The Romance of a Marriage.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"None for you, miss," he says in a tone that plainly indicates that he is sorry to refuse her. "Only one for Mr. Robert."

Bob is Mr. Robert in the country round.

Paula takes the one for Bob—it is in a formidably thick envelope of the legal shape—and puts it in her pocket; she cannot enter the house just yet awhile, with that look of disappointment on her face, and then she wanders round the garden, listless and heavy-hearted. But suddenly the old spirit reasserts itself, and she throws off her foreboding as if it were a garment too heavy for the bright morning.

"I'll go for a ride," she says, addressing no one in particular, though the dogs bark in response. "If—if he should come and find me white and wan, like a forlorn damsel, and this should be false—which of course it is—what should I be able to say in defence of my unbelief? No, the colt and I will go for a gallop, and Black Care shall not sit on the crupper, as he does in the melancholy poem."

She runs upstairs and slips on her habit: the colt is brought round, evidently delighted at the prospect of an outing, and she is in the saddle. Alice stands at the door, with an upraised hand to keep the sunshine from her face.

"Paula, my dear, you'll have an accident with that horse, he is not half broken—I heard Bob say so. Really, it is very imprudent."

Paula's laugh has the first touch of merriment in it that it has had this morning.

"An accident! Imprudent! Why, the dear fellow wouldn't throw me if he could; and I don't think he can. I am as safe as you will be in the rocking-chair."

"It looks like it," retorts Alice, with an ironical smile: for the colt is dancing about impatiently, and pawing up the gravel path—Bob's pet gravel path.

"It is only his fun," says Paula, patting the sleek, shiny neck. "I like him to dance. I wouldn't give a penny for a horse that hadn't some wickedness in him."

Alice smiles.

"Strange, perverted taste," she says. "Do you extend it to mankind?"

Paula feels the keen shaft, but she looks the striker steadily in the eyes.

"I almost think I do," she says, softly. "Good-bye."

"Good-bye, dear," says Alice, sweetly; but she has still another shaft. "If Sir Herrick should arrive, what shall I tell him?"

"Give him my love and something to eat," says Paula, and she calls you off at a sharp whistle.

"Poor Alice," she murmurs, her face flushed, now that she is out of sight. "There must have been two fairy god-mothers at her christening; one made her beautiful, and the other slightly—cruel! Never mind, dear, we must forgive her," and the colt shakes his head and cuts across the meadow, taking the iron hurdle like a bird.

There is no tonic in the wide world, no cure for melancholy and low spirits like a good gallop on a fresh, spirited horse, up to your weight, on a bright, sunny morning. If one could only patent it what a fortune he'd make.

Paula rides almost in a straight line for an hour, the light weight of the slim figure a mere feather on the strong, young horse, and then she pulls up at a small cottage, whose inmates are humble friends of Bob's, and who welcome her advent as if she were a princess. She gets down, and a tottering old man in a smock frock brings some water and a feed of corn for the colt, and the old dame brings a cake and cup of new milk for its mistress, and Paula seats herself on the settle outside the door, and enjoys her simple lunch—"her omely lunch," as Mr. Palmer would say.

There are no doubts and fears left now. They have all vanished; the colt has left them far behind.

She chats with the old people, tells them how Mr. Bob is, and how the grass is looking, and discourses with sweet patience on the subject of the old dame's rheumatic and the old man's deafness, until the colt is rested and shows signs of impatience. Then, with a blessing in front of her, she rides away homewards.

Presently she comes to the spot where Stancy so cleverly upset the coach, and at the sight of it her heart gives a little bound, for there, a short distance in front of her, is the entrance to the woods.

There is only a narrow path, in some places scarcely wide enough to permit of an ordinary horse to pass; but the colt is not an ordinary horse, and Paula, without a moment's hesitation, and notwithstanding that it is high felony at least to take a horse into the woods, puts the colt at a likely opening at the fence and trots in under the shadow of the sweet-smelling pines.

Presently she comes to the bank where they sat, they two, when the old world took unto itself a new beauty for her—when she heard for the first time the srowal of a man's love. For a moment she draws rein and looks round about her as if in a dream: or was that a dream, and is this awakening? Then, with a sigh, she scarcely realises it; is content not to realise it, but to sit silent and heavy with love's unspoken, passionate memories, she touches the colt with her glove and rides on.

But as she does so the colt starts, and looking up she sees a tall figure standing on the bank regarding her, and hears a voice speaking her name. "Paula! Paula!" not loudly, but with a rapt tone of suppressed joy and—ah, is it fear?

"Rick!" bursts from her parted lips, and the next moment he is at her side, and his strong arm is round her.

For a second or two they are silent, their eyes fixed on each other's, their lips parted, the sudden pallor spreading over Paula's face giving place to the blush-rose that generally holds throne there.

It is so sudden, so unexpected, that motionless and accept the fierce joy of his presence. He is the first to speak.

"My darling!" he murmurs. "I scarcely dared hope, and yet something drew me here!"

She draws a long-breath and awakens.

"When—" she says.

"I came down this morning," he answers, knowing by lovers' instincts what she would ask, and hastens to reply that she may have time to recover. "Only this morning, I reached the cottage a quarter of an hour after you had left—only a quarter of an hour. I went down to the stream, and not finding you there I came on to the wood—drawn here by magic charms, Paula."

"Didn't—didn't they tell you I was riding?" she asks, with a puzzled smile. "No," he says; "they—Alice; I mean—forgot it, I suppose."

There is silence for a moment, during which his eyes devour her with love-hunger.

How beautiful she looks in the dark, close-fitting habit, showing every graceful line and curve of her slim, girlish figure; and her pure, beautiful face, all glowing with the joy of meeting him!

Oh, Heaven! if he were to lose her! if the punishment for his past folly should take that shape, it would be more than he could bear.

"Won't you come down and rest a little while?" he murmurs, his voice just audible. It seems as if he could not speak too tenderly, too softly.

She shakes her head, then she gives him her hand and slips from the saddle. He slings the bridle over his right arm, and puts the other around her.

"You did not expect me—and yet I am beyond my time?" he says.

She gives a start. In the joy of his advent she had clean forgotten that awful letter, and all the horrid doubts and fears it bred.

"Yes," she says. "Why didn't you write?"

The faintest shadow crosses his face.

"No," he answers; "I hoped to get here sooner, and did not write, thinking that I should catch my letter up. But business"—with an inward pang half-sad, half-furious—"business kept me. And are you glad to see me?"

She does not answer, but she looks down.

"And now tell me all the news," he says, brightly, chasing away the hateful memories of the past three days which her words have called up.

"There is none," she says; "there never is any news."

"No news from the Court?" he says. Then he looks at her with sudden enquiry, for her face has flushed hotly. Stancy de Palmer's foolish proposal flashes across her mind.

"No, no," she says, hurriedly, anxious to get rid of the topic.

"And Bob?" he asks.

"Bob's in London," she says.

"In London!" and he laughs. "It is not often he honours the gay metropolis, is it? When did he go? Was he there while I was? I wish I had known it."

Then he stops short, reminded of the danger that Bob's presence would have caused.

"He went last night," says Paula in a low voice.

He looks at her meditatively, unsuspicious.

"And you are left alone?" he murmurs scarcely complimentary to Alice. "I am glad I have come back."

"Are you?" softly.

"Yes, glad is not the word," and he draws a long breath. "Ah, Paula, how have you withered me, that I can't be happy away from you for a few days even? You can tell what a heavy load fell like ice on my heart when they told me you were out. I expected to see you on the terrace, and looked anxiously for a glimpse of the muslin dress. Do you know that I made a vow last night?"

"Did you? What was it?" and she looks up at the handsome face, handsomer than ever in her eyes, now that she has been parted from it for a few days.

"I made a vow that I would never leave you again, my witch! Never, until we were made one and inseparable."

The crimson dyes her face and neck at the thought.

"Vows are made to be broken," she says.

"Not this," he says, with a great firmness. "Paula, never man, I think, was ever so madly in love as I am. It is not love, it is enchantment. Do you know that yesterday I was walking down Regent Street, thinking of you—has there been any moment that I have not thought of you?—and I stopped mechanically to gaze, with the rest of a gaping crowd, at a photographer's window, and there I, gazing without eyes, as they say, saw suddenly a face something like yours; it wasn't much, just a reminiscence, and the blood rushed to my face, and my heart beat—and—ah! you are laughing at me!" and he smiles.

But she is not laughing; instead she is clinging closer to him with an awful fear at her heart, a fear lest he should ever know that she had doubted him; lest he should learn that she had sent Bob to play the spy and detective.

For now, with his passionate words ringing like sweetest music in her ears, she knew that the cruel letter was a libel, and that she was a weak, foolish imbecile to be deceived by it. Oh, Heaven! if he should ever know that she had believed in it for a moment!

"No, no, I was not laughing," she breathes.

"You shall if you like," he says. "I love to hear you laugh. Have you been very merry while I have been away?"

"No—not very merry," with a guilty shudder.

"Don't I mean you make me vain and wild with happiness by telling me that you have missed me!" he says, laughing, but with a flush on his face.

"Will it make you vain?" she asks.

"Then it must, for"—raising her eyes to his—"I have missed you horribly, terribly. The hours have hung like lead; the time has stopped—actually stopped, and—ah, Rick, keep your vow!" and her head droops against him. "Keep your vow. I am not fit to be left. I am a stupid, idiotic girl that ought not to be left alone; I am indeed! If you knew—but no, no! But keep your vow, Rick!"

"My darling!" he murmurs, and he bends his head and kisses her. "My darling! Why! Flossie—"

Merciful Heaven! what has he said? What demon of the bottomless pit has put that name into his mouth? Is he mad?

DON'T BE A "MISERY-FACTORY"

Stop Headaches, Bilious Spells, Colds and Constipation with "Cascarets"—Ideal Physic!

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach and colds.

Are you keeping your liver and bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely shocking your insides every few days with Calomel, Salts, Oil or violent Pills?

Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels which is now keeping you in constant misery. Cascarets never gripe, sicken or cause inconvenience and Cascarets cost so little too.

EXTRADITION DISCUSSION.
 BERLIN, Feb. 9. The Committee on Foreign Affairs, of the National Assembly will meet to-day to consider the extradition question. It seems improbable that a reply to the Entente demand for the surrender of Germans whose names are contained in the list recently delivered, will be made until a response is received by the German government to its note of January 25. In this note Germany asked the Allies to renounce execution of the extradition article of the Peace Treaty, affirming that it would inevitably cause political and economic troubles, the alternative being proposed that trial of the persons involved be held in Germany, with the participation of Allied representatives.

KOREANS DRIVE OUT JAPANESE.
 LONDON, Feb. 9. Northern Korea has been evacuated by the Japanese, it is claimed in a wireless despatch from Moscow to-day, quoting an Omsk message. The population rose to aid the Korean forces from Chinese territory, it is declared. An Omsk message as given in a Bolshevik wireless, says that on February 6th bands of Koreans raided in Chinese territory, crossed the frontier and attacked the Japanese. Masses of the population are joining the insurgents. It is added that the Japanese are retreating and evacuating Northern Korea.

BRITISH IN DANZIG.
 BERLIN, Feb. 9. The advance guard of the British battalion, which will be one of the units of occupation in Danzig, has arrived in that city and the German troops left on Sunday.

THE BRADBOYNE'S FATE.
 HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 9. The second officer and five men of the Oronian lost their lives while endeavoring to take off members of the crew of the Bradboyne, which was abandoned in the Atlantic, according to radio advices reaching here to-day. Last night twenty-five members of the crew of the Bradboyne were reported safe aboard the Oronian and Monmouth. No particulars are at hand as to the fate of the remaining members of the crew or the circumstances under which the steamer was abandoned.

LYNCHING IN U. S. A.
 LEXINGTON, Ky., Feb. 9. Four persons were killed and fifteen injured here to-day, when a mob, intent upon lynching Wm. Leckett, a negro, who confessed to the murder of ten year old Geneva Hardman, charged the court house, during Leckett's trial, and was fired upon by the police and state troops. Two women were among those wounded by the troops.

THE BERKSHIRE HOUSE FIRE.
 SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9. Only one life was known definitely to-day to have been lost last night in a fire that destroyed the fashionable Berkshire apartment hotel at Butter and Jones Street. A score of persons are in various hospitals, however, suffering from burns and injuries.

WILL AND WORK.
 BELFAST, Feb. 9. Automobile drivers, who recently struck, as a protest against the order that they obtain a permit before operating their machines, have declared their strike off and are returning to their work. This movement was general throughout Ireland, outside Ulster. The men, however, still refuse to take out permits, asserting that the authorities have insisted upon this formally in order that the policy might interfere with drivers.

MONCHY'S CREW IN NEW YORK.
 NEW YORK, Feb. 9. The British steamer Persian Prince, 26 days out from Liverpool, arrived here to-day with six members of the crew of the new three masted schooner Monchy, rescued on January 28th from the sinking craft in mid ocean, where she was abandoned. It was the Monchy's maiden voyage.

THE EXCHANGE PROBLEM.
 PARIS, Feb. 9. Consideration of the general European financial situation, as reflected in exchange, resulted in the adoption on Saturday by the Supreme economic council of the resolution advocating a conference of competent ministers of France, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium, to consider possible measures for relief.

Obituary.
 We regret to chronicle the sudden passing of Mrs. Ann Maria Badcock, wife of Josiah Badcock of Cupids, at the early age of forty-eight years, which took place at her home on Jan. 27th. The deceased was the daughter of Margaret and the late Samuel Dawe of Cupids, where she resided all through her life. Her marriage to Josiah Badcock took place on June 15th, 1898, and her whole life was marked by peace and happiness. To know her was to love her. She possessed the meek and gentle spirit of the Divine Master, as from her childhood she faithfully followed in His footsteps, living in charity with all, entertaining strangers, helping the poor and needy, visiting and administering to those who were sick and brightening the pathway of others by her happy smile and words of advice and counsel. She also identified herself with the different departments of work in connection with the Methodist Church, and took an active part in the social life of the community. During the last few months she was confined to her home through failing health, and the whole settlement was shocked at the news of her sudden passing. The esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the numerous expressions of regret and offers of deepest sympathy from all classes and creeds of the community, and by the long concourse of friends who followed the remains to the church, where an impressive and solemn sermon was preached by the Rev. Wm. Swan, taking his text from I Samuel, 20th chapter, and the latter part of the 18th verse, "And thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty." The service was continued at the cemetery, where just as the golden sun was sinking in the west, she was calmly laid to rest in the family plot, and it was concluded with the singing of that well known hymn, "Safe in the arms of Jesus." She is survived by her husband, her widowed mother, and an only sister, Mrs. E. H. Hunt, of Caledonia, Nova Scotia, to whom the deepest sympathy is extended.—Com.

Appreciates Telegram.
 Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir,—It is with great interest that I look through the columns of the Evening Telegram, and read so keenly the many items and articles from the pens of your numerous contributors, especially Mr. H. F. Shortis. I have noted all that he says concerning the laying of the Atlantic Cable, and can remember distinctly, although but a little child of six years at the time, when my father and mother with a great many neighbors and friends made a trip to Heart's Content to see the Great Eastern, and notwithstanding that this occurred fifty three years ago, it comes before my memory very vividly.

I was also greatly interested in "From Out the Starred Past," reproducing the letters of Mr. W. Kelton, having heard my parents speak of him many and many a time. (For the benefit of our esteemed correspondent, we have the pleasure of informing him that the continuation of the Kelton letters will shortly commence.—Ed.) The name of Mr. Shortis is very familiar to me.
 Some twenty-five or thirty years ago an esteemed friend of mine made quick and prosperous voyages in a schooner called the Queen Victoria. One in particular is worthy of mention, when he made the record trip all through her life. Her marriage to Josiah Badcock took place on June 15th, 1898, and her whole life was marked by peace and happiness. To know her was to love her. She possessed the meek and gentle spirit of the Divine Master, as from her childhood she faithfully followed in His footsteps, living in charity with all, entertaining strangers, helping the poor and needy, visiting and administering to those who were sick and brightening the pathway of others by her happy smile and words of advice and counsel. She also identified herself with the different departments of work in connection with the Methodist Church, and took an active part in the social life of the community. During the last few months she was confined to her home through failing health, and the whole settlement was shocked at the news of her sudden passing. The esteem in which she was held was evidenced by the numerous expressions of regret and offers of deepest sympathy from all classes and creeds of the community, and by the long concourse of friends who followed the remains to the church, where an impressive and solemn sermon was preached by the Rev. She is survived by her husband, her widowed mother, and an only sister, Mrs. E. H. Hunt, of Caledonia, Nova Scotia, to whom the deepest sympathy is extended.—Com.

In an early January issue of the Evening Telegram there was a most interesting and touching account of an "Unsolved Sea Mystery"—the loss of S. S. Lion. What a memorable time that 6th of January 1882 is to the writer, he having escaped being on that ill-fated ship by but a hairs breath, as one might say, and often the words of the Psalmist "What is man that thou art mindful of him," come to me. Well do I remember that splendid night of January 6th when the steamer Lion left St. John's for Trinity and was never heard of afterwards, and well do I also remember the Christmas festival in the old schoolroom at St. John's on the night of January 6th where two of our beloved pupil teachers spent their last night on earth, both of them having booked passed by the Lion, Miss Watkinson to go to Trinity teaching, and Jimmie Grant going to spend a few days with friends. Then the Rev. H. Foster and his fair young bride, bound to Trinity where the former was to preach the word of life, and while father, mother and sisters were even celebrating the wedding of their daughter and sister, the house of joy was turned into a house of mourning. The aged father did not recover from the stroke of the fatal news of the loss of the ship and her passengers. The strain was too great, and a broken heart set the spirit free of its earthly tenement, and parent and child met in the Paradise of God. The news of the disaster did not reach many homes in and about Trinity for some days, and when the worst was known, there was heard a sound of weeping and lamentation; "Rachel mourning for her children and would not be comforted because they were not."
 Yours truly,

Tartar on Teeth Shows You Leave the Film
 All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Free
 A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to show you its effects. See coupon.

Remove the Film
 Film is the basis of tartar. It is the source of discolored teeth and decay. In brushing teeth you leave a slimy film. You can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Your tooth paste cannot dissolve it. Most tooth troubles are now traced to that clinging film.
 That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.
 Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. So the one great object in cleaning teeth should be to end that film.
 Dental science, after years of searching has found a way to do that. For home use the way is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.
 The results are known. Convincing, clinical and laboratory tests have proved them beyond question. Leading dentists everywhere now advocate its use.

A 10-Day Test Supplied
 We now send a 10-Day Tube to anyone who asks. Thus we are starting countless people toward cleaner, safer teeth.
 Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object is to dissolve the film, then to day by day combat it.
 The way seems simple, but pepsin must be activated. The usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. It is the invention of a harmless activating method which makes pepsin possible. That, with other Pepsodent ingredients, is doing now what was never done before.
 Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.
 Read the book we send you. Learn the reason for these things. Then judge for yourself if you want your teeth kept in that way always. Cut out the coupon now.

A Benefactor of the Race
 Lord Lister, the "father of antiseptic surgery," the famous doctor who made surgery safe, died on February 10, 1912, at Walmer, in his eighty-second year. Before the Listerian methods of antiseptic surgery were adopted, nearly fifty per cent. of surgical operations proved fatal owing to blood poisoning. It has been graphically said of Lord Lister that he saved more lives than Napoleon destroyed in his wars. Joseph Lister's parents were Quakers, and he was educated at the Quaker school at Tottenham, and afterwards studied medicine and surgery at University College, London. It was not until 1860, when he was Regius Professor of Surgery in the University of Glasgow that he devised his new system. When he began his experiments, he intended the word "antiseptic" as indicating the avoidance of putrefactive changes. Carbolic acid, which had previously been used in bandaging, was selected by him as the agent and he gradually worked out the details of his system. Not only was everything used in operations disinfected, but he introduced the carbolic spray during the actual operations, and, by an ingeniously devised carbolic gauze he protected the wounds from further infection. The Listerian bandage, as it was called, was both applied and changed under a continuous carbolic spray, and honours were showered on the famous surgeon.

Board of Trade Discussion.

New Resolution Adopted Without Dissent.

The Board of Trade met in their Room yesterday afternoon to discuss the proposed amendments to the Fish Export Regulations. Mr. H. B. Cowan, Vice-President, occupied the chair. Mr. Arch Munn spoke first as follows:

Competition as the life of trade has been the claim of past generations, and I have no doubt it is true, otherwise it should have died a natural death long ago. But whatever way you look at the present regulations, it points to the elimination of competition, both at home and in foreign markets.

True we all have so many different ideas, and look from so many ways how this should be remedied. Although certain regulations should be enforced under special conditions, it certainly should be our aim to create and foster competition between these different Mediterranean markets, Portugal, Spain, Italy and Greece.

Should it not be that each of these countries have one or more men as representative quite independent of the other country. What do we find the Government and those closely associated with them doing, appointing a Spanish Broker, who has more than he can properly attend to in his own country, to try and handle the Italian market, a market that would not buy from him until they were forced to.

This brings out what I have already said, that there should be another man in Italy, and the other countries quite distinct from Spain. Could I be permitted to say what might be regarded as a more personal nature.

Our firm was brought into some of the correspondence when these regulations were first brought into force, saying Munn sold fish to Italy at 10% less than Mr. Hawes was asking for same quality of fish. I take this opportunity of contradicting that statement, and also say to the party or parties who circulated it, that they were deliberately telling an untruth.

It is good to see the Government taking an interest in our fishery, instead of spending all their energy on Road Boards, and now they have started I trust it will not be long until they get regulations regarding the cure, inspection, etc., but this should not be done in an arbitrary way, and make rules such as the confining of the fishermen to the quantity of fish he should be allowed to catch, or amount any one firm should be allowed to sell.

Does this not give us cause to reflect on our mode and class of shipping, and cannot be seen to see that sooner or later, likely sooner than we expect, the greater portion of our catch, which goes forward by sail to-day will be going forward by steam, and will this not lessen the loss by marine peril, and we will then have more fish to sell.

Should we not be keeping good friends with all our customers, and making more friends, rather than antagonising them as we are doing.

I believe we all agree that certain regulations should be brought into force, but it is hard to say how far we are ready to go with these regulations.

But, Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, what to my mind is the most serious blunder of the Government, is the great lack of diplomacy, both at home here with the whole fish trade, and abroad with every one of our fish buying customers both in Europe and Brazil.

By selling vessels, six shippers and Port Union . . . $1068 gts. By all other shippers . . . $4778 gts. This does not include any without now loading, nor Western shipments.

Now in the course of debate certain statements were made and denied such as: The Nova Scotians are laughing at our folly, as vide the extract from one of their newspapers read to this meeting by Mr. Duder.

Who appointed or suggested the appointment of Lind and Couto? We were told by the 6 consulted in this appointment?

At any rate Lind and Couto are in reality the Agents, as when my firm applied for the license, they were left-untitled reducing the supply and that in the face of a greater demand.

It has been asserted that Hawes & Co. do not include the six firms. But will it eventually? The basis upon which they are going to do business is set forth in the agreement which has been published in the press.

These 6 Socialists give none of their profits to labor, but they keep all the profits to themselves, as well as the "group" which are very largely derived from commissions charged on shipments of those outside the ring.

It is a well known truth that "Competition is the life of Trade." If this be so then the converse is equally true. By the Proclamation you eliminate competition, for several Portuguese houses have stated that they will not buy through any other agent than the one they have named.

The same applies to Portugal. Portugal has been a member of the Board of Trade for the past 50 years, will it submit to be dictated to by this De-mission to the prejudice of its own merchant.

It, as has been asserted in this debate, that Portugal is the natural outlet for the produce of our merchants to carry on business in our western ports, and to become a large portion of their export, and will they be benefited if the old tax which was formerly charged be re-imposed?

From 1860 to 1890 with undeveloped competition we found it difficult to export our fish, a product which shall we do now with the increased production of these competitors added to by what the United States and Japan have done.

The Nova Scotians are laughing at our folly, as vide the extract from one of their newspapers read to this meeting by Mr. Duder.

Whatever conclusions may be arrived at, Mr. Duder is entitled to the warmest thanks of this meeting for his patriotic and courageous speech. I have heard no reply to the speeches of Sir John C. Crosbie or of Messrs. Earle and Long; but they like myself agree that the outcome of the Proclamation is to violate the basic principles of economy, is to restrain Trade, is to give undue preference to a minority over a majority, is to limit competition, is to lower prices, is to alienate our customers, and is to will effect the welfare of every class in the community.

Some will say on account largely of the Great War. True, men were taken from the growing of sugar beet, from the wheat fields of France and Flanders, denuded of labor, and the areas were left-untitled reducing the supply and that in the face of a greater demand.

It has been asserted that Hawes & Co. do not include the six firms. But will it eventually? The basis upon which they are going to do business is set forth in the agreement which has been published in the press.

Nfld. Poultry Association

Last night at the Board of Trade Rooms the February meeting of the Nfld. Poultry Association was held. Mr. H. W. Lemesurier, C.M.O., was in the chair. Amongst the members present was Mr. A. J. Bayly, Secretary of the Board of Agriculture. The feature of last night's meeting was a paper by Judge Walter Reid, member of the American Poultry Association, on the subject, "my visit to the famous farms of W. R. Fishel, Hope, Indiana." The judge described his visit to the National Poultry Exhibition at New York in 1912, to Madison Square Garden; his travels west to Fishelton, the home of the world's famous Plymouth Rocks, where 120 acres of fine farm land is devoted to raising thousands of this famous breed. He spoke of the magnificent reception given him by the poultry men of Indiana, the motor drives to the country, and his subsequent visit to Indianapolis poultry show. Judge Reid saw a Barr'd Plymouth Rock cock sold for a thousand dollars by breeder, A. C. Hawkins. Altogether Judge Reid spent five weeks at the Fishel poultry farm and he says that it was one of the finest trips he has ever had. Mr. Fishel is a busy man, getting up each morning at 4 o'clock, and has ten assistants at work caring for the birds, besides his son Edward. This farm is a financial success, and Mr. Fishel has been in the poultry game for 30 years. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was passed to the lecturer by the members present.

Current Events Club.

The address given by Miss Lecky at the Ladies' Reading Room last Saturday afternoon, on "School Care Committee Work" in London, England, was of exceptional interest. Having been Secretary of a branch of this organization for the lengthy period of ten years, Miss Lecky spoke with the mature knowledge of experience combined with an enthusiastic worker in a noble cause. That the antagonism with which the social reformer has to contend, can be turned into esteem, if not affectionate regard, was fully demonstrated in the course of Miss Lecky's address. It was an account of infinite and ingratiating persistence founded on wisdom and sympathy. Mrs. A. Macpherson, who presided at the meeting, expressed the gratitude of the members of the Club to Miss Lecky in proposing a hearty vote of thanks. Tea—kindly provided by Mrs. Squires—brought to a close a very pleasant afternoon.

Fire Alarm.

The West End and Central fire companies were called out at 11:30 last night to the premises of Mr. H. Estler, shipwright, Water Street West. A fire had started in the office, supposed to be caused by a defective stove pipe. Not much damage to the premises was done, however. The all out signal sounded a few minutes after.

The New Resolution.

Yesterday's session of the Board of Trade closed the debate on the Fish Export Regulations, which had been carried along during a period of three days' discussion. The result of the discussion has been the adoption of an entirely new resolution to that submitted by Hon. Mr. Grieve: a resolution which embraces and covers practically the whole situation and the whole difficulty, and one which in its spirit of fairness and equity will be satisfactory to every person concerned. The Board of Trade considered it as such for its adoption was accomplished without discussion, and it only remains now for the Government to recognize the voice and sentiment of the commercial community and act accordingly.

The objection of the trade was not so much to the regulations themselves as to their harsh and drastic tenor. Every section of the country fully realizes the necessity and importance of legislation to regulate and meet the requirements of the commercial activities of this dominion in the foreign sale and export of our principal product, but the restrictions and restraints of the November proclamation were altogether too rigorous to be accepted without protest, hence the very aggressive fight which has been made against them, one effect of which has been to develop an unanimous opinion that a much better and more liberal series of rules will be of more advantage to our foreign trade than the present schedule, which has been widely condemned and criticised. Another important feature embodied in the Board of Trade Resolution is a recommendation that the Advisory Board, at certain times and under certain conditions meet the whole body of the St. John's Fish Exporters and as many outport shippers as may be in the city at such times, to discuss any changes in arrangements as may be found necessary to meet conditions abroad.

The Resolution also incorporates the idea, heretofore in practice, but contrary to the spirit and letter of the Marine and Fisheries Regulations, that all shippers should have the right of offering their cargoes of codfish direct to the buyer, IN ALL MARKETS, excepting Italy at present, and in that country, as well, so soon as conditions will permit, provided the Italians maintain prices and agree to whatever regulations may be promulgated. Should the Government grant the request of the Board of Trade, as embodied in the adopted resolution, published in the report on the debate in another column of today's issue, there will, we think, be no difficulty in so arranging the situation to the added prosperity and advantage of the dominion, and the smoothing over of the many difficulties caused by the enforcement of the November regulations governing the export and sale of fish.

Trade Bakery Meeting.

The first annual meeting of the Trade Bakery Co. Ltd. was held yesterday in the Board of Trade Rooms. The president of the Co., Mr. Frank Steer occupied the chair. The reports presented by the directors was favorably commented upon. The financial statement duly audited by Messrs. G. N. Read, Son and Watson, showed the company to be in a sound financial position. The company has only been operating since June last and under the careful management of Mr. F. E. Rabbits, bids fair to be very successful. No dividend was declared, the surplus earnings being placed in the reserve account. The retiring directors were re-elected, viz.: President, Frank H. Steer; Vice-President, J. W. Withers; Secretary, Geo. R. Williams; Messrs. Eric A. Bowring, W. S. Monroe, Harold Macpherson and Jos. Sellars.

The Evangelists.

At Gower Street Church.

One should not expect on Monday night as magnificent an attendance as greeted the Evangelists at the beginning of their campaign on Sunday. That meeting was one in a thousand, and will long be remembered. However, the last night's attendance was unusually good for Monday—"Blue Monday" as it is sometimes called. A warm and sympathetic spirit pervaded the meetings. There is an understanding between the Evangelists and their audience which makes the work easy.

The social uplift is a subject which lies near the heart of every sincere lover of humanity. But in our earnest desire for the betterment of conditions surrounding us, we must never forget that the secret source of all injustice, cruelty, oppression and abuse, and all other evils which afflict mankind, is the innate selfishness of man. The message that the Evangelists are bringing to St. John's is the old, old message that Christ, and only Christ, can change the heart of man "out of which proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, and evil eye, blasphemy, pride, and foolishness,"—consequently Christ is the only hope of mankind.

The meeting opened with a lively song service, conducted by Mr. Demarest, assisted by Miss Florence Guy of Carbonear, at the piano, who had been the accompanist through the last four week's campaign. Miss Guy is spending a few weeks with relatives in St. John's, and at the urgent request of Mr. Demarest, will preside at the piano, and help them while the meetings are continued here. Miss Guy is a sister of next year's Rhode Scholar.

Last night Mrs. Demarest spoke on the "Blessed Ones," or as she sometimes calls them "God's Favorites." (Matt. 5: 1-12.) She was heard distinctly in the upper gallery. We are glad her cold is better. Rev. T. B. Darby, M.A., opened the service with prayer.

"God loves us all equally, and yet even as a mother will have a different love for the child who only causes her joy than that which she bears for her little black sheep, so God has those upon whom He delights to pour His richest blessings, those whom He will do His will. The men and women who want to consider who are these blessed ones—these friends of God."

"Note that the Apostle Matthew thought it worth while to put on record that 'Christ opened His mouth and taught them, saying.' Is it worth recording when you open your mouth? How often we forget that the tongue is not controlled by the Holy Spirit, it is a fire and a world of iniquity."

"The first word our Lord uttered in that sermon of sermons was 'Blessed.'"

He comes to bless, not to curse; to save, not to condemn. His life, words and actions were all one great blessing.

Mrs. Demarest drew a striking contrast between God's blessed ones and the world's. "We read that Jesus said, 'Blessed are the poor in spirit.' The world says, 'Blessed are the wise and prudent; the clever and calculating.' 'Blessed are they that mourn.' The world says, 'Blessed are the care-free, the pleasure-lovers.' 'Blessed are the meek.' But the world gives it thus, 'Blessed are the proud, the great, the mighty, the rich.' 'Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness.' But again the world says, 'Blessed are the self-satisfied, the complacent, the indifferent.' 'Blessed are the merciful.' The world says, 'Blessed are the oppressors, who extract full reprisals, who demand exorbitant indemnities.' 'Blessed are the pure in heart.' The world says, 'Blessed are they who know good and evil, who exploit that which is unclean for their own pleasure and satisfaction.' 'Blessed are the peacemakers.' In the world it is, 'Blessed are the belligerents, those who glory in war and in the defeating of their enemies.' 'Blessed are they who are persecuted for righteousness sake.' The world despises such, and calls them milk-sops, effeminate, and says, 'Blessed are ye when men shall praise you, exalt you, and shall say all manner of good about you, when ye bask in the smile of the world's approval.'"

"How plainly this shows that we cannot serve two masters, for the laws of the Kingdom are diametrically opposed to those of the world."

In connection with the "poor in spirit," which Mrs. Demarest said were the "guileless, the simple, the childlike," Mrs. Demarest told the story of Tom Thomas, a converted Welsh miner. He was illiterate, and had been guilty of most every sin. He was converted without attending a meeting, simply hearing the singing of a procession on its way to church, during the great Welsh revival. He fell down on his face in the street and cried out for mercy. This man became one of the rarest saints she had ever known. He learned to read just so that he could study his Bible. He became one of those Christians who seldom meet, of whom it could be said "a man in whom there is no guile." He became as simple and humble and trusting as a little child, and as the speaker told of his last utterances exclamations of praise to God, and longed to see his beloved his Master who was looking for him through the lattice,—many were moved to tears. After further singing and entreaty for decision, the Rev. Mr. Bugden closed the service with Benediction.

TRINITY, To-day.
Mrs. Hester White, who had attained her 92nd year, passed peacefully away at Trinity on Monday, 9th inst. Mrs. White was the widow of the late Capt. Robert White, who had predeceased her over twenty years ago, since which time she has been the constant care of her son, Mr. W. White, sub-collector of Trinity. Mr. James White, of St. John's is also a son of the deceased. The funeral will take place on Wednesday p.m. F. SOMERTON.

No Chaperon Present.

Report was made to the police this morning that for some days past a number of females have been spending the nights with the negro portion of the crew of a foreign going steamer now loading fish at an East End pier. These women go aboard late at night and, staying aboard for the remainder of the night, leave early the following morning. The white element of the crew has been witnessing these goings-on with growing disgust and resolved this morning to permit them no longer. The police casually dropped on board to see the creatures and hinted in broad terms that, in St. John's society, it is not proper for ladies to stay aboard a ship with gentlemen unless a chaperon be present.

Bargain News is Good News-- It Travels Fast,

That's Why

This great yearly event is growing greater each day. The people of St. John's and surrounding settlements have seldom bought such high grade merchandise at such great reductions, and it's very unlikely that they'll have another opportunity like this for a long time to come.

This Great Annual FEBRUARY SALE

is Strong Where Other Sales Are Generally Weak

All you have to do is to make comparison of quality and price and you'll be convinced of the absolute truth of the statement. The goods offered here during this Sale exceed in value-giving anything we have previously offered.

L. O. A. Lecture Series.

"Royal Oak" Lodge Taking the Lead.
A short time ago the members of the Royal Oak Lodge, L.O.A., met and formed a committee of entertainment for its members and friends. The year just passed has been a very successful one for the Association and especially for the city lodges. There being so many questions of public interest at present and the Society being noted for the interest it takes in the same, it is proposed to hold a series of lectures, debates, etc. The speakers will be the leaders in churches and societies of the city. The committee cordially invites all who wish to attend, to be present on these occasions. The dates for the meetings will be advertised in the daily papers.

Terra Nova to the Rescue Where Does the Wind Begin?

The movement of these currents of air leaves many pockets of space where there is no air, and when one of these is uncovered the air rushes in and creates a wind in doing so. These air currents are continually pressing against each other to get some place else. They change their direction according to the pressure that is being applied to them. Sometimes the pressure will be very light in one part of the air, many miles away perhaps, and then the air in another part, which is under great pressure, will rush with great force into the part where the pressure is light, and thus form a big wind. When the pressure stops the wind stops. We have probably felt the wind which comes out of the valve of the automobile tire when the cap is taken off to pump up the tire. The reason is that the air in the tube of the tire is under great pressure, and when the opportunity is given to get where the pressure is light it starts for that place with a rush and comes out of the valve a real wind.

TITLE BOUT IN EUROPE.
New York, Jan. 21.—Charles B. Cochran, the London promoter, who has been here several weeks trailing Jack Dempsey with a contract signed by Georges Carpentier, has booked passage to return Saturday. He said here to-day he will not worry if he does not have Dempsey's name on the contract when he returns.

"If the bout is staged in 1920 I will be the promoter. The contract I have with the Frenchman is valid any place in the world," he said.

He further declared he would not stage the bout in America, as conditions were not satisfactory, and if future developments demanded the contract to some American promoters. He considers it unlikely that the mill will be held until late in the year, as Manager Deschamps has indicated to him that Carpentier wants a long rest before starting training for the chief contest of his life.

When asked about the statement of Deschamps that he held only an option on the Frenchman's services till February 1, he said: "I am tired denying that. Just wait and see; that will be the best way to prove my claim that I have full fledged contract already signed by a payment of $25,000."

COCHRAN HAS CONTRACT.
New York, Jan. 24.—C. B. Cochran, the English boxing promoter, announced to-night the receipt of a cable message from M. Deschamps, manager of Georges Carpentier in support of his claim that he is the only one who can stage a world's championship bout in 1920. Cochran said he had paid $25,000 to Deschamps for the French title-holder service this year. The message read:

"Awaiting your decision. Have entertained no other offers whatever. Will not do so until pleased by you." Cochran, who will sail home next Saturday, intimated he would hold the bout in England if he can sign up Jack Dempsey.

CARPENTIER DEFEATED BY INFIGHTING.

Paris, Jan. 26.—The worst whipping Georges Carpentier ever got was administered by an American, Klana, infighting did it.

Carpentier claims he was taught a lesson by the Klana fight and immediately started to learn all the tricks of infighting.

He now refers to his method of fighting as the French method, which he takes much credit for developing, and which he says combines English open boxing and close American infighting.

He says he has developed his infighting just as he has his open boxing and his speed.

But many European sport followers are inclined to doubt it. They say that he depends mostly on his speed and cleverness as an open boxer.

He has held the championship of his country in every weight, as he has developed from a mere child in the ring, and practically all, if not actually all, his successful fights were won by speed, brain-work and boxing ability.

He has a punch, as he has demonstrated.

But Beckett gave him scarcely any trouble at all.

Beckett simply couldn't get close enough to him to try any infighting. Carpentier danced all round him.

Dempsey's speed and boxing ability, if they match Carpentier's as reported, will leave the American superior weight and strength for the infighting.

Many European boxing fans say that if Dempsey wins, it will be the old story of American infighting over again.

Booms in Dwarfs.

There have been many famous dwarfs, but none has created the sensation occasioned by the first appearance in public of Mrs. Tom Thumb—whose death at the age of seventy-eight was recently announced—and her diminutive husband, "General" Tom Thumb.

In America, where the tiny couple made their debut, millions of people flocked to see them, and President Lincoln organized a special reception in their honour at the White House.

Over here they were invited to Marlborough House as the guest of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and people came in shoals to London to see them from all over England.

Their success created a boom in dwarfs—or midgets, as they afterwards became to be called—and enterprising showmen ransacked the world for the tiny folk.

But the fickle public soon tired of them, so that Millie Edwards, who was actually the smallest midget to be publicly exhibited, quite failed to catch on, and was eventually reduced to showing herself at a penny a time in an unused shop in the Mile End Road. Yet Millie was only seventeen inches high, as against thirty-two and thirty-one respectively measured by Mr. and Mrs. Tom Thumb.

Another famous dwarf on exhibition here about the same time was Admiral Dot, who measured exactly thirty inches in height. He eventually settled down at a place called White Plains, in the State of New York, where he ran an hotel staffed entirely by dwarfs, and by good management amassed a fortune.

Why Do We See Stars When Hit on the Eye?

We do not really see stars, of course, when we are hit on the eye or when we fall in such a way as to bump the front of our heads. What we do see, or think we see, it light.

To understand this we must go back to the explanation of the five senses—sight, hearing, feeling, tasting and touching. Now, each of these senses has a special set of nerves through which the sensations received by each of the senses is communicated to the brain and, as a rule, these special nerves receive no sensations excepting those which occur in their own particular field of usefulness.

The eye then has nerves of vision; the nose, nerves of smell; the ear, nerves of hearing; the mouth, nerves of touch. As we have seen, then, these special nerves are susceptible of receiving impressions or sensations only in their particular field. But, if you should be able to rouse the nerves of smell in an entirely artificial way and give them a sensation, they might easily act very much as though they smelled something. We find this often in the something when we do not.

Now when some one hits you in the eye, the nerves of vision are disturbed in such a way as to produce upon the brain, the sensation of searing light. In other words, you cannot affect the eye nerves without causing the sensation of light; and that is just what happens when some one hits you in the eye.—From the Book of Wonders.

The Afghan Situation.

Britain has no wish to dominate or annex Afghanistan, as Sir Hamilton Grant explained to the delegates, but the continuance of Afghanistan as an independent state on the borders of India must depend upon its good behavior and upon its influence over the tribes. Unfortunately, both by intrigues amongst the tribes and by approaches to the Bolsheviks on the other side, the present rulers of Afghanistan have shown that so long as they remain in power, they will be a potential source of assistance to the new menace that looms across the northwest frontier of India. That menace cannot wholly be disposed of by armed force and it will be necessary in future to keep strict political watch over the Court of Kabul as well as over the traffic through our frontier passes.

Monument to Bible Translator.

There is at Vitorde, near Brussels, a monument to William Tyndale, translator of the Bible. On its low fat base are inscriptions in English and Flemish.

Tyndale was a native of Gloucester, England, but his sympathy with the new learning aroused suspicion, and he removed to London. Finding it, however, impossible to complete his translations of the New Testament and the Pentateuch, upon which his fame with posterity rests, he removed to Hamburg and later to Cologne, and hence became identified with the continent. He began his printing in 1522 in the very city which now forms the headquarters of the British army of occupation on the Rhine.

Mrs. Harrington is a Well and Happy Woman

Her Husband Praises Tanlac For Her Wonderful Improvement.

"My wife has taken only two bottles of Tanlac but already the change in her condition has been so remarkable that she is looking like an entirely different woman," was the statement made recently by D. P. Harrington, a well-known farmer living at Harwood, Salisbury, New Brunswick, while telling of the experience of his wife, Mrs. Catherine Jane Harrington with the medicine.

"For the past three years my wife has suffered from a bad case of rheumatism," continued Mr. Harrington. "She had severe pains in the back and at times they caused her so much agony she was almost frantic. She was so miserable and restless at night that she did not know what it was to sleep well, and of mornings she often had such dizzy headaches that it was impossible for her to attend to her house work. She had little or no appetite and what she managed to eat seemed to do her more harm than good. Her nerves were in a wretched condition and her whole system was so run-down that she was on the verge of a complete breakdown."

"A friend of ours advised us to try Tanlac and we will always be grateful to him for telling us about it, for it proved to be just the thing my wife needed. She began to pick up after the very first few doses and to-day she is in better health than for years. The rheumatic pains in her back have all disappeared and she can bend over without the least trouble. Her appetite is now splendid and everything she eats agrees with her perfectly. She is no longer nervous and is never bothered with those dizzy headaches any more. She sleeps sound every night and is so much stronger that she says her housework is now easy. She is, a well and happy woman and is always telling her friends what Tanlac did for her."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative, in Harbor Buffet, by Thomas Wakely & Sons; in Placentia, by James Murphy & Sons, and in Topsail by J. K. Bursell.—adv.

Novel Weapons of Offence.

Probably the most remarkable weapons of war ever used were swarms of bees. There are at least two well-authenticated instances of the use of this novel and stinging war material. The first is related by Appian of the siege of Themisyrta in Pontus, by Lucullus, in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built, and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themisyrta dug open these mines from above, and through the holes, cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals, together with swarms of bees. The second instance occurred at Enlilant. The

Have You a Fish Face?

The head of one of London's famous hotel restaurants has developed, during his twenty years' service in that capacity, a very interesting theory. He has trained his wits to his trade, and every set of features he beholds suggests to him some article from the bill of fare.

From a glance at the face of the customer he is able to divine what he will order for his meal.

"The more I study the indications of the features" says the chef, "the more certainly can I tell you what a man usually eats, and, therefore, what he is most likely to order in my restaurant."

"The well-known method of determining the lover of fine vintages by the high colour of his nose is but an elementary case in this fascinating study."

"For instance, if a man walks into my restaurant with small fat eyes and a certain shabbiness about the cheeks, the odds are that he is a man fond of a good fish fillet or a lobster mayonnaise. A customer with full-blooded cheeks and a generous paunch warms me instinctively that his requirements will be an underdone rump steak with a plentiful supply of vegetables."

"Quite a few people are sceptical about this theory, but when one comes to consider it there is nothing very remarkable about it. Diet affects the health and health affects the face. The features of the rigid vegetarian differs greatly from those of the inveterate gourmet. It only requires a diligent study of facial casts to differentiate between the man who likes fish and the man who favours fowl."

British Ex-Officers

ANXIOUS TO LIVE AS SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE.

Hundreds of British ex-officers are seeking new fields in which to fight. British soldiers of fortune promise to be as common on the continent as they were in the days of the Thirty Years' War.

Russia at the present holds out the greatest attractions for the adventurers. After north Russia come Estonia, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. All foreign governments engaged in small wars or in licking their armies into shape are offering posts to demobilized British officers.

On the books of the Russian Embassy are the names of more than 100 officers who have volunteered to serve. The demand is for those with technical knowledge who can act as instructors. At the moment the only front to which the Russian Government is sending officers is to north Russia, so recently evacuated by British forces.

Shipping facilities are surrounded with difficulties, but they are being obtained. On that northern front, before the British left, the Bolsheviks sought to lure British officers to their service. A pamphlet was issued offering them large salaries.

Russian authorities are still considering the matter of pay. As the matter is arranged at present British officers, excepting in case of flying officers, will receive the Russian pay of their rank, which in most cases is hardly more than $50 a month. The Estonian Government has engaged several officers to conduct aerial operations and their pay is even higher than in the British air forces.

The drawback is that the adventurer is paid in the currency of the country for which he fights, and it may or may not be redeemable in future years. North Russian Government rubles, until the British forces left, were guaranteed by Great Britain. The currency of Gen. Yudenitch and of the southern armies in Russia was hardly in the same category, but chances of redeeming their money are not deterring the seekers after war.

Poland is newly arrived in the field of competition for foreign officers and positions as instructors are being offered to demobilized British officers. The monthly pay is at the rate of 800 marks for a captain and 600 marks for a lieutenant. Thirty days' leave in England a year and assurance of medical care and assistance are included in the conditions. The Polish War Office has opened a special department at Warsaw to deal with the affairs of foreign officers.

A visit to the Czecho-Slovak Legation in London reveals that twenty ex-officers of the British army have applied to Prague for service in the Czech army. The trouble with all foreign governments at this moment is their lack of ready funds, but that is an old story. Soldiers of fortune were continuously impetuous. South America may provide a better field for the adventurers. Mexican armies have had and still have many British officers fighting for them.

Hard to Dislodge the Turk.

Just now the fate of the Turk seems to be trembling in the balance. Britain, and probably the United States, would remove the Sultan's throne from Constantinople to some spot in Asia, thus ending forever the dream of a Mohammedan conquest of Europe and at the same time hinting to the world that the "Sword of Mohammed" has lost its sharpness. For long the rule of the Turk over subject races has been disgraced by wholesale massacres, and it would seem a wise thing at this juncture to haul down the Crescent in Constantinople and send the Turk back to Asia to rule over his own people, and no others. But France, lover of liberty, is protesting. She fears that if the Sultan be banished from Constantinople she will have trouble with the millions of Mohammedans in her colonial possessions. But Britain has really more to fear than France from this source, and in any case, with the blood of 1,000,000 murdered Armenians still reddening the earth, it is hard to see how it is possible to justify the continuance of the Sultan's red-handed rule over millions of Christian people. It is high time that the blood-stained Crescent ceased to fly over the ancient city of the Straits.—Atlantic Leader.

GIRLS! A MASS OF WAVY, GLEAMY BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Let "Danderine" save and glorify your hair

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the Danderine and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous, fluffy and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair, and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

OUR WANDERING BOY.

Since nations ceased their throwing fits, their hands in blood imbruing, I often think of Eitel Fritz, and wonder what he's doing. They bring me news of old Ex Bill, from o'er the briny billows; he's in the woods already still, awhacking elms and willows; the sycamore he roundly hits and saws it with emotion; but not a word of Eitel Fritz comes o'er the sooty ocean. Oh, Eitel Fritz, in olden times, you made me rather weary; you were embalmed in German rhymes and German legends beery. The favorite of men and dames, you spent your lifetime maying, with glees, pursued your giddy games, before the grandstand playing. Of all good bets you were the best, one issue that was vital; and now we hear of all the rest, but not a word of Eitel. The Kronprinz Willyum on his tale cuts up some dismal capers, and now and then, with sickly smile, speaks pieces for the papers. We hear of divers busted dukes, and skates of princely title, and Hindenburg and other flukes, but not a word of Eitel. Oh, Eitel Fritz, you giddy boy, once sassy, vain and bossy, does life still seem a round of joy, or is it total- lossy?

Fads and Fashions.

There is a reversion to tubular underwear of linen and batiste. The dull colored jumper in davenport or jersey slips over the head. Tailored dimity blouses and the latest tailored nets are also favored. Millinery boasts every shade of blue from dark navy to electric effects. Braids combine with crepes and wools and make charming sports hats. Waxed black taffeta ribbon appears at neck and waist of new gowns. Chestnut brown straw, with pink quills is a recent Paris idea for a hat. A dominant note in color schemes and designs is of Oriental inspiration. The green feather fans are usually chosen in direct contrast to the gown. Ribbons are promised a tremendous vogue in both millinery and dress-making.

One elaborate opera cloak is lined with cloth of gold veiled with rose chiffon. Street dresses and suit skirts are still short, though evening gowns are longer.

An exquisite blouse of rose point lace is worn with a black chiffon velvet skirt.

Semi-formal and formal lace gowns have an important place in the resort outfit.

Hand-wrought motifs, borders and traceries of wool, floss and tinsel are seen on costly blouses.

The popular "woolies," those chic frocks of knitted materials, are very smart as to material and color.

One very attractive tea gown boasts a tulle capelet with softly tinted artificial grapes at the neck band.

An ultra-smart gown is of novelty tricotee with tinsel threads woven with the fiber.

Mainly About People.

Elizabeth M. Barry is the first woman to be appointed clerk of a court in New York. When it became possible for a mere woman to mingle in politics, Miss Barry started right in to mingle with the best of them and soon found herself a member of the Tammany Hall executive committee. Her appointment as clerk of the Fourth Municipal Court with a salary of $3,000 followed.

Professor John Adam Scott, professor of Greek in the Northwestern University of Illinois, believes ex-President Taft is among the great Americans, but had the fault of taking men into his confidence, who used him to their own advantage. President Wilson makes no confidant. The professor believes a combination of these two men would be a boon to the world.

The wife of Charles de Struve, principal tenor of the Norwegian National Theatre in Christiania, is the daughter of the former Norwegian prime minister, Professor G. F. Hagerup. She was studying music in London when she met the big blond Norwegian. "My father was Ambassador to Sweden when I told him I intended to marry," she says, "and he came to London to give his parental congratulations."

Major-General Sir Newton Moore, K.C.M.G., who is in Canada as representative of the British Advisory Board of Dominion Steel, is a powerfully built man of rather more than average height, with vigor stamped in every movement. General Moore finds the winter weather in Canada something of a change from that to which he has been accustomed, especially as it followed closely on a recent trip to South America. The British financier is an Australian by birth, a former premier of West Australia, and a member of the British House of Commons. He is one of the colonials who have made their influence felt in the mother country. He believes strongly in the development of inter-empire trade and is most optimistic as to the future in this regard.

Hannah Jane Patterson, is a precedent breaker. That is to say she is the first woman to become assistant secretary of war in the United States. Pittsburg is the home of Miss Patterson, says Marden's Magazine. She was born in that city in 1879. Her father is a prominent Pittsburg coal operator. After finishing the public schools of her home city, Miss Patterson entered Wilson College, Chambersburg, Penn., from which institution she was graduated, with high honors, in 1901. Civic work, particularly child-welfare and the establishment of a juvenile court in Allegheny county, Penn., consumed her first few years after leaving college. From 1912 to 1915 Miss Patterson served as chairman of the suffrage party in Pennsylvania. Her administration in that state attracted such wide prominence that she was prevailed upon by the National American Woman Suffrage Association of New York to serve as its secretary during the year 1916.

Rougemont the Fakir.

The famous Louis de Rougemont is reported seriously ill in a London hospital. For some years now he has been lost sight of, and the world supposed him to be dead. De Rougemont first astonished the world in 1888 with his narrative of thirty years among the aborigines of Australia and adventures in the South Seas. He was hailed as the modern Robinson Crusoe, a man whose real life was more romantic than the fiction of Defoe. Members of the Royal Geographical Society went to hear him lecture. He even read a paper before the British Association on the Anthropology of the Australian aborigine. None doubted him until he made one important slip. He wrote in his history about flocks of flying wombats. As the wombat keeps to the earth, and does not venture into the air, questions began to be asked, and finally De Rougemont was bowled out as a "pooft merchant." And now the poor old fakir is dying at the age of eighty-five.—Atlantic Leader.

Strange Australians.

For some years Capt. A. S. White has been exploring unknown Australia, and the account of his adventures in "Travel" introduces to general readers a new group of odd fellow-citizens of this diversified world. Residents in Oodnadatta, a hitherto unexplored part of north-western Australia, these odd people to anybody but themselves, never have need to worry about the high cost of clothing; to paint oneself occasionally takes less time than dressing and undressing at least once every 24 hours. Here the men wear their hair long and the women wear their hair short, and a man would feel eccentric and be so regarded by others, who failed to follow the fashion of wearing the wing-bone of a buzzard, or perhaps an ornamental stick, pierced through his nose. They proved a friendly people to the explorers, and made no hostile demonstration with the thick sticks, sharpened by fire, which serve them as weapons, and they attracted admiration by their physical development, their agility and the remarkable degree to which they had developed the sense of sight and hearing. All in all they seemed a happy sort of people, fond of their children, with whom the men spend a good deal of their time playing games, which on examination are discovered to be educational, according to local ideas, and therefore oddly suggestive of the kindergarten in more complex communities. A roving people, their homes in wet weather are temporary shelters somewhat like the tepees of the North American Indians. And sometimes, one regrets to add, they eat their enemies.

Highwaymen.

By F. O. D.

(In Toronto Saturday Night.)

Have you ever held up, Friend Reader? Of course, you have, but we don't mean that way. We are not referring to the grocer and the butcher and the gent's outfitter and all the other knights of the road who are continually holding up the poor old public these days and removing every-thing except his rheumatism and the gold filling in his teeth.

What we mean is, have you ever while strolling home drowsily from a moist and hilarious party, perchance, had a person in a mask stick a gun in your face, and then while you were frantically clawing the air with both hands, deftly lift your watch and your wad and possibly your overcoat—presuming that it was the sort of overcoat a really nifty highwaymen would consent to be seen in? Has this ever happened to you?

No, we have never been held up our appearance that would suggest to the discriminating footpad that we were worth "frisking." There is nothing conspicuous about our clothes—except possibly their age—and there are no bulges in them to indicate the habit of carrying around a wad of paper money. Besides, we don't keep the hours which are popular with the highwaymen's union. It is true that now and then we sit-in at a friendly little game—ten-cent limit—but the handit who caught us on the way home from one of these wouldn't get even a car-ticket. It is our custom to give everything to the kitty—no, not Kitty! In fact, if the thug was nice about it, we would be perfectly willing to go fifty-fifty with him on any-thing he found. We would even help him to search.

But if we haven't been held up, some of our friends have—their ap-pearance, no doubt, being considerably more prosperous than ours—and that is why we have thought it well to bring this whole question up and dis-cuss it seriously. Only the journalistic friend of ours was returning from a little after-Christmas party. Being a quite informal affair, it broke up at the early hour of two-thirty, and our friend was able to climb into the right night-car and get off at his own street. At real parties, of course, they either don't go home at all, or they are taken in the police ambulance.

Well, our friend, who is a man of large and impressive personality—about two hundred and fifty pounds in his summer underwear, we believe—was strolling along the quiet street where he lives, when he was hailed by a couple of men in a motor car across the street. The car was drawn up to the curb, and a man was stand-ing beside the hood, as though he were about to do some work on the machine.

"Oh, I say, would you mind giving us a hand?" he called. "We're stuck." This being the blessed season of peace and goodwill, and our friend being more than usually full of Christmas spirit—the sort that ladies bring from Montreal wrapped up in their kimonos—he toddled over to lend a friendly hand about the size of a meat-pie.

"Whassa matter?" he asked genially. The man standing beside the hood stepped up to him and shoved some-thing shiny and hard against his shoulder.

"Come across," he growled, "and no noise, or I'll plug yuh."

Our friend had read many dime novels and been to many western movies in his time, and he knew ex-actly what to do. Without a moment's hesitation he reached up both hands and hung them on his ears—that's about as high as a man of his build can get them both at once. He gasped a few times to recover his breath and his bearings, and then his wanted fluency returned to him. With the clearness of inebriation he realized that the whole thing was a joke.

"Boys," he said in his most unctuous tones, "I thank you. Here I am, a poor newspaperman, with Christmas just over and my next envelope three days away. I had to borrow ten cents to get home in a night car—they wouldn't trust me with enough to get a taxi. And yet you hold me up! It is a compliment and I thank you."

All this time the local Claude Duval was struggling with his coat buttons, trying to get at those sacred vest pockets where the average man carries his wealth, his watch, and his tooth picks and matches. But our friend is of such proportions that even when his arms are hanging by his side it would be difficult to loosen his coat—he has to exhale to do it him-self—and with his hands up in the air, it would take Houdini himself to unfasten the buttons. The handit fumbled and pulled and cursed, while our friend looked approvingly on and made helpful suggestions.

"You better start at the bottom and work up," he said. "The top button is always the hardest. But honest, it isn't worth while, boys. There isn't a thing worth taking, except my watch. It's a good one, and it's down in the little pocket on the left hand side. I know it's a good watch, be-cause I paid two dollars for it only three years ago, and it's been keeping dandy time ever since. I'd kind of miss it, but if you boys would really like a good watch, I don't mind letting you have"

"Oh, shut up," growled the exas-perated gunman, and he made a still more desperate effort to get the coat unfastened. While he was struggling, the beard which concealed the lower part of his face was pulled slightly to one side; and out fat friend became more than ever convinced that the whole thing was a joke, and that these bandits were merely a couple of wild lads with a distorted sense of humor. He had suspected this from the first—this shows what half a bottle or so of Scotch can do to give a man nerve—and now he was sure of it. He felt that he could speak freely, and he did.

"Oh, you little rascal," he chuckled, patting the bad man on the head, "one of these days you'll pick on some nervous fellow, and he'll be frighten-ed, and then you will get into trouble. Naughty, naughty!" The handit swore with superb abandon and made threatening mo-tions with the revolver, but still our friend wheezed merrily on.

"Did auntie give you a pretty itty gun for Christmas?" he asked, mak-ing playful efforts to grab it. "But you musn't play rough games like this with it, or auntie will be angry, and papa won't have a tree for you next time, and Santa Claus may send back your letters unopened."

It was no use—they couldn't frighten him into silence, and the other bandit at the wheel of the car was getting obviously nervous. He kept gazing over the side of the machine, gasping frantically up and down the street; and at last he could stand it no longer.

"Jump into the car, fer gawd's sake!" he said. "Can't you see that guy is stalling along until a bull comes in to sight, and then he'll yell for help? Jump into the car. Do you want to be pinched?"

The first bandit hesitated, but it was clear that he too, felt rather nervous about it. It seemed impos-sible that a man should be so cool and chatty while he was being held up, un-less he was playing some very subtle and daring game. So with a final viri-olitic flow of profanity, he leaped into the car. There was a roar from the motor, and the machine went around the corner on two wheels, while our friend shouted lusty adieus after it.

"Goodbye, boys, what's your hurry? Just when we were having a real nice, old-fashioned time. If you come back I'll get the watch for you myself. Goodbye—kiss auntie for me."

And then next day he came down to the office with the chastened feel-ings of the morning after; and on the city editor's desk was a description of the two men who had held him up, and an impressive array of highway robberies which they had committed in that very neighborhood during the evening. Cold perspiration broke out all over him, as he thought of the risk he had been running.

"After this," he confessed to us, "an inmate of the old men's home can hold me up with a clay pipe and get every-thing I have just for the asking. Infact, I'll wear my overcoat open so they won't have any trouble."

But, of course, that is how he feels about it while he's sober. Personally, after such an experience, we would immediately send a heavy order to Montreal; and we would never think of being out after dark without the protection of a large, joyous bun. It is much pleasanter and safer to carry than a revolver.

You see, the whole system in deal-ing with highwaymen is to be confi-dent. Confidence is the secret of suc-cess in holds-up, as in swimming or shots from the tee or any other sport. Of course, it is not always easy to be confident. Without some assistance a man's coolness and savoir-faire are liable to desert him while he is look-ing down the hole in a gun barrel which seems about as big as the end of the St. Clair tunnel. That is just where the fermented beverages of Scotland are likely to prove so helpful. Imagine a Prohibitionist in the position of our obese friend on the night in question! Would he have playfully called the highwayman a little rascal? Certainly not. He would probably have screamed for help and got shot for his pains—though we have an uneasy convic-tion that it would be just our luck to have the bandit miss him. Our modern knights of the road are such sloppy performers—no finesse!

It was very different in the grand old days of Dick Turpin and Claude Duval. Then to be held up was a sort of social privilege, so far as we have been able to learn from our favorite historical novels. The thing was done with an air, you know—a dark night on Hounslow Heath, a splendid fellow suddenly prancing up on a superbi horse, a silver-mounted pistol held at a jaunty angle, a few brisk but courte-ous directions to the gentlemen in the coach, a passing-over of bags of clink-ing guineas, some pretty, complica-tions and apologies to the ladies of the party and then a clattering-off in-to the romantic darkness.

That would be a picturesque expe-rience, something to look back on with a not unpleasant thrill. But when your bandit comes tumbling out on you from a smelly motor car, which he has stolen somewhere, and proceeds to go through your clothes with the tact and skill of a police ser-geant, the thing loses its charm. It is so dull and uninteresting, and there is nothing romantic to go home and tell your wife about. In any case, wives are much more suspicious nowadays, and the man who goes home without his money and his watch is likely to have a hard time convincing his spouse that he didn't lose the look at a poker party or blow it in entertaining a visiting chorus.

As for our landlady—if we were held up and robbed, we wouldn't dare mention the matter to her. She would merely conclude that it was another effort on our part to avoid our finan-cial obligations. Our only hope is that if we are ever "frisked," the bandit will shoot us up a little—not much, you know, but just enough to win us our freedom.

"But that's not an alligator-skin bag. Where are the wrinkles?"

"Ah! Wrinkles are out of fashion, miss. You see, this alligator had its skin massaged."

To-day's Messages.

TREACHEROUS DIPLOMACY.

LONDON, Feb. 9.
 Germany has been trying to detach one of the Allies from the extradition demand by offering to conclude a treaty with that Power, according to a statement attributed to Matthias Erzberger, German Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance, by the Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent.

DIVORCES MAY RE-MARRY.

VIENNA, Feb. 9.
 The marriage of divorcees will be instituted in Austrian Catholic Churches this month, by an announcement authorized by the Pope. Fears have been entertained here recently that Catholic divorcees would leave the church altogether, because at present priests are directing them to re-marry before registrars.

AGREEING TO TREATY TERMS.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.
 Philip Scheidemann, former Secretary of Foreign Affairs, writing in the National Zeitung, says that since the Government, with the approbation of Parliament, had signed the Peace Treaty, it had tried to fulfill the conditions imposed, but since June last it had seen that fulfillment was impossible. Herr Auer, former Minister of the Interior, says he is well disposed towards the Allies and will place no difficulties in the way of the German Government handing over the persons demanded.

FIRE'S HOLOCAUST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9.
 At least 25 are dead, with some persons still missing, and thirty injured, some seriously, was the toll taken by a fire which early this morning swept through the Berkshire Apartment Hotel here.

THOMAS PREDICTS CRASH.

LONDON, Feb. 9.
 J. H. Thomas, the railway workers leader, says that the state of the world is such that unless something is done speedily a crash will come, when nobody will suffer more than the workers. He says that British workmen must work one quarter harder than before the war, the French twice, and the German eight-times harder.

WIRE TROUBLE AGAIN.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 9.
 Wire trouble developed on land lines last night.

NEW INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

PARIS, Feb. 9.
 The three Scandinavian Nations have accepted the invitation of Allies to a Conference at the Hague on Feb. 16th, to discuss participation in a permanent court of international justice, provided for by article fourteen of the League of Nations covenant, the Christiania correspondent of Temps says. It is announced in Norwegian official circles, the Temps says, that the proposed court apparently is intended to try offenders against the laws of war.

REMOVED FREELY.

LONDON, To-day.
 There is no confirmation forthcoming for the rumor that Sir Auckland Geddes, President of the Board of Trade is retiring, although political prophets freely assert it.

APPLYING THE SCREWS.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.
 The German Government, according to the Zeitung Am Mittag, has notified Belgium that the German Belgian Financial agreement must be annulled, because of Belgium's participation in the extradition demand.

KOREANS ROUTED JAPS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.
 Official despatches, received here to-day, said a force of 2,000 Koreans armed principally with equipment furnished by the Bolsheviks, crossed into Northern Korea from Kirin, Manchuria, and attacked the Japanese post of seven hundred men, killing three hundred and routing the remainder. According to these despatches the attack was the initiation of an active rebellion in Korea.

Laugh and Grow Fat.

"That's a beautiful stained-glass window."
 "Yes; it was given by Mrs. de Riche, whose pew is just below. She wanted something to suit her complexion."
 "Dora must have suffered some terrible disappointment. One never sees her smile now. What is the matter?"
 "Two front teeth pulled."
 She: "I don't like slattery. Please don't fatter me, Charlie."
 He: "When I tell you that you are the best girl in the world, that isn't slattery—sooth voice—'It's a lie.'"
