The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST.

CHAPTER XXI.
"Mr. Chalfonte, why are you going?" she asked, ignoring his little speech. "Oh, please don't think me inquisitive and impertinent. Mr. Telby told me that you looked ill and worried, and you do. Is there anything the matter—is there any trouble?" Mr. Chalfonte won't you tell me? You have been very good to me—the best friend a girl ever had, and isn't it natural that I should be upset at the thought of your being in some trouble? Why, what do you think I'm made of? Do you think I haven't any heart at all?"

Her eyes were full of tears, her hands clasped each other convulsively, and the gaze she fixed on Jack's face was sufficient evidence that her heart had been deeply stirred by the many kindly acts he had done for her.

Jack leant against the mantel-piece, thrust his hands into his pockets, and bit hard on his pipe. It was impossible that he should not reflect that the girl to whom he had tried to be a friend, the girl who—all unwittingly, it is true—had stepped between him and a fortune, had treated him with icy coldness, and that this other girl, who owed him so little, was heart-broken because she thought that he might be in trouble. Never for one single instant had Jack been in love, or in danger of being in love, with Maud Delman; but he was a man, and he had a strong, warm heart in his breast—can, unmoved, face a woman's devotion to him.

"Fon my soul, you're a warm-hearted little thing!" he said, gratefully, and almost remorsefully. "Fancy your trotting round here because you thought I was up a tree. It is very good of you to be anxious on my account though there was no occasion for it."

"But you're looking ill. You are going away. Why have you left Chertson and your work there? Oh, Mr. Chalfonte, don't be angry; it's because I'm so anxious, because I—"

"I've left Chertson because I've got another job," said Jack feebly. "The fact is, Miss Norton's going to be married."

He was staring at the carpet, and he did not see the sudden flush which suffused Maud's face, the light that came swiftly to her eyes.

"To be married!" she said, almost in a whisper. "I'm—I'm glad."

"So am I," said Jack, reaching for his tobacco-pouch. "And so is she—well, there are other arrangements, and I'm off to another job."

"Where?" her lips formed.

Jack was silent. He had, by suggestion, at any rate, already told more falsehoods about this business of an appointment than he liked, and his gorge rose against a definite lie. Woman-like, she jumped to her conclusion. Rising, a little unsteadily, she went up to him and laid her hand on his arm and looked up into his face imploringly, beseechingly.

"Mr. Chalfonte, there's something else. You are in trouble; I can see it. My eyes are quick where—where you are concerned. You are worried and in great trouble. Is it money?" She glanced round at the barely-furnished room. "If so—Oh, will you let me—I have had a rise. I shall have a big salary with the new part."

She stopped, frightened by the look on Jack's face. It was stern and angered for a moment; then the anger faded away, and, laying his hand on her shoulder, he smiled faintly at her.

"You're a good little soul, Maud. So you want to lend me money? My dear—his voice was that of a man addressing a little child—"you don't know enough of the world to know that a man can't take money from a woman—"

She burst into tears, and covered her face with her hands, cowering beneath the rebuke, gentle as it was.

"There, there! Don't cry," said Jack soothingly. "Oh, dash it, don't cry! I didn't mean to be angry. You didn't know—didn't think. You make too much of the little service I did you. Good Heaven, it was nothing! And you're grateful—more grateful than most people," he added to himself. "There, wipe your eyes; say 'Good-bye,' and run away. I shall read of all your successes in the paper."

Then once more Jack Chalfonte did an unwise thing. In the fullness of his aching heart he laid his big hand on her cheek. As if his touch had broken up the depths in her and let loose the torrent of her love, she slipped to his breast and, putting her arms around his neck, offered him her as yet unsealed lips.

"Oh, don't you know!" she murmured, in so low a whisper as to be almost inaudible. "It isn't—it isn't gratitude only. It's because—it's because I love you. Don't push me away. Let me go on and tell you what I've had in my heart for so long; ever since—oh, so long ago! I do love you. I don't ask you to love me—I know you don't—not yet. But I'll wait; I'll wait ever so patiently. Only let me go on loving you and seeing you, Mr. Chalfonte. It's not much to ask, I'd be no trouble to you. Oh, I'd like to be that dog of yours, to be your servant—"

Not a little broken, Jack pulled himself together. He took her arms in a not unkindly grasp and drew them from about his neck, and sat her in the chair.

"Now, look here, Maud," he said gently. "Of course, you don't mean what you've said. That's the worst of you actresses—even the youngest of you; you get carried away by your feelings and you talk all sorts of nonsense without meaning it. You're just cut up, as you say, because you think your friend's badly down on his luck. Now, we'll forget everything you've said. Dry your eyes. Of course, you can't find a handkerchief—you've just lost it somewhere or other, I suppose; here, take mine. That's better. Now we're all right! Now, my child, you must trot off."

She mopped her eyes with his handkerchief, which slid out of sight: she must have had a pocket somewhere about her. Then she stood, very pale, her violet eyes almost black. She put out her hand, and Jack pressed it and, still holding it, led her to the door. Just before the door closed on her she turned and looked at him over her shoulder. It was a look that would have melted a heart of stone; Jack's heart was composed of much softer material; he closed the door quickly.

CHAPTER XXII.
IN the evening of the same day Jack sat in a quiet corner of the smoking-room of the club, apparently reading the evening newspaper; but, in reality, still pondering on his future, with the memory of the scene with Maud obtruding painfully on his meditation. This is a contrary world we live in, and most of us are engaged in playing the annoying game of cross purposes; here was a clever, pretty, and quite good girl in love with him, and, just because he was in love with another girl, who was going to marry some one else, he was compelled to turn away from the gift the gods were thrusting on him. But, though his heart was sore for Maud, he was too loyal in his devotion to Nora to waver in his allegiance for an instant. With a sigh he managed to concentrate his attention on the columns of advertisements, and presently he was rewarded by something in the nature of a find. This was it:

Wanted.—Navvies for the Embankment works. Apply Foreman, Westfield Island, Essex.

It seemed to Jack that this might suit him; it is true that his knowledge of the navy and his work was not very extensive, but he told himself that, as far as he could remember, the work was not of a skilled character, and consisted principally in filling and emptying a barrow and drinking beer at frequent intervals from a battered tin can; and he felt, modestly, that this work would be—at any rate, after a little practice—within his accomplishment.

Remembering that the navy, as he knew him, was attired generally in thick boots, corduroy trousers tied with string below the knee, a shirt innocent of collar, and a cloth cap with ears tied at the top of the head, Jack, the next morning, dressed the part, with the assistance of a labourer's outfitter in a slum in Lambeth, took a third-class ticket for the nearest mainland station, and from thence crossed to the island itself.

It was the first time Jack had been in that part of the world, and he was not a little impressed by the wide stretches of apparently waste land, the oozy marshes, the fast-flowing, pea-soup-coloured river, and the remoteness and grimness of the little island, which seemed to float like a sandy-coloured egg on the bosom of the yellow-coloured water. In the boat by which he crossed were two or three genuine navvies, all smoking short pipes and carrying the can which may be considered the insignia of their class; some of them had spades and pickaxes, and Jack admired the strength of their muscular limbs and argued a similar soundness of lung and heart from the strength of their tobacco, which filled the circumambient air with a pungent odour resembling that of burning tarpaulin.

With the taciturnity of the British, whether peer or peasant, they regarded Jack critically but in silence, and with just a shadow of contempt for the softness and whiteness of his hands and the mildness of his tobacco. However, they directed him civilly enough to the foreman, a burly giant who looked Jack up and down with very much of the expression of a Roman slave-dealer, and in response to Jack's request for work, podded a bullet head towards a spade and a barrow, told him gruffly to join the gang, and asked what name he should put on the pay sheet.

On Jack's hesitating, the foreman, with no show of curiosity or interest, took out a stub of pencil and, after a preliminary lick, muttered, "Bill Jones; there ain't one already, I don't think," wrote down the name, spat twice with emphasis, and walked away.

Jack took up his barrow and spade, and trailed off in the wake of the gang to which he had been attached. And now it would be pleasant to relate that Jack found the work quite easy, and accomplished the task so well that the foreman was compelled to award him unstinted praise and, on the spot, double his wages. Alas! these things do not occur in real life, but are reserved for fiction; and the truth of the matter was of a very different complexion.

The day was hot; the barrow, when filled, was exceedingly heavy; and it required all Jack's concentration of mind and limb to keep the wretched thing on the narrow plank. When it trundled off into the soft gravel, it needed the strength of a giant to lift it on again. Then, again, the fact that you possess a back—a fact which, apparently, has been concealed from you hitherto—is brought home to you in the most painful and obvious way, when you have been loading and unloading a barrow for three consecutive hours.

The sun beat on the back of Jack's neck and made it sore; the handles of the barrow, to say nothing of the spade, blistered his hands and made them still sorer than his neck; the heavy boots, which the outfitter had assured him would be as comfortable as dancin' pumps, appeared to be constructed of a material as unyielding and heavy as cast iron; and long before the hooter had announced the luncheon hour, Jack knew that both feet and hands, and probably the back of his neck, were enriched by blisters.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter.—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J."

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

DECISION WITH ALLIES.

London Press Approve the President's Reply.

Meanwhile the German Armies are Being Severely Pounded.

Hungary in the Peace Queue --- Food Shortage in Vienna.

WAR REVIEW.
 On several of the most important fronts in France, in the region of Valenciennes, to the east of Le Cateau north of Laon, between the Oise and the Serre Rivers, and on the front from the Meuse River to the vicinity of Grand Pre, battles of sanguinary character are being fought, and the British, French and American troops everywhere are making progress against the stubbornly resisting Germans. In Belgium the Allied forces, owing to the rapid retreat of the enemy and the flooded condition of the lowlands, have not yet been able to come into full fighting contact with the Germans, but doubtless a few more days will see them again hard after their quarry and driving him further toward his own frontier. In the south of Valenciennes, the British and Fourth armies with which the Americans are co-operating, have continued successfully to press onward, with Mons and Maubeuge their objectives. Valenciennes is gradually being enveloped and soon is destined to be pinched out of the fighting line by turning movements from the north and south in the manner generally adopted in the present day tactics, when it is more desirable to envelop a strong point than to waste life and time in reaching the objective by a frontal attack. The Germans in this region continue to use numerous machine guns to retard the advance of Field Marshal Hatz's men, and the artillery of both sides is violently active. British aviators are materially aiding the offensive by dropping bombs behind the line or "flying" low and cutting troop formations to pieces with machine gun fire. South of the Oise River the French are making sharp thrusts against the enemy with the intention of clearing out the "entente triangle" between Flavigny and Mont-Cornet, and taking all the railroad lines within this region and eliminating out the salient that still exists there. The Germans are strongly counter-attacking on all the fronts of attack, but the French have ward off their efforts to regain lost territory and have gained ground south of Mont-Cornet, one of the principal railway junctions in this region. North of Grand-Pre, and north of Verdun in the sector lying between the Meuse River and north of the Argonne Forest, the Americans have cut further and deeper into the enemy's line, despite the continued extremely heavy use of machine guns and artillery by the Germans.

and peace now is before the Allied Governments which are to determine whether they are disposed to accept President Wilson's principles of settlement to which Germany subscribed and in accordance with the United States ask their military advisers and those of America to prepare the terms of an armistice which virtually will mean surrender by Germany. In various public utterances the premiers and other leaders of the Entente powers have repeatedly declared that President Wilson's statements in his addresses reflect their own views. Something more official and binding is required now. Although it is declared here as a foregone conclusion that this approval will be registered and the officers of the Supreme War Council will be invoked to prepare the fateful document which will define the conditions under which Germany may secure relief from the incessant hammering of the victorious Allied armies, no one here-to-day would undertake to forecast the probable time of a final decision of Germany's plea. It is known, however, that the Supreme War Council already has given the matter earnest consideration.

RAIMES FOREST CAPTURED.
 LONDON, Oct. 24. The Raimes forest, northwest of Valenciennes, has been occupied by the British. North of the forest the British have captured the villages of Thiers, Hauterive and Thun.

CIRCULATING WILSON'S REPLY.
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. President Wilson's reply to Germany was sent broadcast to the world from the Arlington naval radio towers last night after the official text had been put on the cables. If not picked up directly by the great German station at Nauzen, it undoubtedly was relayed from other points in Europe in time to reach Berlin this morning.

DISCUSSES WILSON'S NOTE.
 LONDON, Oct. 24. The British Cabinet met this morning, presumably to discuss President Wilson's reply to Germany. The reply was received by the Foreign Office from the British Embassy at Washington.

PRESS COMMENT ON WILSON'S REPLY.
 LONDON, Oct. 24. The text of President Wilson's reply to Germany which reached London in the early hours of this morning, is given great prominence in the evening newspapers, which quote with satisfaction his decision to refer the question of an armistice to the Allies and his insistence that the only armistice must be one which will make a renewal of hostilities on the part of Germany impossible. The Globe which would have preferred if the President had declined to make any reply, said, however, that his note is quite uncompromising and altogether admirable. Marcel Sembat, in L'Heure (Paris) says, no reply of the President's in our opinion, has equalled the present one in frankness. To the carpenter in the United States who implored him not to reply, he turned a deaf ear. No better warning could be given Germany than that she has her fate in her own hands. Will she uncrown the Kaiser and become a free people or will she remain infatuated with the military imperialists? The choice is hers. We will treat her accordingly. The Westminster Gazette says, Whether the German Government accepts this proposition for an armistice will depend on its estimate of its military and internal situation, and upon nothing else. All Democratic nations will be grateful to the President for having forcibly projected the issue between free peoples and military despotism in the foreground at this stage of the war, but let it be said again that the choice rests with the German people. It is for them and not for us to say how they shall be ruled. All that we can say is that according as they choose so we must act, and that is the President's last words. We can negotiate with a free people, but we must demand surrender from a military autocracy. The popular comment on the President's reply here is that it contains the strongest language ever addressed by the head of any great nation to another in modern times. The note is welcomed first, because it brings matters to a new state. Further proceedings, if there are to be further proceedings, will be in the hands of the Governments interested. Hitherto, so far as the public knows, the nations associated with the United States, have been onlookers to the correspondence. The note is welcomed secondly, because it promises to bring the season of discussion to an end altogether one way or the other. No one sees how the German Chancellor, Prince Maximilian, can fall either to accept President Wilson's platform or reject it. Acceptance will be taken to mean that the German

HUNGARY SEEKS SEPARATE ARMISTICE.
 PARIS, Oct. 24. Hungary intends to apply direct to the Entente Governments to ascertain on what terms they will grant an armistice and peace to Hungary, it is reported in political circles in Budapest, according to a Zurich despatch to the Journal. Austria-Hungary is already reconciled to the idea of unconditional capitulation, says a Vienna despatch to the Frankfort Zeitung, because Vienna is threatened with famine. The authorities are powerless and laws are no longer enforced.

AUSTRIA MAY SURRENDER.
 AMSTERDAM, Oct. 24. The speedy unconditional surrender of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is probable, according to a Vienna despatch to the Frankfort Gazette.

AUSTRIAN FOOD SITUATION.
 WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. A despatch from Holland to-day says Austrian newspapers declare it will be difficult to supply Vienna with food now that imports from Poland are shut off on account of the Hungarian situation, and the closing of the Bohemian and Moravian frontiers.

CLOSING IN ON CANAL BEND.
 WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES, Oct. 23. (By J. F. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent).—Our troops occupied the line of the Scheidt Canal, immediately north of Valenciennes, have begun closing in the area contained within the sharp bend the Canal makes northwest of Condre. We are only a few miles from the Belgian boundary. Since we crossed the Canal De Senese, south of Douai, many of our troops have marched over thirty miles over almost impassible roads and in miserable weather. Today the sun was shining for the first time in ten days.

MOBILIZING NEW RUSSIAN ARMY.
 VLADIVOSTOCK, Oct. 17. (By the A.P.).—General Ivanoff, War Minister of the Omsk Government, has arrived from that city to confer with the Allies in an attempt to systematize the mobilization of Russians here for the new army.

FRENCH TAKE EPINOMY BRITISH.
 ROME, Oct. 24. French forces to-day penetrated enemy positions taking more than seven hundred prisoners, the Italian official statement to-day says. The attack was made at Monte Sisemol on the Asiago plateau.

regard their position as hopeless and that disaster is imminent. The general opinion is that Germany's military position is not so bad, but that her leaders will fight on if only with the hope of creating divisions among the Allies, which has been Germany's reliance of late.

LIEBKNECHT RELEASED.
 AMSTERDAM, Oct. 24. Frederich Ebrt, the Socialist leader in the German Reichstag, informed the Reichstag to-day that Dr. Karl Liebknecht, former Socialist member of the Reichstag, had been released from prison, where he was serving a sentence for attempted treason.

AIR WORK.
 LONDON, Oct. 24. The official statement dealing with the operations of the Independent Air Forces says: "On Wednesday night we bombed railways at Burbach and Saarbrücken, chemical factories at Mannheim and railways at Coblenz, near Mainz, and at Metz Sablon."

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS.
 OYSTER BAY, N.Y., Oct. 24. Theodore Roosevelt sent duplicate telegrams to-night to United States Senators Lodge, Poinsett and Johnson, in which he characterized as "thoroughly mischievous" the four-team principles by President Wilson, if they are to be made the basis of peace.

BULGAR TREATMENT OF SERBIAN PRISONERS.
 LONDON, Oct. 24. Liberated British prisoners passing through Sofia on their way to Salonika, according to a despatch to the Mail, said that although the British and French prisoners endured much hardship, the Serbians were regularly beaten by their Bulgarian captors and often shot without warning. One British prisoner said, according to the despatch, "the poor devils were thrashed, worked to death or slain in a way that no civilized country would allow a dog to be treated."

THE POPE'S HOPE.
 ROME, Oct. 23. In an apostolic letter to Dr. Alexander Kakowski, Archbishop of Warsaw, the Pope expresses the hope that the people of Poland may enjoy the privilege of choosing their own form of government. The communication ends by saying that the Pontiff desiring to show his good will toward Poland, proposes to make Dr. Kakowski a Cardinal at the next consistory.

Another Hun "Dud."

(From the New York Herald.)
 With their usual cunning, which is not cunning at all as the fox sees it, the Huns have launched their second drive against the Fourth Liberty Loan. This is the absurd tale, based on a "report from Sweden," that the Kaiser has abdicated. The old and over-worked legend that Hindenburg had resigned after a fierce squabble with the All Highest hardly had been well spread when along came the big shell of the German attack on the loan—"The Kaiser has quit!" The point of all these stupid tales is so obvious that it is not necessary to mention it. There is one response—Buy another bond! Also remember—The Hohenzollerns never resign. Once in a while one dies—but not on the battlefield.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

Since the supply of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring has been comparatively small this year, it is the opinion of many that there will be a clean up of all stocks here probably before winter weather sets in. At the same time it may be expected that prices will advance as a result of the demand and limited supply from which to meet it. Large factors in New York have been holding their goods at $7 since last reports, and it is understood that sales have been made at this figure in many quarters. Inferior goods have been bringing up to $23@24 per barrel, but the market has been materially strengthened since last reports, and a lighter level of prices is to be looked for in the opinion of merchants. What is yet to come forward from this source can hardly be determined, but it is known that most of the packers have entirely sold out and that there is little herring now available in St. John's. With the fall season approaching New York merchants and importers are naturally making plans for securing supplies for the coming spring and summer. While there has been strong competition against Newfoundland herring this year, particularly by producers of Scotch style herring on Cape Cod, the trade has continued to indicate a preference for Newfoundland herring. Even the splendid herring from Alaska last season failed to take the market away from Newfoundland Scotch pack. It is probable that the demand in the coming season will exceed that of any period of the past.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Oct. 12.

Battle Salvage.

A good deal has been said about the recovery of used metals from the battlefields of France and their reuse; but it is doubtful that the magnitude of this business has been realized. It is actually carried out on such a large scale that there is not room for time or labor enough for it in France, and much of the salvaged stuff has to be shipped to England for re-working.

The headquarters for this work are the Swanes, Wales. There are located here two large firms which have always carried on a notable business in the salvage of warships and cargo-carrying vessels. Within the last six months their activities have been extended, under governmental auspices, to the battle waste received from the continent. Formerly, under an agreement between the two governments, the French engineering service undertook the heavy task of collecting the saleable scrap from the battlefields of the western front and working it over into iron and steel bars. But, as suggested, the accumulation of material was so heavy as to necessitate the transfer of much of this work to Britain.

One reason for selecting Swansea as the base for this service is that within twenty miles of the city are found 80 per cent. of the tin and ternite mills of the United Kingdom.

The entire industry is under Government control. Although half the tin-plate mills in the district have been closed on account of Government restrictions, a certain amount of tin plate is required by the Ministry of Munitions; so licenses are granted to manufacturers of this article for the purchase of raw materials and especially scrap iron. The reclaimed steel bars not thus used in the making of the country, where they are rolled into sheet form for use in the manufacture of trench shelters.—Scientific American.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES COLDS, ETC.

The Late Mr. Edwin Aitkin.

The unexpected death yesterday afternoon, from pneumonia, of Mr. Edwin Aitkin, of the firm of Messrs. Carvell Brothers, of this city, is chronicled with the deepest regret. He was a son of our much esteemed citizen, Mr. W. H. Aitkin. The late Mr. Aitkin was only thirty-six years of age and by his untimely death the career of one of the most promising of the younger business men of this community and province has been cut short. He had been ill for only nine days and he made a brave and determined effort to conquer the dread disease which is passing over our city. Mr. Aitkin was one of the leaders of the commercial life of Charlottetown and was noted for his unvarying courtesy and sterling ability as well as for his uprightness and integrity as a business man. As has been well said: "The fact that he was a member of that long-established and influential firm of Carvell Brothers is abundant evidence of his business ability and sound judgment."

He served as President of the Charlottetown Board of Trade a few years ago, with honour and dignity. He was a devoted member and staunch supporter of St. Paul's Church and was for many years a valued member of the vestry. He was formerly a member of the Charlottetown Board of School Trustees and belonged to the Rotary Club here. In all these different positions as well as in the social life of the community, Mr. Aitkin enjoyed the highest respect of all with whom he came into contact. Although somewhat reserved in manner, he was friendly with all, and the whole city has been shocked by the sad news.

Some eight years ago he married Gladys Adele Peake, daughter of the late Mr. George Peake, who with two children, are left to mourn. To these the heartfelt sympathy of all will be extended; also to his bereaved parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Aitkin, his sister, Miss Elaine, and one brother, Mr. Reginald Aitkin.

We can only draw the veil of sympathy over the grief in the home. In doing so we can assure these grief-stricken families that all sincerely regret the great loss which they and our city have sustained by the death of Mr. Aitkin.—The Island Patriot, Charlottetown, P.E.I., Oct. 15.

To a Herrin'.

Oh, herrin', fish that I like best You're welcome far above the rest!
By many a workin' man you're blest—
"Oh, herrin', taste herrin'!"

When I come home I get my tea,
Your kindly form I'm glad to see;
On my table you're fit to be seen—
"Oh, herrin', savory herrin'!"

Whether you're roasted, baked, or fried,
You're the very best I ever tried!
As when a hairn, for you I cried—
"Oh, herrin', bonnie herrin'!"

The fishes hunt you o'er the deep,
Rich harvests of the sea they reap
When in the nets in shoals you leap—
"Oh, herrin', silvery herrin'!"

Lang may your offspring swim the seas,
At times the fisher's heart he pleases,
And help the chef in his cuisine—
"Oh, herrin', welcome herrin'!"

"Syrup of Figs" for Constipated Child.

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs" that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food pass out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of cheap imitations sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Discrimination.

At St. John's there lie doctors and nurses in galore, druggists and hospitals, and yet we note that further hospital accommodation and nursing facilities are being provided, while for the so-called "outports" little or no consideration is being manifested. In St. John's a doctor can board his motor car and drive from one end of the district to the other. Here in Bay of Islands we have no roads and very few and poor cattle paths. To visit the one one has to go by boat or wade knee deep through mud and water and climb over a precipice. Under these circumstances it has been impossible for our local doctor to give the needed attention to the outlying places and at the same time properly look after his patients.

Then there is the operation of the present prohibition regulations. In St. John's or vicinity if spirits are required the same may be obtained in a very short time, but not so in places where there is no medical officer. The regulations require one to be sick before a doctor can give a prescription, that there is all the time required before a prescription can reach the Controller at St. John's and a reply received. There should be some simple way of overcoming this difficulty and the people of the remotest parts of the Dominion placed upon the same footing as those residing in the capital. It is the people of the "outports" who are the real producers in the country. They catch the cod and herring, they mine the mineral, they till the soil and gather the harvest. But for them St. John's to-day would be but a village of huts, and yet when it comes to public facilities and improvements they are shamefully neglected.—Western Star.

New Store Opened.

The Telegram reporter had the pleasure of being shown throughout the new store opened by the American Boot and Shoe House yesterday. The firm already has a store in the old stand formerly occupied by Nepe's hardware, but the new store is so, be the headquarters, being much more up-to-date and roomy. It is constructed after the latest American style, containing no counter. Instead a wide seat runs around all sides, while chairs are placed in the centre of the floor, which is of hardwood and polished. The inside is artistically painted and decorated, contains fancy electric bulbs, and altogether presents a most brilliant and pleasing sight. The very latest American style boots and shoes are kept in stock, the upper appointments being for storage purposes. The display window is very nicely gotten up. Immediately the store opened crowds filled it, and a very brisk business was done. This stand is the one recently occupied by Z. Cox, and is situated in one of the best business centres of the town. There is always room for progressiveness and energy, and we feel sure that the new store will secure a good share of the boot and shoe trade of the city.

LONDON, Oct. 24. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Speaking at Oxford to-day, Sir Edward Carson drew attention to Germany's minimum demands when she sought the war to end. Those included the surrender of Malta, Gibraltar and the Suez Canal, etc. He said the British Government would not accept the terms unless they were the equivalent of Germany's terms to 1918, when she requested for an armistice as the part of France. It was then agreed, and provision made, that all German guns should be placed, and sent to the front, so that the city could be taken at pleasure, anything less than similar terms, Germany now would involve disaster.

No action was attached, in consequence, to the Armenians in connection with the surrender. Lord Cecil emphasized the gallant services of the Armenians during the Turkish campaign, stating that the Allies were considerably indebted to them.

Many suggestions have been made as to the proper place in which to execute the arch-criminals responsible for the bath of blood to which the world has been subjected during the past four years. Molokai is also used for the physical lepers.

Sir Edmund Allenby.
Of course you all know of the man who has been redeeming the Holy Lands from the terror of Moslem rule; but few know anything of his personality. Edmund Allenby is 37 years of age, and entered the army as a member of the Inshilling Dragoons. Before being sent to the east, he fought in the retreat of Mons. His quiet manner and total lack of self-assertiveness, gave rise to the belief that he would not prove equal to the occasion in certain circles. His wonderful campaign has proven for all time, that ability is as far from being associated with bluster as day is night.—Argus in Halifax Chronicle.

Thirteen Trumps and Two Houses.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Everyone who plays cards enjoys having good hands. Part of the lure of the game is the ever recurrent reward and the infinite possibilities of each hand, and it is always alluringly possible that one might have a thirteen trumps though I never heard of anyone who did, except for the man in the story.

And yet if you could have thirteen trumps every time you played a hand, would you?

Surely not. All of which is a prelude to telling you about two houses in a little country town where I visited last summer.

Two White Houses Side by Each.
They stand side by side, both white houses, one little, one large.

The large house was bought by a woman with practically unlimited means, the small one by a woman of very limited resources.

The woman who bought the little house has built a verandah which carries out the lines of the house very beautifully and also gives one a wonderful view of the mountains. She has put knockers on the old-fashioned doors, and under the guidance of an architect has added a few columns, a pergola, and a bit of lattice work here and there. She has rescued from decay a wonderful old-fashioned garden and put window boxes at all the windows.

Everyone who passes through that town admires that house.

She Put On an Unattractive Wing.
The woman who bought the larger house began by making it larger with a wing which did not carry out the lines of the house.

Next she moved the barn back from the street (where she said it spoiled the effect of the house) and placed it squarely between the house and the best view of the mountain.

Next she had a sunken rose garden made. It is not very large and the roses are not very successful. The only remarkable thing about it is the fact that thousands of dollars were sunk in it.

They Can't Help Noticing the House.
People who admire the old-fashioned garden beside the little house, never give this one a glance. The house, indeed, they notice because it is so large that they could not help it, but one hears one word of admiration for the big house to ten for the little.

The connection between cards and houses? Well, we all think we want thirteen trumps in the money game, but after all isn't there as much fun in having a fairly good hand and in playing it with skill and brilliance—in spending a limited amount of money with such skill and discrimination and imagination that you far outdo in effect your opponent who has five times your means?

Discussion Dangerous.
"The war," says the Boston Transcript, "will go on to victory, to that military decision upon which the American people have resolved, to that military surrender without which they will not be satisfied. For we are not a nation of quitters, we need no justification for our participation in the conflict, we are no longer interested in the ups and downs of diplomacy or the rise and fall of parties. Nothing, we believe, is further from the mind of the nation, North, East, South and West, than the acceptance of any armistice, much less its recommendation to our Allies, which would permit the German army to escape the trap which Foch is setting for it. Whether the war ends this side the Rhine or beyond it, it must not end, it will not end, until the armies of the enemy have been defeated in the field and have acknowledged their defeat as did Bulgaria by an unconditional surrender. Meantime, we say again, discussion of peace is worse than dangerous, discussion is desertion of our defenders at the front, the living and the dead."

For God and Country! Who can give a nobler cause for which to live, And who can name, beneath the sky, A better cause for which to die? For God and Country! Youth of mine, Engrave it deep above your shrine, And unto it each day be true And let it guide and counsel you.

Who serves his God and native land, Is fit with all earth's kings to stand. In such a cause a man may toll, Paint, write or fill a page of soil, Tunnel the mountains, bridge their streams, And find an outlet for his dreams. In such a cause his soul is free— He may be all a man should be.

For God and Country! Wealth nor fame Nor skill is barred unto his name. Who serves his God and Country's Flag, Although his weary feet may drag Through dreary hours of troubled ways, Shall win the world's supremest praise. For him life's gates shall be flung wide. To him no road shall be denied. For God and Country! Here is room In which the soul may come to bloom. Who chooses self to serve must crawl From day to day in circles small, And who shall build to such a plan, Shall miss the full growth of a man. For God and Country! A Bad Bull.
(From the Boston News Bureau.)
How an American naval officer, new to British waters, mistook a meat ship flag for the royal standard forms the subject of a good story told at the Naval Exhibition by Sir Eric Geddes, first Lord of the British Admiralty. The American had just boarded the flagship of an admiral, and remarked to Admiral Beatty of the British Navy: "That is the first time I've seen the royal standard flying on the Grand Fleet."

"Where?" asked Admiral Beatty. "That is impossible."

For answer the American pointed to a flag with a white background with a blue bull on it, denoting that the ship was a meat carrier.

A Regular Pantry
(From the New York Sun.)
Sometimes a really good, laug' strays overseas from the grim and hospitals. This one comes from No. 1, founded by Mrs. Vanderbilt, near Paris. "Nurse," said the soldier when he recovered consciousness, "what is this on my head?" "Vinegar cloths," she replied. "You have had a fever?" "And what's this on my chest?" "A mustard plaster; you've had pneumonia, too." "And what those things at my feet?" "Salt bags; you were badly frostbitten." At this point up spoke a convalescing Tommy in the next cot: "Hang a pepper-pot on his nose, nurse, and he'll be a crust."

Good Advice.
Julius Caesar, a person of some fame in history, set the Allies of 1918 a good example in the answer which he gave to ancestors of the modern Germans when they sought terms from him after defeat in battle. He answered them after this fashion: "Go back whence you came, repair the damage you have done, give hostages, keep the peace for the future." The example will be followed.—Sydney Record.

Impressive Sight.
One of the most impressive incidents of the Battle of Jutland was the fact that immediately after the destruction of H.M.S. Queen Mary—her second—a colossal hangar for an appreciable time—for several minutes certainly—over the ruined relics of this magnificent ship and was watched and witnessed to afterwards by many who were engaged in that section of the battle at the time. The fact is undoubted.

GOOD MORNING EXERCISES.

If your eliminative organs are sluggish and have been very much neglected you will need more strenuous measures.

They must be stimulated to activity. This can only be done by proper exercises. One of the best for this purpose should be taken in bed before rising.

Before you get up in the morning, lie straight with your hands at your sides. Then slowly raise the legs until they are at right angles with the body. Lower just as slowly, and repeat ten times.

Now jump out of bed, and follow this exercise with another, the purpose of which also, is to induce peristaltic action.

The next exercise is to stand erect, raise the hands over the head and twist the body to the right, at the waist line only, trying to touch the floor with the finger tips.

The legs are next in order. The hands should be placed on the hips and then the right leg should swing forward, alternating the movement with the left leg. This exercise will bluner for.

The One Object.

ON THE RUN.

The Bulgars, slow and stately, consider haste a crime; and so it jars them greatly, the way they're marking time. There's horror on their faces, there's anguish in their souls; they hit the higher places, in search of hiding holes. To non-hurry as being thorn goods it brings a lot of worry to hustle to the work. I seem to hear them yapping in dire distress of mind, I hear their coat tails flapping, and see the smoke behind. The Turks are critics, they loathe all exercise; they are such shirks and quitters they will not sweat the flies. They like to sit' round joshing, in some nice shady spot, the while their wives take washing, that garlic may be bought. But, like the Bulgar, lately, they're bulging for the brush, and oh, it jolts them greatly this mad, unseemly rush! No more the foe they're facing—they're tired of that, I guess; they're loping and they're pacing like Dexter or Maund S. The words they use are hitting the air around them, blue, as they go sprinting, sprinting, the mountain passes through. Why doesn't Wilhelm chide them for such indecent haste, denounce them and degrade them, for showing such poor taste? He has no heart for preaching to Turks or horse marines; his Huns are also teaching the world what sprinting means.

The Bulgars, slow and stately, consider haste a crime; and so it jars them greatly, the way they're marking time. There's horror on their faces, there's anguish in their souls; they hit the higher places, in search of hiding holes. To non-hurry as being thorn goods it brings a lot of worry to hustle to the work. I seem to hear them yapping in dire distress of mind, I hear their coat tails flapping, and see the smoke behind. The Turks are critics, they loathe all exercise; they are such shirks and quitters they will not sweat the flies. In Memoriam.

FRANCIS PEDDLE.
 Many hearts were filled with grief when, on Tuesday, Oct. 15th, the tidings came of the death of Seaman Francis Peddle, of the Canadian Naval Reserve. The deceased was a young man of only twenty-five years of age.
 He was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Peddle, of St. Joseph's.
 Five years ago he left home to spend six months in Sydney, C. E., but as time passed he liked his new home so well that he thought he would better his fortunes by remaining there instead of returning to Newfoundland.
 Three years ago he responded to the call of patriotism and felt it his duty to make one of those who were so nobly serving their King and Country. Accordingly he enlisted in the Canadian Navy, and having done duty on the "Margaret" and the "Niobe," respectively, he was at the time of his death, Quartermaster on H. M. C. S.,
 "Acadia."

His death came very unexpectedly, as only two weeks before his parents had received news of his departure from Halifax en route for Sydney, N. S.
 He was taken suddenly ill on Oct.
 6th of influenza, which afterwards developed into pneumonia. His death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital, New Aberdeen, N. S., on Oct. 14th.
 The following day word was received from C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Naval Service, Ottawa, apprising them of the sad fact.

Words cannot describe the grief of his heart-broken parents, and other relatives.
 Endowed with many excellent characteristics he was beloved by all who knew him. His kindness, his cheery humour, his pleasant smile, endeared him to all. He was held in great esteem by all his shipmates, as was testified by the beautiful floral tributes with which his casket was decorated.

His remains were sent home for burial, arriving in Holyrood, on Thursday, 17th inst. On Friday morning his funeral took place when all that was mortal of this noble son of Newfoundland was consigned to the grave. The interment took place in the cemetery at St. Joseph's, his native home.

To his sorrowing parents, and other relatives the sympathy of the whole community is extended. One brother William survives him, also three sisters, Nellie, in St. John's; Hannah and May at home. That the Redeemer who gave his life for all may comfort them in their affliction and enable them to resign themselves to the will of Him who is the prayer of all their sympathizing friends.—R. I. P. Boston papers

RICHARD GOUGH.
 On Wednesday, Sept. 24th, the Angel of Death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alban Gough, of St.
 Joseph's, and bore from thence to his Eternal dwelling the soul of their little son Richard, aged five years. As he had been ill only four days his death came unexpectedly, and was a great blow to his fond parents. For the first couple of days his illness seemed light, but suddenly a change came and before the doctor who was summoned could reach him, his pure soul had passed to the Great Beyond where there is no suffering but only joy. His parents are grief stricken over the loss of their little darling whose mild, lovable disposition had especially endeared him to them, but they bear their loss with great resignation and fortitude, for they know that their child is not lost to them for ever but has gone to prepare the way for them in that heavenly abode, the greatness and beauty of which the eye hath not seen, nor the ear heard, nor can the heart of man conceive.
 St. Joseph's, Salmonier, Oct. 23, '18.

MARJORIE ELLA JANES.
 Marjorie Ella, youngest daughter of Magistrate James W. Janes, of Bonaville Bay, late of Han's Harbor, died in the Whidden Memorial Hospital, Everett,
 Mass., U.S.A., Thursday night, October 10th, 1918, after an illness of but five days. The funeral services were held at the home of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Short, in Everett. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery. Miss Janes succumbed to the dreaded epidemic which has been ravaging the States for several weeks. It is but six months since Mr. Janes lost a son, Albert, on the battlefields of France, giving his life for others. In no less a degree has this daughter, but twenty years of age, given her young life upon the altar of sacrifice, serving as a nurse in the Everett Hospital, ministering to those stricken with the influenza, from whom she evidently contracted the disease which proved fatal. Her death was truly that of a heroine.

CAPT. JOHN QUINLAN, HOLYROOD.
 In the passing of Capt. John Quinlan, on Thursday morning last, Holyrood lost one of its most prominent and respected citizens. The deceased was in his 50th year, and had suffered from "heart trouble" for a number of years so that his end was not unexpected. During the repeated attacks of this mislady Rev. Father Finn was in constant attendance, fortified him with the last Sacraments, and endowed him with medical and spiritual comforts for his journey thither which was witnessed by his family circle. In the death of our old friend, Mr. Quinlan, we are left to mourn the type of men who are unfortunately growing rarer every day. Men of industry, intiative, and handicraft; big men in every sense of the word; big in body, great in mind; sound in principle, valiant in battle; sage in council and honest in action. He was of a herculean build and gigantic size. Most of the family have huge statures. The late James Quinlan, a brother of the deceased, was of a stanch-like stature.

 For almost half a century the Quinlan brothers owned and sailed a craft of their own and prosecuted a successful fishing plantation at Cape Greep, Labrador. James and two of his crew were lost there 25 years ago while attempting to pull to the traps in a strong breeze of wind. This ill-fated expedition cast a gloom over the plantation and interrupted the fishing industry there. Capt. John was a high liner at the seal fishery, and was one of the late Capt. Wm. Jackman's picked men, and served as master watchman with that famous seal killer. In the late seventies and early eighties the subject of our obituary sketch was a recognized leader in the social life of the community then and was one of the founders of the Temperance, Medical Aid and Agricultural Societies.
 In political life, too, he was a recognized leader of opinion, a strict Conservative and a hard fighter and bitter for his party. He leaves to lament his loss and to emulate his industry and the other aspects of his character, six sons and one daughter;
 James and Patrick at home; Edmund,
 Police Constable, Trepasser; Rodger,
 Police Constable, Curling; Peter,
 Master Mariner, U.S.A.; and Cornelius,
 Professor, Dakota, and Mrs. Patrick Meyer, Chapel's Cove, with all of whom we sorrow and to all of whom we offer our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement. His funeral took place on Saturday morning from his late residence, North Arm, to the temporary church—the Star Hall, where Requiem Mass was said for the eternal repose of his soul, and when the funeral service had been recited over his bier the body was borne to the hearse in waiting by the pallbearers and the funeral cortege continued its route to Holy Cross Cemetery where the remains were interred beside those of his wife, Mary Quinlan, who predeceased him nine years ago. Jesus have mercy on their souls.

Flour and Substitutes

STATEMENT BY THE FOOD CONTROL BOARD.

The Harbor Grace "Standard" in its last issue published a lengthy article respecting food control, with special reference to the matter of Flour and substitutes. The Food Control Board thinks it desirable, as this article embodies points of criticism and comment very generally employed, to deal with it fully.

The "Standard" complains that white flour is difficult to obtain and that it is held by people who hoarded it. The answer is that until July last no call was made on the Food Control Board to require the use of substitutes, although standard flour was made universal in Canada in February. After that month none but standard flour was imported here and what white flour was in town was gradually bought, much of it being doubtless hoarded by un-patriotic people. In July the Canada Food Board, owing to a shortage, required us to employ substitutes with the standard flour, because this was the only quality in general use, and such a regulation had to be put into effect.

The "Standard" next complains that mixtures of standard flour and substitutes do not make good bread. The answer to this is that precisely the same flour is used in Canada with precisely the same quantity of substitutes. That some standard flours are not as good as others has to be admitted, but the same is true of the old time white flours. There is much apprehension in the public mind as to the difference between standard flour and the white flour formerly so general. The white flour contained about 72 per cent. of the wheat berry.

The standard flour, if milled according to the Canadian requirements, contains 76 per cent. or is only 4 per cent. coarser. Some standard flours are apparently milled about another 4 per cent. coarser, but even the latter flour is not as coarse as that in use in Britain to-day, which contains 83 per cent. of the wheat berry, and yet the flour has to be subsequently adulterated by an admixture of at least 20 per cent. of substitutes, and the British people are apparently not suffering in any fashion from the use of the bread and other articles made from the use of such flour.

The "Standard" suggests that cooking classes should be started in every settlement of any size during the coming winter. This is easier said than done. Last winter the Food Control Board promoted a bread baking contest in St. John's. The City contains some 30,000 people, or say 6,000 families. Out of these no more than 250 participated. With this example before them it is very questionable if, assuming that the Board could secure competent instructors for cooking classes, the attendance in the outports would be such as to justify the expense which would be involved in such a policy.

The "Standard" then suggests that the Board give the ordinary householders the option of buying less substitutes, but of making bread out of standard flour without any substitutes or with as little as she chose, provided she use the whole or what remains of the substitutes as household foods, say in the form of oatmeal or cornmeal porridge, or oatmeal or corn cakes. The best answer to this is found in a statement of Herbert Hoover, the American Food Controller, to a meeting of the Food Administration in the various States of the Union, at Washington on September 4th, 1918, when he said:—"In providing a 'substitute' programme for wheat next year of twenty per cent. we wish to change the attitude of mind of the American public towards the policy of substitutes in that we wish to get this percentage of substitute grains into the actual wheat flour itself.

What we desire to get into the minds of the householders is that they should get the twenty per cent. of substitutes and mix it with the flour for all purposes, and that any use of these substitutes for other purposes is not making a war bread and is not maintaining an economy in the consumption of wheat. We believe that it is patriotic and right for every person in the United States to eat the same flour during the next twelve months that is eaten by the whole of the Allied countries. All suggestions that mixed breads have any dietic damage inherent in them only raises a laugh in Europe. There bread has been mixed as high as 75 per cent. of other cereals for months during the past year and comprises everything from beans to potatoes, and they have had as yet no dietary difficulties, and the number of people who insisted that they must have white flour in order to exist through a stream of physicians' certificates has been reduced to such a small number that they have abolished these certificates altogether on the general basis that a person who is so particular as that during war times should die and disappear from public life. Therefore I have no patience with the people who wish to have a little white flour to make themselves a few special biscuits on Sundays.

Finally the "Standard" recommends that if there be enough standard flour available, no substitutes need be put with it, or that there may be enough standard flour to reduce the substitutes to one-eighth instead of double as much. The answer to this is that the Canada Food Board has undertaken to give this Colony its normal supply of wheat flour less 20 per cent. of substitutes so as to place the Colony on an equality with the rest of this continent. Last year there was a very large over-import of flour and we were specially notified that this would not be tolerated for the present twelve months. Under these circumstances our Food Control authorities have been endeavouring to induce people to play the patriotic part and purchase flour as sparingly as possible consistent with their actual needs, and if this policy is pursued and the substitutes are rightly used, there will be ample flour in the country to furnish as many loaves of bread as any other year, and thus feed as many people; but if certain elements amongst us persist in hoarding flour and not using substitutes in the proportion necessary, there may come a shortage during the winter which will necessitate the Food Control Board taking drastic measures, even to the removal of the excessive flour from the homes of hoarders in order that everybody may have a loaf.

As Written.

The British Government department entrusted with the duty of disbursing separation allowances receives some strange requests from correspondents who put in a claim for them. These are a few examples culled from many: "I have received no pay since my husband has gone nowhere." "We have received yours truly—I am his Grandfather and Grandmother, he was born and brought up in this house in answer to yours truly." "My Bill has been put in charge of a spittoon, will I get any more money?" "I have received no pay since my husband was confined to a Constipation Camp in Germany." "I am paying attention to a nice young man—how do I go about money?" "In accordance with instructions on ring paper, I have given birth to twins enclosed in envelope."

The Prussian Spirit.

(From the Westminster Gazette.)
A good many people last night were talking as if the war would now certainly end by Christmas, and there was a general feeling of triumph and jubilation everywhere. An enterprising newsboy who ran about outside the Guildhall crying "Surrender of Austria"—his geography was a little mixed—seemed to anticipate the news that the crowd expected. But it would be as well, if the public are not to be disappointed, that they should view the future in a more cautious spirit. Reports from the front show that the Germans, especially the Prussians, are putting up a very stiff fight, and we must expect them to do so for some time yet. The tradition of Frederick the Great, who fought against heavy odds, has a strong hold on the Prussians, and I recall a Prussian statesman saying many years ago that even if Prussia were deserted in a European war by Bavaria and Saxony she would continue to fight, for Prussia would never admit defeat while she had a man left. Four years of war have undoubtedly had an effect even on the Prussian spirit, but we must not bank on the war being over before Christmas.

Hard Salted Salmon.

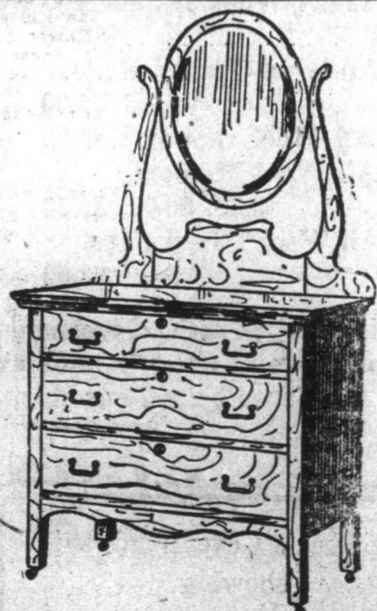

Since last reports there has been a good movement in hard salted salmon in New York, small offerings being eagerly taken advantage of and local trading showing a general improvement. The supply of this grade in New York hands is not large at present, but the demand has improved to such an extent that there is now an inquiry from many sources which have heretofore taken little or no interest in it. Offerings from the Pacific Coast this week consisted largely of medium reds, which are reported to have been sold at $30.75. Seattle. Other offerings of pinks at $16.07 are reported, and it is understood that these have met with counter offers from the trade at slightly lower prices which have been rejected. According to well-informed sources there are still fair quantities of Alaska reds to be offered, and it is reported that factors on the Pacific will ask $22 for these. Cheams up to $22.50 for salmon at this time, have been negatively offered at $14 per barrel. Halifax salmon has been little in demand since the sharp advances in price a fortnight ago. As it is reported that factors on the Pacific in Newfoundland are asking $12.50 for these, Cheams up to $12.50 for salmon at this time.

City Council.

The Municipal Council held its regular weekly session last evening. The Mayor presided and all the members were present.

After reading of minutes, etc., the following matters were disposed of:

William Feehan made application for permission to install motor engine in co-operation, Buchanan Street. Permission was granted.

E. Bowering asked Council to reconsider their decision of last meeting re repairing building on Thomas Street for the purpose of installing machinery. After discussion, permission was granted for the installation of machinery provided he does not make any repairs to the structure of the building either inside or outside.

The Secretary of Public Works Department wrote in connection with the bridges on Blackhead and South Side Roads. He stated the work of repairs should be looked after by the Council. He will be written again on the matter.

The Inspector General acknowledged receipt of Council's letter with regard to the "Safety First" Crosses. He also stated he had directed the constables on the Rawlins' Cross beat to prevent parties congregating there.

The Inspector General also said he approved of the installation of a Bowser Gasoline Tank near the Anglo-American Garage on Gower Street.

Conroy & Higgins, on behalf of the Reid Nhd. Co., wrote in reply to Council's letter on the subject of a proposed catchpit and road repairs foot of Long's Hill, that the works come under Section 18 of the Street Railway Act and must be done at the expense of the Council and not of the Company.

Kaleem Noah requested permission to repair dwelling Water Street West. As this house is contrary to law, being within the fire limit, permission cannot be allowed to repair, and operations begun here must be stopped at once.

Moses Butt applied for permit to build a temporary shed to be used as a machine shop off Flower Hill. He will be asked to submit plan.

John Adams asked to repair house off Brian Street. The City Engineer will report on this matter.

Mrs. Wm. Clarke's request to build small addition at rear of dwelling, Brazil's Square, was granted.

Permission was given Alex. Mercer to build a small store at rear of dwelling, Mackay Street.

Plan of repairs to Bennett Brewing Company's building, Water St. West, passed.

Arthur Ebsary's plan of cod oil refining plant on the South Side also passed.

A number of parties were ordered to be written to have their fences put in repair.

The City Engineer reported on work at catchpit foot of Long's Hill, Patrick Street and Barnes' Road, grading and also on the installation and opening up of services during the past week.

Reports of Road Inspectors and Water Works Inspector for the past week were read and discussed.

Parties responsible for repairs to Water Street sidewalks will be written to have them repaired at once.

An exhaustive report was submitted by the Engineer's Department on the water waste inspection throughout the City.

The Sanitary Supervisor reported that the contract for the supply of oats was now nearly completed; also that a number of gullies were dipped during the week.

With regard to the complaint of Mr. Chaplin, Spencer Street, the parties in this locality will have to install the water and sewerage.

The Health Officer submitted his report on infectious diseases in the city during the past week.

After disposing of some routine business, and passing pay rolls, bills, etc., the meeting adjourned.

Fish Oils.
Increased demand coupled with advances of a short supply in the hands of shippers, has placed Newfoundland cod oil in a stronger position. The market is firm at $1.55@1.60. This higher level reflects the stronger attitude of holders at primary sources. Domestic cod oil is also firm at $1.45@1.50. There has been little importance in other fish oils. Offerings of mackerel at $1.20 l.b. works have failed to attract buyers here. There is a limited quantity to carry over into a new season, and it is doubtful if it would influence holders any if they were obliged to do so. Most are strong in their ideas. Refined oil continues firm.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette.
