The Lost Will;

OR,
LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST!

CHAPTER IV.

Jack was silent for a moment or two, as he attempted to master the significance of the simply uttered announcement; then, very much flushed, and with a natural thumping of the heart, he said, in a low voice which he endeavored to keep steady:

"That's—that's a very extraordinary thing to do, sir. I mean—haven't you any relations, any one near to you—?"

"I told you before—no. I've no one in the wide world but you."

"No one at all with any claim on you?" said Jack with surprise, scarcely knowing what he was saying in the tumult of his feelings; for though no one could accuse Jack Chalfont of being mercenary, the prospect of an immense fortune, dropping, as it were, from the heavens, excited even him. But he was a just young man, though by no means perfect, and he felt constrained to repeat, "Is there no one who has any claim on you, sir?"

His question seemed to affect Mr. Chalfont strangely; he took the pipe from his mouth, his face grew red, the eyes which he bent on Jack were almost fierce.

"What do you mean by that?" he demanded. "What do you mean by 'claim on me'?"

"I mean, is there no old friend?" answered Jack, surprised by his patron's sudden show of anger. "Nearly every man of your age has some friend, if not relation however distant."

"I've no friend," said Mr. Chalfont, his face clearing; "I've plenty of people who hang about me for what they can get in money or tips; and I've no relations that I know of. I've no one but you, Jack," he said, with a kind of rough, reluctant sentiment. "You say that, if I adopt you, in a regular, legal way, they wouldn't give you my title if I got one; but I can give you this money. Hold on; it's not a mere whim, and because I've taken a fancy to you. Here, let me explain! I'm giving it to you because I'm fond of you; I cottoned to you from the moment I saw you; but it's not because of that only; it's because, first of all, you know what to do with the money—which I don't."

Jack listened in a kind of stupor.

"You're a swell, one of the right sort; a Chalfont with the 'e.' He smiled grimly. "You'll be able to keep house here properly; to meet as an equal all these grandees that gad about here; ruffe it with the best of them. Yes; you're the sort of man that ought to have a fine place like this and plenty of money to keep it going. You can go into Parliament, get a baronetcy, a peerage; you'd make a good lord. You shall have your chance. I'm going to leave every penny, every stick and stone, to you, Jack; and all I ask is that while I'm alive you shall try and think yourself the son you can't be."

WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I got up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to a factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. —Mrs. ANNA METZBERG, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Bilious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about every so often until they get to be a habit. The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Williams' Kidney-Liver Pills. The bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you.

There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

Jack rose, lit his beloved briar, and puffed at it furiously for a full minute; then he said, a trifle hoarsely:

"Look here, sir; of course, I'm grateful to you; but I'm so staggered that I don't properly realize what it means; and yet I ought to; for, like you, I've been poor and wanted money. I'd just about thirty bob when I called on you that morning at Copt-hall Buildings; but I don't want you to do anything without thinking it well over."

"I never do anything suddenly; I never do anything without thinking it well over," returned Chalfont. "I've been thinking of it for the last week; and let me tell you a week's a long time for me to think over anything. In fact, I made up my mind three days ago. Horton has drawn out the will; it's in the safe here; it only wants signing. I'd sign it to-night if the servants hadn't gone to bed. I'll want witnesses to it."

Jack took out his silk handkerchief, and wiped his brow.

"Good Lord!" he exclaimed, under his breath. "It's staggered me. But, thank Heaven," he added, with a sudden air of relief, "you're strong and well; you'll live to be ninety."

"Maybe, maybe not," said Mr. Chalfont dryly. "If I do, you shall stand as my son from to-night; you shall have as much money as you want; you shall go into Parliament, do what you like; travel—no, not travel, you'll have to wait till I'm dead, for I can't part with you."

Jack laid his hand, which shook somewhat, on the broad, bent shoulder; but could find never a word. With his own rough hand Mr. Chalfont covered Jack's shapely paw, and patted it; then he rose and threw back his shoulders.

"That's off my chest, anyhow," he said, with a short laugh. "Now we can go on all straight. I'll sign that will to-morrow, first thing. Time for bed, eh, Jack? Have to be at the office early to-morrow; why, it's to-morrow already."

They went upstairs together; at Jack's door Mr. Chalfont put out his hand and gripped Jack's, and the two men parted without another word.

Most men in Jack's situation would have lain awake that night; but he slept soundly. At breakfast the two men met as if the momentous conversation had not taken place; it was Mr. Chalfont's way of treating the biggest things in his life; once they were done, there was no more to be said. He went up to London, and Jack busied himself about the alterations which, at his suggestion, were being made in the estate. If, during his overlooking, he reflected more than once that everything on which his eye rested would some day be his, it may be forgiven him. Mr. Chalfont returned just in time to dress for dinner, and Jack noticed that he looked rather tired and haggard.

"Had a hard day, sir?" he asked. "So, so," replied Mr. Chalfont. "East Ocean; but I think I've broken the neck of it; it's a big thing. You'll be a rich man," he added, with a grim smile.

Jack winced. "You'll be, you mean, sir?"

"Same thing," returned Chalfont laconically.

After dinner—a meal which Jack made cheerful with an account of his day's doings; in which Chalfont showed a genuine interest—Chalfont went off to his den with some papers; and Jack went up to his room, which was just above the den, to change his coat, and, if the truth must be told, to smoke and think over his prospects. He had not been so occupied for half an hour when he heard a strange noise. It seemed like a cry. Jack took the pipe from his mouth and listened; the cry was not repeated, and he thought that it might have come from one of the numerous ovis which lived in the park and flew about the house at night.

Mr. Chalfont took off his coat as usual, got into his uncomfortable chair, and, with his blackened clay in his lips, began to work at his papers. He was immersed deeply in them, when suddenly he heard a tap at the window—a window with doors opening to the ground. He gave no attention to it; it was repeated twice, thrice; then, thinking that some bird, probably wounded, had flown against the window, he rose, drew back the curtain, and opened the window. A man stood outside, so near, that Mr. Chalfont instinctively drew back; the man entered and, stepping into the light cast by the lamp, stood and looked at Chalfont. Chalfont returned the gaze confusedly for a moment; then he fell back and reaching wildly for his chair, sank into it and uttered the cry which Jack had heard.

CHAPTER V.

THE two men continued to regard each other in silence; Chalfont half-collapsed in his chair, clutching the arms so tightly that the veins on his hands stood out thickly; there were drops of sweat on his brow, and in his eyes that look which comes into those of a hunted animal when the dread thing from which it has been flying has overtaken it at last and brought death with it.

Strangely enough, in the eyes of the man who stood regarding him there was neither the fire of malignant passion nor overwhelming triumph; indeed, there was something, not only in the expression of Norton's face, but in his attitude, which was almost pagan in its calmness and immobility; it seemed as if he had been looking forward to this hour for so long, had been visualising it so vividly in his imagination, that now the actual moment had come its quinquity was dulled by oft anticipation. He looked down at the man in the chair almost as the executioner might regard the victim kneeling at the block, as if he, the executioner, were but the agent of justice and had no personal feeling in the matter in hand.

At last Chalfont found his voice, or the semblance of a voice. "Norton" his lips formed rather than pronounced.

"Yes, it's me," said the other old man, the avenger, and his voice was as passionless as his face; in fact, it was rather a weary and dragging voice. "I've been looking for you a long time, Bradshaw. I saw you coming out of the swell hotel the other night. I knew I should find you sooner or later; I didn't believe in that newspaper story of your death, it was the kind of blind you'd put up, naturally enough, and it didn't take me in. Somehow, I felt as you was alive and that the day 'ud come when you and I would reckon up our accounts."

When he had finished this statement, made with a curious kind of simplicity, as if it were a pronouncement of fate, he sank into a chair and, leaning forward slightly, with his hands on his knees—a trick of Mr. Chalfont's: the two men were strangely alike in voice and manner and bearing—he watched Chalfont's face, which had settled now into a kind of livid greyness. Chalfont rose, mechanically unlocked the window, drew the curtain; then, with his hands gripping the back of the chair, he looked down at Norton and said, in a curiously thin and hollow voice:

"Well, now you've got me, what are you going to do? Mind though you may think you've surprised me, you haven't. I always knew you'd run me down; always felt that this hour would come. I've been expecting you for years, Norton, and here you are; and what are you going to do?"

"I dunno," said Norton quietly, regarding him contemplatively. "Back alone I'd made up my mind that, when I come up with you, I'd shoot you on sight; but that was years ago, and I've changed my mind, many times, since then. Sometimes I thought that I'd give you over to the police, give evidence against you, stand outside the prison and wait—till the black flag ran up."

Chalfont moistened his white lips and his eyes blinked, as if the horror of the scene were visible to him. "But there, again," said Norton, his tones and language becoming more like a rough miner's every moment, as if his contact with this other miner were carrying him back to the past. "I've thought so much over the idea that I've got somehow tired of it; it's got stale. But mind you!"—with a sudden gleam of ferocity in his eyes—

"That's true enough," said Chalfont, with a Business man's acceptance of an obvious truth, even though it was presented by a foe. "I've been in purgatory, as you say."

Norton nodded twice. "Yes; you, with all your money—you, the great Mr. Chalfont—Oh, I've heard all about you; why, I've read about you in the papers for years past. Little thinking it was you. You're rolling in money, you're a great swell, living in a palace kind of house, with all the world at your feet; but when I looked at you through the window there, it came on me all of a sudden that, bad time as I've had since you robbed me, perhaps you've had a worse."

A Division of Bohemians are Italian Army

Russia, in a fine emotional moment, produced a Battalion of Death—women soldiers with poison phials in their blouses, sworn never to surrender. Bohemia, the enslaved and down-trodden, the mere historical ornament of a nation, has produced its first Division of Death.

It has been known for some time that there were about 20,000 Czech-Slovak troops in a single group with the Italian army—first in training near Perugia and later at the battle front itself. It is not commonly known, however, that these soldiers will never be used on the defensive except in the last extremity, and are being held by the high Italian command to be flung across No Man's Land when Italy strikes her next great blow.

The reason for this is simple. These men will be hanged if they are captured by the Austrians. Four hundred and seventy Czech-Slovaks since the war started have been hanged in Trieste alone—over one per cent of the population—for offenses much more venial in Austrian eyes than that of serving in the ranks of the enemy. An army loses most prisoners when it stands on the defensive. When it strikes, its casualties in killed and wounded are higher, but the wounded can be cared for in the rear of the advancing forces. Therefore the Czech-Slovak division will be the

A Division of Death.

Bohemians are Fighting in Italian Army.

Russia, in a fine emotional moment, produced a Battalion of Death—women soldiers with poison phials in their blouses, sworn never to surrender. Bohemia, the enslaved and down-trodden, the mere historical ornament of a nation, has produced its first Division of Death.

It has been known for some time that there were about 20,000 Czech-Slovak troops in a single group with the Italian army—first in training near Perugia and later at the battle front itself. It is not commonly known, however, that these soldiers will never be used on the defensive except in the last extremity, and are being held by the high Italian command to be flung across No. Man's Land when Italy strikes her next great blow.

The reason for this is simple. These men will be hanged if they are captured by the Austrians. Four times since the war started have been hanged in Trieste alone—over one per cent of the population—for offenses much more venial in Austrian eyes than that of serving in the ranks of the enemy. An army loses most prisoners when it stands on the defensive. When it strikes, its casualties in killed and wounded are higher, but the wounded can be cared for in the rear of the advancing forces. Therefore the Czech-Slovak division will be thrown forward only when the Austrians are reeling backward.

And yet these Bohemians, with the possibility of the Austrian noose always ahead of them, are the happiest men in Italy. They are in arms to realize a dream—to establish a new republic upon the ancient "coast of Bohemia" and in the very heart of the present Austro-Hungarian state.

Throughout Italy they have excited the greatest enthusiasm. They are instantly recognizable, for though they wear the grey-green Italian uniforms they carry on their collar stripes of their national colours—red and white—with another touch of red and white in their Alpine caps. Unlike the Italians, they are mostly big and blond, and as they pass along through the cheering crowds of the towns and villages near the front with flowers behind their ears or stuck in their coats they seem always to be laughing or singing.

They have been assembled from all quarters. Many of them are deserters from the Austrian armies. Others were taken prisoners—most willingly—in successful Italian drives. The Italians repeatedly found Czech-Slovak machine-guns in the mountains attached to their weapons by stout chains forged upon ankle bracelets. Victims of such a practice, of course, furnished ready material for the Bohemian division. Others came from Russia, creeping through one out-of-the-way channel or another into Italy. Still others volunteered for this foreign service in the United States.

This spring and summer, as the Bohemian movement for independence has grown within Austria itself, recruiting for the Bohemian armies has received a tremendous impetus. In addition to the division already on the front in Italy, another complete division is being organized in France. From Russia 30,000 more Czech-Slovaks are now on their way to Italy over a safe though little known route. The Czech-Slovaks in Russia, tens of thousands of them deserters from the Austrian armies in the early years of the war, and wholly unoppressed by the Bolshevik anti-national doctrines, are especially restless. It is believed that eventually a large proportion of these will find their way to the Italian battle front.

But from the Austrian lines few are coming over now. Bohemians in the Austrian army at present are held in the interior as far as possible. When they are required on the fighting front they are sandwiched in between Magyars, their bitterest enemies, and German-Austrians, and watched like convicts.

The Bohemian division consists of Czechs, Moravians, and Silesians, mingled without discrimination. Most of them are peasants and small workmen—the latter highly skilled artisans, as Bohemia is the very industrial heart of Austro-Hungary. Practically no propaganda on the part of the Italians was necessary to enlist them, as they are intelligent and reasonably well educated. And in Bohemia, perhaps, more than in any subject state of Europe, the fires of an intense nationalism burn undimmed. The galled Hapsburg policy of division has proved fruitless among them. And Bohemia to-day is one seething ferment of rebellion, ripe for the inevitable explosion.

Throughout Italy it is believed that the Bohemian division is the glowing fuse which will fire this explosion. Here is a trained force, well disciplined, well equipped, well officered, under the immediate command of one of the most highly regarded major-generals in the Italian army. These men are prepared to die—practically sworn to die—but even more, they are prepared to win under the folds of their own flag. Once they fight their way into Austrian territory they know that the repercussion will sound throughout the Austrian state. Swarms of Bohemian patriots will flock to their standard ready to die with them if necessary.

And when that happens Austro-Hungary will be torn asunder, past the power of German cement to mend.

Keeping the Huns Moving.

(From The Toronto Globe.)
The Germans started out in March to show what could be done on the Western Front to win a speedy victory by a war of movement. They kept the Allied armies on the move for almost three months, and unquestionably caused anxiety and fear as to the result. But since that great day in the world's history—July eighteenth—when Foch began to strike back and the second battle of the Marne ended in a second disastrous German retreat, the Allied Commander-in-Chief has been showing the Hun what a real war of movement looks like. Last week on the battlefield along the Somme and Oise the Germans were everywhere scurrying for the shelter of the Hindenburg line. They had no desire to continue the controversy in the open field. They had been convinced by the loss of half a million men—excluding over a hundred and fifty thousand prisoners—that the defensive was Germany's only hope. And now, just as they were beginning to breathe more easily after their home run to the Hindenburg defences, the implacable Foch strikes once more, and the war of movement is resumed in a new place and under conditions that may ultimately force the enemy to give up the valleys of the Oise and Aisne without even making a fight for them. The French and American attack, begun recently, has for its immediate objective the pinching out of the salient of St. Mihiel, a narrow wedge-like intrusion of the Germans into the southern part of French Lorraine. This thrust westerly from Metz to the Meuse was made in the early days of the war, when the enemy still hoped to capture Verdun, open the entire eastern frontier to the passage of their armies, and advance upon Paris from the southeast as well as from the Northern front. Verdun remained unconquered, the wave of invasion was everywhere checked, and only at St. Mihiel did the enemy secure to the south of Verdun a footing on the Meuse.

Parties from nearby settlements who were in the city on Saturday selling rabbits were asking the modest price of $1 a pair. Some of the four-footed game were so highly flavoured that it is evident they had been captured some time before the game season opened.

Parties who arrived in the city on Saturday and to-day brought along rabbits which they purchased at from 25 to 40 cents a pair en route.

A Problem in Arithmetic.

By RUTH CAMERON.

If one did all the things that one ought to do for the good of one's body and mind and soul, what time would one have left just to live?

None, I think. An article which assured its readers that they ought to be able to do two hours serious reading a day, started me thinking on this subject. Two hours isn't much out of the twenty-four, is it? But just try to recall some of the other purposes to which enthusiasts on one subject or another assure one that one should be able to devote ten minutes, a half hour, two hours.

For instance, a health expert declares, in an article on outdoor exercise, that no one can be really healthy unless he spends at least three hours in outdoor exercise. And that the three hours may be wholly given over to his hobby, he takes pains to assure you that walking to and from one's work, or any other form of exercise which is incidental to daily work, shouldn't be included. The three hours must be spent strictly in some form of perfectly useless exercise to be of any use.

Cleaning One's Teeth Five Times A Day Takes Some Time.

Of course everyone knows how that one should clean one's teeth at least five times a day (one dentist assures me this involves the possession of three toothbrushes which should be used in proper rotation and carefully rinsed and aired between each using).

Another health expert complains that we do not spend enough time at our meals. Each meal, he insists, one should spend a full hour at the table, first chewing every morsel of food properly and then sitting still and conversing over the coffee or tea cups while the meal digests.

And One Must Relax For Half An Hour.

Then there is the relaxation enthusiast who promises you a speedy old age unless at least half an hour (preferably an hour) is spent some time in the day just relaxing. If one is a woman, the care of the complexion and hair and nails should, unless one is a slattern (so says the beauty expert), consume at the very least, an hour a day.

A half hour a day, says the memory expert, is nothing at all to devote to cultivating one's memory. Anyone who will not do it, deserves to be the failure he certainly will be.

Now, if you are very clever at arithmetic, doubtless you can add all these hours together (to say nothing of as many more for similar worthy purposes) and then add eight hours for sleep and eight hours for work and get the whole into twenty-four. But so far I haven't been able to do that. But then, I never was good at figures.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

New York-- Its Greatness.

The National Geographical Magazine for July devotes an elaborate article to an illustration of the "bigness" of the City of New York, which it calls the "Metropolis of Mankind."

1st--The exports passing out of its harbor last year had a greater value than the combined exports of Asia, Africa and Australia.

2nd--The imports coming through its custom lines exceeded in value those of the continents of South America, Africa and Australia.

3rd--In population it outranks any one of half the nations of the earth. Surpasses that of the entire continent of Australia, and matches the combined strength of the six Westernmost States of the American Union.

4th--In annual expenditures it exceeds all except seven of the fifty odd nations on the map.

5th--Its water system could supply the whole earth with drinking water; and its storage reservoirs hold enough to slake civilization's thirst for more than a year.

6th--Its electric transportation lines carry nearly twice as many passengers in twelve months as all the steam railroads of the United States. Some 300,000 passengers arrive and depart through the city's railway stations daily.

7th--Who reckons a dime? Yet the world's loftiest building, its crowning cathedral of commerce, was built out of the small margin of profit in ten cent transactions. (Woolworth's 735 feet high building with its 40 acres of floor space and two miles of elevator shafts.)

8th--Who considers the dust in the street? New York has built up 65 acres of ground, valued at several million dollars, out of street sweeping.

9th--Over seven tons of dust and dirt are carried by tramping feet into the subways every twenty-four hours.

10th--It has more Irish and their sons and daughters than Dublin, more Italians and their children than has Rome, as many Germans and their children as Leipzig and Frankfurt-on-Main together, while its Russian population by birth and parentage is greater than the combined populations of Riga and Dvinsk. Seven out of every nine children of schools, etc., are of immigrant parentage.

11th--If every resident whose parents were born in America were to leave the city, its standing as the second most populous centre in the world, would not be affected.

12th--The immigrants and their children resident in New York are almost equal to the combined populations of Paris and Philadelphia and greater than the combined population of Chicago and Berlin.

13th--Its vast proportions in everything relating to life will be seen from these facts. Two transients arrive every second, a passenger train comes into the terminals every twenty-two seconds, and a ship clears every forty minutes. A child is born every six minutes, a wedding takes place every thirteen minutes, and a funeral is held every fourteen minutes. There is a real estate transfer every twenty-five minutes, a new building is erected every fifty-one minutes, and a fire occurs every thirty minutes. Every day 350 people come to the city to live, and a hundred new telephones are installed.

14th--Giant electric pumps which can deliver 30,000 gallons of water a minute at a pressure of 300 pounds to the square inch represent its "big guns" of the fire department. Ten pumps of high pressure service can deliver 100 streams at once. The average number of fires per day is forty. These rarely get beyond the buildings in which they occur.

15th--Three people out of every four in the city were born under alien flags, or are the children of foreign-born, and nearly 4,000,000 live in tenements and apartment houses.

16th--The food and drink bill of the hotels and restaurants amounts every night to more than a million dollars. One hotel, reported to be the largest in the world, has 1,700 rooms.

17th--Its death rate in 1916 was but 13.80 per thousand. There were proportionately only half as many deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis in the decade from 1906 to 1915 inclusive as there were from 1876 to 1885, and only one-third as many deaths from typhoid, one-fifth as many from diphtheria, one-sixth as many from scarlet fever, and only half as many deaths of babies under one year of age, and this despite the density of the population on the East side.

18th--Its population approaches six millions, and every week these consume 200 train loads of food, 2,100 carloads of milk, 1,836 carloads of vegetables and 1,168 carloads of meat dressed and on the hoof. New York's weekly supply requires a train seventy-six miles long and 200 engines to draw it.

19th--Its amusements, upon which it spends $60,000,000 a year, are a story in themselves; one theatre alone earned $1,500,000 in box office receipts.

Finally, its water supply, its enormous cost, the difficulties encountered in its construction, the transcendent genius, untiring industry and patience which designed it and carried it to successful completion are well adapted to excite the admiration of the world at large.

It has an annual budget of $200,000,000, and spends more for municipal purposes than Canada spends for Dominion purposes in peace times.

CLOSER TOGETHER.

Since our daddies died at Valley Forge, before they'd be submittin' to that old bonehead German George who then was ruling Britain, a sort of coldness has obtained between two mighty nations; our bonds of friendship all were strained, we were blood relations. It took another German king (with soil for war expanding) between these mighty realms to bring the perfect understanding. Our banner floats o'er English shores, the common foe de'fyin'; and over countless Yankee homes the British flag is flying. The soreness that one time we knew the German Kultur smother; our friendship's sealed with blood, and true and we are close as brothers. We sing with them, "God Save the King," and raise our glad kyoodle; and they will make the rafters ring with good old "Yankee Doodle." Britannia rules the waves, we stretch our hands, already yet, with brotherly emotion. When Kaiser Bill has quit the fray, brought down by stress of weather, he'll look at Brit and Yank and say, "I brought the two together!" And that will be the sourest pill, the nicest dose of bitters, that e'er went down old Kaiser Bill or other kingly critters!

The forehead is rubbed in the circular manner, upward from between the eyebrows and outward to remove horizontal lines. The vertical furrows must be rubbed with the two forefingers only. Figure to yourself two long ovals passing over this central forehead wrinkle and use the right and left forefinger at the same time running, in contrary directions. This is a hard line to efface but with patient massage and the use of a wrinkle plaster at night, even a deep line will be softened in time.

THE CASUALTY LISTS.

Here are the lists of the dead. The truest of friends of us all; They passed that flag overhead in the dust shouldn't say.

Did you know not a name printed here And no glorious face that is cold— That you read without trace of a tear The grim story that's told?

You say that you never had met This lad who has fallen out here? Yet to-day you are deep in his debt By the blood that has matted his hair.

You never have shaken the hand Of this boy who has come to life's end? Yet cannot you now understand That you should be mourning a friend?

Not strangers!—these lists of the brave, Who have passed into peace out of pain; For as your friends and my friends they gave Their lives that our flag should remain.

British Success in Palestine

British Make Prisoners 120 Guns. Bulgarian Haig's Men Smash

WAR REVIEW.

With the violence of the operations on the Western front in France considerably diminished in intensity, the Turks in Palestine and the Bulgarians and their Allies in Macedonia are being put to the test, but nowhere thus far have they been able to hold back or even to counter attack the onslaughts of their foe. In Palestine the Turks seemingly are in process of being crushed. In Macedonia the Entente forces are driving sharp wedges of considerable distances into the enemy fronts. In France and Flanders where there has been any fighting rising in importance above patrol encounters, the British, French and American troops have kept the upper hand and advanced their respective fronts. Of transcendent interest for the moment at least are the operations of the British General Allenby's forces in Palestine. Here in less than four days the British have swept forward in the centre across the River Jordan and taken the famous city of Nazareth, while their wings closed around in a swift enveloping movement and nipped within the maw of the great pincer all the Ottoman forces in the coastal sector, the plain of Sharon, the hill region in the centre along the western Jordan Valley, meanwhile to the northeast of the friendly Arab forces of the King of the Hedjaz have cut all railway communications in front of the fleeing Turks and are standing a barrier to their escape by way of the eastern plains. More than 18,000 Turks have been made prisoners by the British, and guns in excess of 120 had been captured when the last reports from General Allenby were received. In addition great quantities of war stores had been captured and still more had not been counted owing to the rapidity of the movement. It is not improbable that within the next strings of which have been drawn out, thousands of Turks are estimated. Many of those already made prisoners fleeing in disorder, literally walked into the hands of the British, knowing their line of retreat had been cut off. Although the Turks at some points offered considerable resistance to the British, at no point were they able to stay the advance of the British cavalry sweep across and occupied Nazareth to the north. In the operation of sewing the enemy within the sack, airmen playing an important role, vigorously bombing the retreating Turks and inflicting enormous casualties on them. The losses of General Allenby are described as slight in comparison with the importance of the movement carried out. In Macedonia the Italians have joined the fray with the British, Greek, Serbian and Greek troops, and the hard after the Bulgarians and their allies, who are being driven northward through southern Serbia, through the Cerna and Vardar Rivers, and have taken on the German front sending up reinforcements. The British troops have continued their advance. The Serbians west of the Sava River have crossed the Friessenthal road at Kavadar, which constitutes an advance of more than 100 miles into their once-held territory. The east of Monastir the Italians have begun operations in the famous bend and have taken several positions, while between the Cerna and the Vardar, the French also have advanced with success.

OWNERS AND CANNON CAPTURED.

WESTERN THEATRE, Sept. 19.

In spite of the vigorous resistance of the enemy rearguards, the offensive against the Cerna and Vardar Rivers has progressed to-day. Allied forces have reached the region of Vardar. Serbian forces have gained a footing on the left bank of the Cerna in the region of Durye. The Serbs have succeeded in accentuating progress in the direction of Konoplye where they have traversed partly difficult ground on the range between the Belashniza River and the Bochara. French and Greek forces have taken the village of Tushanica and have gained a foothold on the left bank of the Cerna. Communication over the vast mountain ground covered in the operation, it is possible as yet to estimate the number of prisoners taken, but it is estimated that 5,000 prisoners and 80 guns have been captured. The operations of the Greeks and British forces in the Lake Doiran region which have been marked by furious battles have progressed. Violent encounters have been made in vain against the forces.

Many of these already made prisoners fleeing in disorder, literally fell into the hands of the British, knowing their line of retreat had been cut off. PROGRESS ON FLANDERS FRONT.
LONDON, Sept. 21.
Further steps forward have been made by the British on the Flanders front. Field Marshal Haig's statement to-day announces the improvement of the British positions west of Messines to the south of Ypres, where a strong point was captured. North-east of St. Quentin the British continued their progress through the main Hindenburg line, advancing their front northwest of Bellengise. North of Gauche Wood, west of Villers Guislain, the British have been pressed back slightly. A British detachment of seven men was surrounded and believed to have been captured when the Germans took Mouevres. Their post was in the northern part of the village and they held it for two days during the German occupation, inflicting losses on the enemy. When the village was retaken the entire party rejoined its unit without loss.

ATTACK RESUMED.
LONDON, Sept. 21.
(Official.)—The British attack against the Hindenburg line northwest of St. Quentin, was resumed this morning east of Epehy, says the official report from Field Marshal Haig to-day.

SMASHING THE GERMAN LINE.
LONDON, Sept. 22.
Field Marshal Haig's troops last night smashed into the German line at four distinct points. On the battle-front near Gavre north of the Scarpe, the British advanced on a two mile front. East of Epehy the British captured several organized points of resistance, according to to-day's British official statement. North of Epehy Haig's men pushed forward in the sector south of Villers Guislain. They also repulsed a German attack on Mouevres and then improved their positions there. This morning the Germans attacked the positions of the British northwest of LaBasse in Flanders. Fighting is still in progress.

FRENCH LINER TORPEDOED.
PARIS, Sept. 20.
The French line steamship Admiral Charner, bound from Bizerta to Malta, has been torpedoed with the loss of six lives, according to an official statement. The passengers and crew numbered 174. An unseen submarine fired three torpedoes, two of which struck the ship but the vessel remained afloat three hours.

BRITISH MONITOR SUNK.
LONDON, Sept. 21.
A British monitor was sunk on Monday, as she was lying in the harbor, the Admiralty announced to-day. One officer and 19 men were killed and 57 men are missing and are presumed to have been killed.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.
LONDON, Sept. 21.
British casualties for the week ending to-day, follows: Officers, killed or died of wounds, 487, men, 3,153; officers wounded or missing, 1,916; men, 17,206.

AIR WORK.
LONDON, Sept. 20.

The achievements of the British air forces in the past week have been among the most remarkable of the war. From information supplied by the Air Ministry the Associated Press has learned that sixty tons of bombs were dropped in German territory in five days by the British machines. This exceeds the record for any previous fortnight. These long distance raids have been directed chiefly against poison gas and airplane factories at Mannheim, the chemical works at Stuttgart, the railway station at Frankfurt and the docks and sidings at Karlsruhe. Their destructive effect is shown by photographs. Aerial assaults over the battle areas

WESTERN THEATRE, Sept. 19.
Despite the vigorous resistance of the enemy rearguards, the offensive against the Cerna and Vardar Rivers has reached progress to-day. Allied forces have reached the region of Dren. Serbian forces have gained on the left bank of the Cerna. The Serbs succeeded in accumulating progress in the direction of Konop where they have traversed particularly difficult ground on the range between the Belashnitza River and Boshava. French and Greek forces have taken the village of Tush and have gained a foothold on the left bank of the Drena. Because of difficult terrain over the vast amount of ground covered in the operation, it is possible as yet to estimate the number of prisoners taken, but it is estimated that 5,000 prisoners and 80 guns have been captured. The forces of the Greeks and British have been marked by furious battles to progress. Violent counter-attacks have been made in vain by the Bulgarian forces.

BENAY CAPTURED.
PARIS, Sept. 21.
The drive for the outflanking of the German line, the French last night captured the town of Benay, and made progress north of that place, says to-day's war office announcement. Castres, where the French are but slightly more than two miles from St. Quentin, a German counter attack was repulsed.

Church Parades.
The C. C. C. under command of Lt. Col. Conroy and Capt. Perez held a church parade yesterday morning, attending last Mass at the Cathedral. Rev. Dr. Green celebrated Mass, the preacher being Rev. Fr. Conway who delivered an eloquent sermon. About 120 lads assisted in the turn out.

HIGHLANDERS.

Quite a number of ex-members retired from active service, took part in the parade.

Wrecked at St. Lawrence.
Deputy Minister of Customs, Le Mesurier received the following message Saturday from the Sub-Collector at St. Lawrence:—"Schooner Adriatic, 99 tons, Francis Pine, master, went ashore last night on the east side of the entrance to this harbour, and is a total wreck. Vessel was bound to Hr. Grace in ballast. Crew safe."

Shower of Gifts.
Miss Armored Harris is in receipt of the following letter from Her Majesty the Queen:
Buckingham Palace, July, 1918.
Her Majesty the Queen desires to convey to all the Branches of the Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, and to all who have in any way contributed to the "Shower of Gifts," the expression of her grateful thanks for the way in which they have seen fit to mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of her wedding day.
It is a source of peculiar gratification to Her Majesty that they should have made her silver wedding the occasion of special effort on behalf of the sick and wounded. No expression of loyalty towards her could take a form more pleasing to Her Majesty than this mark of sympathy with the sufferers in this terrible war—gratitude in which she shares to the full.
The Shower of Gifts has come from every corner of the globe, and from every quarter of the King's far-flung Dominions, and is of a volume and variety truly wonderful.
The Queen hopes that all who have contributed thereto will realize that Her Majesty is deeply touched by this manifestation of loyalty and good will.

From Labrador.
The following message from Capt. G. Barbour, of the Wren, was received Saturday by Minister of Marine Stone, from Makovic, via Fogo: "Made another trip to Ryan's Bay and found eight schooners there, the highest with 400 qts. Schooners have from 100 to 200, and they average from Farmyards to Ryan's Bay about 250. The good weather of late has helped the fishery considerably. No wrecks or loss of life for the season. Quite a number of schooners on the way south."

Circuit Court Returns.
Mr. Justice Kent and the members who attended on the Northern Circuit Court returned to town by the D. P. Ingraham Saturday afternoon. The Court was absent three weeks and visited settlements from Trinity to Conche on the N. E. Coast. A number of exemption cases were considered by the Court, however not nearly as many as anticipated. A bigamy case was heard at Little Bay, the accused being Mrs. Rhoda May. She pleaded guilty and gave as her defence that she believed her first husband dead, he having been absent for some years. She was sentenced to one year's imprisonment. At Troytown a case of atrocious assault was heard. The principals were a man of more than 60 years and a girl of tender age. Accused was proven not guilty. P. T. Halley was Crown Prosecutor in both cases and A. B. Morine defended the accused in the latter case.

Personal.
Mr. Harold Tessier, who was down north on business, returned to the city by yesterday's express.

The proper care of wet shoes.

The high cost of shoes makes it imperative to use every means to make them last as long as possible. Moisture is their worst enemy. It dries and cracks the leather, ruins their shape and shortens their life wear.

You can save yourself many a dollar by using "Fitall" Shoe Trees in your shoes. They not only immediately restore them to their original shape, but make your shoes wear longer and give you infinitely greater comfort.
