Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me the most perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my hair is now well covered with a new growth of hair.—Johnson B. Chapel, Peabody, Mass.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. My hair was thin, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary S. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, youth and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used one of the scalp essences my hair became thin and faded, and fell out in large quantities. Nothing I tried seemed to do any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. H. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

AN UNFORESEEN RESULT.

The 10.30 train for—was nearly full of passengers, and in about three minutes more would be steaming from the station, when two young women entered, seeking seats.

One was a very sweet-looking girl, not beautiful, yet far from homely; the other, whom she resembled enough to proclaim them sisters, possessed a charming face, perfect features, liquid blue eyes, and waving golden hair.

Both were under twenty-three.

"There, Mabel," said the plain-looking one, "I see just two seats, one in front of the other, so we can talk when we like."

"Yes; and just one who occupies each. One a horrid old countryman, and the other a negro." "No I won't sit by him, Elsie—he is too shabby," she continued as her sister offered to sit by the negro, leaving the other seat vacant. "No! shall you sit there, either. See here, man," she continued, addressing the colored person, "suppose you sit by this farmer, and allow two ladies to sit together."

"Of course," said the individual addressed. "If mass is willing, I is."

"Change seats certainly, Cessar. I am glad there is room for you here," returned the so-called countryman.

"I thank you very much, and am sorry to have disturbed you," said Elsie.

"Mabel, how could you speak so to strangers?" she said in a low tone to her sister as the train moved on. "I felt sorry for them both, for they heard all you said."

"I don't care if they did. Who were they pray?"

"Do speak lower. He is not blind, neither is he rough. He has the finest, most expressive eyes I ever saw, and, though not fashionably dressed, I know he is a true gentleman," replied Elsie softly.

"How do you know that, pray? Where you see a gentleman I cannot think."

"In the kind manner in which he spoke to the negro. He has a feeling heart, and a low sweet voice."

"Since you admire him so much I will draw you his picture," returned Mabel.

"First, a great thick-skulled, boorish clown's head is to be drawn; long dangling black hair, moustache, and mopy thick beard."

"Oh, please stop, sister; he does hear; see also, I fear."

"I am glad if it! Perhaps I will give him the picture when I finish it. Collar turned down, dog-eared style; coat all rusty, and out of date years ago; hat—oh Elsie, did you see that great, broad-brimmed straw hat—protector reposing on his knee! See, I have it here exactly. I am sorry that I cannot see his feet, but I presume they are as long as the moral law, and cased in cow-hide boots, so I will put them in as a finish."

While thus the unyielding beauty chatted and amused herself at the expense of another, the train had been speeding onward at a very rapid rate.

But suddenly a strange jar thrilled every passenger; then thump—thump, a fearful crash, with shrieks and groans, flying splinters, and broken glass, proclaimed an accident to the ill-fated train.

A broken rail had thrown it from the track down a steep embankment, and now crushed helpless sufferers took the place of the smiling heedless travelers that a few moments before filled the seats.

Fortunately the person Mabel had styled "a boorish clown" and the negro escaped unhurt, whilst the sisters were both firmly wedged by heavy timbers to their places, and were also wounded.

"Oh, help me—quick!" screamed Mabel, as she saw the two men stand up, unharmed. "I am fast and hurt, and will be burnt up, if I smell smoke. Save me, save me—do, kind sir!"

"I will try to aid you both," returned the stranger. "Here, Cessar, help me." Both tried then to draw away the girls from their dreadful position, after having dashed out the window that they might escape therefrom.

Temperance.

IS ALCOHOL MEDICINE?

Dr. B. W. Richardson, of England, the foremost physiologist of the age, has become an abstergent from alcoholic drinks. The following is his account of his conversion to total abstinence, in a speech at Exeter Hall, London—

"I had once no thought of alcohol except as food. I thought it warmed me. I thought it gave me strength. I thought it enabled me to endure mental and bodily fatigue. I thought it cheered the heart, and lifted up the mind into greater activity. But it so happened that I was asked to study the action of alcohol along with a whole series of chemical bodies, and to investigate their bearing in relation to each other. And so I took alcohol from my shelf in the laboratory, as I might any other drug or chemical, and I asked it in the course of experience extended over a lengthened period, 'What do you do?' I asked it, 'Do you warm the animal body when you are taken into it?' The reply came invariably, 'I do not except in a mere flush of surface-activity.' Then I turned around to it in another direction and I asked it, 'Do you give muscular strength?' It testifies to the most rigid analysis and experiment I can adopt, and its reply is, 'I give no muscular strength.' I turn to its effect on the organs of the body, and find that while it expedites the heart's action, it retards tonicity; and, in the nervous system, I find the same reply; that is to say, 'I find the nervous system more quickly worn out under the influence of this agent than if none were taken at all. I ask it, 'Can you build up any of the tissues of the body?' The answer is again in the negative. 'I build nothing. If I do anything, I add fatty matter to the body, but that is a destructive agency, piercing the tissues, destroying their powers and making them less active for their work.' Next I turn around to the facts of experience. I think, 'Well, as I have come to the above conclusion, I will experiment on myself. I do so. I gave up that which I thought warmed and helped, and I declare, after considering the whole period in which I have subjected myself to this ordeal, I never felt more vigorous than I do now. I never did more varied work; I never did more varied work with so much facility; I never did work with such complete sense of freedom from anxiety and worry as I have done during the period that I have abstained altogether. Let this fallacy then, as to the necessity of moderate drinking, be removed.—Med. Temperance Journal.

THE PUBLICAN'S ROAST GOOSE.

"Did you ever hear how it was that Edwards, the assen, gave up drinking?" "No," was the answer. "How was it?" "Well, one day Edwards was drinking in a public-house, when the landlord's wife came in to call her husband to dinner. 'What for dinner?' said he. 'Roast goose,' answered the wife. 'Is there apple sauce?' he asked. 'No,' said the woman. 'Well, go and make some,' growled the husband. 'I won't eat roast goose without apple-sauce.' Edwards overheard all this, and said to himself, 'What a fool am I! This man who takes my wages every day can't eat his goose without apple-sauce, while my poor wife and children hardly have bread and water. He shan't dine off roast goose again at my expense. So he paid his score and left for good. If his eyes had not been red he would have made this discovery before.'

IMPOSSIBLE TO REGULATE.

John Harding, Esq., G. C. T. of New Zealand, in a recent letter to the Auckland Leader, referring to a proposal to regulate the trade in intoxicants, says: "That is impossible as to regulate a southwestern hurricane or an earthquake. To regulate the trade England has passed some five hundred acts of Parliament during the last five hundred years, and without exception all have made things worse. We have now ample proof that nothing short of total prohibition will rid us of the curse."

A lady worker called at the meat market in her village and, with much misgiving, asked the proprietor for a dollar towards paying a temporary lecturer of note who was soon to speak for the W. C. T. U. His reply was as follows:—"There's your dollar. I've sold some meat in one day since this town went no license than I see in a week when we had saloons." The man didn't realize it but had made a most convincing speech to a most appreciative audience.—Chris. Mass. Nation.

Allowing twenty feet front to each saloon front in New York city, it would make an unbroken line of thirty-six and two-thirds miles of run shops, and besides these there are 311 stores where liquor is sold.

INGRATITUDE OF SAILORS.

To the Editor of the Globe:

Sir,—Every little while we see in the papers some long account of a crew's ill-treatment, and also a sympathetic letter from some soft-hearted person on shore respecting their reported ill-treatment; full of invective against the captain and mates interested, and others generally; and I always think it is a great pity that those parties did not have the handling of the very sailors whose part they take so warmly, and be shut up in a vessel for a voyage of twelve or eighteen months or more with them, and see if they would still retain their admiration and sympathy for the average sailor of the present day, especially those foreigners who generally comprise the majority of our crews, and with whom they all seem to be in love.

Now, in respect to the above heading, I wish to relate a few experiences of mine, which happened during our late voyage from Montreal to Buenos Ayres and back.

The late captain Byron Robbins was one of the most humane and kind-hearted shipmasters I ever sailed with or met, both to his crew and officers, as well as all others he came in contact with. He was a perfect gentleman and a thorough seaman as well.

On the passage home, in lat. 11° 28' S., lon. 36° 23' W., he died very suddenly (as you are aware) and over his death very keenly I assure you. Next morning whilst the 2nd mate, steward and myself were preparing the remains for burial in the hold, intending to bring them home in the ship, the crew, with the exception of Sam Eisenhart of Bridgewater, N. S., who manfully refused to join them, came aft in a body and demanded that the remains be thrown overboard, which I firmly refused, and told them quietly that the captain had died of no contagious disease, and if he had, that owing to the way we intended sailing the hold, there would be no danger whatever; but they were not satisfied even after I had explained to them our method; when I told them I would not agree that the point was determined to take the remains home whether they liked it or not, and ordered them forward which they very sulkily obeyed, sealing the body up in the case of this: The very men who were the ringleaders and spokesmen for the rest were two who had our late captain not under the influence of the cholera in Buenos Ayres Roads and no medical assistance at hand. They were both men who had died and been cremated like many others less fortunate.

I have no doubt that many sailors and others who read this will say that Captain Robbins only did his duty, which I admit, but how many would have neglected it, either through fear of that dreadful scourge or through indifference to the necessity, or perhaps sent their forward a dose of salts and loathed themselves no more about it? But that was not his style, more so than I have seen or ever felt in any man of his rank and position. I have no doubt that this kind happened on board of a Norwegian bark lying near us in the Boca, shortly before we left, where a sailor named over the day and night and doctored them as he did when they were down with the cholera in Buenos Ayres Roads and no medical assistance at hand. They were both men who had died and been cremated like many others less fortunate.

I will mention another instance of his kindness to his men, which I never saw done in any vessel I have been on, or ever heard of: It is this. On a very warm day he always had an awning spread over the men at the wheel, and wanted the men worked as hard as they could. By giving the whole affair a good look-over, I could mention his kind consideration for those about him; but I will not trespass on your valuable space further than to say that the names of Mr. George Dunlop, second mate, of North Sydney, C. B., and Mr. Joseph Hickson, Steward, of Bridgewater, took such a kindly interest in the welfare of the whole affair, and rendered valuable assistance at that trying time.

I did not intend publishing the above facts, but the fact has been thought of the affair, the more I felt convinced that it was my duty to do so, in justice to the deceased, as well as all shipmasters.

By giving the whole affair a good look-over at your earliest convenience, you will greatly oblige.

THE MONUMENT TO SCOTTISH SINGERS.

A concert was given in the music Hall, Edinburgh, under the auspices of the Burns Club, and in aid of the scheme for the erection of a monument to the memory of John Tamplin and David Kennedy, the Triumvirate of Scottish song. The principal performers were the Misses Kennedy, and the applause which greeted them was hearty and spontaneous. It was Miss Helen Kennedy's last appearance in Scotland prior to her departure to Halifax, N. S., where she is to reside. She is to be married to a son of the late Duncan Campbell, the Historian of Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island.—Quebec Chronicle.

On Monday 28th ult., two sons of Edward Armstrong of Digby, aged 17 and 14 ran away from home. Hearing that their father was searching for them they took to the woods. They secured food from two or three farm houses they passed. On Wednesday, the boys became lost, and after wandering around for some hours the younger one became exhausted and fell to the ground. The other brother was obliged to leave him to search for assistance. On Thursday evening, the older brother had wandered into within a short distance of Dalhousie Settlement. His cries for help were heard by John Devany's family. On going into the woods to investigate, the unfortunate lad was found in a deep brook, endeavoring to cross. He was clinging to a rock with only his head above water. When rescued, his hands and feet were much swollen. Searching parties were organized to look for the remaining brother. They searched the woods until Saturday afternoon last, when the poor fellow's remains were found where his brother had left his, he having died from fatigue and hunger. The elder lad says that when he left his brother he was crying piteously for his mother.

Leaky Shingle Roofs Made Tight.

New flat and steep Roofs made, and Shingle, Asphaltum, Gravel, Slate, Tin and all metal roofs well and permanently repaired, by using the well known

"SPARIAN Fire Proof Roofing Cement."

BACK WATER AND DREPT ON Shingle Roofs can be stopped and the shingles made to favor by cementing with our cement. It is cheap, durable, gives a fire proof surface, and fills up and stops all cracks and crevices. Parties purchasing can do their own roofing and repairing satisfactorily by following simple printed directions which we furnish. Estimates furnished, and contracts made by us will be executed so as to give satisfaction.

The Union Advocate, Established 1867. NEWCASTLE, MIRAMICHI, N. B. WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887. MEETING OF Liberal-Conservative CLUB, On Monday Night next. Important BUSINESS. J. FERGUSON, Secretary.

THE BUDGET SPEECH. The budget speech of Sir Charles Tupper this session of the Dominion Parliament is said to be undoubtedly the best budget delivered in many years. Its tone was courteous throughout, it avoided raising up the dead issues of the past...

A SMALL MATTER. The opposition in the House of Commons is said to be marked on a course of criticism in detail of the acts of the government, with the hope no doubt that as constantly dropping water will wear a hole in the hardest rock...

Fire at Chatham. About twelve o'clock on Thursday night fire broke out in the locomotive shed at the Chatham railway station, and rapidly spreading to other buildings destroyed three sheds and the blacksmith shop...

Blissfield and Blackville Notes. Blissfield, May 9.—The snow has almost melted, and the water is running in the fields, though four and five feet yet remain in the woods...
