Continuous Advertising

It is when a man or woman NEEDS something that an advertisement of that thing in a newspaper impresses him or her.

That is why continuous advertising is generally most profitable.

But the ADVERTISEMENT and the TIME and the READER'S EYE must come together.

If your advertisement is in THE ADVERTISER it will be seen, because every reader reads every page. It is as you know, a newspaper MADE TO BE READ from first column to last.

Isolation of Civilized Nations

Not Possible.

The New York Journal puts in a defense for the Monroe doctrine. It has always been applied, says our contemporary, for a just cause. Without entering into a consideration of how our neighbors have twisted about the doctrine, as originally agreed to by Mr. Canning, the British statesman, and President Monroe and Secretary

Adams, of the United States, it may not be unprofitable to refer to the purely selfish aspect of the contention, as now made. It is contended by United States politicians that the republic should in no sense aid in the settlement of affairs outside this continent, but that it should exercise a species of lordship over the nations of America.

When the Monroe doctrine was first promulgated, and the nations of the European continent composing the Holy Alliance threatened to extend their baneful influence and hateful autocracy to territory in this new world, the isolation of the United States was defensible, and was so regarded by Great Britain. But the world has changed since that time. Distance has been revolutionized. With the applications of steam and electricity to the wants of men, the nations of the earth have been brought close together, and no one country can, in justice to itself, hold aloof from the others composing the great family of nations.

It is absurd to contend that the United States can continue to hold itself apart from the outer world. A great shame it was that the neighboring republic failed to go to the aid of the stricken Armenian Christians in Turkey. It could easily have done so as a strong nation which had no interest but the welfare of humanity and the safety of its missionaries in the East, and, whereas, failure came to the inharmonious interested nations of Europe, glorious success would have attended the intervention of the United States.

The Monroe doctrine of today, which promulgates the idea that a country the size, wealth and importance of the United States can and ought to selfishly hold aloof from the other nations of the earth, because of its geographical position, is one that will be less and less accepted. The affairs of the world are rapidly becoming cosmopolitan, and it will be increasingly difficult to promulgate and uphold the isolation of any nation, no matter its size or situation.

His agricultural friends in Frontenac are bound to have Farmer Haycock in the next Legislature. They nominated the Patron leader at a convention on Saturday, and guaranteed to elect him against all comers.

It is announced that there is no prospect of a reconciliation between

Gen. Booth, of the Salvation Army, and his son, Ballington Booth. The greater the pity. Someone must be forgetting the lesson of the Psalm beginning "Behold how good a thing it is," etc.

Palmerston's Forecast of European Politics.

In one of the last letters ever written by Lord Palmerston, an interesting forecast is given of the political affairs of Europe. The letter, as will be seen, directly relates to the attack by the German confederation, and its chief states, Prussia and Austria, on the Kingdom of Denmark, resulting in the wresting of the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein from the Danes; but, at a glance, it embraces the politics of the great continental powers. It is as follows:

ambitious and aggressive powers.

France and Russia, that press upon her west and east. As to France, we know how restless and aggressive she is, and how ready to break loose for Belgium, for the Rhine, for anything she would be likely to get without too great an exertion. As to Russia, she will, in due time, become a power almost as great as the old Roman Empire.

She can become mistress of all Asia, except British India, whenever she chooses, to take it; and, when enlightened arrangements shall have made her revenue proportioned to her territory, and railways shall have bridged distances, her command of men will become enormous, her pecuniary means gigantic, and her power of transporting armies over great distances most formidable. Germany ought to be strong, in order to restrain Russian aggression, and a strong Prussia is essential to German strength. Therefore, though I heartily condemn the whole of the proceedings of Austria and Prussia about the duchies, I own that I should rather see them incorporated with Prussia than converted into an additional asset in the system of Europe. Yours sincerely,

PALMERSTON.

The British statesman has turned out somewhat of a prophet. Russia is fast becoming mistress of all Asia, outside of India, Afghanistan and China.

When all other sources of news manufacture fails him, the Ottawa canard manufacturer turns to the Dominion Cabinet, and evolves a "crisis" out of whole cloth. He moved for a time to Montreal, but he has now returned to Ottawa. Last time he was at his tricks he was quite sure two of the Ontario Ministers were leaving the Cabinet; there was not an atom of truth in that report. Now he turns to the Ministers of Quebec, and tells us that three of them are going out of the Cabinet. The story being equally without foundation, the yarn-spinner will wait a week or two, and try a new tack. In his round of news manufacture he never wears out. But what a conscience he must have!

In regard to Henry Savage Landor's recent experience in Tibet the New York Tribune says: "After entering Tibet, the pilgrim in disguise lost all his baggage, and was taken prisoner by the Tibetans, who chained him up for eight days, racked him, and would have beheaded him but for the final interposition of the Grand Lama. Mr.

Landor has now arrived at the Indian frontier."

The task of the newspaper commissioner in the far East can hardly be regarded as a sinecure.

Why Did He Shirk His Duty?

The Ontario Opposition leader has repeatedly told his audiences that he had not been in the habit of attending the meetings of the Public Accounts Committee. Therefore he has presumed that there is something wrong with the management of the finances.

In making this confession, Mr. Whitney has acknowledged that he has been guilty of a grave dereliction of his duty as a member of the Legislature.

It was just as much a part of his public trust to attend the meetings of the Public Accounts Committee, and to raise his objections to expenditures there, as it was for him to attend the meetings of the Legislature. We are warranted in suspecting that Mr.

Whitney knew that the public expenditures could not be caviled at, and that that was the reason for his absence when they were under investigation. But how shall we characterize the conduct of a public man who avoids an investigation when it is in progress, and after it is over more than insinuates that it was not complete?

Mr. C. C. Warner, County Crown Attorney at Nanapan, in a communication to the press, asserts that the Crown had nothing to do with the prosecution of the young man Ponton for the robbery of the Dominion Bank in Nanapan. The prosecutors were the solicitors of the bank.

Mr. Jonas Stadling, a Swedish Journalist, accompanied Andree to Dances

Island, from which place the aeronaut took his departure toward the pole.

Mr. Stadling has written a paper on

"Andree's Flight into the Unknown," which will appear in the November

Century.

SOME ODD FACTS.

There are three varieties of the dog the Egyptian shepherd dog, and the "lion-headed" dog of Tibet.

Of the entire number of English peers only five go back as far as the thirteenth century. Of the 538 temporal peers, 350 have been created during the present century, 128 during the past century, and only 62 trace their titles beyond the year 1700.

It is certain that ants intentionally sanction the residence of certain insects in their nest. This is the case, for instance, with the curious blind beetle, clavier, which is absolutely dependent upon ants, as Muller first pointed out. It even seems to have lost the power of feeding itself at any rate. It is habitually fed by ants, who supply it with nourishment, as they do to one another. There are a half-score of insects that ants treat apparently as guests. An unauthorized in-terloper would be at once killed.

a Stormy Time.

A Set-To in Bothwell at Confederation.

Hon. David Mills' First Appearance in Public Life.

When Mr. David Glass, of London,

Was Put Up Against Him,

And He Worsted Hon. Wm. Macdougall

on the Stump.

"It is just thirty years," said a well known Bothwell man to the writer today, "since there was the exciting political contest which first brought Hon.

David Mills, the new Minister of Justice, into prominence. I was then a youth, but I have very vivid recollections of the manner in which young

David Mills then met and discomfited the 'enemy.' It was in July of the year when Confederation of the Provinces was accomplished that Mr. Mills first became a national figure in the political arena. Mr. Mills was the most popular nominee that the Liberals could have put in the field, and the Conservatives were not at first inclined to set up a candidate against him. But Mr. George Henry, then living in Newbury, who did not have the remotest chance of being elected, was determined to run if there was no other conservative candidate. For the purpose of getting him out of the way, and meeting the pressure that was put upon them by the Government of the day, the Conservatives called a convention, and by a small majority it was agreed to make a nomination. Mr.

Henry consented to withdraw in case a candidate were regularly put in the field. Accordingly, Mr. David Glass, of London, was introduced to the constituency at the first meeting held in the village of Bothwell. Great efforts were made to have as large an attendance as possible. Mr. John Walker, then the influential manager of the Scottish Oil Company, and who was subsequently appointed returning officer, was chosen chairman. He had previously taken a very active part in securing a large attendance of Government supporters at the meeting. To add to the effect of this demonstration of strength, Hon. Wm. Macdougall, then Minister of Public Works, came up from Ottawa to address the gathering

BRILLIANTS.PART I.

"Four poor and dead on Sunday morning," my father made this announcement at the breakfast table, looking up from an open letter which he held in his hands, and pronouncing his obituary notice with a mild commiseration, as he was wont to be upon a railway disaster in a far-off land—the sort of comfortable commiseration in which there is no trace of personal interest.

I, his only daughter, was busy attending to the requirements of a trio of thirty brothers from behind the door. I set down the coffee pot and opened my mouth to comment upon this piece of intelligence, but, remembering that the prefix "poor" was for the first time applicable to my Aunt Jane, I changed my intention, putting a reverend bit of toast between my parted lips.

A week hence I was very glad that I had thus quietly held my tongue, for my rich—my "poor"—Aunt Anne, my dead mother's only sister, had remembered her death a niece whom in her life she had studiously forgotten. She had remembered me, I was the sole relative to whom allusion was made in her will.

"To my unknown niece, Sybil Wilmet, my only relative, who, with a claim upon my notice, has, nevertheless, left me unremunerated alike by civility or importunity. I bequeath to her, in full and final settlement, £500, free of legacy duty, with certain diamond ornaments, consisting of a heart-shaped pendant and a marquise ring."

To the underdowered daughter of a poor country vicar this sum of money seemed to be a magnificent windfall. My brother's critical remarks concerning the disposal of my poor aunt's wealth were irreverent. I brushed them at least I tried to do so, but John was obstinate and would not be silenced.

"Ump! Let's all the rest to charities, has she?" said he. "Trust poor Aunt Anne to see to her own interests. Hedged, of course, and to do it securely will take a considerable sum. While she was alive she never gave so much as a smile to anyone."

"Hush, John. She is—"

"I know, I am sorry for her. She is dead, poor thing."

I shall never forget my pleasure upon the winter afternoon when Aunt Anne's diamonds came into my possession. I was alone in the house when the registered packet arrived. The drawing-room was retreating darkness. I put the fire into a blaze, and, sitting down on the fender stool, I undid my parcel.

I had never seen a diamond, save on the fat finger of a rich parishioner, who maneuvered her bare hands during my father's Sunday sermons to rays of color from the painted windows upon her sparkling rings. My attention had been attracted by her frivolous behavior. She had outraged my sense of decorum, but I had admired her genius quite as keenly as any of her own.

I need envy her no more. I had a glittering ring of my own. It was mine, here in my agitated fingers. How decorative, how transforming are diamonds! As I turned the diamond ring encircled my finger that work-a-day, commonplace hand of mine became a distinguished personage.

I had twisted the beautiful pendant in the fright, and flashed its brilliance in my eyes. I tried the effect against my hair. I was standing upon the fender stool admiring myself in the mirror above the fireplace when the junior curate came into the room. My heart-shaped pendant was fastened in my hair, the ring was upon my finger. I was excited, excited, all sorts of ambitious, unsettling thoughts had come to me in the fright with my new jewelry. My nineteen years of busy, cheerful, uneventful life had been insipid. I wanted something about me to match my diamonds. The junior curate was as commonplace as his own sister ring. There was no brilliance, nothing dazzling about the abdicating young man.

"Where is the vicar?" I did not answer the question which was the inevitable greeting of the junior curate, and no more required an answer than "How do you do?" I waved my hand slowly, floating over the scintillating points of brilliance that flashed from my jewels.

"There," I said, "look, aren't they exquisite?"

He did as I directed, fixing his eyes on my decorative trappings. He lifted his gaze to my elated face.

"I don't care for diamonds," he said. "It is the most tactless remark I ever heard made."

"Don't you care for a picture by Rubens?"

bens or a poem by Shakespeare?" I retorted.

"Not much," said the thick-headed curate stubbornly.

"It is wiser for people who have no cultivation and no taste to have no opinions."

He ignored my meaning, but he spoke sharply.

"You want to flash, wear paste," he said, "only an expert can detect the difference, and paste is harmless. No crime has been committed, no souls sold for love of paste."

When cold water is poured upon red-hot enthusiasm, the result is obvious, feeling fizzes. I told the junior curate what I thought of paste; I explained the difference between genuine and a sham possession. He was unconvinced, but he lost his temper.

"I hate diamonds," he said presently, "they are well enough in themselves, but I hate the sort of people who wear them. Taste is comparatively a harmless vanity; paste doesn't mean capital locked up."

"We have no tastes in common, Mr. Davey," I said, walking to the door, "for I love my diamonds and I take no interest in plumb wickets or maidens over."

Cricket may not be capital locked up, but it is waste of time, and time is money."

I got out of hearing before the junior curate had opportunity to respond and went up to my room with my legacy in my pocket.

The case to which I have alluded began quite pleasantly; it was a vivid, connected, convincing vision. I drove in close chains under an avenue of bare chestnut trees, through sleet and hail, to the porch of an unknown house. I was conducted from the darkness without into a hall glowing with warmth and light. A strange girl came to meet me, and she was the welcome I warmly. I felt at home and happy in this unfamiliar region.

Later my feelings changed; I was among a chattering and merry party, but I was ill at ease and tired. Later still I found myself in a unknown room, in a large cold bedroom, the fire was dying on the hearth and I was seated at a writing table, trying to compose a letter with shivering fingers. I was struggling at my task, writing, rewriting, pausing, thinking.

The clock was ticking, and I got up and went over to the hearth to replenish the fire, but there were no coals in the room. Just then I heard voices in the passage without my quarters; the last guest had long departed, but the servants must be up and about still. I rang my bell.

Almost as I rang, the door opened; the threshold stood a gaunt and old woman, whom I had not seen hitherto. I gave my order, and she disappeared.

I waited a long time, and grew weary of expecting my coals. Suddenly, noiselessly, the great, gaunt woman entered with the scuttle in her hand, and she was looking at me, and my eyes met.

Dreamlike, in a moment, I was sick with an unreasoning terror. I felt the extinguish the live coals with the fuel. I rose to my feet; she had stooped to snatch up something from the room, which the coals had hidden, she had thrown a muscular arm around my neck. I saw a knife in her hand. I was afraid to sleep again lest the nightmare of a dream should return. Restless, uneasy, frightened, I lay awake until the welcome dawn of the new day drove fear of dreams and burglars off.

VIRTUALLY KILLED.

The Bi-Metallic Agitation Gets Its Quiet in the Opinion of the London Press.

London, Oct. 25.—The morning papers comment at length on the correspondence in regard to the bimetallic proposals of the United States monetary commission. The Times says:

"While the extent and significance of the American proposals come to be generally understood, we shall be surprised to find that the bimetallic agitation is virtually killed."

Closing Day

Of the Dominion W. C. T. U. Convention.

A Series of Resolutions Adopted by the Ladies.

To Enforce Prohibition of Liquor and Gambling in the Klondike—Resolution Condemning Lady Somerset Tabard.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—The Dominion W. C. T. U. convention, at its closing, adopted the following plan of campaign, platform and resolution:

PLAN OF WORK.

The report of the plan of work, which was presented by Mrs. Thornley, was a comprehensive and elaborate correlation of suggestions whereby better and more efficient work might be done. Among other recommendations were the following: That the Dominion Government be approached with a view to obtaining such amendments to the law as will effectively prevent the importation of Chinese women and children and their sale as slaves for immoral purposes; that white ribbons and children be requested to give at least a tenth of their time money for the plebiscite campaign; that the Dominion pledges be amended so that those taking it will promise to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, including wine, beer, ale and cider, also opium in the form of patent medicine or otherwise; and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of opium; that a simpler form of petition for equaling with men be signed by women over 21 years of age; that white ribbons prepare for the plebiscite campaign by contributing liberally of their means as possible towards the expenses; that efforts be made to induce one trustee of each town to sell a standard brand of unfermented wine; that the unions of the working class be requested to endeavor to have acts similar to the Neglected Children's Act of Ontario passed by their legislatures; that a portion of a morning or afternoon session be devoted to reading papers and discussing matters relating to work at Dominion, provincial or county conventions.

THE PLATFORM.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read recommending the adoption among others of resolutions to compose a letter with shivering fingers. I was struggling at my task, writing, rewriting, pausing, thinking.

Resolved, that the basis of this society is total abstinence, total prohibition of the liquor traffic and opium trade, the enfranchisement of women, purity of personal life and international peace and arbitration, and we invite all earnest women who are like-minded with us to join our organization, put on the white ribbon and become soldiers in our peaceful war.

THE PLEBISCITE.

That an emphatic protest be entered against the coupling of direct taxation for any other issue with the plebiscite on prohibition, and also against the proposal that the plebiscite shall not be considered as resulting in favor of prohibition unless more than one-half the vote on the Dominion list shall be cast in its favor.

Regretting that the effort to prevent the running of street cars in Toronto and elsewhere on Sunday was ineffective, and affirming the opposition of the W. C. T. U. to the desecration of the Sabbath in all forms, declaring for the extension of the franchise to women in the Dominion.

Regretting that the senators of the Dominion have seen fit to keep open house on Sunday, and Entioning the government to prohibit the importation and sale of liquor into and forbid gambling in the Klondike.

That the government be petitioned to provide reformatories and homes of refuge for inebriate women of the Dominion.

That the department of narcotics is of growing importance.

That legislation be passed prohibiting fakirs and gambling on fair grounds, and asking the government to withdraw its grant for fairs and exhibitions where it is allowed.

That the W. C. T. U. is unalterably opposed to any and all complicity of the government with sin, and that as British subjects they strongly protest against the enactment of laws restricting the regulation of vice in the military cantonments in India, and declare such law a gross outrage on Christianity, civilization and common humanity.

DOUBLED UP!

UNABLE TO WORK.

Suffering Agony Day and Night.

"For nearly two years," says Frank J. Wray, 211 Sherborn St., Toronto, "I suffered greatly with lameness and pain in my back. It often happened that my back and kidneys pained me so badly that I was doubled up and could hardly walk, except in a stooping position. Very often I was unable to work, suffering agony both day and night. I had severe pain in the lower part of my stomach, and other symptoms which proved conclusively that my kidneys were in a very unhealthy condition. My appetite was lost and my strength declined rapidly."

"I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills in March last, and after using three boxes of this medicine I was completely restored. I have not had the slightest pain or stiffness in any part of my back, or any indication of my former trouble, since using these wonderful pills."

"With the restoration of my kidneys to a healthy condition, my appetite was restored, and my strength returned, so that I am now strong and healthy. I make this statement of my cure by Doan's Kidney Pills with the greatest pleasure, because when I commenced taking them I did not really expect to remain a cure as they which followed their use. I am very thankful that I had upon this remedy, and gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

also that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Lord George Hamilton, Lord Salisbury, Mr. Balfour and Lady Henry Somerset.

Asking the world's convention to join in memorializing the Queen and Parliament in this jubilee year, asking that they refuse longer to receive revenue from the opium traffic, that the cultivation of the poppy in India may cease and that millet, rice and maize may be raised instead, thus preventing to a large extent future famine.

That in cases of married people the signatures of both husband and wife should be legally necessary to constitute that of a householder in cases of applications for licenses to sell spirituous liquors.

Indorsing the formation of a Dominion prohibition committee composed of representatives of all temperance bodies nationally organized as a central executive.

Earnestly entreating the members of the W. C. T. U. to discourage the use of hard punishment for millinery purposes, especially capes.

Recognizing the services of Hon. Neil Bow to humanity, and expressing their sorrow at his removal from our earth. That the Dominion president make a tour of the provinces either once in two or four years, and that the expenses of such tour be met from the Dominion treasury or by public meetings.

Testifying to the love and loyalty of the white ribbons of Canada for their beloved Queen, and praying that her life and rule may be prolonged for many years.

Asking the World's W. C. T. U. to join the Dominion W. C. T. U. in asking the Queen to consent to the weight of her influence towards giving to British women throughout her Dominion the inestimable boon of political freedom.

Protesting against the unjust action of the white ribbons of Canada for girls only 15, while that for boys is 21, and believing that the tendency of such legislation is immoral, demanding that the laws of the land be harmonized with the laws of God.

Through the kindness of the provincial and local superintendents of police, and in order to teach the principles of prohibition to the sailors and fishermen.

The Man in White.

Lively Apparition Causes Consternation at Brampton.

The Sprite Appears Nightly But All Efforts to Capture Him Fail.

Brampton, Oct. 25.—The good people of Brampton are greatly troubled over the nightly apparition in their midst of a real up-to-date ghost of the male person whose specialty seems to be haunting the fair and young section of the population and frightening the old.

The ghost was first seen on the road near the town hall by two young ladies who were returning home from a friend's at a rather late hour. The apparition of the man in white of the roadway and seemed to be eight feet high and attired from head to toe in a flowing white garment. As he approached the terror-stricken women he seemed to glide instead of walk, but his arms proved to be solid enough as he embraced them. One of the ladies fainted, but the screams of the other were so loud that the apparition suddenly disappeared, seeming to melt into the air.

HIS SECOND APPEARANCE.

Next night the ghostly visitor was seen near the town hall by two young ladies who were returning home from a friend's at a rather late hour. The apparition of the man in white of the roadway and seemed to be eight feet high and attired from head to toe in a flowing white garment. As he approached the terror-stricken women he seemed to glide instead of walk, but his arms proved to be solid enough as he embraced them. One of the ladies fainted, but the screams of the other were so loud that the apparition suddenly disappeared, seeming to melt into the air.

UNSUCCESSFUL PURSUIT.

A few nights ago Rev. William Walsh, the Anglican clergyman, was proceeding home from church, when he saw a tall white object in the roadway. He quietly approached, until he got within a dozen yards of the supposed spook, when it started off at a lively gallop, uttering frantic shrieks as it ran. Mr. Walsh, who is quite a sprinter, for a time kept up with the fugitive, but was finally obliged to give up the chase. Next night William Howell, a clerk employed in Peaker & Co.'s hardware store, was escorting two young ladies home from choir practice when the spook once more appeared. The ladies fled in wild terror, but Howell started after the ghost, and an exciting chase ensued. Howell got almost within striking distance, when the ghost emitted a shriek and disappeared.

A STILL HUNT WITH SHOT GUNS.

Greatly mystified, Mr. Howell related his experience to his friends and they arranged a party to effectually lay his ghostship. Several young ladies who had seen the "horrible object" and one who was actually embraced by the amorous ghost, are now very ill, suffering from nervous prostration, and the alarm has become so general that Sheriff Brodie has been appealed to for protection. A determined effort will be made this week to develop the mystery with shot guns as the medium.
