McEwen; 2nd vice pres., Miss Anna McRostie; 3rd vice pres., Mrs. G. W. Allan; recording secretary, Miss Eva Duhague; corresponding secretary, Miss Helen Allen; treasurer, Miss Margaret McFarlane.

THREE DEATHS IN BECKWITH.

Inside of 24 Hours, including Mr. Archibald Dewar, the Reeve of the Township.

Seldom does the Rider on the White Horse make his demands so rapidly in one little section as he did the past few days in Beckwith, when three well-known figures—all natives of the old township and descendants of the early Scottish pioneers—were summoned to their last home, and in the trio that received the final call was the honored reeve of the municipality.

ARCHIBALD DEWAR.

Mr. Dewar had been suffering from a stroke for a fortnight or so, the last few days sinking very rapidly, until death released him on Sunday evening. Archibald Dewar was the only son of the late Peter Dewar, one of the early Scotch pioneer settlers of Beckwith who came out in 1818. He was a man of sterling character, most highly esteemed by all who knew him, and his demise will be deeply lamented. He had attained the ripe old age of 82 years, and was still in harness as it were. When a young man Mr. Dewar married Miss Stewart, a sister of Mr. John Stewart, who now resides in Manitoba, and shortly afterwards left the home, stood in the 7th concession for Kenmore, where he engaged in mercantile life. Whilst here his wife died, and he returned again to the farm, where he has since resided. He married again, his second wife being Miss Scott, a daughter of the late Robert Scott, of the 9th Line, who survives. Ten children blessed his fireside, five of whom survive, Alexander A. and Mrs. Duncan Ferguson of Ottawa, Edward in Manitoba, George F. at Parrie, and Alfred at home. For over forty years Mr. Dewar has been active in municipal life. He was councillor for some years and reeve for over 30 years, occupying that responsible position to the last. He also served a term as warden of the county of Lanark, and was probably the best known councillor at the board. In politics Mr. Dewar was a Liberal, and in religion a Presbyterian. The funeral takes place to-day, to the family burial ground, and will probably be one of the largest ever seen in the township.

MRS. RANEY McNEELY.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. McNeely, wife of Mr. Raney McNeely, 10th Concession Beckwith, passed away very suddenly whilst sitting in her chair, at the ripe old age of 83 years and 3 months. The deceased lady had no specific ailment, the physical machinery having seemingly just worn out. Mrs. Robertson was before marriage Catherine Robertson, daughter of the late Peter Robertson, another of the pioneer settlers. In 1861 she married Mr. McNeely, and for over half a century they lived together, their family consisting of seven children, five of whom survive—three daughters, Mrs. Robt. McLinton, Mrs. Elisha Morris and Mrs. R. Sample and two sons, D. R. and W. J. McNeely. Mrs. McNeely was a member of St. James church, and the service at the home yesterday afternoon was conducted by Rev. Canon Elliott, interment being made in Pine Grove cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Robt. Sample, Elisha Morris, James Rattray, William J. McNeely, Millar McNeely and Robt. McLinton.

JOHN MCARTHUR.

After an illness of two or three years Mr. John McArthur, of the 7th concession, sank quietly to rest on Sunday evening, of paralysis, aged 67 years. The deceased was a son of the late Peter McArthur, another of the pioneer settlers, and spent his entire life upon the original homestead. He was a man widely known and most highly esteemed, although of a reserved disposition and never seeking or accepting public office. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and a member of the church at Franktown. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Cameron, a daughter of the late Allan Cameron, and one son and one daughter, Allan C. and Miss Ella, at home. The funeral takes place this afternoon to Pine Grove cemetery, and will likely be very largely attended. THE HERALD extends sympathy to the bereaved families in their hour of grief.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries dedicated to tired Mothers as they join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Old people have faults like children, but they have no mothers to forgive them.

Don't find all your "good people" among the departed, but seek to discover a few among the living. It will make you and the world happier to get into the habit.

Boys, you have but one mother; care for her and spare her. She is not a beast of burden to drive along the highway of life. There is no love like your mother's love; you may not know it now, but you will some day.

Man may go through all the world, he may run through every stage of belief and disbelief, but there will be one picture that he cannot efface. Living or dying, there will rise up before him like a morning star the beauty of that remembered goodness which he called "mother."

For a good, everyday household angel give us a woman who laughs. Her biscuits may not always be just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day she is a very paragon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one unending row.

Flirting may seem to the giddy and thoughtless girl wonderfully amusing and she may get the idea that she is fascinating, but it is a most degrading thing and she should be frowned upon by every young lady who has an ambition to become a worthy and charming young woman.

Those who habitually correct their children in their faults by whipping and boxing them, must not be surprised when they find them slapping them in return, and rough and abusive towards one another. They are simply trying to enforce their own little ideas of right as they have seen their elders do.

Our habits are formed under the moulding power of home. The tender twig is there bent, the spirit shaped principles implanted and the whole character is formed until it becomes a habit. The gray haired father who walks in the second infancy, feels the traces of his childhood home in his spirit, desires and habits.

The need of some place to drop down for a moment and forget things is a crying one in most homes. There ought to be enough sofas around to accommodate all the family. Five minutes rest will prevent many a family

BIG PROFITS IN HOTEL INVESTMENTS.

Hotel investments in most parts of Canada, and particularly in Ontario, have depreciated very much in value owing to the spread of prohibition, and many owners are in despair.

But there is no need for this. On the other hand a new and much better era should now open. Hotel-keeping has proved to be, and may, in Canada, be made, one of the most profitable and reputable of businesses. It is the most promising field for business development we know of to-day for ambitious capable young men.

The trouble is that our hotels have been conducted on the wrong lines. The bar has been regarded as the chief object. Most hotel-keepers have not been business men but liquor handlers. Lodgings and food have been merely an incident. Some of them expected to lose money on their tables. The wastefulness was appalling yet the supplying of good food and good accommodation is one of the most profitable business in the world to-day. In Canada it has been more or of a disgrace to be associated with, or even seen in, an hotel. In Europe and the United States some of the richest and most prominent families socially are investing and naming hotels after themselves and the hotel is becoming a social centre.

The most successful hotel-keepers are men who began in the kitchen and dining-room; who learnt the business from that end. The Ritz Hotel in Paris is probably the finest in the world to-day. Mr. Ritz, when the writer first knew him, had just been promoted to assist in the management of the Savoy Hotel, London. The present general manager of the Ritz, Mr. Ellis, was his head waiter. Like so many successful caterers they are both of Swiss birth. George G. Boldt, of the Waldorf-Astoria, and other big hotels in the world, with a net income of well over a million; perhaps a couple of million, a year. He worked his way up from the kitchen. Fred Sterry, manager of the Plaza and other big American hotels, also worked his way up through all departments. The departments, of which these men know least, in their business, is the bar.

It is not only the big hotels that have been marvellously successful when managed by men of capacity, who learn the business from the ground up, and who have developed executive ability, but some of the small hotels have been remarkably profitable. We know of one hotel, in a town of only 17,000, managed row, and how can you get rest if you have to juggle shams off the bed and roll up the overlid. A shabby old lounge, where you can get at it is worth its weight in gold; and you won't want to die half so many times if you make use of it.

Get the shine out of your voice and will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends; it will make you unpopular. Quit your whining; brace up; go to work; be something; stand for something; fill your place in the world. Instead of whining around exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work.

No public speaker, be he preacher or political orator, can draw an audience of one-tenth that which greets the average newspaper to-day, and thus the tone of the press becomes a matter of vital importance to the welfare of the community. The influence is wide spread and is also lasting. Therefore we say, study well the contents of the paper you are taking and if it contains that which tends to lower the scale of morality and humanity and not to the elevation of that which is good and right, better off are you by far without it.

We think home love is the best. The love that you are born to is the sweetest that you will ever have on earth. You, who are anxious to escape from the home nest, pause a moment and remember that this is so. It is right that the hour should come when you in your time should become a wife and mother and give the best love to others, but that will be just it. Nobody, not a lover, not a husband, will ever be so tender or so true as your father or mother. Never again after strangers have broken the beautiful bond, will there be anything so sweet as the little home circle of another, father and children, where you were cherished, praised, protected and kept from harm.

Praise the work of your children, no matter how trivial the act. It will give them an honest desire to do better next time.

Have a bright bouquet of flowers in each room of your home to cheer and brighten it and its inmates.

Keep the rooms sweet and pure by ventilation. For this reason air and sunshine are free.

by a man who began, when a boy, cutting meat in the kitchen of a big city hotel. As a result of good food and clean, perfectly appointed rooms and efficient management, the profits of this house have steadily crept up, until, in 1915, they reached $50,000. To-day the building is being nearly doubled in size to meet the demand for good service. So little does this manager think of his bar that in his new building, he is putting it in the basement, as he is satisfied that, in a very short time, "liquor selling will be eliminated."

Investors in hotel properties should deal with them as a manufacturing and retailing proposition. Manage, or have them managed, by experienced business men. Give a quality service, advertise it, and build a reputation just as a manufacturer does for his name or trade mark. The traveling and local public will flock to them.—Maclean's Magazine.

IMPORTANT TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The subscription price of The HERALD, in common with other local weeklies, is to be raised on July 1st, next, to $1.50 a year in advance.

To meet our present subscribers fairly all overdue subscriptions at this date and all subscriptions falling due prior to July will be accepted at the old rate.

All overdue subscriptions will be charged up at $1.50 per year after July 1st, the present rate when not paid in advance.

We trust our friends will co-operate with us heartily in this new departure, and that we will be enabled to give an improved service in return as the weeks roll by.

Don't Be a Drudge

Housework with its ceaseless, hum-drum duties often causes a woman to "go to seed," to become listless and indifferent to both her personal appearance and what is going on around her. She fails to make her work agreeable, to keep her mind freshened and alert. The successful girl or woman in the business world realizes the importance of keeping her mind brightened and of doing her work in such a way that it will come easier. The result is each day is met with the right thought, the work is done systematically, and the worker herself becomes more capable, better fitted to meet the unexpected demands that every little while come up.

"We are not all fitted for housework," we say apologetically. That is why so many of us are failures at it. There is of course some truth in this. Indeed, we are not all fitted for housework, but every woman knows that when she assumes the management of a home she, and she alone, is responsible for the success or failure of the work in that home.

We hear a lot about the "drudgery" of housework, but if women would only study up on it housework would not seem as distasteful as many women seem to think it is. In these days of labor saving devices it seems incredible that women will worry along in the old way of doing things. Tell a woman whose shoulders have become bent from broom sweeping that a carpet sweeper will do the work better and easier and you will not be thanked for your trouble. She will cling to the broom, meanwhile bemoaning the fact that her work is "never done." The old fashioned cook and her coal stove have been lauded sky high, but the delicious meals prepared these days in the fireless cooker have the old time cook and her coal fire beaten a dozen different ways.

The woman who has become a household drudge has only herself to blame. No man likes to see his wife in that role. Any woman who can read can make her housework easier and do it better. Take, for instance, the splendid household articles published each day in many papers. Cooking, sewing, caring for babies, the general work of the house, are handled so that every one may learn.

The banker, lawyer—in fact, every professional and business man—reads up on his particular work. Why cannot women see the logic of reading up on their household needs? The wife, the mother in her home, has been entrusted with a greater work than the most successful lawyer or banker.

Don't go to seed. Fill your mind with happy thoughts. Stop being a drudge. Even if silver threads are showing in the gold or the darkness of your hair, do it up as prettily as possible. Go out and lose yourself in the gay crowds occasionally. Forget all about yourself. The walk will bring roses into your cheeks, and when you reach home you'll have a fine appetite for supper. Just try it and see!

VARIOUS INITIALS.

Hints About Marking Child's Garments So They Won't Mix.

One can buy in the various stores initials by the yard, worked in red or blue outline stitch on narrow strips of linen tape, three-eighths or a half inch wide.

These letters are used for marking plain underclothing, etc. They are of great use to the mother with a large family, who has neither money nor time to spare on embroidery and who finds it necessary to have some distinguishing mark on the clothing, especially when there are two children the same size.

The letters are cut off from the strip when needed and overcast on the inside of the garment, any place where it will be invisible when worn.

When this system is used even stockings are easily paired. Sew each child's initial at the top of the stocking on the inside; then put a cross stitch in red under the letter on each stocking of the first pair. Use a blue cross stitch on the second, yellow on the third, etc.

Street and Motor Coats.

The ripple coat for spring is made in both cloth and silk. Belts are placed at the normal waist line, at slightly higher than normal or a few inches below the point. Some are short waisted in the front and long waisted in the back. Both styles are liked.

Many coats have high collars and button up to the throat. They are made so that they can be worn open or closed. Oblong sailor collars, draped collars, ruche effect collars, cape collars and simple notched collars are approved. The cape collar is made detachable, being fastened with clasps or with buttons.

Sleeves are dressy, both in cut and by means of fancy cuffs. Motor coats are in plain colors, stripes, checks, plaids and mixtures.

Your New Veil.

If you would preserve that new novelty veil of yours and get from it the greatest possible wear do not fold it when putting it away. Instead take a piece of cardboard, around which you may roll it without creases, cover it with tissue paper and keep it in the box with your hat, and it will always be in the best condition and ready for wear.

SECONDHAND GLASS.

Interesting Methods of a Business That is Quite Extensive.

The salvage glass industry is of such importance and extent that many dealers in secondhand glass specialize in one branch or another. Some, for instance, handle only plate glass that comes to them by reason of the demolition of old buildings, razed to make place for new structures. Salvage glass of this sort brings prices not far below those of new glass.

A considerable quantity of the salvage glass dealer's stock emanates from the plate glass insurance companies. The methods of these companies in taking over glass vary. One concern may keep no stock on hand, simply buying whatever is required to replace a broken pane, disposing of the broken glass, if enough remains to be sold, to the salvage dealer. Sometimes a company will have a warehouse of its own, to which it will remove broken glass that may still be in condition to use. Frequently it will happen that only one corner has been broken from a large pane and that this may be cut down to fit a smaller window.

Most plate glass is insured, but there is much that is not. In the case of an uninsured plate that is broken the owner must, of course, go to a dealer for a new plate. He will sell the broken plate to the salvage dealer. It follows therefore that from insurance companies, from building wreckers and from owners of uninsured glass the salvage glass dealers accumulate great quantities of secondhand plate glass. Much of this is in such a condition that it may be reset anywhere. Should the injury consist, for instance, of simply a deep scratch in the center it is easy to make that plate salable. The secondhand dealer cuts out a strip containing the scratch and thus have left two smaller plates, quite suitable for smaller windows.

When injured plate glass is too much scratched to be available for windows it is sometimes made into ground or frosted glass for office partitions or doors. Salvage plate glass too small for use in windows is employed for the glass doors of refrigerators, and larger pieces are utilized in the making of glass table tops. Small fragments go to the making of hand mirrors, although only clear pieces may be so employed. Other pieces, too small for other purposes, enter into the manufacture of glass signs.

Eventually, when the last piece of merchantable glass has been cut from the damaged piece, there remain the scraps and fragments accumulated in the cutting. Even these have their uses, although they do not bring much. They are melted and used in the manufacture of bottles.

Men Who Fear Opportunity.

In the American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton says:

"Thousands of us who are making fairly comfortable livings for families pass plain turning points, refusing to turn or to attack the opening, through sheer timidity. There is no class so timid as the man with a family, who refuses to change because he fears he will risk the small sum he has accumulated to educate the children and provide for the family in case of his death. Ninety-nine out of a hundred men in this class keep straight ahead when they see a turning point clearly."

Not Easy to Explain.

"That boy of mine is always asking questions."
"Oh, well, perhaps he wants to learn something."
"Maybe so, but his inquisitiveness is rather distressing to me at times."
"Yes?"

GOOD COMMANDMENTS FOR GIRLS

The Rev. A. W. Williver, pastor of the Lafayette M. E. Church in Jersey City made public a few days ago these ten commandments prepared by him as warnings to young women:

1. Thou shalt not delude thy mother.
2. Thou shalt not surrender thy modesty for the favor of unprincipled men.
3. Thou shalt not run wild and fall into the whirlpool of fashion and plunge thy family into the hopper of the nerve grinding mill.
4. Thou shalt not allow the limber tongue of the flatterer to bewilder thy head and master thy strength.
5. Thou shalt not tattle.
6. Thou shalt not let frivolity of speech or manner unclutter thee of thy attractiveness and personal charm.
7. Thou shalt not think more of the clothing of thy feet than the culture of thy head.
8. Thou shalt not smoke; thou shalt not tamper with the liquor cup.
9. Thou shalt not be slothful while others in the home toil.
10. Thou shalt find real happiness in truthfulness, hopefulness, joyfulness, peacefulness and in serving others in the spirit of the Great Master.

POULTRY.

To anyone who has not carefully followed the direction of poultry development in Canada, an understanding of the status which the poultry industry has now reached must constitute a distinct surprise. Whether viewed from the standpoint of the farmer or of the producer trade, it is now one of the best organized and most progressive of any of our live stock industries. Co-operation amongst farmers in marketing is improving the product and realizing for them a higher price than they have hitherto been able to obtain. The reorganization of methods by the trade is providing against loss in handling, is a saving to the consumer a better article and establishing our export business upon a firm basis.

It is estimated that Canada and Cuba, during the last twenty years, received from the United States about three-fourths of all the eggs exported by that country during that period. This situation, however, has now changed. As against an importation in 1913 of 13,940,111 dozen, we imported in 1915 not more than 3,783,952 dozen. On the other hand, while in 1913 we exported only 147,149 dozen, in 1915, we exported 7,898,322 dozen. This constitutes a net increase in production, in two years, of at least 17,100,000 dozen. Practically all of these exports went to the United Kingdom.

Notwithstanding the surplus in Canada which these figures indicate, prices during March, April and May have remained at an extraordinarily high level. For the first quarter of the year 1916, the price to producers, selling co-operatively, has been at least 4c in advance of the price received, for the same period, in 1915. For the month of March, it was at least 5c in advance and for the month of April 3c in advance of last year's price for these respective months. The demand for eggs for local consumption, for storage purposes and for immediate export, has rarely been so keen as at the present moment. This situation is clearly reflected in the prices thus quoted. Heavy domestic consumption in the face of the high price for meats, partly explains this condition. Confidence in the export demand, on the part of the producer trade, confirms it from another direction. Notwithstanding increased production, the egg and poultry business in Canada is in a very strong position at the present time.

Under these circumstances, we believe that it will be a very wise practice to raise as many chickens as it is possible or practicable to handle. Early hatched chicks make good winter layers. Rough grains will probably be produced in abundance in Canada this year and the feeding of poultry at a profit should be materially assisted from this source. Eggs at winter prices are a paying proposition, in any event. Poultry, alive or dressed, under present and prospective market conditions, can unquestionably be reared and finished at a decided profit. A good flock of poultry, if carefully handled, will serve to prevent waste on the farm and promote economy in living expenses, such as is particularly necessary when all farm products are becoming so marketable and so dear.

Open to Conviction.

Hughie McNeill was exercised last year about his hay crop. The weather, though threatening, favored his efforts till he had succeeded in getting it safely gathered up, being in this respect more fortunate than several of his neighbors. After seeing the last wisp of straw around his stacks, he exclaimed, with a self-satisfied air:

"Noo, sin' I ha'e gotten my hay a' safe in, I think the world would be greatly the better s' a guid shower."

WINTER OATS.

Winter oats supply a cover crop for the land, furnish winter and early spring pasture and produce a very desirable feed for work stock at a time when it is most needed. They usually produce at least double the yield obtained from spring oats in the same locality. Winter oats are much less hardy than winter wheat or winter rye, the northern limit of the successful production of this crop being marked approximately by the Potomac and Ohio rivers, extending thence southwest-wardly across southern Missouri and central Oklahoma.

WOOD LOTS DWINDLING.

In 45 Townships They Have Been Reduced to Five Per cent.

To the end that the water supply may be conserved and climatic conditions prevented from becoming gradually worse one-fourth of older Ontario should be in forest. In Germany, where forestry has been made a matter of scientific study and management, over one-quarter of the country is timbered.

What are the actual conditions in this Province? According to a report issued in 1909 by E. J. Zavitz, head of the forestry branch of the Department of Lands, Forests, and Mines, in at least 45 townships in older Ontario the proportion of woodland had been reduced to 5 per cent. of the total area. Lumping all the settled townships together the proportion was less than 15 per cent. Not only this, but many of the so-called wood lots have been permanently damaged by cattle grazing in them, and a large proportion of the older trees are dead or dying, while young growth has been prevented from getting a start.

In all parts of the Province grave injury has been caused by the undue amount of clearing. In some cases the stripping of the land of timber has left barren wastes that are not only profitless in themselves, but a menace to nearby areas of good land. The soil was naturally sandy, and the burning up of the humus in clearing, and by subsequent cropping, has left the bare sand exposed. Vegetable growth is gradually disappearing from these areas, and the loose sand is drifting over and rendering sterile other lands which would otherwise be productive.

Such danger spots are found in Prince Edward County, along the height of land in Northumberland and Durham, in the Counties of Simcoe and Norfolk, along the Lake Huron shore of Lambton, and elsewhere. In addition to this, in nearly all parts of the Province there are bare creek banks and hillsides that never should have been cleared.

As a result of unwise clearing, creeks have been dried up or contracted, wells have had to be deepened, droughts are more frequent, destructive storms are more numerous, and the productive capacity of the Province from an agricultural standpoint has been reduced. As a further result, according to Mr. Zavitz, it is to-day practically impossible to buy, in any part of Ontario, commercial quantities of any of the more valuable hardwoods. And this in a part of America that was once one of the richest in this exceedingly valuable form of natural resources.

For nearly forty years we have had in Ontario voices crying in the wilderness and giving warning of coming dangers. It was not, however, until 1905 that the first practical step was taken towards remedying existing evils in so far as the settled areas of the Province are concerned. In that year a small nursery was established at the Ontario Agricultural College farm for the growing of trees to be supplied to farmers who would agree to set out wood lots on broken places on their farms. Later on a much larger nursery was established on waste lands bought for the purpose in Norfolk county.

In the first year that stock was ready for shipment very few trees were called for. To Prof. Squair of the University of Toronto and F. C. Ryerson of Lambton County are due the credit of setting out trees on the first wood lots under the new scheme. Prof. Squair set out his trees in Darlington Township, and he now has a block of fine pine trees averaging over twelve feet in height.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Just shoveling feed to the hogs and selling for what you can get are not enough. You must know what the finished product costs you. The fact that good breeding swine are scarce indicates that farmers are looking for a more profitable market for grain. This can be found by feeding swine and selling pork and bacon.

Any injury to the hock joint of a horse must be regarded as serious enough for immediate and careful treatment if permanent lameness is to be avoided.

A good winter ration for the average work horse will be found in oat straw, ordinary hay or corn stover, with alfalfa fed several times a week.

A man who will let ewes go through a winter without necessary care cannot expect to get a large per cent. of his lambs on the market, and will lose some of the ewes at lambing time.

In many cases it is safer to dehorn cattle in winter than in summer. In summer flies and other insects are apt to trouble the sores on the animal's head unless some provision is made to guard against it. If the animal is dehorned in winter and kept in a reasonable warm barn there is very little if any danger of the wounds being infected.

A WEATHER MYTH

The Idea That the Old Fashioned Winter Was a Fury.

FAMOUS FROSTS WERE RARE.

Records Show That Remarkable Snowstorms and Long Seasons of Hard Freezing Were Not All the Rule. Testimony of Pepys and Evelyn.

Perhaps the greatest of weather myths is the legend of the "old fashioned winter"—that prolonged season of ice and snow which is supposed to have held the land in its grip every year. So firmly has this idea been held for many years that it came as a shock when meteorologists first began to delve into the records of the past and prove its inaccuracy.

There can be no doubt that Charles Dickens, Washington Irving, artists who depicted winter scenes, and, in a later era, the Christmas number and the Christmas card are mainly responsible for the belief that up to about half a century ago the British winters were always extremely severe.

Such records as we possess prove the fallacy of the idea. No records of the weather were kept up to about fifty or sixty years ago, so that we have to rely on the statements of private diaries and old family records, and therefore it takes a lot of research to obtain any data at all.

In olden times no one troubled to make note of average weather, for writing was an art possessed only by few, and writing materials were hard to obtain; hence it is that mention is made only of something unusual, some abnormally mild winter or heavy fall of snow or prolonged frosts.

And when all is said there are comparatively few of the latter, although they were likely to be recorded, while the milder ones would be passed over. A few years ago there were published in France some notes concerning very mild winters in early times. Gregory of Tours tells us that 584 was exceptionally mild, as were the winters of 808, 834, 844 and 1007, when influenza was rife.

Another mild season occurred in 1220, when the birds are said to have hatched their young by February, while the weather journal of the Rev. William Merle, which is in the Bodleian library at Oxford, shows us that during the middle of the fourteenth century the weather was very much as it is now and that mild winters were not uncommon.

There were one or two mild winters during the last hundred years, the most notable one being that of 1495, when barley and corn were in the ear at the end of January. Writings of the sixteenth century have similar testimony to offer, the one or two exceptions only going to prove the rule because they aroused so much comment.

Pepys and Evelyn come to our aid from the middle to the end of the seventeenth century and prove conclusively that the old fashioned winter is a myth. The diaries of these famous writers have been analyzed, and as a result it is found that falls of snow are mentioned only thirteen times over nearly sixty years, while exceptionally heavy storms are referred to only three times.

In the same period there were but six prolonged frosts, and apparently only the famous one of 1683-4 and another a few years later were so severe as the modern ones of 1890-1 and 1895. In January, 1661, Pepys comments on the mild winter, and in December of the following year he notes that he awoke to find the roofs covered with snow, which he had not seen for three years.

Evelyn has the same story to tell—a few hard winters and many mild ones. Such years were 1680-7, Dec. 29, "Little appearance of winter as yet," and 1692-3, Feb. 4, "Eltherto an exceedingly mild winter—an extraordinarily dry and warm season, without frost and like a new spring, such as has not been known for many years."

Here and there we come across references to the weather which are just like the letters written to modern newspapers informing readers that "roses and primroses were in bloom in my garden on Christmas day." Gilbert White's record of the weather between 1768 and 1798 helps to end the myth, for the same number of years at the present day would show pretty much the same sort of weather, as thirteen of the Decembers were mild and wet.

There were mild winters in the beginning of the nineteenth century, as well as one or two severe ones, so that we may rest assured that the "old fashioned winter" was just like the new-fashioned ones.—Ernest C. Pulbrook in London Family Herald.

Stuck to His Rule.

He had just been discharged from the service, owing to wounds, and thought to raise a few pounds by writing his reminiscences of twelve months fighting. Having completed the manuscript while in hospital, he offered it to a publisher for £100. It was a very small volume, and such a price made the publisher raise his eyes in surprise and inquire the reasons for such a demand. "My dear sir," replied the author, "it has been a point of honor with me, as a soldier, always to sell my life as dearly as possible."—London Chronicle.

It is his whole life, not a few incidents of it, that proves the man.—Rever.

BOTTLING AN EGG.

Easy Trick That Makes Plain Some Principles of Physics.

If you place an egg on the neck of a carafe almost any one would say that it is impossible to put the egg into the carafe whole. Yet it can be done, and at the same time an important principle in air pressure can be proved.

First have the egg boiled hard and then peel it. Make a torch of folded paper, light and push it into the carafe. After it has burned almost out place the egg on the neck of the carafe, small end downward, so that it acts as a stopper. But be sure you do not push it at all.

The heat of the burning paper has by this time driven much of the air out of the carafe and heated what remains inside. When it has finally burned out the carafe will begin to cool, the air in it becomes cooler and therefore takes up much less space. The pressure of the atmospheric air outside of the bottle is exerted upon the egg, which lengthens out gradually and at last drops into the carafe with a loud "plump."

In this way several important points in physics are made plain. First it is seen how heat rarifies the air and when the air in the carafe cools creates a partial vacuum. Then is proved the fact of atmospheric pressure by the way in which the egg acts. At last we see the egg forced into the carafe, so that the air from without may fill the vacant spaces.—Exchange.

MODERN GREEKS.

They Show Little of the Grace of Their Famous Ancestors.

Against the background of antiquity it is easy to project the ties of sentiment which bind the life of the Greek of today to that of the classic worthies from whom he claims direct descent, and it was with only a slight shock that I learned that the man who brought me my morning coffee at the legation bore the tremendous name of Themistocles. And yet it is difficult to visualize the modern Athenian with those who once walked his streets.

Thinking of Homer, of Praxiteles and of Phidias, one looks for Helen, for Hermes and for Athena, but the only Helen I ever saw in Athens was an American girl, married to a member of the cabinet and whose golden hair, blue eyes and classic features made her at once the reigning hostess in the city. And it is only in the islands or deep in the country, where the Albanian blood which swept across the Attic plain has never reached, that one finds the facial lineaments and the bodily grace which the ancient sculptor has taught the modern world as being common to all Greeks of classic time.

This survival persists chiefly among the children, because incessant toil and scanty nourishment soon deprive both boys and girls of their native grace and stamp them with the ineradicable marks of a life of labor.

The Poor.

We all love the poor. It would be entirely unnecessary, if not positively cashish, to say that we hate the poor. But there are two kinds of poor—the individual poor and the collective poor. It is not the individual poor that we love; it is the collective poor. It is not the poor that we know and see, but the poor that we do not know and have neither time nor inclination to look at. We are afraid if we see them we shall cease to love them. We never say, "God bless the coal heaver or the motorman." For them we find our execrations for not contributing to our comfort just so and so and so.

It is with great fervor, however, that we can say, "God bless the poor," because the poor do not interfere with our comfort to the slightest degree.

Making Tommy Attractive.

Ethel, the twelve-year-old daughter of a family that resides in an up-town apartment house, recently said to her mother:

"Mother, I wish you'd wash Tommy's face."

Now, Tommy was the son of the man whose apartment adjoined theirs, so mother was both alarmed and astonished.

"The idea!" she exclaimed. "Why, he's a neighbor's child! I have nothing to do with him."

"But I have," explained Ethel. "We've become engaged, and I want to kiss him."

Facts About the Sun.

Scientists estimate the volume or size of the sun at more than 1,000,000 times that of the earth, its mass at more than 300,000 times and its density about 50 per cent more than water, but they have not attempted to express its weight in figures. They estimate that the attraction of gravitation alone at the surface of the sun is twenty-seven times that of the earth, so that a 200 pound man on the earth would weigh more than 5,000 pounds at the sun, provided he could stand the temperature long enough to be weighed.

Bobwhite.

The male quail, or bobwhite, deserves honorable mention among gallinaceous birds because he is particularly good to his wife. He always helps her to hatch her eggs and if anything keeps her away will take the whole duty on himself.

Dumped his German Passenger.

A French aviator, riding in a two-seated craft, lost his way in a fog and descended inside the German liner. The machine was intact, but the aviator was surrounded and disarmed. A German captain had an idea. Strapping the young Frenchman securely to the pilot's seat he jumped in behind him, pointing a revolver and saying:

"We'll explore the French trenches and rear at a low altitude. If you make a motion to land I'll blow your brains out and pilot the machine myself."

The French aviator obeyed. He steered straight to the French trenches, flew over them, reared suddenly and looped the loop. Not strapped to the seat the German captain spilled out and went crashing to earth, while the aviator steered for headquarters and made his report.

TUESDAY, JUNE 13TH, 1916

THE tragic death of Lord Kitchener by drowning, from a small boat, has caused a world-wide sensation and universal regret. The great soldier was a most thorough man, however, and left his work so that his successor could still carry it on. And the Empire has still many great men.

THE Russian army is coming back marvelously. Already it has won back thousands of miles of territory in Galicia, taking immense quantities of arms and munitions, and over 114,000 prisoners, besides the casualties on the field. The Czar's forces are fighting on a 700-mile front, and have certainly made a record to be proud of in a few days. If the present successes continue the result will have a most important bearing on the duration of the war.

LINE NEVER WAVERED

Canadians Clung Desperately to Ruined Trenches.

Bombardment of Ypres Salient Was Most Violent, Which the Canadian Troops Have Yet Experienced, but Men Remained Firm Under Terrible Shelling—Awards for Gallantry.

OTTAWA, June 12.—The following communique has been received from the Canadian general representative at the front:

Canadian Corps Headquarters in France, via London, June 12.—During the first week of the month heavy fighting occurred on the Canadian front. Early in the morning of June 2nd the enemy opened a tremendous bombardment over the area of our left division.

The weight of fire was greater than any hitherto experienced by the Canadian troops, and in spite of the retaliation of our artillery continued in steadily increasing volume for four hours.

The front and support trenches were severely damaged and in many places obliterated. Entanglements were destroyed. The smoke and fumes of thousands of bursting shells, high explosives, gas and lacrymatory, hung heavily in the air and rendered observation almost impossible.

Major-General M. S. Mercer, C.B., and Brig-General V. A. S. Williams had arranged to inspect certain front works Sunday morning. The generals were caught in the bombardment and unfortunately both are missing. It is reported that when last seen General Mercer had been struck on the head by a flying sandbag and General Williams wounded in the face.

All along the line our troops clung to their shattered trenches with the greatest gallantry. When the bombardment ceased the enemy advanced and everywhere encountered desperate resistance. At various points there was fierce hand-to-hand fighting. Officers and men rivaled each other in heroism.

Our losses were heavy, but the Germans paid a high price for every captured trench.

Local counter-attacks were quickly organized. As a result some of the lost ground was recovered and a new line established.

The following morning an organized counter-attack still further improved our position.

In order to take part in this operation some of our battalions were obliged to move across the open under intense shell fire and through heavy barrages. Nowhere did the line waver. Each battalion advanced and carried through its appointed task with splendid dash and unflinching determination.

Since then sections of our defences have been subjected at intervals to heavy bombardments. At one or two points the enemy has attempted to attack but in each case has been repulsed with loss.

The following awards have been made to officers and men for gallantry on the occasion of a German raid on our trenches during the month of May:

Distinguished Service Order: Lieut.-Colonel W. A. Griedbach, 49th Battalion.

Distinguished Conduct Medal: Color-Sergeant Major C. Miles.

Military Medal: Sergt. J. Wallis, Corporal F. Bennett, Private A. I. McKinnon, Private G. W. Tomkinson.

ACTIVE AROUND YPRES.

Salient Has Again Become Scene of Violent Bombardment.

LONDON, June 12.—According to the British official issued at midnight Sunday, the Ypres salient has once more become the scene of chief activity. For about three hours during Sunday afternoon the enemy shelled the British trenches heavily on a southern portion from Hill 60 to a point 1,500 yards north. The bombardment was preceded by the shelling during the morning of the town of Ypres and the back area.

The only infantry action during the day on this front was an attempt by the enemy to rush one of the blocking posts of the British in Sanctuary wood. It was repulsed.

Sunday night, after a heavy bombardment of the British trenches between Thiepval, Blamont, and Hamel, the enemy in the course of a raid in the Ancre valley was able to cut off a few men who formed part of a wiring party; five are missing.

On the remainder of the front there was nothing except minor trench mortar and artillery actions opposite Fricourt and south of Neuville-St. Vaast.

A Fokker was brought down near Habourdin.

PRELUDE TO OFFENSIVE?

Italy Believes Allies on Western Front Will Now Move.

ROME, June 12.—As a result of the Russian offensive in Galicia, the news of which was hailed with joy, the Austrian pressure is expected to decrease in the Trentino, especially since the members of the Russian delegation here are now convinced that the Russian offensive is a prelude to a general offensive of the Allies along the western front.

Meanwhile the Italian resistance in the Trentino is solid. The occupation of Mount Cengio is a mere local success, and does not open an outlet to invasion, since the immediate positions of the valley of Astico form a barrier which the Austrians are powerless to overcome, especially since it has failed to drive away the Italians dominating the lateral positions.

MOVING ON LEMBERG

Russians Now Hold Great Triangle in Volhynia.

Irresistible Advance of Czar's Armies Has Resulted in the Capture of 108,000 Austrian Prisoners and Hundreds of Cannon Within a Week—Dubno and Dvovno in Russian Hands.

PETROGRAD, June 12.—Unchecked in their mighty rush against the Austrians, the Russians are sweeping forward in Volhynia and Galicia. In the latter sector, after capturing Buczacz, the important railway town on the west bank of the lower Strypa, regarded as the strategic gateway to Bukovina, and smashing the enemy lines along the Strypa and Dniester, General Brusiloff's troops are moving on the Gnita Lipa, 12 miles west of the Zlota Lipa at Potok, and are seriously threatening Lemberg. At several points the Austrians' defence has crumbled completely and their retreat has become almost a rout.

The town and fortress of Dubno, 25 miles from the Galician frontier, fell into the hands of the Russians Sunday. With it the Czar's forces are again in the possession of the Volhynian fortress triangle, consisting of Lutsk, Dubno, and Rovno.

Dubno, which had been in the hands of the Austrians since September 7 last, lies on the Rovno-Brody-Lemberg railway, and is about 82 miles from the Galician capital.

Simultaneously with the drive in Volhynia the ex-erime left wing of the Russian southern army forced the Austro-Hungarians to withdraw their whole line in north-east Bukovina, and advanced to within only 16 miles of its capital, Czernowitz. The Austrian War Office admits the withdrawal of the lines in north-eastern Bukovina.

The Petrograd official stories of the fighting, as contained in the communications of Saturday and Sunday make interesting reading.

"Our offensive in Volhynia, Galicia and Bukovina obtained fresh successes yesterday. The enemy armies continue to suffer enormous losses in prisoners alone," say the War Office reports.

"Troops under General Brusiloff, fighting with enemy rear guards, have crossed the River Strypa above and below Lutsk. The forces which crossed the river are pursuing the enemy, who is endeavoring to hold his position in the rear.

"In Galicia north-east of Tarnopol, in the regions of Gliadki and Tsebroff, heavy fighting is proceeding for the possession of heights which have changed hands several times.

"The piercing of the enemy front in the region of the Strypa has resulted in our occupation of a fortified position on the east bank of the river. At dawn to-day our troops entered Buczacz, and, developing the offensive along the Dniester River, carried the village of Slanka.

In the village of Potok Zlota we seized a large artillery park and large quantities of shells.

"The fierce attacks of our troops are throwing into our hands thousands upon thousands of prisoners and booty of all kinds, the exact estimation of which is as yet impossible.

"During Friday's fighting we captured 97 officers, 5,500 men, and 11 guns, making the total up to the present, 1,240 officers, about 71,000 men, 94 guns, 157 machine guns, 53 bomb mortars, and a large quantity of other war material.

"During Saturday's fighting we took as prisoners one general, 409 officers, and 35,100 soldiers. We also captured 30 guns, 13 machine guns, and five bomb throwers. This makes the total trophies in the recent operations one general, 1,649 officers, and more than 106,000 soldiers, and 124 guns, 189 machine guns, and 58 bomb throwers.

"In a single sector of the enemy front we captured 21 searchlights, two convoys, 29 field kitchens, 47 trains of machine guns, 12,000 pounds of barbed wire (a pound is equivalent to 36 pounds), 10,000 concrete plants, 7,000,000 cubes of concrete, 10,000 pounds of coal, enormous depots of ammunition, and quantities of arms and other material.

"In another sector we captured 30,000 rifle cartridges, 300 boxes of machine gun cartridges, 200 boxes of hand grenades, 1,000 useable rifles, 4 machine guns, 2 range finders, and a Norton portable pump for the extraction of drinking water.

"The capture of such enormous war materials prepared by the enemy for various operations affords proof of how opportune was our coup against the enemy.

"Among the various episodes may be noted the plucky struggle of our young formations near Roltche, on the Strypa near Lutsk. Here the Germans attempted to render assistance to the Austrians, but by our infantry attack, delivered under cover of heavy artillery, they were dislodged from the town, losing over 2,000 prisoners, two guns, and some machine guns. Our troops pursued the retreating Germans.

"Our forces operating in the region of Dubno (one of the fortresses comprising the Volhynian triangle) captured the town and fort and are on the enemy's heels. Some Russian detachments crossing the Ikwa River have developed the offensive. A part of the Russians occupied the region of the village of Damidovka, on the Mylnoff-Beresetchno road, forcing the enemy at his Mylnoff point of support to surrender. Besides dislodging the enemy from his principal position north of Bouchatche we made many prisoners there, including the staff of an Austrian battalion, and also took a great quantity of arms."

HUGHES IS CHOSEN.

He is Nominated by Old Line Republicans for Presidency.

CHICAGO, June 12.—For President: Charles Evans Hughes, of New York.

Vice-President: Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana.

With this ticket nominated Saturday afternoon, after the collapse of peace negotiations with the Progressive party, the Republicans entered the campaign of 1916.

Judge Hughes was named on the third ballot, the first and only one taken on Saturday, receiving 949 1/2 votes; Colonel Roosevelt received 18 1/2; Lodge, 7; Dupont, 5; Weeks, 2, and La Follette, 2.

For Vice-President, Fairbanks was chosen on the first ballot for Vice-President, receiving 863 votes. Former Senator Burkett of Nebraska received 108; Senator Borah of Idaho 7; Governor Johnson of California 2, and Wm. Grant Webster 2.

The appearance of harmony and unity within the party was presented when, just before the convention adjourned at 2 p.m., the nominations were made unanimous. It was acclamation without heartiness, without zest, without enthusiasm.

SUCCESSES FOR BRITISH.

Two Forces Have Won Victories in German East Africa.

LONDON, June 12.—British troops invading German East Africa from the north have captured Mombasa, a town on the railroad in the Usambara district of German East Africa, while another British force operating from Rhodesia has occupied the town of Bismarckburg, on the south-eastern shore of Lake Tanganyika. The text of the British official statement announcing these successes says:

"East Africa.—The Pangani River has been bridged at Mikotabeni. Further progress has been made in the Usambara district. Mombasa has been reached and the Mombasa station has been captured. Myalano has been occupied. Major-General van Deventer is engaging the Germans east of Kondoa Irangi.

"On the Nyasaland border we captured a field gun and booty in the Poroto mountains and occupied Bismarckburg."

ALMONTE.

From the Gazette.
Miss Ella Beach of Carleton Place is visiting in town this week, with her sister, Miss J. Beach.
Misses Elizabeth Coulter and Lu Steel, nurses-in-training at Worcester, Mass., are home on vacation.
Miss Eva Dulmage of Carleton Place was the guest of friends here this week.
Messrs. S. McLean and Alex. C. Wylie are the latest to invest in Chevrolet cars.
Mrs. Sinclair, who lived in a house on Augusta street, died very suddenly on Monday morning. She was down town on Saturday evening, apparently enjoying the best of health, but through the night she became ill and was taken to the hospital for treatment, but a few hours later succumbed. Mrs. Sinclair came to Almonte from Scotland and has been here for a few years.
Mr. Frank Scott has received word of the death of his youngest brother, Mr. Wm. Scott at Hearne, Sask., on the 18th of May, in his sixtieth year. He had been taken to Moose Jaw to the hospital for treatment but he succumbed to his illness, after undergoing an operation. He was the youngest of a family of ten, and his is the first break in the family. He is survived by his wife and two sons.
Rev. S. Gorley Brown and Mrs. Brown announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Jean Velma S. Brown, to Mr. Thomas Sigurdson of Manson, Washington, U.S.A. the marriage to take place on Monday, the 12th of June.
A quiet marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Nontell, on Saturday evening, when their daughter, Pearl, was united in matrimony with Corp. Evered J. Lee the ceremony being performed by Rev. S. G. Brown.
Capt. Albertson of Carleton Place is endeavoring to resuscitate the town band. So many of the bandmen having left town makes it difficult work but it begins to look as if the Captain's efforts may yet be crowned with success.
Following an illness of over seven months during which time he was confined to bed, death came as a release from suffering to Mr. Alfred Spilane on Saturday last at the home of his sister in town. He was born in Sand Point about thirty years ago and was a son of the late Samuel and Mrs. Spilane, at one time residents of Appleton. His mother at present resides in town with her daughter, Mrs. Brazier. There also survives one sister, Maggie, (Mrs. H. Brazier), of Almonte, and four brothers, William, Wesley and Herbert, of Carleton Place, and Alex. in training at Barfield camp. The funeral was held on Monday from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brazier, Ann street, services at the house being conducted by Rev. Mr. Saddington. Interment was made in St. James' cemetery, Carleton Place, where Rev. Canon Elliott committed the body to its last resting place.

PERTH.

From the Express.
Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Robertson leave to-day for a tour of the west. They will visit Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and intermediate points.
There passed away at his home on Tuesday evening, a very respectable resident, in the person of James J. Lally, who had been sick for some time with heart trouble.
Work at the Caldwell mill is progressing rapidly and in a short time the plant will be in order to commence work. The engine and machinery have been overhauled, and eight new looms of English manufacture installed. In all there will be thirteen looms, five of which are of American make. A new warping and spooling machines have also been set up in the big building.

LANARK.

From the Era.
One of Mr. A. M. Campbell's heavy Clyde mares took ill yesterday and died. The loss is a heavy one to Mr. Campbell and the second of a similar nature he has sustained in the past three years.
A telegram was received by Mr. Thos. Mason on Monday informing him of the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred. Mason, which occurred at her home in Perry, N.Y., that day.
Pte. Thomas Johnston of the 127th Batt., Toronto, son of Mr. John Johnston, Drummond, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, was out of the hospital only four days when he contracted measles. He had scarcely recovered from this so-called "infantile" complaint when he was again sent to the hospital, and is still there suffering with scatica.
Mr. Chas. Watt sails shortly for England, his ultimate destination being the North Sea, as a sub-lieutenant in the Navy. Charlie will be attached to the Motor Boat Patrol Service—swift and powerful launches equipped with wireless and armed with two small guns. This branch of the service forms the eyes of the fleet, darting long distances in advance of the heavy ships and obtaining information.
Mrs. James Rodger, late of Lanark Township, died last Saturday, June 3rd, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Creighton, Arklan. Deceased was in her 78th year. Her illness lasted about four months, first the gripe, next pneumonia and finally Bright's disease. The funeral took place on Monday, 5th inst., at Middleville Cemetery, Rev. A. Drysdale officiating.
At 9:30 o'clock this morning a marriage was solemnized in Sacred Heart Church, Lanark, in which the principals were Mr. Sylvester O'Donnell of Cobalt, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Donnell, and Miss Jennie McEwen, fifth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McEwen, of this village. Rev. Father Carey tied the nuptial knot.
The village was deeply shocked yesterday morning at news of the sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. Thos. G. Robertson. A child was born but the mother was taken away. The household was thrown into instant and intense grief, friends and neighbors were startled and awed, and there was a general feeling that a more distressing bereavement had not fallen upon a Lanark home for many a day. Sincere sympathy is felt for Mr. Robertson and his family in their loss, the full realization of which only comes to those who have personal experience of this kind of domestic tragedy. There are ready hands to assist in the affairs of the household, the care of the children and in any other way that will tend to lessen the difficulties of the case, but all the human sympathy in the world cannot give the husband back his wife nor the children back their mother. Mrs. Robertson was born May 28th, 1875, at Glen Tay. Her maiden name was Minnie Barber, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Barber. On December 28th, 1898, she was married and with her husband settled down in Lanark. They have been here ever since, except about two years residence in Manitoba. Seven children survive—three boys and four girls. One died in infancy. Two brothers, William and James, survive and one sister, Mrs. Robert McCulloch, Fort William.

Two Lumbermen Drowned.
MATHESON, June 12.—While attempting to cross Moose Lake in a canoe during a heavy storm on June 2, A. J. Bateman and Ben Slee, two lumbermen, were upset and drowned before assistance could reach them. The accident was witnessed by a Mr. Rice on the shore, who endeavored to go to the rescue, but the men had gone down for the last time before he could reach them. Bateman's body was found last Monday, while a search is still being made for Slee.
A. J. Bateman lived on Kenilworth avenue, Toronto, prior to coming north about two years ago. His father and mother also reside here.

Townsend at Constantinople.
AMSTERDAM, June 12.—The Berliner Tageblatt publishes the following despatch from its correspondent at Constantinople:
"Gen. Chas. Y. Townsend has arrived here. He was received with military honors and was permitted to visit the American Ambassador."

Colliers Need Ships.
HALIFAX, June 12.—Nova Scotia coal miners have memorialized Sir R. Borden, setting forth that unless the Dominion coal steamers requisitioned by the Admiralty are released grave disaster will befall the industry. They ask for redress.

Waterworks of Canada.
A new edition of "Waterworks and Sewerage Systems of Canada," by Leo G. Denis, has just been issued by the Commission of Conservation. The book contains 176 pages of text and is well illustrated with half-tones and diagrams. In the year of Confederation there were only 7 waterworks plants in Canada; to-day there are 528. These have been built at a total cost of $123,725,633 and entail an annual maintenance charge of $4,558,539. There are 279 sewerage systems in Canada, having an aggregate mileage of 4,223 and which have been built at a total cost of $74,504,418. In only 75 municipalities is the sewage treated.

Judge McDougall, in the Quebec Superior Court, upheld the decision of Magistrate Goyette, that the Lord's Day act does not debar Sunday baseball in the Province.

The Presbyterian General Assembly by a vote of 384 to 47, endorsed the findings of an independent committee rejecting Rev. Dr. Campbell's report on the returns from Presbyteries on Church Union.

NOTHING TO FEAR IN NORTH SEA

German Fleet Turned and Fled at Approach of the British.

THAT Britain not only worsted the enemy in the naval battle off the Skoger Rock, but that she did it with a mere handful of ships is made evident by fuller reports of the battle from the commander of the fleet, Sir John Jellicoe. More than this, however, it is apparent from the jubilation expressed by Winston Churchill and others that the result of the battle proves conclusively that Britain has nothing to fear in the North Sea.

The great "adventure" of which German despatches say so much was a very cautious one. As soon as the High Sea fleet found Beatty trying to cut off its escape it turned tail and ran for home.

The difficulties of the pursuers were increased by the growing darkness, and only eleven of all the British battleships managed to get in a shot at the German ships before they had reached a place where Admiral Jellicoe deemed it would be foolhardy to attempt to dig them out.

Admiral Jellicoe remained in the immediate neighborhood for twenty-four hours afterward, waiting to give the Germans an opportunity of renewing the action on a grand scale, but nothing of the kind was attempted.

Under cover of the night the German torpedo flotilla made an attack on the British fleet, but succeeded only in increasing their total of torpedo boat losses, which the Germans officially admit to be eight, and which the British Admiralty officials believe to be higher.

Admiral Jellicoe's reports are far from reflecting anything of that dissatisfaction which was created in the mind of the public by the manner in which the official statements were given out. In his opinion it was only through the low visibility that the Germans got off without suffering more severely than they did.

After waiting in vain for a whole day in the waters not very far from Heligoland, the British commander of the Grand Fleet regretfully steamed to the home ports, when he reported not long after reaching them that the fleet had been refueled and was waiting for another chance alone frustrated the persevering efforts of our brilliant commanders, Sir John Jellicoe and Sir David Beatty, to force a final decision. Although it was not possible to compel the German main fleet to accept battle, the conclusions reached are of extreme importance. All classes of vessels on both sides have now met, and we know that there are no surprises or unforeseen features. An accurate measure can be taken of the strength of the enemy, and his definite inferiority is freed from any element of uncertainty. The fast division of Queen Elizabeths seems to have indicated all the hopes reposed in them.

"I cannot record these facts without expressing my profound sympathy with those who have lost their dearest ones. Many of the most gallant sailors our island has ever nurtured and some of our most splendid officers have gone, but they have died as they would have wished to die, in a blue-water action, which, as it is studied, will more and more be found to be a definite step towards the attainment of complete victory."

Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, speaking of the fight, says:

"Though a hard-earned sea-fight, it was a British victory. There was no mistake in strategy made. The British objective was to sink the German fleet or compel it to return to its base. In the absence of Zepelins for scouting purposes, the British navy was obliged to send out heavy cruisers as outside scouts, because light cruisers would have been driven in without securing the needed information.

aming the reports of the Admirals and of considering the information in the possession of the Admiralty. The following facts seem to be established:

"The naval supremacy of the British fleet in capital ships depends upon the super-Dreadnoughts armed with 13.5-inch and 15-inch guns, and these are sufficient by themselves to maintain control of the seas. Of these vital units of the first rank we have lost only one—the Queen Mary. There appears to be no doubt that the Germans have lost at least one comparable ship. If this should be the Lutzow or Derfflinger, that vessel is a heavier loss to them actually and relatively than the Queen Mary is to us.

"Coming to vessels of the second order, we have lost the Indefatigable and the Invincible. These are of an entirely different class from the super-Dreadnoughts, and, valuable vessels as they are, do not rank as primary units at the present time. A Dreadnought battleship of the Westfalen type would be a loss comparable to either.

"The armored cruisers Black Prince, Defence, and Warrior belonged to the third order of ships, of which we possess a very large superiority. The sinking of the two brand new German light cruisers Wiesbaden and Elbing is, in fact, a more grievous loss to the enemy.

"In all these vessels the most serious feature is the loss of their splendid and irreplaceable crews.

"The destroyer casualties appear to be about equal. On these terms we, being the stronger, are the gainers. Our flotillas have long sought such opportunities. Our margin of superiority is in no way impaired.

The despatch of troops to the continent should continue with the utmost freedom, the battered condition of the German fleet being an additional security to us.

WOMAN FOUGHT IN '70.

Madame Jane Dieulafoy is Dead, at Age of 65.

Madame Jane Dieulafoy, author, explorer, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, and possessor of the unique privilege, accorded by the French Government, of wearing male apparel, is dead in Paris.

In the sixty-five years of her life Madame Dieulafoy passed through experiences which caused her to be regarded as one of the most remarkable women in France. She was born in Toulouse, and was not yet out of her teens, when she was married to Marcel Auguste Dieulafoy, a young engineer. He went to the front during the Franco-Prussian war and took his bride with him. She disguised herself as a man in the regulation French uniform, and fought by her husband's side. Both returned unscathed from the battlefields. In the '80's her husband, who had established a high reputation as an engineer, was commissioned to go to Asia for archaeological researches. It was a dangerous and arduous task, but Madame Dieulafoy elected to accompany him. She spent several years with him in Chaldea and Persia, sharing his work and perils. They were rewarded by discovering the ruins of the Palaces of Darius and Artaxerxes, and brought back with them bas reliefs, which were placed in the Louvre.

After returning to France, Madame Dieulafoy, who had become accustomed during her travels to the constant wearing of man's costume, received authorization to appear in public in this apparel. She wrote a large number of books on historical, archaeological and romantic themes, one of which was cited by the French Academy as of especial excellence.

One Shot, 2,300 Casualties.

In the recent fighting around Verdun no ordeal was more terrible for the devoted French soldiers than the bombardment by the famous German 16-inch howitzers.

These guns—which, by the way, each require twelve railway cars to transport them—fire a shell which weighs nearly half a ton, and which, stood on end, reaches higher from the ground than the ordinary mantelpiece.

It takes twenty-six hours to set up each gun, that is to say, to assemble the various parts, six hours to adjust the range, 200 men to serve it, and each shot costs $524.

The gun crew, who fire the gun from a distance of 300 yards, have to wear special protectors for ears, eyes, and mouths, and to lie flat on the ground to save themselves from injury during the terrific shock of the discharge. The gun itself is mounted on a foundation twenty-six feet deep, and in this foundation are special mines which the engineer in charge is sworn to explode, and so destroy the gun should there be any danger of it being captured.

As evidence of the enormous damage this gun can do, it may be mentioned that one shot at Liege killed or wounded 2,300 men, and the fortresses of Namur and Maubeuge each surrendered after only two of these gigantic shells had struck them.

No Premature Peace!

"We all dread lest a peace is declared too soon, and before their navy has got sent under by us," writes one at the front to Mr. C. A. Allen, the secretary of the Canadian Emigration Office in England. "I fear if war goes on another six months, say, people will begin to say, 'Oh, we've had enough—let us be merciful and not hit them too hard, etc., etc.' Let those people come out here and see desolation and misery and suffering beyond description, the mark of war everywhere—whole country defaced, irreparable, and wholesale destruction of historical buildings and scenery. No, we are most keen on going on and getting our own back and making the brutes beg and be kicked up for doing so."

(1) Specimens of Banff Buffalo. (2) Three Good Fellows. (3) A Banff Polar Bear.

In the Canadian Zoo at Banff, Alberta, within the Rocky Mountains Park and along the C.P.R., both at the zoo adjoining the museum and out at the animal paddock about two miles east of the town, there are fine specimens of buffalo, moose, elk, deer, Persian sheep, Angora goats, bear, wolves, coyotes, lynx, badgers, martens, and a number of the smaller animals.

Six yak, originally presented to the Dominion Government by the Duke of Bedford, were tendered by the former to the Rocky Mountains Park. They were brought to Banff from the experimental farm at Brandon, and are now in a healthy and flourishing condition. Their quaint appearance, causing them to be objects of much interest. The park commissioner suggests that it would be an interesting experiment to attempt to cross one of the buffalo bulls with one of the yak cows.

In the Zoo, adjacent to the museum, may be seen the following animals of the Rocky Mountains:

Walking Without Legs.

When a wounded soldier or sailor is sent to the hospital nowadays the amount of patching up made possible by modern science is so wonderful that by the very nature of its success it escapes full appreciation. Thus, if you see a fine looking young man walking round briskly with no more support than a walking stick you are not likely to realize that a short time ago he had no legs at all. Less than five months ago Sergt. Kent, of the Fifth Wilts, lost his legs at the Dardanelles. The other day, a noticeably proud of his facility, he took an afternoon stroll round the grounds of this hospital, with only two walking sticks to help him. For six days he has been relearning how to walk—a joyous experience for a man who had contemplated a life with crutches. The disabled first find their feet with the aid of parallel bars. In order that the legs may suit them as nearly perfectly as possible, it is usual for the men to take their first steps in the practising room before the limbs are finished.

The Insurance Swindlers

 of "Heart Throbs."

ACCIDENTS at the Great Eastern lumber mills were of so frequent occurrence that when Big Jim Blake was felled under a heavy, collapsing timber and picked up for dead the affair did not cause more than a passing ripple in the affairs of the great establishment. The management of the Great Eastern has a habit of smothering the news of accidents—when their employees were the victims. It was in the little white cottage on Elm street, near the factory yard, that the tragedy struck home. The sadly smiling woman, with the two chubby children clinging to her skirts, who greeted the gruff workman sent ahead with the news of the accident, jabbed for a moment at her eyes with a corner of her apron and prepared to receive the motionless body in the automobile ambulance.

"Jim" she cried. "Jim, my Jim!"
 The tired eyes in the white face slowly opened.
 "Thank God, Martha, for the insurance! It will come in handy for us now!"
 She smiled bravely back at him. The insurance! How like the big, unselfish nature of Jim to think of the insurance and protection for her and the kiddies first! And so at 10 o'clock the next morning, when it became apparent that Jim Blake was doomed to a long siege in bed, if indeed he were to recover with his life, she put on her best Sunday bonnet and shawl and haltingly asked her way to the big brown stone building which housed the Tom Changes Clothes With the Negro Bell Boy.

Accident and Life Insurance company. It was a big building and the offices of the insurance company within were very glittering and very pretentious, but a black lettered sign coldly announced that the company had just passed into the hands of a receiver.
 Mrs. Blake started back with a gasp—the kind of dry sob which comes to a woman only under the most poignant distress. The insurance company a failure! And all the little savings of three years swept away! But this was not the worst. How was the Blake family to exist during the long weeks ahead? How were Jim's doctor bills to be paid?

A strong, cheery voice spoke at Mrs. Blake's shoulder. "Is there anything I can do for you, madam?"
 The little woman whirled to look into a frankly smiling pair of blue-gray eyes set in a tanned, resolute face, and Tom Larnigan, for the speaker was he, removed his hat and offered his arm.

"Let us go some place where I can talk to you," he said quietly. "I have an idea that your story is only one of many which I have heard today. You see, I am government special officer investigating just such frauds as I strongly suspect the company is attempting to perpetrate now on an innocent public." He threw back the lapel of his coat and showed the little silver star of government authority. Mrs. Blake unhesitatingly followed his directions. Almost before she realized it she was sobbing out her story.

"You must let me take the place of the insurance company," he insisted. "How much did your policy call for?"
 She hesitated. "Twenty-five dollars a week for three months in case of disability from accident."

"Here is $100. I will see you before that is exhausted, and we will see what we can do for your husband." He rose. "Keep up your courage, Mrs. Blake. I am sure that I can help you."

"How can I ever thank you?"
 "Don't try," Tom smiled again as she turned away, but as her white little figure vanished the smile faded from his face. He had work to do—grim work. The company was one of the strongest branches of the so-called insurance trust and, as such, deemed itself above the law, immune from legal investigation. Tom turned finally away, his hands deep in his pockets, his face wrinkled in somber thought. He did not notice the skulking figure in the doorway of the building which glided unostentatiously after him. The fifteen kept their audacious antagonist under surveillance night and day.

Reaching his rooms, Tom saw in a newspaper a challenge from the very concern that was the object of his investigations. "The Accident and Life Insurance Company Invites Any Investigation of Its Books and Records From Any Accredited Source."
 He knew that Roger Maxwell, father of Dorothy, the fiancée of his brother, Bruce, was the guiding spirit of the concern. Was Roger Maxwell implicated in a plot to defraud the public? Tom shuddered and threw the paper from him. He would take the insurance men at their word, and if there was crooked work, heaven help them!

Had Tom Larnigan been present at a gathering of the remaining leaders of the fifteen in their private office that afternoon he might have been a shade less resolute in his sudden determination. Stanford Stone, as usual, was in the presiding chair, and it was his curtly grim voice which started the purpose of the session.

"Larnigan is on the trail of the insurance trust, gentlemen. Unless we get him first he is certain to deal us another disastrous blow. I suggest that we leave Tom Larnigan's fate in the hands of four picked gun men whom I have selected for their discretion and marksmanship. Larnigan cannot escape them. They have orders to follow him to the death. If our man escapes, Brother Maxwell, the crisis must be met by you in this instance as the most interested party."

Roger Maxwell staggered as he rose from his chair, and his face was haggard when he passed through the door. Behind him Stanford Stone smiled slyly at his retreating figure.

As Tom Larnigan left his hotel in a taxicab to visit Ben Travers he noticed that two men were following him. Once out of sight, Tom spoke to the chauffeur.
 "I want you to change places with me for an hour," he said coolly, showing a twenty dollar bill. "It's a joke on some friends."

For a moment the man stared, and then he winked. Three minutes later Tom, in the overcoat and cap of the chauffeur, drove slowly up to the entrance of the hotel where Ben Travers had his rooms, descended from his seat and entered the building.
 The two gun men fell back with curses when they found the driver inside the taxicab. Travers welcomed Tom warmly and announced that he had bought the Daily Independent to fight graft. Tom then changed clothes with a negro bellboy and walked out to the taxicab with a trunk on his shoulders, while the two gun men, three feet away, smoked serenely, unconscious that their victim was at their elbows. For a moment Tom debated whether or not to enter the taxicab himself, but instead walked around the corner of the hotel and successfully eluded his pursuers. He at once proceeded to the Accident and Life Insurance company's offices and pushed his way into Roger Maxwell's room.

"I have come to see your books," said Tom curtly, showing his star. "I would like to start my investigation at once."
 For a moment Maxwell continued his wild stare, and then he gathered himself together with an effort. "Certainly," he stammered, pressing a button, which called a secretary. "Show this man to the vaults, Jones," he ordered as the call was obeyed. Tom bowed and followed his conductor outside. Hardly had the door closed when Maxwell picked up his telephone. "Is that you, Stone?" He whispered hoarsely when his connection was established. "Young Larnigan is here to see the books. He has escaped our trap. What shall I do?"
 "Where is he now?"

"On his way to the vault."
 "Let him get inside, then, and close the door!" was the curt answer.
 "Close the door?" echoed Maxwell dully.

"Certainly. It is equipped with a time lock, of course. You can say it was an accident. It will be hours before it can be opened again."

Roger Maxwell hung back the receiver and paced the floor, with his face bathed in cold perspiration. It would be deliberate murder! Maxwell approached the vault, glanced stealthily over his shoulder and then lurched toward the heavy door. There was a clang of metal and then a hoarse cry of dismay from the clerk at the nearby desk, who sprang forward just in time to catch Maxwell's reeling form.

"For God's sake, what have you done, Mr. Maxwell? Tom Larnigan is inside!"

"It was an accident," stammered Maxwell. "Get help at once. Don't stand there staring!"

Hours later when three experts from the safe concern opened the vault they found the body of Tom Larnigan stretched on the floor. A physician, who had been hastily summoned, knelt over the form and shook his head solemnly. "Dead," he said.

Meantime, the evening newspapers on the streets were shrieking the latest sensational developments in the Larnigan case, and the story of the "accident" in the offices of the insurance company, which had resulted so disastrously. Bruce Larnigan, coya-

"Go away!" he mused.

lescing from the injuries, which for a time had threatened an untimely death, crumpled the paper convulsively. "The scoundrels!" he hissed. "The murderous scoundrels!" There was no doubt in his mind as to the cause of the tragedy and its purpose. "But I'll have them yet! I'll hound each one to his grave or prison if it needs the remainder of my life to do it!"

Had any one been fated to look on Roger Maxwell at that moment the spectacle presented by the usually spruce, dignified looking insurance president would have been a shock. Maxwell, huddled over his desk, was seeking, as a last resort to ease his conscience of its burden, by telling the truth to a dead man, whose lips could never open against him in real life. Summoning a messenger the president directed the boy to carry the envelope to the Larnigan home. It was not until then that Roger Maxwell prepared to leave his office.

At the Larnigan cottage the occupants were clustered in the living room, listening with bated breath for the rumble in the street which should announce the arrival of the black wagon with the body of the son and brother. But hour succeeded hour without the expected sound. Bruce was on the point of persuading his mother to retire when a hurried step sounded outside, the front door was flung open, and Bruce was facing his brother Tom. Tom grinned at the other's stare and flung his arms over his mother's shoulders. "It takes a hard knock to kill a Larnigan," he chuckled. "Suspended animation, old man. I looked dead enough, but the doctor suspected the true facts and managed to bring me around in his office." A half hour later Tom was summoned to the door by a peal of the bell. A messenger boy extended a long envelope. It was the confession of Roger Maxwell—the confession that had never been meant for living eyes. Tom caught his hat from the rack and let himself softly out of the front door. He was determined if possible to keep the confession from Bruce—Bruce who would give his life to avoid giving Dorothy Maxwell pain.

Roger Maxwell, in his library at midnight, started to his feet with a cry that was almost a shriek. Tom Larnigan stood before him. "Go away!" he moaned. "Go away!" Slowly, accusingly, Tom extended the sheets of Maxwell's confession. Maxwell rumbled to the floor. Tom darted to his side just as Dorothy entered the room. "I fear your father is very ill," he said gently. "Better call a doctor."

"But—but—how?" Dorothy stammered.
 "I will explain all later," said Tom gravely.
 The early morning newspapers carried the news of the apoplectic seizure of Roger Maxwell and announced that his life was despaired of. Bruce hurried to the Maxwell home. Dorothy met him with a sad shake of her pretty blond head as he sought to take her in his arms.

"Not now," she said, motioning him away.
 Without a word Bruce turned and made his way back to the street. How was it all to end?

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XII.—Second Quarter, For June 18, 1916.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xvi, 19-24. Memory Verses, 33, 34—Golden Text, Acts xvi, 31—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In verses 19-18 of our lesson chapter we read of an evil spirit possessing a woman who, as she followed Paul and his friends, cried out, "These men are the servants of the Most High God, who show unto us the way of salvation." She continued to do this many days, but Paul, being grieved by even so good and true a testimony from such a source and knowing her to be controlled by an evil spirit, commanded the spirit to come out of her in the name of Jesus Christ, and he did. It was certainly strange to hear such a testimony from such a source, but an evil spirit in the synagogue at Capernaum one day when Jesus was present cried out, "I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God!" And Jesus commanded the spirit to come out of the man (Mark 1, 23-26).

Truth may be talked without being known in the heart, but the Lord reads the heart and does not want testimony from His enemies. Knowing the truth about the Lord Jesus does not save any one, yet it may be that many think they are saved because they believe that Jesus lived and died and rose again and that He is the Son of God. But it is he that hath the Son of God that hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. Only such as receive Him become children of God (1 John v, 12; John i, 12).

When those who employed this woman and made money by her saw that this source of income was taken from them they incited a riot against Paul and Silas and had them beaten and cast into prison, and the jailer, having received a charge to keep them safely, put them in the inner prison and made their feet fast in the stocks (verses 19-24). There are some things right on the surface of this record, and one is that people are apt to grow very angry if they are making money wrongfully and their business is interfered with. Compare the riot of the silversmiths at Ephesus in chapter xix, and then think of the opposition of the liquor dealers and all who dishonor Jesus Christ to the work and teaching of Rev. William Sunday and all true evangelists; also the opposition of those who profit by graft to those who desire righteousness.

Then notice that if you won't let the devil help you he will take pains to show you how he can hate you and persecute you. Compare in Ezra iv, 15, the decided opposition of those who were not permitted to help in the work. There are still those who are ready to help in many a good work if they may belong to the devil while they do it. But if asked to renounce the devil and to receive the Lord Jesus and put their trust in His great sacrifice as the Son of God, then one is apt to witness the enmity of the carnal mind against God.

How grand was the victory of faith in these men of God, who, with sore and bleeding backs and feet in the stocks, could praise the God whose they were and whom they served and talk with Him in heaven from their prison! Not only did the other prisoners hear them praising God, but they were heard in heaven, and suddenly the earth was shaken, and the prison, too; prison doors were opened and every one's bonds loosed (verses 25, 26). Oh, how great and wonderful is our God, the God of Israel, who only doest wonders! (Ps. lxxii, 18, 19.) As some one has said, these men had not influence enough on earth at Philippi to save them from this shameful treatment (1 Thess. ii, 2) and from prison, but they had influence enough in heaven to shake the earth. It was midnight when they prayed and sang praises, but the God of Israel neither slumbers nor sleeps; He watches over His people night and day (Ps. cxxi, 4; Isa. xxvii, 3).

Not only was the prison shaken, but the keeper was so shaken when he saw the prison doors open that he would have killed himself if Paul had not cried out, "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here!" He was shaken deep down in his soul, too, for, falling down trembling before Paul and Silas, he brought them out and said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Then did Paul at this unexpected midnight service speak to him and to his house the word of the Lord, and they believed—that is, they received the Lord Jesus Christ—and, being saved, they confessed Christ in baptism and were all filled with rejoicing. The second saved household at Philippi (verses 14, 15, 27-34).

Reading of saved households, I always think of the Lord's word to Noah, "Come thou and all thy house," and I find great encouragement to believe that the Lord still loves to save households. It would seem that before the baptism those poor scarred backs were made more comfortable, and then what a love feast they must have had in the jailer's house, and what joy there was in heaven as well as on earth! Next morning those who had imprisoned the apostles wanted to let them go privately, but Paul insisted upon a public acquittal, which was granted them, and after a call upon Lydia they departed.

The Charley Chaplin Moustache.
 Describing the firing of a naval six-inch gun, a correspondent writes: "With lightning-like rapidity the gun was unmasked, and after a study of the aeroplane map, which revealed the mark within the enemy's lines, the gun was loaded, and the squad stood at attention."
 "Ready, sir," said the sergeant.
 "The lieutenant stepped forward and after a brief examination and several depressions of the piece to get the exact range, retired two paces to the rear, and barked out the order: 'Fire!' The noise made by the discharge of the shell was terrific—my ears buzzed for hours afterward—but the little lieutenant stood unruffled among his men.

"Get the observer's report," was his order. And through a field telegraph near by came the welcome news that the shot had scored a hit. Then I saw a British 9.2—a heavy, short-barrelled gun of semi-howitzer type—in action. The lieutenant here also wore one of the giddy Charlie Chaplin moustaches, and was as cool as if he had been to the wars for years. As a matter of fact, less than two years ago he was a junior clerk in a big London bank."

Sarolea's Forecast.
 Charles Sarolea, who seems to have taken the place of the late William T. Stead as a prophet of events of mighty moment, describes in London Everyman what he characterizes as the German drama of the "Delirium of Greatness." Two acts have passed, he says, "the delirium of persecution and the delirium of violence," and they are now in "the grip of the homicidal mania"; are approaching the stage of "mental depression and melancholia" which will be followed "as in every case of progressive paranoia, by political suicide." He predicts that a German civil war will probably end the world war.

Mrs. Sheldon Spent $1900 for Treatment Without Benefit. Finally Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Englewood, Ill.—"While going through the Change of Life I suffered with headaches, nervousness, flashes of heat, and I suffered so much I did not know what I was doing at times. I spent $1900 on doctors and not one did me any good. One day a lady called at my house and said she had been as sick as I was at one time, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made her well, so I took it and now I am just as well as I ever was. CARLETON PLACE COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the Carleton Place Council was held last evening, the Mayor in the chair and every member of Council present.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A number of accounts were read and referred to committee.

A letter was read from the Militia Department acknowledging receipt of blue print of government property.

Also a letter from Brown Bros. re trees recently received by them.

Circulars re incinerators and other municipal machinery were read.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mr. Nichols, as chairman of the Street Committee, reported no action on the Phillips drain and the Devlin request. Suggested a cinder path down to the Westler place. The County Good Roads men were coming to town shortly to crush the stone for Lake Avenue. Would likely make an exchange of courtesies, as the county would use the town's steam roller in Beckwith.

Mr. Nichols also referred to the proposed County Good Roads expenditure and asked advice as to how this Council would advise the expenditure of a part of their share in the event of the by-law going through.

BY-LAW RE TAXES.

On motion of Messrs. Bates and Hughes a bylaw to enable the ratepayers of Carleton Place to pay their taxes in two instalments if desired, was introduced and read a first time.

On motion of Messrs. Hughes and McNeely, the bylaw was read a second time. The bylaw permits ratepayers to pay any portion of their taxes between July 10th and 30th, between hours of 2 and 5 p.m., the amount paid to draw 25 p.c. allowed when the final instalment is paid.

On motion Chief Wilson was heard regarding the collecting. He thought all ratepayers would have to be notified in order to get the taxes. Otherwise they would not be paid.

On motion of Messrs. McNeely and Hughes, the bylaw was read a third time short and passed.

COLLECTORS APPOINTED.

On motion of Messrs. Bates and Cameron, the bylaw to appoint a Collector of Taxes for 1916 was introduced and read a first time.

On motion of Messrs. Donald and Baird, the bylaw was read a second time.

And on motion of Messrs. Cameron and Bates, a third time short and passed.

Chief Wilson is the collector and he receives $100 for the extra work.

ACCOUNTS PASSED.

Moved by Mr. Pattie, seconded by Mr. Nichols, that the following accounts be paid and that the Mayor grant the necessary orders on the Treasurer:

Carried.

The question of livery licenses and automobile licenses was left over to next meeting.

The matter of signboards was left to the Auto Club, who undertook to procure a number of signboards.

On motion the Council adjourned at 10 o'clock.

A German Joke.

One does not often hear of a good German joke, says the "Glasgow Herald," but a correspondent has called me. Several "one-year" recruits of superior social standing, who had been sent to Nuremberg for their military training, indicated at the outset to the non-commissioned officer at whose mercy they lay their intention to present him with a grand piano, as he was musical when off duty. The piano came; the N.C.O. was delighted with the tone of it, and gave the astute youths the time of their life, freeing them from all drudgery and disagreeable duties for their year of training, after which they returned to civil life, leaving him their costly gift as a memento. That it was so in more senses than one the N.C.O. learned when, a week later, an agent called to collect the next substantial annual payment for the piano, which had been purchased on the instalment system.

THE 73RD BATTERY.

A New Organization for the Ottawa District.

After the departure of the 13th Artillery Brigade for Petawawa recently the new batteries authorized for this district took over the Dry Dock Barracks Kingston, and will be quartered there. The Dry Dock Barracks, which are situated on the shores of Lake Ontario, have been used by the Artillery Units for some time, and are well adapted for the purpose they serve, and the comfortable quarters and pleasant surroundings of the barracks are much appreciated by the members of these units.

A great deal of the time of the Officers of the new batteries is at present being taken up with preliminary organization, and an active recruiting campaign has been started, although the matter of recruiting does not present such serious difficulties as the selection of the right sort of men.

The new battery, the 73rd, which is authorized to recruit from and represents the Ottawa district, is in command of Capt. Donald Robertson, son of the late James Robertson of Almonte. His battery received an addition of fifteen Ottawa boys to its strength on Friday last. The Commanding Officer of the Battery is well fitted, both on account of his training in the Artillery and his previous civil experience, to take command. Previous to his promotion to the command of the new battery he was in command of the 13th Brigade Ammunition Column. Since graduating from Toronto University in Engineering Captain Robertson has up to the outbreak of the war, and for about 18 years been engaged with railway location and construction, engineering work and surveying, all of which require the handling of large numbers of men, and the accurate use of instruments. A knowledge of the latter is particularly essential for a battery commander before he can successfully direct the fire of his guns.

The 73rd Battery should have a particular appeal to the young men of the Ottawa District, who are still anxious to serve their country, as the artillery is, without doubt, one of the most interesting arms of service. The four guns that will be used by the battery are eighteen pounder quick-firing, which project a shell of that weight, and containing some 351 bullets. They are similar as to the size and weight of the shell projected to the famous French seventy-fives, which have done such excellent work throughout the war, and especially at Verdun, and it is said that the German has not much greater affection for the British eighteen-pounders than he has for the French guns.

In all about one hundred and fifty men of all trades are still required to complete the strength of the battery. Among these may be mentioned signallers, telephone repair men, shoeing smiths, wheelwrights, telegraph operators, about fifty drivers, men to operate the guns and others. The drivers should be men who not only know how to drive, but who are also fond of their horses, and know how to look after them.

Particulars regarding recruiting with the 73rd battery may be obtained on application to Lieut. O'Leary, Base Artillery Recruiting Office, Elgin Street, Ottawa.

Trainmen Save Child's Life.

That truth is oftentimes stranger than fiction, and that the scenes of daring and heroism shown on the stage in melodrama and in the "movies" sometimes are eclipsed by action in real life, is proven by a story told among the trainmen, but not generally known because of the modest of the heroes and the traditions of the "road." The News has the story on good authority and could give the name of the engineer concerned. While running from Smiths Falls to Trenton about two weeks ago, and near Belleville the engine crew saw an object lying on the track some distance ahead, and the whistle was blown loud and long. As the engine rushed on, the men in the engine cab were horrified to see a little girl between the rails. The emergency brakes were instantly applied, but the heavy freight cars kept the train in motion and closer and closer it approached the little, sleeping figure. Realizing that desperate measures were necessary to save the child the engineer left his seat, and crept out along one side. The fireman at the same time put into affect the same idea, and they met on the cow-catcher, and without a word between them reached far out ahead and with a strong and sure hold lifted the child to safety. She was a pretty little flax-haired baby of about three years of age and had gone to sleep on the track.—S.F. News.

At Four Score Years.

An old resident passed away last Wednesday afternoon at the Public Hospital, in the person of Charles Barrie. The deceased, who was eighty years of age, had been ill six months, but had only been in the hospital for the past two weeks. He was born in the city of Kingston but for many years lived in Carleton Place, and for the last sixteen years in Smiths Falls, where he was well known and very highly esteemed. He was an Anglican in religion. Surviving him are his wife, who at present is very ill, also six daughters and one son viz: Mrs. James Brazer, Mrs. Peter Brazer, Carleton Place; Mrs. Norman Belonge, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Wm. Belonge, Syracuse, N.Y.; Mrs. Fred McWilliams, Mrs. Fred Leal and Mr. Michael Barrie of Smiths Falls.

Sunshine An Asset.

Are you a faultfinder? Then in the slang of the day, cut it out. Be honest with yourself. Did you ever accomplish anything by finding fault? Be glad instead of critical. No one likes the man who is always finding fault, and when he is compelled to acknowledge that something has been well done couples it with a doubt. If you know a man in your community who is always sunny, who always has a pleasant word for those he meets, is always glad because his neighbors succeed, then you know a popular man. When a popular man goes out among his neighbors to ask for something, he usually gets it, because he has paid for it long ago with his sunny good nature. After all, the world is about what you make it so far as you are concerned. Just a common place this, but a very practical common place for the man who makes his living by personally interesting men in what he has to sell.—The Volunteer.

Newspaper Subscriptions.

On July 1st next there is to be a raise of a half a dollar a year on the subscription price of THE HERALD, and of pretty nearly every other weekly newspaper in Ontario. True the increase is insignificant—less than one cent a week—but even that small raise would perhaps not have been decided upon at this particular time, were it not for the fact that the price of all materials used in the production of a newspaper has soared to such an extent that in most cases money is lost by subscribers on the one dollar subscription. The blank newspaper sheet has increased in some cases thirty per cent; the inks have greatly increased; because of the scarcity of dyes, the type metal has increased because of the demand for it in munition supplies, the products entering into the composition of press rollers have advanced tremendously. The change in price goes into effect on July 1st next.

Circus Stranded.

The Wall's Great London Shows arrived here on Wednesday last, on schedule time, but here it remains so far as the canvas is concerned, the performers and helpers having scattered to the four winds. From what we could learn the weather and war conditions were rather against the success of the company, and for some weeks the management had difficulty in keeping afloat, the last few dates being at a heavy loss. On arriving at Carleton Place the help became urgent in their demands for their pay, and as the funds were not available the afternoon show did not go on. In the evening the programme was announced, but in the meantime unfavorable reports became current and the attendance was very limited. Meanwhile the manager had left town and the performers found themselves in a rather awkward position, miles from their homes and no means of getting there. The authorities were advised of the position of affairs, and they expressed their sympathy for the stranded performers by offering them the free use of the town hall for a "benefit" performance. The entertainment was rushed on for Friday evening, at the popular price of 25c, and the response was most generous, the door receipts amounting to $100, whilst the performance was really first-class. This helped the people away, some of the company obtaining promise of new positions before leaving town. But the plan is still here, awaiting the return of the owners to adjust some little shortages and take it away. Those of the performers and their advance agent were most grateful to the citizens for the many kindnesses shown them and desire us to express their appreciation.

The June issue of Rod and Gun is on the news stands and its list of contents is of interest as usual to the sportsman and lover of life in the open. An article on the Nipigon and Canoe Routes to the East is the leader in this issue which contains among other stories "Bjornsen's Grizzly," an unfortunate encounter with an enraged grizzly; "Fisherman's Luck"; Trout Fishing on the Stave River; an article on the Destruction of Fish and Game in the Laurentian Mountains descriptive of the damage that is being done in that region by residents who are ignorant or criminally careless as to the game laws; besides well conducted departments devoted to guns and ammunition fishing notes, the kennel, the trap, etc. Rod and Gun, the sportsman's magazine, is issued by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.

Thirty-eight thousand automobiles have been licensed in Ontario.
