Arranged the Deal. Harry Cecil, acting for the London company, was in Toronto a month age and arranged the deal thru D. Fasken of the Beatty, Blackstock firm. The price the Aladdin is paying for the Chambers' stock is 40 cents a share, but those shareholders who put their stock under option only get 361/2 cents the other 31/2 being used up in commissions and other expenses. The option on a majority of the capital stock of the Chambers-Ferland was secured for a month, and a deposit of $10,000 as an evidence of good faith was put up. Mr. Cecil, after closing the details, left for London to get the deal accepted by his company. This he accomplished, and on Friday a Toronto bank was authorized to pay over about $470,000 for 1,200,000 shares of stock. Those who deposited their stock with Mr Fasken received cheques for their

Some concern is naturally felt by the INFORMATION IS SCARCE minority shareholders, but it is said that a proposition will be made/to is now on his way back from London to Toronto. The proposition is expected to be a straight offer of 35 cents cash per share or an exchange of Chambers-Ferland stock into Aladdin, on a basis of 40 cents for the former and $12 a share for Aladdin. The par value of the Aladdin shares is £1 or $5, and they are now selling in London about $12 a share. Saturday's market price for Chambers was 30 cents. The principal shareholders in the Chambers Ferland company were D. Fasken, 700,000 shares; A. Ferlani, 100,000 shares; W. Chambers, 100,000 shares; R. K. Russell and J. Galbraith. With the transfer of control it is also announced that a valuable strike has been made at the Chambers property at the

What the plan was has not leaked

Altho Mrs. Pankhurst has been good nough to say that militancy will fall fall short of sacrificing human life, and will use no vitriol or revolvers there is a firm conviction that something tragic will be done before long. Mrs. Pankhurst has brought up from the provinces all her fiercest, most ungovernable and least amenable followers, who are quartered in london awaiting an opportunity to demonstrate their fearlessness. Some of these women, known to be in a hysterical condition, are specially shadowed by detectives, who have information that they carry revolvers.

Window smashing has become difficult because of the precautions taken moy the shopkeepers, and molesting ministers is prevented by their detective guards, so Mrs. Pankhurst is at her wits' end to devise some new method of personal terrorism, which her lieutenants can carry out unharmed.

Their latest device is to travel on top of motor buses in London and fire

M.P.'S WADING THRU THE MUD STORM SIGNALS AT OTTAWA

Lively Exchange Between Lemieux and Forget Over the Banque Internationale — Government Supporters Refrain From Discussing Bank Act—Will Parliament Present United Front on the Navy?

OTTAWA, Feb. 1,—The parliamentary program during the past week has been as varied as the weather. It was sloppy weather the first of the week with the lively exchange of missiles between ex-P. M. G. Lemieux and Sir Rodolphe Forget. Then came Tuesday with snowflurries and high winds from off the lakes, as the discussion on the Bank Act engaged the attention of the house. Storm signals were flying for an hour or two, and Capt. Borden himself had to take the wheel. By Thursday the air was still but muggy in the green chamber, and some government supporters who wished to take on the Bank Act but thought neven they had better not. wished to talk on the Bank Act, but thought perhaps they had better not gnawed at their chains uneasily. Friday was bright and clear, with some first-class speeches on the naval question. The naval debate, by the way, is once more to the front and may continue until some definite understanding as to the vote is reached. A good many people on both sides would be glad to see some sensible arrangement come to, so that parliament will present united front to the empire and to the world.

One day this week a member of the house received a letter announcing that there was five feet of snow in New Westminster, B.C.

"That's nothing," a fellow-member retorted, "we have had five feet of mud in the chamber of the house for two days past."

The reference was to the long-distance duel between Sir Rodolphe Forget and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux. Mr. Lemieux, on Monday last, made a series of sensational charges against a number of the Forget fiotations, alleging that many investors living in France had been defrauded. These day, Mr. Lemieux opening and closing the debate upon three several resolu-tions. A peculiar thing about his attack was that he studiously refrained from mentioning the name of Sir Rodolphe Forget, but everyone in the house, of course, knew who was the object of attack. The Montreal finan-cier was not in his seat—indeed, he is seldom there—but on the following day he arrived post haste.

In reply to the charges of Mr. Lemieux, Sir Rodolphe assailed with remarkable rancor the newspaper editors of Paris and Quebec alike who had been hammering him and his enterprises during the past three months. One young gentleman, who edits a weekly paper in Montreal and is well known in Ottawa, was denounced as "a jail bird, a morphine eater and a drunkard." Other charges no less specific and serious were made against men of more prominence.

This brings to public attention the unbridled license accorded to a member of parliament. The Montreal editor, for example, is a jail bird only in a technical sense; he was one time committed for contempt of court, having ventured to criticize the rulings of some judge. He is not addicted

Dislike Progress.

In the Orange Free State, especially, there was found to survive a dislike to those changes which are implied by progress, and, altho in the more thickly populated centres there was something approaching a just appreciation of the magnanimity shown by Britain, one had not to seek far, not at all in fact, to realize that restal surjeton was a seek far.

find two types of men more dissimilar in what may be described as tempera-mental habit and aspiration than those represented by the typical British pioneer and the back veidt Dutch farmer. In the one there is implanted the spirit of expansion, in the other the spirit of expansion, in the other isolation and the perpetuation of things as they are, constituting the essential principle of life. The Briton in South Africa has the consciousness of owning by right of conquest, the Boer props his attitude by a sense of heritage. However much one may endeavor to bring into a common mould two points of view so different in their origin and operation, it is obviously a work of such magnitude as only time itself can accomplish. Hence the idea which has been circulated with much zeal on the part of Liberals at home during the past year or two that the Dutch thruout the union have become worshippers of the British flag is one which stands in urgent need of cor-

To the untraveled Briton it is not an easy matter to gain a clear conception of the vast gulf which separates the Dutch countryman from his compatriot who has mixed with the compatriot who has mixed with the busy throng. South Africa is a land of huge distances. Everybody has heard the tale of how but a few years ago a Boer would become seriously discontented when he had a neighbor sufficiently near for the smoke from his chimney to be observable. That spirit lives today, altho it cannot be humored with the same ease as forhumored with the same ease as for-merly, and it must be remembered as one of the vital elements in the situation that the fear of encroachment has its terrors in prejudices which gene-rations have fostered and which generations alone can eradicate. It is not unnatural to this class—sufficient not unnatural to this class—sufficiently numerous, be it noted, to be of political consideration to any Dutch ministry—dancing Dervishlike General Hertzog breathing defiance of the "foreigner" and maturing all the old—"foreigner" and maturing all the old—time beliefs, should appeal as an inspired patriot, the pillar of their most cherished traditions.

Before this aspect of the subject is dismissed, references should be made to another reactionary influence among the rural Dutch of South Africa—the predikants of the church. These men, whose voices do not reach far beyond their own localities, will frequently out-Hertzog Hertzog in their absurd demands for the maintenance of what they are pleased to tenance of what they are pleased to call Dutch rights, but which interpreted by any standard of equity, could ony mean the destruction of the rights of the British.

Division Mainly Racial.

Today no one doubts the probity of General Botha, but at the same time the actions of his government reveal a greater desire for the good opinion of the country voters than the British expansion however honeyed may be his words on that ribbject. It is only necessary to examine the government's attitude with respect to immigration to establish the accuracy of this conclusion. The issues are simple altho comparatively little understood on this side. In South Africa the political division is mainly racial, if we exclude the labor party, which has five exclude the labor party, which has live members, and for all practical pur-poses it may be taken that a Dutch-man is attached to the South African Party and a Britisher to the Union-ists E garding Dutch supremacy it is recognized that immeration from England might disturb that balance, with consequences which are not desired by the party in power. Perhaps the backvelder has not calculated effects so logically but he knows them by instinct, and above all, he hates the prospect of his ancient clan being in-reded by strangers. Was there ever more flagrant place of filtring with the menths have rolled by without the government doing anything worth mentioning to show that its late minister of justice was speaking only for himself. If then the question be asked "Why does no the government put its views into ractice?" the answer must be, in the words of Sir Thomas Watt, speaking at Durban the other day. "Because the spirit of

This pithy remark was employed as a comment upon some observations by General De Wet at the great Pretoria demonstration in honor of General Hertzog. "He preferred to be amid his people on a manure heap rather than on the most brilliant platform among foreigners." Having actually as he spoke a pedestal of the character named, he may be excused for his none too choice way of putting things, but that does not save the remark from unpleasant significance. Whatever General De Wet may pretend, it reeks of disloyaity to the empire and is full of disagreeable innuendo. Fortunately the general is a politician of very small influence and his little outburst will not do any particular harm, but it is important as indicating the feeling towards the empire of a section in the contract which have been a comment upon some observations as a comment upon some observations as arms had to climb the rigging avoid a wave which threatened to was himself and his charge overboard.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1,-A cable to The Tribune from London says: During a terrific gale between Cape

There were many miracllous escapes. One officer with a little girl in his arms had to climb the rigging to avoid a wave which threatened to wash himself and his charge overboard.

One-Sided Discussion.

It was a curious spectacle on Thursday last, to see only members of one party taking any part in the debate upon the second reading of Mr. White's bill to amend the Bank Act. People in this country are universally interested in the Bank Act, because nearly all of them do some business, however small, with the banke. It cannot be possible that one-half of the people are entirely satisfied with the present condition of affairs, and the other half dissatisefid. Why a Conservative should feel no interest in the banking question and a Liberal should be keenly interested, is hard to understand; yet, in the house of commons, if one were to judge by last Thursday's performance, views upon the Bank Act diverged along political party lines. DANIELSON, Conn. Feb. 1.—Six hundred persons, most of whom were suffragists, who were listening to an address by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Suffrage Association, in the Danielson Theatre last night, were thrown into confusion when John Frisble, a wealthy farmer of Mechanicsville, interrupted the speaker and proposed marriage to her. "Just a minute, Miss Shaw," shouted Frisble, "I have been a widower for eighteen years, Will you marry me and make me happy? I have plenty for us beth."

For several minutes Dr. Shaw stood speechless. Then she orled out, dramatically.

ernment benches, than to aid the house and the finance minoster with any suggestions of practical value. This certainly was not true in the case of Hon. H. R. Emmerson, who made one of the best speeches deliv-ered at this session, and one of the best he has ever delivered in par-liament. "I don't want a wedding ring. All I want is a vote."
"I hope you never get the vote if that's the way you feel about it," was Frisbie's parting shot as he left the hall.

A good many people are wondering why Mr. E. M. Macdonald, of Pictou, N. S., should be worrying his head about imperial naturalization. It may be a hardship for American settlers in the prairie provinces naturalized in Canada to find themselves international mavericks when they visit some other country. Mr. Macdonald, in addressing the house on Wednesday, assumed that the American naturalized in Canada became again an American citizen when he returned for a visit to the United States, or BIRTHS SHOW A GREAT INCREASE

The fact is, however, that these people who come to Canada, are naturalized here and remain away from the United States for five years, have entirely lost their American citizenship, and have no citizenship anywhere, once they leave Canadian soil. It is an anomaly, perhaps a grievance, but why should it interest Mr. Macdonald? There are few, if any naturalized Canadians in Pictou. N. S., and one can scarcely believe that he put himself to the

The typewriter, like its ally stenography, is much older than most people think. The first machine constructed was the work of an Englishman, Henry Mill, who patented it in 1714. Thomas Conroy Mortally Wounded by Night Gangster-New Yorker Is Responsible.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Feb. 1 .- Thomas Conroy, prominent in the building tredes council, was shot and mortally wounded last night by gangsters who are believed to have mistaken him for another man. The shooting, at first regarded as a salcon row, is now believed to have connection with a labor difficulty.

The police made one arrest, that of a young New Yorker. Ernest Wilhaber, Accompanied by Wilhaber and a gangster named "Big Slim," the former said, "Kid Dynamite," the former said, "Kid Dynamite," came to this city and picked a quarrel with Conroy. After the shooting, two of the men leveled their revolvers at a dozen men in the saloon and made their escape. Their companion was attacked and held until the police arrived.

Wilhaber told the police "Kid Dynamite" hired him and "Big Slim" on the Bowery, in New York, for $50 each to accompany him here for "a job."

John W. Burke, a member of the Structural Iron Workers' Union, told the Jersey City police this afternoon, that he believed that he and not Conroy, was the victim sought by the gun-

CITY'S SMALL'S POND OPTION RUNS OUT

Nothing Was Done, But It Is Thought It Can Be Renew-

Memorial to Lincoln.

Washington, Feb. 1.—President Taft's first official act today was to sign the congressional resolution providing for the erection of a memorial here to Abraham Lincoln in Potomac Park. The plan approved by congress in the resolution will require an appropriation of $2,000,000, which will be made later.

Without any action being taken on the part of the city, the option obtained on the Small's Pone property expired on Saturday. Parks Commissioner Chambers thinks that there will be no difficulty in having the option renewed if the city is serious. On Monday he will submit to the parks committee a scheme for the development of Withrow Park along the lines of the improvements to Willowvale Park, passed at the last meeting of council.

THE LATE HON. JAMES YOUNG

His Monument the Undying Reverence, Tender Regard and Grateful Remembrance of the Canadian People, For Whom Signally He Wrought Lasting

By Talbot Warren Torrance

For who shall go about

Without the stamp of merit? Let

What is a man
If his chief good, and market or his

none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.

—Merchant of Venice, act ii., sc. ix. The title "Honorable" well became the late James Young of Galt, and, altho his incumbency as a minister sincerity and uptightness. He was a of the crown for the province of strict party man, but "square," they Ontario, which conferred this titular distinction, was of prief duration, yet, in his case, there never was, on either side of politics, in any quarter, the slightest disposition to question either his right, under the unwritten law enacted by usage, or the propriety, on the score of life and character, of his retention of the prefix. "Honorable"!—It seemed so well to befit the tall handsome, lithe, well-knit figure: the gracious, kindly well-knit figure; the gracious, kindly on notable occasions. There's somethanner, the measured, precise speech and the innate refinement of nature which showed in facial fedures no less than in suave advices and courtly deportment. And, it can be said with absolute unhesi-It can be said with absolute unhesitancy, he wore his title without a suggestion of vanity—pridefully and with native dignity, but with not a shade of ostentation or pomposity. The capacity for manifesting ease, maturalness, poise—splendid placidity, one might term it—was both gift and acquirement. It was displayed in his fluori.

Self-respect, self-knowledge, self-scontrol—these were conspicuously the instincts, attributes, characteristics of instincts, attributes, characteristics of the great and good Canadian who has just passed from us, and to whose devoted, unselfish, patriotic labors the country owes much that has never yet even been publicly acknowledged, much less formally, tangibly recognized as the deeds of distinguished men occasionally are.

And, if I might, I want, in this connection to submit—as an old newsnection, to submit—as an old news-paperman and close student of Canpaperman and close student of Canadian public affairs for many years—and as one who enjoyed the personal friendship of Hon. James Young from early boyhood, and who knew intimately of him up to the last—

I want to submit that, in my humble judgment, in the public life which he signally adorned, and from which he reluctantly withdrew, by reason of impaired health, he was the peer of any of his contemporaries, in of any of his contemporaries, in statesmanlike vision and grasp; in in-dustry, resourcefulness and savoir faire; in ripe scholarship, readiness in debate, and clearness and cogency of address, as well as in personal magnetism and those sterling and lovable qualities that make for lead-ership and outstanding influence and power in politics.

That James Young was not asked to a seat in the senate—a distinction which would agreeably have rounded out his career in the public service, and have gratified thousands of his friends on both sides of politics—is, I think, a reflection on the administrations with whom the call to the upper chamber lay. It is an open secret that his elevation was strongly urged on Sir Wilfrid Laurier; while not long since a memorial to this effect was presented to the present government by Galt board of trade, a large and important body. Other representative Canbairant body. Other representative Canbaira to a seat in the senate—a distinction Ferhaps, as a worthy example to the young men of the generation, it would best became some biographer to write that hour the first train will be declared open the structure will be declared open best became some biographer to write of Hon. Mr. Young's career. The press notices have amply dealt with details of his work as a politician, journalist and historian. They have further enumerated the many positions of pro-minence he has filled in the financial and commercial realm. But it has been mostly cold, perfunctory, newsy in-

Ambitious young fellows of today would be helped, it may be, by learning that Hon. James Young began life humbly, with unpropitious environments, and had largely himself to depend on as he grew from youth to manhood. He cherished the ambition to succeed in the world, and he had the stuff in him to reach the goal. In the first place, he worked hard and faithfully at his trade of printer. Next he studied hard to educate and improve himself intellectually. Above all he held steadfart to the lower of suburban, level. Over 1056 cars can be accommodated, and the facilities have been so arranged that passenegrs will be free from the noise and bustle of incoming and departing trains until they, actually that passenegrs will be free from the studied hard to educate and improve himself intellectually. Above all, he held steadfast to the belief that any rightly-constituted man can accomplish what he seeks to, if he honestly and consistently tries. Down in his inmost heart he felt the longings for public life, public service, public good. He declared with Hamlet: What is a man principle. No opposite partisan ever questioned James Young's honesty, would say of him on the other side. And yet he was a staunch Canadian before anything else in politics. His party leaders and fellow members of parliament knew he could not be turn-ed aside for expediency or party into the future greatness of his country tions with the republic to the south. He took issue with his party friends on notable occasions. There's someone might term it—was both gift and acquirement. It was displayed in his fluent speeches; it characterized his thoughtful, forceful writing; it came into play in his business relationships and the conduct of his personal, home affairs. It was part of the strength of his solid character, the power of his flowing tongue and ready pen, the secret of his success as a man of affairs, brilliant politician, masteriy publicist and born statesman.

Self-respect, self-knowledge, self-figure a deeply religious man—not a parader, but a firm holder of the faith of the fathers. He feared God and honored the king.

He cultivated the graces of a kind, courteous, affable spirit and all the little boys and girls loved Mr. Young. All his fellow-citizens of maturer age appreciated him for his unvarying grace, gentleness and friendliness.

Yetserday, in Mountview Cemetery, Galt, they laid to rest the master of grace, gentleness and friendliness.

BUSINESS MEN KNOW THE VALUE OF LIVING WITH BUSINESS MEN

The desire to mingle, dine and live with GOOD BUSINESS MEN is one reason they favor Hotel Waverley. The pleasant after-dinner talks in the smoking and lounging rooms-the social chats in the restaurant, between the musical numbers -the general refined atmosphere appeals to them. IT IS Another reason is: OUR ROOMS ARE EXTRA GOOD. while OUR RESTAURANT IS CONSIDERED ONE OF THE BEST IN TORONTO. The rates are low to guests who live with us permanently.

The very fact of your living at Hotel Waverley adds prestige with other business people, for they know we cater only to the better class of trade. DON'T YOU think you should see how really comfortable we can make you? IT IS PLEASANT TO LIVE HERE.

The R. S. Williams and Sons Co., Ltd., of 145 Yonge street, who just completed one of the most remarkable and successful pening events ever held in Canada, have just announced their fourth annual Williams Anniversary Piano Club.

Under the club plan anyone can purchase a piano on payment of $5.00-with weekly payments of only $1.25. This includes a one-year exchange privilege, a Life Insurance clause, a beautiful stool to match, two tunings, and a fiveyear guarantee. The regular value of the instrument is $360. The club price is $267.50. Thus it can be seen that in addition to the remarkably easy terms there has been a generous reduction in price, which, in view of the special privileges and features, makes this club an exceptionally attractive oppor-

To make sure that

Fat women who are contemplating a new gown in the mode will have to contemplate a reduction of their flesh before they visit the dressmaker.

Fortunately this is nothing like the hard labor it was when one had nothing but exercising or dieting to get results with. Nowadays a short course of the Marmola Prescription Tablets should bring any woman, however fat, to the proportions necessary for her to wear a Directoire gown.

Let her take a Marmola Tablet (made in accordance with the famous prescription and, therefore, harnless) after each meal and at bedtime and the should very soon be losing a pound a day. This result, accomplished without disturbing one's table customs, forming wrinkles or distressing the stomach, astonishes every-She now wishes everyone who has drunkenness in their homes to try this simple remedy for she feels sure that it will do at much for others as it has for her. It can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell you what it is. All you have to do is write her a letter asking her how she cured her husband of drinking and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope. As she has nothing to sell do not send her money. Simply send a letter with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above, taking care body.

Even one large case, costing only 75 cents at any druggist's, or the same amount direct by mail from the Marnola Company, Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., gives positive results. This constitutes the acme of economy.

A notable wedding and one of wide interest in Hamilton and outside points also, took place in Christ Church Cathedral on Wednesday afternoon, when Rev. Canon Abbott united in marriage Miss Violet M. Crerar, daughter of Mrs. and the late Mr. P. D. Crerar, to Herbert Gallagher of San Francisco, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gallagher, Hamilton.

Mrs. Adam Beck, London, sister of the bride, was marron of honor, and little Marlon Beck was bridesmaid.

The ushers were Messrs. Harry Crerar and Walfer Harvey. Harry Crerar save his sister away.

Miss Ambrose presided at the organ.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Adam Beck sang "A Thanksgiving Song. Owing to recent bereavement the wedding was quiet. A few near relatives and friends were invited to the church and later an informal reception was held at Dunedin, the family residence. It was a violet wedding, in compliment to the bride's name. The best man and ushers were violets, the bride's attendants and her mother carried violets, and all the flowers used for decoration in the cathedral and house were violets and white hyacimths. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baldwin and Miss Jean Graham, Toronto.

> > SOUND, HEALTHFUL SLEEP IS BROUGHT BY SANGUINOL.

Do you feel "fierce" today because you did not get a good sound sleep last night, or the night before, or the night before, or the night before that? Is the problem of lack of sleep worrying you? Then truly you are entitled to sympathy, for there is no more nerve-wearing, body-racking affliction than Insomnia. But what is Insomnia? It is a state of nervous degeneracy that does not allow the nerves to rest. It is really your nerves that do not sleep. They are horribly awake throughout all the long night in which you toss and turn to coax sleep to your weary body. These twitching nerves refuse to sleep, and through their activities they wear on the muscles of the entire body and keep your body awake. By constantly keeping your system, from sleep that Nature demands to build up the worn tissues used upduring the day, you soon find yourself in not only a condition of nervous exhaustion, but in a condition where your entire physical being is affected, and weakened and laid open to the most serious illnesses.

Stop this. Stop it today. Get at the bottom of your trouble, Your nerves are crying out for proper food. Give it to them by using Sanguinol. This is a simple remedy containing the phosphates in a form that will feed back to the nervous system the very clements of which it is composed, the very food that it craves.

Sanguinol also contains Manganese and Iron, which upbuild and revitatize the blood. But that is all. There is not an atom of arcohol or harmful drugs. It is a real tonic in every sense of the word, and not a mere stimulant.

Driving on ski, otherwise ski-joring, a variation of ski-running introduced into Switzerland by Swedes, yields a pleasing means of progress along roads, or on lakes, when the snow is solid enough to give a good foothold for a horse. The harness used is simple. The driver is fastened to the traces by a hook which is easily manipulated; or, as an alternative, holds a kind of whiffle-bar fixed to them. It is necessary that the horse should be well broken and know its work; for, obviously, the ski-jorer has little control.

BULGARS READY TO REDUCE FORT

Have Perfect Organization Around Adrianople and King Nicholas Will Win or Die in Attempt.

LONDON Feb. 1.—A last attempt to prevent a resumption of the war in the Balkan peninsula, is being made by the representatives of the European powers

Balkan peninsula, is being made by the representatives of the European powers at Constantinople, and at Sofia, according to information received by the European Ambassadors in London. A detailed report on the subject is awaited here this evening.

In the meanwhile everything has been made ready for a renewal of hostilities. The members of the Bulgarian peace delegation have received communications from the front according to which General Savoff, the Bulgarian commander-in-chief, asserts that the joint Bulgarian and Servian army surrounding the fortress of Adrianople, is one of the most efficient every altered together. He declares that every detail of the attempt to storm and capture the city has been carefully prepared, and its execution, if the plan should be carried out as rapidly as has been arranged, will be a most remarkable military feat. The general finds another clement of success in the loyal emulation of the Servian and Bulgarn troops, who in almost equal numbers invest the fortress.

Bets are freely offered among the besiegers as to who will be the first to enter Adrianople and plant on its walls, heretofore sacred to the Mussulmans, the victorious flag of the allies.

It is asserted here that the Monsulmans, the victorious flag of the allies.

It is asserted here that the Montenegrins and the Greeks have received semi-official assurance that Russia and France will support their retention of the Turkish fortresses of Scutari and Janina, if they succeed in capturing them while the Bulgarians are taking Adrianople.

King Nicholas of Montenegro, on the one side and Crown Prince Constantine of Greece on the other, declare that they will lose their lives or take the Turkish fortresses by storm.

Stould any fresh proposition to prevent a renewal of the war give promise of a likelihood of success, the allies will now put as a condition to both Turkey and the European powers, not only the cession of Adrianople and the Islands in the Aegean Sea, but also the handing over of Scutari and Janina to Montenegro and Greece.

Most of the Greek and Servian peace delegates have started for home.

BIG MOVEMENT OVER A YEAR IN BED AND YET IS A BUSY REAL ESTATE MAN

Here's an Agent Who Hasn't Stirred From His Little Back Bedroom at 84 D'Arcy Street For Many Many Months and Yet is Making Over Ten Thousand Yearly.

For over a year bedridden, and for two years unable to stir from his little back bedroom, the oddest real estate man in Toronto plies a trade that for profitable extent must be the envy of many men fully possessed with every faculty for getting about.

William Lunenfeld is the man who thrives amid difficulties that would well worry the average mortal into being but a burden to those around him. On the contrary Real Estate Agent Lunenfeld is reputed to be "cleaning up" $10,000 or more a year. Some days he has thirty or forty callers to meet in his little room over the grocery store at 84 D'Arcy street. When The World man was there he could hear a rather wordy argument upstairs that a moment or two afterwards was followed by a well-known and astute Victoria street operafor thumping down the stair; with a wrathy and baffled sir. Mr. Lunenfeld, tho unable to stir; has got a will of his own. When he's thiru with a visitor he bangs a bell om the book-strewn desk beside him, and that's the signal for Seventy-Five of Brewster's Clerks Driven Into Street Without Cloaks-Damage $25,000.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 1 .- Seventy-five female clerks, without hats or cloaks, were driven to the street here this morning when fire broke out in Brewster's three storey novelty store. For a time the entire business block on was crowded with the people. The fire started in the furnace room and was due to a defective gas connection. The flames shot suddenly to the first floor and in a moment dense volumes of smoke filled the place. ctal.)—Feb. 1 brought a decidedly cold spell and a general strike of the journeymen plumbers in St. Catharines.

The men who have been receiving 35 cents an hour asked for 40 cents today, a further increase to 45 cents per hour after Aug 1 next. The employers made a compromise offer of 40 cents per the per for the year, but this the men declined, holding out for the first demand. There is a tremendous amount of work on hand in the building trades and the strike will seriously affect.

"Do you fear for your personal safety?" he was asked.

Brazilian the Leader.

The past week has seen considerable improvement scored by the Toronto market, under the lead of Brazilian. This issue has reached new ronto market, under the lead of Brazilian. This issue has reached new record levels, and, according to the numerous tips which are floating around "the street," is destined for much better prices. It is also understood—tho as yet in a rather vague sort of way—that something will be done in order to make the stock look attractive, and this in the very near future. Opinion is divided as to the means which will be adopted to move the security higher, som favoring the idea that a new stock sesue will be made at par, while others are busy framing jup other measures. If the balance of the stock in the treasury were to be put out at $100, it would seem that the old in the treasury were to be put out at $100, it would seem that the old shares would have to be moved up some ten points at least before anything like a juicy "melon" would be obtainable. Meanwhile, the action of the issue will be watched with in-terest, as its course will play a large part in determining the trend

Porcupine-That the bond market is now at its lowest level in four years is plainly shown in the chart which gives the course of the average bond prices in the New York market. It will be noted that the year 1912 closed with the average at 88.67, which compared with 90.97 at the end of 1911, 91.13 in 1910, 93.04 in 1909, 95.25 in 1908, average at 88.67, which compared with 90.97 at the end of 1911, 91.13 in 1910, 93.04 in 1909, 95.25 in 1908, and 94.85 in 1906. The almost continuous lower tendency of recent years is an apt illustration of the world-wide demand for higher interest yields.

How One Prospector Struck Oil in the Kansas Fields-A Streak of Luck.

Mother earth conceals fone of her Mother earth conceals fione of her mineral treasures more cunningly than petroleum. The prospector for oil, unlike the miner, has scarcely any clue to guide him.

A prominent man in the petroleum industry was prospecting in Kansas during the early days of the oil boom in that state and had leased a parcel of land to try his luck. Having provided himself with the necessary outfit for drilling and a barrel to hold the precious fluid, he set out with a mule team and a couple of drivers. His destination was about 15 miles from the starting point, over miserable roads. After proceeding ten miles one of the wagon wheels dropped off and the barrel tipped over and rolled down an embankment at the roadside. The two helpers who had begun to feel sorry that they had come, were fairly exasperated at this turn of affairs and vehemently anathematized Kansas roads and oil fields in general. They were abruptly silenced, however, by the unperturbed prospector who coolly informed them that he intended stopping right where they were and drilling for oil.

An hour sufficed for the resourceful drilling for oil.

An hour sufficed for the resourceful fortune hunter to arrange a lease with the owner of the land, who lived in a log cabin down the road. A drilling was started at the exact point where the barrel had stopped and in a short time a gusher was struck. The lease brought in $40,000.

As a rule, the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange discourages public speaking on the part of its members. It possesses almost autocratic power. If it had taken a dislike to the literary style of the late Edmund Clarence Stedman, it could have made him quit poetry or the Stock Exchange. The committee may therefore not altogether like recent utterances on reforming the exchange. The governors are sensitive to crititive the prohibited short selling in 1812. It repealed the law in 1858 because it was so obviously impossible that no-body took it seriously. Falling to profit by this experience the Federal Government passed a similar law in 1864. That enactment lasted fifteen days: and if politicians, even at that time, had been able to reason, it would not have lasted fifteen minutes. England had repealed such a law in 1860. That law had been on the statute books for 123 years, because no one dreamed of obeying it, or thought it worth while to repeal anything so 1900 1901 1906 Tontreal 10 1	RNINGS AND DIVIDENDS FOR 02	1908	cism, and a certain fractiousness may be conceded to them on account of their advanced age. But the most useful thing accomplished by these utterances is to call attention to the way certain proposed reforms have worked when they have been applied elsewhere. Perhaps the weakest feature of the American character is the inability to learn from the experience of others. Most of the suggestions of political quacks are the exploded fallacies of history. One of those fallacies, and one of the worst, is that the public can in some way be benefited by the prohibition of short selling of stocks or other things. It is about as practical to prohibit water from running down hill. Lessons of History. The legislature of the State of New obviously silly. The French tried the same thing in 1885, and repealed the law as fast as the constitution would allow. Germany finds herself poorer by many millions of marks, and the loss of a market which may probably never return to Berlin by the Boarse act of 1896, which was finally repealed in 1908. This is the history of legislation to prohibit short selling, and many of those who argue against the practice are doing the very thing every day of their lives. The politician, of course thinks he has everything to gain and nothing to lose. But other men in useful employment have everything to lose, and nothing to gain in medding with a process which is a vital part of a market for anything, from carrotz to Consols.—Wall Street Journal.

First Half.
The game opened at 2.50, and Strome at left wing for Varsity returned to the same for the first time this winter. Peterboro protested upon the similarity of the jerseys, and Varsity, as before, changed to the Tecumsehs' jerseys turned inside out.
Varsity opened the play by rushing reterboro's goal, but Dwyer relieved. Peterboro soon after were banging away at Parker, but Strome relieved by rushing the full length of the ice and passing to Webster at the goal mouth, the latter promptly netting the puck. Varsity 1. Parker

Sinclair was benched for bodying Coughlin to the boards. Play livened up tery much and both teams were setting a fast pace. Spratt and Giroux were working nicely. Kelly was very fast and kept up a very aggressive game.

Webster went down to the goal mouth, but Dwyer came out and blocked him. Caldwell went down a minute later and went thru when the defence opened up, but Dwyer again pulled the hair-raising stun. Sinclair was benched for catching the puck. Kelly secured the puck five eet out and had a clean shot, but Parker stopped it. Sinclair off, the penalty being for slashing. Armstrong was hit by the puck in the mouth and retired. Mc-Dowell went off to even up.

Webster was put off for bodying a man to the board, and Varsity, with four men to six, succeeded in playing rage long enough until Sinclair returned. Farker was however, called upon to stop several hard shots. Webster returned soon after, evening the sides up. After some in-and-out play, Strome broke away and again trassed to Webster, who promptly put Varsity in the lead. Time 14.00. Varsity 2. Peterboro 1.

Gene Woodburn, one of the Cardinals' young pitchers, is a ventriloquist. It appears that last season whenever he occupled the box he had loads of fun with Roger Bresnahan. According to the story told by his fellow players he would throw his voice toward the plate and startle Bresnahan with the remark: yards:

Bresnahan, hot tempered as usual, would throw off his mask and look around him for the person who had insulted him. The climax was reached one day when Woodburn was batted out of the box after making Roger run around OTTAWA, Feb. 1.—Today's ice races have been called off, owing to the bad condition of the track. Today's card goe over until Monday.

"Gene, said Bresnahan, "put on your street clothes and go into the stand. If you catch the guy that has been roast-ling me, grab him and let me know!"

One of the many surprises recorded in connection with the cup games in England on Saturday was the defeat of Newcastle United at Hull. The Tigers are certainly a dangerous lot, but that they would be able to blast the hopes the Magpies had of capturing the English Cup for the season. Newcastle have all along been regarded as unfortunate in their connection with the cup, and this latest defeat would indicate that their misfortune is not yet over.

In the Athenaeum A League last werk the Simcoes retained their lead by winning all three from the Aberdeens and are two full games in front of Collegs, who are their only dangerous rivals for the championship of the second series, as the Windsors were practically put out of the running when they came a cropper last week against the Gladstones.

The College B continued their winning streak by taking two games from Yolles and look like sure winners of the series and with the first and second series both in the bag, Hamy roten & Co. will take some beating for the B honors.

There is a good battle going on in the C League between Sellers-Gough. Crescents, Opticals and Riv, dales, with the former having a little the best of it so far, but with two-thirds of the series still to play there is no telling who will finis in front at any rate there are going to be some great matches before the winner is settled on.

The News, in second place, altho rolling up a record total as before stated, lost one of their three games to Maybee & Co., the latter nesing out in the first game, and also had a chance in the second, which they dropped by only 20 pins. The Stockers reem to have shot their boil ratter this game, however, and were easy picking for The News in the third, who put in their banner game of the night with a 944 count. J. Curry Company bettered their position by winning three games in a row from St. Charles Limited, and in doing so stuck in high single for the week with a 950 count in their middle game. The Miners, however, were all to the bad in the last game, which they finally won out only thru the hard uck encountered by St. Charles in the tenth frame. Liggett's Drugs and Batonias, who were expected to put up the feature engagement of the week, only put up an ordinary battle, with the Drugs getting the decision by winning the second series, still has a mystery sunrounding it that only weeks yet of rolling could decide upon an ultimate winner.

Thorpe returned them to the union after his recent confession of professional management of the prize offered last spring for the arbiter who could show the least time average for games during the season. It was not generally known that Johnston had made such an offer until he announced the award.

DITCHER INSECTIONING

In the Toronto Bowling Club Bivepin League some changes took place, as might be expected, Millionaires being ousted from the top by Stanleys, who won all three games, while Olympias ascended the pedestal of five-pin tame, at least for the time being, thru handing the short end of the count to Flying Post in three games abreast. Paraing Post in three games abreast. Paraing Post in three games abreast. ing the short end of the count to Flying Post in three games abreast. Paragons, in second place, however, are stickers, and only a slump in one game against Woodgreens robbed them of a near clean-up and a tie-up with the leaders. Senators moved into the first division by winning three games from Islanders, while All-Stars got into the fight by taking the odd game from Swastikas. Therefore, with three weeks of the second series of this league stored away, it's dollars to doughnuts that no one can even pick the next week-end leader amongst the first four.

The greatest ball player of the present time is an Indian who lives in Cuba, according to Armando Marsans, of the Cincinnati team, who is at present holding out for more salary. He is thus described by the Reds' star player, who ought to be a good judge of greatness in a ball player.

The association is to run a city school hockey league next year. This has been done in the eastern schools for the past seven years, as the East End Y.M.C.A. have allowed them the use of their hocke cushions. The wark commissioner has added more cushions this year and the school board has also placed some in the large school yards, so the association cannow see its way clear to run a league.

Dr. J. L. Hughes spoke to the association on the value of sports. The following officers were elected:

twenty-seven, came out a few years ago and at once became the marvel of Eastern Cuba.

"He was a pitcher, and a star on the slab, but he was also a batsman, a lightning base runner and clever outfielder. American clubs took it for granted that he was a negro and did not sign him. Finally some influencial Cub an manager succeeded in making an American magnet understand that Canella was no negro and all was arranged for his try-out in the coming spring.

"And then came the news that Canella's arm was gone! Going home for a visit, Canella saw the young men of his tribe practising throwing the javelin. Picking up a slendor spear, he hurled it with all his might—and something went snap, crack! in his upper arm as he let go the javelin. The arms so long accustomed to throwing the baseball, gave way when he tried to throw the spear, and never since has Canella been able to throw—a ball from the pitching slab as far as the catcher."

The Taft-Murphy combination in baseball is puzzling baseball men. While urphy says he has purchased a half interest in the Philadelphia ball park from C. P. Now, in the era of the hit-and-run play, good men with ability to lay the ball down still remain scarce. In the American League the same condition of affairs holds. For, as a matter of fact, since the passing of Keeler, there has been less bunting in the league each year. The best expo-ent of the art today, considered from the point of constant resort to it, is probably Ty Cobb. But it is, neverthe-less, our modest opinion that Nap La-jole is a past master at dropping the ball down.

Others who still possess the ability to bunt are Bush, Collins and a few others. Bunting has played an import-ant part in baseball. Records show broken up by bunting, instead of hit-ting. It throws the opposing team up in the air as players do not know what Then there is another side of the Written for The Sunday World. NEW YORK, Feb. 1 .- Governor Suler has thrown a scare into the promoters of professional boxing in New York State. His Excellency reatens to ask the legislature to epeal the Frawley law, unless the haracter of the sport is improved to such an extent that it does 'not offend the public morals. Mr. Suizer claims to have evidence that exhibitions frequently descend to the level of slugging matches, and declares that in the future all contests must be conducted on a clean and scientific basis; otherwise he will be conducted on a clean and inc basis; otherwise he will the law off the statute books

Battling Nelson Has Lived Sixty Lives

"Ordinarily the cat with nine lives is supposed to be about the limit in vitality," remarks Walter Lavine, fight promoter, "but give us Battling Nelson, called The Durable. For the Battler has 60 lives"

"Show us the 60."

"Show us the 60."

"It's this way—Battling Nelson has fought 121 contests, according to the Andrews guide. Now, every time Bat fights it's a well-known fact that, win or lose, his defence is so poor he's half killed. Therefore, dividing the total number of his fights by two, we have the gentleman fully killed at least 60 times. And besides there's a half a death left over"— oly cleansed and the objectionable features practically eliminated.

McGoorty in Bad in New York.

Eddie McGoorty got in bad with local critics as a result of his failure to stop Freddie Hicks at a local club last week. A boxer of reputa-tion has his work cut out to please everybody. If he fails to put wipe the law off the statute books entirely.

If the governor will take the trouble to investigate the situation, I am confident he will find that there is no call for such action on his part. The statement that boxing in New Tork has degenerated into "brutal prize fighting" is not supported by facts. At no time in the history of the ring has the sport been cleaner or better conducted. Of course boxing is not exactly a parlor game, as the governor well knews, and little of the "rough stuff" is bound to crop out now and then during a sontest of skill, but it is seldom the limits of decency have been overstepped or public morals offended to the extent that it has been found necessary to stop a bout.

I am afraid the governor has derived his information from a source which, to put it mildly, is too prejudiced to be fair in representing the state of affairs. Barring a few minor features, and which time alone will remedy, boxing exhibitions in New York have been pretty thor-

ONLY $5500 IN MONEY PAID FOR O'TOOLE

A Cleveland newspaper claims that the big prices paid for star players in recent seasons are all fictitious. He says he has documentary evidence that the huge sums named as the price of Russell, Marquard and O'Toole never happened—that the amount of cash exchanged was relatively small, and that the big sums were made by putting an inflated value on the scrub players figuring in the deals.

He says that the real money for O'Toole was just $5,500; for Marquard, $5,000; for Russell, $2,500; for Schalk, $3,500, and for Corriden, $2,000. Ed. Bang—that's the wicked writer—is evidently an iconoclast—or else he is just the referee—an idol worshipper. If Ed tells it right, the $10,000 cash that was twice paid in the long ago—for Clarkson and Kelly—was the high-water mark, and has never been approached.

"gent" from the Quaker City, elimfinates Edward from the contest for the title. It is my own opinion that Eddie's days for 158 ringside are over. That he cannot do himself justice at the weight was demonstrated in the ten-round go with Mike Gibbons last December. I doubt if McGoorty would make a creditable showing with a rugged fighter such as Frank Klaus, or Jack Dillon, at the middle-weight limit.
At 162, which is about his mark, it might be a different story.

"Sailor" Burke Again in the Field.
Speaking of contenders for the middle-weight championship, I am told that "Sailor" Burke is again in the field. The "Sailor" don't weigh an ounce over 180. The last/ time I saw Burke he was on the feceiving end in a mill with Bob Moha. I thought the licking he assimilated that night had taken all the fighting ambition out of him; but here he is back again. What a bear Burke was when facing a dub! And how he could "dog" it when up against a good man!

Altho Rivers can hardly be classed as a scientific boxer, he is a master mechanic alongside of Brown. "K.

is to keep slamming with his left, which is his dangerous hand. And Rivers may find his awkward rightfoot-forward style hard to fathom for a few rounds.

I observe that Joe Mandot, who saw Brown box in New Orleans, predicts "K. O." will outgame and outfight Rivers. According to Mandot, the Mexican is strictly-a front runner, and curls. up when the other and where Mandot acquired this information. He certainly did not take

Dan McKettrick, manager of Joe Jeannette, is now in France endeavoring, I understand, to have his boxer substituted for Al Palzer, in the proposed heavy-weight championship with Jack Johnson next June: A letter from Al Lippe, the American manager associated with the French promoters, states there is not the slightest chance for Jeannette, and that McKettrick's errand will prove fruitless.

Whatever else may be said of Johnson, he is not in the "boob" class, in a business way. To expect him to consent to the substitution of the experienced and dangerous Jeannette for the green Palzer, is too absurd to be given a thought by those who know the champion and his methods.

No Bout for Jeannette.

Even should the financial inducements be greater, it is doubtful for the proposed the proposed the New Orleans boxer.

While Brown and Rivers are exchanging compliments and punches at Los Angeles, Mandot and Tommy Murphy will entertain San Francisco sports. Jim Coffroth has booked the boys for his holiday card, and, to judge from the form "Harlem Tommy" lisplayed in the recent bout with Frankie Burns, there is a huge surprise in store for Mr. Mandot. Despits his thirteen years in the ring, Murphy is far from a member of the "has-been" society. The 20-round affairs suit his style much better than the short dashes to which he was accustomed in the east.

The schedule for the Dominion fit should be given a thought by those who know the champion and his methods.

At any rate, there is no danger of his taking on Jeannette when he can command $25,000 for a bout with a novice.

If a liberal amount of advertising is necessary to the financial success of a boxing match, the meeting between "Packy" McFarland and Jack Britton bids fair to establish a record.

That is, if it ever takes place. We were led to believe that everything had been settled, and that the contest would be held at Madison Square Garden on the night of Feb. 7, but it appears that announcement was a trifle premature.

Three clubs are now trying to land the match. The Forty-fourth Street Club will guarantee "Packey" $7,000; the Empire A. C. oxers the same inducements. Billy Gibson, of the Garden, who has first call on Mc-Farland's friendship, will give the stock-yards champion the privilege of 30 per cent. of the receipts, with a guarantee of $6,500, and Britton can have 20 per cent. for his end "Packey" favors the Garden proposition, and if Britton's manager can be tion, and if Britton's manager can be persuaded to accept Gibson's terms, the match is likely to be clinched at any time.

There is said to be no dispute over the weight question, and, if the financial details are arranged to both boxers' satisfaction, they will meet at 138, weigh in at 3 o'clock. Which portends that the boys are about ripe for the welter-weight division.

Ritchie Announces the Weight.
Willie Ritchie says he will defend the light-weight championship at 133 pounds, ringside, the weight at which he won the title from Al Wolgast. Ritchie and, his foxy manager obviously decided that it would not be a wise move to raise the limit as long as McFarland is able to sit in the game.

Los Angeles fans should see a great slugging match when Joe Rivers and "Knockout" Brown clash, on Washington's Birthday. If nothing else can be said in his favor, "Knock-out" is one of the most willing little mixers in the division. It mat-ters not to the Dutchman whom

The New Leaders.

Of these five two in particular will the arrangements that had The New Leaders.

Of these five two in particular will command the closest scrutiny of the fans of New York in particular and doubtless the country at large in general. These are Frank Chance, who comes to the Highlanders, and George Stallings, who goes to Boston. Both have shown wonderful ability in the past and their careers are linked in a way because of the former associations of the "Big Chief." Both take hold of tall and clubs, but clubs possessed of possibilities. They will furnish an interesting study for comparisons. In putting thee Yankees among the Frank Chance is being called upon to that which he has never before attempted—the complete reorganization of a hopelessly disrupt outfit. Frank Chance did wonders with his wonderful Cubs from 1908 to 1912, it must be admitted. His career is as brilliant as any of history. But he found that team ready made for him. One must give him all the credit in the world as a "Peerless Leader." But as a reconstructionist, so far he is untried. What Chance is asked to do Stallings has already done, not once but several times. He did it in Detroit years go and he did it in New York within the past five years.

No one will try to argue that Stallings is as great a baseball leader as a Frank Chance. The records would not substantiate it. But if Stallings' ability as a builder is possessed by Chance then the Hilltoppers are duefor much better things in the near future. It is one thing to lead men; another to dig up the proper men to be led.

be dangerous, too, as much so as a ly he has delayed coming to New Yerk year ago for now the wonderful Walter Johnson has some sort of team behind him for the first time in his life. Griffith's young men should be much more dependable now than they were a year ago. Their wonderful run of 1912 has institled all sorts of confidence.

Now there may just possibly be a dark horse or two to crop out in either league. But whether or no it is not going to be a duli campaign by any means, for the clubs destined in the lower floor. It should be a great baseball season from every standpoint for there are no less than seven new managers—or at least new so far as their present situations are concerned. And of the seven no less than five are connected with second division outfits.

Several of Them Are Masters in the Game of Dodging Bouts—A New Lightweight Crops up in Australia—The Middleweight Question.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—Supposing that the rules and regulations for the fostering and furthering of

for the fostering and furthering of boxing contests made it incumbent upon promoters to give special attention to the matching of such pugilists as the public wanted to see get together, which would be the red letter bouts on the 1913 calendar?

Hughie Mehegan, acording to inside information, did not peg back to any extent on account of losing to Weich. I had a letter from a gentleman who witnessed the bout—a man who I know to be a judge of boxing and a fair minded sportsman—and he wrote me that he considered that Mehegan did the better work of the pair. He said that Mehegan, who was handibouts on the 1913 calendar?

This was the question put to the writer a few days ago and it is not by any means a difficult one to answer. secretary of the Promoters' Protective Association would write to inform Master Johnny Coulon that he would have to commit himself to a real banmpionship match within a specified time or else submit to being placed on the retired list.

There are quite a number of young-sters willing to take a fling at him, among them eastern Frankie Burns and western Eddie Campi. Finding an opponent will be one of the easiest things in the collection once Coulon is prodded into a fight "humor." And this ought to be done

Kilbane and Dundee.

A bout between featherweight champion Johnny Kilbane and Johnny Dundee would find a place on the preferred list. It is understood, however, that Uncle Tom McCarey, the Los Angeles match-maker, is attending to this matter so there is no occasion to say anything further about

Just as soon as Willie Ritchie has had a surfeit of the footlight glare patrons of ring sport will clamor for a return match between the lightweight champion and Ad Wolgast. If for partment, these men should be sent return match between the lightweight champion and Ad Wolgast. If for any unforseen reason this cannot be arranged a clash between Ritchie and Joe Rivers would fill the aching void equally as well.

It so happens that the topliners do not mobilize the interest in the lightweight class, which, as ever, is the last recorded division in puglish with the 18s rounders have formed a "must be formed as the formed a must be formed as the formed as th weight class, which, as ever, is the best peopled division in pugliism. With Harlem Tommy Murphy, Joe Mandot, Leach Cross, Knockout Brown, Bud Anderson, Jimmy Duffy, and others so close to championship rating, that there is no telling when one of them will command public backing as a challenger for the title, the fight handlers have splendid material to work on. Lightweight conditions are such, in fact, that it would be a dunce of a promoter who could not select an attractive match.

Welch Claims the Title. And how about the foreigners?
Freddie Welch, who has bobbed into the limelight again by outpointing Australian Hughle Mehegan in England, is due to arrive in this country pearance already. Freddie is advertis ing himself as the "real, undisputed" lightweight champion and is doing so unconscious of the fact that he is

In building up an argument to sustain his position Freddie says:

CALIFORNIA TALKS OF PUTTING THE LID ON BOXING GAME

Fight Promoters Are Getting Anxious in Frisco Town-Will the Bill Pass?

SOME NOTABLE BATTLES

Frisco Has Seen All the World's Best in Action-A Few of the Great Ones.

By W. W. Naughton. SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 1.—Is boxing to be placed under the ban in Cali-it is, but senators err in their prognos-tications at times. Brown is anxious to stamp out professional pugilism in this state and in pursuance of his purpose he has tramed a bill which is to be passed upon by the legislature at present in session. In the new measure everything-bearing upon boxing contests is made a felony. Nothing in the shape of side issues has been overlooked. If a complement of "fans" want to discuss the possibilities of a scrap that is to take place in some other state, they will have to go out into the sand dunes and talk in whispers.

It is such a prohibitory, air-tight, water-tight affair that there is a promise of it being self-strangled. Senators and assembly-men who ordinarily have little use for the sport of gloves are likely to conclude that the Brown law is too much of a blue law and refuse to accord it their support.

At a that the fellows who derive a to go out into the sand dunes yonder, however, subscribe to this view of McCoy's cleverness. Some of them snort at the suggestion that a second Griffo ever will be uncovered. They admit that McCoy is away above

Saving Canadians From Degeneracy

No more important question could be raised than that discussed by Dr. P. H. Bryce, chief medical officer, interior department of Canada in an article reprinted from The Public Health Journal and originally presented before the Canadian Public Health Association Congress held in Toronto last year. His subject is "Saving Canadians From the Degeneracy Due to Industrialism in Cities of Older Civilization" and it has special regard to the problem caused by the much greater relative increase in the urban population as compared with the rural. This phenomenon is of course not peculiar to Canada and is as visible in the United States as in the United Kingdom or Germany. Thus during the decade ending 1910 the urban population of the neighboring Republic increased by 38 per cent. while the rural increase was only 9.2 per cent. Even greater was the relative disproportion in Canada where urban communities increased by 62.5 per cent., while the rural increase was only 17.6 per cent. Dr. Bryce estimates that the natural increase in urban districts has been exceeded by 23 per cent. in the United States and by 47.5 per cent in Canada. On the other hand the rural increase is considerably less than normal in the United States and in Canada has exceeded the normal by only 5.6 per cent.

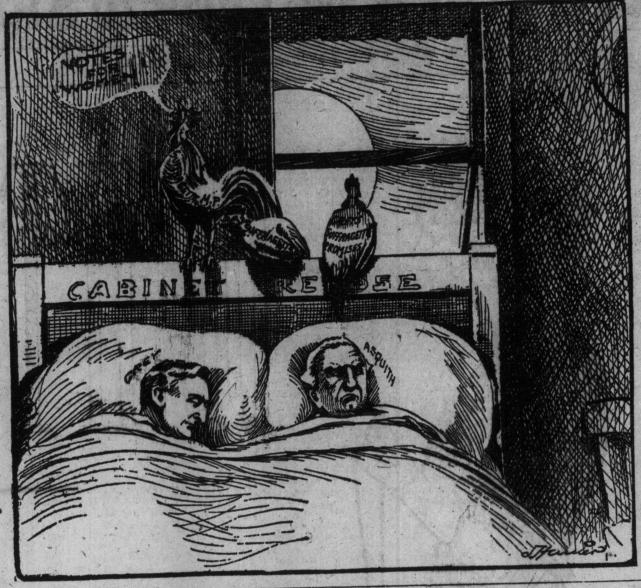

When the matter of immigration is considered the significance of these figures becomes more apparent. When that factor is taken into account the deficiency in the assumed normal rural increase, according to Dr. Bryce, is over 48 per cent. in the United States and 37.5 per cent. in Canada. This is a serious situation looking to the necessity of maintaining "in any well balanced population a certain proportion of what we may call producers of the raw materials of wealth which primarily include those foods necessary to the subsistence in health and comfort of any people. As a corollary to this it follows that such foods should be generally distributed and obtainable at prices possible for every member of such population." This leads Dr. Bryce to consider the rising cost of fiving which in the United States is 29 per cent.; in Canada 27 per cent.; in Germany 40 per cent. since 1902 and in France 20 per cent. since 1890. In Britain, however, the increase has only been 5 per cent. on food and household commodities together, but on foodstuffs alone by only 2 per cent., altho including a 61 per cent. increase in the price of bacon. Wheat, mutton, sugar, tea, coffee, potatoes and cocoa are cheaper in New England than in 1890. Britain obtains the greater part of its food by exchange and has the whole world to draw upon, but if a country is not so situated it must have a sufficiency of prosperous agriculturists to lay the foundation of its own prosperity.

Large cities inevitably have crowded areas and these tend to deteriorate into slums. These exist in the new world quite as much as in the old and the problem set before Canadian crties has really to do with their prevention. Dr. Bryce points out that in ten years eight Canadian cities with a population to start with of 554,506 were called upon to absorb an influx of 639,769 persons. The city showing the largest percentage of increase was Toronto with 80 per cent. This of itself is sufficient to explain the conditions that have arisen in certain districts of this city. What Dr. Bryce is chiefly concerned with is "the possibility of finding a remedy for a situation which from the economic, social and public health standpoints seems to portend evils so disastrous as to demand the serious thought and action of every one interested in the welfare of our common country.' That home supplies are decreasing is undoubted and it is due in part to the relative small increase in prices received by the farmer and the increased cost of production. Dr. Bryce states the several elements entering into the solution of the problem he is discussing as illustrated by the statistics given in his pamphlet thus—"I. Lessening the cost of agricultural production. 2. Preparing and conserving all products of the farm in the most perfect manner possible until they reach the consumer and for which the highest practical prices are paid to the producers and 3. The transportation of farm products as cheaply and as directly to the consumer as possible." This we imagine to be a clear statement of the prerequisites to making the cultivation of the soil and its relative industries attractive and thus inducing more land settlement

Dealing with the first of these elements, that of lessening the cost of production, Dr. Bryce remarks that it depends essentially upon the agriculturist himself and necessarily involves sufficient capital to purchase labor-saving machinery; skilled employes; organized methods; proper preparation of soil; care in securing seed, in harvesting and storing. Agriculture needs knowledge quite as much as any other manufacturing or commercial business and this, he says, leads clearly to the second element, that of the preparation and conservation of farm products. This means in his view-selection of crops fitted for differing localities; local and sufficient supply of labor, involving a larger rural working population and an arrangement by which their labor will be constantly engaged profitably and lastly the employment of scientific methods for preparing, packing and preserving products. Regarding transportation from producer to consumer directly and cheaply Dr. Bryce points out that there would seem to exist an implied or necessary opposition between the interests of the producer and the middlemen, be he peddler, railway company or merchant. To the extent that each of these is necessary for the proper and economic division of trade and handling of products there is no necessary opposition, but anything beyond necessarily involves a conflict. Modern developments in the way of trade combinations have made it possible to impose arbitrary prices on producers and three or more intermediate profits before products reach consumers. Co-operation among farmers, such as exists in Denmark and England might tend to drive those who now act as middlemen, or many of them, into producing for themselves. For that is the crux of the problem how to turn the mass of casual and unproductive labor back to the land. It is the most vital question in Canada and our statesmen should set themselves resolutely to its solution.

Much good could no doubt be accompanied by the creation of more interest in the result of co-operation among agriculturists in producing, conserving and marketing their products. To these various classes of co-operative associations Denmark owes its extraordinary success as an exporter of food. The country is indeed covered with them and the care taken to judge the quality of the products and the direct handling of the exporting and distributing trade by the agents of the societies has yielded the Danish farmers very profitable returns. Some years ago these products were handled British ports by local agents and wholesalers working on commission, who dealt with the retail storekeepers. They have now been almost entirely supplanted by salaried agents appointed by the exporting societies who are directly concerned with securing the best possible results. New departures are continually being made on the Continent of Europe in the way of bringing producers and consumers into closer relationship and in some cases cities and towns have become associated with these endeavors. But co-operaction among agriculturists has already come in Canada and will develop as its advantages become apparent.

SUFFRAGETTE HENS COME HOME TO ROOST.

Commission Government

The success of commission government in rebuilding the City of Galveston, Texas, after its destruction by a tidal wave, has attracted the attention of the world. Since this innovation many other cities have adopted the idea and today in the United States 205 cities in 33 states have it. These cities have a combined population of nearly five million and represent every feature of municipal life from the great cities of New Orleans and St. Paul down to the small towns.

Of course, innovations are not liked by some people. They do not want to learn anything new. a foreigner and must reside there "Let things be as they are" is their motto. Interfore he can receive citizen's papers. ests that had found the underground railway to special privilege under the old council system opposed government by commission. Political crooks and offenders against the law took up the fight, and notwithstanding its admitted success in every city where it had been tried and the satisfaction it has brought to the honest business interests and to the citizens in general, these rough neck people have succeeded in retarding the progress of the movement.

Honest government is one thing that professional politicians and the privilege grabbers cannot endure, but we in Canada should not be slow to adopt new measures that are admittedly for the benefit of the whole people. The chaotic condition of municipal affairs in Toronto would not have come about but for the incompetency and the reckless blundering of the small bore aldermen who have opposed every movement for real advancement. We have some of them in this year's council, altho there is promise that some progress will be made this year.

Municipal Ownership

After a six months' tour of Old Country cities and an extensive investigation of the question of municipal control, construction and maintenance of ports, Frank Putnam, of Houston, Texas, has reported to that city that the majority of the larger cities in Europe are far ahead of the cities of the United States in these matters. The principle of municipal ownership, he says, both in Great Britain and Germany is well established and it is the settled policy of the cities which he visited to extend municipal ownership and operations of public utilities to take them all in. In fact, the success of the working of this principle is no longer a de batable subject and the complete transference of all public utilities from private to public ownership is apparently only a question of a few years. The idea extends to dock and harbor property. In the German cities the municipalities own and control all, or nearly all, of such property, leasing it to transportation and industrial companies at rentals which are planned to enable the cities to pay off debt incurred by them to provide harbors and thereafter to turn a steadily increasing flow of rev enue from that source into the municipal treasury

Cold Storage

Alderman Maybee's proposal to submit the peration of the cold storage companies to inspection by public officials is worthy of commendation. Mr. Maybee is prepared to produce evidence in committee, to show that cold storage commodities have been disposed of to the public at high prices even after putrefaction has begun. In moving fo the inspection regularly of cold storage warehouses he is meeting the general demand for the protection of the public against the sale of decomposed food.

Under the present system tons of meat, eggs and other articles are kept out of the retail stores awaiting more favorable markets and the result is an artificial and unfair inflation of prices, caused by the limited supply in certain seasons. Alderman Maybee further proposes a mun cipal cold storage plant to regulate prices and con-ditions generally, which is a good idea from a pub-

Seven Little New Jersey Bills To Re-Create "The Land of Opportunity"

Regulation of Trusts and Stock Issues, the Prevention of Organizations in Restraint of Trade and Stock Holding In Other Companies-Mergers and the Cost of Living.

Governor Wilson of New Jersey, the president-elect of the United States, is determined, before he demits the office he now holds, to carry thru the reforms promised before his election as chief executive of that state. At his instance seven bills have been prepared and introduced into the New Jersey legislature for the regulation of trusts and stock issues; the prevention of organizations in restraint of trade and of stock holding in other companies; requiring the approval of the State Public Utilities Commission to all mergers and prohibiting discrimination in prices, ex-

The following article reprinted from The Newark, N. J. Evening News, explains what these bills are and their spirit—that of recreating America—the Land of Opportunity -opportunity to all, not the favored few.

Seven little bills are pending at Trenton. Facetiously they are termed the "Seven Sisters." Beriously they represent the first concrete expression of a reborn America.

There was a time when America was the "Land of Opportunity." It was a country of hopefulness, a place where a man could be his own master politically and in business. It was not a land of stratified and hopeless classes. Rather was it the land in which the young man of the rising generation could say with confidence that his future was his own and that he could be what he chose to make himself. It was this which made America great.

Of recent years we have been slowly awakening to the fact that in our careless complacency of material wealth we have nearly lost our birthright. The "Land of Promise" the land of the promise denied. No longer could it be said that any man could enter into any field and become his own master therein. We have seen the time come when the beginner has had to ask permission. We have seen the time when the man of initiative who had not, had to make terms with the man who had, often at the cost

We have seen curious things in this "land of opportunity." We have seen a political creed born of a class-consciousness of hopelessness grow like a mushroom. We have heard preached strange doctrines whose father was discontent. We have felt an atmosphere of fear, of cynicism, a fibre-weakening sense of dependence upon something outside of ourselves in this demo-cratic nation of unparalleled weaith.

We have even heard the creed seriously put forward that the only thing we could hope to do was to stratify wealth where it is, submit it simply to governmental regulation, become a nation of employes—and take the first long step

And now come along seven short little bills with a message of hope. For the colossal purpose, the spirit which gave them life was simply to re-create America, the Land of Opportunity—opportunity to all, not to the favored few. The bills may fairly be called the new declaration of independence written by us for our children. They restate in terms of statute law that charter of freedom, the ancestry of which is as old as

Start to analyze the bills in that light, remembering that their purpose is to assure every man the maximum of opportunity to rise as high as he can by his own efforts and by ethical means—service to his fellow citizens—so long as he does not interfere with the right of another to do the same thing, and then the "Seven Sisters" are as simple as the A B C. They simply declare that the man who violates the Declaration of Independence goes to jail.

Straight back to that fundamental document Straight back to that fundamental document the bills go. They rest upon relentlessly direct logic which tumbles down a vast and cumbersome superstructure of sophistry. There has been an ancient theory, legalistic and illogical, that a corporation was a person. Hence it could do anything a person could do. With medieval theorism, it disregarded entirely the fact that a person has his limitations in time, ability, capacity for detail, scope of mind, life itself. That piece of sophistry goes to the junk heap. Bepiece of sophistry goes to the junk heap. Because a corporation has no natural limitations, it now is to get legal ones.

Out of this grew another piece of legal sophis try, that insomuch as a corporation was a person, it was the thing to punish. Presumably, therefore, it had a conscience, or if it didn't, could be sent to jail to develop one. It is not necessary to ask a lawyer to and out how that theory works in practice. Hereafter, guilt is to be personal, and the men responsible for a corporation's misdeeds are very likely to find themselves decorating a cell and taking a try at manual labor.

Business men have been asking in bewilder-ment what the law permitted and what it prohibited. If the answer is not ready to hand in their own conscience, they may now find it explicitly and definitely stated in the bills—and if they are still puzzled, a conscience in good working order is all that is necessary to inter-pret the law there proposed. You need not see

One thing more. In general, the bills are not retro-active. It is as if they said: "If you have done what was legally right in the past, these new laws do not undo you. But here is your code of conduct for the future. If you can live up to it in spirit and maintain your present position, we have nothing to say to you. We will consider that you are entitled to it by your efficiency and social service. But if you cannot stand up to the honest competition and the potential abilities of this nation that we have now tential abilities of this nation that we have now set free, then you are economically unsound and have got to take your medicine. This is a land where every man stands on his own legs."

First of all, the bills lay down the explicit prohibition that no persons, natural or artificial, shall form a trust—and a trust, in the terms of these New Jersey bills, is a combination or agreement, formal or informal, written or oral, open or secret, to do any one of the following things:

To place restrictions upon trade-notice par ticularly that it does not say "upon competi-tion"—the distinction is particularly important; to artificially limit production or raise prices; to create monopoly by making competition impossible—that is, to prevent anybody else from entering the field if he cares to buck up against your unaided efficiency; to divide up the mar-kets in which you will not compete with each

Furthermore, if you sell at one price in one section, you must sell at the same price in another section, conditions being equal. You may not use the time-honored gag of selling below cost in one section, and making it up in another, cost in one section, and making it up in another, simply to drive your competitors out of business. If you do any of these things you are very likely to go to jail whether you are merely an individual, or the director or manager of a corporation. These bills apply to everybody and define fair competition. If you choose to ask yourself the particular purpose for which you are doing anything that may be doubtful under these bills are will get an easy answer as to these bills you will get an easy answer as to what your reward is likely to be. If you are doing it to restrict trade—the freedom of the markets-look out.

There is one more general prohibition which in a sense bridges the gap between the artificial person and the real person. If real persons unite to form an artificial person—a corporation with the intent to create monopoly (restrict trade), the real persons lose their liberty.

Now we come to a group of bills which place upon the artificial person restrictions that give the real person some sort of a chance. The holding company has been recognized as the agency which makes monopoly possible. Hence no more holding companies can be created. No corporation used as a merger may hold stock of any other corporation, with certain definite, careful exceptions, which are made as explicit as possible. Notice that this applies to corpor-

In the first place there is no objection to one corporation's holding the stock of another when it is in the direct and proper line of its own business. "Cognate" is the word used. In other words, there is no objection to growth by accretion, provided only the accretion is properly engineered and in the same direct line of business, or essential thereto. But no more of this hitching together of all sorts of business under

Further exceptions are that this provision is not retro-active. As was stated, the existing concerns of this scrambled and top-heavy nature are to be left to justify themselves by their ability to meet honest competition—if they can—provided only they have not violated some already existing law in their creation. No more "rule of reason." If you restrict trade, personal obligations of debt honestly and legally incurred.

As to stock issue, the bills are painfully simple. You may issue stock for any real value, for the cost of any actual service rendered. You may not capitalize expected profits or monopoly

To remove all possible doubt of what sort of merger is allowed and what forbidden, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners is put in the position of applying inspection and regulation to the foundation of companies and mergers, altho it has nothing to do with their subsequent operation, except authorizing issues of securities as

There is no "busting-up." If something is to be broken up, it will be because of the operation of natural laws and fair competition.

Now there is a curious thing about these bills. There is the silence in which they have been received. Where is the howl of the partizan press -the shriek of outraged Wall street? Apparently the bottom has slipped out from under them. What leg have they got to stand on? Are they going to fight the Declaration of Independence? On what grounds? Well, then, is there any other reason? Have not these bills a familiar sound other than that born of their modern expression of the age-old Saxon freedom? Have we not heard something about such a law being sustained here and there, in state or in nation, over this broad land of

Certainly we have the sales price law fol-lows one recently confirmed by the United States Supreme Court, the others are largely bits of tested legislation. They are merely the conscious expression of an unconscious growth. They are not hasty legislation—neither are they Independence is theoretical. They are part and parcel of our America—the land we were taught to believe in. They are our own old freedom that we thought slipping from us. They are the tested life, practically, legally and historically of America.

Now there may be defects, there may be some clarity needed, there may be call for some additions. But the man who rises in opposition must take care to have a good case. The Declaration of Independence is in our ancestry, it is our creed of hopefulness. It is still a danger-ous thing for a man to deny it. Shall he deny it modern application, the code that gives it effec-

What alternative will he oppose to a creed for the freedom of individual enterprise—the free-dom of a man to rise as high as he can, by ethical means and social service, and lose no shred of his legitimate freedom unless he encroaches without moral right on the right of some other man to do the same thing?

Will he propose stratified wealth, solidity it where it is, and bar all access to it for those who where it is, and bar all access to it for those who are rising around us? Will he create here an industrial-financial feudalism and then attempt to "regulate" it in "beneficent, patronizing, patriarchal ways"? Whither do these trails lead? There is a creed of hopelessness, dead initiative and compulsory labor. Shall we embrace it?

There are but two paths. The backward door is shut. We must so shead by one way or the is shut. We must go ahead by one way or the other. Shall we create a bureaucracy of shack-eled initiative and await its fruit? Or shall we recreate the America that was in a modern

We have spoken thruout of these bills as if they were national in scope. Of course, they are not—as yet, whatever may come with the future. Their spirit is truly national; truly American; so much so that it is hard to believe that they are only the seizing by a state of its opportunities, and the recognition by a state of its obligations. They are utterly American, whether they ever go beyond the borders of New Jersey

When the Declaration of Political Independence was written New Jersey was the battle-ground. Is she to be the battleground again for the Declaration of Industrial Independence? We used to hear of the United States and New Jersey and sey. Are we to reverse that to New Jersey and the United States?

The opportunity is before us. Whatever technical or material defects may appear in the expression, the spirit of the bills is magnificently American—the America that we believe in and was founded for us. We have caught up the old flag, and are going on with it and all that it means.

The Central Neighborhood House has got the right idea. It is just a little house by the side of the road. who have a social conscience. The schools of the district are being brought into use, too. The management of he Neighborhood House obtained permission from the board of education to use the Elizabeth street school building during the evenings. In this, on certain nights of the week, upwards of three hundred foreigners are learning to speak and write the English language. Then, in addition, this school is to be used as a means of instructing the people of the ward as to what is citizenship. A number of weekly addresses will be delivered by men like Dr. McCullough, the provincial health officer, J. E. At-which the people of the ward are living. Into it the children of the neighborhood were invited to play and learn. The learning part of it was made entertaining. There are all kinds of classes for all kinds of children—sewing, cooking, and a neap of other useful things. The youngsters go forth and teach these to tacir elders, who have brought to Canada the ways of the strange lands from whence they came.

Just the other day the people interested in the Neighborhood House they came.

Just the other day the people interested in the Neighborhood House leased another house hard by. That is going to be made a social center also. The fine part about this method of doing social work lies in the fact that it is inexpensive. There is no big cost for operation. Most of the workers are in it for the fun of the thing. Among these are many stugreat majority of social workers of the city that the Social Service Commission would take steps to see to it that there would be some central agency appointed which would enable bodies like the Salvation Army social cancer just as there appears as the converte with others. This seems to co-operate with others. This seems to have been a wild dream, and the probability is that the army will have to "gang its ain gait," like all the other organizations, without hope of assistance from the city. I hear a rumor that the commission is to go abroad and take lessons from foreign cities. That means that it will be vears and years before we get any-

A lot of these people, too, seem to think that I am an enemy of the church. Those who know me personally, however, know better. They understand that it is only because I love the church and realize all that it has done for me that I have the courage, in a humble way, to point out its weaknesses. The trouble is that, in social and religious matters, we are occupied in throwing bouquets at con-valencents, taking the risk, too, that there will soon not be any more convalescents, because we are not probing enough-we are neglecting the work necessary to eradicate disease. Our preachers should be the church surgeons—health departments thing. Among these are many stu-dents from the university and other young men and women around town of the city. It was the hope of the

It is that most cruel of all things upon earth—the passion of greed and lust disguised under the fair face of ordinary society. So it is preposterous—it is silly—to continue to blame the mere hangers-on at the feast, the saloon-keepers, et al., while we continue to bow down and worship the real culprits who exploit the poor and leave the way open for the lesser culprits to feast on the condition they have produced.

Motor accidents on city streets have ful in dry weather, it is a poor make-erable conditions which automobilists must consider in calculating on safety. Here are a few of them:

Chief among the causes of danger due to the human factor is fatigue, either physical or mental, following prolonged strain or effort too great for immediate recuperative powers. There is always a definite limit to human endurance, which varies not only with different individuals, but with the same individuals, but with the same individual at various times. So the driver should watch himself carefully. He should, if he would drive safely, keep himself free from worry or preoccupation, and avoid prolonged exertion.

References have been made recently to the effect of temperament as leading to accidents in aviation, but there has been an absence of any attention in this respect to motoring. Yet it is an extremely important matter. People differ greatly, but every one is not equally cognizant of the limits such variations impose. It is taken as an axiom that American drivers are calm, cool, and collected in moments of stress, and because of the cultivation of these attributes there is a tendency to regard lightly the excitable nature of the French, the volubility of the British and Germans. We over-Personal Discomfort.

A contributory cause of accident is personal discomfort. It is difficult for any one to drive to advantage if he has insufficient elbow room, if his seat that there are many persons, ordinarily well balanced, who are readily arrived to advantage of the standard of the Strike and Germans. Newspaper Service Sells Many Cars

"That the automobile business has ecome a giant among the American industries in the short space of ten years or less, must in large part be a ascribed to the truly remarkable use it has made of advertising," states Harry E. Does the Public Want Opera?

Apparently It Does, For We Have Had a Great Deal of It and More Will Follow-Review of Past Week In Theatres-Strauss' Music Charms

Grand Opera In English

The increasing popularity of opera is evidenced by the fact that three opera troupes have visited Toronto so far this season and two inore are on the way. First we had the Aborn Company in grand opera; then another Aborn company in light opera; next the Sheehan Company, here last week; to be followed by the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals this week and the Montreal Company right after that. Toronto has never had so much opera within an equal period. A similar condition prevails at other major points on the theatrical circuit. Seemingly there never was so much opera, its prevalence must mean that the public wants it.

There is sound evidence that the public wants it.

There is sound evidence that the public does want opera; that is, if it is good. But some of the producers seem to believe that the public wants opera anyhow; good, bad or indifferent, in spite of the immense difficuities entailed in its proper presentation, the expensive mountings, and necessarily high standard of efficiency in every department of the or-opera anyhow; good, bad or indifferent. In spite of the immense difficulties entailed in its proper presentation, the expensive singers, expensive orchestra, expensive inountings, and necessarily high standard of efficiency in every department of the organization, angels rush in where even fools fear to tread and back the pretentions of some fallen strr who is still ambitious, the passe, presenting operatic performances that show less care and expense than would be accorded to an ordinary musical comedy, and trusting to the resplender; prestige of "grand opera" to blind the public to a multitude of sins. Such illiadvised attempts soon bring about their own quietus, but in the meantime a considerable portion of the public has been cheated by a spurious article, scepticism has been engendered, and the legitimate operatic profession suffers in consequence. Whether the popularity of opera has been promoted by the quality of the performances offered in Toxonio this season is a question. In one or two cases the effect has probably been detrimental. It is to be hoped that such an excellent organization as the Montreal Company will not suffer for the sins excellent organization as the Montreal Company will not suffer for the sins of its forerunners.

The best feature of the Sheehan Company's performances at the Princess last week was the employment of English in the text. 'This is by no means a novelty nor any special cred-

Strauss Revived

Somebody had a clever idea. He took an old opera by Strauss-not Oscar Strauss of "Chocolate Soldier" fame nor yet the mighty Richard of "Salome," but Johann Strauss, "the waltz king"-rechristened it, rejuvenated it, and added several songs and dances set to some of the most popular Strauss melodies, such as "The Blue Danube." "Wine, Women and Song." etc., the whole resulting in a sort of review or epitome of Strauss' charm-ing talent as a dance composer. Known as "The Merry Countess," it appeared at the Royal Alexandra during last

Who it was that had this clever idea the program did not state, but it should have done so, for considerable credit is due him for the inspiration. The cleverness of it shines forth in several ways; first, it was an excel-lent scheme for acquiring a music score with little effort and probably with little expense; second, it was good music, way above the musical comedy average, undoubtedly better than any that the present-day sons and dance tinkers could have supplied even under the impetus of prospective royalties; and third, it was music with ready-made popularity.

many people the merriest, joyfulest moments of their lives. Consequently it is easy to understand that a light opera offering a bouquet of Strauss opera offering a bouquet of Strauss melodies done up with de luxe trimmings would make an exceptionally strong appeal. They have been out of vogue just long enough to make a revival seem grateful. They are not so inveigiling, perhaps, as the glides, trots and rags of the present day, but they possess a pure-hearted jeyousness and spiritual sobriety that puts to blush the rowdy tendencies of the later types. Their revival ought to have a wholesome influence.

As regards plot, actors, mountings, and other incidentals, "The Merry Countess" was about the usual thing. Musical comedies are musical comedies, and there is no use judging them by any other standard. There was something more of plot than usual, and some effort to put wit in the kines. Several risque innuendoes and situations gave comfort to those who went expecting to see "the com-panion show to "The Passing Show of 1912," as advertised, but otherwise they must have found little resemance. There was some novelty in provided principally by the bored young prince and the grotesque prison warder whose fairly original characwarder whose lairly original characterizations brought forth a great deal of laughter. The prima donna was pleasant to look upon and could sing. But taking it all together the success of the piece was due to Strauss. His melodies floated a show that otherwise would have floundered. Their vitality seems to be as enduring as the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. In listening to them people renew their

Boston Symphony in Notable Program

With Otto Urack at the Baton America's Famous Orchestra Gives Inspiring Performance.

One of the most important concerts f the season was that given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Massev Hall last Wednesday evening when, owing to the illness of Dr. Muck, Otto Urack, assistant conductor and first 'cellist, took the baton, and Anton Witek, concertmeister, was the soloist. The Beethoven Symphony in C. Minor, No. 5, was the first offering, and the masterly, well-balanced and dignified performance the work re-ceived served to, at once, establish a nost favorable impression of the roung conductor, who led his forces thru the closely-woven threads of the rich melodic fabric with a distinction, clearness of phrasing and perspicuity of thematic material that gave the often-heard symphony new color and light, and placed its reading far be-yond the ordinary. The second num-ber, "Till Eulenspiegel," considered by many the greatest work that has come out of Germany since the days of Wagner, was the novelty of the program. In it Strauss has surpassed Mephisto himself. It simply bubbles over with merry wit, satire, bewitchery, terse sarcasm, wanton humor and Satanic recovery. roguery. Its interpretation under Mr. Urack gave a minute and easily recogroguery. Its interpretation under Mr. Urack gave a minute and easily recognizable revelation of all the pranks attributed to the worthy Till, who, as the story goes, was a wandering mechanic of the fifteenth century, who went about playing practical jokes on everyone he met, always coming out ahead. He was finally doomed to the gallows, but escaped, and played his last joke by dying peacefully in bed. Strauss, however, kills him on the gallows. The piece abounds in surprises and its emotional contents and sudden climaxes were given out and built up with tremendous power, verve and energy. In the Mendelssohn Concerto for violin, Anton Witch, as soloist, proved himself to be a master of the technic of his instrument and played with an artistic sense and poise that well deserved the generous applause he received. The "Die Meistersinger" prelude, with its pedantic polyphony, pompous march, fanfare and sonorous affirmation, was given a superbly broad and brilliant delivery and brought to a close a program that in every way upheld the exalted position the Boston Symphony Orchestra occupies among the great ensemble organizations of the world. Mr. Urack was recalled many times, and graciously shared the honors bestowed upon him, with the members of the orchestra.

What we have now to do is to ascertain the conditions essential to success—and among these the standard of the settler's character is, perhaps, the most important—and to discover the proportion of reservists and discharged soldiers for whom the other necessary conditions exist or can be provided. For, besides individual character, there are certain other conditions which I believe to be indispensable. As a rule the soldier-settler will be what is somewhat vaguely known as a small holder. Everyone knows that small holders are not always successful, even when they possess the as a small holder. Everyone knows that small holders are not always successful, even when they possess the necessary character, energy, and determination. There are circumstances, not always regarded when small holdings are created, of locality, soil, and climate, which may often make success economically impossible; such circumstances must be avoided. Then there is a point which I believe to be of the first importance, tho I have not always succeeded in making it clear when explaining my economic faith. It is that, as a rule the settler must have heard critics declare that the fects of this habit may sometimes be served in the working of organizans controlled chiefly by military en, it is my daily petition to Province that no disposition to "mark ne" may display itself in the counts of the Soldiers' fland Settlement sociation. Sixteen Members of British Parliament Who Favor Imposition of Tax on Food.

At last we have got what purports to be an authentic list of the real, stalwart whole-hoggers-the men who are food-taxers (referendum or no referendum.) The list is furnished by The Daily Graphic, after a "doubtful four" have been ruled out: Mr. A. Mr. J. W. Born in London in 1858 of most humble parents, he started life with little hope of becoming anything but a numble citizen. His mother was a hard working washerwoman and as a boy it was John's duty to carry home the washing when finished. In 1885 he started on his political career and ran as a Socialist candidate for West Nottingham, but was far from successful, he having failed to receive more than 600 votes.

and has represented that constituency ever since.

In politics he is a free trader, home ruler, and is a strong enemy of the race course and all gambling concerns. As a life abstainer he is always on the side of the temperance party.

In private life he is a sportsman, having in his younger days been a rugby football player, cricketer, sculler, and a boxer of no small merit, and when the weather permitted he was a conspicuous figure skating around the lake in Battersea Park. Now at the age of 55 he is still a great admirer of his old pastimes and can be seen, whenever opportunity admits, as an interested spectator at Twickenham (the Rugby Football Association's ground) or the Kennington Oval. Miner Wins Prize in Hungarian Lottery

Staffordshire Man Reported to Have Won a Huge Fortune.

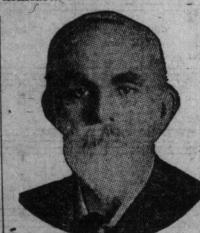

Thru the lucky purchase of a ticket n a Hungarian State lottery, a Staffordshire, England, miner is reported to have won a fortune of 46,000 pounds Albert Billingham, Ashtree-road Old Hill, left the district about three years ago to take up the position of assistant foreman in the Namdang mine, Margherita, Upper Assam, and while there he was persuaded to enter a government lottery under the auspices of the Benko Bank, Budapest. At the time he hardly understood the regulations, and the he took the ticket regulations and the he took the ticket he thought no more about the lottery. The draw was fixed for October 23, and three days before Mr. Billingham left India for home he received a letter from the promoters of the lottery giving a list of the prize-winners, from which he found that his number, 103,- Billingham, who is about 40 years of age, before leaving for India was employed as a miner at No. 30 Colliery, Cradley Heath.

During recent general elections Battersea was looked upon as the most important contest and in 1910 Burns was opposed by a Unionist and a Socialist, but in spite of this he won the fight by a majority of 1294, which was the second largest he had ever had. As a proof of his popularity in Battersea and in fact London generally, over a hundred thousand people congregated outside the Battersea Town Hall to cheer him in the event of victory.

Previous Installments.

Senjamin Staff, an American playwitch, while writing a play in London, is fuddenly seized with a desire to go home. While booking his passage to New York he makes the acquaintance of Mr. William Howard Iff, a diminutive person of rather mysterious manner, who is bargwining for the same cabin accommodation as himself, and they agree to travel together. As they are leaving the booking office, a motor-cab, with an unusually large and ornate bandbox on its roof approaches; but the occupant of the cab, a very beautiful young woman, on perceiving the two nen immediately orders the driver to move on. Iff, who has observed this peculiar happening, awaits the return of the cab, while Staff, who has noticed nothing unusual, returns to his apartments. Later, while preparing for the journey a targe, and brightly-colored bandbox is delivered to him, much to his surprise and disgust. On learning from the millinery establishment that the bandbox has been sent to him by a young lady who promises to communicate with him later, he decides to take it with him. On board ship he tries to take possession of another bandbox exactly like his own but which he discovers belongs to Miss Eleanor Searle, a fellow passenger. He finds Mr. Iff aiready occupying their cabin and full of curiosity about the box, which Staff turns over to the steward for the balance of the trip. Staff becomes better acquainted with Miss Searle and learns that she knows the sender of the balance of the trip. Staff becomes better acquainted with Miss Searle and learns that she knows the sender of the bandbox but will not spoil the 'joke' by telling. His bewilderment is increased by the coming aboard at Roche's Point of his fiancee Miss Alison Landis, a beautiful actress, for whom he is writing a play, and who is supposed to be in America. The little Jackals danced on ahead, and the Lion stalked behind. They led him to a place where there was a round, deep well of clear water. They went round on one side of it, and the Lion stalked up to the other.

"He lives down there, Father Lion!" said the little Jackal. "He lives down there!"

The Lion came close and looked down into the water—and a lion's face looked back at him out of the water. When he saw that, the Lion roared and shock his mane and showed his teeth. And the lion in the water shook his mane and showed his teeth. And the lion in the water shook his mane and showed his teeth. THE MAGNITUDE OF THEMES

When May a Book Be Called a Big Book.

By Frederic Taber Cooper.

Quite recently a western literary review, in the course of a survey of current fiction, singled out two volumes, Mr. Dreiser's "Financier," and Mr. Edwards" "A Man's World," as entitled to the high tribute of being "unquestionably the biggest novels of the year." Now, there is no question that both these books are serious pleces of fiction, and indicate a commendable trend in the direction of earnest, forceful studies of modern social and economic conditions. But there is a certain recklessness about this sort of sweeping assertion of the supremacy of any particular book over all others of a given month, or year, or decade, that calls for a protest. Every one is entitled to an honest opinion or preference; you, for instance, may find more beauty in the Salisbury Cathedral, or the Sistine Madonna, or the Divine Comedy, than Madonna, or the Divine Comedy. protest. Every one is entitled to an a honest opinion or preference; you, for instance, may find more beauty in the Salisbury Cathedral, or the Sistine Madonna, or the Divine Comedy, than in any other building or painting or poem in the world; but your preference does not establish their supremacy; it simply sheds an interesting sidelight of genius in Milton's Satan is that his vengefulness is so distinctly human. Physical and mental frailties may be the underlying fabric of big fiction; but not when they become deformities. The moment a character in fiction becomes so abnormal that the reader finds it impossible to say, Under other circumstances, that might have been I, the author has handicapped himself, belittled his opportunities. The proper study of mankind is not only man, but normal, average man, with whom he can sympathize, whose hopes and sorrows we can share; even the dieverest nature fakir in the world cannot deeply interest us in the ponderous gallantries of a pterodactyl, or the volatile fiirtations of a luna moth.—N. Y. Bookman. does not establish their supremacy; it simply sheds an interesting sidelight on your literary and artistic standards. The question of relative bigness in any branch of creative art, including the modern novel, is one to be answered with a becoming modesty, with abundant allowance for the personal equation, and above all, with a careful and thoro definition of the terms employed. For instance, the careless comment above quoted, as to the "biggest book of the year," is meaningless until we know in what sense the writer used the word "big." Was he measuring the book by an artistic, philosophical or ethical standard? Or simply as a human document, big because of its literal truth? Or was it, to his thinking, that still rarer achievement, that could be weighed in the balance of all these different tests and still not be found wanting? And, after all, even with this question answered, we are scarcely further advanced; for who is to judge, in ethics, philosophy or art, as between two themes, the one, let us say, dealing with a man's integrity in say, dealing with a man's integrity in business, and the other with a woman's fidelity in marriage, which of the two is inherently the bigger theme? Analyzed to the last degree, it amounts to a request to judge between the re-lative sanctity of two separate com-

Big Theme for Big Novel. Now, there is no intention in the above comments to deny that novels do differ from one another in magnitude, nor that there are some who inherent bigness is incontestable, and others which cannot be mistaken for merchandise. But if we are not satisfied with trusting to our instinct, and want to probe a little deeper into the why and wherefore of relative magniudes, the first step is to realize that, give even the best poetry by the sysin order to be big, a novel must have tematic group of Canadian poets (Roba big theme a big treatment, or speci-fic story; and lastly the art, the crafts-erts. But while there are many different reasons why certain books fail in bigness, it may be said with some cannot reasons who cannot reasons reaso ature as are Gray, Keats, Wordsworth, Tennyson and Swinburne. Indeed, as a musician in words Bliss Carman can stand with sublimated head in than its underlying theme; it may be, and often is, infinitely smaller—but the central idea behind the specific company of Gray, Tennyson and Swin-burne; and as colorists and etchers in words, Carman and Lampman, at their best, stand in the same line as Gray, atble intellectual height as a man's stature is of his physical height. I hope or the other of the few big, basic human problems, or relations or emotions; love and hate, friendship and motherhood, liberty and death, faith, hope and charity. And it takes a hold hope and charity. And it takes a bold critic to decide which of these themes is of greater and which of lesser magnitude. In fact, the various possible basic themes for fiction start pretty nearly on an equality, their relative importance varying thru the centuries. In accordance with shifting faiths and philosophies. It is the specific human story which immediately begins to limit and minimize the basic thought Love is as broad as the universe; but in a human love story, even the it be the greatest love story in the and its heroine the ideally perfect woman, Helen of Troy her-self, love is perforce stripped of more than one of its divine attributes.

Suppose that in the capacity of a scientist, you undertake to study a flower. You pick it to pieces, count its petals, its stamens and pistils, trace it by the table of identification to its exact place in the flora of the world — how much real feeling is stirred up within your soul? But, if you go into the garden and feast your eyes on the symmetry and beautiful coloring of the rose, and apprehend sensitively its sweetness, you are stirred from your cold, calculating, business-like attitude of mind—for the nunce, you are a poet.

Now, when the poet presents to you imaginatively the picture of a beautiful rose, he desires to make you feel again the emotions of those moments in the garden. Perhaps he, because better able to express such feelings than you are, will enable you to realize more fully what your feeling really was. He may make you better able to interpret your own experiences. So, when you read his poem, don't approach it with the stand-off attitude of viewing a performance at a circus, but try to realize that what the poet has experienced and felt, is something which you, too, either have experienced or may experience, that the accompanying emotion is just as much a possession of yours as of the poet's.

If you read Roberts' "Ode to the Canadian Confederacy" with the preconceived idea that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that reading, I do not know how you can fail to be filled with a courageous and hopeful patriotism when you are done. Read Lampman's "Winter Uplands" with a spirit of receptiveness and you cannot fail to ceptiveness and you cannot fail to feel the sublime loneliness of the scene. Little Talks on Poetry WHY READ CARLYLE?

The Apostle of Work.

There is a pretty firmly established theory in the mind of mankind at large that labor is a curse which has descended to us as the result of the sins of our first parents. In consequence of this most illogical and irrevergent ent theology, we are (the majority of us) forever endeavoring to secure happiness by escaping work. Carlyle's message to his age—a message which is needed even more by us of the present day is a powerful antidote to the deadening and discouraging mental attitude forced apon us by this

Read in Carlyle's "Past and Present" his inspiring chapter on "Labor" and, if it does not arouse you to a sense of the dignity of work and the responsibility upon you as a laborer—no matter what your calling—then,

God pity you! You were better off the earth. "For there is a perennial nobleness, and even sacredness, in work."
Were he never so benighted, forgetful of his high calling, there is always hope for the man that actually and earnestly works," says the dour Scottish philosopher; and he lived his own gospel. Mark Twain once wrote, "To be good is noble, but to show others how to be good is nobler—and far easier," but Carlyle not only sounded the trumpet call to work, he worked himself; his whole life was an earnest example of his own teachings.

"Man perfects himself by working," argues Carlyle, and you have only to look out upon Nature and see the mighty trees made tall and strong by buffetting the wind and storm and cold, to realize that he is simply stating a natural law which applies to man as a product of Nature.

The essay on happiness, contained in the book already mentioned is commended to those who know the delight of work, as well as to those who do not. "The only happiness a brave man troubled himself with asking much about was, happiness enough to get his work done. Not 'I can't eat!' but 'I can't work!' that was the burden of all wise complaining among men." For there is a perennial nobleness, and even sacredness, in work but 'I can't work!' that was the burden of all wise complaining among men. Young man, young woman, would you understand the correct relation between work and happiness, read Carlyle on these topics. Older man and older woman, would you remain young and retain the enthusiasm of youth, read Carlyle.

In "Sartor Resartus," if you are not to be scared by a little "hard" reading, if you are willing to do some delving in order to obtain the precious ore of thought, you will be carried along thru the valley of doubt to the mountains of faith.

Carlyle's "French Revolution" is another notable work, but not to be undertaken hurriedly. Preface your reading of it by the perusal of some shorter and more general outline of this revolution, and then read Carlyle slowly for the minutely detailed pictures and the flesh and blood characterizations of the chief participants in this great social upheaval.

But by all means read Carlyle.

Poetry in Teaching English Literature.

In a recont number of the Vancourse has particular topic, the figure of old Bylick and Relegant the Control of th turns out a Pauline Johnson or an Oronnyateka. They and many of their great forebears were gifted with fine imagination and talent for expression far beyond the average white person. It is a sad commentary upon the white race of this continent that a race of people with the latent possibilities of the Indians should now be reckoned as one doomed to pass away in a few years. Had the whites given the Indians a square deal and studied their temperaments and given them opportunities to develop along natural and logical lines it is safe to say the Indian would now be self-supporting —as he is in British Columbia—self-respecting, and a very important factor in the development of the land that was taken from him by the usurping white races.

What Shylock brings out for me very clearly is the fact that outward circumstances affect strongly our invard emotions, altho I do not wish you to infer that we cannot give cause to infer that we cannot give cause very often for the particular emotion engendered. There is, in fact, almost always some definite relation between the emotions resulting and the circumstances or conditions presented by the poet. It is part of the poet's art to know how to produce the required effects with his material.

What emotions may the poet arouse? Well, Tennyson speaks of us as myriad-minded, and the shades and clessifications of our feelings are certainly complex and not growing any less complex with the progress of the ages. We may, however, suggest a few illustrations. If you read Roberts' "Ode to the Canadian Confederacy" with the preconceived idea that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that reading, I do not know how your reading, I do not know how your cannot call the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU FEEL something as the result of that the poet's object was to make YOU was always. The development of Miss Pauline Johnson's girl-heod days, I recall a pretty story related to into long ago about a boarding school experience of hers. That charming news-spaper writer. "Lady Gay," and Miss Johnson were school fellows in the same girls' college. With the snobbishness of the girls' college. With the snobbishness of the same for the college were inclined to look down upon Miss Johnson because of the college were i

Nobel Winner's Novel

The fact that Gerhardt Hauptmann was awarded the most recent Nobel prize for literature has naturally ensured a big reception for his latest novel, "Atlantis." The English translation has just been published by Huebsch, and has created a sensation, but not exactly the sensa-tion the author would have liked; for readers, instead of going into raptures over his analysis of the rather depressing hero of the book, have been actively com-paring the thrilling description of the shipwreck scene in the mid-Atlantic with the terrible story of the Titanic tragedy of almost a year ago. Hauptmann has announced, however, that his novel was completed before the ill-fated White Star liner started on her first and last voyage so that the best to the force a triage, so that the book is therefore a tri-bute to his wonderful ability to conjur-up and imagine the sequence of over-whelming events.

On one occasion I had in my employ (says Mr. Stewart in "Down the Mackenzie and Up the Yukon") one of those Scottish half breeds whose a reiteration of the word "whatever" became wearisome, and I asked him my he employed it so frequently. To which he replied, "We use the word because we could not express ourselves without it whatever." Then, is ther piqued at my criticism, he asked, "Is it not a correct word, whatever?" I said that it was correct in certain cases, but unnecessary in mice out of the ten where he had used it. To this he replied that if it was a correct word, he could see no objection to using it "WHATEVER." This ended the conversation for some time.

CHERISHED SOUVENIRS.

A gentleman traveling in Ireland, stopped for a drink of milk at a white cottage with a thatched roof, and, as he sipped his refreshment, he noted, on a centre table under a glass dome, a brick with a faded red rose upon the top of it.

"Why do you cherish in this way," the traveler said to his host, 'that common brick and that dead rose?"

"Shure, str," was the reply, "there's certain memories attachin' to them. Do ye see this big dent in my head? Well, it was made by that brick."

"But the rose?" said the traveler.

His host smiled quietly.

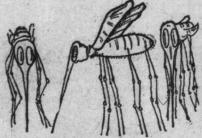

"The rose," he explained, "is off the grave of the man that threw the brick."

The Beethoven Quartet, Op. 18, was the opening num ber and was superbly played. The individual players are among our best concert artists, and in their ensemble work they play with a finish and accuracy that is de-TENOR AND TEACHER OF SIN with a finish and accuracy that is delightful to listen to. The Grieg movement from "Unvollendetes Quartet," and the Ranchenecker Andante, from the C Minor quartet, were given with splendid tonal color and vitality, the varying moods being given out with a beauty that was truly revishing. The Dvorak, Op 96, was especially well played and made a brilliant finish to the recital which in every way was the most artistic and wholly enjoyable yet given by this quartet. The auditorium was filled to its capacity and on all sides one heard expressions of the keenest delight from those who find special pleasure in listening to chamber music programs.

Toronto Symphony And Eugen Ysaye

Immense Audience Pays Homage to World's Greatest

Violinist. Enthusiasm ran high at Massey Hall last Thursday evening when Eugene Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist, appeared in collaboration with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Not a vacant seat was visible anywhere. The audience expected great things. They went away satisfied to a degree of satisty. The orchestra was on its mettle. The players felt that a glant was in their midst and they caught the communicating flame of his glorious and ennobling temperament. The vorspiel to "Die Meistersinger," with its festive pomp and stirring action opened the program. With rhythm, short-cut, firm and strident, with exuberant humor, wealth of harmony, lyrical warmth and passion an ever-increasing undercurrent of frenzy, Mr. Welsman gave really an imposing reading of the great Wagner overtures. Other purely orchestral numbers were the dainty minuet, "Will-'o-the-Wisps," the language Berloiz puts into the mouth of Mephistopheles when he invokes the "spirits of flickering flame"; and the symphonic poem, "Vitava," by Smetana, the Bohemian composer, in which he gives in musical expression, a description of the various scenes of nature along the banks of the River Moldau, they caught the communicating flame gives in musical expression, a description of the various scenes of nature along the banks of the River Moldau, the progress of a hunt, a country wedding and the frolics of nymphs of forest and stream. In music of this character the orchestra is at its best, which is no doubt accounted for by the excellent quality of the string sections, and in these pieces they were shown to particularly fine advantage.

The first appearance of Yasaye was the signal of fremendous applause. Time has dealt kindly with the great Beigian. There is little change during the eight years which have elapsed since he played here before. He possesses all the old-time vigor and temperament; he has the same old imposing and dominating personality, the chose for his first number the Viotit Concerto in A Major. WEEKLY COLUMN OF MUSIC GOSSIP

There is considerable stir and bustle just now at the Columbian Conservatory of Music. The new building is completed; opera classes, orchestra and other ensembles are rehearsing in the recital hall; studios to accommodate the entire staff are in readiness, and teachers who have heretofore been compelled to do their work outside the conservatory are now moving in. The number of pupils is increasing daily and the teachers are all very busy. The principals of the different departments are: Mr. Walther Kirschbaum, plano; Mr. Luigi von Kunits, violin; Senor Otto Morando, vocal, The opera classes are in charge of Mr. Stanley Adams, and the orchestra under the conductorship of Mr. Alfred Bruce.

Young Härringford, or the "Goodwood Plunger," as he was perhaps better known at that time, had come to Monte Carlo in a very different spirit and in a very different state of mind from any in which he had every visited the place before. He had come there for the same reason that a wounded lion, or a poisoned rat, for that matter, crawis away into a corget, that it may be alone when it dies. He stood leaning against one of the pillars of the Casino with his back to the moonlight, and with his eyes blinking painfully at the flaming lamps above the green tables inside. He knew they would be put out very soon; and as he had something to do then, he regarded them fixedly with painful earnestness, as a man who is condemned to die at sunrise watches thru his barred windows for the first gray light of the morning.

That queer, numb feelling in his head and the sharp line of pain between his eyebrows which had been growing worse for the last three weeks, was trubing him more terribly than ever before, and his nerves had thrown of all contrel and rioted at the base of his head and at his wrists, and jerked and twitched as tho, so it seemed to him, they were striving to pull the tired body into pieces and to set them selves free. He was wondering when he climbed up and whispered, when h this phenomenon had actually taken place.

The pity of the whole situation was, that the boy was only a boy with all his man's miserable knowledge of the world on the reason of the large was a calcability and the reason of the large was a calcability and the reason of the large was a calcability and a large was a lar

"CAUGHT UP THE ROLLS AND DROPPED THEM INTO THE SKIRT OF THE WOMAN."

He reached towards the fresh piles of coin as if he meant to sweep them back again, but the Plunger put himself in his way and with a quick movement caught up the rolls of money and dropped them into the skirt of the woman, which she raised like an apron to receive her treasure.

"He is gambling." he said, "and osting the money, and you come to me to advise him what to play, I understand. Well, tell him he will lose what little he has left; tell him I advise him to go home; tell him ladvise him to go home; tell him ladvise him to go more, but he will not stop. Do you not see? He has won, oh, so many rolls of money, but he will not stop. Do you not see? He has won as much as we could earn in many months—in meny years, hard! And now he risks it again, and I cannot force him away. But I fly ou, sir, if you would tell him how great the chances are agains him, if you who know would tell him how great the chances are agains him, if you who know would tell him how great the chances are agains him, if you who know would tell him how great the chances are agains him, if you who know would tell him how great the chances are agains him, if you who know would tell him how great the chances are agains thim, if you who know would tell him how great the would listen. He essys to me, had you will see the swould listen. He essys to me, had you will see the swould listen. He says to me, had you will see the swould listen. He says to me, had you will see the swould listen to grant for holling. The so me, you know; I have no right to interfere."

He turned away, rubbing his hand across his forehead. He wished so much that this woman would leave him by him the sum of the tables. He was a handone had not to slave, and sew, and sew, and sew until my back and finers burn with the palm. Speak to him, sir, and now terribly alive and excited in the self-contained air of the place and in contrast with the silence of great word, you will see the sweet of the woman ran ahead, wift a murmur of gratitude, to the open door and point of the tables. He was a handone do not be self-contained air of the place and in contrast with the silence of the contraint of the woman is an extended to the place and in contrast with the silen

The collar is made of silk, damade, embossed velvets, stiff linens as prim as if molded in porcelain, and shear ones of fragile, fabrics are stretched over stiff forms.

This pattern would be handsome essilk waist. Heavy silks in white or scolor would be strikingly beautiful with the flowers done in silk, gold, silver or copper. The flowers would be very handsome in all silver upon gray, lavender or blue silk. If linen is chosen for waist and collar, select a good grade of white embroider with white linen floss, and shrink the goods, if a wash fabric, before making the collar. Make the jabet the thinnest tulle, net or lace.

To Transfer.

Put a cake of soap in a pint of het water, stir vigorously; remove soap. Saturate the design with the misture, then remove the excess moleture. Place the fabric to which the design is to be transferred on a hard, flat surface and lay the design face down on the material. Cover with a dry sheet of thick paper and with the bowl of a tablespoon rub hard till the design is transferred, being careful to rub from rather than toward you. Do not wet the material or rub the face of the design with damp fingers. To remove the design after the article is completed wash in warm water with soap.

The White Slave, showed themselves unable to rob the work of its quaintness at the American Theatre yesterday matinee. The departed author, in the keyday of his tremendous activity, nad his luminous eye upon the salient features of everything he set upon the stage. The reason for the survival of The White Slave is, therefore, not far to seek. The play's the thing with Bartley Campbell. Over thalf a century after the events recorded in 'The White Slave,' the hand of its constructor has not lost its surety. He builded beautifully. His characters stand out, his action is self-revealing. His picture of the times is as perfect today as it was—looked at thru the medium of the stage—four years before the war.
