LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

—or the—
Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER VI.

Sir Fulke was delighted. "That is just the opportunity I want," he said. "I shall be able to say more to her in my own house than I have ever said in here."

Lady Clyffarde, not having the faintest idea of any rivalry between her son and John Bardon, had invited the millionaire and his family. Mrs. Moira had expressed a wish to see the Bardons; and with a resigned wish, Lady Clyffarde thought that they would pass in the crowd. She had little idea of the antagonistic elements that she was bringing together. She saw at once, when her son examined the list of invitations, that she had done wrong. Sir Fulke was never ill-tempered, never irritable, but there was a shadow on his handsome face as he read the names.

"My dearest mother, why have you invited the Bardons? Your party will be spoiled."

"Mrs. Moira wished to see them, Fulke; and I had no idea that you would like it."

"Like it! How can any one tolerate them? Miss Bardon may pass; but the son—John Bardon, more especially since he joined the yeomanry—is intolerable!"

"You can keep out of his way. The grounds are large; and when you have spoken to him once, nothing further will be required. I should not have done it had I thought it would annoy you."

With his usual caressing manner, he kissed his mother.

"I am not annoyed—you could never annoy me. My dear mother, I do not like the people—that is all."

Why Suffer Pain?

SLOAN'S Liniment will soothe and give you instant relief. For 40 years it has been fulfilling this mission and will not fail you.

People of all nations are testifying and proclaiming it to be the greatest remedy.

Let it help drive away your rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, headache, and all other pains. It works like magic and penetrates right to the seat of trouble.

Give it a trial and keep it handy. For sale at all druggists and dealers.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT
(PAIN EXPELLER)

GERALD S. DOYLE,

Distributor.

"I shall be pleased to see them," she replied, coldly; for it seemed to her that Sir Fulke was not very civil to the tall, dark, stalwart man who stood by her side.

Sir Fulke offered his arm, but she declined it; and John Bardon's face flushed with delight when he noticed this. Sir Fulke naturally expected that John Bardon would leave them, but the millionaire's son walked on at Lady Iris' side, joining in the conversation, apparently unconscious of Sir Fulke's annoyance—so utterly unconscious did he seem that Sir Fulke, who watched him narrowly, could not tell whether he thought himself in the way or not, whether he was acting from a set motive or not. Sir Fulke grew more irritable every moment.

"The man must know," he said to himself, "that he is intruding. He must know that he is de trop. If he does not go soon, I shall certainly tell him to do so."

He looked keenly at the dark face; there was nothing to indicate that he considered himself de trop. But in John Bardon's heart there was a fierce determination not to retire. Because Clyffe Hall was his, did Sir Fulke think he could monopolize Lady Iris? It was not even etiquette for the host to monopolize the chief guest. After all, some of these aristocrats were very ill-mannered. The three walked on together, John Bardon talking earnestly, having for the first time found voice in Lady Iris' presence. He talked well, too, and the young girl was interested; while Sir Fulke was full of impatience.

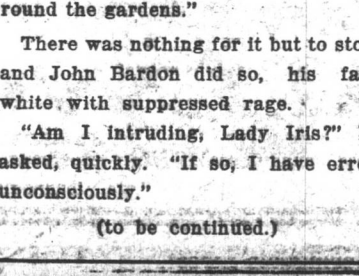

"When will he go? How much longer will he stay? My patience is nearly ended," he said to himself.

At last Sir Fulke stopped, and with the utmost deference and courtesy raised his hat to John Bardon. "Mr. Bardon will excuse us now, I am sure, Lady Iris, when he knows that I have promised to show you round the gardens."

There was nothing for it but to stop, and John Bardon did so, his face white with suppressed rage.

"Am I intruding, Lady Iris?" he asked, quickly. "If so, I have erred unconsciously."

(to be continued.)

The tufted bristles and the curved handle of the Prophy-lactic Tooth Brush make it possible to clean even the backs of the teeth and in between them.

"A Clean Tooth Never Decays"

THE curved handle makes the back teeth about as easy to clean as the front ones. Adult's, youth's, and child's sizes. Always sold in the yellow box. For sale by leading druggists.

Besides twice-a-day brushing of the teeth, it is wise and economical to visit your dentist four times a year for examination and attention, which is sure to be sought.

Distributed in Nfld. by GERALD S. DOYLE, St. John's.

"What man?" asked Lady Iris, who had not noticed the recent arrivals.

"John Bardon. He is walking up to you just as though he had some right to speak to you."

"He has the same right as every one else," she answered coldly, and the next moment John Bardon was standing before her.

The gentlemen exchanged the stiffest and coldest of bows, and Lady Iris spoke a few kindly words. She had never admitted to herself that these two men were her admirers; but she felt some little embarrassment as she stood there between them.

"You will not forget your promise, Lady Iris, to grant me the honor of showing you the old familiar spot in the park?" said Sir Fulke.

Turks Owe Their Victory to Greeks.

HALF OF THE LATTER ARMY TURNED HOLDSWILL.

LONDON, September 18.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Famagusta, Island of Cyprus, quoted Smyrna refugees arriving there to-day as declaring that Mustafa Kemal Pasha, the Turkish Nationalist leader, owes his victory over the Greeks in Asia Minor to the fact that half the Greek Army turned Bolshevik and rebelled immediately the Turkish attack against Atina-Karabehir was begun. The rebels, according to the refugees, stole army funds and looted wherever possible, shouting "Long live Lenin and Trotsky."

The refugees state the rebels burned towns and abandoned their artillery, which was in perfect order, although the Greek generals and clergymen vainly attempted to bring them to reason.

Hysterical Ravings.

Our onetime well balanced Duckworth Street evening contemporary begins its literary contribution to the week—we had almost written weak—by indulging in a series of hysterical ravings against all the bold bad, paper and pulp companies of Canada, who according to our e.c., have entered into a conspiracy to deprive Newfoundland of all the benefits likely to accrue from the passage of the Humber Deal. These Canadian interests, to quote the scare-heads in Monday's Advocate are fighting Imperial concessions being granted for the industrial development of Newfoundland. "Would Canada Keep Newfoundland Resources Locked up for Ever" is the wailing query of the Coaker organ. Funny isn't it that this country cannot do a thing without treading on Canadian coars and thus causing all the bigfooted fellows up that way to enter into a compact to deprive us of our rights. Fancy Canadians being jealous of the Humber Scheme? Who can imagine it? The ponderous brain which generated such an idea could only have been trained within the precincts of the Advocate office, and perfected at a surgery not far away from that delectable spot. The mountain in labor brought forth a mouse. The Advocate in the throes of gestation brings forth a plot to destroy Newfoundland and its prospective industries; particularly that mysterious one on the Humber, and in its parturition, is assisted by a well known physician-politician, to whom all things in the way of preferment have come since his advent to this colony less than a quarter century ago. He cries Wolf! The Advocate also cries Wolf! 'Ware Canada is their warning. 'Ware Humber would be the real warning and that which the people should heed. There has been too much boasting and advertising this so far nebulous proposition by Government members, hangers on and partisans, but nothing has been told the people excepting that the Humber deal—or steal if you prefer—must go through, otherwise the future of Newfoundland hangs in the balance. The acceptance of the Humber Proposition is necessary if the country is to be saved the Advocate pathetically announces, and in the next breath it frantically shrieks that Canadian interests are determined to block the scheme. No explanation is given; no arguments advanced just to show why the Canadians are opposed to the present pet project and only hope of the Squires-Coaker administration and following. The people no longer fall for journalistic hysterics. They have to be shown from whence the benefits will come. Ever since this Humber thing was mooted the Advocate has been dilating on the wonderful advantages that must accrue to Newfoundland, once it is in operation. But our contemporary has either neglected or forgotten to enter into details. Information has been asked of it but has been withheld, because the Advocate knows no more about the particulars of the Humber scheme as it applies to this colony than the man in the street, and will not know them until the agreement has been finalised and ready for submission either to the people or the Legislature. We would not for a moment suggest that all the cry about an Imperial Government guarantee is mainly piffle, but if some person would call the bluff, it would expose a valueless hand. Hence the shrieks, fearing this might be done.

BATTLE OF THE ALMA.

On the steep banks of the river Alma (Crimea) on Sept. 20, 1854, a brilliant victory was won by the Allied British and French armies, under General Lord Raglan and Marshal St. Arnaud, over the Russian army commanded by Prince Menschikov. The Allies completed their disembarkation on Sept. 16, and four days later opened the attack with victory at the Alma, and forthwith commenced the siege of Sebastopol.

THE FALL OF DELHI.

Delhi, the capital of the Mogul Empire, was the headquarters of the rebellious Sepoys during the stirring days of the Indian Mutiny, having been captured by the mutineers from Merut, who overran the remainder of the British garrison, after Willoughby had exploded the powder magazine rather than let it fall into the hands of the Indian soldiery. The assault on the city was made under the command of General Nicholson, who was killed during the operation, and on September 20, 1857, the rebels surrendered.

KITCHENER AT FASHODA.

On Sept. 20, 1898, the British flag was raised over Fashoda (Soudan) by the late Lord Kitchener, then Sirdar of the Anglo-Egyptian army. This post was occupied by French soldiers under Major Marchand, but Kitchener informed the commandant that he could not tolerate any interference, and Marchand abandoned the post. The episode almost precipitated war between Britain and France.

War Aid From Newfoundland.

LOBELIA SHOULD BE REFITTED. A correspondent suggests that in view of the statement of the Prime Minister to the Imperial Government that if there is a row, Newfoundland wants to be in it, the Lobelia should be at once refitted and placed at the disposal of the Admiralty, for service in Aegean Waters. We regret to have to inform our correspondent that the Lobelia has been sold to private parties and is now meeting her end at the hands of the shipbreakers. Had the ship remained with the Government, doubtless she could have been put into commission, with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries as Admiral, and the Prime Minister, who has such a taste for fighting, Major of Marines.

Hand Shaking.

A VERY ANCIENT CUSTOM.

The salutation of English speaking races by shaking hands is of very ancient origin. It is mentioned in the writings of the Greek authors Homer and Aristophanes and by the Latin Virgil. As the confirmation of a bargain we read in II. Kings X.: 15, "and he baled him and said to him, 'Is thine heart right as my heart is with thy heart. And Jehonadab answered and said, 'It is. If it be give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand.'"

Address on Coal.

EXPERT TALKS TO ROTARIANS.

A most interesting address on coal was made by Mr. H. F. Thomas, O.B.E., of Portcharwa, South Wales, at yesterday's Rotary luncheon. Mr. Thomas said there was no danger of the world's coal supply becoming exhausted as China had the commodity in unlimited quantities. He pointed out the differences between Welsh and Cape Breton coal. During the war, Mr. Thomas was engaged in the Fuel Supply Department of the British Ministry of Shipping, and he related many of his experiences while so occupied. The romantic growth of Cardiff, and the recent United States coal strike were other topics touched on. A vote of thanks was passed Mr. Thomas at the conclusion of his address.

GOOD HOOKING ON LOCAL GROUNDS.

Fish are still plentiful on the local grounds and practically all the boats are operating. Catches range from 1 to 8 qts. for two men boats. Those returning this morning had fish of splendid size which were quickly disposed of at the fish markets in the different coves.

Newfoundland War Memorial Unveiled.

At Amiens Cathedral, on Sunday, August 27th, a plaque commemorating the Newfoundland soldiers who fell in the first battle of the Somme was unveiled by Sir Richard Squires, Prime Minister of Newfoundland.

Sir Richard Squires, in presenting the tablet, said that it was appropriate that this, the first occasion of the formal presentation of a war memorial by Newfoundland to France, should be at Amiens, for the capital city of the Somme had many historic associations with Newfoundland. From the towns of Northern France many sturdy seamen had gone to the shores and bank fisheries of Newfoundland. The bank fisheries were still pre-occupied by French fishermen and France had the Colonial possession of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the southern coast of Newfoundland. The names of many of the towns and fishing villages in Newfoundland were French, and on the south coast there were still a number of French fishing and farming families who retained their own language and customs. Amiens had been specially identified with Newfoundland because of the Anglo-French Treaty of 1802 which bore the name of the city. Under that treaty certain outstanding disputes between England, France and other countries were adjusted, and Newfoundland, as a British Colony, and the fishing rights on her shores, were particularly affected thereby.

In the Anglo-French fends of centuries past each nation learned to appreciate the military and naval prowess and patriotic spirit of the other. By no surer means could a solid foundation of permanent international friendship be established than by the mutual appreciation and esteem of honourable combatants. Napoleon taught the world the military power of an organized and united France, and years after his burial on British soil his body was returned to France. And in his new French grave there was buried every trace of previous hostility. The world war had cemented that friendship. The remembrance of the war must die before the French and British peoples could seriously disagree, because the fields of France were the common mingling ground of the best blood of both countries. The two peoples were a unit in a great fight for a common cause, one in reverse, and one in victory, one in the national agony of war.

The Newfoundland soldier laid appreciated the valour and friendliness of their French comrades in arms. They would never forget the courtesy, consideration and care of the people of the Somme, with whose lives, sufferings and death they had been identified. Sir Richard then formally presented the tablet.

M. Dormand, who represented the Prefect of the Somme, in accepting the tablet on behalf of the French Government, expressed the gratitude felt for the soldiers from Newfoundland who fell in France.

The tablet, which is of marble, has at its head the Newfoundland crest—a caribou head—and bears the following inscription:

To the glory of God,
to the honour of the Island and to the enduring memory of those of the Newfoundland Contingent who fell in the first battle of the Somme
"Behold this stone shall be witness unto us."
—Joshua 24, 27.

Underneath the above is a similar inscription in French.

Those present included: Sir Richard Squires, Prime Minister of Newfoundland; the Hon. W. R. Warren, Minister of Justice and Attorney-General; Col. Nangle, representing the Royal Newfoundland Regiment; Capt. Vator Gordon, Acting High Commissioner for Newfoundland; Lt.-Col. C. O'N. Conroy; Mr. W. Hutchings and Mr. J. L. Murphy, representing the Great War Veterans Association; Gen. Phillipot, commanding the 2nd Army in France; M. Dormand, representing the Prefect of the Somme; Mr. Sutcliffe, British Consul at Amiens; Maj. Binney, representing the Imperial War Graves Commission; Maj. Phillips, representing I.W.G.C., Somme District; and others—Canadian Gazette.

Shocking Tragedy

Under this caption one reads only too often of some sad affair, which leaves the mind in a state of depression. The world does not want any more sadness, and anyone who can distribute joy and gladness, is really a benefactor to the human race.

Nature plays an important part in this respect and makes a benefactor over night. To illustrate this, Frost has caused an unprecedented offer to the Public of thousands of beautiful Giant Asters at a ridiculously low price of Twenty Cents a large bunch from The Valley Nurseries. Phone 1514, only a few days left, then up goes the price, at once. Mrs. Molloy's, Winsor and Wardfield, Butler Brothers, Water St., and Blue Puttee, Rawlin's Cross.

HIS DIARY.

Sept. 19th.—The news of the near east situation is that it is little like to come to war, which is a great relief to many. The Prime Minister sends a message to the Government of Great Britain and says a silly thing, being that Newfoundland does not want the British Empire to get into a row. Povy tells me how he will go to hunt for caribou to-morrow, which I envy him for, seeing how my wife will not allow me to go abroad again, and is, I think, jealous of me. She would have me go to walk with her this evening, which I do most unwillingly, being mighty tired.

"The Queen of Sheba."

"IF I MUST BE A KING FOR ALL THE TO-MORROWS—LET ME BE A MAN FOR TO-NIGHT."

Torn from the heart of him whom the whole world honors and reveres as one of the greatest and most outstanding characters of all time—wise Solomon himself—the scene that embodies the above cry with its ring of despair, of love too great for control is made to live, vividly and clearly, in one of the most beautiful love stories the screen has ever produced.

Against a background of marvellous brilliance, with all the lure of ancient Egypt—its riot of wealth and colorful barbaric splendor, is unfolded—tenderly and reverently—a bible story that for sheer beauty has no equal. She is full of ecstasy and despair—of passion and pain, of love and death—that one sits breathless with interest from the first solemn scene where David the King, dying, full of years, bequeaths his crown and kingdom to his son Solomon, to the last great scene where Solomon himself, after all is over—his love and renunciation accomplished—watches the caravan that escorts the one love of his life, Sheba the queen back to her kingdom wind slowly out of his sight and out of his life across the trackless desert.

Such a great picture beggars description; it can only be spoken of in superlatives, yet it carries a lesson also. This wondrous bible story so fascinatingly told, so full of absorbing interest that it could be seen not once but many times before all its glamor and witchery would be grasped by the onlooker!

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 20. Pinex differs from most remedies in form, in that it is supplied in a concentrated form, out of which a large bottle of full strength cough mixture can be made by the addition of Simple Syrup, which may easily be made at home, or which we can supply on request. Thus made, a sixteen ounce bottle of cough mixture can be prepared for about 85 cents, a very reasonable sum as things go. And the Pinex Cough Syrup is good at that—none better. Price, Pinex concentration, 70 cents a bottle.

We have a few Accouchement Sets complete, which we can offer at $15 each.

Labrador Quotations.

NO SET PRICE FIXED. According to advices received from New York local buyers are quoting $29 per cask c.i.f. for Labrador fish. At the rate the price to the fisherman would be little over $4 per quintal, as freight insurance, tax and packing cannot be covered for less than $4.90. So far very little Labrador fish has arrived in port and as far as can be learned no price has been set, although fishermen are expecting around $5.

The Power of 20 Cents.

Do you know you can redecorate and brighten your home for only Twenty Cents, by buying a large bunch of Asters at that price from The Valley Nurseries, Winsor & Wardfield, Butler Brothers, Water St., and Blue Puttee, Rawlin's Cross.

New Industry at Ramea.

PROMOTERS WILL PACK SCOTCH CURE HERRING.

By last trip of Glencoe, east from Port aux Basques, a quantity of barrels and other supplies was landed at Ramea, where during the fall and winter herring fishery the Scotch pack will be undertaken. The promoters of this new industry have every new confidence in the success of their enterprise, as around Ramea Island and in the reaches numerous herring have recently schooled. A market has already been obtained for all that can be packed, and if the herring continue to school as reported there will be considerable employment given the people. One schooner with a crew and gear is already anchored in the main harbor. Her owner is putting up herring of ordinary pack and so far has done remarkably well.

Pink, White and Green" Again in Action.

Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—In my last letter in your esteemed journal I promised your readers a short review of the present political situation dealing especially with existing conditions as the result of the disorganization of the Opposition, and the general dislike of those who comprise same. Having pointed out the desirability of doing something done without further delay I am now convinced that no effort to better existing conditions will be undertaken by the Opposition as at present constituted in the House. Surely this is a sad position and one that will hardly be acceptable to the followers of the Liberal Progressive Party. To bring about the much wanted reorganization it was necessary to have the final work begun three or six months ago.

It is an open secret that the Opposition as it is now composed is all at sea, and every day one hears the words of the growing winds of discontent. Those of us who remember the propaganda and the gigantic work of organization when Sir Edward Morris formed his party are reminded of the magnitude of same and its consequence. If the Opposition are of the opinion that any eleventh hour arrangement will suit the occasion they have only to look around and meet public opinion to learn differently. Personally I do not care who will be the leader of the Opposition, providing he is capable and possesses the qualities of a statesman and a prime minister should possess. These letters are not prompted by any personal interests in any line in particular, and I only ask Sir Michael Cashin if recent rumors to the effect that he intends to remain leader of the Opposition and will lead the party that will be opposed to the Government next election are correct.

This is not a favor that is asked but only a right. The answer would perhaps determine the position of some of the colleagues, as well as personal friends of Sir Michael. On the other hand if there is no foundation of truth in these rumors it would be well if the party was told, some without further delay. After Sir Michael we look to Mr. Bennett, Sir John Crobie, Mr. Higgins, Mr. Walsh as leader of premier districts to do something. Surely these men possess a little above the share of ordinary common sense and political judgment, and should be well able to handle questions of reorganization with wisdom of success, or must they offer themselves to a "wait and see" policy that is undermining their independence.

When the Government again faces the country new candidates will replace Messrs. Warren, Poole, Leves, Small, Barnes and Gosse. Already the Coaker candidates are in their districts and on every possible occasion Squires prospective nominees are visiting Mr. Grace and other Conception Bay districts and every week reports are sent to headquarters. I fear that I have taken up too much space in this issue, but will resume the topic in a later issue.

Yours truly,
PINK, WHITE AND GREEN.

Book Talk.

THE TELEGRAM'S BOOK REVIEW.

RAINBOW LYRICS.—Newfoundland has many poets whose work is of no mean order, and to judge from the verse contained in the little volume "Rainbow Lyrics," which I have just received, Mrs. Eva Constance Barrett of Curling, is not the least among them. There are nearly 100 poems in this book, and a great diversity of themes, many of which give ample evidence of the Scottish birth of the author, who is as equally at home in writing blank verse as in rhyme. Here is a good specimen of her work. It is entitled "A Winter Thought."

"When you see the snowflakes falling, Hiding Autumn's brown away, When you see the world a shining On a sunny Winter's day; Think of how God's love and pardon Blots the soul's past sins from sight, Hiding all its pain and sorrow 'Neath forgiveness pure and white," and this fragment from the Birthday day of Love:

"Peace on the moorland, dew upon the Heather, Grey mist and the stillness, then a radiant dawn! Strange joys within their hearts, man and maid together, Wondering, go out to meet a love new-born."

I understand that Rainbow Lyrics will be sold locally. "Peace on the moorland, dew upon the Heather, Grey mist and the stillness, then a radiant dawn! Strange joys within their hearts, man and maid together, Wondering, go out to meet a love new-born."

TIADATHA.—From Messrs. T. Fisher & Co., of London, comes a most excellent parody in the "Travels of Tiadatha," by Capt. Owen Rutter. Written in the metre of "Hawthorne," this book tells of the adventures of Tired Arthur, who after quarrelling with his Phyllis decides to visit his friend Percy in Borneo, and then to travel round the world. Apart from the humor of the story, the description of the places visited by Tiadatha are so graphically and interestingly described that it becomes immediately apparent that they are familiar scenes to the author. Take for instance, the description of Hong Kong:

"Then steamed up a hill-locked water Into Hong Kong's lovely harbour, Full of colour, full of movement As in Piccadilly Circus. With a thousand tugs and launches, Rushing too and fro like taxis, Anchored battleships and liners, Like the waiting motor buses."

For those who like light reading, I cordially recommend "The Travels of Tiadatha." THE SKYLINE OF SPRUCE.—"The Snowshoe Trail" established Edson Marshall's fame as a writer, of the doings of strong men in the wilds, and it will be greatly enhanced by his new work, "The Sky Line of Spruce," which I have just received from Dick's & Co. Ben Darby is the hero of the book, and we find him in the first chapter, among a gang of convicts, a mystery alike to his fellow prisoners and his warders. He is recognized by old Exram Melville, who discovers that Ben has lost his memory as the result of shell shock, and secures his release. The pair then go in search of a gold mine, part of which belongs to Ben, and a half hour conversation between Premier Poincaré and Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, at the French Foreign Office this forenoon. Neither would make any statement. Lord Curzon is understood to have informed M. Poincaré that Great Britain would insist upon the absolute freedom of the Dardanelles, and insure this freedom by the presence of a large fleet. The British Foreign Secretary is said to have intimated that the British effort is confined to the Navy, which gave rise to the impression that British troops would soon be withdrawn from Chanak.

STATSMEN CONFERENCE. PARIS, Sept. 20. Agreement between Great Britain and France on the Near Eastern problem seemed reasonably assured after a two and a half hour conversation between Premier Poincaré and Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, at the French Foreign Office this forenoon. Neither would make any statement. Lord Curzon is understood to have informed M. Poincaré that Great Britain would insist upon the absolute freedom of the Dardanelles, and insure this freedom by the presence of a large fleet. The British Foreign Secretary is said to have intimated that the British effort is confined to the Navy, which gave rise to the impression that British troops would soon be withdrawn from Chanak.

ASKING FOR WAR. CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20. Turkish Nationalists' Assembly at Ankara, by an overwhelming majority, has extended the dictatorship of Mustafa Kemal Pasha and authorized him to continue the war until conditions prescribed in the National pact have been fully achieved.

In Search of Beauty.

This is the season of the year when the women with a large private clientele of old and young beauties whose mornings are spent in the preservation of their looks are busiest. Beauty seekers are not content with the more obvious aids to good looks afforded by the permanent wave, massage, and the use of specially prepared powders and creams. They have sprung up a little group of "hair brushers" who have a number of "patients" not satisfied with the ordinary ministrations of maid or coiffeurs. These "hair brushers" have a secret method of turning the hair into a becoming "set" to the features. They study the contours of their patrons, test the look of the hair held in with small combs at different angles and finally decide in what is the most becoming line, and forthwith train the unwieldy hair to take its position naturally in this direction. The result is far more becoming to some faces than the hard look given to straight hair by the rigid lines of the Marcel Wave, and this new discovery is the secret of the many beautiful classic heads one sees nowadays at theatres and social gatherings.

Winged sleeves make an important showing. Also, long balloon topped sleeves with hand ruffles are noted.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

DISPASSIONATE PRESS DISCUSSION.

LONDON, Sept. 19. Renewed reports received here that Mustafa Kemal Pasha's cavalry have invaded the neutral zone around the Dardanelles, and that he is moving large forces in that direction, evidently rests upon uncontrollable rumors and are disbelieved in well informed circles. Turkish cavalry patrols admittedly have reached points not greatly distant from Chanak, where the British are encamping and otherwise preparing to resist any possible advance of Kemalists, but none of these points are within the boundary of the neutral zone. The situation on the whole is discussed more calmly by newspapers to-day, although protagonists in a campaign against "the Government's policy of force" continue vehement attacks. It is noteworthy that the Morning Post, leading Conservative paper, having been among the fiercest denouncers of the Government's policy, abandons its hostility to-day, and calls for a united front in opposition to any violation of neutrality of the Straits. More moderate Press opinion continues to emphasize the necessity of harmony among the Allies, especially complete co-operation between France and Great Britain, and places its utmost hope in Lord Curzon's mission to France.

CONDENNS L. G.

LONDON, Sept. 20. The following resolution will be submitted to to-day's Labor demonstration in London: "In the view of this meeting the Turkish crisis, which has brought us to the brink of war, is the direct result of Premier Lloyd George's foreign policy. We regard him as a public danger to the peace of the world and demand an immediate general election in order that electors may have an opportunity of ending his disastrous Government."

TRIPARTITE CONFERENCE.

PARIS, Sept. 20. Representatives of France, Great Britain and Italy to-day put their heads together to seek an adjustment of the near eastern tangle. It was arranged this morning that Marquis Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, and Premier Poincaré at ten o'clock to prepare the ground for a meeting this afternoon, which will include the Italian Ambassador, Count Sforza, Admiral Earl Beatty, Commander of the British fleet, and possibly M. Nisichich, Yugoslav Premier. The presence of Earl Beatty is taken here to mean that British now feel Dardanelles must be fully protected from Turkish menace by naval means, which the Admiral will explain to the Conference.

STATSMEN CONFERENCE.

Agreement between Great Britain and France on the Near Eastern problem seemed reasonably assured after a two and a half hour conversation between Premier Poincaré and Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, at the French Foreign Office this forenoon. Neither would make any statement. Lord Curzon is understood to have informed M. ASKING FOR WAR.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20. Turkish Nationalists' Assembly at Ankara, by an overwhelming majority, has extended the dictatorship of Mustafa Kemal Pasha and authorized him to continue the war until conditions prescribed in the National pact have been fully achieved.

KEMALISTS DETERMINED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 20. Information that Mustafa Kemal Pasha is preparing to launch an attack for the possession of Dardanelles in spite of the exhortation of General Pellé, French High Commissioner, is causing undisguised anxiety in Allied military circles. In the capital, it is not improbable that such attack will be made before the end of the present week. It is stated the Turks are taking full advantage of the fact that British have not yet concentrated all their forces. British are declared determined to hold the Straits at all costs. One of the best evidences of British determination to resist the Turks is the fact that many British subjects, including families of officers, are leaving the city, showing they believe fighting imminent. It is understood here that the French Cabinet warned the Ankara Government of the inadvisability of an assault on the neutral zone, but Nationalists are believed to have replied that the proposed attack is in the nature of a defensive and protective movement. In view of Great Britain's military preparations in support of her alleged policy of depriving Turkey of Thrace, Kemalists are in dangerous proximity to the neutral zone, and a forward movement on their part will meet with strong opposition from the British. The British position could be greatly augmented if military and naval units promised from England and Dominions were near at hand.

LE VALLIANT-MURLEY.

This afternoon at the Methodist Church, Channel, Miss Eileen Maud, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Le Valliant, of Port aux Basques, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Rev. S. T. Murley, the ceremony being performed by Rev. B. Mallen, Pastor of the Circuit. A large congregation witnessed the sacred rite, the contracting parties being extremely popular in social circles. After the nuptial knot had been tied the bride couple were given a reception at the home of the bride's mother, to which many guests were invited. The presents were numerous and costly. The Telegram extends to Rev. and Mrs. Murley hearty felicitations, and wishes them all the happiness that matrimonial life can bestow.

THIRD OFFENCE AGAINST ACT.

A man charged with a breach of the Prohibition Act, appeared before Judge Morris this morning and pleaded guilty. This was the third time that accused had been charged with selling liquor and in fine him $200, the Judge threatened him with a heavy penalty if he appeared again on a similar charge. The accused sold the liquor privately.

U.S. Tariff Takes Effect Next Week.

It is probable that the McCumby-Fordney Tariff Bill now before the United States Senate will be made effective during the week of the 25th inst. The duty on oils, which amounts to 25% ad val, will have a weakening effect on the local market as well as on fish and herring which are also taxed heavily.

Codliver Oil and Rickets

Experiments made by prominent New York physicians show that Codliver Oil is a perfect specific against the disease of rickets so prevalent in children. Dr. Alf F. Hess states that a teaspoonful of Codliver Oil three times a day would prevent the development of the disease in children susceptible to same. (Fishing Gazette.)

Personal.

R. C. Morgan, General Manager of the Railway, is now on his way to Port aux Basques on a tour of inspection of the Western section of the line. He is due back in town on Saturday's express.

The approaching marriage has been announced of Miss Rheda Allardice, daughter of our new Governor, to a Mr. Butler of Tasmania.

Fighting the Right to Work.

After watching narrowly the ability shown by such labor leaders as Lewis and Gompers and Jewell of the railway shopmen to jump into pits with statements and arguments more or less untrue, but none the less harmful from a public standpoint, I am inclined to think that the most urgent need of the railways and the mine operators is a first class public relations agent. The heads of big organizations are too much given to thinking that "the man in the street" is either indifferent, or else that these rows are none of the public's business.

As the Boston "Herald" points out, Gompers, Jewell, Lewis, et al jump at newspaper publicity. "Every day," says this newspaper, "they give out interviews filled with the mention of 'humanity,' 'Wall Street,' 'finance,' 'rights of labor,' 'collective bargaining,' but nothing about 'individual rights,' the 'Harris massacre,' the murder of Sheriff Duval,' the quick action of the Herrin union miners upon receipt of Lewis's telegram to treat workmen as 'common strike-breakers.'"

Nothing is said about the wages paid railroad shopmen or United Mine workers compared with the wages paid for other similar labor. Nothing is said about those paid for other similar labor. Nothing is said about those who are thrown out of work and a chance to earn a living because coal is not to be had and because trains do not run. Nothing is said about the injury to the other 100,000,000 people who are not members of the Shopmen's union or the United Mine Workers.

The Romance of Bidstone Manor.

As far back as the Domesday survey, the Manor of Bidstone was part of Dunham Massey, the Masseys having bought it from Henry Earl of Lancaster. On September 20, 1828, Charlotte, the daughter of the famous French Duchess de la Talmonille, married James, Lord Strange, afterwards Seventh Earl of Derby, and the Manor of Bidstone was vested in her to provide a fund for any children she might have. This lady afterwards doggedly defended Lathom House against the Parliamentary forces. Widowed by this wanton act of Governmental violence, Charlotte sold Bidstone, and it changed hands many times before it came into possession of Robert Vynar, banker and goldsmith, Lord Mayor of the City of London, knighted and made a Baronet by Charles II. Vynar was on terms of extraordinary intimacy with the pleasure-loving and spendthrift King, was his banker and financial adviser, besides the lender to him of large sums of money. For £31,978, 8s. 11d., Vynar made the Royal regalia, crown, scepters, and so on, which, with alterations, exists to-day, the money being paid out of the dowry of the Portuguese, Catherine de Braganza. At that time Miss Frances Stuart was rival to Nell Gwynn, Barbara Villiers, and other favourites of the amorous king, and Vynar used her portrait to typify the Britannia which he still have on our copper coins. Charles, as well as borrowing from Vynar, was indebted to anyone who would lend him anything, and in addition to the tremendous extravagance at Court, the expenses of the Dutch war were then continuously mounting up, a combination of events, which caused the king coolly to announce that it was not convenient for him to pay any principal before it came into possession of the king, and Vynar put the victimised bankers into "queer street," and in 1683, Sir Robert Vynar called his creditors together. As a result the Bidstone Estate became heavily mortgaged, and remained so until the passing of Sir Robert. By some means or other the Bidstone Manor got into the hands of a different branch of the Vynars. There is a legendary tale that once upon a time Bidstone, passed from one owner to another over a bottle of wine, and that the two stone flagons or bottles, still over the gateway, typify this fact. The Vynars of many years later are said to have looked closely into the family affairs, and one of them, on searching the deeds, found that the forebore had not passed to the original Sir Robert Vynar, the generous banker, whom King Charles defrauded. Accordingly, in 1830, he purchased for the sum of £200 from the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, all the lands lying between high and low water mark near Wallasey Park. Long afterwards the Surveyor General Board had to pay the then Mr. Vynar a very large sum of money for these rights, so that one day and another the Vynars did not do so badly out of their Bidstone lands.

FAMOUS ENGLISH CRICKETERS COMING THIS SIDE.

The famous Marylebone cricket club will send a team to Canada early next year, says the Halifax Herald.
Lord Chalmersford, president of the zealous followers in the Dominion; and his club feels encouraged to return the visit of the Canadian players.

SHOOTING SEASON OPENS TO-DAY.

While some are gone to-day to shoot the wary partridge, most of us are obliged to stay at home and shoot the same old game—"the bull"—for which there is no close season. Now that the season is really open perhaps we'll see some excellent birds of shots at the game to-night—and least let us hope so.

SCOTCH CURLERS FOR HALIFAX THIS WINTER.

The Toronto Globe says:—The Ontario Itinerary of the Scottish curlers who will visit Canada during the coming winter has been arranged by a committee of the Ontario Curling Association. No dates have been fixed because the exact date of the arrival of the Scotmen is not known. The expectation is that they will land at Halifax early in January.
After spending five days in Halifax and possibly two at the Sydney, the Scots will go to Moncton, Quebec, and Montreal. Why not the genial and energetic secretary of the Curlers try and induce them to visit Newfoundland?
What say, Mr. Salter?

MCMAULEY BREAKS RECORD.

ten years ago. The local record is Orphans' Day.

AN APPEAL FOR THE LITTLE ONES

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir.—I am sure that once again you will only be too pleased to lend your columns to a plea for the little orphans at Belvedere, in whose interests the annual collection will be taking up on next Sunday at all the city Catholic churches. Indeed, lately, the newspapers in general have been very generous towards the different orphans of the city and have freely offered their space, frequently at a monetary loss to themselves, and this prompts me now to make a short appeal to our Catholic friends to keep foremost in their minds the dire necessity that they are expected to offer in part, by their generous assistance next Sunday. Certainly, this call has never been made in vain as it is characteristic of our people, both Catholic and Protestant, alike, that the needs of the city orphans are not overlooked. Blow high or blow low, in prosperous times, or in times of adversity, let the clarion cry go forth that the orphans need something and many willing hands are outstretched with the necessary help.
The writer has made some inquiries at the Belvedere Institution recently and was staggered to find that with a normal capacity of 100 children, the good ladies in charge there were catering to the wants of 165 little ones, and this is truly an abnormal tax on their very limited facilities. True it is, that some building improvements are being effected and these have been a long felt want, and it is mainly through the united efforts of the recently formed Ladies' Association, the building now being erected can be financed. In years gone by, very little was known and less was said about the needs of Belvedere, and a few well-intentioned people began to think that Belvedere was a self-sufficient centre that owned an air of exclusive wealth, but the silence was due more to the natural reticence of the good nuns rather than to anything else, and those of your readers, Mr.
Editor, who during the past years visited the institution have been very much impressed with the special needs of the orphan children's home.
Let those who may doubt my words, go and see for themselves. It is in the building and both their heart and their purse strings will be gladly obeyed. In brief, then, this appeal is more of a reminder than anything else, to our Catholic people particularly, that Sunday next is the Orphans Day at all their churches. There used to be a saying in war times that had great effect: "Give, give, give more;
give till it hurts," and it ever there was another time where this is applicable, it is on Sunday next for the little innocent babes of Belvedere. I thank you sincerely, Mr. Editor, for the space allowed.

Yours truly,

FRIEND OF THE ORPHANS.

MORRISSEY-LEONARD.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the R. C. Cathedral, Monday evening, Sept. 18th at 5 p.m., by the Rev. Monsgr. McDermott, when Miss Agnes Mary Morrissey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Morrissey, 45 Parade Street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Francis J. Leonard, the bride, who was given away by her father, was beautifully attired in a wedding gown of pearl satin trimmed with pearls with bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair ferns. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Peter Morrissey, who wore pink silk crepe de chene with over dress of white Georgette and had to match. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Peter Morrissey, brother of the bride. After the ceremony the bridal party motored around Bowling Park, then to the home of the bride's parents where a sumptuous supper was served. Owing to the recent bereavement in the bride's family only the relatives and immediate friends of the bride and groom were present. The presents received were numerous and costly, showing the esteem in which both were held.
At 9 p.m. the happy couple left by motor for Moncton, where the honeymoon will be spent. We wish them many happy years of wedded life.

Fire on Freshwater Road

SEVERAL HUNDRED DOLLARS DAMAGE.

Yesterday afternoon a fire, supposed to be started by a blow lamp, which some painters were using, caused considerable damage to the residence of Mr. G. H. Press, Freshwater Road. An alarm sent in at 4.40 brought the Central and East End Fire Companies to the scene. Upon their arrival flames were issuing from the front entrance of the house.
This with the bath room and hall was badly damaged by the blaze while the contents of the parlour and dining room were spoiled by water and smoke. The firemen worked like trojans and after about fifteen minutes strenuous efforts the "all out" sounded. The damage amounts to several hundred dollars.

The Spruce Bud Worm.

PEST MULTIPLYING.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir.—Your discovery of the Spruce Bud Worm at Whitbourne prompts me to say the pest is also found at Terra Nova River. The presence of the creature at that far of point might suggest a joke to the tippanies of the Advocate, but same people look upon it as being too serious for joking. The neighbourhood of St. John's is badly infested from Donovans to Logy Bay.

I have reports saying it is at Bri-gus, C.B. It is even found in the homes of the people and in offices near Water Street. Of course it can do no harm in town unless it attacks certain shade trees, but I mention this to show how widely prevalent it is, and to confound those who say it has been on Nagle's Hill twelve years. The rapidity with which the larvae multiplies and invades surrounding territory disproves at once any foolish statement which tries to show the insect has been here so long.

Yours truly,

ARTHUR ENGLISH.

ALL SCOTTISH BEADLES
CHARACTER AND HUMOUR.

Several capital examples of our country's power of withering sarcasm have been already quoted, but the following would be difficult to rival: "Gin ye mention our local Magistrate in yer prayers, sir," said the beadle of a small burgh town to a stranger who had come from a distant town to officiate for a day: "gin ye mention our local Magistrate in yer prayers, dinna ask that they may be a terror to evil-doers, because the beadle o' the matter is, sir, the putr, wastu' bodies could be naggerin' to anybody."

An infidel citizen of an Ayrshire burgh built a handsome manse for himself and family in the local manse. He spared no expense, and was rather proud of his family burgh place. Indeed, he closely supervised the operations of the workmen, and noted their progress. As he was going to the place one day, he met the beadle of the Secession Kirk, and asked him if he had seen the new manse. "Ou, ay?" was all the answer. "Nothing daunted, he proceeded to expatiate on the theme, and concluded by saying, "Yon's a gey fine place. It'll tak' us a' oor' time to get out o' yonder at the last day." "My man," said the beadle, dinna yerseel' ony trouble about risin', but they'll maybe just ding the beadle at an' let ye gang down instead."

One of the beadle's weaknesses is his "jean" or "jean" as he has been already here, and as this must be done on the sly, his defence must be even though unscrupulous. Alexander McLaughlan, a Blairgowrie beadle, had contracted a habit of tipping, and entering the session-house morning with the evidence of it in his breath, the minister asked the occasion a fitting one on which to administer a reproof and tell—

"Sanders, I much fear that the beadle has become—"

"Aye, sir," interrupted the minister, "I was just about to remark that there was surely a smell o' drink mas'!"

In another case of the same kind, the defence was less equivocal. "You have been drink again, John," said the minister. "Why, John, you would really become a teetotaler."

"The you never tak' a drop yerseel'," inquired John.

"I do," said the minister, "but, John, you must consider the difference between your circumstances and mine."

"Very true, sir," said John, "but do ken hoo the streets o' Jerusalem were kept clean?"

"No, I am not sure that I do, John."

"Well, then, I'll tell ye. It was just like bodie keepin' their ain doors soopit, and mindin' their ain business."

The argument, doubtless, was not further continued on that occasion.

The minister of one of the Dundee burgh churches had a beadle called Donald, who was a worthy and useful man. No fault could be found with him except his being too fond of a dram, for as he used to call himself "jist a wee hauf o' whisky" at a meeting of the session and the Burgh Court, one night Donald was so unsteady in his gait that, to prevent an accident, one of the elders had to go to his assistance in lighting the gas, which could only be reached by a chair or steps. The habit had become so marked of late that it was decided to have Donald "up." On his appearing, the minister, in his most impressive manner, said, "Donald, the Session has asked me to remonstrate with you on your intemperate habits, which seem to have become worse recently. Donald, with as great a look of offended dignity as in the circumstances he could assume, replied, "I never tak' more than what's due for me. Shirl' did ye ever see the beadle—hic—worse of drink?" "And why a time I've had a dram bathin' members o' ye're Session and the Burgh Court. Yes, many a time, an' ye'll tell ye that they never saw ye for no more than themselves."

The session was not a little amused, but the minister still kept his gravity and said, "Donald, we have pretty plain evidence of your habit, and not very long ago I saw ye clingin' to a railway in the burgh, and so that you might know I saw you. I crossed to the other side of the street."

"Drawing himself up to his full height, the beadle replied, "Weel, ye wans—sir—very far awa' from yer duty, sir, to have stopped and admonished me."

The minister was pleased enough to see Donald's back, as by this time it was very apparent the sympathies of the Session were with Donald.

It is rarely that the beadle is looked upon by the minister, however, rather inclined to regard the minister and his own interests as being at variance, and is disposed to be friendly and confidential. So confidential,

9 THRILLING ACTS. 9

NOTE—These are very long pictures, so you are requested to come early, if not you'll have to stand.

indeed, that it is recorded of one that, when the minister was in a state of exasperation about something or other, John looked sympathetically towards him and said: "Gin ye think that an' aith wad relieve ye, sir, dinna mind me."

"Drunk again, John," said a North County minister one day to his beadle, meaning, of course, that John was the worse for liquor. "Don't mention't," replied John, with a bleary wink, "I'm geyan weel on myself, sir."

When the Rev. Mr. Mitchell had been transferred from a country parish to a church in Glasgow, a friend of his, visiting the old parish, asked the beadle how he liked the new minister.

"Oh," said the beadle, "he is a very good man, but I would rather hae Mr. Mitchell."

"Indeed," said the visitor, "I suppose the former was a better preacher."

"No, we've a good enough preacher now."

"Was it the prayer of Mr. Mitchell," or his reading, or what was it you preferred him for?"

"Well, sir," said the beadle, "if you maun ken the reason, Mr. Mitchell's auld claes fitted me best."

Of a Dundee beadle it is told that having received from the minister—a comparative new-comer—the gift of a half worn coat, he sidled to the door, and turning round gave him a lesson in the traditions of his office by explaining, "Mr. Johnston used, to gie me the waistcoat too."

The greatly esteemed Principal Caird was minister of Errol before he was appointed Professor of Divinity in Glasgow. While there the Doctor discovered the acoustic properties of the church to be by no means of the best, and his congregation being scanty, he suggested to the beadle that an improvement might be effected by boarding up one of the side aisles.

"That may do very weel for you," replied the shrewd old Scotchman, "but what will we do for room if we should get a popular preacher to follow you?"

Robert Burns tells us that "The fear o' hell's a hangman's whip. To hand the wretch in order," and the asseveration of the bard received favourable commentary at the instance of a sage country beadle not very long ago. The minister had for some time previously been favouring the free and easy theology which excludes belief in eternal punishment. He had, indeed, told his people from the pulpit that such an arrangement was not in his opinion, consistent with the character and being of the creator of the universe. From this point there was a marked falling off in the attendance at church on the Sabbath and the preacher was, naturally, concerned.

"John," he said to the beadle one day between the preachings, "the people are not turning out to public worship nearly so well as they used to do."

"I dinna blame them for't," was John's dry reply.

"You what, John?"

"I dinna blame them for't, I'm sayin'."

"You do not blame the people for absenting themselves from divine service." "Do you mean to insinuate, John, that my preaching is less able, less adequate to their needs, and

"Yes preachin' may be a ye wad claim for't, sir, an' I'll no argue wi' ye about it; but I say this, an' I'll stick till't, a Kirk without a hell's jist no worth a d—dooken."

"Was coarse, but strong and true."

In a Forfarshire parish, a number of years ago, the old beadle was an outstanding character even among his kind. The minister, a recent appointment—entered the church yard one day accompanied by a gentleman friend—also a recent importation into the district—and approaching the beadle the following colloquy ensued:

Minister—"This is Mr. So and So," he wishes to purchase a lair."

Beadle—"Imphee! Ou, ay, jist that. Is it for himself?"

Gentleman—"No. It's for my brother. He died last night."

Beadle—"Ou, ay, weel it's a' the same to me, of course, ye ken; but d'ye ken hoo he wad like to lie?"

Minister—"What do you mean, John?"

Beadle—"Weel, ye see, there's some wi' their feet to the West. There, jist for instance, about ye lies the auld minister an' his wife; him wi' his feet to the East, an' her wi' her feet to the West. They were contrair to their days, an' they're contrair yet."

In a short time a lair was selected, after which the minister enquired of John how long he had been about the place.

Beadle—"I've been howkin' awa' in this corner for mair than fifty year, sir."

Minister—"And I suppose you have buried one or more out of every house in the parish, John?"

Beadle—"Na, sir, na. These folk o' Todhills there have run nearly two tacks o' their farm, an' they havena' broken ground ye."

Minister—"Indeed, that's very remarkable, John, and old Todhills himself looks wonderfully hale and hearty still."

Beadle—"Hale an' hearty, ay hale an' hearty enouch, an' 'tichtenin' his grip on the world every day. But folk sud live an' lat live, sir, I say, folk sud live an' lat live."

The Minister and his friend thought John should take the same advice to himself, but preferred not to say so, and the interview terminated.

THOSE CRAZY STATEMENTS.

Speaking of laws we ought to have I have a hazy notion I recall some remarks on "there ought to be a law" let's add a law to punish people who go about making misleading statements on the subject of finances. This is the kind of thing I refer to.

Apparently someone must have paid him for the privilege of making repairs, for the gas alone to have travelled those 12,000 miles would have cost him $12 (allowing him 20 miles to the gallon) and that alone was $62 in excess of his reckoning.

Make Them Financially Responsible.

Someday the man who listened so eagerly to those delightful figures will look back and say: "What was the man talking about?" But at the time he was ready to fight anyone who questioned the accuracy of his information.

I've been through the same experience myself and I know, you see. Yes, I really think it would be fine if we could pass a law making people who make these wild statements financially responsible for some of the losses of the people who act on them. Let's all write our senators.

Meant What She Said.

The local church conference was over, and the hostesses were returning from seeing the visitors off at the station.

"Who did you have, Mrs. Brown?" asked Mrs. Jones.

"Oh, I had a very nice minister!" replied Mrs. Brown. "Who did you have?"

"Well, I had two locust preachers." "Oh, you mean two local preachers, Mrs. Brown?"

"No; I had two locust preachers!" was the reply.

"But locusts are those things which come in swarms and eat up everything and—"

"That's right," said her friend; "and I had two of them!"

Newfoundland Memorial at Amiens.

TRIBUTES TO ISLAND DOMINION'S SOLDIERS

At Amiens Cathedral, on Sunday, August 27th, a tablet, commemorating the Newfoundland soldiers who fell in the first Battle of the Somme, was presented by Sir Richard Squires, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, and unveiled by M. M. Dormand, representing the Prefect of the Somme.

In making the presentation, Sir Richard Squires said:—

"It is most appropriate that this, the first occasion of the formal presentation of a war memorial by Newfoundland to France should be at Amiens. Your capital city of the Somme has many historic associations with Newfoundland. From the shores of Northern France many sturdy seamen went to the shores and banks of Newfoundland. The bank fisheries are still prosecuted by French fishermen, and you have the French possession of St. Pierre and Miquelon off our Southern coast. The names of many of the towns and fishing villages are of French origin, and on the south coast there are still a number of French fishing and farming families who retain their own language and customs. Amiens has been specially identified with Newfoundland because of the Anglo-French treaty of 1802, which bears the name of this city. Under that treaty, certain outstanding disputes between England, France and other countries were adjusted, and Newfoundland as a British Colony and fishing rights along our shores were particularly affected thereby.

"Our people were a unit, in a great fight for a common cause, one in reverse and one in victory, one in the mutual agony of war. Our Newfoundland soldier boys appreciated the valor and friendliness of their French comrades in arms. They will never forget the courtesy, consideration, and the care of the people of the Somme, with whose lives, sufferings and deaths they were identified.

"On behalf of the people of Newfoundland, I consequently ask you to accept for your Cathedral this War Memorial and the Flag of our Island.

The boys who have returned, the relatives and friends of those who have not returned, our whole people join with me in greeting you in this historic and sacred edifice."

M. Dormand, in his reply said:—

"We have long known this race that our fishermen have met on the shores of Newfoundland, according to the Treaties of Paris, Versailles and Amiens. In yonder places we learned to know and appreciate them and to love them more than a century ago. Therefore, we are not surprised when we see them hastening from overseas to our battlefields (more especially Beaumont-Hamel and Guedecourt) fighting there like lions for the defence of right and civilisation. One can indeed say that they have died for France, and their self-sacrifice commands us to keep a debt of pious gratitude toward them. We feel for them, even as for our own dead, a deep fondness and gratefulness.

Officers and soldiers from Newfoundland, you shall live in the glorious immortality of those who rest under the ground of our beloved Fatherland, which is given to the gallant defenders of honour and the world's freedom."

Among those present, in addition to the Prime Minister, were the Hon. W. R. Warren, Attorney-General and Minister of Justice of Newfoundland; Col. Nangle of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment; Lt.-Col. G. O'N. Conroy; Captain Victor Gordon, acting High Commissioner for Newfoundland; Messrs. J. O. Murphy and W. Hutchings, representing the Great War Veterans Association of Newfoundland.

The memorial is in the form of a marble tablet, bearing the Caribou head of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, and the following inscription (in English and French): "To the glory of God, to the honor of the Island, and to the enduring memory of those of the Newfoundland Contingent who fell in the first Battle of the Somme. Behold this stone shall be a witness unto us." Joshua, 24-27.—Canada.

More top-coats and fewer capes are seen for Fall. It is rumored that helmet hats will have a vogue.

THE DRIVER'S PROGRESS.

When first a voter gets a car, how carefully he drives! No rules or bylaws will he mar, he'll take no precious lives. He drives his boat along the sands, along the busy ways, he holds the wheel with right hand and left, and prays, "Ten miles an hour," observes this man, "is fast enough, I wot; and he who faster sends his van should presently be shot." Old timers hear him and they shed their sad, denatured smiles; when they were fresh they also said, "The proper speed's ten miles." Behold the voter and his L4 when two brief months are sped; now twenty miles his limit is, he has not lost his head. He lectures all the village sports on sanity in speed, and says that scorches in the courts should dig their chickenfeed. "Oh, twenty miles is fast enough for any man," he cries, "and he's a vandal and a tough who like a comet flies." The week's sail on, as weeks will sail, since time has many wiles, and now that voter is in jail for hitting sixty miles. "Life is too short," he tells the judge, "to move like mule-drawn drays;" the jurist mutters, "Bunk!" and "Fudge!" and gives him sixty days.

Very Unusual.

The recruit was weighed down with orders by the sergeant-major when he went on barrack guard. He was told to be sure and turn out the guard for any unusual occurrences. So at 10 p.m., as the sergeant-major came smartly through the gate, the recruit turned out the guard.

When the sulphurous atmosphere had cleared a little and the recruit was allowed to speak, he reported his reason for turning out the guard. "Unusual occurrence," he said, "sergeant-major in barracks at 10 p.m. Sober."
