Near-Sightedness

Uncorrected by glasses, imposes a severe tax on the eyes, which are needlessly weakened by the strain involved in trying to misuse them. Defects in vision grow, like weeds, without cultivation, and it's dangerous to overlook them. Whatever may be thought of a tax on income, a tax on the sight will never do, as it is apt to leave taxers out of sight. Should you need glasses, better have your eyes tested and fitted at once. Jeanne d'Arc's Feast Day.

For weeks before May 8 the feast of Blessed Jeanne d'Arc, the French bishops seized every opportunity of impressing upon their flock the duty of celebrating the feast of their national heroine with due honor. Mgr. Touchet, Bishop of Orleans, aptly pointed out that this year the feast fell upon the exact anniversary of the deliverance of their city; he added that it was the citizens of Orleans who through years of oblivion, neglect and calumny, preserved the tradition of her holiness and, unlike many of their countrymen, never wavered in their belief in her heavenly mission. It is owing, he said, to the historians of Orleans and to the deeply-rooted traditions of its inhabitants that the memory of the heroine, forgotten by medieval writers and disfigured by modern sceptics, has been handed down in all its simplicity, purity and grandeur.

The feast at Orleans was, this year, somewhat marred by the weather. However, on May 6, the traditional ceremony took place the mayor placed the maid's standard in the hands of the bishop, who stood on the threshold of the cathedral. In spite of the ill-will of the Government, this ceremony continues as before to excite much enthusiasm. Replying to the mayor's address, Mgr. Touchet regretted that the army should now be prohibited from joining the Church to honor the national heroine, adding that when he spoke thus he expressed his feelings as a Frenchman as well as a bishop. The next day, M. l'abbé Gaudet preached Jeanne's panegyric. He drew a comparison between the material perils of the France that Jeanne helped to deliver and the perils that, at the present time, threaten its very existence as a Catholic nation; concluding that the Blessed Maid must again be called upon to save her country.

The procession then took place but it was less numerous than usual. The municipal Council took part in it, but the civil and local societies and associations kept aloof, while the army had a separate military function in the afternoon. "One freely realized the want of union that exists," says a newspaper reporter. By its narrow sectarian prejudices, the Government has shorn a unique celebration of its picturesque and original, besides inflicting a gratuitous insult upon the Church. Since Jeanne d'Arc has been raised to the altar she has become a "clerical" and her past services are ignored by the atheists who control French politics.

In Paris, preparations on a large scale were made, and, as early as the morning of May 7 blue flags with Jeanne's portrait, the Papal standard, white and yellow, the familiar tricolor and fac similes of the Maid's famous banner with its magic words: "Jesus, Maria," were flying gaily from many windows. Then came, like a thunderbolt, the news that Edward VII had died the night before. This was followed by a notice sent to the newspapers by the archbishop, requesting Catholics, as a mark of sympathy with the mourning of a friendly nation, to abstain from decorating and illuminating as they had intended to do, but to be all the more zealous in celebrating the feast within the churches. The archbishop's tactful act must appeal to the English people, and in many a Paris church prayers were offered up in private for the dead king.

If the feast of the heroine was thus deprived of some of its outward splendor in Paris, the churches were crowded throughout the day. They had been appropriately decorated with banners upon which were inscribed the most glorious dates of her short life and the places most closely connected with her memory: Vaucouleurs, Orleans, Reims, Rouen, Rome. At Notre Dame, her panegyric was preached by l'abbé Sarrillanges, in presence of the archbishop and of the principal leaders of the Catholic party.

In the provinces, fetes in honor of the national heroine continue to take place and often assume a picturesque form, appealing strongly to the emotional and artistic side of the French temperament. These manifestations have a twofold advantage; they bring home Jeanne's story to the uneducated, whose imagination is struck by the pageants of which she is the central figure; they also frequently create a feeling of good fellowship between persons of different rank; and this, in small provincial centres, has a deeper and happier meaning than might be supposed. In a little town in northern France, for example, a fete of this kind was organized on the occasion of a mission; women and young girls of all ranks worked hard in hand, and the working class was given an appropriate part in the procession. The church, usually empty, was filled to overflowing and the preacher attributed much of the spiritual victories that crowned his efforts to the cordial good will created by the celebrations in honor of the Maid. This instance is but one example out of many of Jeanne's happy influence in the land she loved so well.

French literature experienced a severe loss, when on the 28th of March last the Vicomte Eugene Melchior de Vogue, a member of the French Academy, died almost suddenly in Paris. He was the first to introduce Russian literature to his countrymen and his studies on Russian history are more interesting than any novel. His marriage with a Russian gave him an insight into the intimate life of a country whose language, history and literature were, at that time, almost unknown to outsiders.

Modern Literature.

The day has gone by when the discussion was between Christian and Christian; it is now a stand-up fight, a fierce struggle, every day becoming more fierce, between faith and infidelity. A spurious philosophy has prevailed under one name or another in every age, from the days of Democritus down to our own; but it has received recently an impetus from the teachings of Materialism. Emboldened by their success in research, the professors of the Materialistic school have attempted to lift the mysterious veil of nature, and have challenged the truths of Revelation on the most fundamental principles of the Christian creed.

In fact the Materialistic theories which to-day defy reason and make matter eternal, and which recognize in matter the principle and perfection of every form of life, are the substratum underlying almost every species of modern literature. It is this Materialistic philosophy in the trappings of popular literature which is filling the earth with crime and making the lives of men a veritable inferno. Its pernicious influence has been stealing over the minds of men till it has succeeded in shaking to its centre the whole fabric of social life in almost every civilized country.

The religious works of the European continent have been translated into English, and circulated in every variety of form from the most ornate to the cheapest and most accessible. They are on the counters in the department stores, in the most flashing advertisements where their most praiseworthy qualities are held out as inducements to the buyer. Nor are works of a similar spirit and tendency wanting in our own literature. And these works, adapted to every class of readers, and to every grade of intellect revive the old errors while fertile in the production of new ones, flatter the pride of the understanding, stimulate the passions of the heart, and diffuse their poison in every department of human learning and through every form of publication by which the popular mind can be reached.

An evil press, largely circulated and read by many who suspect no evil, is rapidly sapping the faith of the multitudes. Unfortunately there exists in our nature a propensity to evil. Whatever flatters our passions or vicious inclinations, as, a rule, are readier to follow than what is good and virtuous. Hence we find that bad books are more generally read than good ones, and that newspapers wherein religion and morality are outraged, have a very wide circulation. If anything more than bad example tends to propagate vice, it is bad reading. Vice in itself is odious, but when decked out in the false coloring of a cleverly written book it becomes enticing. Young inquisitive people—and young people are generally inquisitive—are tempted.

After perusing such a book their horror of vice is much lessened, they take up another; and so, by degrees, their ideas become perverted. Nearly all men agree that it is the familiarity with vice which develops all the immoral and vicious propensities of human nature, and it is this familiarity with the face of vice which is so contagious, and draws so many into the vortex of crime in the large cities while its absence keeps country life so pure and untroubled.

It is indeed hard to say which is the more dangerous among books—those which are written professedly against Christ, His Church and His laws, or the furtive and stealthy literature which is perpetrated through and through with unbelief and passion, false principles, immoral whispers and inflaming imaginations. To read such books is a moral contagion—it is to imbibe poison—it is certain spiritual death.

It is certainly a melancholy reflection, that any such books should be extant amongst us. It is sad to think that any of the human species should have so far lost all sense of shame, all feelings of conscience, as to sit down deliberately and compile a work entirely in the cause of vice and immorality, which, for anything they know, may serve to pollute the minds of millions, and to propagate contagion and iniquity through generations yet unborn—living, and spreading its baneful influence long after the unhappy hand that wrote it is mouldering in the dust.

It is a striking observation made by one of the Fathers of the Church that "as the authors of good books may hope to find their future crown lightened by the degree of wisdom and virtue which their writings impart through successive generations, so the writers of evil books may well dread an increase of punishment in the future world proportionate to the pollution which they spread, and the evil effects which their writings shall produce as long as they continue to be read."

To what frightful deserts must the writers of modern literature look forward in accordance with such a prediction! The literature of to-day, light and popular, stately and philosophical alike, teems with immorality and infidelity. It displays itself in every form of poetry and prose, in lectures, essays, histories, and in biblical criticism. There it stands palpable and terrible, like Milton's Death, black and horrible, obstructing the light of heaven, and overshadowing God's fair creation. The Press is a Catholic institution; a Catholic invented it; a Catholic first printed books, and the Catholic Church first fostered it. But the enemies of Catholicity have seized it and turned it into an engine of destruction to faith and morals.

The newspapers in most cases teem with scandals which absorb the thoughts or arouse the passions. Such reading familiarizes the young with the details of vice, and their better nature is overshadowed by the vicious examples pictured, while the moral strength to resist temptation is slowly but surely weakened. Then there is that inward strife and struggle—that warring of the passions from which no one is free—that tendency to evil which seeks to cast off the salutary restraints of religion, and which has carried down with the current of innate corruption the greater part of mankind. All these things are borne in upon the soul, day by day, and year by year, as though life were to last forever, until the unhappy reader begins to abandon the absolute realities of life and law and to dwell in the house of a diseased imagination like a leper waiting for the moment of final dissolution.

What we want thus to-day is an arousing of the Catholic conscience in this regard, the cultivation of Catholic instincts, and the acquiring of Catholic habits of thought. While the banners of atheism and anarchy are waving throughout Europe, the forces of infidelity and indifference are doing their deadly work at home. The spirit of revolt, born of corruption and bred of disease, has swept across the ocean and finds a resting place wherever home. The enemy has laid hold of a great part of the press and is using it for the destruction of morality and the perversion of truth. The wells of knowledge and the fountains of truth are being daily and hourly poisoned by means of the current literature. A spiritual pestilence is passing over the earth, and the souls of millions are perishing through its foul agencies.

If God, therefore, has given to Catholics wealth of ability and strength of mind, and richness of opportunity to engage in the intellectual combat which is being fought everywhere around us, they ought to use these means to oppose the tide of infidelity and indifference which is sweeping over the nations by putting against it the barrier of good books and Catholic reading. In many quarters the mist is beginning to lift; many intelligent people are beginning to look to the Catholic Church because of her openly proclaimed doctrines, her magnificent works in building up the mighty fabric of the social world, and her lofty ideals of humanity. Secularism in education is confessing its failure at home and abroad. The toiling masses are turning to the Church for the solution of the vexed problems of labor. The creeds are falling to pieces for want of unity, cohesive principle and authority. Thousands are flocking back to the old Church in sheer weariness of spirit. The thousands would swell into millions if we were up and active in the dissemination of good books, and did our part in helping on the cause of Catholic literature. The Catholic book, the Catholic magazine, the Catholic newspaper is the fiery cross spread from base to base, to light up the darkness and to kindle the faith of the multitudes.—The Tablet.

Could Not Sleep In The Dark.

Doctor Said Heart and Nerves Were Responsible.

There is many a man and woman tossing night after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Mrs. Calvin Stark, Rosemont, Ont., writes:—"About two years ago I began to be troubled with a most distressing condition at night, when I would lie down. I got so bad I could not sleep in the dark, and would have to sit up and rub my limbs, they would become so numb. My doctor said my heart and nerves were responsible. I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised and got a box to try them. I took three boxes and can now lie down and sleep without the light burning and can rest well. I can recommend them highly to all nervous and run down women."

Reciprocity Not Wanted.

II

In our last issue, while reviewing the address of the Premier of New Brunswick before the Intercolonial Club of Boston, we quoted statistics presented by him to show the progress Canada had made in her trade relations since 1878, and from this data, as well as from the feeling largely predominating in the Dominion, drew the conclusion that Canada has little or nothing to gain from reciprocity with the United States.

During the twelve years from 1854 to 1866, while the treaty between the two countries existed, reciprocity was of much advantage to Canada. There were special reasons for this; Confederation had not yet been effected and British North America was an aggregation of separate Colonies, with no bond of cohesion; a great civil war was in progress for part of the time, within the United States; and the prices of food supplies and many other natural products that we could export thither were exceedingly high.

The terminating of the reciprocity treaty at that time was certainly a great loss to Canada; but was a distinct advantage to our American friends. The United States had rapidly become a manufacturing country, as well as a great producer of natural products. The American Government protected their industries by a high tariff; while tariff barriers were down on the Canadian side. These conditions largely contributed to making Canada a slaughter market for the United States.

It was quite evident that these were disastrous conditions for Canada, and the time had come when she should cease to be a suppliant. In 1879 the national policy was inaugurated by Sir John A. McDonald; Canada's industries were protected; she ceased to be a slaughter market for the surplus products of our Republican neighbors, tariff asks the Winnipeg and attention was turned to new avenues of trade. Our win Smith explain. That Liberal friends, in opposition, raised a tremendous cry against the policy of protection, and at its door they laid the failure of every attempt to regain reciprocal trade relations with the United States. At different general elections from 1878 to 1896 they proclaimed themselves free traders; advocates of reciprocity-unrestricted and otherwise—with the United States. There was no sin in the political category that was not attributed to the national policy. They loudly asserted that their advent to power would be followed by reciprocity within six months. At length they gained power in 1896, not on the question of reciprocity, however.

They have now been in power fourteen years, and they have not succeeded in securing any great measure of reciprocity with the United States; nor have they departed from the principles of the National Policy, against which they so strongly inveighed when in Opposition. Their political platform was to get in on; not to stand on.

In the mean time Canada has gone on expanding her trade, especially with the Mother Country, until she has reached a position quite independent of the United States, and she is no longer obliged to play the part of suppliant. Canada's policy of protection has been the cause of several large corporations from the United States establishing manufacturing in the Dominion, in order to avoid paying the duty on the necessary material, supplied by this country. All this is of advantage to our country, by way of employing labor and circulating large amounts of money. Our American friends are observing all these things and all at once profess a desire for a renewal of reciprocal trade relations. Let the Canadian authorities not be deluded by any such pretence.

When we needed reciprocity, the Americans for forty four years steadily set their face against it. Now we do not need it; on the contrary our tariff regulations are compelling our neighbors to contribute to our advantage by establishing their manufacturing in our midst. Thus when the Americans have nothing to gain; but much to lose, they pretend they are anxious to be friendly to us in the matter of trade. Let no one on this side the line be deceived by such crocodile tears.

Laurier and Protection.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada," says the grain Growers' Guide, of Winnipeg, "was the greatest champion of free trade on the continent before he became premier. The Dominion re-sounded with his oratory which condemned the Conservative party because of their high tariff. Here is what Sir Wilfrid said:—

"The system of protection which is maintained by the government, that is to say of levying tribute upon the people, not for the legitimate expenses of the government, but for a private and privileged class, should be condemned without qualification. Let it be well understood that from this moment we have a distinct issue with the party in power. Their ideal is protection, ours is free trade. Their immediate object is protection, ours is a tariff for revenue only. Upon this issue we engage the battle from this moment forward; and I ask you once more never to desist until we have freed this country from the incubus which has been weighing it down for fifteen long years.

"Who benefits by the our Republican neighbors, tariff asks the Winnipeg and attention was turned to new avenues of trade. Our win Smith explain. That grand old man is among the greatest of the world's students of economics and is also versed in Canadian politics. This is what he said in 1891:—"The upshot is that on the neck of the Canadian, as of the American Commonwealth, now rides an association of protected manufacturers making the community and all the great interests of the country tributary to their gains. Before a general election the Prime Minister calls these men together in the parlor of a Toronto hotel, receives their contributions to his election fund, and pledges the commercial policy of the country."

St. Dunstan's College.

The closing exercises of the academic year at St. Dunstan's College were held in the College Hall on Monday afternoon last. The attendance of ladies and gentlemen, clergy and laity, was very large. In the unavoidable absence of his Lordship the Bishop through illness, Rev. T. Campbell, Rector of the College, presided, and the prizes were presented by Very Rev. Dr. Morrison, V. G.

An excellent musical and literary programme was presented. Before and after the distribution of medals, diplomas and special prizes, solos, duets, a chorus and a sextette were rendered by the college club and other students. These musical numbers were varied by the reading of the Alumni prize essay, by William Bowlen, and the valedictory by Gerald McCarthy of the graduating class. The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. Chas. E. McManus, Rector of St. Mary's College, Halifax. Father McManus' address was admirable. It was well delivered in direct, explicit language and was laden with wholesome, sane advice. It appeared to us as a model address to graduates. Appropriate addresses followed from very Rev. Dr. Morrison, A. B. Warburton M. P., James Paton, Esq. Dr. R. McNeill, Dr. Conroy and the Rev. Rector of the College. In summing up the year's work Rev. Father Campbell said that during the year 148 students had been enrolled. Of this number 67 were Islanders; 25 from the Province of Quebec; 19 from the United States, and 13 from New Brunswick. The balances came from Nova Scotia and other places. The exercises were brought to a close with "God Save the King."

After the closing exercises the annual meeting of the Alumni Association was held in the College library. The financial statement and different reports for the year were presented, discussed and passed. The election of officers for the current year was then taken up, when the old board was unanimously re-elected. In the evening the Alumni held their annual banquet in the College dining room. The banquet, prepared under the direction of the Bursar of the College, Rev. J. B. McIntyre, was first class. The President Dr. Conroy, presided and a large company assembled around the festive board. After the excellent viands had been discussed, the intellectual portion of the feast was entered upon and well carried out. The toast list included the Pope, the King, Alma Mater, Alumni Association, Canada our country, the Faculty and the Graduates. Entering on the toast list, the President paid a glowing tribute to our Alma Mater for the great work she has done in higher education for this Province and the Maritime Provinces. The different toasts were responded to in appropriate and excellent speeches by Rev. Douglas McDonald; Rev. F. D. McGuigan, Rev. A. J. McIntyre, Rev. D. J. G. McDonald, Mr. D. O'M. Reddin, Rev. Dr. Monaghan, Mr. James McIsaac, Rev. T. Campbell, Rev. A. B. McDonald, Rev. Father McManus and Mr. Joseph W. McDonald. "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King" brought the proceedings to a close.

Following are the names of the graduating class: Joseph A. Couture, Levis, F. Q. Gerald McCarthy, Sea Cow Pond. Leo. A. Herrell, Lincoln, P. E. I. Joseph E. Lachance, Levis, P. Q. A. Alfred Desrosiers, Rimouski, P. Q. Ernest Bolduc, Beauveville, P. Q.

Death of Dr. Kelly.

It is with feelings of deepest regret we find ourselves called upon to record the demise of Dr. Frederick F. Kelly, which occurred at the Charlottetown Hospital shortly after seven o'clock on Sunday evening last. In the early spring the Doctor had a critical operation performed on his head in the Carney Hospital, Boston. After recovering sufficiently to return home, improvement was not as rapid as could be wished, and later there was a recurrence of the trouble with complications, to which he finally succumbed. Deceased was in the prime of his manhood at the time of his death, being only forty-five years of age. He was a son of Mr. Michael Kelly of this city. He received his early education in the schools of this city and subsequently studied medicine at the University of New York, from which institution he graduated in 1888. On his return home he commenced practice here, where he remained ever since. He was very successful in the practice of his profession and soon built up a large business. In addition to his professional practice, the Doctor took an active interest in civic affairs, and after some time as City Councillor, he was elected Mayor of Charlottetown in 1904, the duties of which responsible office he discharged efficiently and well. In 1898 he married Helen Hickey, daughter of the late Michael Hickey, of the firm of Hickey and Stewart, tobacconists. She and one son, Frederick G. are left to mourn. Deceased was of a kindly nature and genial disposition and was highly esteemed, not only by those with whom his profession brought him into contact; but by the community generally. He will be much missed and deeply mourned by his large circles of friends and acquaintances; but in his home; in his own family circle the blow falls heaviest; the bereavement is most sorely felt. The privacy of this grief-stricken inner-circle we may not invade; God alone who doeth all things well can assuage their sorrow. Deceased was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; the Benevolent Irish Society; the Knights of Columbus and the C. M. B. A. All these societies turned out in force at the funeral this morning which was very largely attended. Besides his disconsolate widow and young son, he leaves to mourn, his parents, four sisters and one brother Dr. Louis Kelly. To these we extend our heart-felt sympathy in their sad bereavement. The long funeral procession proceeded from the residence of the deceased to St. Dunstan's Cathedral. In addition to the societies already named, the Mayor and City Councillors and City officials marched in front of the hearse, and an immense concourse of people followed. At the Cathedral solemn Requiem Mass was chanted. Rev. Maurice McDonald was celebrant, Rev. J. B. Gaudet, deacon and Rev. Pius McDonald subdeacon, with Rev. Dr. McLellan as master of ceremonies. The Vicar General and a large number of priests were in attendance. After the Libera and absolution, the funeral cortege returned and proceeded to the cemetery on St. Peter's Road. R. I. P.

Miss Annie L. McDonald of Peakes Station graduated with high honor as a nurse from the Charles Gale Hospital Cambridge Mass; and has taken up private nursing in Boston. The Ladies Auxiliary to the Intercolonial Club of Boston held their Annual Military Whist and dance in the main hall of the club on Wednesday evening June 1st, 1910, the affair proved both a social and financial success.

The Intercolonial Congress, the literary brand of the Intercolonial club closed the season with a public debate on woman suffrage, to which the members of the club and their friends were invited. Mr. D. A. MacDonald, ex M. P. P. of P. E. Island, opened the debate in favor of extending the privilege of voting to the fair sex. He was ably assisted by Dr. John M. Martin and Thomas E. Johns. William J. Donnell Esq. opened the debate in the negative and with the able assistance of Dr. J. S. Macdonald and Peter Kerr succeeded in winning the decision. The subject discussed proved to be very interesting and instructive, there being many original agreements brought out on both sides.

To Be Well Dressed at a Reasonable Cost

Let Us Make Your Suit!

Have you been giving your money away to a poor tailor for clothes that did not satisfy you? or worse still have you, thinking you were saving two or three dollars on your suit, paid your good money for a "Ready-Made"—a suit that stays good only until you wear it, and instead of adding to your appearance, will by its bad fitting qualities make you appear poorly dressed. Have you ever thought that a "Ready-Made" was the most expensive suit you could buy. Do you know that one good Tailor-Made Suit at $20.00 to $25.00 will outwear any two Ready-Made at $15.00, and that the made-to-order suit will hold its shape and its good looks until the cloth is worn out, while a Ready Made will only look good for a short time. Isn't it cheaper for you to invest $25.00 for a good suit once a year, than to invest $15.00 for a poor one, twice in that period? You will agree with us in that, wont you? Then our proposition is this: We keep a stock of all the best cloths made—we have Worsteds, we have Tweeds, in all the leading shades; we have Serges and Venucias in blue and black—in fact we have everything that's made for men's clothes. We have expert cutters, men who have spent years in studying the art of designing men's clothes, and we have a staff of workmen trained in every branch of the trade, men who put into a job work of the highest order.

You can select a suit at any price from $18.00 to $30.00. We will make it to your individual measure, we will put the best of trimmings into it, and we give you good style and the best of workmanship. In short, your money is not ours until you are satisfied with the suit in every particular.

Don't you think it will pay you to leave your order with us?

Wedding of Capt. Stirling and Hon. Margaret Fraser.

CEREMONY AT ESKADALE CHURCH.

Great interest was taken in the marriage of Captain Archibald Stirling, of Keir, and the Honorable Margaret Fraser, of Lovat, which was celebrated recently in the picturesque Catholic Church at Eskadale, Strathglass.

The bride is the fourth daughter of the late Lord Lovat, and sister of the present chief; and the bridegroom is the second son of the late Sir William Stirling-Maxwell, Bart., Kt., and the late Lady Anna Maria Maxwell-Stirling, daughter of the late Earl of Leven.

The change which happily took place in the outworn weather was welcomed by all for the sun shone with a summer kindliness on the proceedings, and the snow-capped hills looked as if they had decked themselves with ermine to do honor to the occasion.

The bride motored to the church, and on her way she had to pass through many beautiful floral arches. The first was in close vicinity to Beaufort Castle, and the next was near the Houghton Post Office, where a beautiful floral arch spanned the roadway.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning that it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures kidney and liver troubles, relieves the back, and builds up the whole system.

for the marriage ceremony. The offices of acolyte and thurifer were discharged by the sons of the Hon. Bernard Maxwell. Prior to the ceremony, Bishop Ohlsholm delivered a short address, in which he said that he could not allow that occasion to pass by when they had so many friends and relatives around them to express in their joint name their sincere congratulations and best wishes to the bride and bridegroom.

The bride and bridegroom then entered the sanctuary, the bride being led by her brother, Lord Lovat, who subsequently gave her away. Kneeling before the altar, the intercessions, according to the Roman ritual, were made in English, and were answered in a clear voice by the bride and bridegroom.

The entrance to the church grounds was one mass of bunting, and a floral arch spanned the gateway. Besides, on many farmhouses and cottages bunting was displayed, and on every hand there were manifestations of the good will and the good wishes of the people towards the bride and bridegroom.

Lost in the Woods.

(Edith Tatum, in Ave Maria.)

"Are you quite sure you are not afraid, Teddy dear?"

"Why, yes, murrer; I'm not the least little bit afraid," replied the small man confidently, standing very erect by way of emphasis, and meeting his mother's anxious look with a bright smile.

"And of course you know the way?" she continued, somewhat reassured by his brave appearance. "Just keep straight on up the road until you reach the Gregory place, then you can call James and the others, and go off to school together. Good bye, Teddy! Be mother's dear good boy at school. And remember—don't be afraid of anything."

She kissed the dewy red mouth held up to her, put his cap straight on his yellow curls, then watched the sturdy little figure with its air of added inches marching briskly up the road until the trees had hid him from view.

It was Tedd's first year at school, and this was the first time he had ever gone alone. The country school house was two miles away; and either Jink or June, his black "mummy's" boys, had always gone with him. But June had sprained his ankle the afternoon before, and Jink was needed in the fields; so it had been decided to let Teddy go alone as far as the Gregory place (about three quarters of a mile) and go the rest of the way with the Gregory children.

It was quite early in the morning, and springtime. Birds were everywhere—flitting about, much occupied with the important business of nest-building, or perched on some blossoming bough, singing for very joy in the glorious sunshine.

The "big road," as the negroes called it, ran through the heart of a beautiful wood, and on either side the warm sunlight had wrought a wondrous magic. The dogwood trees were all in bloom, their great snowy blossoms gleaming through tender green; there were golden wreaths of yellow jasmine hanging from the swaying branches of the trees; and here and there a small crab-apple filled the air with the delicate perfume of its exquisite pink blooms.

When the little boy had left his mother, he began walking very briskly, with head well up, and his book stashed swinging over his shoulder. But soon the little creature of the wood drew his attention. The whole world seemed alive with gladness, and calling to him to stop and enjoy it all. A rabbit scuttled across the road in front of him; squirrels leaped and chattered in the trees over his head; and a small garter snake, with its circles of brilliant color, wriggled through the grass at his feet.

He saw where a pair of redbirds were building a nest, and, dropping his cap and books, he climbed up and peeped at it. "Never mind!" he said to the excited little owners of the nest, "Don't you know I wouldn't bother your house? Can't you remember how you always build here and I always find you, and I've never hurt your nest or your babies a single time?"

Troubled With Constipation For Years.

Any irregularity of the bowels is always dangerous to your health and should be corrected at once for if this is not done constipation and all sorts of diseases are liable to attack you.

Mr. Henry Pearce, 49 Standish Ave., Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"Having been troubled for years with constipation, and trying various so-called remedies which did me no good whatever, I was persuaded to try Milburn's Laxative Pills. I have found them most beneficial; they are, indeed, a splendid pill, and I can heartily recommend them to all those who suffer from constipation."

"Never give up one thing except for something bigger," said the man with business sense. "That's right," replied Senator Sorghum. "Even in politics a man very seldom buries the hatchet unless he has an ax to grind."

At the Yarmouth Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp, held at Tusket Falls in August, I found MINARD'S LINIMENT most beneficial for sun burn, an immediate relief for colic and toothache.

The perpetually clever man listened solemnly to the tramp's hard-luck story. "That's the same old yarn you told me last week," he said, whiniking at his companion. "Maybe it is," admitted the weary one as he started on, "I'd forgotten having met you. I was in the penitentiary last week."

The men-of-war of the ancient Romans had a crew of about 225 men, of whom 174 were oarsmen and working on three decks. The speed of these vessels was about 6 miles an hour in fair weather.

"Father what do you wish me to be when I grow up?" "The same as I am, my son—a lawyer." "Then, instead of wasting any more time on arithmetic, geography, and such truck, I'd better be getting at the hypothetical question, hadn't I?"
