RYKERT HAS THE FLOOR

AND THROWS CONSIDERABLE LIFE INTO THE DEBATE.

Mr. Mills Waxes Warm, and the Member for Lincoln Wants to Fight—Mr. Laurier is Compelled to Fill a Gap.

OTTAWA, March 16.—The debate on Riel's execution was continued this afternoon. Up to 10 o'clock to-night it was dull and uninteresting, with the exception of a tiff between Rykert and Mills. At 10.25 it looked as if things would not pan up, but Mr. Laurier rose and held the house for two hours and a quarter. His speech was away ahead of anything that has been delivered on the question. It was pitched in a lofty key and delivered in the finest style of oratory, with a grace and eloquence that commanded the closest attention of the house. He sat down at 12.35 to applause by both sides. Congratulations were showered upon him.

The Debate.

OTTAWA, March 16.—By consent of the house the debate on Riel was continued, Mr. Rykert having the floor. In his first words he made a slip that caused a great laugh on the liberal side. He said he rose to discuss the motion of censure on the government "for the murder of Louis Riel." The laughter that followed did not disconcert Mr. Rykert any, but only tended to lend celerity to his assault on the position of the liberal members who had condemned the government. He thought it was quite proper for the government to hem in their opponents by moving the previous question. This course would procure a decisive vote on the issue without the introduction of irrelevant matter. He quoted from the speech of Mr. Blake, at London, where it was stated that the trial was apparently a fair one and contrasted his utterance with that of Mr. Cameron, who argued that the trial was unfair and unjust. He next taunted Mr. Blake with withholding his views on several questions of great moment recently decided in favor of the liberal contentions and then of afterwards appropriating credit for the results obtained. Getting back at the member for West Huron the speaker described his speech of Friday night as coarse, vulgar and arrogant, "and," continued Mr. Rykert, "I might add untruthful." "Order, order," cried the opposition, and Speaker Kirkpatrick rose with a request that this objectionable and unparliamentary term be withdrawn. The member for Lincoln apologized, but in the very next breath reiterated the charge in milder words, accusing Mr. Cameron of mis-statements and mis-quotations that let up to inflammatory, violent and outrageous utterances. For two hours Mr. Rykert demonstrated to a degree that he was not unworthily nicknamed "Scrap-book Charley." He quoted from Messrs. Mackenzie, Blake and Cameron, the Globe, Hansard, the Ontario debates, Blackstone, Riel pamphlets, medical jurisprudence and other light literature, and then came down to the member for Bothwell, whom he described as "A legal mind framed by act of parliament."

Mr. Mills rose excitedly and exclaimed: "The gentleman is insinuating what is not true."

Deputy Speaker Daly, who in the meantime had taken the chair, called the speaker to order, whereupon Mr. Rykert boiled over with rage, and, striking a John L. Sullivan attitude, challenged the hon. gentleman, or any other member of the grit party, to dare deny his statements in the lobby. A terrible stillness stole over the house. The sergeant-at-arms pricked up his ears and placed his hand on the hilt of his sword, ready to draw the same in preservation of peace and the constitution. No one, however, took up the gauntlet, and the breeze blew over, but was immediately stirred up again by Mr. Mills characterizing further remarks of the speaker as untruthful and malicious.

"I call the member for Bothwell to order," cried Mr. Rykert. "Several times he has interrupted me, and I don't choose to stand it any longer. I was made to apologize, and he ought to be treated in the same way, and as for his not having been made a lawyer by act of parliament, he would probably know more than he does now if this were so." Speaker Kirkpatrick had by this time resumed the chair and poured oil on the troubled waters.

From the member for Bothwell Mr. Rykert turned his attention to Herman Cook, who had also been interrupting him, and offered to bet the member for East Simcoe any amount from his indemnity up, that West Huron Cameron had marked a certain passage in the book which he (Mr. Rykert) held in his hand, and which was the immediate subject of discussion. Mr. Rykert had not finished at 6 o'clock.

After recess the member for Lincoln continued to draw on his scrapbook for an hour and a quarter, and argued that Riel was not insane. Mr. Rykert was on his feet four hours, lacking 15 minutes.

Mr. Bechard (Iberville) took up the case from the opposition standpoint, being the first rouge to speak on the question. In an hour's speech his argument was the same old thing—that the government's maladministration of affairs in the Northwest caused the rebellion, that the prisoner did not have a fair trial, and that some consideration should have been paid to the recommendation for mercy. He was not very sanguine of the permanency of action of the bolting Bleus, predicting that it would not be long before they would return to the old fold.

It was now 10.25. Nobody on the ministerial side chose to speak. Deputy Speaker Daly, who was in the chair, read the motion and it looked as if a division was imminent, when Mr. Laurier, leader of the Quebec liberals in the house, and who sits next to Mr. Blake, rose slowly and began to speak. Having accused the government of cowardice in not putting up anybody to answer the previous speaker he at once launched into the question, answering what he termed the Mail's calumnies of the French Canadian people in its articles on race and revenge. There were not a more docile, quiet and law-abiding people under heaven than his fellow countrymen. Whatever their faults might be it was not one of them to shield and abet crime, as the tory organ had insinuated. [Hear, hear.] In their agitation for clemency in Riel's case they were not influenced by race prejudices. They wanted no special privileges or favors. They wanted justice for all. In our civilization a single human life was valuable. If their section of people believed that the execution of Riel was not proper and legal, they had a perfect right to arraign the government on that point. It was too late for the ministry to deny that their bad administration of Northwest affairs was the cause of the rebellion. The member for Provencher (Mr. Royal) said the Globe, the Farmers' union and the white settlers were responsible for it. If so why were not these indicted? [Hear, hear.] Were they to infer that the government had receded from the instructions given to the crown counsel to ascertain if any white settlers encouraged the outbreak, or were they to regard Mr. Royal's assertions as the last resort of an indefensible case. The member had called Mr. Mackenzie's administration of territorial affairs a blank, but what was the result of the present government's rule—blood, prison, scaffold, widow, orphan, destitution, ruin? [Opposition applause.] It was not till January, 1885, six years after parliament passed the Dominion Land act, that the government aroused itself. An agitation was going on all the time in the Northwest while ministers were slumbering and snoring. There was evidence that the government had forgotten the rights of the halfbreeds. What was the answer of the department of the interior to the resolution passed at Prince Albert in 1881 demanding that the halfbreeds be furnished with their scrip in accordance with the act passed by parliament two years before? Why the department actually asked that the resolution be explained. The government did not really know the provisions of its own act. [Hear, hear]. Further correspondence ensued, petitions and delegations were sent to Ottawa, but with no avail. It was not till Jan. 28, 1885, that the government awoke to its duty and appointed a commission to report on the halfbreed claims. But it was too late. The seeds of discontent had germinated and hearts that had been swelling with grievances for years burst out in rebellion, the immediate result of which was to secure the halfbreeds their rights. [Hear, hear]. Mr. Laurier, who, by the way, speaks the best English of any French member in the house, proceeded to criticise in detail the provisions of the Dominion land act. The government really offered nothing to the halfbreeds for the extinguishment of Indian titles. [Hear, hear]. The government had refused them their rights for seven long years, and it was only the bullets of Duck lake that aroused them to a sense of duty. These poor men fought, bled and died for the gentlemen on the treasury benches. "The hon. gentleman," continued Mr. Laurier, pointing at the minister of militia, "had said—'I hate all rebels and have no sympathy, good, bad or indifferent with the rebellion,' but I remember the time when he had deep sympathy in his heart for rebellion, and for the very rebel whose death knell he sounded almost within hearing of the condemned man. Did he hate rebellion when he stood up that great rebel whose statue stands on Parliament hill—Sir George Cartier?" Mr. Laurier went on to chaff the tories about their loyalty, which they only boasted of so long as it served to keep them in power and served party purposes. They affected to be shocked at him for sympathizing with men seeking to vindicate their rights. He could tell them that he was a loyal British subject, but his loyalty was not on his lips. [Hear, hear.] The subject must be loyal to the crown, but at the same time the crown must be loyal to the subject. In its treatment of the halfbreeds the government had not been loyal to their subjects. [Hear, hear.] Mr. Laurier then took up the trial and state of mind of Riel. The trial was imperfect, and the medical commission was only appointed to throw dust in the eyes of the people; nay worse, to deceive them. The decision of hanging was recorded Nov. 12. The minister of militia arrived in Winnipeg Nov. 7, and if the hanging had not then been recorded it had at least been decided upon. Hear, hear.] Was there ever a more shameful thing, after determining to hang Riel, than for the government to appoint medical men to report on the prisoner's mind? Not only were they guilty of a cruel act, but of an attempt to deceive the country. [Hear, hear, and applause.] He did not wish to raise feeling, but the national pride of the French Canadians was wounded because the same measure of justice and mercy was not extended to Riel as was extended to Jackson, his secretary. Why did not the government hang Riel in 1870, instead of assisting him out of the country with money. [Hear, hear.] If it was not right to execute him then, was it right to execute him now? It was repugnant to any man's sense of honor and justice when invited to deliver himself up, as Riel was by Gen. Middleton, to hang him to the gibbet. When Riel had surrendered was it not manifest that he should have been treated as a prisoner of war and not as if he had been taken on the field of battle? He instanced the surrender of Lee to Grant as a case in point. His peroration was to the effect that he hoped the government would do the Metus full justice.

Sir Adolphe Caron moved the adjournment of the debate. The house adjourned at 12.35.

Echoes.

OTTAWA, March 16.—Chairman Beaty presented the report of the committee on standing orders.

Mr. Small, who appeared in the house for the first time since he was laid up with illness on Friday, introduced bills to incorporate the Calvin company (limited), and the Medicine Hat railway and coal company.

Col. O'Brien wants copies of petitions or letters from the Indians on the North Shore of Lake Huron or Lake Nipissing with reference to their rights of fishing in these waters.

West Huron Cameron will on Thursday ask for an account of the law costs incurred by the dominion in testing the liquor license acts of 1883 and 1884, and a statement of the cost of carrying them into effect.

A return asked for by Mr. Wilson (East Elgin) will be interesting to the working classes. He calls for the number of assisted and unassisted immigrants who entered the dominion during 1885, the statement to show how many were skilled artizans, farm laborers and domestic servants, together with the amount paid towards assisted passages to each of such classes.

Mr. Small presented the petition of Alex. Manning, Andrew Heron, A. D. Perry, W. H. Knowlton and A. R. Boswell, all of Toronto, for an act of incorporation under the name of the Rock Lake, Souris and Brandon railway company.

Middlesex MacMillan handed in a petition from Archibald Campbell, of London, and others for an act of incorporation under the name of the Colonial bank of Canada.

Mr. Beaty presented a petition of the First Synod in Canada of the Reformed Episcopal church for incorporation. Bishop Ussher, of Montreal, who was formerly located at Toronto, is here in connection with this measure.

Mr. Dawson submitted petitions from the fishermen of Little Current and other places in Algoma for such amendments as will remove the close season for salmon trout and white fish in the province of Ontario, thereby placing them on an equal footing with United States competitors.

The house will celebrate St. Patrick's day by adjourning at 6 o'clock.

The Dominion Rifle association meets here to-morrow. Major Dawson of Toronto is already on hand to attend.

Petitions signed by over 11,000 women have been received in favor of Mr. Charlton's bill making seduction a criminal offence.

M. C. Cameron is in receipt of a large batch of letters from electors in his constituency, Protestants and Catholics alike, congratulating him on his speech on the Riel case, renewing their confidence in him and pledging their support to re-elect him.

Lady Macdonald and Mrs. Mackenzie chatted with each other in the speaker's gallery to-night.

There are forty bleus in the house. A careful estimate of how they will vote on Mr. Landry's motion shows: For 22, against 16, doubtful 1.

J. H. Ross of Moose Jaw and Dr. H. C. Wilson of Edmonton, members of the Northwest council deputation, had a short interview this morning with the minister of the interior. The most important question submitted was that of preemptions. Several different suggestions for improving the present regulations are under discussion. The scheme that will most probably be accepted is one that will extend the time for the settlement of claims an additional three years and at the end of six years it is proposed to give settlers a rebate of half the price of each acre, $1.25, in consideration of improvements that they will have made during the period of six years' occupation.

Sir John Macdonald is slowly recovering. Yesterday he was able to leave his bed, and his friends hope to see him in his seat in a few days.

Clerk Bourinot was the recipient to-day of a handsomely bound and beautifully illustrated volume from Prince Roland Bonaparte of "Les Habitats De Surmavala Amsterdam."

The opposition leader's geniality and hospitality is on the increase. Not only did he slap a supporter on the back and ask him over to No. 6 to see the boys, but the report went round the lobbies to-night that he is about to inaugurate a series of sessional dinner parties. "That's what we want," said an enthusiastic grit, "to solidify the party."

CLEVER DETECTIVE WORK.

A Clergyman's Son Arrested for Murdering Two Policemen.

GENEVA, Ill., March 17.—Harry Estee, of Aurora, brother of Cashier Estee, of the First National Bank, and son of a once well known Baptist preacher, is under arrest for the murder of Policemen John Grant and O'Neill on August 28 last. A detective was engaged to solve the mystery. Believing he could get valuable information from a gang in Aurora, he became one of their number. He then planned with them the robbery of a St. Paul, Minn., bank. It was during a conversation on this subject that two of the gang, to show their prowess and worthiness to attempt such a job, told how they had killed two policemen in Geneva. Estee is alleged to be one of these men.

BROKEN IN TWO.

A Diver's Report as to the Condition of the Oregon.

NEW YORK, March 16.—A diver reports that the Oregon is broken in two, and that pieces of the cargo from her hold are coming to the surface. His theory is that she broke in two when the bow struck the bottom. The only thing now to be done with her will be to blow up the bulk, in the hope of allowing the cargo to be fished up.

A committee of the steamer's passengers has been appointed to take steps to recover the value of their property. They called at the Cunard office this morning and left a statement of their grievances.

The Rock Island Express Robbery.

CHICAGO, March 16.—The United States Express company to-day settled all outstanding claims involved by the robbery of their safe on the Rock Island road and paid over $21,100 cash, that is exactly the amount of money taken. The jewelry was not worth much.

Strikers on the Spree.

CLINTON, Ohio, March 16.—Eight hundred track builders on the new Chicago, Burlington and Northern railway struck. They compelled the engineers and firemen of the construction trains to leave their cabs. The company is paying off the strikers, and they are drinking heavily and are all armed with clubs.

Seven Wonders of the World.

A married man, when asked to name the seven wonders of the world, replied as follows, says the Philadelphia Herald:

A woman who will wear a spring bonnet the second season without growling.

The man who tells the truth when he says he never tasted liquor.

The temperance lecturer who is willing to talk for the good of the world when there is no cash in view.

The minister who gives all his marriage fees into the missionary fund.

The female who doesn't think every woman but herself looks like a fright when wearing a big bustle.

The lawyer who cannot lie without blushing.

The old maid who never cried herself to sleep because she never married.

Three Acres and a Cow.

Mr. Quarritch, the book king, has discovered that in Knorr's German History of the Polish Revolution of 1848, the phrase "three acres and a cow" originated. He quotes the following passage: "The leaders of the revolutionary body could no longer hold the rough masses in control, and the misled peasantry who placed trust in their adventurously offered baits, among which the promise of three acres and a cow was conspicuous, found themselves deceived, and turned the whole course of their anger against their noble betrayers."

Latest About the Emperor.

From the London World.

Wonderful man for ninety, bar a few days, as the Emperor William is, and obstinately as he persists in doing everything as he used to do it twenty years ago, save go riding, I hear that he is in an extremely precarious condition, and that any day the candle may go out. The once broad, full chest has quite fallen in. His voice has become so weak, and comes from so far back in the throat, that it is very difficult to catch up his utterances, and he is very, very tottery on the legs.

In Poor Health.

Lady—Are you familiar with the game of draw poker?

Gentleman—Yes, ma'am.

Lady—Do you look upon it as a healthy game?

Gentleman—No, it is not a healthy game. In fact, I have sat up with it night after night.

THE HOME RULERS DINE.

BANQUET OF THE TORONTO BRANCH OF THE IRISH NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Loyal and Patriotic Speeches — Senator O'Donohoe and Hon T. W. Anglin Make Addresses—A Rousing Gathering.

Toronto's home rulers assembled last night at the Albion hotel to the number of 150. The occasion was the first annual banquet of the Toronto branch of the Irish National league of America. The genial host, John Holderness, set a first-class table. Among those present were Hon. John O'Donohoe, Hon. T. W. Anglin, P. Boyle, P. Curran, Peter Small, Rev. Fathers Hand, Egan and McBride, W. G. Murdock, E. E. Sheppard and Philipps Thompson. The gathering was a highly enthusiastic one. Chairman Chas. L. Mahoney, who is also president of the branch, at 10 sharp rose and welcomed all. He would not detain them by going into a description of the league's aims. He would merely say that they asked no man his creed. The league was non-sectarian. He proposed The Queen. The toast was drunk with high enthusiasm, as was also The Governor-General and Lieut.-Governor which followed.

Letters regretting absence were read from Hon. Oliver Mowat, Hon. C. F. Fraser, W. R. Meredith, M.P.P., Archbishop Lynch, Bishop O'Mahoney, William Houston, and others. Mr. J. A. Mulligan, secretary of the branch and chairman of the dinner committee, read a letter which he had received from "one of the most eminent Methodist divines in Ontario," regretting the action of Dr. Potts and Dr. Wild at the Empire in Danger meeting, and expressing the conviction that if they were not already sorry for what they had done they one day would be so. What Ireland needed was oil on troubled waters. Mr. Mulligan refused to divulge the name of his correspondent. "Canada," said Mr. Mahoney in proposing our country, "the land of freedom, of religious liberty and of federal government. We owe our constitutional liberties to those who have gone before us, and if they can look upon us they will do so expecting us to preserve their institutions inviolate. Canada would take a higher place among nations if her children had more patriotism. We see no approach to a Canadian literature or Canadian song. We see few men who when abroad will acknowledge themselves Canadians. There is no country so moral, thrifty and well-to-do as the country where patriotism prevails." The dinner had been held then instead of on St. Patrick's day, on account of the number of entertainments to be given. However, it would be St. Patrick's day before they adjourned. Senator O'Donohoe answered the toast to Canada, but spoke of Ireland. They were assembled there at the league dinner, but also to observe the time honored festival of the glorious St. Patrick. "To-night me thinks I see the dawn of the day when Ireland's parliament shall sit in College Green. We are endeavoring not only to untrammel our native land, but to set an example whereby all down-trodden nations may shake off their shackles. Under our Parnell we are endeavoring to enable the Grand Old Man to remove the greatest weakness of the British empire. Our blood has been shed on England's hardest battle fields. Our sacrifices, the loss of wealth, our injuries we are willing to forget, but if we can share England's dangers we should be partners in her glories, not as a sub-servant, but as an equal. Let no hard word fa l from us. Let us follow our leader who said to Ulster 'Don't parade on the 17th and disturb the Oranges.' I have observed that that is what we have done to-night. Look at that dish," (holding up a fruit dish emptied of everything but oranges) "that is the way to treat Oranges. There is another way that we will not mention."

Barney Lynch rose to propose Ireland. He was cheered loudly and long. The applause was deafening. He commenced mildly, as he usually does, but as he warmed to his subject his eye flashed and his voice thundered as he dwelt on his native land. Never was a nation more in need and more deserving of sympathy than Ireland is at present. There were men who professed to be Irishmen, and could have brought strength to the cause, but who had kept aloof. Now, when the gauntlet had been thrown down, was the time to come forward. "I need not claim to be a Protestant, as you have to be a D. D. to be one. I have not had the opportunity, and, thank God, I have not the desire to be a D. D. D." Within a few years Ireland would have such a measure of home rule as would enable her to have whatever else she wanted, and that not by military or physical force. Any Irishman would willingly forget his sufferings in seeing the work of Grattan, O'Connell and Parnell consummated in such a way that the Irish members would turn their backs on Westminster for College Green—their ancestral home. The speech was a great effort.

Hon. T. W. Anglin answered the toast at considerable length. A true Irishman was too high minded to give any attention to the ranting and raving at the recent loyalist meeting. Its promoters had since said that they were opposed to no scheme of home rule that would not tend to a disruption of the empire. The leaguers wished no such disruption. Mr. Gladstone, the man who was now preparing a scheme, possessed more than any other the confidence of the English people the world over and was responsible for maintaining the empire entire. Was it reasonable to suppose that he would bring forward a scheme such as the loyalists claimed to fear? It seemed absurd to suppose so. The patriots who in times past had been in favor of total separation were mistaken, but they were not criminals. And I am not sure that Ireland is not the better for them. We shall see Ireland a nation, within the empire, connected with Great Britain by the closest relations of self interest, the first flower of the earth and gem of the sea."

Mr. Mulligan welcomed Our Guests with Caed Mille Failthe. Rev. Father Hand, the archbishop's deputy, answered eloquently. Philipps Thompson answered the loyalist objection that Ireland could not rule herself if left to do so, by saying that it was better for a man to rule himself badly than for another man to rule him well. The Learned Profession brought out Rev. Father McBride, a young divine from Simcoe county. Among the many good things he said was, that the home rule agitation had shook the ends of the earth. It had shook Penetanguishene. W. G. Murdock answered for the legal profession. Other toasts were The Press and The Ladies.

Great Chief of the railway, W. C. VanHorne:

MR. MOWAT'S OMNIBUS BILL.

Mr. Meredith Thinks the Measure Bucks Against the Federal Authority.

The first business done yesterday by the legislature of any importance, was the consideration of Mr. Mowat's omnibus bill for "further improving the law." The bill covers a multitude of details with regard to the administration of justice, and other details which could only be understood by a study of the bill.

Mr. Meredith doubted if the bill was right in its technical character, because it raised issues as against the federal authority which had not been properly defined or ascertained. The government threw back the imputation, and asked the house to pass the bill, which was passed accordingly.

The transfer of the provincial printing from the Grip company to Warwick & Sons was ratified by a vote of the house, without opposition.

The minister of education and the leader of the opposition had their usual altercation with regard to mechanics' institutes. The order passed and the speaker left the chair.

A special committee heard the views of members of sportsmen's delegations from Toronto, Hamilton, London, Barrie and other places on proposed amendments to the game laws. It was decided to abolish spring shooting. Mr. Graham moved that the game laws be not amended this season. A division resulted in a tie. The committee will meet again at 10.30 to-day.

In the evening the house spent most of its time in committee of the whole, when several bills were advanced a stage. An adjournment was made about 10 o'clock.

Committees.

The municipal committee voted down several amendments to the law in regard to bridges over rivers. Mr. Monk's bill providing that in cases where counties owned court houses and jails which cities used, the assessment should be made on the basis of the capital invested and the total expenditure, and that the cities should be charged in the proportion of the total number of days taken up by city cases, or in the case of jails occupied by city prisoners. The clause providing for the same arrangement in cases where cities owned jails and counties used them was thrown out.

The Agricultural and Arts association passed the bill amending various laws respecting the association.

The Ontario Veterinary college asked for power to grant the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine and Surgery. The matter was laid over.

CADBY THE FORGER.

Chief Stewart Detained With His Prisoner on a Charge of Contempt of Court.

HAMILTON, March 16.—Chief Stewart, with the forger Cadby in charge, has been detained at Newcastle, N.B., on a charge of contempt of court in continuing on his journey in spite of the order by Judge Johnson of Halifax, ordering him to return. Mr. Steele, counsel for the State of New York, who is here, has telegraphed the chief, telling him to hold on to the prisoner and resist arrest on any such charge as contempt of court, especially as he is now in another province than that in which the alleged contempt was displayed.

Judge Sinclair, on whose warrant Cadby is held by the chief, telegraphed to-day to the minister of justice the full particulars of the case, pointing out that Cadby and the State of New York had counsel here, and the information for his arrest was laid in this city. Evidence in the case would be very expensive if it was necessary to send all witnesses to Halifax.

WIFE MURDER AT WINDSOR.

The Result of a Drunken Quarrel—Arrest of the Slayer.

WINDSOR, Ont., March 16.—Mike Reilly, a boiler maker living on Mercer street, killed his wife this afternoon. They both are in the habit of getting intoxicated and quarrelling and it is supposed this is the result of one of their quarrels. Reilly has been arrested.

A Couple of Fires.

ACTON, Ont., March 16.—A fire last night totally destroyed the large building known as the plow factory, owned by W. H. Storey & Sons and occupied by Thos. Ebbage as a pump factory and carpenter shop. Mr. Ebbage loses all his tools and some machinery lately put in. The building was insured for $1200.

TEESWATER, Ont., March 16.—Early this morning Little's flour mill was burned to the ground, and nothing was saved. A firebug is blamed, sufficient snow having fallen during the night and the tracks of a horse and cutter were traced from the mill through the village.

Gabriel Dumont Wants Peace.

MONTREAL, March 17.—Gabriel Dumont, writing from Montana, denies the allegation that he is organizing a new rebellion. He says he is engaged providing for his family wants, and that Big Bear's son paid him a visit regarding the offer of settlement to the Crees, which must have given rise to the rumor, probably by enemies of the halfbreeds, to try and prevent the government from pardoning the prisoners.

Mr. H. H. Cook's Tory Opponent.

ORILLIA, Ont., March 16.—At the conservative convention held here to-day H. L. Lovering, lumberman, Coldwater; James Quinn, Orillia; and Jas. Clarke, barrister, Toronto, were nominated. As none of them would resign, balloting was resorted to, and resulted in favor of Mr. H. L. Lovering, who will contest East Simcoe for the commons with H. H. Cook at the next election.

Enlarging the Exhibition Grounds.

Representatives from the exhibition committee, the exhibition association and the Ontario rifle association met at the Rossin house yesterday and proceeded to the Garrison common to see what could be agreed on in the way of enlarging the Exhibition grounds. Secretary Hill's plan of the ground was brought into requisition, and the party spent a couple of hours tramping about the common and discussing plans. Two schemes were finally suggested. The first was to run a line from the south end of the present north and largest butt parallel with the Exhibition park fence until it strikes the road running from Strachan avenue to the grounds. This will necessitate the removal of the butt. The strip will be about eighty feet wide and will provide plenty of room for an enlarged race-track. The second scheme is to make the strip twenty feet wider at the butt and run the line nearly to the Strachan avenue bridge. Plans embodying both schemes will be prepared.

MEETING OF THE LEAGUE

AGRARIAN OUTRAGES CONTINUE TO PREVAIL IN IRELAND.

Subscriptions to the Parliamentary Fund from Massachusetts and from Canada—The Threats of Orangemen.

DUBLIN, March 16.—At a regular meeting of the national league here to-day, the lord mayor presiding, Timothy Harrington, treasurer of the parliamentary fund, announced that since last meeting there had been received from the different branches of the league in Ireland $2080, and from Canada and Massachusetts $1445. The lord mayor stated that, despite the utmost exertions of the league, it had been found impossible to entirely stop agrarian outrages in the remoter districts of the country, and he believed nothing would prevent their occurrence until the country had its land system placed on an entirely different basis. He believed Mr. Gladstone meant to heal the long standing trouble of the Irish people. The very threats which the Orangemen made to resist home rule, if it should be accorded to Ireland, justified the feeling entertained towards them and their English supporters by the great bulk of the Irish and which was sometimes pronounced to be disloyalty.

BOLTERS FROM THE CABINET.

Speculations as to the Probable Successors to Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan.

LONDON, March 16.—There was much speculation in the lobby of the house of commons this evening as to who would succeed Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan in the cabinet. Of the gentlemen mentioned for places Messrs. Henry N. Fowler, A. C. Sellar and W. C. Borlase are thought to have the best chances of being selected. Although it is expected that Mr. Parnell's support of Mr. Gladstone will be solid, it becomes more and more evident that Mr. Chamberlain will secure a large following. Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan left the house after the disposal of the questions on the notice paper.

The Position of the Discontents.

LONDON, March 17.—The News says Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan have written Mr. Gladstone a statement of their views on the land scheme. The cabinet council has consequently decided to postpone any action likely to lead to dissension. It is an honest effort without acerbity on the part of the majority and minority to arrive at the best solution for the welfare of Ireland. In the meantime both Messrs. Chamberlain and Trevelyan will continue discharging their official duties. Mr. Trevelyan has invited the Scotch members of Parliament to a conference to-morrow on the crofters' question. Mr. Chamberlain agrees to give Ireland home rule but is opposed to buying out the landlords. The present crisis will probably postpone the date of Mr. Gladstone's statement to parliament on the Irish question.

Viscount Hinton's Follies Land Him in Jail.

LONDON, March 16.—Viscount Hinton, the scapegrace son of Earl Poulette, and who, to revenge himself upon his father, for refusing to pay the young man's debts, recently took a circus to Crewkern, the Earl's village, advertising it as "Viscount Hinton's unrivalled show," was to-day sentenced to one year's imprisonment at hard labor, for obtaining goods under false pretences.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAR. 17, 1886.

The Big Money Question.

We did not mis-estimate yesterday when we invited public attention to the question of many millions sterling as the great one of all that was going to seize upon John Bull's sensibilities, in connection with schemes for settling the Irish difficulty. Now the cable despatches are full of it. If Mr. Chamberlain resigns, as generally expected, he will have to give reason for it: if he does not, some candid friend will be sure to do it for him, and that quite effectually. Now, will his principal reason be a straight objection to home rule for Ireland; or will it be based on the idea that a hundred or two millions paid to Irish landlords—or, rather, to the capitalists who hold mortgages on their estates—would be just so much money thrown into the deep sea, never to come back again? A few days more will tell exactly where the radical leader stands.

Somebody to Blame.

To say that somebody is to blame is putting it very mildly. The truth is that somebody, or several somebodies, have been doing Toronto a tremendous injury, and that at the bidding of the Grand Trunk railway company. Here are sections 2 and 3 of the Esplanade bill, as amended by the private bills committee of the Ontario assembly:

2. The said city of Toronto shall not grant or dedicate any part or portions of the said street for railway purposes until the railway companies interested in the Esplanade or desiring to use the said street shall have entered into an agreement or otherwise arranged as in the manner hereinafter set forth and provided.

Section 3 thus proceeds:

3. Nothing in the preceding sections of this act contained shall affect, impair, or take away the rights, powers, and privileges of the Grand Trunk Railway company of Canada, or of the property-holders as they now exist, with regard to making siding or siding accommodation connecting said company's railways with the wharves, warehouses, yards, or other establishments of property south of said new street, or with said company's own property south of the said street.

The remaining part of section 3 is the most important of all. Every citizen of Toronto should read it over three times, and after that a few times more, until he gets it right into his head what the confounded thing means:

And no railway company shall have the right to lay down a track or tracks along said street or any part of it unless and until an agreement with the other railway companies interested in the present Esplanade, shall have been entered into between the said companies respecting the same, or in the event of difference arising, such difference shall have been decided by an arbitrator to be appointed by the said parties mutually between them, or failing such arbitration until authorized to do so by an act of the legislature of the province of Ontario.

The Grand Trunk being the party in possession, no other railway can come in, however much it may be for the city's interest that it should come in, until an agreement shall have been entered into. Which means, till doomsday. Any one railway company, by simply refusing or neglecting to appoint an arbitrator, can block proceedings and deny the city any relief, let the necessity be ever so urgent. Upon what ground does the Ontario assembly deny Toronto the right to manage the city's own streets? If this be not legislative tyranny, please explain.

As far as at present appears, this outrage is done by Mr. Mowat's government, at the request—or at the dictation, shall we say—of the Grand Trunk. And Grand Trunk representatives who sit at the city council board have much to answer for. So also have some other parties; but, more anon.

There are no particular reasons why credence should be given to the wonderful story coming apparently from Edinburgh, and recounting how a detective engaged at a certain house in investigating a jewel robbery, discovered the thief in a foreigner "wanted" in London, who, disguised as a woman, had for some time been acting as lady's maid to the owner of the missing trinkets. On the other hand, there is nothing impossible in the event. Men have been known to pass themselves off successfully as women, just as women have been known to pass themselves off with equal success as men. One need go no further than to recall memorable instances to the point such as that of the Chevalier d'Eon and Hannah Snell.

One of the features of the Colonial and Indian exhibition will be a journal for the Canadian department of the exhibition. This will be entirely a Canadian product. It will be printed on Canadian-made paper, with Canadian ink, Canadian type and a Canadian press, supplied with illustrations by Canadian artists and engravers, and edited and published by Canadians. It will be in operation in the Canadian department of the building and will be an interesting object lesson for foreign visitors. The contents of the paper will be reprinted in book form after the exhibition is over and will embrace statistics of the whole dominion, including the information contained in the handbook to be issued by the government. This will be sent as a memorial of the great exhibition to public libraries, boards of trade and commercial institutions throughout the colonies and Great Britain. The cities of Hamilton, Montreal and other places are having special descriptions prepared for these publications, and the department of education is having its pamphlet descriptive of the educational system of Ontario included in the volume.

If proof were wanted that Italy is advancing in civilization, it might be found in the fact that Professor Nicholls of Glasgow university has been arrested in Naples for carrying a sword cane. The cane was confiscated, and the professor received a gentle hint that he must not in future introduce any of the barbarous customs of Scotland to a law-abiding country like Italy.

The necessity of securing valuable cargo, which may swell from contact with damp, in waterproof coverings, has been occupying the attention of shippers for years, but has never received a more forcible illustration than has been furnished by the total loss of the new brig, Ada L. White, a few weeks ago on the coast of Jamaica. Laden with 11,248 bags of coffee from Rio Janeiro, she encountered a stiff nor-wester when three days out, and shipped a few heavy seas, part of which found its way to the hold, and so affected the cargo that the coffee rose like yeast and burst the decks open with a noise like the discharge of cannon. The heavy two-inch hatches were wrenched open as if made of paper, and the strong ship literally spilt in two.

Cholera entered Spain last October at Seville, but so far only nine cases have been reported, two of which proved fatal. It was generally thought that the scourge had finally disappeared. Late advices from Europe, however, revealed the fact that, with the advance of warm weather, it is beginning to show itself in Malaga and other southern districts, where it seems to have been smouldering, as it were, during winter. It is to be hoped that by proper precautions and stringent measures a serious outbreak may yet be checked.

The sun, it is said, never sets on the flag of England. As a natural result, her troubles are co-extensive with her territory. As if the Irish and Egyptian embroglios were not enough to exercise the statesmanship of her ministers, a new source of trouble in South Africa is forcing itself on their notice. The Boers, emboldened by past success, are acting with a high hand in Zululand, which since the last war has been under the nominal protection of England. These hardy sons of the old Saxon stock have taken forcible possession of three million acres of the finest soil in Zululand, even encroaching on the English settlement at St. Lucia bay. Nor is this all. The Boers claim the right to exact compulsory labor from the natives for permitting them to squat on the lands of which they have been deprived, thus establishing a kind of semi-slavery in their newly-acquired possessions. This—under "the flag that braved a thousand years, etc."—won't do, and deputations are on their way to Cape Town and London to demand that the English protectorate be something more than a name.

In these days of boycotting even an Infallible Pope must feel that "bell, book and candle" are ineffectual and feeble weapons. Our European exchanges broadly hint, that the action of His Holiness in refusing to have any more diplomatic dealings with England through unofficial plenipotentiaries of the Errington type, and asking for an accredited nuncio, (which under present circumstances is almost impossible), is due to the pressure brought to bear on the Vatican by the members of the Irish college in Rome.

Home Rule for Ireland.
Condensed from London Daily News.

In the March number of the Nineteenth Century the home rule question is discussed in a series of four articles. In the first of these Mr. Lefevre sets forth the precedents which may be followed in "framing an autonomous government for Ireland without impairing the unity and strength of the central government of the empire." There are Norway and Sweden with only the dynastic bond. There are Finland and Russia—a liberal constitution and representative institutions linked to a system of pure and unrestrained despotism. Of the United States we have quoted the description of the president of the senate. The dominion of Canada offers another precedent, which differs from that of the United States by preserving to the dominion government a right of veto over the legislation of the provincial parliaments. Mr. Lefevre finds precedents, too, in the German empire, and Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice in another article sets forth the whole story of home rule in Austria. Home rule is, in fact, the more usual form which self-government takes. The principle of centralization which is carried to its furthest extent in France is not the basis on which the greatest and strongest governments rest. So far from causing any disruption of imperial unity home rule, in the various forms in which it exists in Europe and America, tends to bind in sympathy and cooperation races and states which, but for the preservation of their own autonomy, would refuse to live under a central government.

The Irish population is now about 5,160,000, of whom 1,150,000 are Protestants and 4,010,000 Roman Catholics. Of the 20,000,000 acres of Irish soil one-half are owned by only 750 proprietors; and of the landlords who in 1871 held more than 100 acres each, 4842 were non-resident and only 5589 were resident in the country. There is no real local government. Not a railroad can be made nor a water supply laid down without costly appeal to the parliament at Westminster. But these are old grievances. So is that of evictions. Between 1846 and 1880 more than ninety thousand evictions took place, reducing 460,560 persons—one-eighth of the whole population—to absolute ruin and destitution. But it is asked, did not the land act of 1881 cure this monstrous evil? It was meant to do so, and would have done it to a very large extent had not the fall in prices taken place. When the land act was passed Ireland possessed cattle to the value of £37,000,000 sterling. The worth of the same cattle now is probably only £25,000,000. Other agricultural products have gone down to a similar extent, so that the fair rents of 1881 are all the living, and more than all the living, of the tenants in 1886, and cannot be paid. Here is the prolific source of Irish discontent; and it is absolutely needful that it should be removed. All parties are ready for some scheme of land legislation which shall restore the soil to the Irish people without doing injustice to the landlords.

A writer in the Contemporary proposes the establishment of two local or provincial parliaments, one in Belfast for the million Protestants of the north, one in Dublin for the four millions of Roman Catholics of the south. As the land question would have been settled, the only limitations on the powers of these parliaments would be that they must not levy exceptional taxation upon individuals, and must preserve perfect religious freedom. Ireland, having complete local self-government, would then lose part of her representation in the imperial parliament. The writer in the Contemporary suggests that the number should be reduced to sixty, elected on a cumulative system by the provincial parliaments. This is the most difficult part of the problem. Ireland must either lose all power of influencing the policy of the empire as it is directed by the imperial parliament, or its representatives in the imperial parliament must join in making laws for England, Wales and Scotland, while England, Wales and Scotland have no voice in making laws for Ireland. Perhaps the precedent of the dominion of Canada might come in at this point and offer a way out of the difficulty.

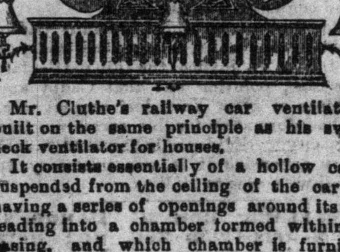
At present Mr. Parnell has established an Irish parliament at Westminster, for the imperial parliament deals with little else than Irish business, and with that in an unsatisfactory fashion. Scarcely anything else can be attended to. "Great Britain is practically governed," as Mr. Frank H. Hill says with perfect truth, "by Ireland. The votes of Irishmen in the constituencies determine the balance of party representation in the house of commons. The Irish parliamentary party decides the fate of governments. Mr. Parnell is the dictator not only of Ireland, but of the United Kingdom—the maker and unmaker of ministries, choosing between Lord Salisbury and Mr. Gladstone for Downing street, as he chose the other day between Mr. Lynch and Capt. O'Shea for Galway." From this intolerable state of things there is only one way of escape—the way of home rule. It is, too, the only method of successfully carrying on the Irish government. Thus everything points to the one conclusion that as the extension of local liberties to the colonies has saved the empire, so the granting of local self-government to Ireland will save the United Kingdom, and, in Mr. Hill's words, "will make the union more real by disembarrassing it of irritating details, and leaving greater freedom of movement and action among its constituent parts."

HOW TO GET FRESH AIR.

The Problem of Ventilating Houses, Schools and Railway Cars—Chas. Cluthe's New Patented System of Doing It.

The system of ventilation for houses invented by Chas. Cluthe, of Toronto, consists of the two flues on the chimney breast, which are united on the inlet of the pipe from the furnace in the cellar. A valve is attached to the inlet, by which either flue may be opened or closed for the transfer of heat. Each flat is systematically connected with the suction flues, both at floor and ceiling, by openings proportioned to the size of the apartment, which openings are covered with ventilation plates, no register being required. The branch pipes tapping each floor are proportioned to the size of room, and increase in size until they reach the patent apparatus (which Mr. Cluthe, from its shape, designates the "swan's neck") which is placed in the centre of chimney breast between the two flues. The swan's neck consists of a chamber having two partitions extending across the full width of the chamber, but having openings at opposite ends of each (in short having an S shaped passage) so that the air entering the ventilation plates, must pass round the end of each to reach the discharge flue. By the peculiar construction of this chamber draughts will be reduced to a minimum. By this arrangement it will be seen that the heated air near the ceiling and the air near the floor laden with the deadly carbonic gas are removed, and the atmosphere of rooms kept sweet and wholesome without draught. The inlet of part or the whole of the heat from a furnace fire will be sufficient to draw all foul air from ordinary dwelling houses, but in large buildings, such as theatres, churches, schools, etc., where large audiences are assembled, and a greater quantity of foul air must be drawn off, a small pipe may be introduced at bottom of flue with a burning gas-jet, which will create a vacuum and increase the draught. By having a thermometer outside and another in the room Mr. Cluthe, by means of a rod running the whole length of the flue, and furnished with a graduated scale, can control the ventilation, so that it may be perfectly regulated by a child. On large buildings he intends regulating the ventilation by an ingenious automatic arrangement working on the principle of the barometer.

A glass shoot (or damper) acting on six rollers at top and bottom, is connected by a simple lever attachment with the thermometric apparatus acted on by the atmosphere, and thus the ventilation is thoroughly regulated by nature herself.



Mr. Cluthe's railway car ventilator is built on the same principle as his swan's neck ventilator for houses.

It consists essentially of a hollow casing suspended from the ceiling of the car and having a series of openings around its base leading into a chamber formed within the casing, and which chamber is furnished with the swan's neck arrangement, so that the air has to pass round the alternate ends of the two parallel partitions, in order to reach the upper portion of the chamber, from which it escapes through a revolving ventilator placed on the roof of the car.

The resistance of the air in a moving car furnished with this vane-shaped revolving dome will always keep the opening for the exit of foul air on the lee side, and the ventilation is regulated from the inside by an attachment similar to the one described as used in the house ventilator.

Mr. Cluthe has just shipped one of his house ventilators and one of his car ventilators to the Colonial exhibition in London, England. The car ventilator is a beautiful piece of work, exquisitely carved and finished in cherry, and with its four attached lamps, forms an elegant chandelier.

The exports of wheat and flour from California and Oregon during February exceeded 4,100,000 bushels, but the exports for March now promise to be larger, twelve ships having sailed during the first five days of this month from San Francisco with over 1,000,000 bushels.

Latest London advices report Mincing Lane markets as follows: Sugar is quiet; beet is easier; refined is firmer; stoved is unimproved; cane is unaltered. Ceylon coffee sold at 1s to 1 florin advance; East Indian is but little changed. Cocoa is in favor of buyers. Tea is strong, with an increased demand for congous; Indian is unaltered. There is a fair enquiry for rice. There has been a heavy fall in white Singapore pepper; black is easier. There is a speculative enquiry for nutmegs. Cassia lignea has risen 6d to 1s per cwt. Prices of Zanzibar cloves are hardening. East Indian cinchona sells at full rates.

The visible supply of wheat has decreased nearly a million bushels, and corn increased nearly two millions.

A POSTAGE-STAMP STORY.

Primarily I am a postage stamp; just a common, every day, two-cent stamp, possessing only such attributes as are peculiar to my class. Indeed, if I were placed among a thousand of my brethren I doubt if the keenest observer would be able to point me out as being in any way distinguished. A vague gloom enshrouds that portion of my life preceding its development into one of the government agents (if I may so call myself); and I indistinctly remember having once been connected in some way with a copy of an English comic paper which drifted as an exchange into an American newspaper office, and thence quickly into a huge waste basket. From that time until arriving at my present state I passed through the hands of paper-dealers, paper manufacturers, and divers clerks and careless people, my last distinct impression being received from an engraver's press.

I can scarcely be called a conceited person; still I am led to believe that my mission in the world is an important one. I am kind-hearted, of agreeable disposition and well satisfied with my lot. I frequently congratulate myself upon the good fortune which made me what I am. How much better to be, perchance, the bearer of some kind letter, a perfumed billet-doux, if you please, than a vulgar revenue stamp, fit only to adorn a box of ill smelling cigars or grace a barrel of inferior liquor.

A man hurriedly places a postage stamp upon a letter, which he drops into a convenient letter box, and entirely forgets the circumstance. It humbly serves his purpose; beyond that he does not care. But think for a moment of the travels of that same stamp, of the persons it meets, of the message it bears, and say it is not a sentient being.

After my birth I was carefully accounted for to various commonplace officials, and, after some delay, sent to the postoffice of a certain eastern city. I was purchased soon afterward by Archibald Warrack, who tore me rudely from my friends, and after carrying me about in his pocketbook for a day or two, cast me into a certain dark drawer of his desk.

This Mr. Warrack was about 25, tall, graceful and altogether a very gentlemanly appearing person. He dressed neatly and tastefully, but with no suggestion of foppishness. To be frank, I admired him from the beginning of our acquaintance. Regarding his social and financial status, he was a gentleman of artistic tastes—one of the grand army of dilletanti—possessing an ample bank account and a pedigree which was never questioned.

The desk, into a drawer of which I was so ignominiously thrust, stood in a sunny alcove separated from Mr. Warrack's studio by a heavy portiere. This little apartment was a very pleasant place, and Mr. Warrack spent considerable more time in lounging than he did in working in the great, bare, bare room adjoining. Art was a hobby of mine, and it was with much satisfaction that I found myself placed in such a congenial atmosphere.

Soon after being transferred to the drawer I have before alluded to, I discovered that my quarters were shared by a number of other persons of my own kind who were reposing on dainty perfumed envelopes. They were, however, black stains upon their escutcheons which showed them to be forever ruined. I made bold to introduce myself to one of these scarred veterans, and, after a few preliminary remarks concerning the weather, politics and so on, said:

"From your looks (date of cancelling) I infer that you have been dwelling with this Mr. Warrack for some time, and, being a stranger, I shall esteem it a favor if you will tell me such things as you feel at liberty to speak of concerning his private history."

"It's a sad case," said my friend, with a deep sigh. He looked haggard and worn, and was apparently in great distress.

"How sad?" I inquired sympathetically.

"A sad case," he continued without heeding my interruption. "Less than six months ago I was the carrier of a letter written by a young lady named Rarlden—Miss Helen Rarlden—to Mr. Warrack, the gentleman whose acquaintance you have recently made. This letter was written in reply to one from him in which he exhausted all the available adjectives of the English language in the sincerest avowals of love, closing with an offer of his heart and hand."

"And the letter of which you were the bearer contained——"

"Her acceptance," he said, completing my sentence. "Helen Rarlden is a beautiful woman, gifted, wealthy and of excellent family. At the time I parted from her, or rather at the time she parted with me, she loved this—fellow with all her pure soul—loved him as man was never loved before; and he doubtless cared for her—then."

The emphasis of this last word was destroyed by a pitiful sob, and for a few moments my friend was so moved that he could not speak. I waited patiently until he again began:

"Shortly after the engagement, which naturally followed, Helen (I take the liberty of so calling her) was compelled to accompany her mother to Europe on a trip undertaken in the hope of benefiting the lady's health. The parting of this Mr. Warrack with his promised bride was tender and touching; I was present at the time in the gentleman's left-hand coat pocket, and felt the beating of Helen's heart with distinctiveness for a few blissful moments. I admit that it was an embarrassing position for me to occupy, but I could not well withdraw, as I was then very much attached to this letter, as I am now."

I smiled at this bit of pleasantry, but my neighbor pressed a convenient pen-wiper to his misty eyes and resumed his narrative.

"After Helen went abroad Warrack was morose and melancholy for a while; he began several pictures with which to occupy his mind—gloomy conceptions to correspond with his state of feelings. He first began what he called 'Arthur and Guinevere'—the parting scene, you know. He sketched and daubed at it for a week or so, but kicked it off the easel one day in a fit of impatience. When Helen's first letter came to him (they are in the next drawer below, embellished with cold, haughty, foreign stamps) he replied promptly and at great length—tender, loving messages. O, how true he was!"

The stamp smiled bitterly.

"But he soon became neglectful and would toss Helen's notes into a corner of the desk and not even open them. Of course, under these circumstances, Helen did not write so often, and I soon began to notice a change in Warrack's manner. He became cheerful and planned some joyous pictures; one of them, a 'spring' landscape, is on his easel now, and he has ordered the canvas primed for a contemplated work to be called, 'The Lifting of the Clouds.'"

"And what is the cause of this sudden change?" I asked.

"He is interested in another direction," was the reply.

"And what of Helen?" I inquired.

"She is still true," answered my friend in a tone of conviction.

This ended our conversation for the time being. My fellow lodger drew back into a dark corner and remained silent for several days.

In the meantime Mr. Warrack seemed happy; he spent much time in singing and whistling snatches of tunes, chiefly from light operas. He painted a little when in the right mood, and I observed through the keyhole of the drawer that the "Lifting of the Clouds" was progressing finely. It was with pain that I thought there might be some connection between the title of the picture and the growing coldness in the manner of the young people toward one another, judging from the dwindling of their correspondence.

A few days after my conversation with the elderly stamp Mr. Warrack opened our drawer and threw in an unopened letter which he had just received. As soon as he went out my friend snatched it and examined it eagerly. The envelope bore the card of a Venetian hotel and a canceled postage stamp whose language we did not know.

"From Helen?" I said, interrogatively.

"Yes," was the mournful reply.

Time wore on. It is a fashion time has, even in the life of lowly postage-stamps. Spring came tripping down her bright, flower mulled path, and in the darkness of our habitation we felt the stirring of re-awakened life. Mr. Warrack did not enter his studio for days at a time. When I spoke of these long absences to my chum he only answered in the language of Tennyson:

In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnished dove;
In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

"Turns to thoughts of his new love while he forgets the old," I suggested.

"Poor Helen!" he said. "O, woman, you alone are long suffering and true."

Spring, summer and fall.

One bright autumn day, as my friend and I were conversing in our quarters, Mr. Warrack, who was sitting in the alcove reading a newspaper, cut from its society columns two items which had, through the instrumentality of Fate and the typographical "make-up," been printed in this order:

Cards have been issued for the wedding of Mr. Archibald Warrack, the rising young artist, and Miss Florence Springer, daughter of Jay Winter Springer, the poet.

The other item read:

A cablegram from Venice announces the marriage at that place of Miss Helen Rarlden, who has been sojourning abroad for some time past, to Sir Arthur Lombard of London.

"The devil!" gasped my friend, through the dust which covered him.

"Not the devil, but the way of the world," said I.

"I'll bet $10 you haven't paid Mrs. Flapjack yet for your last month's board," said Bill Yard to Tom Anjerry, both students at the University of Texas.

"You are right. I offered to pay her, but she wouldn't take it."

"How was that?"

"I wanted her to take in payment some of your notes of hand at ten cents on the dollar, but she said she would rather have Confederate money, old issue, and as I didn't have any I couldn't pay her."

It may save you days of sickness, and you will find it is more valuable than gold. Be sure you buy the genuine Perry Davis' Pain-Killer and take no other mixture. 36

It Acts Like a Charm.

—Ex-Ald. George Evans, 449 Queen street west, testifies to the efficacy of "Hallamore's Expectorant" as follows: "It is undoubtedly far superior to all other advertised remedies for coughs and colds, especially in the case of children, with whom it acts like a charm." edx

—Why go limping and whining about your corns, when a 25 cent bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them? Give it a trial, and you will not regret it.

Public Notice.

—All testimonials in favor of Hallamore's Expectorant are from well known residents of Toronto. Mr. S. J. Willcock, 129 Spadina avenue, says: "I have used Hallamore's Expectorant for coughs and colds for fifteen years, and would not be without it. It never fails to cure me." edx

—There are cases of consumption so far advanced that Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will not cure, but none so bad that it will not give relief. For coughs, colds and all affections of the throat, lungs and chest, it is a specific that has never been known to fail. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, thereby removing the phlegm, and gives the diseased parts a chance to heal.

—A. S. Smith, the hat manufacturer, has received the style of silk hat for spring both in American and English, in which he is prepared to fill orders either in the easy fitting wire brim or the regular solid brim. Ask your hatter for the wire brim hat in best quality. edx

—C. E. Kyle of Uxbridge writes, October 3rd, 1870, and says: "I certify to the excellent qualities of Allen's Lung Balsam as a remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. I know it to be all it is recommended to be." 36

—You need not cough all night and disturb your friends; there is no occasion for you running the risk of contracting inflammation of the lungs or consumption, while you can get Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. This medicine cures coughs, colds, inflammation of the lungs and all throat and chest troubles. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which immediately relieves the throat and lungs from viscid phlegm.

Hoarseness and Bronchitis.

—Among the many remedies used for the cure of coughs and colds, none more speedily gains the confidence of the sufferer than "Hallamore's Expectorant." For hoarseness and bronchitis its rapid effect is surprising. In private sale during 25 years it has gained for itself an enviable reputation and produced wonderful results. In 25 cent bottles at all drug stores. edx

—Jacob Loockman, Buffalo, N. Y., says he has been using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for rheumatism; he had such a lame back he could not do anything, but one bottle has, to use his own expression, "cured him up." He thinks it is the best thing in the market.

—R. J. Licence & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in picture frames, mats, room mouldings, &c., &c., have opened out a new establishment at the south east corner of Bay and Adelaide streets, and are now fully prepared to supply all comers. The firm make a specialty of the above articles, and are second to none in regard to quality, price, &c. x

—Most excruciating are the twinges which rack the muscles and joints of the rheumatic. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidneys, by which the blood is more effectually depurated, removes through the natural channels certain acrid elements in the circulation which produce rheumatism and gout. The medicine is also a fine laxative antibilious medicine and general corrective.

—Thompson's Pile and Costive Cure cures in every case. xtf

—Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator is pleasant to take; sure and effectual in destroying worms. Many have tried it with best results.

CAPT. GREVILLE HARSTON ON MR. BADGEROW'S BILL.

A Protest Against Further Delay—The Caledonians Beat the Granites at Curling—Baseball, Lacrosse, King and Other Notes.

Editor World: Referring to the lengthened discussion before the special committee on the game laws amendment bills, I hope you will allow me to say a few words in reply to Mr. Kerns, Mr. Clancy and others.

This matter has been actively before the shooting public for several years. Last year the bill was put on one side specially to allow the members to consult their constituencies. Ever since the house met this year I have had letter after letter asking when it would come on and urging me to hasten the gentleman in charge of the bill to hurry it up. On Thursday last I sent out 26 notices to different counties giving them notice that the committee would meet to-day and receive deputations.

The Sportsman's convention, which met on March 26, 1884, was essentially a representation of the whole province and those clauses of their wishes as presented by Mr. Badgerow's bill were unanimously adopted, and therefore the very thing that Mr. Kerns suggested has been done.

With regard to the disgraceful slaughter of deer in the north of the province, proof of which I produced before the committee of having occurred so lately as last month, this can never be stopped without the appointment of paid government inspectors or constables. Our voluntary game protection society in Muskoka has utterly failed to cope with it.

You may pass fifty thousand game laws with the penalty of being hung, drawn and quartered if you like, but without the machinery, such as we ask for, they are a dead letter and so much waste paper.

GREVILLE HARSTON.

Caledonians v. Granites.

The curling match played on the 26th ult. for the Caledonian society's cup having been declared a tie, the clubs competed again yesterday for the trophy, five rinks from each club, on the Caledonian rink. The Granites met with a defeat, being 34 points down at the finish. The final contest is now between the Torontos and Caledonians.

Baseball Questions.

Editor World: Give the names of the different clubs of the league. Who do you think the best all-round player in last year's Torontos? What league are the Londons and Guelph Maple Leafs going to join? C. B.

[(1) See elsewhere in this issue. (2) O'Rourke. (3) Cannot say.]

The Manufacturers' Baseball League.

A joint meeting of the two sections of the Manufacturers' baseball league was held over Milligan's cigar store last night. It was announced that the lathers had withdrawn from No. 2 section, and that that section could entertain applicants for membership from two or three other trade clubs. It was suggested that the carpenters and other classes of trades should organize clubs. Particulars can be had from the secretary. It was decided that the league should meet for business on the second Thursday of each month. E. J. Ebbels was elected president, A. E. Ryves vice-president, and D. W. Bundy secretary-treasurer. Three delegates will be chosen from each section, who, along with the officers, will form the council.

General Notes.

There is likely to be a good cricket club in Buffalo this season.

The Merion cricket club of Philadelphia will have three English professionals this year.

The Active Baseball club will hold a meeting at 55½ King street west to-night at 8 o'clock sharp.

St. Louis is pleased that the Utica and Toronto baseball clubs have adopted the same uniforms as the Maroons, because it shows that at least two other clubs don't think maroon a "Jonah" color.

John C. Chapman has engaged for the Buffalo baseball club Holzberger, pitcher, J. Brouthers, first base, McGlone, third base, Carr, short stop and Smith, catcher, and has under consideration Taylor and Chamberlain.

The American baseball association has cut out a pretty rapid pace. A grand total of 560 games will have to be completed during the twenty-five weeks of the championship season, opening April 17 and closing Oct. 10.

The World has to return its thanks to Mr. E. J. Ebbels, J. B. Nethery, secretary of the Junior baseball league, and S. B. Ewing, secretary of the Juvenile baseball league, for furnishing names of clubs, with secretaries, in the different organizations.

At a meeting of the Juvenile baseball league held Monday night, the following clubs were elected members: Centrals, Wellingtons, Tecumsehs, Nightingales, Unions and Windsors. The following officers were elected: F. Prince, president; S. B. Ewing, secretary; F. B. Eager, treasurer.

The baseball season opened at Charleston, S. C., yesterday with an exhibition game between Louisville, Ky., and Charleston league team. It was the first professional game ever played at Charleston, and was witnessed by a large crowd. The game resulted in a score of 7 to 5 in favor of the Louisville club.

At a meeting of the Confectioners' Baseball club Monday night the following officers were elected: President, W. Gilfoy; vice-president, J. Mills; secretary, D. W. Bandy; treasurer, J. Connors; committee, T. Monkhouse, G. Barber, J. Maxwell, G. Tambling and J. Mitchell.

At a meeting of the Athletic Lacrosse club held Monday night, the following officers were elected for the coming season: Captain, J. Bruce; president, J. Fullerton; vice do., J. Day; sec., F. J. Korman; treas., W. Jones; committee, A. Bennett, H. Bennett, W. Moylan, J. W. Morrison and J. Canavan.

Jem Smith was given a dinner and a benefit at St. James' Hall, London, on March 5, when he was presented with a purse containing £360. The hall was crowded to excess, among the audience being the Marquis of Queensberry, Lord Clifford and other noblemen. Jack Davis wound up with Smith. The latter is lionized wherever he makes an appearance.

Following are the sums fixed by the league for the unassigned Providence and Buffalo players: Peter Wood, $200; Force, $200; Serad, $300; Crowley, $250; Start, $300; Knight, $250. It is not likely that these figures can be obtained for any one of them. The chances are that the league will have to release them soon, bidders being non est.—Philadelphia Sporting Life.

Bancroft, manager of the Rochester team, is anxious to have the teams in the International league play 112 games with each other—56 games at home and 56 abroad. As there are only some 118 playing days in the season—from May 15th to September 31—this seems to be rushing things pretty close.

One of the railroad companies has offered to furnish Von der Ahe, of St. Louis, with a private palace car to be used by his team while on trips this summer. The car will be provided with sleeping apartments and so arranged that meals can be served to all the players. The car will do away with the necessity of stopping at hotels.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Ontario Cricket association it was decided to play at home with the West Indian Gentlemen Eleven on the dates asked for, Aug. 25 and 26, and with the English team on Sept. 7, 8 and 9. The dates for the international match with the American eleven and the inter-provincial with Quebec have not yet been arranged.

Mr. Frank Grimm states that as Burke was the first man to challenge the English champion, Smith's backers have determined to give Burke the first chance. They are willing to match Smith to box Burke for any amount up to £1000 a side, and will allow him reasonable expenses for the match to come off in the United Kingdom. Articles and a deposit from Burke will receive prompt attention.—London Sporting Life.

The third and final shoot for the Briggs' challenge cup between teams of five captained by W. McDowall and Jeff. Worden took place at John Oulcott's place, Eglinton, yesterday. Mr. McDowall's team consisted of himself, R. Dickson, Millsom and G. Pearsall. Bob Morrison failed to shop up, by agreement the score made by the lowest man on his side was credited to him. Thus Mr. McDowall made 7, Mr. Pearsall 6, Mr. Dickson 5 and Messrs. Millsom and Morrison 3 each; total 24. Of the other team, Jeff Worden and Joe Taylor each made 7, Dan Blea and J. James each 5 and R. Hunter 4; total 28. Jeff. Worden's team consequently won and having accomplished the trick for the third time the trophy now belongs to them.

In an interview Alf. Greenfield intimated that he had scarcely received fair play from the papers. He was getting rather the best of it until the seventh round, when a pile-driver in the belly completely doubled him up. After the fight he exhibited comparatively few signs of punishment. He could not say whether he would ever fight again, but still would like to have a go with Jack Davis, whom Smith recently did up. Greenfield would not commit himself regarding the probable result of a fight between Smith and Sullivan, but he said the Bostonian was the best man that was ever born for a fighter, that he was as much heavier than Smith as Smith was than him (Greenfield), and could get around with as much spryness as an eight-stone boy. He thought Mitchell or Burke would have no show with Smith. Greenfield is to be given a benefit at Birmingham on March 13, when Smith will wind up with him. Greenfield said that just as many London roughs attended the fight at Maisons Lafitte, France, as Brums.

Messrs. Goodwin Bros., 241 Broadway, New York, publishers of the Official Turf Guide, have issued a circular in which they say: "Heretofore, in conjunction with our monthly numbers, we have been issuing weekly editions; these weeklies we purpose discontinuing, and instead, we shall for the future, publish a complete number semi-monthly (or oftener, should occasion require) which will invariably contain all races run from January 1 to date of issue. We are fully aware of the tremendous impetus which the 'associations' and the public have given to racing in this country, bringing with it increased labor and greater expense in the compilation of a 'Turf Guide,' more particularly so when applied to the manner in which we propose issuing ours; notwithstanding this, however, we shall be fully prepared to undertake these additional responsibilities, and trust to receive your individual support to this work. The terms of subscription are $7 per annum, which includes all numbers issued during the season and an annual (library form) at the end of the year."

The Oregon's Successor.

Since the loss of the Cunard line steamer Oregon the America, of the National line, hold the title of the fastest steamship afloat (6 days 13 hours 44 minutes). The City of Rome, which is the largest Atlantic steamship and almost as fast, forms a fortnightly service with the America between New York and Liverpool, calling at Queenstown. The agency for these steamers is 56 Yonge street.

Amateur Singing in Churches.

Editor World: Advertising amateur singers for Sunday church services seems to be the latest dodge to get up an audience. I pity the minister or members of any Christian church who have to adopt such tactics. If the fault lies with the minister, the sooner he betakes himself to a field where his talents will be appreciated the better. But if amateur singing is the choice of the members they should at least supply singing talent that would be worth listening to, as those attracted by it would deprive themselves of going to churches which do not require to adopt such doubtful assistance.

CHURCH-GOER.

James G. Blaine on Irish Grievances.

From the Irish World.

There is no parallel among civilized nations to the prolonged discontent among the Irish people. A race gifted with many of the noblest qualities of humanity, strong in intellect and quick in apprehension, could not for centuries complain of grievances if they did not exist, and the grievances could not exist for centuries without serious reproach to the British government. To the lasting honor of American statesmanship, southern grievances were not allowed by neglect or arrogance to grow and become chronic after the civil war had closed. The one safeguard against an evil so great was the restoration of self-government to the people who had rebelled, the broadening of the elective franchise, the abolition of caste and privilege. If Englishmen had studied the reconstruction policy instead of deriding it, they might have learned that the American government accomplished for the south in four years what their own government has failed to accomplish for Ireland through ten generations.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Peelites and the Last of Them.

From the London Saturday Review.

Lord Cardwell was the last of the Peelites. Mr. Gladstone is himself alone. He cannot properly be designated by a word derived from any political predecessor. His place in history, however that may be prejudged by his contemporaries, is primary and personal. There are Peels in the present parliament, but they are Peleidæ, not Peelites. The present Sir Robert Peel, having been successively a Palmerstonian whig and a Derbyite conservative, is now, so far as it is possible to classify so mobile and variable a politician, a tory democrat of the order of Lord Randolph Churchill. Mr. Arthur Peel, like Barbantio in Iago's repartee, can most suitably be defined by his office. He is speaker, and in that capacity has occasionally to act the part of a fraternal Brutus toward his irrepressible elder brother.

Albert Edward's Dyspepsia.

From the London World.

I am sorry to know that for some time past the Prince of Wales, although in other respects in fine health, has been rather a martyr to dyspepsia, which threatens to assume a chronic form, and that he is reduced to an "iron ration," both as regards quantity and character. So far back as his visit to Eaton hall his enforced allowance for dinner consisted solely of the lean part of the mutton chop and what Sir Andrew Clark calls a "hunk" of stale bread. The restriction on the fine appetite of H. R. H. which his medical adviser has prescribed, and to which he adheres with a loyalty which must be a sore strain, is having the incidental effect of reducing his weight.

Accident to a Brakeman.

John Williams, a C. P. R. brakeman, fell off the way freight train going east at daybreak yesterday morning near the Davenport crossing. His right foot was run over, and his right arm broken. He was taken to the North Toronto station, and the ambulance sent for, when he was conveyed to the hospital. At two o'clock this morning he was reported as doing well. The train was made up of box cars, which were covered with ice. Williams is about 40 years of age and belongs to London, Ontario.

A Watch for a Quarter.

George Nealey and Samuel Samuels were at the Bay Horse hotel on the 9th of last month. Samuels offered a watch for sale. Nealey said he would give 25 cents for it. Samuels replied that he would not sell it for 25 cents, but would take a quarter. Nealey, who had the watch in his hand, slipped it in his pocket and handed Samuels a quarter. A vain remonstrance was made. Samuels afterwards missed a scarf pin and had a warrant sworn out for Nealey's arrest, which Detective Hodgins yesterday effected.

Suit For Commission.

Owing to the illness of Judge Morgan, Judge McDougall presided yesterday at the county court. Menzies v. McSpadden was brought by Alex. C. Menzies of Toronto to recover from Wm. McSpadden $200 commission on the sale of pianos. Menzies was awarded $195. State v. Robinson was dismissed with costs, the plaintiff not appearing.

To-day's peremptory list is: Robson v. Davies, Marshall v. Williams, Armstrong v. Smith, O'Connor v. Toronto, Prittie v. Dunning.

A Semi-Centennial Debt.

Mr. W. B. McMurrich, chairman of the Semi-Centennial celebration committee, writes to the mayor stating that there are $400 outstanding liabilities in connection with the celebration that he has been unable to get rid of. One hundred dollars was incurred by other than the committee through keeping the Welland battery over for the review. He thinks the city should pay.

Home Again.

Charles W. Lee of 4 Toronto street was registered at the central police station last night at 8 o'clock. He was brought back from Niagara by Private Detective Reid. The warrant charges him with fraudulently obtaining $50 from Samuel S. Beckett. It is expected a number of other charges will be made in the police court this morning.

Another Change of Base.

At It Again.

—As usual The Waterloo House is startling the natives with bargains; this time by offering an immense purchase of a well known make of ladies' corsets, worth $1.00, for 25c. and 38 cents. Over 100 pairs were sold in four hours. Ladies should hurry up for a good choice. The second drive is a line of about two thousand New York spring hats, 25c. and 35 cents each, really worth 75c., $1.00 and $1.25. 278 Yonge, cor. Alice. 246

The Ides of March.

—"Beware the ides of March!" may be a valuable storm-warning in some quarters: but it is unnecessary in quarters where the roses bloom with summer luxuriance as they do with Bradley, the rose-grower, whose depot is in the Dominion bank building.
