It is very pleasant and an easy matter to write a good letter to a friend, but not by any means so easy to write one, enlarged and suited to the taste of the many readers of any newspaper. In this long and narrow scagirt Province of the Gulf, the trouble is not lack of "news," but how to condense it so that a summary of the whole term of sentence. past six days may be given. With a dozen weeklies, each with its corps of itemizers, "locals" are plentiful, and between their issues, events are always happening, of interest at home, but perhaps not abroad, however, the "correspondent" risks that, and launches forth upon the merciful judgments of his unknown readers. THE WEATHER, with the exception of about three days, has hardly been at freezing point, but little snow has fallen, crows and small pirds are about, windows and doors are left open, overcoats and furs but slightly needed, and dame Nature appears to be opposing "old probability's," prophecy (in the shape of Mr. Vennor) of a severe win-
