RIGHT TO THE END

These Natives Desperately Fought the Boers.

Then Their Ammunition Gave Out And They Were All Killed But One.

London, April 26.—The arrival of Mafeking despatches has renewed the interest and anxiety in regard to the fate of its defenders. Lady Sarah Wilson's account of the slaughter of thirty-three natives, who went out from Mafeking last Friday to recover some cattle which had been looted by the Boers, and who, while they were sleeping, were surrounded by the burghers and shot without quarter, apparently harshly misrepresented the action of the Boers. A despatch received by the Associated Press from Mafeking says that the natives in question were unauthorized raiders, and that instead of being ruthlessly slaughtered by the Boers while asleep they beat back the burghers, who were obliged to get reinforcements of Maxims and Nordenfelters. The despatch adds:—There was no question of surrender. The leader of the nation of natives, a tall, spare man, rallied his men to the last, and the fight progressed from the rising to the sinking of the sun. Until their ammunition was finished the natives fought, and then the Boers killed all but one, who, hiding in the reeds, escaped. The correspondent concludes:—"Mafeking may be forgiven if it begins to prefer some attempt at relief rather than empty congratulations for its gallant stand. Though there is only sufficient to keep body and soul together it will never dream of surrender. But it is very, very weary of it all."

WEPENER IS RELEVED.

The Boers Flying to the North-east to Escape.

General French is in Pursuit—Enemy did not Wait to Fight at any Point—Latest War News

London, Thursday, April 26, 4 a. m.—Shortly before midnight it was officially announced that Wepener had been relieved. The War Office issued the following from Lord Roberts, dated Bloemfontein, April 25, 3.25 p. m.:—"The enemy retired from in front of Wepener last night and this morning fled north eastward along the Ladybrand road. Their number was between 4,000 and 5,000."

A Cape Town despatch says:—"The relief of Col. Dalgety was accomplished by Gen. Brabant."

The Times has the following from a special correspondent, dated Mafeking, Basutoland, April 25:—"I rode from Jammesburg here, skirting Wepener, and I met Gen. Brabant's advance guard four miles south of Wepener. They reported three successful fights, Saturday, Sunday and Tuesday, with 22 casualties. The siege was raised and 5,000 of the enemy retired along Ladybrand road, within our sight and unpursued. Col. Dalgety's casualties are 33 killed and 132 wounded."

A despatch to the Times from Dewet's Dorp late Wednesday says:—"Gen. Rundle arrived here this morning."

A RACE FOR LIFE.

London, Thursday, April 25, 5 a. m.—The Boers have everywhere retired at the first pressure of the British advance, and the hope that Gen. Rundle would be able to induce them to remain at Dewet's Dorp and that they had been forced to fight or to surrender has been disappointed. No attempt was made to pursue the commandos retiring from Wepener. Everything now depends upon the progress of Gen. French's cavalry brigades, but they are entering a very difficult, hilly and practically unknown country. The cavalry have already had a long march over heavy and sandy roads, and nothing is known regarding the condition of the horses. In any case it is now a race between the federals and the forces of Gen. French and Gen. Hamilton. The slowness of the recent movements of the British infantry and previous experience of the ability of the Boers to move rapidly with guns and baggage over their own country leads to a belief that Lord Roberts' enveloping operations will have to be repeated further north. At the most he will perhaps capture some Boer guns and baggage and harass the retreating burghers. Considerable results have been obtained in the relief of Wepener and in clearing the south-eastern corner of the Free State of Boers, but the Boer army, whatever its strength, has still to be dealt with. Besides the casualties among the men, the Boer bombardment of Col. Dalgety's position wrought great havoc among the cattle and horses. The garrison could have held out for another fortnight; but it is in no condition to render much assistance in pursuing the Boers.

CAN FRENCH CATCH THEM?

London, April 26.—The progress of Gen. French is regarded as of the utmost importance. It is now evident that Lord Roberts wishes not only to defeat the Boers, but to pen them in at Paardeburg. For this end 40,000 British troops are concentrating in the south-eastern portion of the Orange Free State, and are operating according to carefully devised plans, in which the delay may be as much due to strategy as to necessity. The success of this important movement almost entirely depends on Gen. French. If he can sweep down from the north, with the rapidity of execution which he displayed at Kimberley and Paardeburg, he will effect the same swift, sudden transformation which followed the cavalry evolutions two months ago. According to last accounts he was pushing on successfully. Every day the Boers remained at Wepener improved Gen. French's chances of success. To put a girdle round the 5,000 Boers estimated to be in the south-eastern part of the Orange Free State Lord Roberts has evidently taken large chances. The British critics differ regarding the result, some declaring it is already impossible for the Boers to escape from the net.

There is a general impression that the main advance upon Pretoria will be taken up without any reconcentration at Bloemfontein. With more than half the British army stretched in echelon across the Orange Free State such a change in directions would indefinitely delay the accomplishment of Lord Roberts' main objective. The news received to-day has little bearing upon the question of the hour.

AN ARTILLERY DUEL.

Warrenton, Wednesday night, April 25.—The Boers, having become emboldened, shelled the village and the British trenches, and it became necessary to give them a lesson and to ascertain their strength.

Monday night Col. Paget placed several guns on the river bank under cover of darkness, within 1,000 yards of the Boer trenches across the river. The horses and carriages were withdrawn beyond range and at daybreak the British opened a heavy bombardment with shrapnel and heilders.

The Boers were taken completely by surprise, but they replied with five guns, including a 40-pounder, and a heavy rifle fire was opened at the same time. The duel continued many hours, the Boers finally evacuating the position with it, it is believed, considerable loss.

There were no casualties on the British side. During the evening the guns were shelled withdrawn. The sniping to-day showed that the Boer lancers had been removed far back to the eastward.

SAVED BY KAFFIRS.

London, April 25.—The Daily Mail has the following from Lorenzo Marques, dated Wednesday, April 25:—"A daring attempt to destroy the bridge at Komati Poort Sunday night was frustrated by Kaffirs, who gave the alarm and frightened off the Boers. The Boers have lined all the hills in the vicinity with riflemen, fearing an attack by British troops advancing by some mysterious route."

"The Irish-American brigade, chiefly so-called 'ambulance men,' left Pretoria Saturday, under Col. Blake, after being addressed by President Kruger, to whom the men responded with an American college cheer."

"The Boers assert that Lord Roberts is waiting for 20,000 horses. No serious fighting is expected until the end of May."

WAR NOTES.

A special despatch from Pretoria, dated Tuesday, says that the Boers have re-occupied Boshof, the British retreating.

Richter's farm, near Leowu Kop, from which, while flying a white flag, the Canadians were fired upon, has been burned as a punishment. Richter is a prisoner.

There is little news from other quarters than Wepener. The inhabitants of Mafeking are now on a daily ration of two pints of soup and two quarts of 'skilly.'

A despatch to the Daily Mail from Kimberley, dated Wednesday, says:—"Yesterday the Boers formed a new laager near Winderton. The force there consists of Pricks, Campbell and Groganland rebels, about 500 strong."

The Lorenzo Marques correspondent of the Times, telegraphing Tuesday, says:—"It is asserted that the Boers are collecting enormous quantities of provisions at depots in the Lydenburg district, with a view to a final stand in the mountainous districts around Johannesburg and Pretoria are being extensively entrenched. Bega's foundry at Johannesburg is turning out 700 shells a day."

Spencer Wilkinson, in the Morning Post, says:—"The army deployed in the Free State may not be used for a converging attack on Thabanchu. Unless the Boers are in strong position and great numbers there, a more concentric advance may well suffice to compel their retreat. Generals Brabant and Hart are not likely to pursue the Boers retreating in the direction of Ladybrand. These possibilities are all based upon the assumption that the decisive advance has now begun, and that the army was not spread out until it was ready."

THE DYNAMITERS

Expect to Plead That Their Offense was a Political One.

And That They are American Citizens —That, However, Will not Save Them.

Washington, D. C., April 26.—The State Department has heard nothing further from Mr. Brush, the U. S. consul at Clifton, Ont., respecting the attempt to blow up the Welland Canal lock, and consequently no representations touching the nationality of the men now held under arrest on suspicion of complicity in the outrage have been received. Regarding the report that the prisoners intend to set up a claim to protection by the United States, on the ground that they are American citizens, and that the offense charged was political, it is said that such a plea would be of no service. It is true that if the perpetrators of the outrage had escaped to the United States and their American nationality was sought, their American nationality and the plea that their offense was political might be factors of great weight in the disposition of their case. But having been arrested in Canada, where the offense was committed, the men are subject to the operation of Canadian law, as if they were born Canadians, and if they are guilty their American nationality cannot save them from punishment, according to the views of officials here.

A RELIABLE LIST

Of Canadians so far Killed Seems Hard to Get.

His story of Militia says Commanders of Corps are to Blame if They Have no Ammunition.

Ottawa, April 26.—Preliminary to the budget debate there were several interesting discussions in the House yesterday.

Sir Charles Tupper said that since the 15th of March he had been trying to get official information, through the military department of the names of members of the first Canadian contingent who had fallen in battle in South Africa. The Ocean Accident Insurance company had about $40,000 ready to pay out to the heirs or beneficiaries of the men, and were waiting to get an official report of the casualties. He would now ask the minister to cable Lord Strathcona and request him to get information from the war office.

Dr. Borden replied that upon receiving Sir Charles Tupper's letter on March 15th he wrote to the war office and subsequently cabled, but to this moment had received no official statement. He regretted it, but it was no fault of his. He had been informed, however, that other insurance companies had paid over the risks at once upon the information which the militia department had been able to furnish, and which ought to be satisfactory.

Sir Charles Tupper said that the information received at the department was unreliable. The department had reported men dead who had not died.

and reported men as killed who were wounded. Therefore the company requested a correct list.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised to ask the governor general to communicate with the war office. He regarded the production of the company as justifiable.

The minister of militia was absent from the house on Tuesday when the Welland Canal outrage was under discussion. Accordingly he took the opportunity of making what explanation he could of the fact that when the men of the 19th Battalion were turned out on Sunday to protect the canal they had not a single bullet cartridge for their rifles. Dr. Borden said, in reply to Mr. McCreary's statement to that effect, that if there were no cartridges, as alleged, the officer commanding the battalion was actively to blame. A militia general order issued in 1898, which the minister read, provided that officers commanding battalions, shall supply themselves with 50 rounds per rifle, which must be at all times kept at regimental headquarters.

JONES SMILEY THE BOY WHO HAD NO FRIENDS.

A NEW ENGLAND TALE.
By the Author of "Saudra."

Suddenly the apparition of some unexpected object broke his reverie. "Well, I declare!" he exclaimed—why no it ain't—and yet it is too, as sure as my name is Bije Underwood!" and clapping the hat upon his head which he had held in his hand that his temples might be fanned by the morning breeze, the Deacon stumped briskly down the hill, and met the emigrant, just as he had turned, on foot, up to the house, and was about to apply for admittance. The Deacon commenced the conversation:

"There hunt no accident nor nothing happened to you, I hope?" The good old man had forgotten entirely the unkind thoughts against the stranger with which he had been in common with the village, he let him depart on the previous day.

The emigrant shook his head. The Deacon had by this time filled a brimming mug of cider, which he pressed upon the stranger, while he pursued his inquiry:

"You ain't lost nothing, nor left nothing behind you—and nothing has been stole, I do trust, in Hardscrabble. But that there dumb Jone Smiley, a little impudently as he sat down the mug, to the contents of which, as was the ante-breakfast custom in those days, he had done justice. The Deacon put away the drinking cup, with a true landlord's eye to business, and apparently lost in wonder at the emigrant's return, pushed his half-questioning remark:

"But you are out early, and afoot, and on the back track too—it beats me out and out to know what it can be."

"That is just what I've come to tell you, and I come early because I've a long journey to go, and no time to spare, and because I did want to see you alone."

I come afoot to spare my horse with his day's work before him. I don't mind a six mile walk, and a merciful man is merciful to his beast, you know."

The stranger had, with Yankee shrewdness, blocked up all chance for further cross-questioning, and the Deacon had nothing to do but to sit as patiently as he could, and listen. The stranger resumed:

"Well, it's about that boy, Jone, or Jonathan Smiley."

"Possible!" ejaculated the Deacon, in undisguised wonder. "And you've walked clear back to Hardscrabble, at this time in the morning, to say that?"

The stranger merely nodded in answer to the interruption, and proceeded:

"You've seen more of the lad than I have, but a man can sometimes guess as much in half an hour, as he could see in half a lifetime. His mother is a poor widow woman, and I judge you'll agree with me that the boy will never come to nothing, if he stays rambling about here, and taking his own head in every thing."

"That's just the conclusion I'd come to," said the Deacon, now beginning to feel his official importance, "and I was just going to have something done about it this very day."

"Yes," said the other, "but what kind of a something? I heard you talk your terday about the workhouse, or the county jail. Is that doing justly as you'd be done by? Now, allowing you had a son, a little bit wild or so, is that the way you'd thank anybody for curing him for you?"

The muscles about the Deacon's eyes twitched a little, while the emigrant waited for his answer. The Deacon spoke, but evaded the question by another: "But where is the creature? Does any body know, I wonder? We haven't heard high and low last night, and couldn't find him nor hair of him, and his mother went away from here in a terrible taking. I wonder if she found him to home?"

"No," answered the emigrant.

"Possible! I wonder if he dared to stay out all night! Well, there are some children who beat all for wickedness. To torment his mother, and the whole town so! It's right down wicked! But I guess you could tell us some news if you would."

Without heeding this sagacious adventure the stranger answered, "Dared to stay away! A dumb beast dare to keep out of the reach of kicks and cuffs, if he could, and shall not a reasonable creature dare to keep whole bones in his skin if he knows enough to try? Why, Deacon, I don't suppose you can see it, and I don't believe that you would wrong a fly if you knew it; but that child has been abused here beyond all account, and the very mother that bore him has had her ears filled till she's e'en-a-most lost all natural affection."

The Deacon shook his head. "He's a bad boy—a dreadful bad boy—terribly obstreperous. And to crown all, to think of his e'en just killing Peltiah Perkins. What a dreadful thing that would have been, if his strength had been as good as his will! But I reckon, talking about killing ears, that he's put something into your'n besides cotton-wool."

"Deacon Underwood, that boy hasn't often had a chance to speak to any body that would back to his story. I reckon by the way he talked to me, and if he isn't a tongue alone that is his witness. The whole of his body, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, is one black and blue spot, and the warts on his back are as thick as my thumb, and as close together as the hoops on your cider barrel."

Peltiah Perkins did thrash him peckily, that's a fact," said the Deacon. "He beat him like a brute—worse than a brute. And after all, Deacon, it wasn't him that was to blame about the cow, I do believe, and I know he didn't throw the stone. He was on the left-hand side of Peltiah Perkins, over the fence, and it don't stand to reason he could fling a rock, and hit him on the right side of his head. I took notice of that last night, and he Little Margaret was called. A kind question or two from the emigrant, and an approving look from the Deacon brought out the whole truth. It was hard to decide which was best pleased with the Deacon's admissions in favor of Jone, Margaret or the stranger.

Her story finished, Margaret hastened away, lest the treble screech of her mistress should be ringing through the house for her; but where Jone, and Jone kindly spoken of, was far from the scene of the dispute, she would gladly have listened to the last, if she had dared. But the acquittal of Jone, while it really gratified the Deacon, placed him in a quandary. He knew the bitterness of his wife, the "poor" behind the thrane, and the last he knew the general tenor of public opinion, as he had sided to form it against Jone; and he knew that to throw the Perkins into the wrong, and to show that they had abused poor Jone, would make that story finished, more the poor boy's enemies than ever. "What shall I do with him?" at length he asked. "As you say he will never come to anything in this place."

"I'll take him," said the stranger.

"You?"

"Yes. Just now, as overseer of the poor, you was going to send him to the workhouse. You don't want to do that now. Send for his mother, bind him out to me, and I'll take him west, and make a man of him."

The Deacon deliberated within himself. At length he said, hesitatingly, "Mister—er—I don't so much as know your name."

"Mr. Berry, I do know your name now, but I don't know no more about your character than about the man in the street. The Deacon took a turn the other way about the room, and offering his hand to the stranger, pressed it warmly, and continued: "Last night, if a parcel of Ishmaelites had come along, I do believe the Lord might have left me in my sin, to sell that boy to go down into Egypt—but the truth is, you've touched and reprimanded him knowing it. I have a son of my own—my only child, and Heaven only knows how he will end. But," said the Deacon, dashing away a tear with the back of his hand, "we'll let that go. I believe you're a right up and down good man, and I'd put my own life and happiness in your hands without a doubt if so be it was necessary. But God is the judge between me and this poor fellow, and you have been the means, in my hands, of opening my eyes to my responsibilities, and my heart to pity."

The stranger mused a moment.

"If you could only go with me to the next village."

"Certainly I can!" said the Deacon, his face at once brightening up, "and just so sartainly I will. I'll have the horse put into a wagon, and after breakfast we'll drive down there, a little quicker than you walked up; and Mrs. Smiley shall go along, too, and poor little Jone shall have with him, any how, her to take west with him, any how, as you mean to give me a son."

erence, of course, but that's between us. It's reason enough to tell the folks for my going down, that I do it to bring back Ma'am Smiley."

A messenger was forthwith despatched for Mrs. Smiley, and in a few moments all was arranged, as far as her consent was concerned. She hurried home to pack poor Jone's little effects, and left the Deacon and her boy's new master to finish their breakfast, and call for her with the wagon. At breakfast, Mrs. Berry joy of his Jone, whereat Mr. Berry smiled, and the Deacon bit his nether lip. But Mr. B. was not swayed by trifles, and Deacon Underwood had heard his wife talk before. They were seated in the wagon. Margaret ran out, placed a parcel in Mr. Berry's hand, and had just time to say, "It's for him!" when "Margaret!" came from the house, and Mrs. Underwood's well-known fall in Mrs. Underwood's well-known fall in the wagon rolled from the door the little girl ran back into the house, and bent all her thoughts to her mistress's requirements. She struggled hard, and conquered her feelings for the hour; but at the first pause in her daily work, she slipped out to the trysting-place beneath the tree—the spot where accident had decided Jone's future fortune. There she cried till her little senses were so confused that she fancied Jone, too, was present, and crying on the other side of the fence. "Margaret! you Margaret!" again pursued her, and hastily drying her eyes, the little true lover—none the less true that she was little—hastened to repair her diligence. The whole hour she had lost in certain kind of tears, as well as in joy, time flies apace.

CHAPTER IV.
The West! Where is it? Once bounded by the limits of the Atlantic States, then as new state after state was formed, limited by the Mississippi, at the time of our tale, however, the Great West, comparatively little of it as had been settled, seemed more vast than at present; for while, no one dreamed of the territory upon which they entered. Nor were these great expectations to be tested without great sacrifices. No railroads made the desire to travel and the accomplishment efforts of mind and body almost simultaneous. The canal had not intersected the country with its easy and cheap means of conveyance. Turnpikes even were almost unknown, and through tracts of country where thousands of travelers now rush with almost lightning speed, the emigrant laboriously worked his way through what were barely paths in the forest, in which the blow of his own axe might not unfrequently be necessary to facilitate his progress. Men departed for where children might be born to them, whose children would perhaps find the comforts of civilized life coming out to them in the desert. If any of these pioneers have found themselves surrounded with more dearest neighbors than they dared hope their grandchildren would live among, it was more than the most sanguine prophets among them would have ventured to predict.

Throwing sort feed upon the ground is poor economy. Troughs or smooth boards cost little and are not only much cleaner, but avoid waste of feed.

Young chickens will eat wheat when 2 weeks old, and, as it is one of the very best grains that can be given for growth, it is quite an item to feed them liberally with it.

In mating always endeavor to use active, vigorous cocks. Do not select the largest and heaviest. Sacrifice points for vigor. Mate 1-year-old cocks with 2-year-old hens.

The best turkeys for breeding are those 2 years old. The earliest hatched males and females should be selected. It is of no advantage to hatch them too early.

BITS FROM SHELDON.
Gifts that involve no sacrifice return neither happiness nor pleasure. Where the body is wrung with pain, where it is filled with disease, one cannot be happy.

Doctors head the list of suicides, because they see the ill side of life—its physical side.

We here in America seem to have evolved in the course of our fast living a disease that once was not known—nervous prostration.

It is always very hard to tell which of these two is the more miserable man on earth—the discontented rich or the penniless beggar.

The little child who buys tin toys for a cent in the stores gets more pleasure out of giving them to some other little child than the rich man who ostentatiously gives presents worth thousands of dollars.—Rev. Charles M. Sheldon.

THE ART OF WAR.
For the first time in the history of the British army there is actually a desire among officers that commissions should be given men who have served in the ranks.

The mounted police of Cape Colony are picked men, used to fighting and proud of the high reputation of their corps. The force consists of 2,000 enlisted men and 68 officers.

Twelve pounds only is the weight of the new automatic machine gun under experiment in the United States army. It fires 450 shots a minute and can be carried by one man.

Russia is probably the only country that could raise a regiment composed entirely of generals, who number 1,248. They receive in salaries an aggregate of 7,000,000 rubles a year.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.
In escaping from a fire creep or crawl along the room with your face close to the floor.

To fasten labels to tin canisters add one teaspoonful of brown sugar to one quart of water.

Eat in haste and suffer at leisure.

GAME DIDN'T WORK.

A couple of youths got on the train at Coteau and thought they would play sharp by not paying their fare. Detective Skirving of the Lake Erie was notified and went down and interviewed them. They paid and were promised a hearing before a magistrate should they repeat the offense.

SMOTHERED OUT BY GAS.

It seems that when the late court house and jail improvements took place, no provision, except the old-fashioned one of opening the windows, was made for ventilation. In some way also the gas pipes were disturbed and last night the place commenced to fill up with gas. Justice Falconbridge declined to put up with that kind of thing. He wanted pure air and not by the window methods either. He directed the sheriff to hold court in Harrison Hall to-day. His Lordship also commented severely on leaving such important machinery as involved in heating lighting and ventilating a court house to an irresponsible body like a county council committee. The sheriff immediately sent for Plumber John Watt and directed him to go to work, stop the gas leaks, put the court house atmosphere in sanitary condition and send his bill to the county. This is why the court is to-day sitting in Harrison Hall.

THE LATE HIRAM CHRYSLER.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of a well-known citizen in the person of Hiram Chrysler. Mr. Chrysler was born in the United States 72 years ago but came to Kent and settled in Dover when he was only thirty years of age. In 1867 he moved into Chatham and continued to reside here up to the time of his death. Mr. Chrysler was a Methodist in religion, and a Conservative in politics. He was always a good citizen and was held in the greatest esteem. The deceased leaves five children—Richard and William, of Chatham, and John, of Brockville, sons; and Mrs. Hubert Murphy and Mrs. Darwin Plette, of this city, daughters. A brother, John, resides in Dover and another brother, Fred, in Quebec. Mr. Chrysler was only ill about ten days, pleuro-pneumonia being the cause of death. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 from the residence of deceased's son, William, at the corner of Lacroix street and Lorne avenue. The Rev. Dr. Hanson will officiate.

LIONS IN ESSEX.

Three Said to Have Been Seen in Colchester by Two Farmers.

Windsor, April 25.—Three lions are alleged to be roaming through the woods in Colchester South, Essex county. Several days ago, a man residing in that township was passing through the woods when he noticed three animals jump into the road in front of him. They appeared to be bewildered, and on catching sight of him, turned and ran into the woods again. He reported the occurrence to a neighbor, and a week later, it is declared, that three lions—a male, female and cub—were seen. The news of the presence of the animals soon spread, and none of the farmers would venture out of their houses after dark. Yesterday 18 young men of the locality armed themselves with rifles and shotguns, and commenced hunting for the animals, but up to last night no reports had been received concerning the men or lions. No information as to how such animals ever came into the woods can be secured.

THE MILNER CASE

THE DEFENCE.

Daniel Finisterre was the first witness called for the defence. He said he had lived in Chatham for 30 years and knew Orange. He said he saw him in the carpenter shop of Cucksey & Pritchard at the beginning of September, when Orange said "I took a bottle from home and went to see Milner in the park, but could not find him and left the bottle."

Cross-examined by Mr. Heyd, witness admitted a series of police court offences, some eight in number, besides those settled out of court. Witness admitted being occasionally "natty" and not responsible for what he said and did. The defence then alluded to Orange, was not talking to witness, but to two strangers. Witness heard Orange talking for fifteen minutes, but could not hear anything else he said, except the words in question.

To Mr. Johnson witness said his police court experiences were the result of liquor.

A WINDSOR SLASHING AFFRAY.

At Windsor Lord Phillips last night was severely slashed Charles Bird with a razor that he is likely to die. Both are colored, and the row occurred at the home of Mr. White, on Windsor avenue. The story is that Mrs. Phillips had been circulating stories about Mrs. Bird, and Bird visited the Phillips home to reconstitute. They all adjourned to the White home, and in the altercation that ensued Phillips slashed Bird with a razor, giving him a cut on the left side from the temple to the chin, as well as on the neck and forehead. This morning, when the police were refused admission to the Phillips' home, they broke in and arrested him. Bird is an employee of the Ferry Company, and Phillips works in Detroit, but lives on Windsor avenue.

LEFT HURRIEDLY.

Boers Had not Time to Bury Their Dead in the Trenches.

London, April 26.—All interest is now centered in the running fight in progress between the burghers retreating from the southern portion of the Orange Free State and Gen. French's horsemen and the infantry of Gen. Buller. The British hope of conclusive results is slim at present, the Boers occupying unbroken and having accomplished an immense amount of damage. They clung to their positions as long as it was safe to do so, and have now slipped off to hold the next commanding ridge, through a broken country admirably suited for a rear-guard defence.

Despatches from Alval North, under date of Wednesday, April 25, say the Boers left Wepster so hurriedly that many of the dead were left in the trenches unburied. Commandant S. Cronje is reported to have been killed. According to advices from Bloemfontein, the attempt of the Boers at Brandfort to get in touch with the command at Tlhabane was frustrated by a force despatched by General Tucker, from Glen. A despatch from Pretoria reports the arrival there of Lord Rosslyn as an uninvited prisoner.

IN HOT PURSUIT.

A special from Dewetsdorp dated yesterday, says:—Owing to the approach of General French, so hurriedly that many of the dead were left in the trenches unburied. Commandant S. Cronje is reported to have been killed. According to advices from Bloemfontein, the attempt of the Boers at Brandfort to get in touch with the command at Tlhabane was frustrated by a force despatched by General Tucker, from Glen. A despatch from Pretoria reports the arrival there of Lord Rosslyn as an uninvited prisoner.

FROM MAKEPENG.

London, April 25.—The War Office has received the following from Lord Roberts: Bloemfontein, April 25.—Good news from Baden-Powell up to April 10. MacLaren much better. All the wounded doing well. The Boers captured several native women who were trying to escape from Makepeng, but these were turned back after being stripped and jumbled.

BOER WORKS BLOWN UP.

Pretoria, Wednesday, April 25.—A serious explosion occurred at the Boer works, used by the government as an arsenal last night. The walls of the building were destroyed and the structures in the neighborhood were blown a mass of flames. The shrieks of women and children in the adjoining streets added to the ghastliness of the scene.

Ten workmen were killed and 32 were injured, including Herr Grunberg, the manager of the works. The most important of the machinery was saved.

FIRES IN OTTAWA AND HULL.

Bad fires are reported raging in the business sections of Ottawa and Hull, damage will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. The fire brigades are utterly unable to fight the flames with any degree of success.

THE MILNER CASE.

Barber Orange Tells His Story
In the Box

Concerning the Fire in His Shop—
A Searching Cross-Examination—The Crown's Corroborative Evidence.

The case against Rufus Milner for arson was taken up at the assize court yesterday afternoon.

The following jury were empanelled:—
Jas. McWilliam, W. J. Stinson, John Skagge, Jas. Paris, Edgar French, John C. Jenner, David Forsyth, Elliott Hardy, J. R. Palmer, Henry Ennett, Jr., H. Myers, P. O. Dawson.

The crown asked six jurymen to stand aside, while the defence challenged four. One, who was accepted, made application to be excused, owing to personal relations with the parties interested. His request was granted by the judge.

Louis Heyd, Q. C., appeared for the crown and E. F. B. Johnson, Q. C., Toronto, and Ward Staworth for the defence.

Before the commencement of the case, Mr. Johnson complained that one of his witnesses, one Miligan, a barber of London, had refused service and declined to attend the trial. The judge instructed the sheriff to send an officer to London for the man.

ORANGE'S EVIDENCE.

George H. Orange, barber, now of West Lorne, was the first witness. Orange told almost exactly the same story as at the preliminary investigation and the former trial.

Very few new points having important bearing on the case were brought out.

THE CROSS-EXAMINATION.

When Mr. Johnson, for the defence, began his cross-examination of Orange it was evident that the witness was going to have anything but a pleasant time. He admitted to Mr. Johnson that he had never been in the shop of his transactions with Milner until the officers of the law got him in their clutches. He had carried around with him the guilty knowledge of the owner's desire and intention to burn the shop, but he never told Waugh, the owner, or the police. This was because he knew that Milner had him in his power and he was afraid of being turned out of his shop.

There was no agreement in writing between himself and Milner to the effect that the latter had bought his shop furnishings for him.

Mr. Johnson produced a receipt signed by Orange and held by Milner for $175. This document had been torn up but the signature remained intact, only two pieces being lost. Orange admitted the signature but swore that he never signed a document with such contents. He had paid two notes held against him by Jones Bros., in April with $150 which he had received from Milner.

At this juncture a wordy contest took place between the opposing counsel. After their little differences had been temporarily adjusted, Orange, continuing, said that before the fire Milner had come into the shop and, standing four or five feet from the head of the man whom witness was shaving, had in his hand a bottle of kerosene and had put a bottle of kerosene in a drawer. The customers could have seen Milner place the bottle there. Orange did not know why Milner did not do the job himself in the first place, as he had plenty of opportunities. A map of the building was here produced and Orange admitted the accuracy of the drawing.

Witness denied having been on a big bench about two weeks before the fire, but acknowledged that he had been drunk in the early part of June. He had got on a last night in December and had gone over to Windsor. It was not true that he was accustomed to remain away from his business for days at a time owing to drunkenness. He and his wife got drunk together, since the fire, for some time, and he would not swear that he had, during the past year, contributed as much as $100 toward her support.

Several discrepancies between witness' sworn statements at this and the former trial were brought out by Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Heyd objected to the counsel for the defence's actions in making comments upon the questions and answers, and also took exception to the admission of evidence given by witness at the last trial.

Mr. Johnson—My learned friend is becoming afraid.

Mr. Heyd submitted that my learned friend had not adhered to my objection, in which I claim I am supported by the law applying to the case.

His lordship overruled the objection on technical grounds and certain portions of the former evidence were admitted.

A conversation between witness and prisoner at the Milner factory, when the latter instructed the former as to how the drafts were to be arranged for the fire, was detailed at length. Mr. Johnson, thinking that Orange was attempting to throw too large a share of the responsibility upon Milner's shoulders, pointed dramatically to the prisoner in the box and cried:

"You want to send this man down, don't you, although he was formerly your friend? You were willing to be friendly with any man who would lend you $150."

Orange—It was his own suggestion. Mr. Heyd—I submit that my learned friend was right to ask questions, but not to make invidious comments. Then followed a string of objections, heated arguments and answers, until his lordship remarked that the learned counsel had better make an attempt to get along amicably, and if this were impossible they might do so unpleasantly, but business must be expedited.

Continuing, Mr. Johnson called the attention of the jury to the fact that Orange had sworn that Milner unlocked the door on the Saturday morning when the fire took place. He then took up the witness' evidence at the adjourned trial, which reads: "I had just got there and unlocked the door when Milner came in and said, 'I want a razor and put it in my pocket.'"

Orange said that he had not sworn to this last statement. Witness swears now that he stropped a razor on that Sunday morning. At the previous trial he said, "I went in, picked up a razor and put it in my pocket."

Witness now says that this is also a misstatement. On the Sunday morning in question he was outside the shop, letting down the awning, for seven or eight minutes, while Milner was inside. If prisoner set the fire at all he was doing so then, but he did not see him through the window. Witness had got two bottles of kerosene from prisoner previous to the Saturday night before the fire.

Under the continued cross-examination by Mr. Johnson, Orange stated that he had seen Mr. Waugh on the morning after the fire. He had asked the witness if he had any insurance. The witness had said that he had not and that he didn't know whether the prisoner had the stock insured or not. After some time spent in an effort to tangle Orange up as to dates, Mr. Johnson asked the witness if while Mr. Johnson was in front of Cudmore's livery stable on the market he had made any statement in regard to the fire. Orange answered in the negative.

Did you tell Walter Chapman that you would do anything to screen yourself?

No.

Did you talk with Lewis Andrews about the fire?

I don't think so.

Did you say to him that if you could get money from Milner you would get out of the country?

No.

Do you know Daniel Finniester?

I know who he is.

Did you have a talk with Finniester near the Merrill Hotel in which you said that you had taken the bottle of kerosene from behind a tree in the park and gone away because you couldn't find Milner?

No.

Let me see, you were quite a church man, were you not, all this time? Went to church regularly and took part in the meetings, and this is the kind of company we find you in? Then you always said your prayers, drunk or sober?

Orange acknowledged that he had done all these things.

Orange under continued cross-examination, gave a history of his life and also denied telling William Tuck, at Glenora, that he had Milner in a fix.

Mr. Heyd then re-examined Orange who swore on the witness stand about three and a half hours.

MRS. ORANGE testified that Milner was at the house on the Sunday night mentioned by her husband.

Manager Schofield testified that Milner had power of attorney from his father and that his father had $30,000 credits at the Standard Bank.

Frank Weldon, insurance agent, testified that Milner had had the barber's outfit insured, and he had stated when insuring that the stuff was worth $800.

Bank Clerk Creighton, of the Standard Bank, corroborated Orange's testimony as to the amount he passed into the bank.

Heb. Northwood gave evidence that Milner had come into the barber shop with a package on the Saturday night preceding the fire. But he didn't take it out with him.

Alex. Gregory corroborated Orange as to Milner coming down to Orange's house on the Sunday night.

Ed. Taylor was called to corroborate Orange when he said he had paid Taylor part of the money he received. Taylor said that he could not remember Orange paying him any of it. Taylor was ordered to produce his books when court resumed in the morning.

James Waugh gave evidence that he was the owner of the building, and showed the position of the fire.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Judge Houston was first called in the Milner case. He said in taking the preliminary examination evidence he might not have submitted his writing to the witness after hearing.

Edward Taylor was called and gave evidence concerning the dates and circumstances of the fire, also concerning Orange's dealings with him.

H. W. Anderson and W. H. Brackin were called and gave evidence that Milner and Orange were in consultation on the Saturday evening before the fire in the latter's barber shop.

Foreman Rich, Pritchard, of the fire department, testified as to the nature and putting out of the fire.

M. J. McCarthy and James Ronson, bankers, gave evidence of negotiations by Milner and Orange to sell out the latter's shop.

Officer Thos. Groves testified to the arrest of Orange and to the conversation he had with Milner, in which the prisoner said he had not a scratch of the pen against Orange, but lent money repeatedly and did not know how much insurance he had on the material, but thought it was about $800.

Wm. Heney, porter at the Merrill, testified to the fire below his sleeping apartment, but did not know how it originated.

Witness now says that this is also a misstatement. On the Sunday morning

Where do you Get Shirts

There are always plenty of men that wonder where other men get their shirts. We don't know, and it took us a long time to find out just what to do about the shirt question.

It took us a long time, but, after many trials, we found a shirt that was a shirt and its quality and goodness has ever been maintained.

We make in our own factory flannelettes, unlaundered, black sateen and duck shirts, but the shirts we are talking about are WHITE SHIRTS and DRESS SHIRTS laundered and ready to wear, and the collars and cuffs that go with them.

Go with them! You know it is—the difficulty of getting a shirt and then finding a collar that will have anything to do with it. That shirt and that collar and the cuffs to go with it, are here. SHIRTS that ARE acquainted with the COLLARS
