to a close Then followed a week in the Ran-dolph hotel at Oxford, where I rewrote, polished, struck out, and added to the tale while the manuwas in the hands of typist. At length it was done; but let no one suppose that the pen was laid down in joy, as the a burden had slipped from the shoulders. There is a momentary sense of re-lief, perhaps, but one is sorry to be parted from anything which been the cause of such solicitude and much pleasure; altho after the exhilaration that has accompanied the work, comes the "back water" of fear and anxiety lest the book be less than we hoped, when our hope

MARRIAGE OF CECILIA.

Wherein Marriage Precedes Courtship. T is said that there is nothing new under the sun, and to the reader of fiction comes the thought that there is nothing new in plots. However, in this book the author has really discovered a new setting for a tale, and the events leading up to the marriage of Cecilia are so out of the ordinary that the reader is constrained to doubt the ability of the writer to formulate a plot. The description of Cecilia in the opening chapters as a most uninteresting and commonplace young woman is so well drawn that the reader is imbued with the same feeling of contempt for the heroine as she engenders in those with whom she comes in contact, and he feels like throwing down the book for something more interesting. But patience has its reward, and as you read on Cecilia wins your respect and on Cecilla wins your respect and you become deeply engrossed in the development of the story.

The story does not lead up to the marriage of Cecilia, but without any such commonplace formalities as friendship, courtship, and other preliminaries to a wedding this marriage takes place between Cecilia and a man she has seen only once, and who parts with her at the church door with the expectation of never seeing her again. Quite a beginning for a story, surely! and filled with great possibilities in the unfolding!

Marriage gives Cecilia only one added advantage to what she before enjoyed, namely, the command of a stated income, offering the means of travel and more congenial companionship.

of travel and more congenial companionship.

The new environment, however, produces such changes and develops such charms that the uninteresting heroine gradually merges into a most engaging one—one who is capable of inspiring the grand passion, even in one who had thought himself proof against all such feelings.

The story is cleverly told, and shows a wide acquaintance with human nature, and might almost be classed as a psychological study. The author has se clothed her characters, that in some subtle way they seem to us real, and we feel at times impatient with, or displeased with them when they do something contrary to what we wanted them to do, but what, upon reflection, we feel they would really do.

HOW TO SING. Practical Instruction by a German Author. HIS WORK is a translation from the German of Lilli Lehmann (Macmillan Co., publishers). It is a thoro exposition of the technique of singing, presented in simple language and illustrated by numerous explanatory diagrams. As to her title to write on the art of song the author says: "I have been on the stage since my eighteenth year, that is for thirty-four years. In Prague I took part every day in operettas, plays and farces. Thereafter in Danzig I sang from eighteen to twenty times a month in coloratura and soubrette parts; also in Leipzig, and fifteen years later, in Berlin. In addition I sang in very many eratorios and concerts, and gave lessons now and then." During all these years her study of the tech-nique of singing has been faithfully kept up, and she writes with the clearness of one who has personal knowledge of all that is discussed. Some idea of the scope of the work may be gathered from the mention of a few of the topics: Preliminary practice, the breath, the singer's physiological studies, equalizing the voice, the attack and the vowels, nasal singing, the head voice, sen-

Original Poem Competition THE LAND OF STORY BOOKS

By Lilian Leveridge

'There's a dear little fellow steals to my desk
With a shy little, grave little look.
"Is today," I hear in a whisper clear,
"The day for the story book?"

Then I smile assent—for I love it, too,
The day to the children dear—
And reach the book from its library nook,
And summon them round my chair.

There's a glad response when the word is given; And the laddie so eager-eyed. With a swift little race has cleared the space To the coveted spot at my side.

Oh, the lucid light in those limpid eyes,
As I becken to Wonder-land,
And open the gate where the heroes wait
With welcome on either hand!

For they come—the honored of long ago— From far-away lands of gold, With elves and fays from the sylvan ways, And goblins and giants bold.

Yes, beast or bird from the woodlands wild Will come at our call today. And our laughter rings at the quaint, sweet things, The wilderness children say.

And saint or sage from the magic page, Come forth with the singer sweet, While a-hush we wait at the Wonder-gate, The Immortals to meet and greet.

Then a quiet steals down the listening aisles,
And school is a gladder place;
But I lay the book in its library nook
With a sigh for its too brief grace.

And I dream a dream of a rosy dawn
That ushers a rosy day,
When the happy school as a golden rule
Shall follow the story way.

No chiding then for the laggard step,
But dancing of willing feet,
As hand in hand in Story Land
We seek for the things most sweet.

For Truth and Beauty and Peace and Prayer

Bloom bright in its secret nooks—
Oh. there's never a grace, but the heart may trace
In the gardens of Story Books.

Then let us open the golden gates.

And call to the eager band
To enter the bowers and cull the flowers
That biossom in Story Land.

Origin and Development of Confederated Governments.

HE CRIMSON thread of kinship runs thru us all," is an appropriate quotation on the title page of this book. In discussing "The Federal Systems of the United States and the British Empire," the author, Arthur P. Poley, B.A., presents in popular form an account of the four great systems of government of the United States, Canada, Australia and South Africa, and shows the relation of these systems to the constitution of Great Britain. Starting out by defining the general plan and purpose of a federal conetitution, the writer traces the origin and development of colonial government from the Greek idea on to the American plantations, and down to the present. The confederation of the United States and the development of its constitution is discussed at length, the functions of the various administrative bodies being traced out and explained. Comparison is made with British institutions. nilarly the writer treats in detail the development of the constitutions of Canada, Australia and South Africa. The marginal topics assist the reader in summarizing the chief points. Students of constitutional government will find this an inform ing and illuminating discussion one of the most important phases of constitutions politics. (McClelland Goodchild & Stewart, publishers.)

SIMPLE SIMON.

A NEIL LYONS, the author of Simple Simon, relates the story of a simple young man who haled from Broxbury. He received £1500, and in his simple way collected many simple "investments" from the workhouse and such places, and set off for London. Being given to philosophy, and being interested in the poorer classes, he acquired much information which greatly assisted and schooled him for the posttion he was elected to-a guardian on the Silverside Board of Guardians, in East London. Among his investments was a young lady who desired only cold beer and sympathy, and Simon allowed, his sympathy for her to lead him into matrimony.

The satire which flowed thru Simon's farewell speech from the board of guardians was really excellent. His final investment was a pony and cart, and Simon bid his readers fares well, and he drove off with his wife and an adopted baby (also an investment), and his dog Cocoa, to begin life as a "whole." The story prints a very clear and interesting picture of many eccentric types of human nature, all collected in a poor quarter of East London. The book is published by Bell & Cockburn.— L. K. H.

A Weekly Letter Of Comment And Opinion

A Conversation With a Baby.

NTERVIEWING a baby is hardly in the newspaper line, but you can learn a great deal from it. A baby is such a new person—coming from perhaps a far distant world, or it may be returning to his oud haunts, and a different environment from that which surrounded him in a former incarnation. We are rather afraid of him when we are left quite alone to entertain him for an hour or so. He knows so much more than we do. He is wiser than Solomon, yet nothing can persuade him to impart any of his secret wisdom to you. He eyes you with a suspicious blue eye when you attempt to pay him any of these little attentions which he silently but imperatively demands. When he commands—in a lusty tone of voice—you fly to obey. You become his abject slave and adorer. What matter that you may want to sit still in your deep chair, and dream before the blazing logs, if he wishes to travel, or dance, or kick. You will travel, too, believe me, and sing ridiculous songs, and make ridiculous faces, and talk in the most ridiculous manner, sooner than permit him to make the welkin ring with his lamentations.

. . . Our Own Opinion of You.

OUR MOTHER says that you are a lovely baby; your father admits that you are "a whatever that may mean—and walks about with an air as the HE had done something to be proud of. But your leveliness is, to say the least of it, a thing occult, say the least of it, a thing occult, and not to be perceived by everybody. In repose, Sir, you have no more facial expression than a crumpet. And heaven forbid that any respectable crumpet, toasted and buttered, would look like you when your temper gets the better of you, or a pin is sticking into you somewhere. Then, Sir, you resemble exactly the Man in the Moon, whose face is all awry.

Who are you, anyway? Where did you come from? What right have you to come in here and find things already arranged for you-food, clothing, and the best and brightest room in the house? A wink of a piratical blue eye is our only answer. What sort of an in-only answer. What sort of an interview do you think we can get with you, young man, if you keep up this absurd silence? Pardon! We implore you not to break M. For what purpose were you ever created and by what process have you managed to inoculate everybody about you, not merely with a spirit of toleration, but a be-sotted admiration of your personal-ity? Why should your personality, Sir, be so large, while you are so little? These are things we want to know, and you wall not answer—but, I forgot, pray don't speak!

. . . S FOR PERSONALITY, you are the most living imper-sonation of voracity, impatience, ingratitude and noisy self-asesrtiveness we ever met. No grown person could copy your be-havior for four and twenty hours and escape assassination. Your in-tellectual pretensions are admittedly beneath contempt. I don't think that even your mother, besotted as she is by the spell you have cast over her, would claim much consideration for you upon that ground, tho we have heard her express the most unquestioning faith in your future talents, and she complacently contemplates the day when you will be the greatest genius of the age. That is a foregone-conclusion. The you have barely existed in your present incarnation for two months, she has already remarked, inon, your ear for ready remarked upon your ear for music, your appreciation of everything bright, such as candlesticks and watches, and especially your marvelous aptitude for spotting her when she is about to officiate in her maternal capacity. "You ought to be proud of him!" cries an enraptured friend; and in our soul we ask "Why?" You are not in any sense a phenomenon, not even an your appreciation of everyask "Why?" You are not in any sense a phenomenon, not even an infant one. Any young woman could produce your exact counterpart, and most of them do. There are many million replicas of you at this moment, cooing and squalling all over the planet — a great many more than can reasonably hope for decent subsistence on it. You are not beautiful: decent subsistence on it. not rare; you are not beautiful; you are not intelligent—!

Heresy! We hear your mother coming in, and we take it all back. Which indeed, we do of our own free heart as well — for you are quite the dearest little soul in the world, little Baby, whether you cry, or wink, or stare idiotically at the shining candlestick, or make frightful faces at your father. For you are OUR Baby — which makes all the difference in the world.

was there, and there lived Father Adam for 980 long years, Seth for his lips thick, his figure squat. As recompense he was endowed with a golden tongue and a beautiful mind. Alas! not all of us who are cast in homely mould are thus dowered. Most of us have the dull wind or well as the dull eye. And affection for Scotch and sodas—or whatever stood for them in those times. Why was it men lived so long in those days? in those days? Because the climate of Mesopotamia (the cradle of the human race), is mild, warm, beneficent and favorable to longevity, and men led different lives. They lived under the smiling sky, with no houses to shut them in and underdowered. Most of us have the dull mind as well as the dull eye. And yet the ugliest man on earth possesses 300 wives. The question arises: Do women like handsome men best? Suppose we alter that mine their vitality. Imagine in these to attractive men. Our own opinion is that broadly speaking, your at-tractive man is seldom tender, and times of high living being rent free and tax free for all time, besides liv-ing on for centuries. Would you take long life at the price of living like nearly always selfish. And he doesn't wear. Naturally there are the exwear. Naturally there are the exceptions that prove the rule. In moments she looks tired and pathetic and her full age, and then to your surprise she lapses into the child. A strange bun-dle of moods she is singularly fascinating. She is changeable as the chameleon, presenting to the mind a lovely woman, disillusioned, weary of it all, then a dancing child, then a tender, wistful little Desdemona singing her "willow" song and trem-bling at shadows. Never shall we forget her, nor Faversham's Iago. If mad Will Shakspere could see the presentment of his subtle, sly, hum-crous villain as Faversham, range him orous villain as Faversham gave him he would be happy in the fact that here, for once at least, was the mirror held up to nature. The New Way In Teaching By Elbert Hubbard

NOT LONG AGO in Chicago I attended one of the attended one of the regular monthly meetings of the school principals. On this particular occasion an address was given by Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools.

The theme with which Mrs. Young dealt was "The Ungraded School."

In these schools, instead of placing so much stress on books and memorizing of rules, the children are simply kept employed, and their occupation is changed from time to time before any one thing becomes monotonous or wearisome.

T WAS found that many of the children were suffering from malnutrition, and it was believed that many of their mental difficulties arose from physical ills. A luncheon was provided in the middle of the morning, and the subject of dietetics and oral righteousness had close attention.

Attached to these schools was a elose attention.

Attached to these schools was a supervised playground, and in some instances school gardens. Much of the time was spent out of doors.

"It was discovered," said Mrs. Young, "that it required a better quality of teaching in this work than in teaching children who were normal."

Mrs. Young paid a high compliment to the people who had charge of these ungraded schools, and spoke in high esteem of the results they had brought about.

S HE ENDED her very interesting talk with the wonder why the same methods, the same care, and the same fine insight into care, and the same fine insight into the needs of the pupil could not be brought to bear in all of the schools, instead of favoring the children who are regarded as unfit. This is essentially the "Montesorri System."

Dr. Maria Montesorri is an Italian school teacher. Her first business was that of a nurse. Then she became a teacher next a physician. came a teacher, next a physician.

She held a government position and had the care of defective chil-

This brought the question of edu-eation sharply before her mind. The conventional methods not being sat-isfactory for abnormal children, she devised a method of her own. A lit-tile later it came to her as a great gleam of light that her methods in teaching abnormal children was the best possible plan also for the norm-al.

R. MONTESORRI has now established established in Italy under government supervision, a chain of schools in which her methods are being carried out. It promises to be as big an evolution in school teaching as was worked out by Arnold of Rugby, and then died with him.

Dr. Montesorri builds on the work of Froebel and Pestalozzi. Pestalozzi was a Swiss, born in 1746 and died in 1827. Froebel was a German, in 1827. Froebel was a German, born in 1782 and died in 1882. The work of both these masters was carried on independently of the government, and both were visited with the hostility of the ruling class-with the hostility of the ruling classes, and especially of those in charge of the church schools.

Froebel and Pestalozzi heid to the divinity of the child, and while they did not openly make war on the dogma known as "Total Depravity," yet certainly they never repeated the dictum that the child was conseived. dictum that the child was conceived in sin and born in iniquity. . . .

WITHIN a very few years the entire divilized world has ceased the beating and whipping of children, and this thru the acceptance of the doctrines of Froebel and Pestalozzi. This is the way that social evolution takes place—by being accepted by those who successfully fought it.

First, we say the thing is contrary to the Bible. Next, we say it makes no difference one way or the other.
Third, we say we always believed

Men fight for a thing and lose, and the men they fought take up the issue that they opposed, and carry it to victory under another name.

S WITZERLAND and Germany are now taking the matters of education, and Dr Montesbrri. Swiss by parentage, and Catholic by birth, is uniting with the government to bring about the things that the Governments of Italy, Switzerland and Germany once flercely combated.

The principal care of Dr. Montes-orri is for the health of the child. She quotes Herbert Spencer, "The first requisite is to be a good animal." She recognizes that the child has to pass thru the same stages that nations pass thru. The child has the savage, the nomadic, the agricultural, and the commercial agricultural, periods.

66 I APPINESS," says Dr. Montesorri, "is the greatest asset in life." Happy people are those who are employed in useful occupations, and such are always well. The business of Dr. Monte-sorri in her schools is to keep the children pleasurably employed.
She gives the child the right to freely explore its environn

Every baby, as soon as it can creep, begins to investigate. It tests everything, and makes itself acquainted with everything in the room. Then it travels to other rooms. It goes upstairs, and, perhaps, rolls downstairs. But again it tries. There is something up there that it wants to see. Children want to climb ladders, climb trees, climb heights. They want to see the top of the house, as well as the cellar. This natural bent of curiosity and desire, to know, to see, to understand, is the basis of education.

Dr. Montesorri never uses a nega-

Dr. Monteserri never uses a nega Dr. Monteserri never uses a segative except in cases of positive vice, or present danger. She never rebukes a child for rudeness or impoliteness. If the child is doing the wrong thing, she gently encourages it to do something eise. If the child wants to stand on a chair in order to see out of the window, by all means she lets a child work out his own problem. his own problem.

. . . F THERE is a band playing on the street, all of her children get up and run to see the band and hear the music. The impulse and desire to know what is being done, to be familiar with your surroundings, are elements of power.

It may be regarded as strange to some to know that various parochial schools are adopting the Montesorri methods, putting in school gardens with out-of-door school rooms, and busy work." It will appeal to some as a new criticism when the church declared that the public schools are not progressive. The Montesorri system is practically the modern school of Francisco Ferrer. It is only a question of time before Ferrer will be corporated.

be cannonized. In a Montesorri School, the children work, talk, play, prepare their meals, make their plans, learn to write incidentally and accidentally thru desire and not thru compulsion. Dr. Montesorri takes children from two years old and up. She utilizes the services of the older children in caring for the younger one. Thus caring for the younger ones. Thus does she carry out Feroebel's idea of the "Little Other Mothers," which is, of course, the natural way in a big family where there are no servants, for there the older children care for the younger ones, and thus they get an education out of their old when I took my first lesson in drying dishes for mother. By the time I was twelve I could make the beds, set the table, and had been initiated into the delightful mysteries of plain cooking. After school and on Saturdays I was mother's right hand man, particularly in the kitchen and as I grew older the work of cake, pie and pudding baking fell entirely to me. To do the family baking was anything but an irksome task. On the contrary, I reveled in it and to try out a new recipe afforded me intense pleasure. I was fond of concocting little surprises in the way of desserts, and to see the various "eats" I made disappear down the appreciative throats of my family, and "It's perfectly delicious, Helen," or "That's bully good, Sis," was worth the time spent in making them. Occasionally I presented the neighbors with some dainty I had made, and I was always willing to bake cakes or make candy for bazaars and church suppers. It was, therefore, not surprising that among my friends my culinary efforts were always received with extravagant praise and I became something of an authority on certain recipes for salads, desserts and even candy. There was one particular, taffy I made that my girl friends in school named "Helen" taffy in honor of me, and whenever a class picnic or party was planned I was sure to figure at the head of the refreshment

If learning to cook and to bake had been forced on me, no doubt I would have loathed the bare idea of it. As it was I looked upon an afterrecreation, and was as proud of the various dainties I made as was the girl next door of her watercolor drawings. I felt myself to be as successful in my line of work as she was in hers.

. . . IKE A great many other young women, whose parents are in moderately comfortable cirfuture when my course in high school was finished. My elder sister was in her sophomore year at To-ronto University. Father and mother were forced to make every penny count in order to keep her in college. Therefore when I proposed dismissing the maid and doing the work myself, mother, after much persuasion agreed to let me try it. There were five of us at home, father, mother, a fourteen-year-old brother, little sister, who was eight, and my

I tackled the new responsibilities with a will. Mother and I went over the house together and divided the work. To me fell the cooking, dish washing and marketing. Mother, with the help of a scrub woman, who came in twice a week, had charge of the general housekeeping and mending. Of course there were times when we turned in and helped each other, but, as a rule, we stuck strictly to our own work. . . .

WAS during the summer before my sister's last year at college that hard times fell ipon us. Thru no fault of his own, father lost his position he had held for so long, and when, after weeks of patient endeavor, he failed to obtain another, my sister and I began to plan ways and means by which she might finish her course in college without calling on father for help. Her scholarship partly covered the problem. The question of clothes was settled by her sturdy declaration that she would "make her old clothes do," but the expenses attendant upon her senior year, includ-ing those of graduation, would be sure to amount to a considerable sum. How to raise the money was the question. As the days slipped by and the time drew near for her to decide whether to give up the idea of graduation for another year or to we both went about gloomy and perplexed, unable to hit upon a plan for raising the money.

Father's mind had been so centred on his endeavor to find another position that he had given little thought to my sister's affairs until the time drew near for her to return to col-lege. One night, however, he told her that he was trying to borrow money necessary to send her back for that last year. My sister cried and said she would not hear of any plan, but father said she must finish her course and in due time the money was borrowed and she entered her senior year in college.

S tained a position which paid him only a small salary, and it was during a period of strict economy at our house that I evolved my idea of making money. One day while making a call on a friend she bewailed the fact that their cook had departed on the eve of the luncheon for which she had sent out cards. I opened my mouth to con-dole with her, but instead found myself offering to take upon my shoulders the responsibility of cater-ing for her luncheon. My friend was surprised, grateful and flatter-ingly enthusiastic at my offer and we lost no time in planning the menu.

The luncheon was set for the following afternoon, so I had very little time at my disposal. The various dishes we had planned were com-paratively easy to make, and every-thing was in readiness to serve long before the guests arrived. Every-one present praised the luncheon, one present praised the luncheon, and after it was over my friend handed me a five dollar bill. At first I refused to take it, remonstrat-ing that altho I had given her a little of my time, I had been put to no expense. She retorted that the time I had spent in preparing the luncheon was at least worth that much, and with the thought of father's debt in mind I decided to

After this emboldened with my success I announced myself as a full-fledged caterer thru the medium of the daily papers. I also wrote personal notes to my friends and acquaintances, and as the fall merg-ed into winter my orders began to increase until I had all I could conscientiously handle in the way of Mother was delighted with my success, but father was worried for fear I should work too hard and overdo. I har hearded religiously almost every cent I had made during the winter, and in the spring I had more than enough to pay father's debt. Kind, generous soul that he was, he had to have the money fairly forced upon him before he would consent to take it. During the month of June I made considerable money catering for receptions, teas and luncatering for receptions, teas and luncheons. My earnings paid for my sister's graduating finery besides leaving a little in my treasury.

WHEN SHE came home with day for us both. She helped me loyally at the various affairs for which I catered during the summer. The next fall she went back as an instructor, to the college from which she had graduated, while I made ready for my fall work. It came in rather slowly at first, but by October I had plenty to dc. I continued to go to market, and I hired a young girl, and began to teach her the rudiments of my business. I had a busy but extremely profitable winter. When the next summer came I felt, as the I could indulge in a vacation. My mother and I spent a month at the seashere, and when I returned home it was to find that returned home it was to find that my customers had missed me, and that I was really of a certain importance to a few people at least.

At the end of three years I had done so well that I opened a little shop in which I sold choice candy, cakes and ices, and cut flowers. I made the place my headquarters for taking orders for dinners and luncheons. There were two young wo-men in the shop, who waited on trade and helped me with my orders and served at the various functions where we catered. There was also two young women outside the shop on whom I could call at need. I hired a boy to keep the shop in order and run the errands, and with a maid at home to help mother, I settled down at my new place of business where I have been ever since, and where, if the future can be reckoned by the past, I am likely

Stay at Home Girl Who Now Runs Good Paying Business

WAS a stay-at-home girl-you all know what that means. My father earned enough to support our family, consisting of our mother, an older sister and myself. My sister was a business girl, but somebody must stay at home to assist mother, who never was a robust woman. Naturally, I was the "somebody."

I really had nothing to complain of My dutter were not argues and

of. My duties were not arduous and I had ample time to myself. I was always handy at making small accessories out of very little and many. of my friends would watch with envy the evolution of a rose from a bit of ribbon or a boudoir cap from a piece of silk so small that it looked hopeless and my negligees were always called "a dream."

Yet I was conscious of a vague feeling of dissatisfaction. I too wanted to be a wage earner. My mother was shocked at my ambition and my father pooh-poohed the idea. "Little girl—" I didn't like the term either, for I was past seventeen—my father said, "as long as I can earn enough why trouble your head about earning money? Mother would be lonely all day by herself and she needs you." So the subject was dismissed for the time being. Secretly I, envied my sister, who went out into the world of work, with its many interests, and could handle her money with the feeling of having earned it.

B UT IN THE course of a few over our family. Father died after a short illness and mother was more delicate than ever. Never a business woman, she was as helpless as a child when it came to planning ways and means to eke out the small amount left as an annuity by my father's insurance. Then again the doctor looked grave and said mother would be greatly benefited by a change of air, especially now as the warm weather was approaching. I put my wits to work to plan some way by which I could accomplish my twofold purpose—to get mother to the lake shore and make enough for her own affairs to look after. Every-thing was up to me. After considering the pros and cons carefully I rented a small furnished cottage at kew Beach, and after, we had been settled a small sign announced the fact that we had furnished rooms to rent. We soon had every available room occupied and had our ewn tent free for the summer.

NE DAY when I was making a little ribbon rose for a boudoir cap, a gift for a brideto-be, the lady who had our second storey front room stopped to admire it. I thought nothing more of the occasion, but one day she stopped me in the hall and asked me if I would make her one of those caps. I gladly consented, as I dearly liked to fashion pretty things. When it was finished, she handed me a two dollar bill, and when I told her that it was gratis she wouldn't hear of it, saying it was fully worth that amount, and she would have to pay it in any store; and then it wouldn't be as dainty as this one. This was the first money I ever earned, all for myself; no one can imagine my

After that I inserted an ad, in the paper stating that I would make hand-made silk roses, boudoir caps and bows for evening slippers. I couldn't wait until the fall, I was so enthusiastic over it. For a few days I was doomed to disappointment, and then one day my first answer came. It was an order for a set of chiffon roses. My fingers fairly trembled as I set about making them. I wanted to excel my-self in their making, and I did. My patron was very much pleased and recommended me to others. One woman ordered a boudoir cap, and won-dered if I could make a negligee as well. I smiled to myself, and design-ed one for her, over which she went

Success Attained By a Society Woman In a Unique Business

OWEVER impatient and sceptical we become of the value of oft-repeated, century old adages, their truth is constantly being reaffirmed by the experiences of ourselves and others. "Learn to do one thing well, if you would make a success,' . has been drummed into our ears from childhood. Many of us have spent all our time in trying to make up our minds as to which thing to choose to do

Fortunately for one girl, 23 years ago, necessity forced her to learn to make an especially good bowl of broth. It happened that a guest in her home was taken ill and the regular kitchen force, proficient in fancy cooking, proved incompetent in making the simple dishes and jellies prescribed for the invalid. As the girl had always liked to potter around in the kitchen, she voluntered to take upon herself the task of preparing the simple food prescribed by the doctor. "I wish," said the latter in approving her concoction, "there were some place where one could go to get patients a good bowl of broth." It was a few years later when she found herself utterly unexpectedly facing the problem of ways and means to earn her living, that the emark of the attendant physician at e time recurred to her mind. "Immediately I became enthusias-

le over the possibilities of success which I felt must lie in supplying the demand suggested by the doctor," she says in telling of her start, "I pawned some jewels, kept my former maid, Mary, with me, rented a room and kitchenet for $35 a month, stocked the place with necessary fittings, and finally sent out 500 cards announcing the launching of the project.

N THE DAY of the opening were two anxious hearts, mine and Mary's. No

ly on. Our breath came quick when we heard approaching footsteps. It was 4 o'clock when my first customer came. It was my father, who solemnly paid for his bowl of broth, and took it away. The second was my brother. Two days more and hope was commencing to die down. Suddenly the tide turned and from that day we have been swamped with orders. We started in 1890 with no capital, one room, one emplove, six quarts of broth, 500 booklets. To day we are an incorporated company, have a medical house, which is a large building, with 30 employes, an extensive diet kitchen, maintain the largest registry for nurses in the world: furnish surgical dressings and supplies and have invalid furniture for sale or rent. Besides, we move invalids, disinfect homes, and maintain a number of rooms for rest cure patients."

Naturally this remarkable organization was not developed without much hard work on her part and personal devotion to business. "Not what we have, but what you want." that, she says, has been her motto.

"I would meet requests for the strangest articles without betraying a smile of amusemnt, as if they were the most natural things for me to feature in stock. The father who came in one day with the startling request for a chicken bone for his sick baby to chew upon was given it without comment. I enclosed it in glazed paper and blue wrapping as daintily as the it were a silver one. Then, one day a prominent clubman, in a convalescent state, came in and said rather irritably he anted something to eat, but he had found nothing in a long time to tempt his appetite. I suggested he try a few slices of homemade bread and butter. He dropped right into a chair here and ate these contentedly. Even when de-mand came to us to supply sterilized milk to last a baby during the voyage crossing the ocean, I accepted the order. Instead of saying had never done such a thing before, I took this request as indicative of a need, and made it the basis of a a regular department.

66 NE IDEA, you see, has bred another. It was natural that when demands came to us for nurses, that we open a registry for them here. Of course, I only permit nurses from reputable hospitals to enter their names. "The next step suggested by their necessities, was to devote a section of our building to the making of nurses' uniforms and surgeons'

gowns and caps for operating. "So many people live in boarding buses and hotels, or in such a houses and way as not to be able to keep in valid supplies, that we have found a most profitable department in our emergency service. We will send anything anywhere at a moment's notice, confinement sets, operating tables, surgical appliances, bed linen and towels, sheetings and gauzes. We rent iceboxes and back rests."

When she began, tradesmen saw in this girl a certain quality, which inspired confidence as to her success, thus gaining helpful and much-needed credit. The butcher sent her his best cuts, the 'kitchen utensil firm allowed her bill to ac-cumulate without pressing for pay-was so grateful to them," says, "I took my check down there myself when I got the money to pay them, with the idea of expressing some of my gratitude for their kind-. . .

PERHAPS it was her social training, her fine courtesy, and evident "true-blueness, which empressed these people and proved an asset. She herself is a believer in the importance of the social qualities.

"The women I prefer to have associated with me," she affirmed, "are women without actual business experience, who are gentlewomen. If they are not, your own class will be antagonized. Moreover, people of another calibre are quick to realize and respond to an atmosphere of refinement. Social quality in a wo man is a necessary element to suc-She must not only appear

You must understand and be tender and partient. There must be quiet and harmonious atmosphere here, in spite of the fact that it is a busy place, with at least 50 people ing and going, some of them working, with scores of nurses and governesse as well as patrons in waiting. Yet one scarcely hears a sound. Quiet and harmony are essential to good work."

Certainly the colonial interior of the home, as well as the fine covered exterior satisfies the ideals of the founder. Flames from the great log fire in the rest room are reflected on the white uniforms of the nurses in attendance, who move about quietly and serenely. At the opening of the door leading to the kitchen, the delicious fragrance of broth in the process of cooking tempts the healthy appeate of the patron waiting for an appetizer for invalid mother, sister, brother, or

FRESH AIR ESSENTIAL 10 GOOD BUSINESS

N THEN OFFICE work seems to become unbearable, when your co-workers and yourself feel ill-tempered and the world seems generally gray, have you ever stopped to consider the fact that a simple explanation of this state of affairs usually means that there is not enough fresh air in the office? It is not an easy matter to ventilate a large room properly, especially if there are many people in it; particularly is this true during the spring months, when the weather is variable and the steam heat necessary one day and unbearable the next.

There are always others present who complain of drafts among those who "feel suffocated" and the result is a general feeling of discomfort and bad bumor with resulting failure to turn out good work. As a matter of fact no room, large or small, should be without a little ventilation when it is occupied all day, and at the lunch hour the win-dows should all be thrown wide open and left so for at least fifteen min-utes. This allows a few minutes to warm it up again before business is resumed. In some offices the girls have no rest rooms or have no time or in-clination to go out, but if it is neessary to remain in the workroom luring the lunch hour, the windows should certainly be opened and raps resorted to by those who remain there.

Most offices aim for a scientific system of ventilation, but it depends good deal upon the workers the selfves as to whether in addition to this they procure a little real outdoor air during the lunch hour.

Girls who are employed indoors all day, should invariably take a brisk walk at the lunch hour, in order to obtain a good supply of oxygen to brace one up for the afternoon. An official in the city health department says:

"Half the iff-temper in the world is the result of poor ventilation. Think of your own case. Let the office or the house or the school-room become close and "stuffy" and immediately there follows a feeling of depression. The lungs being robbed of fresh air, the blood is deprived of oxygen, the purifying agency, the nerve centres are depressed in their turn and all of a sudden we find ourselves in an irritable, peevish humor without any apparent explanation for it.

"Which hours are the hardest? The last ones of course. "Not necessarily, because it means the culmination of the day's efforts, but because the windows have been kept down and the steam on until the air becomes hot, dry and parch-People whose occupation keep them out-of-doors are as a class more even tempered and genial than paper one finds will be so at variance with one's possessions, especially the floor covering, as to ruin the whole scheme of furnisheing. A valuable rug, of course, is worth a new wallpaper, but if one does not want to so to that trouble the most expedient thing to do is to wash over the offending paper with one of the kalsomine finishes in a warm gray, if one is combining with bright hued rugs and furnishings, of a medium depth of tone, or a medium golden brown, if rugs and covers are of deeper reds and blues. An interesting color scheme can be arranged by making the wall a mulberry, if the carpet shows a predominance of deep blue. A touch of chintz in blue and mulberry for curtains or cushions and a chair or sofa covered in plain blue. Blue china of darker tones, like Chinese or Nanking wares, looks well in this connection, and is one of the few combinations that look well with golden oak, altho the darker oak is in much better taste.

The washing over of a wallpaper with kalsomine is not formidable, but it might find opposition from the professional decorator. It is necessary only that the paper on the wall is firm and smooth. A blistered place needs a fresh piece pasted on The preparations that come are accompanied with directions for mixng and applying, so the work may be done by some one at home. The lighter the paper the better the result. If the pattern of the paper shows thru, it wil give a pleasing diversity of surface. The only thing to avoid is the choice of lavender of yellow, as they require a suggestion of texture or lustre and would look cheap in such a flat toned finish. Old burlap, or, better still, those of Japanese grass cloth, make beautiful walls done in this way. The best choice in this renewal work will be found among the neutra? tones, such as grays, tans, gray green, blue gray or a light tint in terra cotta planning for the shade it must be remembered that a plain tone must deeper than the same thing in . figured paper.

ET VERY often I have pondered over village girls and wondered at their restiveness. But let me tell you of a young girl

For many years I taught in a vil-age and had frequently the good fortune to be asked to dine at the home of one of my older pupils It was such a joy to be free of boarding-house flatness, and to be a sharer in domestic cheer and tasty delicate cookery. I was made quite "one of the family," and felt free to praise. "Who made this delicious cake?" would ask, or "Whose light-as-afeather muffins are these?" or "Who made this peanut brittle?"

And always the answer would be: "Dorothy did it. OROTHY had a brilliant brother who wanted a college training in electrical engineering and was willing to work for his education and did, but his father had to help some, and family purse strings were frequently at strain-

Sheets should be long enough to tuck in well, both at the bottom and top of the mattress, and some people prefer the upper sheets being longer than the lower ones so that they can be folded far back over the blanket, but ready made sheets generally are of one size. Cotton, linen and percale are the proper materials for bed linens, the latter, a soft, dainty fabpeople preferring it to linen. Pillow slips are made to match the sheets, both in material and ornamentation. If a monogram or initials are used, they should be placed on the top side of the case right above the hem. Fine handwork is always beautiful, but very elaborate laces are in poor taste and never look well after a few launderings. Rather should one give one's attention to the color of one's linens, that they be spotless and white with no disfiguring marks of blueing, soot or rust. Coverings should be light but warmheavy, cumbersome comforts are not to be tolerated, for their weight is most injurious to the sleeper. Light woolen blankets and comforts lined with lambs'

wool have come to be the accepted

standard of warmth and comfort, for even down quilts have gone out of favor, as they are thought to be dust collectors. Lambs' wool comforts may be purchased for $2.75, but for $3.50 beautiful ones covered with silkaline, having wide borders of silk in dainty colorings, can to had. For years a spread of white Marseilles and linen pillow shams were the accepted fashion, for even the most ambitious housekeeper, but they have now been supplanted by the more formal roll and bed covers made of linen, pique, dimity or rep, either plain or hand embroidered, with a large monogram. Sometimes, though, so great an expanse of white may look too defined, too obtrusive with the other furnishings and colorings of a room, so that the bedspread must also be lowered in tone.

. VERY charming are the bed covers made of plain rep or cotton taffeta upon which are appliqued garlands of flowers cut from chintzes or cretonnes. Such a spread was shown in a lavender and gray room. The bed itself was of gray enamelled wood, embellished with a narrow white line. The bed cover was of pale gray rep, the color of the bed, upon which was appliqued lavender cretonne flowers. This same cretonne appeared again as window hangings. The cotton spreads may be had in cream, tan, dull blues or any other neutral tint which can be made to tone in with any color scheme. They are but any woman who is clever with her needle could make one. Dainty dimity bed covers are also shown, either in plain white or cream, or with narrow enough to tuck under the roll. Occasionally one sees separate slips, into which a round bolster may be slipped; the covers hang down the sides of brass beds, nearly touching the floor, the two sides at the bottom being split to allow the corners to lie flat. With very sheer material, a deep flounce sometimes appears. On wooden beds the cover merely touches the wooden sides. When a roll or bolster is used, sleeping pillows are tucked away out of sight during the day and are only placed upon

ing their clothes by packing them too tightly, yet this is the secret of successful packing. If they are allowed room to slide and slip, they will come forth wrinkled and mussed, whereas if they are firmly held in place in a trunk which is not too large for its contents, you will get far better results. A hostess shudders, too, on beholding the arrival of a mammoth trunk. It is very inconsiderate to encumber her with too much luggage, and this is a point to remember if you would be a welcome guest. In planning for a Summer tour, you should always arrange your packing, so that the things you need most and first will be near the top. The heavier garments, which you take with you for emergencies in case of cold weather, may be neatly packed at the very bottom, and if covered securely with piece of cloth and held in place either by pins or fapes, will act as a false" bottom and will not interfere with the lighter clothes.

HERE is nothing that looks so uning that so takes away from your smart appearance, as the crumpled look of an elaborate costume, so that an hour or two expended upon careful packing is not wasted.

No garment should ever be folded until it is perfectly dry. Every plaited packing. Then the skirt should be carefully folded with tissue paper in the

Some soft gowns are kept smoother by being rolled over a heavy newspaper roll, that has been first covered with sheets of tissue paper, then by straight packing. This, of course, depends upon the material and whether you can accommodate it to a given.

YOUR trunk does not contain the modern trays and compartments, paper boxes are a safeguard. Evening gowns may be kept uncrushed by placing them in a separate box, and smaller boxes that fit in the upper tray can be utiltidy as wrinkled gowns, and noth- ized for the many little accessories. Label these boxes with the contents, which saves both time and temper. An elestic band or ribbon will keep the lids in place even if the trunk be turned upside down.

bed and its appointments faudon Thompson The Sap's A-Runnin'

HEREFORE all hail to the maple—the Canadian Maple of the gorgeous, flaming, autumn leaf! When the melting snows at last reveal the tiny partridge plant with its spicy berries, and the beds of squaw-vine, and, perhaps, a stray ground laurel—woodland com-panions even beneath winter's fleece-like mantle—then the sap starts running, obedient to the first sunrays that carry any warmth. . . .

66S AP'S A-RUNNIN'; sap's a-runnin'!" In ample time before this the provident husbandman has put everything in or-der: taps to clean, pails and vats to cleanse, the sugar-house down in the wood to pile handy, new chimney to erect in position—all the little odds and ends. None can ever tell; the season may be brief, it may linger three weeks, or nigh on to April. It rests with the weather; even the ground-hog cannot know, for stern different prophet, legend to the contrary. When the "run" does start. everything must be ready, all hands prepared, to make fullest use of every hour in the twenty-four. Talk about an eight-hour day! Any country home in Ontario which is dignified by, and fortunate enough to possess a sugar bush as an appanage kens nothing about the clock when the first sweet liquid wells forth drippingly into the scrupulously clean pails.

THE ENTIRE household answers the roll-call when "sap's a-runnin'"; everything needs doing at once; sap to be gathered, filtered, heated, fiftered again, boiled. evaporated, clarified; and so on to the final "sugaring down" to the amber, businesslike oakes that one buys in the city shops, "warranted strictly pure; from a friend o' mine near Blankburg—own make" (does that ring familiar?).

IRST COMES the tapping. Perhaps not with an iron gouge and axe as in the old days, but with a handier half-inch brace and bit, a hole is entered at "stoopand bit, a hole is entered at "stooping height" above the base of the twelve-inch trunk, and a "spile" inserted. The crystal life current seeps thru this slowly from the maple's vitals, and drip-drops into the pail hung from the little hook on the spile. It takes too long to make sumach spiles, such as grandfather used; these had the pith re-moved to the depth that they enterdd the tree, and from that point were troughed out to allow of the sap's flow to the receptacle, placed at the foot-pail, bucket, pan or trough. The same neck-yoke that bore the pails seventy or more years ago, in some instances, are yet in vogue; some-times the pails are conveyed from the trees, two to a load, and kept heed-fully from collision with the legs of the sturdy carrier by a hoop en-circling his hips. If carriers are few and the trees many it is best to carry the sap to the fires by a barrel or tank conveyed on a sleigh or on a "stone-boat" in the absence of snow, and into which the pails are emptied on regular rounds. It is a blithsome sound, that far-off "gee. haw," back on the winding bush-

RRIVED at the "kitchen," the A real work starts—that is with when "boiling-down" is done with the regular, old-fashioned setting there will be our huge iron pot suspended by the spring-pole arrangement associated with primitive Ontario wells, and which is designed to elevate the utensils, and its sap at the right height above the fire that is piled in between two parallel walls of green-black logs. These degenerate days, however, usually see a stone arch and sheet-iron elaboration for the pot to boil upon. The fire has to be hot. Frequently it is nebody's lot to stand by and stoke all the night thru, especially if there seems to be prospects of a brief sugaring season. How many carefully organized foraysthink you-have been made by miskettles of a tired-out sugar-maker who, after several such nights of vigil has been forced to his cabin for a sleep?

OLOR, by the way, is not a very safe guide in determining whether the cake of sugar that takes your fancy at the grocers is genuine, or only some base laboratory product of raw sugar or glucose and flavoring extract. Rainwater getting into the sap-pails imparts a dark hus to the sugar. parts a dark hue to the sugar. One old-time expedient to render the product lighter in tint-after the thickened sap has been run into the pan or crock moulds, and formed by granulation into cakes was to place a dampened clean flannel over the cakes whilst draining; it gradually imbibed the coloring matter present, being washed and changed every morning until the sugar had become quite white; if it had been neatly made, and care taken to keep cinders, leaves and to forth from dropping into the pots-finally, to have been carefully clarified—three or four days of the flannel treatment would whiten it thoroly. Sugar rendered out in the clean quarters of the farmer-wife will always be whiter than that manufactured in the sugar-bush, no matter what pains

PHE-GOOD people of our counties-both sexes-despite the hard work involved, are not sorry when the first word comes: Sap's a-runnin'"; there is money in it; and, also, it means that, besides winter being gone, out of doors will presently be drying up and life generally more pleasant. Down to the young hopeful still going to the little red schoolhouse, their steps are more cheerful when timed to

HE TANGO has seized us. There has been nothing insidious in its approach. It came upon us from the South, by way of the East, and found us waiting. It courtesied neither did it apologize, but took its place with the confidence of assurance -the assurance that America welcomes change. So we are in the clutch of the tango-helpleasly, willingly, delightedly so. We thrive in its embrace. With the rest of mankind, we are prone to vary our pleasures and manufacturers play on our proneness, Merchants implore us in the name of tungo and under its duo-syllabic power things noble and ignoble find sanction or shelter, as the case may be.

B EFORE we master the first measair. Make the cuffs very long and turn them up; the Httle arms will all ure, we have our feet shod in tango slippers. "See, madame, these will not let you slide too far." And we gaze approvingly on six little rubber insets in the sole. The power of suggestion arouses our fears and, knowing fear and grace are never companionable, we buy the slippers. And our feet appearing pretty in the slippers, we buy again. In like manner are we reminded that the tango-period of the day must not be greeted hatless, nor must hats of usual shape impede our steps and slides. So hats in sizes never known before are provided for our wearing-hats of malines, hats of lace, hats of tulle. All in the style of tango.

And even before the discovery of the slightest knee-bulge in our skirts. 'skirts for the tango," greets us in captions that "all who will may read." No longer does the orchestra weep i-ly weight us with Wagner, nor pick or choose for us a melody from Mendelssohn. No longer does it revel in he rhapsodies of Listz, or even in so plous a strain as a Chopin Polonaise. The world is calling tango, and the orchestra, needing substinence, answers in a tango tune.

We have tangoized everything on land, and when we go a-summering in February, fashions and finance, health and home, will defer to the tango.

ON DRESSING BOYS

THE clothing of the boy is the problem that confronts most home dressmakers. From the the wee baby starts to creep, mother begins to think "what shall I do to make his clothes look different from sister's?" There are several ways of changing the first short dresses and here, too, might be mentioned, it is the wise mother who makes the very first dresses with armholes sufficiently large to fit a year-old baby and neck bands in like propertion, for these dresses may be shortened. With the addition of cuffs and a turn down round collar. these dresses are not only fit for several months' wear, but have quite a boyish trimming on belt, cuffs and for a finish around the neck. A design of red and blue cross stitch further embeltoo soon outgrow them. In making the new short dresses it it wise always to purchase good material. These dresses will probably be all white. Cotton poplin is splendid wearing material besides having the added virtue of laundering beautifully. White linen of an even thread, that is a. linen whose threads are of even thickness and the very fine white pique. These are all practical for the first boyish dresses. The box plaited dress has long been a favorite and is closely rivaled by the Russian blouse. These can be varied to suit the individual child and the painstaking mother.

As the child grows older, knickerbockers or trousers can be worn. When making suits of all white with a touch of color, it is wise to make an extra pair or two of trousers.

As he becomes older these knickerbockers can be made straight trousers and proud will he be of them! The regulation sailor suit so long the standby of the growing boy is hard ta replace.

NE very clever mother had a suit made for her small son by a wellknown tailor for boys. She says she never regretted the initial price, for it served her as a model for his suits for many days. And this is how she managed. When the suit arrived from the tailor she carefully-very carefully-cut paper patterns for each section and marked each line of stitching, each arrow head and the exact place of each buttonhole. Then she made five other suits like it of various other color combinations. She also enlarged the pattern from year to-year.

Old suits of this variety can be made to last for another season's wear for the morning at least. Cut off the cuff and the stitched tucks above and hem the sleeves, adding new cuffs at the elbow if you desire, but he will like them best "rolled up." Then insert rubber webbing in the hem of the straight litthe sailor shirt, which has gradually become shorter and shorter and you will have a very good-looking blouse. The knickerbockers, too, can be transformed into straight little trousers for these,

DO FOR THE KIMONO

It is wonderful to realize how much a small affair like a fichu will do toward transforming the kimono in plain cotton or silk crepe into a garment that looks almost as dressy as a tea gown, and certainly one in which a matron may receive a comparative stranger, rather than keep that stranger waitins while she makes a more elaborate toilet. The fichu, which is prettiest in dotted net or Swiss, should be at least a yard and a half long by twenty-seven inches wide, and finished along the outer edge and the two ends with a frilling oplain net or Swiss. It is drawn about the shoulders to form shallow little folds across the back and over the top of the arms, crossed above the bust and the ends knotted under a nosegay of satin flower. If the front of the kiffect to the inner edges of the fichu the entire bodice portion of the costume will apparentty be a net-veiled silk and will have scarcely any of the appearance of

FORECAST OF THE FASHIONS

T IS not so much a question whether or not we shall wear halos, but at which angle to place the halo. For while, of course, the halo has been worn for sometime past there are many who still cling to its softening effect. I was about to say influence, but that does not always hold true for the most diaholical effect will be obtained when the otherwise angelic transparent circle is adjusted at a rakish angle and more than ever with the addition of two antenae-like feathers.

One very charming little bonnet of the new shade of green with only a suggestion of a brim in the front and quite a projection in the back has the wired lace ruffle which is one form of the halo so placed as to give the effect of mercury wings. This wee bonnet, worn by a titian hair beauty, was becomingly tied under one ear in a soft rose purple velvet ribbon. The velvet ribbon encircled the crown with the addition of four wee roses on the right side of a curious roge color.

The Pon-Pon Hat. The pon-pon hat, too, is to be worn with care. The placing of these fluffy balls depends so much on the wearer and not on the way some other person wears them becomingly. Very popular, too, is the hat with corrers, starting with the old standby, the tricorn and when the tricorn is becoming there is nothing smarter; then there is the hat with two corners and these horns are further accented with feathers, jet or ribbon; also the hat with the four pinched corners and as numerous are the upstand feather fancles lke so many fountains

Hats for American Women, SILK hats, with the accompanying trimming of silk ribbon, are exceedingly smart. Many and clever are the hats made especially for American women who may not wear the aigrette and this very edict of the United States is certainly felt by the whole world for women of taste and refinement find the hats designed for our cousins across the water smart in the extreme.

The head band is used on many hats tilting the hat at exaggerated angles. You in America need not concern yourselves about the angle the hat should be poised on your fair heads for we hear M. Lewis is to sail to your shores for this express purpose. He it is who resorts to geometry to solve this intricate problem for rarely, says he, is the hat to be worn straight on the head.

Moire? Yes and More Moire. Moirc has invaded the millinery world, too, for moire straw is supplanting the moire silk of other days. And while we are talking of moire, for there is much to say about that material with its watered surface. It is made of wool now and many will prefer it to the silk varie; ty. That, by the way, comes in stripes of various colors. Then, too, the crepe moire in all the light colors is quite suitable for the afternoon frocks. DIPPLE silk will be a close rival of the taffeta and moire silks. Taffeta for the Dansant gown and taffeta in black is worn extensively. The bodice of one gown I have in mind was transparent. This and the long sleeves were made of tulle.

Separate waists are to be worn not necessarily of a different color from the gown, but made and finished separately. These waists invariably have an appendage of some kind. The swallowtail basque will be seen in the Easter parade in connection with the bustle. The draped bustle of simple form is easily made by tucking up the back fullness of the skirt. The girdles, too, are made use of to form the bustle. The girdle is often of silk or of the same material as the skirt. This is so arranged as to form a slight bustle in the back. This sash bustle can be added to the separate waist and the whole worn over a skirt with a tunic portion with very good effect. One can see how this may be applied on Summer frocks of the daintier sort.

Sleeves.

The full length sleeve is usually set in the long armhole. Sleeves of extreme cut, some extending to the very waist line, others set on in the old style, ragian and kimono are all to be seen. Of course, it is to be expected that after Easter the shorter sleeve will be popular.

Waists.

RANSPARENT waists of net, shadow laces, tulle, chiffon cloth, voiles, the sheer crepe weaves, in fact all transparent fabrics will be used in white and flesh-color for Spring and Summer wear. Evening dresses continue to be above the waist as transparent as ever. Rarely is there any ornamentation beyond the belt.

Monsieur Redfern uses lace to an unusual extent in flounces and overskirts. It is whispered that the tunic so long with us is to lengthen into an over-

ORIGINAL IDEA IN MAKING IRIDESCENT SCARF

Right in line with the new shaded chiffon scarfs is one that a young girl just made, which her friends think is infinitely more captivating than the rainbow ones, dyed in those tints. Besides hers cannot, as yet, be bought in the shops, and it has the distinction that difference and originality give, while others, no matter how costly or lovely, may be seen at any dance, and their popularity portends that the seaside promenades will show a continual flutter of these shaded chiffons, protecting the shoulders of, or adding a touch to the Summer girl's outfit. The $10 variety may then appear as low as $4.98, who can tell?

This particular scarf is made of two shades of chiffon, one over the other, which adds to its strength and gives more protection. Two yards and a half of delicate pink chiffon and the same uantity of peacock blue were used. They were spread out on a long table and placed one on the other, and arranged so that a hem of the blue, three and one-half inches, was turned the entire length and appeared as the double of that color. This, of course pushed the pink along, so it too made an independent hem of its own color on the other edge-this was made about two and a half inches when done, so that a good balance appeared with the two colors, as when the scarf was worn, the dainty pink hem rolled over at the neck, and the more solid blue nem formed a good base around the shoulders and over the arms down the entire length of the scarf on each side. The iridescent color formed of the two A fine line of gold paint is drawn along the hem where the blue is finished at bottom, and the pink is merely slip stitched. The ends were turned in evenly and slip-stitched and the gold paint was used over a stencil pattern of the walls of Troy, about two and half inches in width. This scarf is as attractive over an all black gown as one of all white, and accomplishes wonders in freshening up a passe pink one. Other combinations could be used as pink and gray, cherry and gray, or French blue and pink

MAKING WEARABLE THE RAIN-DRENCHED HAT

Because you are disgusted with the wretched appearance of your unfortunate rain-drenched hat, don't throw it away. Having allowed it to dry gradually by placing in on a flat surface out of reach of the sun's rays, study it carefully and see what can be done to make it wearable-if not for best-at least for general running about. If the trimmings are of flowers and ribbons, they won't be worth the saving and the chances are that the crown will be dented and discolored. But as the brim of a hat rarely gets badly injured by a drenching rain, you can face it freshand then cover the crown with a igth of broad sash ribbon. Beginning at what is destined to be the low side of the hat, tack one edge of the ribbon close to the joining of the rim pling folds all about the top and toward the high side, where the two ends of ribbon may be shaped and wired to form a pair of rabbit-ears. Join these under a bow of narrow velvet ribbon. The new ribbons of this Spring are lovely and of such infinite variety that one to suit any sort of hat may be found. For the swathing and draping of utility hats there are ribbons in plaids, in moire and fancy selvages, in shadow effect, or in tones ranging rom green-gold to golden-brown, and in faille with selvage in fancy jacquard patterns. For the trimming of more elaborate hats-those worn at church eddings and at luncheons-are ribbons n hand-embroidered taffeta, in metallic brocades on liberty satin and in velvet ocaded on chiffon or gauze.

Three of Them Introduce Ouestion of When to Make Pre-empting Bids; Nullos Barred.

AUCTION ARTICLE No. 6 By Milton C. Work

Today we will consider the ques-tions of declaration which arise in the five test deals published in con-nection with the first five articles of this series.

An effort has been made to have each one of these deals exemplify some one important principle of declaration. In other words, to make each present a type of hand apt to occur with more or less frequency, and therefore to render the thorounderstanding of the principle involved not merely interesting for the purpose of determining the correct bidding of the example, but important because a similar situation is apt to occur at any time in actual play.

To consider these deals satisfactorily each one must be treated as a separate preposition. I therefore give each deal and my ideas regarding the way it should be declared.
In all these deals the score is supposed to be love all and the bidding of Nulles is not permitted.

The dealer has a hand of such strength that it must be declared.
As is shown by the answers received, choice presents itself between ree declarations, namely, one heart, five spades and two spades.

The former is the first bid that suggests itself, as the heart is a game-going suit and the hand has more than sufficient strength to jus-The objection to bidding a heart with a hand of this character is that it falls to indic te that the hand also tify a heart call.

contains great strength for a loval declaration. If the partner have material aid for the royal, but little istance for the heart, and not sufficient strength to call royals or no trumps over the heart or over an adverse two diamonds or clubs, it may be that the chance to win a game, which could easily be scored in royals, will be lost, and it may easily happen that the adversaries may be allowed to make a small score in one of the minor suits. This is true because if this hand open the declaration with one heart, it cannot subsequently, without assistance m the partner, make any other

With a holding which is helpful in two different directions, it is of the greatest importance that its dual character be indicated and the declaration of one heart with hand fails to accomplish this object.
It would, of course, be possible to start with ont royal and to follow with two hearts; but the objection to this is that the royal may stand and the partner may be strong in hearts and weak in spades: also that if the royal be followed by two hearts, the partner will consider that, if there be any choice between the two declarans, the royal is preferred, whereas, inasmuch as the hand contains five hearts and only four spades, the contrary is the case. The five spade declaration to show both hearts and royals is the call which has been given in the majority of the answers, and with such a hand it is unquestionably a tempting bid. The objection to it is that announces that the declarer is in doubt between the two suits, having practically as great strength in one as the other; whereas the fact is that there is a material difference, the extra length of the heart (five, as compared with four stades) being a most important consideration.

While the five spade declaration is of the greatest service with the hands for which it is applicable, it is unquestionably a mistake to use it in any other case. It should not be forced into play where any markets in the control of t terial difference exists in the strength of the heart and royal suits of the declarer, as the partner may compelled to choose with practically equal strength, and in that case the chance is, of couse, at least even that he will make the wrong

It therefore seems that the wise original declaration in the hand we are considering is two spades. That bid exactly indicates the spade holding and invites the partner to call royals if he have spade strenth, or no trump if he have a hand which warrants that declaration. If the partner call royals, the dealer will, of course, permit that declaration to stand; but if he call no trump, the exact character of the hand can then be shown by overcalling the no trump with two hearts. The partner can either allow the two hearts to stand or overbid that with two

By this plan of declaration with a hand of this character, it becomes practically certain that the declaration best suited for the combined hands will be played. By no other iethod can this be absolutely as-

This deal exemplifies the advantages of the pre-emptive declaration.

The Pre-emptive Declaration.

A pre-emptive bid may be defined as any unnecessarily high declaration, such as a bid of more than one by a dealer, the advance of a partner's declaration, the second hand not having overcalled, or an advance of more than is necessary in overcalling an adverse declara-reater reward for the player who the player who bids one and makes three, and as the higher declaration naturally increases the hazard the contract, it is foolish to more than is necessary, unless there be some valuable objects to be accomplished thereby. The preemptive bid has three such objects:

(a) It gives important information to the partner concerning the trick taking character of the holding of the company not to ing, and conveys a command not to shift the declaration.

(b) It is apt to shut out an adverse declaration which would give aluable information to the other adversary.

(c) It may prevent an adverse bid which, if made, would be advanced by the partner of its declarer to so high a figure that the side of the player who is attempting to pre-empt would either be obliged to stop bidding or be forced to a contract

ble to fulfill. When the pre-emptive bids were first suggested, they were opposed by some writers and players who failed to appreciate their advantages. Now, however, their benefits are fully recognized, the opposition having apparently realized that its posi-tion is absolutely untenable. Preemptive bidding may therefore be said today to be universally adopted and to be part of the equipment of every skilled declarer.

The more a sound bidder uses the pre-emptive calls, the more he appreciates their many benefits. Of course, like other good things in Auction, they may be overdone, and they should only be called into requisition with hands which thoroly justify their employment. An original call of two should not be made with less than six sure tricks, and an original call of three should indicate at least seven sure tricks.

Pre-emptive bids should not be made with a hand containing general strength, as, with such a holding, adverse bidding is desired, since it will soon reach a point which will afford a profitable opportunity for doubling; but with a hand of the character we are considering, a holding which contains great strength in one major declaration and great weakness in another, preemptive bidding is most important. It should also be remembered that if the pre-emptive bid be worth making at all, it is advisable to stretch it to the limit.

The dealer's hand in our example may be conservatively estimated as containing nine sure tricks. To attempt to pre-empt with a bid of but two Royals would, therefore, be foolish, as, viewed from the dealer's standpoint, it is quite possible that the adversaries may be able to make a grand slam in Hearts, and it is therefore vital that the Heart declaration be shut out. It takes four Royals to score the game, and with such an unusual holding that would seem to be the most sound original declaration, at least three should unquestionably be declared. A more timid pre-emptor would doubtless declare two Royals, on the ground that it is just possible that the hand may not make more than that number of tricks. That, however, is not very likely, nor is going down one trick particularly damag-ing. With any holding with which the declarer would fail to make three or four Royals, it is more than probable that the adversaries would go game in Hearts; but the bid of the additional Royal, thereby forcing the adversaries higher in Hearts, may make the difference in the question of whether or not they declare. Therefore it seems wisest to start the declaration with four which completely shuts out adverse bidding, but if the declarer prove too timid for that he should certainly bid three. Either thre or four Royals should hold the declaration, and the contracts should be easily fulfilled. If but two be called, the adversaries are given the opportunity of anicing their Heart strength. The moment either mentions a Heart other is able to advance it to a high figure. DEALER (SOUTH). Spades-Ace, King, Knave, 9, 8, 7. Hearts-King, Queen, Knave, 9, 2. Diamonds-8, 2.

FOURTH HAND (EAST).

Diamonds-10, 3. Clubs-King, Queen, Knave, 7, 5, 4, 3.

This is another deal which presents a choice between two declarations and it goes without saying that it is a holding of unusual strength. Pre-empting with it is totally unnecessary, as it is not conceivable that the ceivable that the adversaries can force one of the minor suits to a dangerous height against a major holding of this character. The hand may be opened with five Spades or one Royal. The objection to the five Spades bid mentioned in the comment upon Deal No. 1, namely, that it indicates practically equal strength in the two suits is not as potent here as in No. 1, because the strength of the suits is so much greater, and the difference, therefore, comparatively less, but it is nevertheless an element worthy of consideration, and the Royal is possibly the call to be preferred.

The game, however, will be won by either system. If the dealer call five Spades, the second hand will pass, the third hand bid two Hearts or no trumps as he may prefer and either will become the final declaration. If the dealer start with one Royal, the third hand will bid one, No Trump, the dealer will then overcall with two Hearts, which will be the final declaration.

Another Question of Pre-empting. No. 4. DEALER (SOUTH).

Spades—Queen, Knave, 8, 7. Hearts—Ace, King, Queen, Knave, Diamonds-5.

Clubs—Queen, 5.

This deal presents another phase of the pre-emptive bid. The original bid of the dealer is not open to debate. It must be one Diamond.
There can hardly be two opinions upon this subject. The second hand, of course, must pass, and the third hand, with his great Diamond strength and without Hearts, must realize that the same is rossible in Diamonds, but may be shut out by an adverse Heart declaration. He should therefore, attempt to preempt by increasing the Diamond declaration, and the only question is how far he dare go. His partner's bid shows that the combined hands will be able to take every Diamond the combined hand mond trick, and that his partner has some additional strength. The chances are that strength is in the other minor suit, and as the third hand has the Ace and King of Spades and no Hearts it is not likely that the combined hands will lose any tricks in either of the major suits. The third hand has Club length but not strength. If the declarer have, as is most likely. Club strength, but few Club tricks will be lost. The hand therefore justifies a high pre-emptive call, and should bid at least four, probably five Diamonds. Either would probably hold the de-claration, aitho it would be tempting for the fourth hand to bid for Hearts if afforded that opportunity. Pre-empting With No Trump. No. 5.

DEALER (SOUTH). Spades—Ace, 7, 6, 2./ Hearts—Ace, 10, 4, 3. Diamonds-10, 3, 2. Clubs—Ace. 9. SECOND HAND (WEST). Spades-Knave, 10, 9, 8, 5. Hearts-Knave, 9, 6. Diamonds-Ace, 5.

FOURTH HAND-(EAST). Spades—Queen, 4. Hearts—Queen, 8, 7. Diamonds—9, 6. Clubs-King, Queen, Knave, 10,

This hand is an example of the advantage of pre-empting after a part-ner's No Trump. There can be little question regarding what the deal-er's original declaration should be. The three aces fix that as one No Trump. Second hand must pass. If the third hand pass, the fourth hand can declare two of a suit, which will indicate to the original leader the opening he should make. The third hand has sufficient strength to bid two No Trumps, and thus eliminate this informatory adverse declara-tion. Two No Trumps will hold the declaration, and as the fourth hand will not be able to bid Clubs, Spades will be opened and the declarer will win two Spades, two Hearts, five Diamond and one Club trick, a total of ten. If the third hand fail to preempt, the fourth hand will bid two Clubs, and if after that declaration the No Trump be advanced, the most that the declarer can make is seven tricks, or in other words; the con-tract will fail. If after the two Club declaration the dealer pass, and his partner bid two Diamonds, the combined hands will still fall short of game

The correct bidding of this hand istherefore, one No Trump, pass two No Trumps, which is the final bid. The result of this hand is not cited at all conclusive that the suggested bidding is correct, as the outcome in any one particular instance does not prove anything. Hands can be manufactured to make the worst possible bidding appear effective. It merely given because lieved the hand exemplifies a type which often occurs and which is very apt to produce exactly the result indicated in this case.

* THE BEST OF THE MYSTERIES OF MARY ROBERTS RINEHART *

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments.

During the spring floods of 1807. in the town of Allegheny, which has since been annexed by the City of Pittsburg, Mrs. Pitman, a widow who has seen better days, and who is the mistress of a cheap boarding house, is forced to shift her household to the upper floors to await the subsiding of the waters. She is much disturbed by the quarreling and suspicious actions of a Mr. Ladley and his wife, (Jennie Brice), stage folk, who occupy the parlor bedroom. During the night Mrs. Pitman is awakened by Mr. Reynolds, another boarder, and they search the home to learn the cause of mysterious noises. Peter, a dog, belonging to the Ladley's is found locked in an upper room. The skiff, which is usually tied to the stairs, to enable the boarders to row to the city, has disappeared. Mr. Ledley returns with the skiff at two in the morning much agitated and claiming to have gone to the drug store for his wife, who was not well, in the morning however, he requests coffee and toast for one.

He went back and slammed his door, and I made his coffee. I steeped a cup of tea for Mrs. Ladley at the same time. He opened the door just wide enough for the tray, and took it without so much as a "Thank you." He had a cigaret in his mouth as usual, and I could see a fire in the grate and smell some-

"I hope Mrs. Ladley is better," I said, getting my foot in the crack of the door, so he could not quite close it. It smelled to me as if he had accidentally set fire to somtehing with his cigaret, and I tried to see into the room. "What about Mrs. Ladley?" he snapped.

"You said she was ill last night."
"Oh, yes! Well, she wasn't very sick. She's better."

"Shall I bring her some tea?"
"Take your foot away!" he orderl. "No. She doesn't want tea. She's not here."
"Not here!"

"Good heavens!" he snarled. "Is her going away anything to make such a fuss about? The Lord knows I'd be glad to get out of this infernal pig-wallow myself."

"If you mean my house—" I be-

Either my nose was growing accustomed to the odor, or it was dying away: I took my foot away from the door, "When did Mrs. Ladley leave?" I asked. "This morning, very early. I rowed her to Federal street."

"You couldn't have had much sleep," I said dryly. For he looked horrible. There were lines around his eyes, which were red, and his lips looked dry and cracked.

"She's not in the piece this week at the theatre," he said, licking his lips and looking past me, not at me. "She'll be back by Saturday."

I did not believe him. I do not think he imagined that I did. He shut the door in my face, and it caught poor Peter by the nose. The dog ran off howling, but altho Mr. Ladley had been as fond of the animal as it was in his nature to be fond of anything, he paid no attention. As I started down the hall after him, I saw what Peter had been carrying a slipper of Mrs. Ladley's. It was soaked with water; evidently Peter had found it floating at the foot of the stairs.

Altho the idea of murder had not entered my head at that time, the slipper gave me a turn. I picked it up and looked at it-a black one with a beaded toe, short in the vamp and high-heeled, the sort most act-resses wear. Then I went back and knocked at the door of the front room again.

"What the devil do you want now?" he called from beyond the "Here's a slipper of Mrs. Ladley's," I said. "Peter found it floating in the lower hall."

He opened the door wide, and let me in. The room was in tolerable order, much better than when Mrs. Ladley was about. He looked at the slipper, but he did not touch it. "I don't think that is hers," he said. "I've seen her wear it a hundred

"Well, she'll never wear it again." And then, seeing me stare, he added: "It's ruined with the water. Throw it out. And, by the way, I'm sorry, but I set fire to one of the pillow-slips—dropped asleep, and my cigaret did the rest. Just put it on the bill."

He pointed to the bed. One of the pillows had no slip, and the ticking cover had a scorch or two on it. I went over and looked at it. "The pillow will have to be paid for, too, Mr. Ladley," I said. "And there's a sign nailed on the door that forbids smoking in bed. If you are going to set fire to things, I shall have to charge extra." "Really!" he jeered looking at me with his cold fishy eyes. "Is there any sign on the door saying that boarders are charged extra for seven feet of filthy river in the bed-

I was never a match for him, and I make it a principle never to bandy words with my boarders. I took the pillow and the slipper and went out. The telephone was ringing on the stair anding. It was the theatre, asking for Miss Brice.

"She has gone away," I said.
"What do you mean? Moved "Gone for a few days' vacation." I replied. "She isn't playing this week, is she?"

'Wait a moment" said the voice. There was a hum of conversation from the other end, and then another man came to the telephone. "Can you find out where Miss Brice has gone?"

"I'll see."
I went to Ladley's door and knock-Mr. Ladley answered from just The theatre is asking where Mrs. Ladley is. "Tell them I don't know," he snarled, and shut the door. I took his up the receiver.

All the morning I was uneasy—I hardly knew why. Peter felt it as I did. There was no sound from the Ladleys' room, and the house was quiet, except for the lapping water on the stairs and the police patrol going back and forth.

At eleven o'clock a boy in the neighborhood, paddling on a raft, fell into the water and was drowned. I watched the police boat go past, carrying his little cold body, and after that I was good for nothing. I went and sat with Peter on the stairs. The dog's conduct had been strange all morning. He had sat just above all morning. He had sat just above the water, looking at it and whimp-

the water, looking at it and whimpering. Perhaps he was expecting another kitten or—

It is hard to say how ideas first enter one's mind. But the notion that Mr. Ladley had killed his wife and thrown her body into the water came to me as I sat there. All atonce I seemed to see it all: the quarreling the day before, the night trip in the boat, the water-soaked slipper, his haggard face that morning his haggard face that morning—even the way the spaniel sat and stared at the flood.

Terry brought the boat back at half past eleven, towing it behind another.
"Well." I said, from the stairs, "I hope you've had a pleasant morn-

"What doing?" he asked, not look-"Rowing about the streets. You've had that boat for hours."

He tied it up without a word to me, but he spoke to the dog. "Good morning. Peter," he said. "It's nice weather--for fishes, ain't it?" He picked out a bit of floating wood from tre water, and showing it to the dog, flung it into the parlor. it to the dog, flung it into the parlor. Peter went after it with a splash. He was pretty fat and when he came back I heard him wheezing. But what he brought back was not the stick of wood. It was the knife I use for cutting bread. It had been on a shelf in the room where I had slept the night before, and now Peter brought it out of the flood where its wooden handle had kept it afloat. The blade was broken off short.

It is not unusual to find one's household goods floating around during flood-time. More than once I've lost a chair or two, and seen it after ing flood-time. More than once I've lost a chair or two, and seen it after the water had gone down, new scrubbed and painted, in Molly Maguire's kitchen next door. And perhape now and then a bit of luck would come to me—a dog kennel or a chicken house, or a kitchen table, or even, as happened once, a monthold baby in a wooden cradle, that lodged against my back fence, and had come forty miles, as it turned had come forty miles, as it turned out, with no worse mishap than a cold in its head.

But the knife was different. I had put the knife was different. I had put it on the mantel over the stove I was using up-stairs the night before, and hadn't touched it since. As I sat staring at it. Terry took it from Peter and handed it to me.

"Better give me a penny, Mrs. Pitman," he said in his impudent.

Irish way. "I hate to give you a knife. It may cut our friendship." I reached over to hit him a clout on the head, but I did not. The sunlight was coming in thru the window at the top of the stairs, and shining on the rope that was tied to the banister. The end of the rope was covered with stains, brown, with a glint of red in them.

I got up shivering. "You can get the meat at the butcher's, Terry," I said, "and come back for me in a half-hour." Then I turned and went up-stairs, weak in the knees, to put on my hat and coat. I had made up my mind that there had been murder

CHAPTER III.

I looked at my clock as I went down-stairs. It was just twelve I thought of telephoning for Mr.

I thought of telephoning for Mr. Reynolds to meet me, but it was his lunch hour, and besides I was afraid to telephone from the house while Mr. Ladley was in it.

Peter had been whining again. When I came down the stairs he had stopped whimpering and was wasging his tail. wagging his tail. A strange boat had put into the hallway and was coming back.
"Now old boy!" somebody was saying from the boat. "Steady, old hap! I've got something for you."

A little man, elderly and alert, was standing up in the boat, poling it along with an oar. Peter gave vent to joyful yelps. The elderly gentleman brought his boat to a stop at the foot of the stairs, and, reaching down into a tub at his feet, held up a large piece of raw liver. Peter almost went crazy, and I remembered sud-denly that I had forgotten to feed the poor beast for more than a day. "Would you like it?" asked the gentleman.

Peter sat up, as he had been taught to do, and barked. The gentleman reached down again, got a stack of wooden platter from a stack of them at his feet, and, placing the liver on it, put it on the step. whole thing was so neat and busi-"That's a well-trained dog, madam," said the elderly gentleman, beaming at Peter over his glasses. 'You should not have neglected

"The flood put him out of my mind," I explained, humbly enough, for I was ashamed. "Exactly! Do you know many starving dogs and cats I have found this morning?" He took a note book out of his pocket and glanced at it.

"Forty-eight! Forty-eight, madam! And ninety-three cats! have found them marconed in trees, clinging to fences, floating on barrels and I have found them in comfortable houses, where there no excuse for their neglect. Well, I must be moving on. I have the report of a cat with a new litter in the loft of a stable near here."

He wiped his hands carefully on a fresh paper napkin, of which also a heap rested on one of the seats of the boat, and picked up an oar, smiling benevolently at Peter.
Then, suddenly he bent over and looked at the stained rope end, tied to the stair rail.

'What's that?" he said. "That's what I'm going to find out," I replied. I glanced up at the Ladleys' door, but it was closed.

The little man dropped his oar. and, fumbling in his pockets, pulled out a small magnifying glass. He bent over, holding to the rail, and inspected the stains with the I had taken a fancy to him at once; and, in spite of my excite-ment, I had to smile a little. "Humph!" he said, amd looked up at me. "That's blood! Why did you cut the boat loose?"

"I didn't," I said. "If that is blood, I want to know how it got there. That was a new rope last night."

I glanced at the Ladleys' door again, and he followed my eyes.

"I wonder," he said raising his voice a little, "if I come into yuor kitchen, if you will allow me to fry a little of that liver. There's a wretched Maltese in a tree at the corner of Fourth street that won't touch it, raw."

I saw that he wanted to talk to me, so I turned around and led the way to the temporary kitchen I had made.

"Now," he said briskly, when he had closed the door, "there's something wrong here. Perhaps, if you tell me, I can help. If I can't, it will do you good to talk about it. My name's Holcombe, retired merchant. Apply to First National Bank for references."

"I'm not sure there is anything." "I'm not sure there is anything wrong," I began "f guess I'm only nervous, and thinking little things are big ones. There's nothing to

"Nonsense I come down the street in my boat. A white-faced gentleman with a cigaret looks out from a window when I stop at the door, and ducks back when I glance up. I come in and find a pet dog, obviously overfed at ordinary times, whining with hunger on the stairs. As I prepare to feed him, a pale woman comes down, trying to put a right-hand glove on her left hand, and with her jacket wrong side out. What am I to think?"

I started and looked at my coat. He was right.

I started and looked at my coat. He was right.

And when, as I tried to take it off, he helped me, and even patted me on the shoulder — what with his kindness, and the long morning alone, worrying, and the sleepless night, I began to cry. He had a clean handkerchief in my hand before I had time to think of one.

"That's it," he said. "It will do you good, only don't make a noise about it. If it's a husband on the annual flood spree, don't worry, madam. They always come around in time to whitewash the cellars."

"It isn't a husband," I sniffied.

"Tell me about it," he said. There was something so kindly in his face, and it was so long since I had had a bit of human sympathy, that I almost broke down again.

I sat there, with a crowd of children paddling on a raft outside the window, and Molly Maguire, next door, hauling the morning's milk up in a pail fastened to a rope, her doorway being too person to it the milkman's boat, and I told him the whole story.

"Humph!" he exclaimed, when I had finished. "It's curious, but you can't prove a murder unless you can produce a body."

"When the river goes down, we will find the body," I said, shivering. It's in the parlor."

"Then why doesn't he try to get away?"

"He is ready to go now. He only went back when your boat came Mr. Holcombe ran to the door, and lower hall. He was too late. His boat was gone, tub of liver, pile of wooden platters and all!

We hurried to the room the Ladleys had occupied. It was empty. From the window, as we looked out, we could see the boat, almost a square away. It stopped where, the street being higher, a door-step rose above the flood. On the step was sitting a forlorn yellow puppy. As we stared, Mr. Ladley stopped the boat, looked back at us, bent over, placed a piece of liver on a platter, and reached it over to the dog. Then, rising in the boat, he bowed, with his hat over his heart, in our direction, sat down calmly, and rowed around the corner out of

Mr. Holcombe was in a frenzy of rage. He jumped up and down, shaking his fist out the window after the retreating boat. He randown the staircase, only to come back and look out of the window again. The police boat was not in sight, but the Maguire children had worked their raft around to the street and were under the window. He leaned out and called to them: "A quarter each, boys," he said, "if you'll take me on that raft to the nearest pavement."

"Money first," said the oldest boy. holding his cap. But Mr. Holcombe did not wast. He swung out over the window-sill, holding by his hands, and lit fairly in the centre of the raft.

in the centre of the raft.

"Don't touch amything in that room until I come back," he called to me, and jerking the pole from one of the boys, propelled the raft with amazing speed down the street.

The liver on the stove was burning. There was a smell of scorching thru the rooms and a sort of bluish haze of smoke. I hurried back and took it off. By the time I had cleaned the pan, Mr. Holcombe was back again, in his own boat. He had found it at the end of the next street, where the flood ceased, but no sign of Ladley anywhere. He had not seen the police boat.

"Perhaps that is just as well," he

"Perhaps that is just as well," he said philosophically. "We can't go to the police with a wet slipper and a blood-stained rope and accuse a man of murder. We have to have a

"He killed her," I said obstinately.
"She told me yesterday he was a flend. He killed her and threw the body in the water."

"Very likely. But he didn't throw there."
But in spite of that, he went over all the lower hall with his boat, feeling every foot of the floor with an oar, and finally, at the back end, he looked up at me as I stood on the

I went cold all over, and had to clutch the railing. But when Terry had come, and the two of them brought the thing to the surface, it was only the dining-room rug, which I had rolled up and forgotten to

I had rolled up and forgotten to carry upstairs!

At half past one Mr. Holcombs wrote a note, and sent it off with Terry, and borrowing my boots, which had been Mr. Pitman's, investigated the dining-room and kitchen from a floating plank; the doors were too narrow to admit the boat. But he found nothing more important than a rolling-pin. He was not at all depressed by his failure. He came back, drenched to the skin, about three, and asked permission to search the Ladleys' bedroom.

"Her husband says 50."

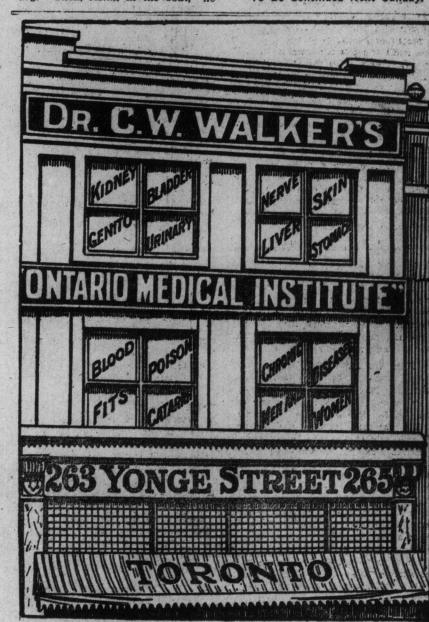

"Ask him to come to the phone."

"He is not here."

"Ask him to come."
"He is not here."

"When do you expect him back?" "I'm not sure he is coming back."
"Look here," said the voice angrily, "can't you give me any satisfaction? Or don't you care to?"

Utilizing the Mirror.

A dentist was filling a lady patron's back teeth. When he finished with the first tooth he handed the lady a hand mirror that she might see the result for herself. Then he went on with his task, repeating this performance with the mirror after each tooth was filled. Finally, when the job was completed and she had handed back the mirror with thanks,

"Well, madam, how do they look?" "How do what look?" she returned.
"The teeth I just filled." "Oh, I forgot about the teeth." she exclaimed, reaching for the hand glass.

"What did you look at each time I gave you the mirror?"
"My hair."

And while You smile Another smiles, Of smiles; And life's

Because you smile. That is our motto: No matter what happens, just SMILE. Who is ever any better for crying? NOBODY; so why should we cry? If mother or father asks you to do a thing, why pout? You only feel badly afterward. Do it with a SMILING face; then everyone is happy. If you smile, why! mother SMILES, father SMILES, baby SMILES; and soon, if you look hard enough at Puss, you will see that she is SMIL-

There is nothing in the world like a SMILE.

Anyone may join this club; big people as well as little people; for (just whisper it) sometimes a big person needs to smile, just as much as a little person does.
All you have to do is to remember the above; send in your name to C. A. Macphie, Sunday World office, Toronto: then we send you a S. F. C. button, and when you get it-I am quite sure You'll SMILE some more. We are glad to add to our list of SMILING, FACE members the name of Mr. Frank Gillions, the Well-known humorist and imitator.

Mr. Gillions tells us that, in all his travels, he has made it a daily rule "to create a smile on more than one person's face." So I think, speaking for all our members. I may say that we welcome him most SMIL-INGLY.

DEAR SMILERS-big and little-Please do not grow impatient if you do not see your names as soon as you

We have over 3000 members now in our SMIL!NG FACE CLUB, and more coming all the time, so think how many letters that makes each week, and how many names to go in the paper. Just keep on looking and you will see your names some time

Yours SMILINGLY, C. A. Macphie.

Have You Your Button?

The Smiling Face Club has heard that two or three of its members have received envelopes without their buttons enclosed. If there are any whose names have been published but who have not received buttons will they please write and say so. Buttons will be returned safely at once. Address C. A. Macphie, Sunday World Office.

SO MANY of the young readers of the Sunday World have become Smiling members of the S. F. C. that it was thought the club should have a page for the Smilers. That's why the title of this page is changed.

Of course you don't have to be a member to read the page. If you are not one, you'll enjoy the stories and smile so much that you'll just have to become a member of the Smiling Face Club. And to do that, all you have to do, is send your name with the promise to obey the club rule-Smile all the time. That's easy.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS AND GOOD KIND DEAR DOG MUTT. HOW THEY WENT AWAY ON THE TRAIN AND WHAT HAPPENED.

Now as I said before-one day The boys went for a trip, Not on a horse or elephant; Nor even on a ship.

'Twas on the train, what else, I say; To hear them laugh, dear! dear! And see the SMILES as on they jumped You'd wish that you were there.

And good, kind Mutt-I said before-Was there, of course, you know; The Kids said, "If we don't take him We really cannot go."

And so he went; 'twas well he did, For John I'll have you know Is really bad, as bad can be, 'Tis sad, but it is so.

Well! as the train went speeding on, Right out the window wide John stuck his head and then his arms, Was all but feet outside. But as they fly-what happens now? A post comes by you see; It catches John and out he pops As nicely as can be.

And there he hangs, oh me! oh my! To see him there so still, While car by car, goes whizzing by, Would give you quite a chill. Poor Pa stands up, ah! ah! wow! wow! He tears his hair and cries, > head-to think. "Ha! ha!" cried he in a moment or two-"but leave it to me, just leave it to me." So the dog said he would and he went home.

All that day the dog kept his eye on the cat. Why he did that I do not know. It may have been that his conscience was not clear, or, it may have been a number of things but anyway, it remains-he kept his eve on the cat.

Well; that night when it came time for Jim the SMIL-ER to come home, the dog and the cat began to get ready for him.

First the dog stretched himself, and the cat said, "Pshaw! I can do that," and she stretched herself, too.

Next the dog sniffed and the cat said, "Pshaw! I can do that," and she sniffed, too.

After that the dog growled, the cat said, "Pshaw! I can do that," and she growled, too. C. A. Macphie.

Everything the dog did the cat did also, till at last the dog was boiling, bouncing, tearing mad.

Summer at Lake Simcoe-2 Hours from Toronto

venient for summer homes.

Lake Simcoe is the perfect summer resort. It offers advantages which may be found, perhaps, nowhere else in Canada. This beautiful lake is about 40 miles long from north to south and about 20 miles wide. It is just two hours' ride from Toronto by three steam roads. It can be reached from Buffalo in six hours -from New York in fourteen hours-from Montreal in twelve hours. Good automobile roads direct from Toronto bring it within two and a half hours' enjoyable ride by motor.

The lake is irregular in shape, forming one continuous series of beautiful bays and delightful wooded

Picturesque Lake Shore Estates

REST HOME consists of 25½ acres of beautiful rolling and well-wooded land. It has a lake frontage of 930 feet, with fine sandy beach. It commands a wonderful view of Kempenfeldt Bay. 200 yards from the lake stands a large, new brick residence which could easily be remodelled to suit purchaser. Many wealthy Canadians and Americans own fine estates close by. We offer this estate en bloc, or in acreage to suit.

We offer this estate en bloc, or in acreage to suit.

ROSS GROVE is only 3 miles from Barrie—30 acres in extent—600 feet of beautiful beach. Excellent outlook over Lake Simcoe and Kempenfeldt Bay. Beautifully wooded. Several large country estates adjoin. This is well suited, not only for a fine summer estate, but for farming of all descriptions. We offer this en bloc, or in acreage to suit.

BEAR POINT, situated near the mouth of Kempenfeldt Bay. Beautiful view of the Bay and of the whole of Lake Simcoe. Excellent fishing nearby. Fine boating and bathing beach. Excellent harbor. This point is noted for its great beauty, being practically covered with extensive groves of evergreens and white birches. We offer this en bloc, it being so well adapted for a large country estate.

Here you can summer in comfort 718 feet above the sea level—on a height of land which drains north through Muskoka. The air is fresh and exhilarating—a cool breeze is always playing across the lake. The surrounding country is rich and well cultivated. The expanse of water that lies before you is crystal clear—the purest to be found anywhere. See Lake Simcoe. It will delight you immeasurably. All Summer Pastimes

The lake—situated 50 miles north of Toronto—is a natural fishing ground. Here the sport is enjoyed by experts from all parts of America. Black bass, lunge, lake trout supply the chief sport. Rowing, canoeing, sailing and motor boating, may all be enjoyed to the full. Protected waters are available for small craft—and the wide expanse of the main water is acknowledged to be one of the finest in America for sailing and motor-boat cruising.

Here also motoring, driving, walking and all land-pastimes take on a new charm. Good roads follow the lake shore and pass through an endless variety of landscape. Beautiful woods—wonderful views. The whole
