CHAPTER XXXIV.

It was a foolish—nay, a mad project, born of a confused brain reeling with terror and distress, and one which could have arisen only in the mind of a poor weak woman half-distracted with anguish and distress. Through it all, too, Sidney was painfully conscious of her own weakness. She knew that such a journey, undertaken alone and in such weather, was an almost impossible undertaking for a delicate woman who the previous day could not have walked half a mile and who could hardly bear a sudden noise without fainting; but she felt that she would find strength enough for her purpose, no matter at what cost.

Presently she heard the carriages rolling homeward from the ball, and Dolly's return. Agnes Burton was staying in the house; but Jessie had gone home with Lady Agnes and her brothers. With all her senses sharpened and quickened she heard them come quietly up-stairs, and the low hushed tones in which they spoke, not to disturb Sidney, and there was a soft laugh or two, doors softly closed, and then all was quiet again.

The night wore on; gradually the note of the rolling carriages died away, and a great solemn stillness reigned over the town. Under Sidney's windows the Parade was silent and deserted, the lamps were burning brightly in long straight rows. In the earlier part of the night there was the monotonous plash of the wavelets upon the beach; but soon that died away as the tide receded, and all was still. All through the night-hours Sidney sat, waiting for the coming dawn, still and motionless in the window-seat, wrapped in her warm gown. She was too absorbed to feel the cold or to be nervous at the intense stillness. Once or twice she started and shivered as the monotonous heavy step of the policeman going his rounds struck upon her ear, but otherwise she sat motionless.

When the day dawned, and the golden glory of the morning filled the sky, she rose, and, leaving the window, began to dress. It was rather a slow process—for Sidney had grown accustomed to dispense with the services of a maid, and her little fingers had lost their old deftness; but she managed fairly well; and, when Mason came with the morning cup of tea, she was startled and surprised to see her mistress up and dressed, sitting quietly reading.

As the maid entered, Sidney put aside her book and looked up with a smile. "Are you surprised, Mason?" she said, lightly. "I feel so much better and stronger this morning that I am going up to London by the early train. I have some business there. Will you tell them to get some breakfast at once and bring it up here?"

"Am I to go with you, ma'am?" asked Mason, who was to well-drilled a servant to show the astonishment she felt. "No; I am going alone. Do not disturb Mrs. Sandys," Sidney added hastily, feeling that she could not face Desille's remonstrances; and Mason went away, puzzled and bewildered, to aprise the sleepy household of her mistress's intention.

Strive as hard as she might, Sidney's attempt at breakfast was a failure. She forced herself to drink some tea; but she could not eat; she felt as if every morsel must choke her, and finally, giving up the attempt, she told Mason to order a cab. "One of the men can go with me to the station," she said quietly, as Mason put on her long sealskin coat. "I have left a note for Miss Daunt. Do not let her be disturbed—wait till she rings. She must be tired after last night."

"Are you sure you can go alone, ma'am?" Mason said gently, seeing how pale her mistress looked; and Sidney forced a smile as she took her gloves and answered with an effort: "Oh, yes; I shall be met in London."

It was only when she was in the train on her way to London that Sidney fully realized the difficulties in her way, and how weak and feeble she was to cope with them. The train was a full one, and among the many gentlemen hurrying up to town to their business Sidney dreaded to see some face she knew—some one who would recognize her and comment upon her early journey to town.

Thickly veiled as she was, more than one of her fellow travellers cast quick curious glances at the graceful woman in her sealskin and furs who sat so quietly in her corner, her hands linked together in her muff, her beautiful shining eyes gleaming through her thick veil. But no one recognized her, and she felt that her greatest danger of recognition was over now.

She was strangely frightened and helpless in the bustle and confusion of the arrival at the London station; but at last a friendly porter took pity on the shrinking, trembling little figure, and got a cab for her, and was the richer by a munificent "tip" for his civility. The train from Brighton had been somewhat late in arrival and there was a thick fog hanging over London, so that the drive to Paddington Station was a long and tedious one. Shivering in the corner of the comfortable four-wheeler, Sidney trembled at the delay, fearing she would lose the train for Ashford; but there was no help for it. The cabman did his best; but progress was necessarily slow, and it was with a sickening heart that Sidney glanced at her watch on arriving at Paddington and saw that it was eleven o'clock.

"The train for Ashford has just gone, ma'am," said the porter who came up to open the door of the cab. "There is another at 12.10."

Faint and sick with disappointment and anxiety, Sidney made her way to the waiting-room, and with a long despairing sigh sunk down on one of the cushioned seats. An hour and ten minutes wasted there waiting for a train! Oh, it was terrible; meanwhile Stephen might be in danger, and she would reach Easthorpe too late to warn him; too late to save him. Oh, it was terrible, she thought wildly, terrible beyond all words; and she was so powerless, so helpless! She could have cried out aloud in her anguish, and there was a hysterical lump in her throat which she could not get rid of, and which made her fear that her strength was giving away already.

Leaving the waiting-room, which was warm, even close, from the blasting fire and number of waiting travellers, she went out on to the platform and sat down wearily on one of the benches, pushing up her veil for a moment to let the cold keen air blow on her burning face and aching eyes, and looking wistfully at the clock.

How slowly the hands moved! The minutes seemed hours to her in her anxiety. A newspaper boy came to offer her newspapers; but she shook her head. She dared not buy a paper, lest she should see what she dreaded in it; she dared not chance it, knowing that her strength would not be equal to the shock. If once the hope of being useful to Stephen deserted her, she felt that her strength would fall her.

"It was this hope which was bearing her up now, strength the weak limbs, serving her to make she had set herself to do at the painful pace of the weary-looking woman as they sauntered up and down the platform; and, rather nervously, Sidney pulled down her veil again, and went back to the waiting-room.

Train after train came in with brights of travellers, and luggage-porters hurried hither and thither; cabs drove off loaded, or dashed up to the station with tardy travellers; trains left the station which Sidney looked after longingly, wishing the time would pass, and struggling against her anxiety and suspense as best she could.

How slowly the time went by! The minutes were leaden footed and crept along, the hours were laggards and would not pass. Would twelve o'clock never come? Why, it would be night when she got to Ashford—too late for anything, too late for Stephen to make preparations, too late for safety!

Twelve o'clock came at last, and with a sigh of relief, which was almost a sob, Sidney rose and left the waiting-room. She was trembling so much that she could hardly steady her voice sufficiently to ask for her ticket, and she fancied that the booking-clerk looked at her suspiciously as he asked her hurriedly whether she wanted a return or a single ticket. She had to repeat her answer twice before she made him understand that she wanted a single ticket, and she wondering if he noticed how the fingers were trembling as she took up the ticket.

It was an intense relief to find herself at last alone in a carriage and the train on the point of departure.

"Wherever The Recipe Calls for Milk"

St. Charles is pure, country milk just as it comes from the best cows in choice dairy districts. Nothing is added. Nothing is taken away except half of the natural water content which is "evaporated" so that this pure milk may be put up in convenient form. If you desire a milk of creamy richness for your recipe use St. Charles just as it comes from the can—or, you can make it go twice as far by bringing it to the consistency of ordinary milk—on adding an equal quantity of water. Try the tasty recipes in the Borden book. For your copy address The Borden Co. Ltd., T. A. MASON & CO., St. John's, Nfld., Agents.

Mr. Churchill on Saving

PASSING THE BUCK.
Mr. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was the principal guest at the annual banquet of the Engineers' Club at the Savoy Hotel, said he had been accused of not taking a sufficiently gloomy view of our affairs, and he had been called a rollicking optimist. He had not indulged in any sanguine prophecy; he had only protested against the weak, foolish, and injurious mood of panic-stricken pessimism.

He did not expect to be able to effect reductions in expenditure. It had been suggested in the newspapers that expenditure might be reduced immediately by 100 millions. I issue an invitation to the newspapers of this country (said Mr. Churchill), amicably but pointedly, if you have a plan for reducing expenditure by 100 millions, let us have the details. If that were done it would be of the greatest service, and it would be much more helpful than a great deal of indiscriminate abuse. I will undertake that any solutions of this problem which may reach me from the Press shall be very carefully and seriously studied and classified in order of merit, and I undertake to offer a prize to the successful competitor, and if need be I will in person place a wreath of laurels on the brow of any newspaper proprietor who is able to present a solution which, as subsequent events will show, is most helpful and most in accordance with what is carried into effect. (Cheers.)

A miners' strike or a railway strike next spring would, however, result in a serious set-back to the country's prosperity.

Drastic Steps Suggested FOR ENFORCEMENT OF U. S. PROHIBITION REGULATIONS.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—The conclusions of the Anti-Saloon League's "enforcement crisis" convention were summed up last night in resolutions which "insist that the people of the country have the right to expect that the secretary of the treasury shall manifest equal concern to secure efficient enforcement of the prohibition law as to secure the collection of income and other taxes."

WHAT THEY WOULD HAVE.
A number of definite recommendations for strengthening prohibition enforcement legislation were announced:

Placing all prohibition appointments under civil service.
Deportation of aliens convicted of liquor violations.
A law directing all liquor, whenever obtained of its legal status.
A law making it a felony to forgo or use forged liquor permits.
A status authorizing the president to use designated ships and officers of the navy to prevent smuggling.
A nominal tax on cereal beverages and industrial alcohol.

Continuation of the appropriation for posters for law observance and enforcement.
Each local community has equal responsibility for enforcement of the prohibition law, the resolution declared, "but we cannot agree to any policy that minimizes the obligation of the federal government."

"We challenge the legality and patriotism of these association against the prohibition amendment," said one resolution, "which recognizing its inability to secure a repeal of the amendment, seeks to repeal the laws to make it effective."

FOREIGN LIQUOR DEALERS.
"We decline to accept the wet ultimatum," said one resolution, "that the present plan of enforcement is final and that if it is not a complete success, the law will be modified. We submit to these foreign liquor dealers' financing attacks on the constitution of this country, that they had better spend their ill gotten gains on relieving drink-caused poverty at home instead of aiding a minority of law breakers in the United States."

The consolidation of prohibition enforcement agencies into one governmental department with augmented forces in the coast guard and dry staffs, and the faithful officers of the law who have upheld the constitution, were commended by the convention.

Charming the Eye

WHY ARTIFICIAL SILK TRADE IS DEVELOPING.

Sir Edwin Stockton, ex-president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, told a Press representative yesterday that he was convinced that the growing expansion of the artificial silk industry would bring back to Lancashire the prosperity which a short time ago seemed hopelessly lost. He said:

"The introduction of artificial silk into our cotton products means that we shall be able to invest those products of our British looms with the very qualities in which they have been deficient. Brightness, lustre, and colour—all lacking before—can now be imported.

"By running a few stripes of artificial silk through a piece of cotton cloth we turn a utility product into an article of adornment at a cost that is trifling. We thus present something to charm the eye and to appeal to the little bit of vanity that is in every one of us.

"That is one of the reasons why the industry is developing so rapidly."

Attempt to Blow Up Statue

Berlin—Thousands of people passed in front of the Kaiser Wilhelm I memorial statue recently and gave no particular attention to two workmen who, with chisel and hammer, were doing something to the pedestal.

One of them was smoothing a cornice and the other was making a hole in the side. As they continued working after nightfall, suspicion was aroused, and it was discovered that no order for repairs to the statue had been given. It is stated that they were Communists, who intended to put explosives through the hole in the pedestal and blow up the memorial.

A Woman's Devotion

Mrs. Williams, aged 81, who 20 years past has stood in Lord Street Southport, selling nonsays and other articles for the benefit of blinded and wounded soldiers and sailors, has just ceased these charitable efforts owing to age and infirmity. Day after day, Sundays included, and in all sorts of weather, she had carried on her work and in eleven years she collected more than £10,000 for St. Dunstan's.

A WOMAN'S SUFFERING

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Verdun, Montreal, Quebec.—"I am one of thousands who have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have great faith in it. I can safely say it has relieved my troubles and I shall never be without a bottle of it in my house. Since my last baby was born I suffered from pains and backache and would feel as tired I could not do anything in my home. Since I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine I feel so different. I recommend it to all my friends and hope it will cure other women who are suffering from the troubles I had."—Mrs. THOMAS H. GARDNER, 821 Evelyn Street, Verdun, Montreal, Quebec.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for the new mother. It is prepared from roots and herbs, contains no harmful drugs and can be taken by the nursing mother. Its worth in restoring the mother to normal health and strength is told again and again in just such letters as Mrs. Gardner writes. A recent canvass of women users of the Vegetable Compound shows that 88 out of every 100 women taking the medicine are benefited by it. They write and tell us so. Such evidence entitles us to call it a dependable medicine for women. It is for sale by druggists everywhere. C

"Printing Isn't Expensive If You Pay Enough For It"

The task which business stationery has to perform is to convey a message. That is its primary purpose. But it has another. It should convey an atmosphere—a personality—which identifies the business it represents, and it should convey that atmosphere or personality so convincingly, so pleasingly, so substantially, that it makes the same kind of favourable impression that a good salesman or a fine office does.

Business stationery which fails in this particular is too expensive to use, because it is not doing the whole job. That's why printing isn't expensive if you pay enough for it.

We have lately installed an embossing machine which produces beautiful glossy or dull relief work on plain type printing that defies actual die or plate embossing in appearance.

A trial order will convince you of its excellence.

British Government Stability

At a time when much is heard of the dangers of a Communist upheaval in Great Britain, there is an air of obstinate stability about His Majesty's Government which other European administrations may well envy. So much brotherly love was generated at Locarno that it comes as a shock to the average British observer to see within a week a French Government tottering, a German Government hedged round with party difficulties which may obstruct its signature of the Pact, and the Council of the League of Nations hastily summoned to deal with the war activities of two Balkan states. While, however, the French position is so tense that a Cabinet Minister bleeds at the nose and a gentleman calls at the Ministry of War to exhibit a machine for meeting the Budget deficit, British ministers quickly pursue the usual autumn campaign in the country, with the exception of the Foreign Minister who has crossed the Channel once more on a peace errand. On November 16 the British Parliament will have its opportunity to confront the Government with the accumulated grievances of a fourteen weeks' recess. Will this produce haemorrhage on the Treasury Bench? It is unlikely.

Question of Prince's Visit to Ireland Revived

DUBLIN, Nov. 15.—The question as to when the Prince of Wales is likely to make his long contemplated visit to the Irish Free State has been revived here. The belief prevails that in all probability he may be expected early next year, although no official announcement has yet been made on the subject.

In connection with his visit the question is also being discussed as to how far the heir apparent to the British throne may be utilized for international considerations. Apart from the prospective visit to Ireland, it is thought here that if the Locarno pact is ratified, the British government may consider it advisable before a very great while that he also should pay a visit to Germany.

Taxation in the Channel Islands

The Channel Islands enjoy an enviable immunity from taxation, and are much favoured as a place of residence by Government pensioners and people with moderate unearned incomes. Products Co. in the Humber Area. The Reid Company, in addition to the lands already vested in the Products Company, were to transfer to timber rights over at least 1,500,000 acres of land economically situated as regards the site of the proposed mill. The Reid Company did not at that time have that quantity of timber lands or timber rights and some of the land had to be subject to lease and options held by others. It was necessary, therefore, to free these lands of the leases and options and to obtain other lands suitably located, in order to carry out the scheme. With this view Mr. H. D. Reid called Mr. Conroy, on January 31, 1921. "I have all the available timber West coast, do all you can try to procure cancellation options on all Reid lots and also obtain options for nominal amounts on all other timber lands economically situated." On February 10, 1921, he called as follows: "Want to buy all the timber on the West coast from Port aux Basques, to Hawkes Bay," and on the 19th March, 1921, he called: "Of the two million acres we are only sure of the following Reid lots amounting to 772,486 to which can be added lots 213, 214, estimated at 85,000 acres, but must know exact average Fisher's lot 34,240 acres and Howley lots 487,920 acres you must therefore secure option lowest price in cash and shares to purchase timber rights on extended payments in order to make up two million acres, this is imperative, telegraphically and immediately what is your opinion as the success of the scheme depends on this." Acting on these instructions, Mr. Conroy directed negotiations for the cancellation of the leases and leases on the Reid lands and to secure timber rights over such additional lands as were available in order to complete the two million acres. The Products Co. was then a subsidiary of the Reid Company and had a capital of $21,000,000 divided into 210,000 shares of $100 each, all of which, with the exception of directors' shares were owned, fully paid, by the Reid Company. Mr. Blakstad was to find the money to pay for the timber rights and the establishment of the mill on the Humber, in return

FRENCH ORGANDIE Writing Paper

The Reid Company would transfer to him a majority of the capital stock of the Products. Mr. Blakstad's original intention was to raise money through his own associates and financial connections in the city of London, but later the conditions of the money market made this difficult. Under these circumstances, the Trust which had been negotiating with the Armstrong Whitworth Company for the construction of the works contemplated, brought Mr. Blakstad into touch with that Company and succeeded insofar as interesting it in the financial side of the scheme that it co-operated with Mr. Blakstad, through its financial agents, in his efforts to raise the money required. They were, however, advised that the money could not be raised unless the Government of Newfoundland was prepared to guarantee the payment of interest and the provision of a Sinking Fund for the redemption of the principle of any issue of bonds that might be made. The Trust discussed with Mr. Warren, Attorney General, and Mr. Coaker, Member of the Government, a proposal that the Government should give this guarantee, but they thought that before the proposal was brought before the Government, the scheme should be more definite than it was at that time. The matter, therefore, was postponed for later consideration. The Armstrong Whitworth Co. in order to assist in the negotiations with the Government, furnished the Trust with a provisional memorandum setting forth in general terms, what they thought the construction contract with the Products Company should provide. The Trust also obtained, through the assistance of the Armstrong Whitworth Co. the opinions of financial firms in the city of London in reference to the raising of a loan with Government Guarantee of interest and sinking fund.

On the 5th of April the parties had reached an agreement which was put in writing. This agreement is contained in three documents. The first is an agreement by the Reid Co. to sell to the Products Co. the right to cut and remove pulpwood and other timber over certain land specified in the schedules amounting to about 2,000,000 acres together with the water powers in the Humber River watershed for $250,000—$222,000 to be paid in cash and $232,000 to be paid in debenture stock, part of an issue of $500,000 to be issued by the Products Co., the Products Co. to give the Reid Co. the mineral rights in that part of the land leased to it in 1915 in consideration of $2,000,000 fully paid, shares of the common stock of the Mines & Forests and of 20 p.c. of all further issues of its shares. The whole contract was conditional on (1) The Government of Nfld. guarantee that the payment of the interest and provision of a sinking fund for the redemption of the debentures, and (2) the fulfillment by Mr. Blakstad of his obligation under a contract of even date between him and the Products Co. The second and third agreements were supplementary to the first. The second agreement was between the Products Co. and Mr. Blakstad and it was agreed that both parties would use their best endeavours to procure the Government guarantee of the interest and sinking fund for the redemption of $5,000,000 debenture stock to be issued by the Products Co.; that Mr. Blakstad would use his best endeavours to procure the underwriting of the first issue of $2,500,000 of the said debenture stock; and that Mr. Blakstad would become chairman or Managing Director of the Co. The third agreement was between Mr. H. D. Reid, President of the Reid Co., and Mr. Blakstad. It provided that both parties would use their best endeavours to obtain the Government guarantee; that upon the completion of the purchase under the first agreement, Mr. Reid would transfer to Mr. Blakstad $5,500,000 common stock of the Products Co. and upon the first allotment of the further debenture stock of the same series after the allotment of the first issue of $2,500,000, Mr. Reid would transfer to Mr. Blakstad a further amount of $5,500,000 worth of the same stock. Upon the signing of these agreements it was necessary to enter into negotiations with the Government of Newfoundland to procure its guarantee of the interest and sinking fund of the proposed debenture issue of the Products Co. and to make up any deficit required to make up the right to cut timber over the full quantity of 2,000,000 acres of land. Both these matters would have to be attended to in Newfoundland. Mr. H. D. Reid, accompanied by Mr. Blakstad and Mr. Greenwood left for Newfoundland on April 6th. Mr. Greenwood was sent over by the Trust "to direct the local negotiations and keep both sides in full accord so as to avoid any delay in arriving at conclusions."

On the same day upon which the agreement with Mr. Blakstad were signed, an exchange of letters took place between Messrs. Thomson and Greenwood and MacDonald personally and Mr. Blakstad and between them personally and Mr. H. D. Reid. Mr. Reid wrote to Messrs. Thomson, Greenwood and MacDonald saying that on behalf of the vendors, the Reid Co., in any arrangement to be consummated to pay for the personal services rendered and to be rendered by them in connection with the disposal of the pulp, paper, and power proposals on the West and North Western parts of Newfoundland, to pay to them to be equally divided between them, a commission of 10 p.c. the net proceeds to the vendors from the sale of the rights and interests in connection therewith and that the Reid Co. would accept drafts for $400 a month from March 14, 1921 to Oct. 21, 1921 to cover part of the expenses incurred by them. This agreement is referred to as the "personal commission agreement." In the exchange of letters between Mr. Blakstad and Messrs. Thomson, MacDonald, and Greenwood, Mr. Blakstad undertook in consideration of the services they had rendered at his request, in relation to the financial arrangement for the development of the Nfld. Products Co. to transfer or procure to transfer to each $500,000 of the shares of the Products Co. out of the second sum of $5,500,000 to be received by him under his agreement with Mr. Reid and in consideration of these transfers to them, Messrs. Thomson, MacDonald and Greenwood, Mr. Blakstad undertook to hand Mr. Blakstad, one-third of any debenture stock of the Products Co. or cash received by them from Mr. Reid or from the Reid Co. under the personal commission agreement. On the same day Messrs. Thomson, Greenwood and MacDonald wrote Mr. H. D. Reid informing him of these agreements and enclosing a copy of the letters that had passed between them and Mr. Blakstad. In reply, Mr. Reid wrote to each of them stating that he had con-

Leviathan's Surgeon Advises Treatment by Wireless

New York, Nov. 10.—The giant liner Leviathan arrived in port to-day twenty-four hours late and minus her wireless aerial which went by the boards Saturday in a hurricane off Cape Race. She brought in the tale of another epic of the sea in which a little oil tanker, one of the jaunty pyramids of the deep, was the heroine. Saturday morning the Leviathan was barely making steege way in the face of mountainous waves when from the air flashed the wireless message: "Bridge wing gone in violent hurricane. Stack wrecked. Entire mid-section craved. Navigation instrument carried away. Captain Holmes seriously hurt."

It was from the W. D. Anderson, a 3688 ton tanker that might have been set on the deck of these 59,865 ton Leviathan. "Shall we stand by?" the liner asked. The little tanker, 200 miles away, did not immediately answer the Leviathan's query. A short time later: "Captain's leg caught under wheelhouse. No feeling except when moved. Cannot be extricated. Using local anesthetic. Advise. Can you give us medical advice?" "Place pillows about and under captain's leg," Mr. G. B. Whitmore, the Leviathan's surgeon, wirelessed. "Keep the member hot by some means or other and discontinue other treatment."

"Thanks," flashed back immediately. For several hours the W. D. Anderson was not on the air. Finally another message came through: "Underway." It said: "Boat's compass badly damaged, but think we can use. Captain's leg not broken. No assistance required. Thanks." A few minutes later came the last word. "Steaming for the States. See you there. Goodbye."

Baldwin Refuses to Berate France

POINTS OUT THAT IN SYRIA SHE HAS A TASK OF IMMENSE DIFFICULTY.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Prime Minister Baldwin, addressing a large political gathering at Aberdeen last night spoke hopefully of the prospects of permanent peace in Europe as a consequence of the Locarno Treaty, child of Greece and Bulgaria for their recent bickerings and refused to pass judgment on France for her conduct in Syria in view of "our own shortcomings."

"The treaties signed in Paris were not treaties dictated by the victor to the vanquished," said the Prime Minister. "Through seven years of purgatory, an intermediate state of neither peace nor war, we have all been seeking means of bringing the peoples of Europe towards a general settlement. I believe the Locarno Conference, if ratified, will procure peace in Western Europe and show the rest of Europe the road along which peace can be obtained."

"If we can once convert the Rhine from being a frontier full of threat and menace into a peaceful highway, we will have transformed the life of Europe for this generation and for generations to come. If the signatories honestly observe it, not in a particularist or nationalist spirit, but as good Europeans and citizens, world peace in the West is assured. The need of the nations for the League has been clearly demonstrated in the past few weeks. Two nations, Greece and Bulgaria, who are members of the League and were pledged not to go to war, allowed their tempers to get the better of them. The machinery of the League was set in motion without any hostile delay and the countries in question were warned into reasonable courses and made to realize, as all countries ought to realize, that war was not merely local but that any one who broke the peace of Europe in however remote a corner of the continent was an enemy of civilization and the whole of Europe."

"Not only in the Balkans but beyond the confines of Europe there are parts of the world where anxiety is being caused to-day. There may be critics of the League who may point to the contrast between the quick action that has just been taken and perhaps want of quick action in other directions. I have observed in some quarters a demand that I should pass summary judgement on the conduct of our allies in their mandated territories. Our censure of wrongdoers should be tempered by remembrance of our own shortcomings, and a full sense of the difficulty imposed on the great powers by the mandatory system."

"Have you seen Danny Fox lately?" asked Uncle Lucky as he drove past the kind Policeman Dog on the corner of Lettuce Avenue and Pumpkin Square, just as I finished yesterday's story. "Haven't seen him for a couple of weeks," answered the good, kind protector of law and order in Rabbitville. "Hope you won't meet him." "So do I," laughed back the brave old gentleman rabbit, as he turned up Cabbage Street towards the Shady Forest. "Des me, it makes me shiver," sighed pretty Lady Love from the back seat. "Just the mention of that old fox's name sends a chill down my back." "Don't worry, Mother," answered Little Jack Rabbit. "I have my popgun along. I'll shoot at him if he comes near." "Let's talk of something pleasant," suggested dear Uncle Lucky, turning down the Winding Trail that led through the Shady Forest. Just as they passed under the Big Chestnut Tree a big chestnut bur burst open, and out fell the plump, brown satin-skinned nuts. Bang! they struck the top of dear Uncle Lucky's old wedding stovepipe hat. "Who's throwing nuts at me?" he asked, stopping the Luckymobile quick as a wink, and maybe quicker. "Wait a minute," answered a voice, and down the tree trunk scrambled Squirrel Nutcracker. "I've been watching that big green bur for several days, waiting for Jack Frost to open it." "Well, here are three nuts," laughed the old gentleman rabbit, picking them off the brim of his precious old hat. "Guess the others have rolled out of sight." "I'll find them," promised the nimble squirrel, and at once he set to work poking here and scratching there, under the leaves and twigs. But Uncle Lucky had no time to wait, and stepping up the Luckymobile, away he drove down the Winding Trail with Lady Love all smiles on the back seat, and Little Jack Rabbit, his eyes a twinkle and his nose a wrinkle, on the front seat. By and by, after a while and many a smile, and less than a mile, Uncle Lucky stopped at the gate in the Old Rail Fence. "Mrs. Cow, Mrs. Cow," he shouted. "Please let down the bars!" The next minute that obliging bovine lady deftly removed the bars with her horns, and over the Sunny Meadow drove the old gentleman rabbit with a "Thank you kindly" and a smile. Down the Old Cow Path he guided the Luckymobile until, not so long nor so very fat, he stopped right in front of the little gate in the old picket fence that ran all around the dear Old Bramble Patch. "Why, there comes Cousin Cottontail," cried Lady Love, as she hopped out. Sure enough, just over the hill-

Report of Charity Organization Bureau

In our columns to-day will be found the Report of the Charity Organization Bureau, which was formed last spring with the object of co-ordinating the work of the various churches and societies or of individual citizens in the matter of rendering help to those in need. The idea is to prevent overlapping and to make the distribution of funds and supplies as just and as effective as possible.

The Bureau does not dispense charity but acts in an advisory capacity. It investigates the circumstances of individuals applying for assistance, and directs attention to those who, too sensitive to make their needs known, are in particular deserving of aid. It also gathers data which bears on the real causes of poverty with a view of finding a way to remove them.

The need of such an organization has long been felt particularly by individual citizens, who are almost invariably at a loss to decide the merits of the case when their help is solicited. Frequently they give, not knowing whether the applicant is genuine or not, preferring to chance being imposed upon, rather than turn a deaf ear to a deserving suppliant, but when they learn that their generosity has been imposed upon, it tends to make them far less inclined to be open-handed in the future, and those requiring assistance suffer in consequence. In the same way the churches and societies have been hampered in their work of charity.

Here as in every other community in the world there is and there will continue to be a considerable number of citizens who must depend in some measure on the benevolence of those more happily circumstanced. In the smaller settlements the circumstances in each case are generally known, but in a city such as St. John's it becomes imperative to make the work of relief as systematic as possible in order to provide that the funds available are not misapplied.

At first thought it may seem unnecessary and even undesirable to apply a system to such a matter as the distribution of benevolences, but it must be remembered that it applies, not to the cases that are well known to be in need of assistance, but to those in which there is any doubt; it serves to lighten the lot of the former, and enables those to be exposed who choose to make a practice of mendacity and to live at the expense of the good nature of others.

The Report presented clearly indicates how fully the Charity Bureau has justified its existence since its inception, and it is in itself the strongest argument that can be put forward in favour of maintaining it. If further testimony is required of the efficacy of the system, it may be mentioned that it has been in operation for several years in Montreal and has been found to work admirably.

The local Bureau is fortunate in having as Secretary Miss Crawford, who for two years was associated with the Charity organization in Montreal. As will be observed also, the Executive consists of a number of ladies and gentlemen whose names are well known in connection with several of our welfare organizations. Their services are the best assurance of the success of the movement, provided only they have the full co-operation of the public.

Watch the Man On Your Left

A rule of the road concerning which there seems to be some confusion is that which defines the right of way.

Section 38 sub-section (a) of the Highways Traffic Act reads as follows:—

"Where two persons in charge of vehicles or on horseback approach a crossroad or intersection at the same time, the person to the LEFT hand of the other vehicle or horseman shall have the right of way"

Vehicles, for example, proceeding west along Water Street have the right of way over those entering the thoroughfare from the north.

Feildian Ass'n Bazaar

Final arrangements have been made for the Bazaar to be held in Feild College Hall to-morrow afternoon by the Feildian Ladies' Association, and it is anticipated that it will be well patronized. The stalls are many and the assortment of goods most select. The teas will be a feature which none should miss. The proceeds are for objects in which many are interested, the supplying of many requirements for the College and the providing of a recreation ground. Feildians, in particular, it is hoped, will turn up in strength.

Sale of Work

AT PRESBYTERIAN HALL.

The Young Ladies' Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church are holding their annual sale of work in the Presbyterian Hall on Thursday afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock, and judging by the preparations made by the workers, this year's sale promises to be the best success yet. The stalls will be filled with a splendid assortment of plain and fancy work, and presents suitable for Xmas all of which will be found at prices which will appeal to intending purchasers. The admission to the sale is ten cents. Afternoon teas will be served at 40 cents.

Report of Collision Incorrect

We have been asked to correct the report in the Morning News that the express wagon of the Valley Nurseries was hit by a motor car driven by R. Voisey yesterday afternoon, and the rear axle was broken off. Whilst it is true that the express met with an accident, it was not due to a collision. The mishap happened on Duckworth Street and Mr. Voisey was afterwards sent there by the Valley Nurseries to procure some articles which were in the express.

Magistrate's Court

The young man Fewer who was charged yesterday with being a disorderly person, but was released to the lockup, pending an investigation into the breaking and entering of the Dock office, appeared in court again this morning. Supt. O'Neill informed the court that for the present the police had not received sufficient evidence to place the defendant on trial. His Honor then released him under his own personal bond in the sum of $100.00. In the meantime he will be kept under close observation by the police.

A young man who gave his age as 18 1/2 years, was convicted of a breach of Section 25 of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, and also with being disorderly on the public street. He was fined $10.00 or in default 30 days imprisonment.

Judge Morris in passing sentence commented on the anomaly of having to impose a fine only on the accused who could not commit the offence without the co-operation of the Control Board, and he asked if there was sufficient supervision practised at the dispensing places. The practice of selling to minors, he said, is becoming altogether too prevalent, as no less than five cases have already been before him in one single week. Under the old Act, he said, the saloon proprietor who sold liquor to a minor would be summoned before court and dealt with, but in this particular case the minor who receives liquor from the Controller's Department and goes out on the street and gets drunk is prosecuted by the Board.

A drunk was fined $1.00 and blacklisted.

A man convicted of a breach of Section 24, sub-section 3 of the Alcoholic Liquors Act was fined $10.00 or in default 30 days imprisonment.

The charge of larceny of $512.00 and other articles from the residence of Mrs. J. D. Ryan preferred against a young man Saunders came up for summary trial this morning. Mr. J. G. Higgins, B.L., appeared for the accused and on his behalf entered a plea of "Guilty." Mr. W. J. Browne, B.L., for the Crown, called Head Const. J. Byrne, who stated the facts of the case as already reported. Judge Morris in passing sentence of twelve months' hard labor gave the prisoner some words of advice.

The Secretary of the Bureau is Miss Jean Crawford, who has had two years experience of social service work in Montreal in connection with the re-organization of the Montreal Diet Dispensary, which included the distribution of $11,000.00 for assistance to the poor and needy sick in Montreal and each case investigated fully.

The following is a short summary of what has been accomplished by the Bureau since its inception, viz:—

Information has been tabulated regarding 1553
 Cases referred to the Bureau for report 80
 (All these cases have been investigated).

Interviews and visits to homes . . 170
 Interviews with Societies employers and individuals in connection with such cases 220
 Children given warnings re begging on streets 16
 As a result of our report help was given to the extent of:—

Grocery orders 17
 Coal Orders 8
 Articles of Clothing 5
 Employment 18
 Medical attention, surgical cases, etc. 12
 A holiday for mother and children 2
 As a result of investigations made by the Bureau a woman and her two children were enabled to return to England.

Through the efforts of the Bureau one girl was helped after release from Penitentiary.
 Five children have been referred to the Probation Officer.

FINANCE.

Certain business houses agreed to finance the Bureau for a trial period of six months, and the following societies have also contributed for the same period: Dorcas Society, G.W.V.A., St. Vincent de Paul, and Child Welfare Association.

The Bureau is now more or less firmly established, but of course, cannot hope to continue unless it has the support of the public.

We think it must be obvious to all firms and individuals who are in the habit of dispensing charity, what measure of protection they will receive by having the services of the Bureau at their disposal, and we hope they will all become members and make full use of it.

Report of the Charity Organization Bureau

The Charity Organization Bureau came into being six months ago, and as there seems to be a certain amount of misunderstanding among the public as to the objects of the Organization, it will be, perhaps, as well to give a short summary of them here.

The objects are:—

1. To co-ordinate charitable work and by authentic information assist all charitable organizations and individual members in the distribution of their benevolence.
2. To discover those who are worthy of charitable relief and to express unceasingly mendicity.
3. To investigate and study conditions stringing rise to poverty with a view to discovering remedies.

The Bureau does not itself dispense relief but merely undertakes to investigate and report upon any cases referred to it by members. From its inception the Bureau has had the active co-operation of the Employment office, G.W.V.A., Child Welfare, St. Vincent de Paul, Dorcas Society, General Hospital, Patriotic Association, Girl's Industrial Home, all the churches and many individuals.

The following ladies and gentlemen comprise the Executive Committee of this organization, viz:—
 Mr. L. C. Outerbridge, Chairman; Mrs. R. A. Brehm, Vice President; Mr. F. W. Bradshaw, Hon. Treasurer; Messrs. W. A. Reid, C. F. Garland, T. V. Hartnef, Dr. Macpherson, Mr. R. H. Horwood, Mrs. V. P. Burke and Miss Anderson.

The Secretary of the Bureau is Miss Jean Crawford, who has had two years experience of social service work in Montreal in connection with the re-organization of the Montreal Diet Dispensary, which included the distribution of $11,000.00 for assistance to the poor and needy sick in Montreal and each case investigated fully.

G. W. V. A. Open Their Big Circus on Monday

It will be noted from our advertising columns that the much heralded War Vets' Circus opens on next Monday afternoon at the Prince's Rink. The eleven performers with their equipment and trained animals are on the "Rosalind" due early Thursday morning from New York, and it is claimed that this group of artists not only rank the highest in their profession but are the cleverest aggregation that ever visited Newfoundland.

We understand that for over two years the bringing to this country of genuine circus performers as a means of augmenting their too limited relief funds in aid of their distressed comrades and families, has been in contemplation by the G.W.V.A. It is impossible to get star performers in the Summer months as all the big shows are then on tour in the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Arrangements were just about to be completed for a Hippodrome Show last Fall when the untimely passing of the late Capt. Gerald Whitty upset the plans that the G.W.V.A. executive had made. This year as the result of much negotiations an agreement was entered into in August with Messrs. Joseph Hughes and S. Kitz whereby plans were formulated that in view of local unfamiliarity with the organization and presentation of such a stupendous and expensive innovation, that these gentlemen should be invited here to assist in the production of a regular head-liner Circus performance consisting of a series of stars who at this time of year are "just off the road"—to use a theatrical term. Both Messrs. Hughes and Kitz come highly recommended, and it may be of interest to our readers to know that they bring with them the very highest credentials. Amongst the successful circus productions which they organized by request were the G.W.V.A. exhibitions in Halifax, Charlottetown, and Moncton; the Halifax Exhibition and Masonic Fair; the Fredericton Exhibition, the Sydney Fair, the Fire Department's Show of P.E.I., and the St. Mary and St. Joseph's T.B.A. Societies of Halifax. Apparently the great secret of their various successes lies in the fact that they go directly to the "big tents" in the States for their performers.

The net proceeds of this latest of the War Vets' efforts will be devoted entirely to the relief of their distressed comrades, and in view of the assured excellence of their production it is felt that bumper houses will greet the performers from the opening night until the finish. The G.W.V.A. would like it distinctly understood that the admission fee of twenty-five cents covers the presentation of the entire vaudeville acts, and visitors to their Circus will positively be relieved from the annoyance of any solicitation whatever for extra funds, unless of course they care to patronize any of the concessions which are placed off the main promenade. Thus any investments of this nature will be purely voluntary.

The G.W.V.A. executive will handle all the receipts, and not only is the employment of local help being strictly adhered to but all prizes, souvenirs, etc., are being purchased from local merchants and city stores. In addition an artistic souvenir programme is being prepared for free distribution to visitors at the Circus which should prove a valuable medium for advertisers.

The Scottish Lord Rectorships

This is the busy season in connection with that anomalous post, the Lord Rectorship of a Scottish University. Lord Cecil has just delivered his rectorial address in Aberdeen; Mr. Baldwin, within a few days will have given his in Edinburgh; Mr. Austen Chamberlain has been elected successor to Lord Birkenhead at Glasgow by a few hundred votes over Mr. G. K. Chesterton; and St. Andrew's are busy choosing Mr. Kipling's successor. At St. Andrew's there is rarely a contest, for that ancient University eschews politics and for many years has selected a scholar or man of letters. Elsewhere there is a vigorous political contest which produces very curious results. Generally speaking there is always a Conservative majority amongst the Scotch students, but if a Liberal is eminent enough, he is elected after a few failures. The method of election is survival of the old holdings. All the morning of the polling day there is a desperate faction fight with pease-meal, and other missiles, in which each party endeavours to prevent the other from voting. The result is torn coats and black eyes on a huge scale. Then about an hour before the poll closes cease-fire is sounded, and many battered students limp into the polling booths, while quiet people who have taken no part in the morning's fighting arrive to record their votes. The chief function of the Lord Rector is to deliver a rectorial address, and the chief aim of his constituents seems to be to prevent him from being heard when the day comes. More than one famous rectorial speech has been delivered in practically dumb show, but it is printed afterwards and so preserved to the world. The ordinary politician delivers usually a casual and jejune discourse on some general topic of which he cannot be said to be a master. St. Andrew's follows the wiser practice, so far as getting a good rectorial address is concerned, as the recent performances of Mr. Kipling and Sir James Barrie bear witness.

Don't wait until December 25th, to see Father Xmas, come to Cochrane Street Lecture Room and see him on Nov. 18th. —nov17.11

Majestic Theatre

Another packed house greeted the Majestic Theatre last night. The stellar attraction Mem-O-Rea gave another of his special readings to the audience. The show, which was a remarkably good one, opened up with "Love's Bargain," starring Marjorie Daw. "Love's Bargain" is one of those few pictures which pleased everybody.

Miss Rita Johnson, the champion international dancer, is all that she claims to be. According to public admission, she is by far the best in her line seen here for a long while.

Men-O-Rea revealed many secrets last night to his hearers and disclosed many surprising facts and many compliments were paid to his extraordinary ability.

To-night the same programme will be repeated, and there will be only one complete show, commencing at 8 o'clock.

To-morrow afternoon, there is a special matinee for ladies and children, and Eileen Johnson, the little star, daughter of the international dancer, will dance and will also dance to-morrow night.

The Pony Contest is now an assured success. Much interest is displayed and hundreds of thousands of votes are polled, and everyone is asking "who is going to win the Shetland Pony?"

Keep posted on the arrival of "North of 36," greater even than "The Covered Wagon."

Trans-Atlantic Steamship Rates to be Increased

Paris, Nov. 10.—The North Atlantic Conference composed of representatives of steamship lines in the trans-Atlantic service cleared up the chief business of its annual meeting this evening and most of the delegates left Paris.

E. E. MacNeary, of the United States Lines, said the Conference did not consider the inclusion of the Italian steamship companies and that no important rate decisions were taken. He said, however, that there was a strong movement in shipping circles to include the Italian line and the Sabando to enter the Conference and subscribe to its rate agreement.

It is learned that trans-Atlantic rates for tourist class accommodation probably will be raised, but other rates will be left unchanged.

The three generations will be present at the Harvest Hall in Cochrane Street Lecture Room. —nov17.11

Art Before Adam

The South African Bushmen, who are actually negroid Aurochians—surviving black Stone Age men—have a similar way of picturing animals of the chase in hidden "holo" spots.

The conclusion of anthropologists, based on the analogy of these Bushmen, the Australian aborigines, and the Eskimo, and a quantity of evidence too technical to be instanced here, is that these drawings and paintings were done by tribal medicine men or sorcerers, as a "magic" to bring good hunting.

The representation of the beast put a spell upon it. Among other engravings you noticed in Font de Gaume were some odd looking cross-cross marks, like a rough sketch of a bishop's crown.

These "scintillas," as they are called, were thought to have represented homes prepared by the sorcerers for ancestral spirits. (Travelling in Northern Asia, I found that the modern Siberian shamans, or witch-doctors, prepare and place out in wild places little wooden "nesting-boxes" where dwell ancestral spirits).

Few of these scintillas have been found. They may have been reserved for the spirits of chiefs, or sorcerers, or, most likely, perhaps, for the gods of hunting and hill, forest, and stream—the Great Spirits, as the Red Indians called them.

Another curious thing about the cave pictures is that the occasional human figures or human faces are so bad. The animals, for the most part, are as excellent as anything that the best modern artist can do. There is not a single well-executed complete engraving of a Stone Age man on the cave walls.

What there are, are disappointing. Instead of pictures of a fierce, tusk-head fellow wearing a fur shirt and brandishing a hefty stone axe or club, which is what we find entitled to expect, we find school-boyish scrawls of what look much more like naked monkeys, in clambering attitudes, or the sort of "human" heads that Tommy achieves at the age of two.

Such figures of the ladies of the time are gross nudities such as are periodically inflicted on the Continental public by the "comic" papers of France and Germany. Another mystery is the life-sized impressions of human hands to be found here and there.

We were not able to find those which are said to exist in the cave. We have just explored, but there are quite a number farther south, in the Cavern of Garzas. "Cave hands" are of two kinds. Sometimes the artist just dipped his hand in black paint and smacked it on to eagled fingers, on the wall and ran round its outline with a line of red or black paint, from a brush held in the right hand.

Now there is a very interesting thing about some of those Garzas hands. Some of the fingers lack a joint or two. The missing joints may have served to console a wolf or hyena for losing the rest of the too-gleeful human dinner they had chosen, but they may have been lopped off as a method of ensuring a near relative, a practice that exists to-day among some of the primitive Melanesian islanders of the Entrecasteaux group, north-east of New Guinea.

Well, let us get back, to dejeuner. Combarelles, which we will explore this afternoon, lies a mile-and-a-half east of Font de Gaume. We follow the road along under the south cliff of the Beas valley until it dips, on the right, to admit a tiny shallow valley consisting of a meadow flanked by low cliffs and backed by rocks. A hundred yards up, on the right, a little long, low farmhouse nestles under the rock. And next to it is a short hall-like cave used as a store-house for farm tools.

Sheaves of grain are piled at one side of the entrance, which is overhung by a cluster of ivy. A pleasant tranquil pastoral scene. Who would suspect that from the left of that rock barn, with its familiar cluster of farm gear—a plough, a cart, bundles of brushwood, sacks, and tools—ad sprang—a deep fissure that is one of the most extraordinary places on earth?

Its setting is perfect. A bright-faced woman leaves her toddling baby son and comes forward to meet us. "Do Messieurs desire to explore the cave? Madame must be careful of her frock and hat, then; for this is no place for a conventional stroll."

"It doesn't take us long to find that out. Combarelles is called a cave. It isn't a cave. It is a crack, a crack where thin men have to creep single file and fat men cannot creep at all. It runs into limestone hill for a third of a mile, and most of the way you are crouching in the attitude of a crouper, hoop. Now and again come blessed moments when you can stand up, with your head among the stalactites that come down from the mysterious blackness overhead like giant, frosted carrots.

You have to creep a long way before you come to the pictures—but they are worth it. Nearly all the pictures are engravings, mainly the work of early Magdalenian men. They are heavily indented into the rock and are much clearer than the late Magdalenian engravings in Font de Gaume, which were done probably thousands of years later. The wild horses are undoubtedly clear and spirited. Many of them have what my nephew, speaking of irascible mules, calls "that rude look!"

The engraving was all done with stone tools, many of which were found when Captain and Breuil first explored it. The average person does not give Stone Age man enough credit for the skill and ingenuity with which he fashioned his implements.

Of the gravers (flint chisels), more than 30 distinct types were made. As for Magdalenian man's bone needles, they are as perfect as any of modern Sheffield's products, though, of course, they do not run down to such small sizes.

Searching with our electric torches and candles on forked sticks we had depicted more than a dozen mammoths, numbers of heads of men or monkeys, a human leg, a bear, a lion, a wolf's head, oxen, bison, reindeer, and other creatures.

Why, you may ask, are there no rats and mice, dogs or cats? Bats and mice certainly existed in those days, and must have been familiar to early Stone Age man. Had he been a farmer with rickyards to be ravaged he might well have asked the sorcerer to put a spell on them. But he had not yet taken to agriculture or the domestication of animals; had he done so we should have found some remains of his gear and bones of his herding dogs and farm beasts. He was still a hunter, pure and simple.

The absence of a good many other familiar creatures from among those pictured in Stone Age caves is additional evidence that the pictures were "magic," not merely decorations or "art for art's sake." No Stone Age artist made a picture of a snail, for instance. There was no need to "put a spell" on a snail before he could catch it. He could do with all the spells the sorcerer felt able to provide, however, when it came to chasing fleet wild horses, hence all these engravings of horses on the walls of Combarelles, and elsewhere. There are few pictures of dangerous wild beasts, for Stone Age man's policy towards them, as is that of savage to-day, was to let well enough alone and not to provoke combat.

He had enough trouble without looking for more by fighting wild beasts. There are practically no pictures of creatures not desirable as food. Bats are missing, nor are there badgers. Frogs and moles may have been eaten, but it would not have been worth having spells put on them, for any small boy could go out and catch them. Bird pictures are very rare.

Stone Age man could hardly have been expected to bother himself much about birds as a food supply. They meant too much stalking for too small a result. You see how the evidence all seems to bear out the "magic" hypothesis.

There are a few pictures of what may be flowers, leaves, plants, and branches. Perhaps these were prized for their medicinal qualities or, perhaps, their representation was symbolic or connected with some of the practices or ideas of pagan mysticism.

But the afternoon is closing in. Let us go back to the inn, to dine and sleep. To-morrow we will go up into the hills and look for the third great Stone Age art gallery, the cavern of La Mouthe.

There have been some strenuous and picturesque goings-on in sleepy little Les Eyzies in recent centuries. As you pass through the village you see on a terrace of the cliff above, a rebuilt castle dating from the time of William the Conqueror. When the English troops were fighting down here, five centuries ago, they took it; and had it knocked down on the face of the cliff, you see the black mouths of tunnels, laboriously excavated by the medieval villagers as places of refuge when waves of war swept over the neighborhood. They clambered up on long ladders which they pulled in after them, and were quite snug and secure. Across the bridge of the Beas you turn to the right, to-day.

but after a couple of hundred yards you bear off to the left, where a great mushroom-shaped buttress of cliff bastions the entrance to a narrow, lateral valley resembling that up which we found Font de Gaume yesterday. This looming bastion, which juts out over the road, at a height of 100 feet or so, is called the Rocher de la Peine. Villagers who committed offences against the local lord in medieval times were politely but firmly persuaded to "walk the plank" off the edge.

Up the valley of La Gaubere we climb, on a rough track terraced out half-way up the hill. I have never seen butterflies teem as they do along this rocky track, among the tufts of thyme. The place is alive with glinting, flickering colour—pale and dark brown argues, and a big strong-winged fellow like a super-graying, who comes boldly down the middle of the road as if he owned it.

It is a hot climb, for the valley holds the sun, and heat radiates from the rocks. Presently, the meadow below narrows and ceases, merging into shady woods of chestnut and hazel. There are no cliffs. It might be any upland landscape in Brittany or Sweden. The man with the lamp leads us round a spur of the wood to where, by a couple of plum trees, the meadow dips in a shallow dell. At the back of the dell is a loosely-made wall of whitish rock, and in the middle of it, a stout door.

The short cave here, the shape of a high cottage roof, was used, like the vestibule of Combarelles, as a barn. In enlarging it the farmer's excavations brought to light a low tunnel leading out of the back. The mouth had evidently collapsed and become completely hidden before the time of neolithic (late Stone Age) man, for in upper layers of the yard of successive strata of soil and stalagmite that was lifted from the floor of the vestibule were found numerous Neolithic remains, though in the long newly-revealed cave traces of only palaeolithic occupation were discovered. Under the late Stone Age settles in the vestibule, and separated by a layer of stalagmite, Riviere found early Stone Age implements, including a fine sandstone lamp, still blackened at the side of the shallow bowl, where the pre-Adamite owner had laid the wick of moss or dead wood, the root end of which lay in the congealed fat or tallow. This lamp was decorated with a carved ibex.

But let us enter. You will find La Mouthe, narrow as it is, well lit with drooping stalactites that must have prompted many an early Stone Age "cousin-word" from the lips of artist-sorcerers who, like us, occasionally omitted to stoop quite far enough, and muddy undertook, in the conduit trench through which you wend your way, more pleasant to explore than Font de Gaume or Combarelles. The air is fresher and there are fewer of the narrow through which you have barely room to squeeze.

There are numbers of very clear pictures, especially in a sort of little ante-chamber or alcove half-way down, on the right, where several mammoth and ibex and reindeer are to be seen. Further along, in the main corridor, are bison and wild horses, ox and mammoth and reindeer.

Is there anything like this in England, you ask, as we tramp down the chestnut woods, to Les Eyzies. No. No prehistoric wall paintings or engravings have yet been found in Britain. We have two copies of "art mobilier," each a horse's head scratched on bone. One was brought to Professor Boyd Dawkins by a person who claimed to have found it in the Robin Hood Cave at Crosswell Crags, in Derbyshire, forty-six years ago. The second was brought to the Science Master of Sherborne School, in Dorset, nine years ago, by a couple of boys of that seat of learning. Personally, I think it was "a plant" on somebody's part, though the finders themselves doubtless acted in all good faith.

We have no proof that Magdalenian man, the great race that produced spirited cave artists, ever lived in England, though there is reason to suspect that detachments of him may have obtained a foothold in Dorset, Devon, or Cornwall in very late Magdalenian times by when this "putting a spell" magic had been dropped. (By the time West European man had emerged from his late Magdalenian phase, through the Azilian phase, to the Neolithic, or late Stone, phase, he had stopped painting and engraving pictures).

Still ancient anthropology is one of the sciences over which no one but a fool is dogmatic. New evidence, tending to shed light on the dim red dawn of man, keeps cropping up, now here, now there, now out yonder. It is quite within the bounds of possibility that one of these days an accident like the digging out of the fox on that rocky hill-side of North West Spain, which revealed the palaeolithic art gallery of Altamira Cave, or the La Mouthe farmer's enlargement of his barn in the side of that rock-backed woodland dell, may reveal, in England, one of these marvellous links with our pre-Adamite ancestors.

Suggests a Few Lessons

ON "HOW TO USE THE NEW CARS."

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I would ask you to be good enough to let me say a few words in connection with the new street car service. The cars, I think, are splendid and can hold 50 persons comfortably, are well lighted, heated and ventilated and travel very smoothly. The men who are learning to drive the cars are doing their best to be efficient, but under present conditions are badly handicapped. I noticed a lot of small boys travelling on Sunday for the novelty and as they pay their fares they have a perfect right to do so, but they were shouting at the top of their voices and opened nearly all the windows, to the discomfort of the other passengers. In some cases occupants took up unnecessary space in the seats, and the persons seated outside had their feet and legs out in the aisle. People getting in first did not move to the back and consequently the rear of the car was empty and the front crowded.

It is impossible for the operator to attend to his duties and control the passengers' behaviour, and I would suggest that for a few weeks, anyhow, until the cars are running properly and the novelty wears off, a second most of whom only do these things unthinkingly and explain to them what to do and also to always have the correct fare whenever possible. I saw one man taking 5 minutes to unload passengers, as very few had the correct fare. That five minutes may mean a late mark against employees who work at places where they have to check in on a time clock when they enter their place of business.

We have a chance now of a good car service and in the initial stage is the time to have it efficient and appreciated and make it a credit to the city and the company. Thanking you for space, I am,

Yours truly,
TRAVELLER.

Potato Situation in P.E.I. Discussed at Rotary

The regular luncheon of the Rotary Club was held yesterday with Rotarian C. H. Chandler in the chair. There was one guest, Mr. Reagh Tinney. There was no regular programme, but an informal round table discussion took place, in which Rotarian R. E. Mutch, Dr. MacMillan, President Jenkins and others participated.

Mr. Mutch, who was asked about the potato situation, said that the market this fall was somewhat phenomenal. The high prices realized here were unexpected, although some of the outsiders may have known they were coming before the local shippers did. The situation is gradually improving every day, the railway doing everything it can to relieve the congestion. "The embargo on American shipments is easing up loading, and if the present fine, mild weather continues for a few days, we will be pretty well out of the woods," said Mr. Mutch.

In answer to a question, why is there such a demand for Prince Edward Island potatoes this year, when last year you could hardly give them away, Mr. Mutch said that the situation resembles that of 1919. Early in the fall the market opened at 40c. and it was not until later nearing the close of navigation that the Americans realized their shortage, and the price increased rapidly, there being as high as $3.50 a bushel paid. This year the Americans jumped in much earlier in the season in a scramble to get all the potatoes they could.

I am not given to predictions, said Mr. Mutch, but I will make a prediction that you could hardly give them away in Prince Edward Island before the middle of next May when they are selling to-day. With all North America conserving potatoes the big shortage may be made up. There is no doubt a shortage exists. Two years ago European potatoes were kept out of the Cuban market and that tended to reduce the supply in the United States owing to the heavy shipments from that country into Cuba. The embargo still exists, but it is being reported that it may be lifted shortly. If so it is claimed that Cuban potatoes can be obtained in St. John's more cheaply than elsewhere.—Charlottetown Guardian, Nov. 15.

Prince Raps Flapper Style

Johannesburg, South Africa, Nov. 8.—The Prince of Wales has ruled against modern cropped femininity in less mannish women.

He confided his secret judgment to a woman, and the secret has met the usual fate after circulating confidentially in South African society since the Prince departed for Southampton.

A prominent woman asked the Prince what he thought of the modern girl.

"If you mean," Wales replied, "the close cropped, cigarette smoking, mannishly dressed, noisy girl one frequently sees in all countries, then I must confess that the modern girl does not appeal to me in the slightest."

Everybody Friend

TO THE FRONT ONCE MORE.
TO THE CIVIC ELECTORS OF ST. JOHN'S.

LADIES & GENTLEMEN—As you were kind enough to give me your valued support on the many previous occasions I sought election at your hands, I have decided to again solicit your esteem and confidence for four years more as one of your civic representatives.

During the several terms I have had the great honor of being a member of the Municipal Council Board I have, consistently practised the policy of conforming to your desires in so far as the civic revenue permitted.

I shall be very pleased indeed to again do my utmost towards bringing about many more essential improvements that are still necessary, and, therefore, feel that as you have so highly approved of my civic record in the past you will be pleased to again remember me on polling day.

A SPECIAL WORD TO THE LADY VOTERS.

You may have many friends to choose from ladies, but as a special favor will each one of you please be kind enough to record a vote for me.

James T. Martin

To The Electors of The St. John's Municipality:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

Having been requested by a large number of citizens and friends to place myself as a candidate in the forthcoming Municipal Elections, I have decided to comply with their request.

After making this decision, I promise, if elected, to give my best attention to all matters for the welfare and advancement of the City. In making this appeal to all taxpayers, and in the event of not being able to call on you personally, I ask for your vote and influence.

Respectfully Yours,

Kenneth Ruby.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

THE WOMAN WHO WINT-BACK SPEAKS.

"Would you go back?" h a s brought me many answers.

"Would you go back?" was my response to a Letter Friend who asked for an answer to the problem of the woman who finds her husband has been unfaithful and does not know whether to leave him or forgive him and go back.

Here is one from a woman who went back and wished she had not.

"Your talks mean so much to me and you have helped me so often that I wonder if there is anything you could possibly say that would help me now? 'Would you go back' has upset me. Honestly, if I had it all to go through again I don't know what I would do. Surely no man can be worth the mental agony I have endured for eight years.

She Just Wanted to Die.

"Eight years ago I went unexpectedly to my husband's office and discovered the situation that existed there. My husband came to my office the week that followed and confessed that he had been playing around with another girl, but that no actual sin had been committed. To him this was a point in his favor; to me the actual sin was insignificant.

"I could have ruined them both socially, but I had no desire to retaliate. I just wanted to die only I couldn't leave my baby. I could have gone home to my family. They would have been more than glad to have me and they would have given me a good home and given my boy a good education. But I went back to my husband because I thought my boy needed his father.

"We have four children now and they love their daddy and he loves them and me, too. He has never deceived me since that time. I am sure, and this is what hurts me so—I don't think I would care if he did. The situation has never been mentioned since and the girl no longer lives here. But never a day passes that I don't live over in my mind that dreadful time.

If She Had It To Do Again.

"Please don't think of me as morbid. I think friends would describe me as jolly and my home as happy. I adore my children and I feel, oh, so badly because I can't love my husband again. But something died that day that has never come back into my life again. And that, dear R.C., is why I am crying now. If I had it to do over again and no child to consider, I would run far away from everyone and never come back. For that is the easiest thing to do—and I think I would have been happier."

Of course she thinks she would have been happier.

Do we ever see the thorns in the path we didn't take? And of course she has lost something very precious. Any woman who finds that that beautiful time when a man could not see any but her has passed has lost something very dear to her heart. It is always a shock. Even when it is only a mild admiration for some other woman that makes her realize it. And when it expresses itself in an affair like this, of course something dies within her—her surety, some of her pride, some of her respect for her husband, and the golden glow of that belief that their love is different from other people's.

Let's Hear From the Woman Who Didn't Go Back.

She has lost something she can never get back, but is it right she should dwell on that loss day after day? Hasn't she a great deal left when she still has her husband's love and has her children and a home happy on the whole? I am afraid she is morbid in spite of what she says. I think she needs more courage, more adjustment to the facts of life, which are that no one has everything just as she or she wants it, and that the surest road to happiness is to expect too much of life.

She thinks she would have been happier if she could have run away from it all. Who knows? No one knows for sure but perhaps some woman who did just that will help this woman by telling her through my column whether that way was all happiness or not.

Wedding Bells

LEMESURIER-STEVENSON.

A very interesting wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Church, Summer Road, Harrow, on Wednesday morning, the contracting parties being Miss Jean McC. A. Stevenson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Stevenson, of St. John's, Nfld., and the Rev. Ralph H. LeMessurier, also of St. John's, Nfld.

The bride, who was given away by Mr. S. W. Bettoney, looked charming in a dress of georgette over ivory satin, with a hand-embroidered lace veil, and a wreath of orange blossom. Her bouquet was composed of lilies, carnations, roses, and white heather.

The bridesmaids wore the Misses Dorothy and Elsie Bettoney, both of whom wore dresses of turquoise blue georgette with buff-colored lace. Each carried a bouquet of pink roses.

The Rev. W. G. Cameron, former Curate of St. George's Church, Head-stones, conducted the service and the duties of best man were carried out by Mr. Gerald LeMessurier, brother of the bridegroom.

Immediately after the marriage ceremony, the Holy Eucharist was offered. The wedding breakfast was held at the home of Mr. Bettoney, 17 Butler Avenue, Harrow.

Later, in the day, the Rev. and Mrs. LeMessurier left for the honeymoon, but their destination was kept a close secret.

On the conclusion of the honeymoon they will take up their residence at Burnaby, Cheshire, where the Rev. LeMessurier holds an appointment.

EXCELLENCE.

I often heard of Hiram Horn, throughout the middle west; of all men skilled in shucking c o r n, "was said he was the best. Great champions from distant farms encountered him at times, and Hiram proved them false alarms, and won their waggered dimes. And they went home, distraught, forlorn, to spread the winner's fame; there was no man like Hiram Horn, and none could buck his game. I saw him in the old home town, upon an autumn day; he was alive to his renown, he had the right of way. Oh, he was honored and esteemed, and handed warm regards; he was a bigger man, it seemed, than congressmen or lords. "Why do the people thus acclaim and boost this trifling guy," a stranger asked; "his dinky fame will shortly wilt and die. What boots it if a man can shuck more corn than other gents? Such triumphs are not worth a buck, or eighty-seven cents. This Hiram breaks the damsels' hearts, they love his rustic fame; but in the city's crowded marts no man has heard his name." "Men love the fellow who excels," I said in language blunt; "we love to see him wearing bells, whatever be his stunt. If any man can pull a trick at which his neighbors fail, we do exalt him pretty quick, and hand him wreaths and kale. And thus a million lads or more are striving every day to do a good and useful chere-in some new, better way.

There are some superstitions I believe in and observe with care. I won't, in August or July, Put on my heavy underwear; I know 'twill bring bad luck to race A railroad train, express or freight. At crossings I reduce my pace. Fearful of tragedy—I wait! I never play with loaded guns. Bad luck that way is often born, I have a coward's fear which shuns Depending on my motor horn; I am afraid I could not meet Some unexpected circumstance. I never take a foolish chance. Bad luck I fear and always will. Some evil things I dread, and yet Oh, lovely green two-dollar bill, 'Till I take you in without regret; My pain is never shut, I smile your pretty face to see, I have my superstitions, but Two-dollar bills don't frighten me.

Request Police to Find Missing Nfld. Girl

Pathetic Appeal Comes From Newfoundland Fishing Village to Chief Palmer.

"Please find my sister, Miss Katie Finney, and send her home. My mother is dying, and she wants to see Katie. We haven't heard from her for eight years. Won't you please send her?"

The above is an extract from a pathetic letter as Chief of Police Palmer has ever received in his mail. Steps have been taken by the police to locate the missing girl, but it is believed she has left the city.

The letter was written in Cappahayden, a tiny fishing village located in the Ferryland district, some 70 miles from St. John's, Nfld. It was penned by the girl's younger sister, Lillian, and while couched in simple language, it bears a poignant appeal. "We haven't heard from her for eight years," is the touching plea that the child puts in her note to the Chief of Police. "Mother is dying, and wants to see Katie."

On the envelope enclosing the precious letter, underneath the address, is the one word, "Haste." Whether the mother has since passed away still pining for the missing daughter, is a matter for speculation, but Deputy Chief Barrett gave the assurance that everything was being done to trace the whereabouts of the girl. He further stated that she had been employed in a local restaurant some time ago, but has not been seen about town since, and it is feared that she may have gone to some other part of the country.—Halifax Mail

Bishop Mowll's

EXPERIENCES WITH CHINESE BRIGANDS.

Bishop Mowll will be remembered in St. John's as the Bishop of Western China, who came here three years ago and held a very largely attended Mission at St. Thomas's Church. He was an old college friend of Rev. Canon Barr, then Rector of the Parish. In August of this year Bishop Mowll and eight other members of the Church Missionary Society were carried off by brigands in the Szechuan Province of China. The Bishop has described their experiences in the London Times as follows:—

Though robbers had attacked Mien-chu and the neighbouring villages during July our own valley remained in peace. But on the morning of Thursday, August 6, we were awakened by the sound of rifle shots in quick succession close at hand. Cries of "Kill, kill. Strike dead" could be heard, and steel spears splintered our bedroom door. We had slipped on mats and unbolting the door. The armed men outside pushed us downstairs at once. Our thumbs were quickly tied together behind our backs. Near us were a row of workmen and two servants tied together. We were led to the neighbouring house to find the other party tied together with a rope round their necks. We were quickly led across the river. On the opposite bank we were untied and marched off into the hills between armed guards. Our last glimpse of our homes was the robbers streaming out with armfuls of our possessions and piling them into boxes. Many of the robbers wore our hats and their persons bulged with a personal loot. As the loads passed, we grabbed any useful clothing we could to supplement our scanty attire. Our captors avoided all roads and dragged us up and down steep hills all day. We were without food but slaked our thirst at mountain streams.

As the afternoon wore on we saw in the distance a grim-looking mountain fortress with thick walls and narrow windows. We arrived just as it grew dark. As we passed by the narrow entrance we saw that the robbers had lighted a great fire at which they were cooking their meat.

The Party.

There were nine of us in the party. Miss Carleton and Miss Settle were spending the hot weather with us and Major Iles and Miss Armstrong were with the Donathornes in Mr. Caldwell's house. We were chiefly concerned for little Audrey Donathorne, aged two, but the robbers refused our request to release her with her mother.

As soon as breakfast was over the next morning we were hurried on down the steep hill. Rain fortunately began and we were able to rest in a farm house. The farm people gave us corn cobs. As soon as the weather cleared we started on. We were taking over another hill. At length as dusk we reached a ruined hill, situated in a thick grove of trees. Approaching in the moonlight it looked most eerie. We were taken up a flight of steps and told that a long narrow room on the left was our apartment. Fortunately rain descended and we were able to rest there for two days, Saturday and Sunday.

Our food supply was so scanty that my servant obtained permission to go back to Mien-chu for bread, etc., on Sunday and returned to us on Monday evening not only with food but with welcome letters and papers. It was a comfort to hear again from the outside world.

On that Monday we had been taken across a narrow pole bridge, and after tramping across the hills and finding a mountain stream we reached a farm and were given an out-house to sleep in.

After two days, despite the fact that my wife had been in bed all day with fever, we were taken across the river. A rude raft was constructed. The river was very swift and it was an answer to prayer that no accident happened. We were taken to a farmhouse near the opposite bank.

Coole's Bravery.

My coolie appeared at the river side on Saturday morning with more food. It was really brave of him, as when he had accompanied my boy on the Monday previous the robbers had cut off his legs if he appeared again. At dusk a shot was heard and all the guard trooped out to a conference with the unseen visitors. On Sunday morning we were taken again across the river on a raft. Hopes ran high when we were led back into the first valley that it was the first step towards home. Instead we were led further up the hillside to a very isolated little house belonging to a family named Li.

That was the worst place we were in. Mr. Li was hand in glove with the robbers. Two coffins of murdered captives were next door. One afternoon we saw another party loaded with loot on the opposite side of the valley. We were confined to the little rooms with leaking roofs, very damp and very close in the fact where our captors lived. They could see our captors live. They blocked the doorway and looked at us. They brandished a sword at the child. They took some of the little food we had as we were being cooked and ate it before

New Church Opened at Arnold's Cove Station

The people and children of Arnold's Cove station were overcome with joy on Sunday last when their new Church was opened with Solemn High Mass. It is the first Catholic Church to be erected at Arnold's Cove. The church is named in honor of St. Christopher, the Patron Saint of Motorists and railway men. The celebrant of the High Mass was Rev. Francis Cacciola, who designed and built the church with the co-operation of the good people of that settlement and their immediate friends. The children of the place are now provided with a new school. In the past they suffered so many inconveniences in the natural anxiety of having neither school nor church. The little altar boys who served the Priest at Mass were specially selected from the ranks of their comrades at Arnold's Cove. It was their first venture and both parents and congregation were thrilled with the grace and charm of their movements on the altar. The musical part of the services was carefully arranged. Miss Beat of Come By Chance presided at the organ and conducted the choir. All the solo parts were sung by Rev. Francis Cacciola, who would pause at various parts of the Mass to contribute his little help to the choir. Rev. Francis Cacciola was the preacher and in his preliminary remarks he paid a very high tribute to the good people of the Church of England, who not only attended the services in the morning and evening in large numbers, but who also performed manual labor and gave generously of their means towards the interests of their Catholic neighbors in the building of their first church. In the evening Fr. Cacciola conducted the ceremonies, sang all the solos and preached the sermon. The subject of the morning's discourse was: "The Power, Wisdom and Goodness of Our Dear Lord as manifested in His Works." The evening's sermon was: "The place where Thy glory dwelleth." The little church, a marvel of beauty, is complete in every detail. The people put with pride to their dear little church and school, and the chances now placed at their disposal to educate and bring up their children in the fear and love of God and country. There was a large attendance at all the services on Sunday. People were present from Barbours, Woody Island, Bollandstown, Arnold's Cove Centre, and Come by Chance. Many other improvements will be made in the church property at Arnold's Cove. REV. FRANCIS CACCIOLA.

On Friday the load of provisions arrived. How eagerly the little fresh literature was seized. The few papers and magazines were read from cover to cover. On Saturday morning we were taken back to the farm by the river. Before we left, our possessions were searched again. Boxes were ruthlessly broken up. Garments were heedlessly spoiled. Bedding was taken and we found ourselves in serious want when night came. The five specified days at length passed but no release came. Instead, on Wednesday, August 20, we were suddenly rushed up the hill to another farm. Further had nights followed due to the heavy rain and leaking roof. Food was also so low that tea-leaves had to be minutely rationed and bread failed. Scenes were divided into three and given to the weakest. It was a marvel how far the ladies made the few provisions go. On Friday we were taken down hill again and across the river. More things were looted and nightfall found the party denuded of blankets. How earnestly we prayed that release might come soon. We knew how difficult it was to expect help from man when the province was without any semblance of a central Government, Yang Sen having been overthrown.

On Saturday morning the guard sent to market quickly returned with word that we were to be handed over to our friends that day. The others, however, were in no hurry. Presently they said we were to cross the river again. That was in the opposite direction to home. About noon we were ordered to start. At the door knives and pikes were brandished at us and the bags which each one was carrying were rifled.

The river was crossed and my servant urged us to hasten on. We saw coolies coming to meet us. We were told to sit down while some of our captors went down to meet them. Presently we heard one shout that an extra 50 dollars would be given if our goods were handed over intact. Then our loads were brought past us and we called out for what had not come. To our relief the robbers disappeared, and from 1.30 on we were alone and free.

"WITHOUT MERCY" UNUSUAL PICTURE.

"Without Mercy," the George Melford Production presented by Metropolitan Pictures, Inc., which opened yesterday at the Nickel Theatre, is just one more reason why this director has attained for himself the leading place which he enjoys in the foremost rank of screen directors.

Each succeeding Melford production brings with it something of the unusual, often bordering on the sensational, which makes it remembered. "Without Mercy" is a fast moving narrative, and one which, in the hands of an ordinary director could easily be carried along too quickly or let drag. This director is quite evidently the master of his audience. He knows just where to add and just where to detract, to bring out the fine dramatic points of his story and instill into his characters the minute touches that make them living, loving and fighting human beings.

The story deals with two men in love with the same girl. One of the men, a villainous schemer, at one time wronged the girl's mother. The daughter however, is infatuated with him, and the mother, to save her, is presented with the delicate situation of opening up her past. The series of events that follow, which include a fast and furious struggle by the two men over an election, and a thrilling kidnapping episode in which the real lover proves himself to be indeed a hero and worthy of the girl's hand, make up but a few of the tense dramatic situations which predominate the story.

MIGHT HAVE HAD A "BEAUTIFUL DEATH"

Munich, Nov. 16.—That former Emperor William should have gone into the trenches in November, 1918, and thus saved the monarchy, is the opinion expressed by General Wilhelm Groener, who during the closing days of the world war succeeded General Ludendorff as quartermaster-general.

"I told the emperor's adjutants at that time that His Majesty should leave immediately for the front, not merely to review his troops or distribute iron crosses, but to fight," said General Groener. "It was to be no dash for death, but His Majesty should go into the trenches like any common soldier, leaving it to chance whether a bullet should find him. If he fell, I said, it would constitute a beautiful death; if he were wounded, national sentiment would have reverted in his favor."

General Groener added that his advice was not heeded. He further said that Ludendorff told him on September 28, 1918, that peace must be made by Christmas of that year as the German army could not possibly hold out any longer.

Stolen Boots Found

Yesterday afternoon Constable G. Parrott found, behind Garland's bookstore, one of the pairs of boots that were stolen last week from Mr. John Thistle's store. A man named Dawe, on remand at the Penitentiary, is charged with the robbery.

Lord Ribblesdale

With Lord Ribblesdale passes one of the most picturesque figures in England. The famous Sargent portrait did not flatter him, and whether he was dressed in town clothes, in hunting kit, or in an old shooting-suit, he always seemed to have stepped from the canvas of a great master. He was the kind of English country gentleman who could never spare sufficient leisure from sport for politics, but if ever he had occasion to struggle, he would almost certainly have succeeded in almost any walk of life, for he had remarkable abilities. He would have made an excellent ambassador or soldier, and if he had given his life to letters would probably have left a distinguished name. At one time he seemed to be a favourite of fortune; but the last twenty years of his life were shadowed by every kind of calamity—the death of his heir in Somaliland, the lingering death from consumption of his beautiful wife (a sister of Mrs. Asquith); then the Great War, where his only remaining son, Charles, fell; and last of all his own breakdown in health. Many people consider that Charles Lister, who died at Gallipoli in 1915, was the most brilliant young man of his day, and certainly Lord Ribblesdale's biography of him has a place apart in war records. Lord Ribblesdale's long introduction carried reticence and understatement to the pitch of genius, and yet the impression of brilliance and attractiveness produced by this method is far greater than if the writer had exhausted himself in rhetoric. The style is characteristic of the man. Lord Ribblesdale, however deep his feelings, had always the reserve of the old order of English gentlemen.

Goal for Woman Motorist

A YEAR'S SENTENCE AND £200 FINE—CYCLIST KILLED BY HER CAR.

Sentence of a year's imprisonment and a fine of £200 or a further three months' imprisonment was passed at Jedburgh, Berwickshire, recently, on Mrs. Jean Brown, aged 33, the wife of a retired farmer of Eyemouth, accused of culpable homicide while motoring.

It was alleged that on July 4, while under the influence of drink, she drove her motor car against a young cyclist named James Thomas Steel, who was fatally injured. It was also stated that the car collided with a perambulator, a child being thrown out and injured, and that two boys were knocked down and injured. Giving evidence, Mrs. Brown said the cyclist turned a corner on foot. He began to mount his bicycle, and she turned the car to clear him. When her husband took the steering wheel out of her hands she was thrown against the wheel, lost control, and did not know what happened.

She declared that she was perfectly sober and could attach no blame to herself for the accident. The trial lasted three days and Mrs. Brown wept bitterly on hearing the sentence.

Oil in Mosul

The international petroleum problem comes every little while into the limelight of publicity, before reverting into the darkness of not-so-public machinations. The territory of Mosul, in Turkey, which has been the centre of much scheming, diplomacy, treaties, and the source of many apparently unrelated European policies, is back again to the foreground. At the close of the World War, when everything appeared to be over but the grabbing, first and foremost of the Great Britain, and one of the things she grabbed was the valuable oil territory of Mosul in what was then Asiatic Turkey. This was annexed as part of a mandate. The idea of a mandate, as concerned in the pure mind of President Wilson, was a benevolent administration of an unquiet or helpless territory, for the good and for the betterment of the native population. The idea of every nation to which mandates were given (the United States having declined all mandates) was the acquisition of new territory, to be exploited for the benefit of certain interests, national or capitalistic, of the nation to which the mandate is given.

The prospective adding of the oil fields of Mosul to the British possessions aroused the resentment of France, and a series of negotiations and treaties led to an arrangement between England and France whereby the latter was to have a slice of the petroleum melon. Meanwhile, the corpse of Turkey, which had lain unnoted in the disposition of the day, unexpectedly returns to life, just at the time when Greece was giving it one last melodramatic stab, for good measure. Chasing the Greeks into the sea, the Turks made a desperate stand against the victorious allies, put up a bluff that won a new deal and the rehabilitation of Turkey as a nation; and as an independent one, which, in effect, it was not prior to the World War.

As to foreigners, all of whom have wrought more or less havoc with Turkey, Turkey has always preferred the United States. In her days of prostration, Turkey begged for an American mandate; and in her time of regeneration she feels that she will gain from American participation, but lose by the participation of any of the European nations. She has ratified an old concession, of oil and other privileges of exploitation, to Americans—the Chester Concession, provisionally granted long before the World War. By the provisions of this concession, the sovereignty of the oil fields remains with Turkey, and she receives a liberal share of the profits. Turkey, therefore, would stand by the Chester Concession, whose preliminary portions were stopped by British armed force. There now comes the charge of Turkish armed pressure in the disputed territory, coupled with the silly charge, always used to damn Turkey and a day or two later the buying movement spread to Baltimore and Ohio, Reading, Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, and other standard carriers, with some of the medium-priced issues, such as Wabash common, New Haven, Erie, Missouri Pacific common, and M. K. T. common also scoring good gains. Under ordinary conditions one might shrewdly assume that the movement in the rails was by way of a counter-demonstration against the success of the bears in the motor stocks. But with car loadings holding well above the million mark, with railroad operating efficiency showing up sharply in increased net earnings, and with some of the best months of the year still to be heard from in railroad statements, it seems more likely that the bull movement in the rails is something to be taken seriously.

MARLAND OIL.
Marland Oil has been strongly recommended here several times, and at last its earning power has grown to proportions that assure a higher selling price for the stock. The latest earnings statement, for the September quarter, showed net income—after interest charges and all reserves—equal to $3 a share on the stock, or at an annual rate of $12 a share. For the nine months earnings were approximately $7.50 a share. For the six months ended June 30, net income after all charges—was $8,270,371, and for the September quarter net income was $5,419,858, making a total of $13,690,229 for the first nine months. These results compare with $3,882,448 in the first half of 1924, and for the full year 1924—somewhat less owing to the oil slump—$2,595,373. The balance sheet, showing was quite as inspiring as the income account. Cash stood at $13,381,802 on September 30, 1925, against $3,444,782 at the close of 1924. And total current liabilities at the end of the third quarter of this year were $3,000,562 against total current assets of $20,987,800.

Oil in Mosul
in the United States and in Europe, that it is the Christians that Turkey is molesting. No omne unscrupulous propaganda, was ever circulated than this. The problem has been referred to the League of Nations, and it will be of interest to see whether the feeble council of the League will prevail over the strong arguments of commercial warfare. While the prevailing of Turkey will mean an advantage to an American syndicate, the State Department in Washington will not take as aggressive an interest in the fight as does the British Foreign Office. It seems not at all unlikely that Turkey will, if pressed, fight over the matter: whether England would engage in an armed conflict for mineral territory is problematical, but is not opposed to precedent. The Turks, as above said, prefer American institutions, and Americans: a feeling which is by no means reciprocated, whatever virtues the Turks have being discounted by the fact that they are not "Christians"—Engineering and Mining Journal Press, New York.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

Nov. 16th.—The weather-faire, and I abroad without my top coat but feel the need of it before going far. Yet 'tis indeed mild in view of what was prophesied for this time of the year, albeit 'tis easy enough for it to change to cold and snow again. Talking this day with Mr. Riley, he tells me how Dr. Furneaux, the Veterinary Surgeon, has been experimenting with bees, and has met with much success in the production of honey. Methinks this is the first time that an apiany has been successful in this country. Some talks in the Club of the City sections, and seems how there are like to be three new Councillors chosen, according to those that profess to know. But Lord, myself I know not, nor who are one half the candidates and most others in like position so that to vote intelligently methinks a public meeting is a necessity. This night to the rink to see the race between O'Toole and Harbold, and O'Toole wins easily in excellent time. I did mark out as a graceful runner, G. Stone, of whom, I believe, more will be heard in local athletics.

The Trees

I moved amidst the gloom, beneath the solemn trees,
Beneath the solemn trees, that leaned their heads above,
That leaned their heads above, and whispered secrets
Of buried kings and queens, of war and hate and love.

Dead secrets of the past, unheard of living ears,
Unknown to living ears, and gone beyond recall,
And past beyond recall, with all their joys and tears,
With all their hopes and fears—and trees had known them all.

Recruiting for Auxiliary Air Squadrons

London, Eng., Nov. (Canadian Press Despatch)—Voluntary recruiting of the special reserve and auxiliary air force squadrons which are to form an important part of the programme of home defence against air attack, was commenced at the beginning of this month, following a speaking campaign by Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for Air, in the Kingdom's industrial centres. This enlistment of the maximum amount of skilled knowledge of aviation in the country on a voluntary basis is only an experiment, Sir Samuel acknowledges, but it is an experiment that must be tried fully, if merely for the sake of economy, for the Royal Air Force is bound to be expensive both in equipment and maintenance depending for its striking power on an entire absence of mechanical breakdown in the air. The problem before the Air Ministry is to sift from the mass of volunteers the right type of officers and men, with not only the will but also the practical experience through his profession or trade to build up an efficient air unit of defence with the minimum amount of annual training. No other country has yet endeavored to tackle its air defence problem along the same lines. The squadrons will, of course, be centered around areas industrial in character, otherwise the skilled force would not be easily available. Equally it is not desirable to have too big a gap between the regular squadrons which are to supplement them as soon as they can be mobilized. Consequently the 15 non-regular squadrons have been divided into two classes. Seven will be special reserve squadrons, in which one-third of the establishment is definitely regular and the remaining two-thirds undergo a very full initial training; and the remaining six have a nucleus of regular personnel for care, maintenance and instruction purposes, and are to obtain their officers and men entirely through the County Territorial and Auxiliary Air Force Association.

The peace time stations of the seven special reserve squadrons will be: London, probably Hendon aerodrome; Bristol, Belfast, Lincoln and Norwich, and two other stations whose locations have not yet been decided. Aerodromes near Lincoln and Norwich, will be ready next summer. At Belfast and Bristol aerodromes are already established. The six auxiliary squadrons will be stationed in peace time at London, County of London, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Birmingham and at one other station yet to be decided. At all these the aerodromes and barracks are already established.

These barracks for the stations of the auxiliary force will contain social facilities, canteens, workshops and instructional halls, so that the greater part of training in the maintenance of aircraft can be given in the centre of a city. While practical flying of course will be carried out at the aerodromes, all the groundwork and general training can proceed at the town headquarters.

Each squadron requires approximately 200 officers and men, all highly skilled in various technical trades such as for instance, armourers, blacksmiths, carpenter riggers, aero engine fitters, drivers and wireless operators. If the number of applications to join the special reserve squadron at Belfast are any criterion, there will be no lack of recruits.

Medical Trade Unions

Mr. Bernard Shaw's letter in the Times last week raises a much larger question than the mere restoration of Dr. Asham to the Medical Register. Dr. Asham, many years ago, was removed from the Register because he acted as anaesthetist to Sir Herbert Barker, when that eminent osteopath was under the ban of the medical profession. Since then Sir Herbert Barker's position has been regularized and he has been honoured by a knighthood; and it seems reasonable that the case of Dr. Asham, now an old man, should be reconsidered and that he should be reinstated as a duly registered medical practitioner. But Mr. Bernard Shaw raises the whole question of the powers of the General Medical Council, which is a statutory body established by the Medical Act

W.V.A. Circus Popularity Contest

Mrs. M. V. Kinsella Deposed as Leader

A stern chase is usually a long one, and when Mrs. Kinsella entered the popularity contest which is being conducted in connection with the War Veterans' Circus and taking the lead held for the past fortnight, it was thought that she could not be deposed. However, a heavy raid on the popularity position yesterday succeeded in dislodging and forcing a retirement. Mrs. Kinsella's territory is now occupied by Miss Stella Crane, who is strongly entrenched with a comfortable lead of 100 votes with strong reserves.

BY WESLEY LADIES' AID.

The Wesley Ladies' Aid Sale of Work opens to-morrow (Wednesday) at 5.30 p.m. in the basement of the Church. Plain and fancy work, home cookery, vegetables and candy have been provided in abundance for the sale, and it is expected that the affair will be largely patronized. The sale, which will be formally opened by Lady Gresham, will continue on Thursday and conclude at night with a concert in which the city's best talent will take part. The concert will be broadcasted.

British Liner Wrecked

BISHOP AND HEARSE ON BOARD.

Singapore.—When six miles off Singapore at 4 p.m. recently in clear and calm weather the British liner Marella (7,475 tons, belonging to Burns, Philip and Co., and registered in London) came into collision with the Anglo-Saxon Petroleum Company's tanker Comus (5,576 tons), which was approaching at right angles. The Marella was holed on the starboard side amid the engines and she listed heavily. All the 38 passengers were handed lifebelts and lowered into boats within 20 minutes. There was no panic.

An R.O.S. brought pinnaces of the Italian warship San Giorgio, lying in the outer harbour, to aid in landing the passengers and a portion of the crew.

The Marella was beached with the engine-room full of water. The passengers included the Right Rev. Ernest D. L. Danson, the Bishop of Labuan and Sarawak, and his wife.

Germany's War Luxury.

The collision is inexplicable because there was good visibility and no traffic, but it had caused no surprise to superstitious seamen, some of whom had been prophesying a wreck since leaving Sydney because the passengers included a bishop and the cargo included a hearse.

The Marella was formerly a German boat of the Woermann Line engaged in African trade. During the war she was specially conditioned with every degree of luxury, including marble-lined saloons and a marble swimming bath, as the official yacht of the Government Commission which would visit the new German possessions which Germany hoped would be won in the war. After the armistice she was surrendered to the Reparation Commission.

Canadian Airman Warns Britishers

DANGER FROM CONTINENTAL, SAYS COMMANDER BARKER.

London, Nov. 11.—Wing Commander Barker, Canadian V.C. airman, warns the English people against the danger from continental aircraft in the next war in a critical introduction to "The Strategy and Tactics of Air Fighting," just published. "The English people should know that, as far as war is concerned, England is virtually no longer an island," says Barker.

The book itself predicts in the next war that the inhabitants and cities will be subjected to the horror of being shelled from the air. It declares that a "revue" from the formation of one hundred aerial guns would fatten out buildings like the House of Parliament as a steam roller would fatten out a sand castle, and the writer prophesies the advent of the whip lash gun, which will eject bullets so rapidly that the effect will be a continuous stream of lead.

ECHO OF NOTORIOUS ROBINSON CASE IS HEARD IN A PARIS COURT.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—An echo of the notorious Robinson case was heard in the Paris courts yesterday when Captain James Charles Arthur, former aide de camp to Sir Hari Singh, was sentenced to thirteen months in jail and fined five hundred francs.

Captain Arthur was convicted of receiving stolen property for his handling, through a bank, of a cheque for $120,000, alleged to have been paid by the Rajah after the discovery of his relations with Mrs. Charles E. Robinson, wife of an English bookmaker.
