PULL OF SALMON OFTEN DECEPTIVE

Angler May Think It is Sixty Pounds, But It Isn't

STRAIN ON THE ROD

Test Was Made, Last Week, at a Camp Up River

At one of the clubhouses up the river, not far from the mouth of the Matapedia, they were discussing a remarkably handsome twenty-eight pound salmon which one of the men had just taken.

"Never had such a struggle in my life," he said. "I had hardly any control over him, as he has risen short and got hooked in the back, between the tail and the adipose fin."

"He led me up and down the big stretch pool, made me get out of the canoe and rush like a maniac down the shallows and I only got him at last through a miraculous lunge of old Sandy's with the gaff as he was making for a lower part of the stream."

"He kept me going for over half an hour and left me tired to death. I should say he never pulled a pound less than sixty pounds."

Two friends, old hands at the game, chuckled.

"Easy, old man," said one of them. "Easy with the avoid-uous of the strain."

"I don't exaggerate a little bit," replied the angler. "I know what I can pull very well and am sure that I put not a pound less than sixty pounds into my fight."

"Well, you are modest after all," said the third man. "I got my first big fish a forty pounder, in a very quick Norwegian river."

"The water was high" and particularly strong, and he was hooked foul, too. He gave me nearly an hour's hard fight and tired my arms completely."

"He must have pulled a good hundred pounds, I pointed as I lay on my stomach at the edge of a snow pile admiring my fish. I very nearly quarrelled with the best guide, man ever had when he replied:

"Five pounds more like. Never did I know one pull more," and I found he was right, too."

"What nonsense," said the successful angler, "Excuse my positiveness, but I do a bit of rowing and gym work, and I really do know something about the weight of a pull. I am sure that salmon of mine, head on against me, unhindered by any restraint about his mouth, was certainly pulling not less than sixty pounds."

"Ever try what was the straining power of your rod?" asked the other as he lighted a fresh cigar. "You could not put on more than the rod would hold, could you? You would never believe the difference there is between lifting by the hands and lifting at the end of a supple eighteen-foot fishing rod."

"Well, there is something practical about that. I will get my rod and try it right here," said the other. "I should like to get this thing right, you know."

"Say, bring your best leader along with you, will you?" broke in the quiet man, "and we will work out these strain tests right to a finish, if you don't mind."

The young man soon returned with his handsome salmon rod and reel and also one of those weighing scales often found in fishing bags, which work by pulling down a graduated spring. The hook of this was stuck in a door cleat on the floor and he

PROHIBITIVE PULPWOOD TAX MEANS GREAT DEVELOPMENT

Country Wasting Its Resources by Permitting Uncle Sam to Gobble Up Its Raw Material

LUMBERMEN PROTEST STRONGLY AGAINST IT

Too much attention is being bestowed on the wheat fields of Canada and too little on its forests. Canada's wealth in timber is far in excess of that of any other country in the world. Day by day as the forests of other countries are becoming depleted the value of our forests is increasing. If we protect and preserve our forests as we should, they will, in a few years, become our greatest asset. Thriving towns and cities will spring up where now are located sleepy hamlets and villages. A new life will be infused into this eastern section of Canada and days of prosperity will be ours. But if we permit the hand of the American despoiler to rob us of our great heritage, to take from us our timber in its raw state and convert it into the finished product in his own country, we are throwing away the one great opportunity to bring prosperity to this eastern section of Canada and dooming ourselves to perpetual stagnation.

The wood supply in the United States is rapidly becoming exhausted. In some states it is already so. American manufacturers are looking to Canada more and more every day for their supply of raw material. At the present time vast quantities of pulpwood are being shipped to the United States to be manufactured into pulp and paper. Last year nearly $3,000,000 worth was exported, representing 800,000 cords of wood. Spruce realizes about $2.50 per cord on an average when delivered at the nearest railway station to where it is cut.

Why not have this wood manufactured in Canada? One and a quarter cords of wood go to a ton of paper and it is claimed that every ton of paper made at home would leave $7.50 more in the country than if the wood were sold. The way to bring about the manufacture of pulp and paper in this country is to place such an export duty on the raw material as will prohibit its exportation. If this is done American capital will doubtless establish pulp and paper mills in Canada.

Believing that the sentiment of this part of Canada is strongly in favor of such a tax, Events has commenced to obtain the views of leading lumbermen and others on the subject. We present below a few of the opinions received by us and will follow with others from week to week, in the hope that sentiment will be stirred into action.

"Events" will publish not only the views of those who favor the imposition of a tax, but the views of those who oppose it as well. By so doing it will be seen just what is to be gained and just what is to be lost by the imposition of such a tax.

W. B. SNOWBALL, CHATHAM.
To the Editor of Events

"I am opposed to an export duty on raw pulpwood. I go further and think the exportation should be prohibited, so as to keep the manufacture of the raw material into pulp in our own country. Canada's raw material for Canadians."

W. A. HICKSON, NEWCASTLE
To the Editor of Events

In answer to your enquiry as to my views on a proposal to place an export duty on raw pulpwood, would say that I think it very important that a heavy export duty should be placed on all pulpwood, whether raw or in the rough. The duty should be sufficiently high to prevent its exportation. It should be manufactured into pulp in our own province and our own people given employment instead of shipping it to U. S. ports. If our U. S. friends owned the

WAS DEAD TO THE WORLD FOR HOURS

Manning Renton, I. C. R. Fireman, Lost Track of Himself Here

LAPSE OF MEMORY

When He Came To He Was Badly Cut and Bruised

Badly cut and painfully bruised as the result of a mysterious accident or assault, Manning Renton, an I. C. R. locomotive fireman, was taken to Moncton from Campbellton Sunday and is now confined to bed at his home in that city. Whether he was struck by a train, assaulted, or fell the injured man did not know, but he was pretty badly hurt, a severe gash extending across his forehead, his cheeks cut and his body covered with bruises.

From six o'clock, Saturday evening, until he awoke in the ditch at the side of the I. C. R. track some distance from the Revere hotel here at eleven o'clock Renton had absolutely no recollection. He was visited Monday by I. C. R. Detective Williams, accompanied by a reporter, but could throw no light on the cause of his injuries. According to the story told by Renton the last thing that he remembers on Saturday afternoon was sitting in the hotel at Campbellton. Afterwards, so he has been told by other boarders at the hotel, he got up and went out, but of this he has no recollection. About eleven o'clock on Saturday night, he awoke to find himself badly bruised and cut lying in the ditch a couple of hundred yards from the hotel, beside the I. C. R. track, in the rock cutting through which the I. C. R. train approaching Campbellton passes. Renton says he had not had a drink, and is utterly at a loss to account for the injuries to himself.

A few days ago, while firing on a locomotive between Moncton and St. John, Renton was struck on the head by a falling coal shovel, and quite a bad wound inflicted. It is possible that this injury might have had some effect on his brain, in causing the lapse of memory in which time the injuries were sustained. It is possible that a slowly moving freight train might have struck him while he was in this condition, and this would account for his being thrown into the ditch. "I guess it's just part of a streak of hard luck," Renton said, Monday. "Something told me not to go to Campbellton when I was ordered out, and I didn't want to go."

The injured man says he has had no trouble with any one in Campbellton, and had not been here for six months before the day he was hurt, as he is on the east and west run of the I. C. R. He had been around with some friends in the afternoon, and had parted from them on the best of terms.

YOUNG MAN'S TRAGIC DEATH SUNDAY, AT JACQUET RIVER

Rifle Was Accidentally Discharged While Gil Dempsey Was Out Shooting and Bullet Entered His Body.

INJURED MAN LIVED ONLY A FEW MINUTES

Gil Dempsey, of Jacquet River, this county met with a tragic death, Sunday at noon at Antinure Lake, a few miles from Jacquet River.

Dempsey along with three or four companions was out shooting. Two of his companions who had been out in a canoe brought the canoe ashore. One of the men, Joe Dempsey, however, remained in the canoe and asked Gil to get in with him. Gil complied and they started paddling with Joe in front. They had gone about two hundred yards, when it is supposed, Gil Dempsey stooped to pick up a Snider rifle which was in the bottom of the canoe. In some unaccountable manner the rifle was discharged, the bullet entering Gil Dempsey's thigh and passing through his body.

On hearing the shot Joe Dempsey turned quickly. Gil cried:—"Oh, my God, I'm shot! Paddle me to the shore quickly, I'm dying."

Joe headed the canoe for the shore, but when it was reached Gil was breathing his last. The remains were conveyed to the home of the deceased in the afternoon and the coroner notified.

Coroners Doherty of Campbellton and Ferguson of Dalhousie held an inquest, Monday evening, at Jacquet River. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Deceased, who was 27 years of age, left a widow and three children.

Stories regarding the extravagance of the King of Siam so far as the purchase of jewelry is concerned, continue to crop out. Among his recent purchases, it is said is a gold thimble covered with diamonds and other gems which is valued at $15,000. In his palace at Bangkok the King has an enormous store of jewels. The apartments of the first and second queens are said to contain large gems, while the walls of his own apartments are also covered with gems.

In a speech at Nantasket Beach the other day, U. S. Senator Lodge declared that there would be no revision of the tariff before 1910; that the party leaders were opposed to any tariff tinkering preceding a presidential election; that a revision would not mean the lowering of duty on any manufactures the importation of which would hurt American workmen and that a new tariff act would be along the old republican lines of protection for the workmen of the United States.

At the Charlestown police court, Friday, Edwin O. Brown, barrister, appeared for preliminary examination on eleven additional charges of forgery. The cases are now in progress. Up to one o'clock he was committed for trial to the supreme court on the charge of forging a mortgage from Milton F. Vessey, of Little York, to J. E. Matthews, of Charlestown, for $550; another from Warren F. Vessey, of Little York, to Thomas Campbell, Charlestown, for $750; also for forging a deed from Richard Vessey to Warren Vessey given as one of the securities in connection with the Campbell mortgage. The remaining charges are for forging other mortgages and certificates of registration of the same.

The identity of the couple who attempted suicide at Castellamare Italy, the woman dying and the man surviving, has now been established. The man Jock Buckingham, who is now in the hospital at Naples, is an Englishman, an engineer. His wife was Miss Jenny Ensign, a native of Massachusetts, and lately of New York and they possessed a considerable fortune. This fortune was entirely lost in gambling at Monte Carlo. The couple drank a mixture of laudanum and arsenic, leaving a letter saying that they wished to die together. Since the death of his wife, Buckingham has made two attempts to jump out of a window. He refuses to take food.

Mrs. William Thaw and her party, who are at a hotel at Mount Clamens, Michigan are almost as much prisoners as the son, Harry, in the New York Tombs. They occupy two connecting rooms and remain in seclusion. Nobody about the hotel has seen anything of the party since its arrival, except employees. Their meals are served in their rooms. The register shows Mrs. Thaw and maid to be guests, while just below is the name of Mrs. Robert Christie, Allegheny, Pa. The identity of the latter is a problem which gossips about the hotel are trying to solve. They want to know if Mrs. Thaw's companions are really what their names would make them appear. "Wonder if the maid isn't a disguise for Evelyn?" queried one woman in the hotel of another. "Shouldn't wonder," is the response, "and perhaps Mrs. Robert Christie is another name for Mrs. Holman."

Sunken so low as to be lost to shame, a young man, who says he is J. M. Long, Jr., and claims close relationship to United States Long, of Oregon, was fined $50 and costs at a secret session of the Police Court in Colorado City the other day and hurriedly taken out of town by influential friends. Long was arrested for beating an inmate of the Red Light district. According to the girl, Lucille Miller, Long eloped with her from Portland, Ore., deserting his wife. When he ran out of funds, she says, he forced her to enter a resort on Market street, in Denver, and later brought her to Colorado City alive. The girl recited a shocking tale to Chief of Police Gregory. She said that she and Long had been run out of Olympia, Wash., where he had lived on her sham, later coming to Denver, where she was put in a resort in Market street. Young Long was graduated from Leland Stanford University and is a civil engineer.

These are only a few examples; there are thousands of others.

While success cannot rightfully be judged by money standards, the fact remains that in the eyes of the world the extent of a man's success is the extent of his capital.

The worth has no use for a poor man or a loser.

The person who has reached middle age, wholly dependent upon his individual efforts for his livelihood, is accounted a failure. He no longer commands the respect of the multitude but receives instead their scorn or pity.

Have you ever thought of these things?

What are you doing to make yourself independent?

Your hand or brain devoted to another man's cause can never make you wealthy.

Nor can your dollars.

The man who only saves is at best a plodder.

He should invest his dollars.

Look about you.

There are successful people on every side.

Have you ever wondered how they made money while others have not?

Excluding those rich by inheritance, and those rich by fraud, there remains countless thousands of men and women who, starting practically without a dollar, have built up for themselves wealth or a handsome competence, and are no longer dependent on their hands for support.

These people have made money first by working for and earning dollars, and then by putting their dollars to work.

You are cheating yourself and your family when you do not save from your earnings and put your earnings to work.

Suppose you put your savings in a bank. The bank pays 3 per cent. How can it? Because it invests your money so that it will bring much more than 3 per cent—enough more so that most bankers become very wealthy on the difference between your interest and theirs.

And what if they invest unwisely and lose all, as they sometimes do? Why, it's your money and your loss—not theirs.

You have not the control of your own capital—do not even know they are doing with your money.

You are making your dollars work for others. Why don't you make them work for you?

The banker invests your dollars; pockets their earning power, and gives you 3 per cent.

Why don't you do your own investing and make the profit for yourself?

You may think you have no opportunity.

But you have.

Opportunities are at every hand. No man or woman exists that has not had some opportunity for financial advancement.

The trouble is: most opportunities wear rubber shoes, and the public sleepily refuse to hear them.

One of the world's most successful financiers, when asked how he made money so fast, replied:

"I have an agent at the elbow of every opportunity and never let one pass without paying me tribute."

Don't you realize that every great fortune had its humble beginning. That just a few dollars have grown to millions?

Look at Andrew Carnegie. He saved up $500.00 and made his first investment in Adams Express Company stock. It paid him big interest almost from the start.

You know what it and he are worth today.

There are hundreds of similar examples.

"No one ever succeeds except by doing things," John D. Rockefeller.

To become wealthy—successful—you must save and invest your savings.

Where were you in the year 1896, and what were you doing?

Could you have saved $100.00 without inconveniencing yourself?

Suppose you did save $100.00 and invested it in CROW'S NEST PASS COAL MINE STOCK. This stock was sold in 1896 to small investors at 10 cents a share—six years thereafter it was worth $100.00 a share, and to day is selling for $285.00 a share, or your $100.00 invested then would pay you a dividend of over $10,000.00 a year and be worth $285,000.00.

Opportunity is always knocking at the door.

Jay Gould once said to a friend, "When you invest in the stock of a company, don't look for the 'best,' for you will never find it. Look for a good one; then invest, and do it quickly. Don't wait to see if it pans out all right, for that is where you lose your opportunity. When you have waited to see if it pans out, you will have to pay a premium on the stock, and you will have lost the biggest advance in value. You must make money on your judgment and foresight, and not on demonstrated facts."

Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, has over 400 millionaires who have made their fortunes out of coal and oil. Coal is the basis of all industrial and commercial wealth.

Coal mining in British Columbia has always been a success. It is like diamond mining in South Africa—a bonanza of the first magnitude.

Dunsmuir made millions and millions in coal mining in British Columbia, and died the richest man in Canada.

The BRITISH COLUMBIA AMALGAMATED COAL COMPANY of Portland, Oregon, controls 17,500 acres of coal land near Vancouver, B. C., estimated with 1,400,000,000 tons of the best quality of steam, domestic, and cooking coal in America.

Our mine is better than the Crow's Nest, the quality of our coal is pronounced by coal experts to be as good, if not better, we are 500 miles nearer tide water, and 300 miles nearer the big smelters in the boundary district, where coke is used.

We are offering a limited amount of the treasury stock for sale at 25c a share, par value $1.00, full paid and non-assessable.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. A remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and rages of this terrible disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last harvest with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made. A perfect, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, I have found the cure. Those same like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes, freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer with this help. We sell, and in confidence recommend

WOMAN'S WORLD

Your house is yourself. If you are a true housekeeper, it grows slowly, toward your likeness and changes, till at last, there you are. On the wall, on the floor, in the furniture, in the ornaments, in the very folds of the curtains, your visitor sees your outlines. Her approval she has perhaps uttered loud enough for you to hear, her criticism she has imparted to your neighbor as she said, "Ah, yes, but look at her house!"

Her keen, feminine eyes began inspecting at the doorstep, caught a glimpse of the area windows, on the way, and having measured the door-knob and knocker, passed on to the hall and parlor. Alas! How often the evil genius has lurked, and still lurks, in those same cramped, crowded, stuffy, unnatural parlors! It is time for us to realize that quantity plays a poor second to beauty. Nothing is beautiful for which there is no reason and no use. Let us learn that, and we will begin to avoid much that we have heretofore sought. We will have done forever with the junk shop parlor when we realize what moral and educational value a parlor or sitting room or living room that is truly ours can have for us.

AVOID SHAMS.

It is of primal importance that the surroundings for which you are responsible should reflect you; anything else is immoral, is sham and humbug. Why should your wall look like a wilderness of gaudy colors, a medley of gay chromes and gilt frames? You are not a tropical tigress. Why affect a jungle?

You are probably a gentle spirit loving fresh air and sunshine. Why not reflect these in your house? Cover your walls, by preference with plain, soft paper, if you cannot afford that, then, next best, use a cheap, light-colored one against which you can hang a few pictures with good effect. Do not let these be the "oil" portraits, so called, framed in red plush and bronze, that many of us know so well. Put those in the waste box, if you are unfortunate enough to have them, and keep the dear old "daguerotypes" in their quaint, "closed" cases instead. They are full of memories, associations and charm; they are a part of you.

Let the pictures you buy become

DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The proposed legislation through the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is of the utmost importance, and it is receiving a great deal of attention, not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the leading doctors and druggists. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class remedies welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very serious throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. Two leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analyzed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed no other medicine but Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that will "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restorer of all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recognize this fact.

At the age of 25 my lungs were in a terrible state. I had a gripe the year before; it settled on my lungs and I kept steadily growing worse till I got down so low I was in bed for six weeks. I had a consultation of doctors and they said they could do nothing more for me. Then I started to use Psychine. I took the medicine for more than a year. It certainly did wonders for me. I am now as strong as I was before my sickness.

MRS. H. HOPKINS.

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is the greatest of tonics, building up the system, increasing the appetite, purifying the blood, aids digestion, and acts directly upon the throat and lungs, giving tone and vigor to the entire system. At all druggists, 50c. and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocom, Limited, 179 King Street West, Toronto.

yourself, either because they have some real artistic value, which, having perceived, you mean to grow by, or, because, before you buy them they have become elevating influences in your life. They may be only carbon prints, or something even less costly, of great pictures. There are few of us who can afford handsome oil paintings, engravings or etchings; but still less can we afford to hang on our walls what will lower our own standards or misrepresent us to those whom it is our duty and privilege to influence.

"Whatsoever a man thinketh if his heart, so is he." Your pictures are part of your mental food, they represent one form or another of mental fare, therefore, they should be lifting, not lowering. Remember, they express you.

USE CHASTE ORNAMENTS.

This is also true of the ornaments in your room. They should be choice and chaste, but not necessarily expensive. If the half dozen little china dogs that sit, catching dust on the bookcase, recall a little boy who is gone; if he had joy in keeping them there, out of reach and safe, in "mother's parlor," leave them, they are you; if they represent bric-a-brac only, throw them on the dust heap, they are not beautiful, nor high, and they are not you.

Have you imitation lace for curtains? Well are you sham yourself, or are you genuine? Then, why not replace the would-be lace with clean, simple, dainty, ruffled muslin. It is better for your morals—it is more nearly you.

Let your house be you, all through, if not you as you are, then what you wish to be. It will help you in no small degree to be strong, and will lift you higher mentally, morally, spiritually, it will help you on toward that other mansion where there can be no shams.

A smart short kimono coat, was embroidered across the front and back and on the sleeves with wistaria.

Among the imported novelty ribbons are Shantung, pompadour, gauze, tinsel, plaid and Roman effects; also taffeta radiant and faille brillante.

Coats bound with braid, though stylish, have become a little common, the best makers preferring to finish the edges with several rows of stitching.

The severely tailored suit, developed along very plain lines, continues to be very popular. Made up in serge or mohair, it has a very important place in the modish woman's wardrobe.

A new waist is called the 'Boule, and is very becoming. It is usually of embroidered linen and val, and shows no visible seam at the waist and sleeves are put together in one piece.

It is a noticeable fact that while the hats are of polychromatic colors the dresses are of soberer tints, most of them being of the same color throughout, even though made of several distinct materials.

If the sleeves are not all of the Nippon shape, most of them at least simulate this simple cut. A length of embroidery or dyed lace is often set upon the shoulder caught at each end with tassel, and left to hang loosely back and front just, to the waist line.

Capes, both long and short, and ample, though simple in line, are much in evidence, and they promise to be pretty generally worn later in the year. Some have hoods for evening wear, and others have flat collars, with stole ends, finished with embroidery, lace or braiding.

A stunning long coat of oyster gray broadcloth was shown the other day among the new imported frocks. It reached nearly to the hem of the gown and was very simple in cut. With it was worn a hat of creamy crim, adorned with a single long brown plume.

The Algerian bolero is made of four silk handkerchiefs put together and connected with inserting. On the shoulder is fastened a large macaroon of passementerie, while another fastens it in front and the back. At eight of the eight corners is a tassel. This wrap is very convenient to throw over lace dresses. It may be infinitely varied.

Never was lace more used. It is rarely put on plain, being incrustated with festoons of flowers cut from pompadour taffetas or mousselines, and set on the stuff of which the gown is made. There are quantities of narrow val, ruffles, of vaporous chiffons, bands of dyed guipure and Irlanda lace, needlework and ruchings, all are employed in order to effect variety.

Beneath the long or short coats the skirts are adjusted to the hips like a glove, then left full below, and growing very wide at the bottom. They are usually self-trimmed, with graduated biases, points, undulating lines or a Greek key pattern. Sometimes braid, usually of the same color, is substituted, but rarely is the skirt garniture conspicuous.

Wear of the eternal stripes, some of the great dressmakers are employing dotted fabrics, such as Indian silk, Shantung, gauze and voile, which come in patterns showing very small pea spots at the top, increasing in size until at the foot they are simply enormous. Employed with discretion, these dotted fabrics make charming gowns, but they can easily be rendered grotesque in the hands of an unskilled dressmaker.

The persistent rumors of long sleeves will doubtless be verified this winter, though from Paris comes word that the short sleeve will still hold good for afternoon gowns. This, except for distinctly evening gowns, is no longer extremely short, but just covers the elbow, and for street costumes the three-quarter length is almost universal, while the severely tailored coat should always have a full-length sleeve.

WHY NOT BE FRIENDLY?

Hearst's New York American, the other day, contained some observations on Canada, in the course of which it aimed to impress upon its readers the advisability of disregarding the magazine exploitation of this country. At the same time the American was heartily in accord with the general belief that Canada has an excellent future and expressed the opinion that it would have advanced much more rapidly had it been an independent nation instead of being under foreign control. The gist of the American's remarks was that what Canada needed was not magazine exploitations, but a modern form of government. While we feel confident that the observations of the Hearst paper were made without malice—without any attempt whatsoever to work an injury to this country. We must regard them as a trifle out-of-place and would much preferred had they been left unsaid. Such observations work no good, but on the contrary only provoke strife and discord. Some of the provincial papers construed them into an attack on Canada and made the occasion an excuse to say the most nasty things imaginable about the United States. The disposition among some in Canada to sneer at everything Yankee is to be deplored. If it spreads among all classes as it may, if encouraged by the press, will prove disastrous in the extreme. We can foresee the result, if some others cannot, and we should like to see those who cannot, hold their tongues. Canada is a country of only six million inhabitants. Much has been said in praise of it of late which is extravagant. As a result of this foolish flattery we are getting a swelled head. The United States is a nation of ninety million inhabitants. It has many, many virtues which Canada has not, likewise many vices. But let us overlook the latter and get along in peace and harmony. We believe that it would be more to our profit than to our injury to cultivate a closer relationship with our big neighbor and follow its lead in many things, instead of affecting a silly aloofness which is as much as to say "I am as big as you."

TELL THE TRUTH

With the press such a powerful factor in directing public opinion as it is today, it were well that its editorial members be broad-minded, well educated and accurate.

Frederick Gleaner. One would naturally expect that a newspaper which gives expression to such wholesome sentiments would endeavor to come as near to its ideals as possible, but we find on turning to the next column in the Gleaner that it contains a paragraph which stamps the Gleaner as being about as narrow-minded and untruthful as a journal could possibly be. The paragraph runs:—

Sir Wilfrid is having his difficulties, not alone in New Brunswick, but in every province in the Dominion, where the conditions are much the same as in this province. The dearth of available men of cabinet rank in his party is one of his great weaknesses. He has reached the period when the shrewder man, who foresees the reaction in public opinion as a result of his careless and reckless administration, are unwilling to actively identify themselves further with him in the political life. They are unwilling to take the risk, and Sir Wilfrid therefore finds himself in a quandary at a time when he is really in need of able men about him.

It seems most extraordinary that one and the same man could have penned these two paragraphs, but if he did he furnishes a rare illustration of the contrary workings of the human mind. Canada is a young country and if its press is ever to have any influence in shaping its destinies political effusions must contain something besides fallacy in argument and balderdash in language.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A citizen of Philadelphia was relieved of his wallet containing $80, the other day, on a crowded street car, in that city. On discovering his loss he alighted and made his troubles known to a policeman. Said the cop:—"Take the next crowded trolley and pick someone else's pocket; but don't get caught at it." Which shows that even a policeman may be a philosopher. It is not wrong to commit a wrong, but it is decidedly wrong to be caught at it. A man may steal day in and day out and be regarded by his neighbors as an honest citizen, but woe betide him if he is caught; and the only reason why there are more honest men than thieves in the world is that the majority haven't been found out.

The fear of the Conservative party in Quebec that the provincial elections will be brought on this year doesn't appear to be well grounded. Premier Gouin in a speech, Saturday, at St. Eustache declared that he had no idea himself when the elections would take place, which makes it reasonably certain that they will not take place in the near future. It was also manifest from the tone of the Premier's able deliverance at St. Eustache that, in his opinion, the sworn denial of the Hon. Adolphe Tarte should be taken in preference to Baron Lepine's statements and that the premier is determined to sink or swim with his eloquent colleague from Quebec city.

The Moncton Times declares that nothing would disconcert "Events" but the loss of government patronage. That's not so. There are other things which would disconcert Events far more quickly than the loss of government patronage, but the Times isn't one of them. A little over ten years ago the Times enjoyed government patronage, but awoke one fine morning to find that it had lost it. The discovery disconcerted the Moncton Tory organ and it has been in a sad state of confusion ever since. It needn't, however, judge others by itself. We admit we should be sorry to lose what little government patronage we receive, but the loss of it wouldn't completely throw us off our trolley. However, the chances are ten to one in favor of us retaining it for some time to come.

The Chatham World rates the Halifax Herald, Toronto World and itself as three representative independent papers. Newspapers which support a political party through thick and thin can scarcely be classed as independent. And this is precisely what the three papers mentioned have been doing all their lives. By systematically condemning each and every act of the liberal party, employing quibbles and lies in order to do so, and idiotically exaggerating the virtues of the conservative party and its leaders, through a score of years, these papers, along with some others, such as the Moncton Times and Frederickton Gleaner have handed the honest, independent vote of the country over to the former party and have materially assisted in the demoralization of the latter. In short they have served—and are continuing to serve, the interests of the liberal party much better, we are inclined to believe, than the recognized organs of that party. They are not independent, but liberal, each and all of them.

It is sad to contemplate what would happen to the editor of the Sun if he should in another moment of weakness, say such things to the Earl's face.

Christ Church: Holy Communion on Sunday next at 8 A. M.

Another big day is in store for us. An excursion to Carleton on the Lady Eileen, under the auspices of the curling club, will be held, Tuesday, August 27.

The Lady Eileen was placed on the shore side of her wharf, Monday evening to allow of the fixing of one of her propellers which was broken on her trip up from Gaspe.

A meeting of the friends and supporters of the opposition will be held this evening in the office of W. A. Mott for the purpose of electing delegates to attend the County convention.

The funeral of the late Arch. Huntington of Glenelg, took place on Thursday last. The body was interred in the cemetery at Flatlands. The Rev. R. J. Coleman officiated.

Adj. and Mrs. Young and their daughter, Louise, gave an excellent illustrated service in the Glenelg church, Tuesday evening last. It was well attended and many comments were made on the four beautiful illustrated songs, viz: "The Holy City," "Where is my Boy Tonight?" "Lead Kindly Light," and "Father, dear Father, come home."

I. C. R. police Inspector Noble and I. C. R. policeman Savoie arrested Russell Gordon and Garfield Allan, two Nova Scotians, Saturday at New Mills on a charge of creating a disturbance on a freight train at that place. The men were brought to Campbellton and on being taken before Magistrate Matheson were severely dealt with.

At the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade to be held at St. John, next week, the Chatham delegation will urge the necessity of an export duty on rosewood pulpwood. We are glad to see Chatham alive to the interests of the country and we hope the support of its delegates will receive every effort from those in attendance from Campbellton. A duty on pulpwood should be the paramount topic at the meeting as far as the North Shore delegates are concerned.

Le Soleil hints that the secret of Mr. Bourassa's hostility to the Liberal leaders is probably to be found in the fact that he was a candidate for the office of postmaster of Montreal, but failed to get the position, that he was also a disappointed candidate for the post of Deputy Speaker of the Commons, which was given to Mr. Charles Maclellan and that the Government refused to pay him as high a salary as he thought he should get for acting as Secretary of the Joint High Commission, to settle certain questions in dispute between the United States and Canada some years ago.

Lumbermen are of the opinion that there will not be as large a cut this coming winter as there was last winter. The stringency of the money market is one of the reasons for the present doubtful outlook of the lumbering business. Lumbermen find that they have to pay larger interest on loans. Then presidential year in the United States is at a rate a poor year for lumbering, and lumbermen will watch with interest the result of the election in the republic to the south. Then, again, the cut this year has been a heavy one, and the market is felt to be glutted, and will be more so at the end of the present sawing season.

The Citizens Band gave another very enjoyable open air concert, last evening.

In the Supreme Court in Equity at St. John, Tuesday an application was made on behalf of the plaintiff in Winslow vs. the Richards Company, to have the time for appeal extended. Two sailors from the ship Goliath were arrested about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning for raising a disturbance on the government wharf. One was abusing the captain of the dredge St. Lawrence while the other wanted to fight the captain of the Goliath. Chief of Police Gray was summoned and quickly placed the pair under arrest. In court they were severely dealt with by Magistrate Matheson.

Drunks who are unable to pay their fines when arrested here have the option now of working on the streets or going to the Dalhousie jail. Several Englishmen arrested a short time ago for being drunk suggested to the Magistrate that they be allowed to pay off their fines by working on the streets. Their suggestion being a good one, was granted. In a few days they had their fines paid and some continued to work for the town at $1. a day. While paying off their fines they were locked up in the cells each night by Chief Gray. The scheme saves the town the cost of conveying the prisoners to the jail and besides helps the street work along.

Kidney Disease And Its Danger.

Kidney disease comes on quietly—may have been in the system for years, before you suspected the real cause of your trouble. There may have been backaches, neuralgia, sciatica, rheumatism, etc. Perhaps you did not know these were symptoms of kidney disease, so the trouble kept on growing worse, until disturbances of the water appeared, or there was gravel or retention of urine, or some such sign of kidney trouble.

Don't's Kidney Pills should be taken at the first sign of anything wrong; they strengthen the kidneys and help them to filter the blood properly—help them to flush off, and carry away with the surplus water, all those impurities which the blood gathers up in its circuit of the body.

Mrs. Alfred LeBlanc, Black Cape, Que., writes: "I feel it my duty to say a word about Don't's Kidney Pills. I suffered dreadful pains across my back—so bad I could not stoop or bend. After having used two boxes I now feel most completely cured. I highly recommend Don't's Kidney Pills."

With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Coward," "Roderic's Career," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1894, by HARPER & BROTHERS

"Don't," she said gently, "please don't say any more. I know all that your life has been, and why. You did quite right. What is a little trouble to me, a little passing inconvenience, the battle of a few idle tongues, compared with what Jack's life is to you? I see now that I ought to have opposed it strongly instead of letting it take its course. You are right; you always have been right. John. There is a sort of consolation in the thought. I like it. I like to think that you were always right and that it was I who was wrong. It confirms my respect for you. We shall get over this somehow."

"The young lady," suggested Sir John, "will get over it after the manner of her kind. She will marry some one else, let us hope, before her wedding dress goes out of fashion."

"Millicent will have to get over it as she may. Her feelings need scarcely be taken into consideration."

Lady Cantourne made a little movement toward the door. There was much to see of much of that women's work which makes weddings the wild, confused ceremonies that they are.

"I am afraid," said Sir John, "that I never thought of taking them into consideration. As you know, I hardly considered yours. I hope I have not overdrawn that reserve."

He had crossed the room as he spoke to open the door for her. His fingers were on the handle, but he did not turn to look at him, but passed him toward the shaded lamp, with that desire to fix her attention upon some inanimate object which he knew of old.

"The reserve," she answered, "will stand more than that. It has accompanied me with compound interest. But I deny the debt of which you spoke just now. There is no debt. I have paid it, year by year, day by day. For each one of those fifty years of unhappiness I have paid a year of regret."

He opened the door and passed out into the brilliantly lighted passage and down the stairs, where the servants were waiting to open the door and help her to her carriage.

Sir John did not go downstairs with her.

Later on he dined in his usual solitary grandeur. He was as carefully dressed as ever. The discipline of his household, like the discipline under which he held himself, was unrelaxed.

"What wine is this," he asked, when he had tasted the port.

"Yellow seal, sir," replied the butler confidently.

Sir John nodded again.

"It is a new bin," he said.

"Yes, sir. First bottle of the lower bin, sir."

Sir John nodded with an air of self-satisfaction. He was pleased to have proved to himself and to the "damned butler," who had caught him napping in the library, that he was still a young man in himself, with senses and taste unimpaired. But his hand was at the small of his back as he returned to the library.

He was not at all sure about Jack; did not know whether to expect him or not. Jack did not always do what one might have expected him to do under given circumstances. And Sir John rather liked him. It was a little thing that was small taint of hereditary which was in blood, and makes it thicker than water.

"Nothing like blood, sir," he was in the habit of saying, "in horses, dogs and men." And thereafter he usually threw back his shoulders.

The good blood that ran in his veins was astir tonight. The incidents of the day had aroused him from the peacefulness that lies under a weight of years (we have to lift the years one by one and lay them aside before we find it), and Sir John Meredith would have sat very upright in his chair were it not for that creaking pain in his back.

He waited for an hour with his eyes almost continually on the clock, but Jack never came. Then he rang the bell.

"Coffee," he said. "I like punctuality, if you please."

"Thought Mr. Meredith might be expected."

"He is not here."

pected, sir," murmured the outer humbly.

Sir John was reading the evening paper, or appearing to read it, although he had not his glasses.

"Oblige me by refraining from thought," he said urbanely.

So the coffee was brought, and Sir John consumed it in silent majesty.

While he was pouring out his second cup—of a diminutive size—the bell rang.

He set down the silver coffee pot with a pebbled clatter, as if his nerves were not quite so good as they used to be.

JOHN MERRIMAN

It was not Jack, but a note from him.

My Dear Father—Circumstances have necessitated the breaking off of my engagement at the last moment. Tomorrow I shall be married.

The above named circumstances were partly under your control, I need hardly offer an explanation. I leave town and probably England tonight. I am, your affectionate son, JOHN MERRIMAN.

There were no signs of haste or discomposure. The letter was neatly written in the somewhat large calligraphy, firm, bold, ornate, which Sir John had insisted on Jack's learning.

The stationery bore a club crest. It was an eminently gentlemanly communication. Sir John read it and gravely tore it up, throwing it into the fire, where he watched it burn.

Nothing was further from his mind than sentiment. He was not much given to sentiment, this hard-hearted old sire of an ancient stock. He never thought of the apocryphal day when he, being laid in his grave, should at last win the gratitude of his son.

"When I am dead and gone you may be sorry for it," were not the words that any man should hear from his lips.

More than once during their lives Lady Cantourne had said:

"You never change your mind, John," referring to one thing or another. And he had invariably answered:

"No. I am not the sort of man to change."

He had always known his own mind. When he had been in a position to rule he had done so with a rod of iron. His purpose had ever been inflexible. Jack had been the only person who had ever openly opposed his desire. In this, as in other matters, his indomitable will had carried the day, and in the moment of triumph it is only the weak who repine. Success should have no disappointments for the man who has striven for it if his will be strong.

Sir John rather liked the letter. It could only have been written by a son of his—admitting nothing, not even defeat. But he was disappointed. He had hoped that Jack would come—that some sort of a reconciliation would be patched up. And somehow the disappointment affected him physically. It attacked him in the back and intensified the pain there. It made him feel weak and unlike himself. He rang the bell.

"Go round," he said to the butler, "to Dr. Damer and ask him to call in during the evening if he has time."

The butler hesitated himself with the coffee tray, hesitating, desirous of gaining time.

"Anything wrong, sir? I hope you are not feeling ill," he said nervously.

"No, sir," cried Sir John. "Hang it, do I look ill? Just obey my orders, if you please."

My Dear Jack—At the risk of being considered an interfering old woman, I write to ask you whether you are soon coming to England again. As you are away from home, I have known each other ever since we are now almost the only survivors of our generation. My reason for troubling you with this communication is that during the last six months I have noticed a very painful change in your father. He is getting very old. He has no one but servants about him. You know his manner; it is difficult for any one to approach him, even for me. If you could come home—by accident—I think that you will never regret it in after life. I need not suggest discretion as to this letter. Your affectionate friend,

CAROLINE CANTOURNE.

Jack Meredith read this letter in the coffee room of the hotel of the Four Seasons in Wiesbaden. It was a lovely morning; the sun shone down through the trees of the Friedrichstrasse upon that spotless pavement, of which the stricken wot. The fresh breeze came bowling down from the Taunus mountains all balsamic and invigorating. It picked up the odors of the syringa and flowering currant in the Kurgarten and threw itself in at the open window of the coffee room of the hotel of the Four Seasons.

Jack Meredith was restless. Such odors as are borne on the morning breeze are apt to make those men restless who have not all that they want. And is not their name legion? The morning breeze is to the strong the moonlight of the sentimental. That which makes one vaguely aware a tear from the other to get up and take.

By the train leaving Wiesbaden for Cologne, "over Mainz," as the guide book hath it, Jack Meredith left for England, in which country he had not set foot for fifteen months. Guy Osward was in Cashmere. The smile was almost forgotten as a "fine day" wonder except by those who live by the life of mankind. Millicent Chyne had degraded into a restless society back. With great skill she had posed as a martyr. She had allowed it to be understood that she, having remained faithful to Jack Meredith through his time of adversity, had been heartlessly thrown over when fortune smiled upon him and there was a chance of his making a more brilliant match. With a clarity which was not without a keen shaft of irony father and son allowed this story to pass uncontradicted. Perhaps a few believed it. Perhaps they had foreseen the future. It may have been that they knew that Millicent Chyne, surrounded by the halo of whatever story she might invent, would be treated with a certain careless nonchalance by the older men, with a respectful avoidance by the younger. Truly women have the deepest punishment for their sins here on earth, for sooner or later the time will come, after the brilliancy of the first triumph, after the less pure satisfaction of the skilled sinner, the time will come when all that they want is an enduring, honest love. And it is written that an enduring love cannot, with the best will in the world, be bestowed on an unworthy object. If a woman wishes to be loved purely she must have a pure heart and no past ready for the recollection of that love. This is a sine qua non. The woman with a past has no future.

The short March day was closing in over London with that murky suggestion of hopelessness affected by metropolitan evening when Jack Meredith presented himself at the door of his father's house.

In his reception by the servants there was a subtle suggestion of expectation which was not lost on his keen mind. There is no patience like that of expectation in an old house. Jack Meredith felt vaguely that he had been expected thus, daily, for many months past.

He was shown into the library, and the tall form standing there on the hearth rug had not the outline for which he had looked. The battle between old age and stubborn will is never won. But old age in shame raises the siege. It starves the garrison out. Sir John Meredith's head seemed to have shrunk. The wig did not fit. His clothes, his shoes, his ways bearing the suggestion of emptiness, seemed to hang on ancient girdles as if the crosses were well established. The clothes were old. The fatal doctrine of not worth while had set in.

Father and son shook hands, and Sir John walked feebly to the stiff backed chair, where he sat down with a face of silence. He was ashamed of his infirmities. He was the instinct of the dog that goes away into some hidden corner to die.

"I am glad to see you," he said, using his two hands to push himself farther back in his chair.

There was a little pause. The fire was getting low. It fell together with a feeble, crumbling sound.

"Shall I put some coals on?" asked Jack.

A simple question, if you will, but it was asked by the son in such a tone of quiet, filial submission that a whole volume could not contain all that it said to the old man's proud, unbending heart.

"Yes, my boy, do."

And the last six years were wiped away like evil writing from a slate.

There was no explanation. These two men were not of those who explain themselves and in the warmth of explanation say things which they do not fully mean. The modification of each had held during the years they had left behind had perhaps been modified on both sides, but neither sought details of the modification. They knew each other now, and each respected the indomitable will of the other.

They inquired after each other's health. They spoke of events of a common interest. Trifles of everyday occurrence seemed to contain absorbing details. But it is the everyday occurrence that makes the life. It is the putting on of the coats that reconciled these two men.

"Let me see," said Sir John, "you gave up your rooms before you left England, did you not?"

Jack drew forward his chair and put his feet out toward the fire. It was marvelous how thoroughly at home he seemed to be.

"Then," continued Sir John, "where is your luggage?"

"I left that to the club."

"Send along for it. Your room is—quite ready for you. I shall be glad if you will make use of it as long as you like. You will be free to come and go as if you were in your own house."

Jack nodded with a strange twisted little smile, as if he were suffering from cramp but the legs. It was cramp—the heart.

"Thanks," he said. "I should like nothing better. Shall I ring?"

"If you please."

Jack rang and they waited in the fading daylight without speaking. At times Sir John moved his limbs, his hand on the arm of the chair and his feet on the hearth rug, with the jerky, half restless energy of the aged which is not pleasant to see.

When the servant came it was Jack who gave the orders, and the butler listened to them with a sort of enthusiasm. When he had closed the door behind him he pulled down his waistcoat with a jerk, and as he walked downstairs he muttered "Thank 'eavens" twice, and wiped away a tear from his bibulous eye.

"What! since you were doing with yourself since I saw you?" inquired Sir John conversationally when the door was closed.

"I have been out to India, merely for "Shall I put some coals on?" asked Jack, the voyager. I went with Oscar, who is out there still after big game."

Sir John Meredith nodded.

"I like that man," he said. "He is tough. I like tough men. He wrote me a letter before he went away. It was the letter of one gentleman to another. Is he going to spend the rest of his life after big game?"

Jack laughed.

"It seems rather like it. He is cut out for that sort of life. He is too big for narrow streets and cramped houses."

"And matrimony?"

"Yes, and matrimony."

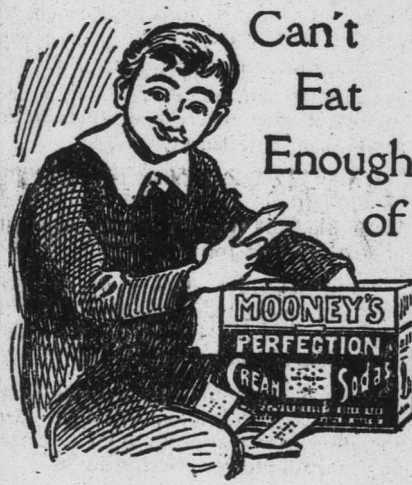

Sir John was leaning forward in his chair, his two withered hands clasped on his knees.

"You know," he said slowly, blinking at the fire, "he cared for that girl more than you did, my boy."

"Yes," answered Jack softly.

Sir John looked toward him, but he said nothing. His attitude was interrogatory. There were a thousand questions in the turn of his head; questions which one gentleman could not ask another.

She writes: "It is with gratitude I tell how your Heart and Nerve Pills benefited me."

"I was very weak and run down, had headaches nearly every day and very often would faint away, in fact, my doctor said that sometime I would never come out of the faint. It was through one of your traveling agents that I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and after taking three boxes I am glad to relate it has been a number of years since I had a fainting spell and scarcely ever have a headache. Too much cannot be said in praise of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, for in me they have effected a perfect cure."

MISSING CONNECTIONS

A lady stood at the railway station, waiting for her train. Beside her was a little 3-year-old daughter.

Presently a locomotive, with its tender, dashed by.

"Oh, look, mamma," cried the little one; "the engine has missed its train, too."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Mother—No, Willie.

Willie—Then I'd like to tell you that I took a jar of jam from the pantry yesterday.

I will mail you free, to prove merit samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves". Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write to me today for a sample and free Book, Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by A. McG. McDonald.

fine old country mansion, and this was to be only your first visit.

It was a long ways, but the ride was so nice that Freddie arrived there almost before he knew it.

The house was so big, with such a number of rooms, that he promised himself a treat going through all of them.

In the parlor Freddie received his first surprise. Looking into a funny old mirror he saw his own face, only it seemed much bigger than usual.

"I'm growing! I'm growing!" he shouted with joy. Then you should have seen him strut about, as proud as a peacock.

But as he passed into the next room there stood before him another mirror. Could that be—he—no, surely no—yes, it looked like his face. But it was so very small.

All at once Freddie grew dreadfully afraid. Running back through the rooms he found mother and threw himself into her lap.

"Mamma, oh, mamma!" he sobbed; "I got big and then I got so little! I'm sure there's witches here!"

Mother gently explained that it was all the fault of the mirror, and that it was the way a glass was made that made him look big or little, or just his right size.

"Then I'm not little like the boy I saw in the glass?" he asked, anxiously.

"No dear, you're my great big mother."

Freddie wasn't afraid of the queer glasses any more, but he never liked to stand before the little one.

Remedy for Diarrhoea Never Known to Fail.

"I want to say a few words for Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I have used this preparation in my family for the past five years and have recommended it to a number of people in York county and have never known it to fail to effect a cure in any instance. I feel that I can not say too much for the remedy of the kind in the world."—S. Jenison, Spring Grove, York County, Pa. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

UNKNOWN INSECT

A bishop travelling through the wilds of Canada stopped at a log cabin and chatted with the boy he found within.

"Are there any Episcopalians about here?" he asked.

A Cordial Invitation to Disease

This is an apt description of constipation. It's an unnatural condition to begin with, and it's more, because it brings about blood deterioration, interferes with digestion, renders you susceptible to infectious diseases and causes anaemia. Not so much a purgative as a natural stimulant to the bowels is what you need. You get it in Dr. Hamilton's Pills which increase liver activity, restore the bowels to perfect action and positively cure constipation and its attendant evils. In short on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c per box at all dealers.

Germs infecting the tissues of the nose, throat or lungs are killed. Nothing is left to cause inflammation. Spots that are sore are healed. For the first time in many years, a bona-fide full-sized comet is scurrying across the heavens in full view of all who care to look at it. It may be seen in Campbellton any morning between three and four. Another comet is also said to be on its way to our section of the heavens, and while of less mundane interest, will be even more carefully inspected by Canadian astronomers. The comet at present visible, and plainly visible, even to the naked eye, lies a little to the north east of a line between the Zeta star in the well known constellation, Taurus, and the Alpha star in the Orion. Its tail is several degrees in length and even the nucleus in the head is visible without a glass, although a pair of opera or field binoculars are a great help in looking at it. Officially, its location is given as near Star 126, Flamsteed's number about 5 h. 45 m. right ascension, and 15 degrees north declination. The comet will continue to grow brighter for some little time. The best hour to observe it is in the early morning about three o'clock, when its position is due east, and the elevation is about 20 or 25 degrees above the horizon.

fastened his line to the ring at the other end of the scale.

"It only weighs up to fifty pounds," he remarked.

"I expect that will be about enough," said his friend, as the angler, from the other side of the room, wound up the slack and began lifting steadily with the rod.

The well made joints arched themselves and the angler panted:

"Now see what I am pulling."

"Six, yes seven pounds. If the scales are right. Better than I expected," said the examiner.

"Stuff!" was the reply. "Here, you put on the strain to just about breaking point, but don't smash it, and let me read the scale."

It seemed incredible that so much apparent strain was caused by a weight of less than ten pounds, but so it was, and the angler wondered.

"Now test your salmon leader and get a good working idea of the amount of pull in a big fish."

The fine Spanish gut was passed through the ring of the fisherman's scale the other end was passed around a butt joint and the athletic young man bent his back to the strain.

"Why the wretched thing broke at eight pounds! Pretty poor stuff," he said.

"But look here, I most assuredly held at times, and even dragged for a bit, my twenty-pound fish this afternoon. And now we seem to have proved that rod and tackle would not move ten pounds."

"Precisely. Now we are getting to the root of things. You know as an athlete what a little thing, the tip of a finger, for instance, will hold up a man in the water. You see, you have to remember that ideas of weight or gravity have all to be altered when you deal with bodies under water."

"You take a pound weight and fasten it to the end of your line and see how it feels in the water and out. Remember that fish are very little heavier than water. Indeed, some of them, not salmon, however, will float on top as soon as they are dead."

"Of course, there is the fighting power, the fin resisting power, of the fish to be considered. This you had to contend against, and I dare say met a strain of perhaps four pounds. It felt more than that, of course, and fishermen won't believe it is not more until they are convinced against their will. But there is the fact."

TALES OF THE TOWN

A big back-woods New Brunswick stream driver, noted for his fondness for the ardent suffered so intensely from tooth ache, not long ago, that he resolved to come to a dentist in Campbellton and have the rebellious molar extracted. Arriving at the dentist's office he was hustled into a chair. The doctor gave him a hasty examination and then asked him if he would take cocaine. "Cocaine!" exclaimed the patient forgetting his distress for the minute. "Not on your life, I've never took nothin' but Scotch all me life and I guess I'll stick to it."

Much perturbed, he came trotting into "Events" office the other day. It was evident that he had a grievance.

"Are you the editor?" he asked with a fine rich brogue, and then he went on like a gust of water from a spigot, without waiting for a reply:

"Bagorra, I'll not go back. For twenty years I've never seen such grub on board ship and I've lived on a ship all my life as sure as my name's Bob Savage. We had meat for breakfast this mornin', and by St. Patrick, it was the limit. I cut off a piece and put it in my mouth. The longer I chewed the harder it got so I goes aft to the governor and makes a kick."

"How are your teeth?" says he.

"Good," says I.

"Then," says he, "Go over and get me a knife and fork and I'll show you how to eat it."

"I'll do no such thing," says I. "I'm no waiter."

"Very well," says he, "one week's pay off." So I walks off the durand ship. I haven't got a penny in my pocket and I don't know what to do, but I don't dare go back."

It was such an unusual case that a reporter from Events paid a visit to the ship. Evidently the epicure Savage had got there before him for the captain laughed when the man's name was mentioned.

"He's back again," the captain said. "We fixed it all up. Every little while Savage and I have a run-in. You see the man is a little off and though he is harmless enough he is a merciless critic on meat."
