It's nevermore for Evergreen and Gold As council decides its priorities

WHEN THE AXE FALLS . . . even the E & G is not spared!

Loyola strike gets action

MONTREAL (CUP) wake of mass student and faculty resignations from the senate and a referendum approving a student strike, the Board of Trustees at Loyola College announced Friday (Oct. 17) it was setting up a commission to examine the entire academic structure at the college.

Save E&G petition started

Ken Hutchinson, editor of the Evergreen and Gold, said Monday night a petition will be circulated on campus concerning the year book.

It will read as follows, said Mr. Hutchtinson:

"We, the undersigned full members of the students' union, demand the reinstatement of the year book immediately or the refund of three dollars and fifteen cents that we paid for same book."

People concerned about the year book and willing to circulate petitions can pick them up in Photo-Directorate, SUB 236. Only full members of the students' union may sign and they only once," Mr. Hutchinson said.

The petition, he said, must be ready to present to council next Monday.

The board said the commission was being called "in response to the increased interest, involvement and disagreement on campus issues," and added the results of the strike referendum showed divisions which exist on

Trouble has been building at Loyola since early summer, when the administration refused to rehire physicist A. Santhanum. The senate recommended his re-hiring but the Board of Trustees refused, earlier this month categorically turned down a Canadian As-sociation of University Teachers offer to arbitrate in the affair.

On Oct. 8, three students and faculty senators resigned from the senate, charging that since 43 per cent of its members were appointed by the all-Jesuit board of trustees, it was unrepresentative. The senate later upheld the trustees' decision not to reopen the Santhanum case.

Loyola students voted Oct. 14 by a bare majority to hold a threeday boycott of classes, over Santhanum's dismissal and over what students charged was an unrepresentative senate and arbitrary administration.

Student president Marcel Nouwho called the strike vote, said Monday (Oct. 20) he thought the trustees had shown a willingness to "take constructive steps to resolve the problems on campus.

The composition and terms of reference of the commission will be decided by all elements of the Loyola campus and the commission will include students, faculty and alumni as well as administra-

Barring a petition from the students, there will be no student year book at U of A this year.

When the air had cleared after a lengthy and heated discussion on four Evergreen and Gold motions, council decided Monday night there would be no year book, no cor-responding refund of money to students, and no referendum on

Meanwhile, Evergreen and Gold editor, Ken Hutchinson said Mon-day night "I feel that council this year has grossly misrepresented the student body. They have spent money without consideration of the budget on things of no concern to the general student and are trying to cover up their blunders by cancelling the one thing other than The Gateway that every one wants year book.

-a year book.
"I know that the decision will not stand unchallenged," he added. "Many people joined the students' union on the premise that they would be receiving a year book. Council will have to live with this decision. By the time any action can be taken, the time for putting out a year book will be too

"I am sick of their inconsistencies and I may be long gone from here very soon," he said. "In addition this is inconsistent with their motion last week to go ahead. I requested to be informed if there was any reason for me to be at council tonight. I received no such inofrmation.

There were accusations from the gallery that the amount of money now being spent on the year book did not warrant scrapping the book.

At that point president David Leadbeater passed the gavel in frustration. He said heatedly that while the Evergreen and Gold might be important to some individuals, there were far more pertinent areas in which the money allocated to the year book could

He pinpointed such budgets as day-care centres, SUB expansion, and educative programs.

The initial motion on the sub ject, introduced by arts rep Bill Bradley and commerce rep Jerry Riskin, proposed that 5,000 capies of the year book be printed for graduating students and that there be provision for the printing of additional copies ordered and paid for by individual students.

Mr. Bradley admitted that the decrease in copies would not result in a corresponding decrease in total expenditure. The motion was subsequently defeated.

Recalled for further consideration was a motion by Bill Bradley and secretary Wendy Brown, defeated at last council meeting, that the Evergreen and Gold be dropped.

At this point, external vice-president Bob Hunka asked for clarification on the interpretation of the students' union by-law concerning the publication of a year

Mr. Leadbeater replied that while the by-law stated that the year book must exist, there was no stipulation that any copies must be printed. This means that "we don't have to print the year books, but we can still have an Evergreen and

A final vote taken on the motion to scrap the book passed 18-13-1. A third motion by Karen Campbell and Trevor Peach that the union refund $3.15 per student for the year book was defeated.

Concerned by council's apparent reluctance to make definite moves on the matter, commerce rep Bill Heslup and UAB president Rick Armstrong moved that since students' council cannot take a representative stand, a referendum be held to ascertain student opinion on the fate of the year book

This brought immediate reaction from arts rep Bill Bradley.

"We have over 400 reps here, which would be somewhat repre-sentative of the student body," he

"I think this is a weak council, full of fear, unable to decide whether we should delete the year book, pissing around like a bunch of chickenshits," accused Mr. Brad-

The motion was defeated. Comments from councillors indicated they felt a referendum could have little validity or signifiacnce.

"It is doubtful whether they (the student body) realize the full impact of continuing the year book," said Mr. Leadbeater.

The Evergreen and Gold this year would incur a deficit of over $44,000, none of the expenses being defrayed by advertising or additional levies on students obtaining the book. The prospect that advertising could produce a significantly lower deficit was not entertained as a worthwhile possibility by

At least five faculties here now publish their own year books.

Students' council also moved to abolish the tenure system.

By passing this motion, council said it is attempting to insure that the academic freedom of the entire teaching staff is guaranteed and respected by the community.

Council is concerned that the quality of teaching in the university be of the highest standard possible.

Along with the abolishment of the tenure system, four other mo-tions drawn up by the council's committee on tenure were passed: the implementation of new means of evaluating teaching ability as the most important function of academic staff; the institution of teaching by contract; that students have parity on committees which decide who is hired to teach at this university; that a referendum be called by council to determine whether the student body supports

AND SO THE AXE FELL on 14,000 copies of the Evergreen and Gold Monday night, Councillors at the students' council meeting at College St. Jean, above, considered motions on the year book. External vice-president Bob Hunka (centre) asked for interpretation of the year book by-law. President David Leadbeater said that while the name of the Evergreen and Gold must remain, no copies need be printed.

Administration blasted in rally at Laurentian of Laurentian University's 1,800 students joined faculty members Monday (Oct. 20) to criticize their university administration and look at possible reforms.

The largest mass meeting in Laurentian's history was precipitated by a visit from the Ontario Commission on University Affairs, which is preparing a five-year plan for Ontario universities.

Students and faculty had been told of the commission's visit only one week earlier, yet were expected to prepare briefs within that time limit.

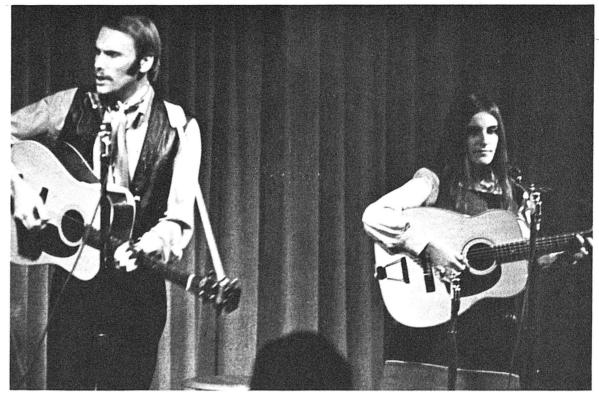

On Thursday (Oct. 16) students also discovered that administration president Stanley Mullins had a fully-prepared brief ready to be approved by a secret meeting of the academic senate.

When student senators showed up for the meeting it was can-

After lisetening to Mullins' brief at the commission's Monday meeting, and having their own briefs calling for local reorganization ignored because the commission said it didn't want to get involved in local questions, the students and many faculty members moved to their own meeting.

The mass meeting gave particular attention to the recommendations of the University of Toronto's Commission on University Government.

The CUG report, released Thursday (Oct. 16) calls for abolition of the Board of Governors and other structural changes involving increased student participation in university government.

THE STUDENTS' UNION has opened a regular folk entertainment series Friday nights from 9 to 12 at Room at the Top. This regular coffee house includes live entertainment and food. Last Friday, Loraine Musterer and Steve Gosse (above) put on a successful evening of entertainment. This week, folk singers Paul Hann and Russ Thornberry will entertain.

What makes a radical?

By WINSTON GERELUK

It finally happened—I had to answer the question at a family reunion last weekend.

The topic of conversation had switched from a severe denunciation of the Vietnam war moratorium to an indictment of those radicals at Simon Fraser University.

Where do you stand on this issue, Winston?

Did you ever meet this Jon Bordo character?

Did you ever try marijuana?

Winston! (and I could see it coming) Are you one of those radicals by any chance?

I couldn't answer that question right away even though my position on radicals is quite clear.

Unlike a moderate, a radical is one who finds that he holds some principles that he cannot compromise with when asked to.

Just recently, for instance, many 'straight' students have been called radicals because of their adherence to a set of principles that up until now have seemed acceptable to most people—the principles of democracy.

Because of their loyalty to these principles, these students have found it impossible to 'co-operate' with a university set-up in which democracy does not exist, in which the large majority of participants are prevented from governing themselves in all the important matters.

Because of their 'naive' acceptance of the principles of democracy with which all of us have been socialized, these radicals refuse to agree with the right of a select few to govern—and this is why they have held out for such things as parity on university committees and other decision-making boards.

Then there are other radicals, like those who adamantly refuse to play ball with an economic system in which it is the rule that people use each other as economic pawns—or as stepping stones to prestige and power.

These students became radicals because they found it repugnant that the university, instead of questioning such a system, should affirm it in every way possible.

There are really very few radicals on our university campuses these days; just a few moderates who really try to get along with everyone else, a few heads who are really committed to pot, and a few professional scholars who treat all of the important issues academically (and from a safe distance).

But what could I tell my relatives about radicals? They try so hard to be 'average citizens' and couldn't care less about any of the above.

Am I a radical?

No! I was almost relieved to hear myself say.

No. I am not a radical. I'm just like you—I've lost the best parts of my soul long ago in the big compromise with the dollar sign.

And the debate goes on . . .

Prof. Brant's defense of the Department of Anthropology in regard to Prof. Hermansen's charge that it is Marxist-dominated was overly emotional and weakened by a long digression on the failure of capitalism in India. His attack on Dr. Hermansen is irrelevant to the real question.

Prof. Brant says that Marxism can be an intellectually respectable position and does not necessarily imply approval of applied Marxism. If this is so, I see no more cause for disquiet than if I had heard that the psychology department were dominated by behaviorists or the Department of Religion by Christians. On the one hand, students are responsible individuals who will hopefully think beyond these orientations in their future intellectual lives. On the other hand, a department dominated by one approach is neglecting its responsibility to aid the student in developing a balanced and independent view.

Prof. Brant's letter would have been more reassuring to me if he had simply stated that there is some range of opinion in the Department of Anthropology and that it is not dominated by an ideology, political or otherwise.

I've better ways to kill my time

Some of the involvement types in your newspaper create considerable background static and keep coming on with the same nasty whine: "Apathy cripples the academic community; apathy is the root of stagnation."

Let me lay it on you like this:

Let me lay it on you like this: I have better ways to spend my time than getting into power-organizational-promotional hassles. I would rather sit back in my tomblike study and prove theorems all day, and spend the rest of my time getting laid.

Control by who?

I feel it is only right that some party (other than the editorial staff of The Gateway) should try to mitigate the attack of Miriam McClellan on your front page story of Dr. Wyman's installation or our new president as our new president.

To quote (her own words), "You have condemned him as a man with no free will—a man appointed the president of a university with no capacity for honest decision." Obviously it would be unfair to pass any value judgment on a president-elect at the time of his installation.

However, it must be remembered, and it would not be unreasonable to suggest that the real policy-making and decision implementation machinery of the university lies, not in the hands of University Hall but in the bigbusiness and corporation interests who finance university expenditure, especially on capital account. Possibly this might explain the oft-repeated utterance that the university provides less of an education and more of a specific training—to provide future executive material for the institutions who inject funds into the campus.

After all, no one is going to invest money without reasonably expecting something by way of a dividend!

Professor Brant is very angry in his letter against me in The Gateway, Oct. 16, because I did not agree with an article by a colleague of his, Professor Frucht.

He is particularly angry because, in a lighter vein, I have associated Professor Frucht with a "Karl Marx Institute for Biased Anthropological Studies." Professor Brant thinks that this description may fit his department. That idea is all his. I do not see that I have mentioned his department anywhere in my letter.

He goes on to make a very clarifying statement: He calls it 'smear' to mention Karl Marx or Marxism in connection with his department. Here he shows that he considers Marx and Marxism a bad thing to say. He must be against it. When he classifies Professor Frucht as a Marxist, he must be against him, too. Why, then, does he venture out on a thin limb to rescue him?

Coming to Professor Brant's main event, I can only say that my information about India was correct. I know that Professor Brant was in India, but that was a good many years ago. And, for instance, the book by Réné Dumont, which he quotes, is a study done in three districts of India in 1958 - April 1959—11 years ago (see Dumont p. 106). All this is antiquated, as far as the productivity of India is concerned. A lot of things have happened since, and it is conspicuous how fast they have happened. Regardless of social ailments, India is getting ready to feed her people.

I'll condone Professor Brant his I'll condone Professor Brant his remarks about my lack of scholarly attitude. I do not think that his letter is very scholarly, and I objected to Professor Frucht's letter, which was not very scholarly, either. Remarks in Professor Frucht's letter like "... the capitalistic system where profit is more important than people" is not scholarly writing, but cheap propaganda.

I think it is an asset to have a gadfly like Professor Frucht on campus. But Professor Brant might as well realize now that his protégé Professor Frucht cannot make as many provoking statements as he does, and do it so often, without drawing a spark now and then.

Tomlinson's SDU analysis illogical

People who look into darkness and claim they can see Red have got to be very sick, or scared, or both.

Mr. Tomlinson's address to the SDU (Casserole, Oct. 10) is as great a masterpiece in unreasoning as I've read in a long while. No useful purpose will be served in pointing out all the errors of what can laughingly be called his "analysis." Suffice it to say that his point-by-point disagreements are nothing more than pure reactions to thoughtful statements. But Goodness Me! How can a person so busy struggling to make a living be required to think, much less

This is Page Five

Well, it is. We can't help it if we ran out of page numbers. The great anthro-philo debate continues alongside the SDU-Tomlinson one. give a damn about his fellow man. Anyone can be a self-made man. Right, Mr. Tomlinson? All it takes is good hard work making lots of "high amperage d.c. generators" and stuff, and sending lots of people to university to be trained to become engineers and doctors. Then society will get rid of its nasty flaws. Right? (I need a doctor right about now!)

That is genuinely all you have said in your full-page article, sir. The rest are tired old clichés and propaganda.

If these are the only constructive suggestions that can be drawn from the soul-searching of a reasonable man (and I'm afraid he speaks for a lot of U students) in the face of the deep spiritual crisis that is taking place in North America today, then I'm the most "ignorant," most "noisy, silly (twerp)" on this campus. And I don't have a SDU membership card, or long hair even. (No sweat, Ron!)

That old - maiden Aunt role known so well by so many on this campus, where you shriek as you gather your long, black skirts tightly about your knees everytime you see a mouse, is getting to be very sickening.
