MORE FAILURES AND STEADIER MARKET.

Prices Stronger all Round – How Ex-President Eno did Business—The Broken Newark Bank.

New York, May 17.—Hardly a vestige of the wild excitement of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday remained on Wall cool and firm and not a sensational feature was observed. When the morning hour had passed without any announcement of failures everybody became easier, and almost perfect confidence was felt.

Meney has been close all day, notwithstanding the action of the clearing house, and one national bank made a loan of $2,000,000 at fifteen per cent, while sums ing was firm for a good opening Monday, and the most conservative opinions unite in pronouncing good stocks in a position to zally.

The office of Russell Sage continued to be the century of attraction.

the center of attraction, and the scenes of yesterday were repeated, with every attention to detail save the breaking in of the doors. Sage has been more busy loaning money at three per cent. a day since Tuesday last than he has been in settling claims, and although the flurry has cost him fully $4,500,000, he has made as much more on his call loans, of which he had $18,000,000 out.

the safe keeping of its securities, of which kno had a key. Eno would stay down town nearly all day, and when he would lose a handred, thousand, two hundred or three thousand, as the case might be, would give a check for the amount on the bank. When he returned to the bank he would write a name on a slip of paper, and hand it to the cashier, and say he had made a loan for the amount to the person jury return and hand it to the cashier, and say he had made a loan for the amount to the person indicated on good securities, which he had examined and deposited in the bank's compartment in the safe depository. Generally he would enumerate the securities on slips of paper. In that way he led the cashier, whose integrity is unquestioned, to believe the money had all gone out on loans in the regular course of business.

RUINED BY THEIR SONS.

The Extravagances of the Young Men of Wall Street.

New York Letter to Buffalo Express. This has been a dreadful week for rich men's sons. Wealth from paternal sources has been dissipated in bulks that seem romantic rather than possibly real. Gen. Grant's offspring ruined him, except for the quarter of a million in the protected fund which admirers gave him two years ago. Vanderbilt's son, William K., contributed a million or two to the immens total losses in Wall street. Amos Eno total losses in Wall street. Amos Eno, who counts the Fifth avenue hotel among his millions in real estate, had to makegood the money which his son took from the Second national bank. Georgo I. Seney, the philanthropist, was all but ruined by his two sons' collapse. In the case of Eno I happen to know that he was a strong disliker of that fastness of business and social methods which characterized his son. The latter of a dozen guests. Everything was elaborate and costly to the very utmost. The viands were there which were hard and expensive to provide, rather than extravagantly palatable. There were nine kinds of wine. The feast was not uncommon in the days of reckless expenditure among millionaires, but the elder Eno did not approve. At the side of his plate, as at the rest, lay a menu-card, beautifully painted by an artist's hand and fancifully inscribed with his name. He inspected it gravely, and his daughter in law, who had by previous experience been taught that he was ready to reprove such things, eyed him anxiously.

anxiously.
"Clara," he at length said, "that is very fine. I will keep it as a memento, to remind me when we are poor of the times when we were rich." He put the card into his pocket, and the party quickly rebounded from the moment ary depression to which the old man's com-ment had lowered them. They did not dream of a speedy realization of Eno's pre-diction.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., May 18 .- Forest fires are again raging this evening onthe mountains along the Philadelphia and Reading railroad between Laurel Run and Pittston. In some portions of the moun tain the fire extends a mile in length.

$2,000,000 at fifteen per cent, while sums of $25,000 to $10,000 were readily taken on call at one per cent per day. Coal stecks suffered, and with them the coal transportation companies, but this was not a surprise, because of the known dullness in anthracite.

At the close of business to-night the feeling was firm for a good opening Monday, apt the most conservative opinions unite in pronouncing good stocks in a position to stop. When about half way across the river, the fugitives were overhauled, and dropping their oars the father and son sprang into the boat. The former grappled with Biggs, and the son took his sister into the other boat. A struggle ensued between the irate father and young Biggs, in the course of which the skiff was overturned, and the father and the lover sank and were drowned. Miss Farrier and her brother reached the shore in safety.

Women as Freachers in the M.E. Church. PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—The methodist episcopal conference to-day took up the report of the committee on itinerancy relative to licensing women to preach. Thereport takes the ground that it is inexpedient to take action as to licensing women to preach, or ordaining them. Rev. Dr. Ives of Central New York offered a substitute setting forth that the conference is not prepared to sanction the ordaning of women, but approves of licensing them to exhort and preach under authority of the quarterly conference. After debate the substitute was lost, 126 to 222, and the report adopted.

J. Nelson Tappan; the city chamberlain, has been made ill by the Wall street excitement. There is slight hope of his recovery. It is generally believed that the Metropolitan bank will wind up as soon as it can be done advantageously. The bank is solvent, but can searcely regain its old position. Bogart & Co. are charged with rehypothecating a considerable amount of stock.

The mode pursued by John Eno, expresident of the Second national bank, in getting money from the bank was said to be founded on the fact that the bank had a vault in a down town safe depository for the same and the supposition is that the murderer concealed himself in some bushes and coolly shot the men is, but a man named William Freze is

THE HOLLY ENGINE CO.

Some days ago there appeared in the Evening Telegram an anonymous advertisement covering a whole page of that paper, having for its object to discredit the Holly company of Lockport, N.Y., who have put in a tender for the new pumping engines about to be purchased by Toronto. The eight columns in question tried to show that the pumping engines sold by the Holly company to the village of Saratoga Springs, N.Y., were not what they were recommended to be and unable to do the

The articles in the Saratoga Journal have in fact been a benefit to us, in this way; it has thoroughly advertised us all over the country, and their charges that the first test of the engine made by Messrs. Hill and Greene was a false one led the Saratoga commissioners to employ Mr. Chas. T. The Israelites lost their identity in the fourth century, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel," says Christ, Mr. Spurgeon says they were not lost. Christ knew, probably. It was not the Jews, the Samaritans or the gentiles who were lost—who could met with articles of a like character because they have no pumping engines in

ON THE MOUNTAIN. Up the James street mountain at Hamil trees rather harren—only the leaves beginning to break forth in their song of gladness. To see the city below and the lake beyond. To drive past Auchmar, the seat of Issac Buchanau that was. To see the old Barton church with its wide yard where sleep so many pioneers. To see a stout old man, Cin-cinnatus, with straw hat, in his shirt sleeves, replacing the ancient rail fence with pickets.
To step down and say to him, "How sre you,
Mr. Rymal?"—for it was great bluff Joe himcelf—and to receive his greeting. To be told that his grandfather in 1790 planted the old orchard that he is now fencing. And then orchard that he is now fencing. And then along the road, full of gnarled chestnut trees—not the horse chestnuts that we see in the streets—but old chestnuts that are as large as oaks and more gnarly, and covered in their season with burrs and nuts—along the road until you turn into the old historic Ancaster, a straggling village going down a hill, quiet as a summer's day. As you go through Parton and Ancaster townships everything impresses you with the idea of age houses, fields, barns, v cods, most of all orchards. And yet it has all been settled and cleared within less than a hundred years. But a hundred years is a long time in Canada, and a fourth generation and a fifth are on places cleared by generation and a fifth are on places cleared by their forefathers. And from Ancaster you go down and down the winding road into the valley of Dundas, into the town itself and then on up, up the road again until you reach John Dayan's cottage the most winding to the on up, up the road sgain until you reach John Devan's cottage, the most picturesque spot in Ontario, and then round the turn to Bullock's Corners, through Greensville to Tew's Fallsaveil of dropping water seventy feet high, falls of poetry and remance where the whisperings of Nature may be caught. The heights of the gorge clothed in swarthy robe of cedar intensify the glistening of the liquid veil. Amid the stiliness of the scene, the gemilke features of its loveliness, no reins may hold in check the old feeling of Nature-worship. The Citizen is a court journal, and Montreal is a work that should have been obtaining an easy livelihood at the exdone fifteen years ago, and it has been very urgently wanted these six or eight years | the Citizen's party found it politic to put a past, at least. All this time, however much wanted, it was something that we could not consider the Canadian sentiment a not get. But, strange to tell, we are to piece of silly gush. Before, when there was the most pressing necessity for it, the second track was not attainable, but now, when the necessity is very much less, it is to be forthcoming.

This case of "either a feast or a famine" recalls a somewhat similar experience in the history of the Great Western. Many years ago a company was got up and a charter secured for building a road between the Detroit and Niagara rivers, the line contemplated being the same, or nearly the same, as the present Canada Southern. The late Hon, Issac Buchanan, who took a strong interest in the prosperity of the Great Western, did not believe that the country could support another line, not then, at all events. He had done much for the Great Western, in fact it may be doubted whether, but for his then power-flections upon themselves. The Mail's both in Canada and in England, lately as soon as it was, though of course it must have been built later on, if not then. Seeing the danger, Mr. Buchanan secured the charter of the rival road by paying down a large amount of his own money, not less than fifty thousand pounds, some say much more than that. He did this on an understanding with the Canadian directors that he was acting for the Great | much influence with the vast majority of Western railway, and was to be reimbursed. But the London directors repudiated the arrangement, and Mr. Buchanan was left to whistle for his money. Perhaps they thought that the rival enterprise having been killed off, it was no longer their principle to pay the interest, or their interest to pay the principal. This action of the Great Western directors was one of the most disgraceful. Western railway, and was to be reim. Canadians. The lording of the Mail may

The result was that instead of one additional road running near to Lake Erie two were built—the Air line and the Canada Southern. Statistics of former years show that there is nothing to hope for from our railways, which only carried a small fraction of the grain shipped from this port. We are dependent upon the water route. The rates by the St. Lawrence from Chicago to Montreal are about a cent and a half a bushel higher than fr. m. Chicago to New York. The canal tolls are charge able with five-eighths of a cent per bushel of this amount. The forwarders, elevating companies and harbor board propose among them to reduce their charges sufficiently to wipe out the remainder of the difference against the Canadian routes in the event of the government abolishing the canal tolls. A revival of trade, which is at present almost lifeless, might then be looked for. No sectional jealousies should stand in the way of accompilishing the national object. A Lakeside Musing.

From the Chicago Tribune "My husband !" "My darling wife !"

The murmurous gurgling of a large, octagonal, high-water kiss was the only sound that broke the silence which followed these words; and as the woman stood there, close pressed in the arms of the man for whose sake she had given up all the comforts of a happy home, with two hired girls and a clothes-wringer, all Nature seemed hushed in that deep, impressive silence which is so characteristic of being still, The ruddy glow of an Oc tober sunset still lingered in the western sky, and as the rose-light that flamed up from below the horizon fell upon the earth it limed in rich colors the haggard out-lines of last year's hoopskirt that lay cold and pallid on the grassy sward that stretched away to the west of Perkinsville-on Bitter-Creek.

But in his last paragraph Mr. Renton indulged in that most dangerous of all weapons, sarcasm, and hinted that the shareholders of the Canadian Pacific railroad would be "under no misconception of the facts" when they felt the burdens of the rental of lines "constructed to compete for traffic already subjected to starvation rates during a great part of the year through competition by water-carriage."

Mr. Stephen's reply shows, briefly, that the "Ontario and Quebec railway," now about to be opened, starts with no debt, with a capital of under 6,000l. per mile, as against the 30,000l. of the Grand Trunk, and that if it earns only half as much per mile as the latter, it will cover all indebtedness and pay 100,000l. average its steady. The Yakuts, who form the principal part of the population, are called in their own language the tribe of Sacha. Their complexion is a dark yellow, and in their almond shared one own language the tribe of Sacha. Their complexion is a dark yellow, and in their almond-shaped eyes, as well as their language, they give incontrovertible evidence of their Mongol descent. Their language belongs to the same family as that of the the Turk and Tartar. In fact, the tartars of which there are a great many living in Yakutsh as exiles, very quickly learn to speak the Yakuti tongue in consequence of this intimate relation of the languages. India as a Wheat Producing Country London Correspondence to Detroit Free Press.

I have just had an interview with a gentleman who has been many years in India and who has come home expressly to inform the government as to the capability of India for raising wheat in large quantities for export to Europe. From extensive personal knowledge, backed up by report from the chambers of commerce in Cal-cutta, Madras and Bombay, he has shown satisfactorily to the government here that wheat can be produced in many parts of India for a shade less than three rupees per quarter (about $1.25 for eight bushels, or fifteen and one-half cents per bushel), and all that is required to render several millions of acres available for the successful production of wheat is chean transport. ful production of wheat is cheap transpor-tation to the sea board. So impressed is the government with the facts submitted to them that it is now in contemplation to authorize a grant of £3,000,000 sterling for the express purpose of affording cheap rail way facilities to the points indicated.

$30,000 passed into his hands for a new church.

The parishoners finally learned the funds had disappeared and that the church had been mortgaged by Joachim for $10,000; also that he had borrowed $10,000 from members of the congregation, many of them loaning him their all. One of the creditors began suit against Joachim, who gave bonds and went to Europe. When Joachim reached Italy he built a costly residence and lived in regal elegance.

Father Boniface succeeded him and adopted the same tactics. Considerable money was given him, but he paid nothing, not even the interest on the mortgage, and Boniface is also charged with having adopted, when parishoners would give no more money, an unchristian-like and brutar course toward them. The Italians have broken away from their pastor and organized a new society.

One of the most interesting things onnection with tree planting is the extension by artificial means of the natural range of the growth of trees. The change s generally to a colder and more severe climate. In Toronto three kinds of magnolias are grown in the open air, one of which will attain a height of some forty feet. This is exclusive of the Liriodendron which is a native though seldom seen in its wild state much west of Hamilton; occasionally it is found near the southern corner of Georgian bay. The introduction of rare kinds is generally a slow process. Magnolias have been grown in Toronto for some thirty years; yet so seldom are they seen that the newspapers but last year spoke of one, on College street, as if it had been the first of its kind. The rarest tree grown here is received. rarest tree grown here is, perhaps, the gingo tree (Salisburia adi antifolio) of which it is doubtful if there be, out of doors, more than one specimen; yet that this native of China and Japan, which is never seen in Europe, we believe, south of the Mediterranean, thrives here, is a fact to be borne in mind. The aristolochia has the Mediterranean, thrives here, is a fact to be borne in mind. The aristolochia has been found difficult to reproduce; all attempts in hot houses have, so far as we know, failed; yet accident has given us proof that it can be put into condition to germinate and has germinated, after being a whole winter under ice. The seeds fell on a spot on which every winter ice, from melting snow and falling rain, forms to the depth of several inches. Having been under this ice in the winter of 1883-4, some seeds germinated, and the plants are now in the possession of the writer; one plant of this native of the south was allowed to remain under ice a second winter, and it commences the spring in a perfectly healthy state. The custard apple grows naturally as far north as Niagara, and its artificial reproduction here is not impossible. The tulip tree, before mentioned, few take the trouble to grow, though it can scarcely be said to be out of its latitude here. Over the merits of the alianthus it is possible to dispute; but when placed at a distance the merits of the ailanthus it is possible t dispute; but when placed at a distance dispute; but when placed at a distance from the dwelling, where the objectionable odor of the male tree from which the female is with characteristic gallantry presumed to be free cannot offend, its long lanceolate leaves give an oriental touch to the landscape. The dwarf chestnut, and the buckeye, another and beautiful variety of chestnut, can be grown here without difficulty; but seldom is either of them seen.

dimentry; but seldom is either of them seen.

Our nurserymen, as a rule, are content to go on the beaten track; they seldom trouble themselves to produce new varieties of trees; but if they do not wake from their slumber they must expect to be left behind. Of course for general purposes our own trees get, and deserve to get, the preference. But not all the beauty of the floral world is native to our soil. There is beauty in variety; and variety should now when epportunity effers, be sought after and encouraged. Even so beautiful a shrub as the burning bush (Wahoo) and one so easily grown, is seldom seen in our shrubberies.

For the wood it is desirable to learn by experiment, what is the most economical tree to grow. The allanthus, of which the wood is suitable for furniture, grows with extreme rapidity. The black walnut must either be reproduced, or its use in the manufacture of furniture be abandoned. At present it is perhaps the most profitable-tree that can be grown; and yet it is doubtful whether it is being planted to any extent worth mentioning. Along side of the black walnut, for economic value may be placed the hickory. Both of these, the most valuable of our native trees are being neglected. Most of the trees that are being planted are of comparatively little value. If common trees must have the preference, that is no reason For the wood it is desirable to learn by paratively little value. If common trees must have the preference, that is no reason why rarer kinds should not be assigned their true place; and this, we fear, is not at present being done. If we are now to begin to replant in earnest, the work should be done with discrimination and with a view to producing the best results, esthetic and economic.
