Teeswater's Old Home Week

The Mildmay Stars' exit from the Ontario Football competition was rather swift and sudden. The return game with the Kitchener-Walkerton aggregation was played at Kitchener last Thursday and was won by the city team by 3 to 0. The game in the first period was practically all in Mildmay's favor, the Twin-City team was almost constantly on its defence. The Stars were too erratic in shooting however, and no goals were tallied. When they were pressing, the Kitchener defence, the big back player stopped the ball with his hand, but Referee Atkinson refused to award the visitors a penalty kick. The referee's attitude to the Stars all through the game was of the "unfriendly neutrality" character. In the second half the Stars blew up, and the home team tallied three goals in this frame. The winners were as much superior to the Stars as our fellows were in the first half. In this round the Stars were not at their best, they lacked team play and didn't play their positions.

The winning team will play Woodstock in the second round. The Stars will now confine their efforts to the Senior W. F. A. series and meet Fergus in the next round.

Obituary

At the ripe old age of 87 years, Mrs. Hannah Tegler of this village passed to her reward last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Tegler has been an invalid for the past two years, and about two weeks ago she contracted lobar pneumonia, which culminated in her death. She was born in Germany, but came with her mother to Canada 75 years ago. Her father, Christopher Knubbe, died in Germany. After living in Georgetown for about eight years, she was married at Normanby in 1865 to Christian Tegler, and in 1878 the family came to reside on the 15th concession of Carrick. They were born to them three sons, John, Christian and Robert and two daughters, Caroline and Mary, the latter dying in infancy. Robert predeceased his mother in 1922, and Caroline in 1927. After the death of her husband in 1902, Mrs. Tegler made her home for a time with her son, Christian, later taking up residence with her son John, in Carrick, and nine years ago coming with him to Mildmay. Mrs. Tegler was a woman of exemplary Christian character, and was beloved and honored by her family and relatives. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to the 10th concession Lutheran cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Poltuss, Wm. Voigt, Frank Kamrath, Fred Kutz, Henry Steinhamer and Conrad Hill. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. P. Boerner.

Mrs. Tegler was a woman of exemplary Christian character, and was beloved and honored by her family and relatives. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon to the 10th concession Lutheran cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Poltuss, Wm. Voigt, Frank Kamrath, Fred Kutz, Henry Steinhamer and Conrad Hill. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. P. Boerner.

Obituary

At the ripe old age of 87 years, Mrs. Hannah Tegler of this village passed to her reward last Friday afternoon. Mrs. Tegler has been an invalid for the past two years, and about two weeks ago she contracted lobar pneumonia, which culminated in her death. She was born in Germany, but came with her mother to Canada 75 years ago. Her father, Christopher Knubbe, died in Germany. After living in Georgetown for about eight years, she was married at Normanby in 1865 to Christian Tegler, and in 1878 the family came to reside on the 15th concession of Carrick. They were born to them three sons, John, Christian and Robert and two daughters, Caroline and Mary, the latter dying in infancy. Robert predeceased his mother in 1922, and Caroline in 1927. Not Forgotten

They apparently had not met for some time. They were sitting in the gloaming, listening to the languorous roll of the sparkling sea below. "And just fancy you being in the town where I lived last week," she murmured softly. "Yes," replied the young man, a commercial traveller; "it was odd, wasn't it?" "Did you think of me?" asked the girl more softly still. "I did," answered the youth gallantly. "I said to myself, 'Why, isn't this where What's-her-name lives?'"

WIDE WATERS
by CAPTAIN A.E. DINGLE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Alden Drake, formerly a sailor, now grown soft and flabby through a life of idle ease, visits Sallortown, where he meets Joe Bunting, a seaman, with whom he drinks himself off his feet in a barroom. Awakening next morning Drake hears Captain Stevens of the Orontes denounce him as a "dude." Angry, Drake sneaks aboard the Orontes as one of the crew. He is discovered by the captain and thrown overboard. Drake boards the vessel a second time, however, and manages to pass muster as "Peter Finch," one of the signed members of the crew. Mary Manning, daughter of the owner, is a passenger on the Orontes. In the forecabin, Joe Bunting makes an enemy of Tony, one of the sailors, by kicking him out of his bunk to make room for Drake.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Drake mustered at the break of the poop with the watch. As the mate called the names over, the skipper came to the rail. As the men responded to their names, and moved aside, the skipper played the beam of a flashlight over their faces, looking for the likely helmsman. Tomorrow the men themselves would arrange wheel tricks and lookouts; tonight a man would be chosen by the watch officer, and approved by Captain Stevens. "You, Bunting, relieve the wheel," said Mister Twining. The flashlight flickered over Joe's placid face. "And you, there—" Mister Twining pointed out to the darkness, at a momentary loss for the name; and the skipper's flashlight, seeking out the new lookout, fell upon the startled face of Alden Talbot Drake.

CHAPTER VII.
"YOU DIRTY BOY."
"Mister, send another man on lookout," the skipper said grimly. "Come here, you, dude!"
Drake stood before the big blond man with a curious feeling of elation.

ONE SNAPPY PUNCH LANDED ON THE SKIPPER'S JAW.

He expected to hear an interesting opinion of himself, expressed in vivid sallores. "Come here, you!" growled Stevens, and aimed a grip like a steel trap on Drake's jacket. "A dress suit gentleman, are you? Went sitting and got drunk, hey? What did you steal, that drove you to my ship, you putty faced whelp?"
Drake suddenly wrenched free, leaving some buttons in Steven's grasp, and forgot all considerations of discipline and rank in the glorious thrill of one solid, snappy punch that landed on the skipper's square jaw and set him on his heels. Surprise had a second effect. Drake struck, and might left-hand jab to the man's nose drew blood. He knew it drew blood; he felt the grinning lips but he knew little after that. A terrible, white, snorting face came close to his own, two triphammer fists drove through the defence he put up as if he were a ten-year-old boy, and after one agonizing moment when he he grew hot at the sight of Stevens' sneering face. Mary Manning read a book, her fair face rosy red, her blue eyes ever upon her book. The skipper was talking, but she appeared not to hear. Her color deepened as Drake finished the wheel and went to the skylight to remove the rods. And she got up. Stepping into the companion-way she said:

"Captain Stevens, I'll come on deck when the work is done. My father would never permit the poop brass-work to be neglected until mid forenoon; neither would he tolerate working the ship's boys to the point where there was no time for personal cleanliness."
Drake stooped to hide a grin. He felt the hot flush of shame surge through him; but he could grin, for Captain Stevens' face turned red, and the bruised lips opened and hung open as the girl vanished with the air and step of an offended princess.
"Mister Adams! Send this confounded boy for'ard and have a couple of hands scrub him! Get him out of my sight, d'ye hear!"

CHAPTER VIII.
DAUGHTER OF THE WIDE WATERS.
Drake sat cross-legged on the fore hatch one dogwatch, sewing a canvas umper. A piece of old canvas lay beside him; a cut-out, partly stitched pair of canvas trousers were thrown over his feet. He sewed expertly. He used the sailor's palm and needle like a sailmaker.
Fat little Joe Bunting went over to Drake, and his rubicund face registered surprise of the work done. He picked up the canvas trousers. His lips puckered in a silent whistle, and his twinkling gray eyes widened.
"If you wuz at sea long enough to learn to tailor like that, you ain't got no business as a boy aboard this ship," he said. He regarded Drake's grinning face with a puzzled expression, examining again the well cut garment in his hand. It was made of old canvas, softer than new, truly, but it was the fashioning of the work rather than the stitching that arrested attention. That sort of work was seen in the grand old deepwatermen of a past and gone decade. Joe could do it, and a few others aboard the Orontes, but it was not a general accomplishment, and the ability to turn out work of that sort hinted at a real apprenticeship to the sailing ship.

"We learned to do little jobs for ourselves when I was a boy at sea," Drake smiled. "Nothing much in it. Sails gave me a bit of canvas and lent me his sailmaker's bag. I asked like Sainly for a pair of scissors, and he borrowed these from Miss Manning."
Joe was thoughtful. He glanced aft. The skipper and Mary Manning, walked the poop together, along the weather side from taffrail to the break. The skipper seemed happy. The girl was laughing and full of pleasant chatter.
"Well, matey," said Joe, "there ain't a bloke in this ship as can turn out clobber like that, an' you may lay to that. I never cut out a pair of bags to ekal them, not in all my goin' fishin'. I ain't makin' no remarks, me son, an' I ain't arskin' no questions wot ain't none o' my business. If so be as you wants to ship boy in this packet, boy you kin be for all Joe Bunting 'il bother yuh. But if you does other jobs same as you're a-doin' this, I'll gamble my donkey's brekfust you won't stay boy long. What yer doin' it for, anyhow?"
"Fun!" said Drake, thinking Joe referred to his being in the ship at all.
"Fun! Why don't yuh git yer things outa the slop chest? You can't make 'everything you want. You won't never 'ave no stand easy."

The "Selfishness" of Britain
Quebec Soleil (Lib.): In business, Britain and its politicians have no sentiment. Britain is always out for the main chance and takes it where it can find it. Still, nations are like people; sometimes it pays them to give up a moderate or immediate profit if there are serious grounds for believing that by doing so a better profit or one lasting longer may be obtained. London has never been able to see this. Nor yet has London learnt how to behave with strict loyalty in its dealings with the British Dominions. London has not ceased to preach to us the doctrine of imperial solidarity whenever it was a question of expenses to pay or responsibilities to take, but has always forgotten to practice what it preached when it was a question of getting benefits out of the British Commonwealth. The United Kingdom demands as its due the British preference, but makes no bones of refusing it to its partners.

Just As Good
There was no gainsaying the fact that P.C. Roberts was an outside. His feet covered quite a large area when placed together, and they left deep impressions where he stood.
So perhaps the little girl who was spreading sandy gravel over the garden path may be forgiven, for as the worthy officer passed the gate for the second time in five minutes, she ran across to him.
"May I ask you something?" she inquired.
"Ask away, missie," beamed the constable, and tucked his thumbs into his belt.
"Then would you mind walking up and down my path a bit; it's so uneven, and I haven't got a garden roller."

Later Years
Old friends are the great blessing of one's later years. Half a word conveys one's meaning. They have the same mode of thinking. I have young relations that may grow upon me, but my nature is affectionate, but can they grow old friends?—Horace Walpole.

Proof Positive
The man before the magistrate was a stranger in the village, and he was most indignant that he should suffer the humiliation of his present condition.
"The constable seems very certain about all the facts connected with my case," he sneered. "But, if I may make so bold to point out a certain weakness, why doesn't he call his fellow officer to corroborate his evidence?"
"There is only one constable stationed in the village," said the magistrate sharply.
"Excuse me, but I saw two last night," protested the offender.
"Exactly," grinned the policeman. "That's the charge against yer."

Japan to Insist On Open Door

Spokesman for Railway Controlled by Tokyo Declares Action by China Against Russia is Viewed With Deep Concern — Military Action by Soviet Unlikely

New York—The action of the Chinese Nationalist Government in expelling the Russian management of the Chinese Eastern Railway and in taking over the properties of the company in Manchuria is regarded in informed quarters here as having precipitated a serious situation in the Far East and to have effectively cut Moscow off from Vladivostok. T. G. American representative of the South Manchuria Railway, told a staff correspondent of the Monitor here that Japan was watching the development with utmost concern.

"Japan has repeatedly voiced her policy with regard to peace and order in Manchuria," Mr. Go said. "This has a vital bearing upon Japan's national existence and national defense. The Japanese Government is, therefore, vitally interested in the maintenance of peace in these regions."

"There is a fundamental unanimity of opinion throughout Japan that it is absolutely necessary to safeguard the Japanese interests, rights and trade in Manchuria, without which her national economic life would really collapse. If Manchuria were to be hurled into a state of disorder or devastation as other parts of China, the profession of the principle of the open door and equal opportunity would resolve itself into nothing more than mere lip service."

Japan Supports Status Quo
Mr. Go said he had received no advice from his company regarding the situation which has developed in Manchuria. He was confident, however, that no similar action would be attempted by the Chinese Nationalists in connection with the South Manchuria Railway, which is under Japanese management and control.

"China knows that any action similar to that she has just effected against Russia would be immediately contested most vigorously by Japan," he said. "I do not anticipate any trouble from the Chinese Nationalists on the Japanese end of the road."

Any step Japan might take, he declared, would be actuated solely by its interest in maintaining the status quo. He described what he referred to as the process of attrition, which the Nationalist Government has been subjecting the Russian management of the Chinese Eastern Railway ever since the Mukden agreement for joint control in 1924.

"The Nationalist Government has been attesting its aggressive spirit toward the Russian management ever since that time," Mr. Go continued. "It first took over the schools in North Manchuria, which are financed with railway funds and had been managed by Russians. Then it took over the railway's river steamer fleet. The third action was the seizure of the railway telephone system."

Appeal Not Available
Mr. Go declared that Russia was impotent to act militarily against China in Manchuria and had no court of appeal since she is outside the League of Nations and the Washington Treaty.

The Foreign Policy Association has just issued a bulletin in which it reviews the whole of the Chinese Eastern Railway question, which it characterizes as a "bone of contention between Nationalist China and Soviet Russia," and as having been "a constant and important factor affecting the peace of the Far East ever since its inception in 1896."

The Foreign Policy Association reviews briefly the history of the railroad and recalls that the lines of the United States in it has been evidenced in voluminous diplomatic correspondence. The Treaty of Portsmouth, making peace between Russia and Japan, gave the South Manchuria branch to Port Arthur to Japan, Russia retaining the remaining stretch of the line.—Christian Science Monitor.

Syria and Turkey Agree on Frontier

Reduction of Disputes, Brigandage, Border Friction Confidently Awaited

Jerusalem — The Franco-Turkish agreement just reached at Angora fixes the frontier between Turkey and Syria which is delineated by a special commission presided over by General Ernest a Dana.

It is expected the understanding reached will reduce the frontier incidents, the acts of brigandage, and the disputes over authority, hitherto frequent. Questions bearing on traffic, on police, on railway transit, on irrigation and on the status of Syrians in Turkey and Turks in Syria are also settled.

The agreement is expected to be followed by the conclusion of a Franco-Turkish treaty of friendship and an arbitration convention which are to be negotiated at Paris between M. Briand and Yehya Bey, the Turkish Ambassador.

Guiana Air Line Survey Is Begun

New York—A Pan-American Airways amphibian transport carrying Robert G. Thach and a crew of four, has just left Miami, Fla., to make a final inspection of landing facilities preparatory to extension of the United States air mail service to Dutch Guiana on Aug. 27, according to announcement made by J. T. Trippie, president of the organization.

Establishment of the extension will complete more than two-thirds of the American air transport system over the east coast route between New York and Buenos Aires, the announcement said. It will link 24 countries on direct air lines with the United States and provide a four-day air transport service between the United States and Dutch Guiana, now 13 to 21 days distant by the fastest steamship.

From Paramaribo, Pan-American Airways will extend the service down the east coast to Para and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil and Montevideo, Uruguay, where it will link with the line of Pan-American Grace Airways, which, it is expected, will soon be extended from Chile over the Andes to Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

Talkie Man Hears Lindbergh Lecture Him on Honesty

Colonel Spies Hidden "Mike" and Accuses Operator of "Unfair" Methods

San Francisco, Calif.—Colonel Lindbergh, who rarely speaks for publication on any subject but aviation, delivered a lecture here Monday on honesty and integrity.

The lecture, incidentally, was recorded on a sound-motion picture reel, but probably never will be presented in a motion picture house.

The colonel, whose aversion to sounds reels is well known, was approached at Mills Field by a "talkie" cameraman who had a microphone under his sweater.

"Isn't that a microphone you have hidden there?" asked Colonel Lindbergh sharply.

"Yes," admitted the operator. "That's not honest," said the colonel. "Why didn't you approach me with the microphone in plain sight? That would be the honest thing to do."

"Well," said the operator, who had tried repeatedly to obtain a sound interview, "if I bring the 'mike' out will you say a few words?"

"No, I will not," the Colonel replied about this matter. You have not been honest. I don't approve of your actions at all."

Link Montreal and Victoria by Air

Northwest Airways and Western Canada Airways Announce Plans

St. Paul, Minn.—Establishment of an international continental air route to connect Victoria and Winnipeg, through the Twin Cities, with Windsor and Montreal, was announced recently by the Northwest Airways and the Western Canada Airways.

The proposed line is believed to be longer than any air transport line in existence.

Col. L. H. Britton, general manager of the Northwest Airways, and W. L. Brintnell, who holds a similar position in the Canadian organization, declared the formation of the line was purely a working agreement or alliance between the two companies for operation purposes and did not involve ownership or stock control.

Under the agreement the American line will extend its lines from St. Paul to Winnipeg and will make other expansions to enable it to reach the Canadian line at Windsor.

The Western Canada Airways, which now operates from Montreal to Halifax, plan to extend their lines to Victoria.

Dramatic Scene in Rumanian Parliament

Juliu Maniu, Premier, Vigorously Defends Local Self-Government Bill

Bucharest.—The Rumanian Parliament was crowded with spectators and was the scene of another dramatic battle on July 16 in the struggle by the people for effective self-government.

The cause was the beginning of the discussions on the bill for administrative reforms which has given the towns and districts a large degree of control in their local affairs, freeing the newly annexed provinces from the domination of Bucharest, reducing red tape and making the people in all areas, including non-Rumanian minorities, feel at home in Rumania.

All the old parties violently opposed this bill which was designed to end permanently the control by a handful of politicians of the whole Kingdom. They call the measure revolutionary, ruinous and Bolshevistic, adducing almost heinous examples from those clauses creating town meetings and councils and establishing seven new administrative centers in the chief Rumanian provinces.

After reading declarations denouncing the whole program and the actions of the Government, and calling the present bill destructive of the very fabric of national life, 49 of the opposition deputies demonstratively left the Parliament eschewing all responsibility in its further activity.

Juliu Maniu, the Prime Minister, answered the charges in a vigorous speech, showing that the present peasant Government was really rebuilding the national life on a strong and sound basis. He invited all who wished to co-operate, and added that all attempts at illegal opposition would be immediately suppressed. The Parliament is sitting three daily, and will continue until July 27.

Zanzibar Sultan Visits Scotland

He Is Entertained by Corporation and Is Also Received at the University

Glasgow.—Speaking in Glasgow at a luncheon given by the Lord Provost and the Corporation, Seyyid Khalifa Bin Harub, Sultan of Zanzibar, who read his reply in Arabic, said, "I come of a sea-going nation, and my kinsmen, the Arabs of Muscat and Oman, were of the old great navigators and explorers, and sailed the Indian Ocean, if you will pardon my pride, long before a ship was built in Glasgow. I admit you have outstripped us. As long ago as 1877, on the initiative of that great Scotsman and citizen of Glasgow, Sir William MacKinnon, the firm of Smith, MacKinnon & Co. was founded in Zanzibar and took over the agency of the British India Steam Navigation Company from another Scotsman, Captain Fraser."

He went on to explain how Sir William MacKinnon obtained a concession from his predecessor over certain possessions of the Sultanate, and how, as a result of the success of an expedition and support from the Imperial Government, the British East Africa Company was formed.

The Sultan subsequently paid a visit to the university, where he was received by the principal, Sir Donald Macalister.—Christian Science Monitor.

It is absurd to suppose that the future of the talkies is in the least degree doubtful. Anything has a future which keeps people away from home.

Young Voters

J. L. Garvin in the London Observer (Ind.): Clean contrary to their good intentions, the Conservatives have actually biased the Constitution permanently against Conservatism. This prospect of the relative increase of Labour by comparison with Conservatism does not at all arise because of the predominance of women under Universal Suffrage. It arises for quite another reason. It is a matter not of sex, but of youth irrespective of sex. All the political history and philosophy of the world, ancient and modern, might have warned ex-Ministers of that. But they were indifferent when we conspired them thoughtfully to take 25, not 21, as the basis of the necessary sex-equality. In the early twenties generous youth of both sexes is in the main attracted by advanced views and ardent visions. As largely as it used to be Radical, it is now Socialist. And for the first time we have their full influx into citizenship.

Clarence Darrow with one single remark won a debate over ex-Congressman Willie Upshaw of Georgia in Atlanta recently—that is, if loudest applause and laughter count for anything. By agreement, there were no judges and no official decision. Upshaw, an ardent dry, told his audience how he had worked his way through school and studied on the farm. He was so determined, as a boy, to be a public speaker that he used to practice oratory on the poor mules while I was ploughing. Then he spent the best part of an hour telling his audience that prohibition was working and that America was drinking less than ever before. When Darrow's turn came, he rose and fixed his famous glare on the perspiring and panting Upshaw. "If you expect us to believe all you've said, sir," said Darrow firmly, "you must think you are still talking to a lot of mules."

Trotzky's Request To Visit England Denied by Labor

Home Secretary of New Cabinet Refuses to Admit Exiled Communist

London—J. R. Clynes, Home Secretary, announced in the House of Commons that he had decided against allowing Leon Trotzky, exiled Communist leader, to visit Great Britain. The newly-formed Labor Government had scarcely been in power last month when Trotzky, apparently hoping that the Laborites would be more sympathetic to his request than the former Conservative Government, asked Premier Ramsay MacDonald for authorization to visit England.

The subject was referred to the Home Secretary's department, which has now decided against granting a visa to the one-time Soviet army leader.

Trotzky for several years has been actively in opposition against the Stalin regime in Russia, and was exiled in Russian Turkestan last year. He was finally permitted to go to Constantinople, where he has been living for the last six months.

He first sought permission to go to Germany, but the Berlin Cabinet, at much discussion, decided to bar him. He tried several other countries without success.

Scotland Yard Plan Adopted For New York

Secret Police Will Work Among Criminal Gangs as Under Cover Men

New York—A bureau of secret police has just been organized by Grover A. Whalen, police commissioner. Mr. Whalen announced that it was modeled after what he regarded as the best features of the Army Intelligence Service, the Secret Service of the United States Treasury Department and the under cover bureau of Scotland Yard.

The personnel of the bureau will be known only to the Police Commissioner and the anonymous bureau head, who is a high official of the Police Department. They will not have power to make arrests, but will operate wholly as informers. They will not wear shields or other means of identification, and it is the aim of Mr. Whalen that they fraternize freely with members of the underworld, with a view to detecting racketeers, plain crooks, drug peddlers, gunmen and gamblers. Mr. Whalen said he expected members of the squad to fill their roles so convincingly that they would themselves be in the class of suspects.

Never Appear in Court

Members of the squad will be required to report secretly on all they see and hear, but they will never appear at police headquarters or at any police station. Instead will meet their commanding officer at secret rendezvous and report to him directly. These reports will be both written and oral, the written reports signed by a code number instead of by the name of the agent. Their information will be collated, tabulated and card indexed.

The squad will be composed of 50 graduates of the police academy, and the majority of these have already been chosen and put to work. Of the first appointments, 25 know two languages and one speaks four languages, Mr. Whalen said. Members of the bureau will receive the same pay as police just entering the service, but their expenses will be paid out of a $50,000 contingency fund.

Follows Series of Shootings

The appointing of the secret squad follows a series of shootings in which men well known in the underworld were victims. Owing to the close fellowship alleged to exist between these characters and the bond of secrecy which is part of their code, the police have not been able to run down those guilty of the shootings and detectives have been unable to help out.

"All these mysteries might not have been mysteries at all, if we had known what was going on in the underworld," he said. "Because of the lack of knowledge on what the secret rackets of these men were, the police were handicapped at the start of their investigation."

Mr. Whalen emphasized that this secret squad would report only on persons who had violated the law or who were planning to violate it.—Christian Science Monitor.

No Relief for Canada

Winnipeg Tribune (Ind. Cons.): That the American Tariff Bill will be considerably altered before it finally comes law may be taken for granted. But Canadians who pin to this fact hopes for modification of the tariff as it affects Canada are likely to be disappointed. . . . Tariff-making at appointed. . . . Tariff-making at Washington is pretty much a matter of rog-rolling. There is a lively outcry in the farm states against the bill as drafted, but when it comes to final action the farm senators may have to accept most of the increases on manufactured products in order to get the necessary support for the agricultural tariff they want. Mr. Hoover is reported to be displeased with the bill as drawn partly because of its adverse effect on the international relations of the United States, but he is in the same position. To achieve the measure of farm relief he has promised he may have to accept increases in the industrial tariff. The tail goes with the hide. . . . event the scale of tariff increase farm products is not likely to be affected. Canada need expect no relief in the revised bill which will be issued this summer.

Ramsay MacDonald Flies

London Daily News and Westminster (Lib.): The really interesting point about the Prime Minister's long flight from Lossiemouth to London is that it emphasizes in the public mind (perhaps somewhat spectacularly) the safety of air-travel. If a six-hour non-stop flight were still to be classed as a risky adventure, not even his most malignant political enemy would encourage a British Premier to travel regularly by air. Mr. MacDonald is, in fact, the first Prime Minister in this country to journey by airplane; but he will certainly not be the last. Already most of our leading politicians have on occasions used the airplane in preference to the railway train and the steamship; and the Prince of Wales, never in the background when a new experience offers itself, has shown a growing fondness for this mode of travel. The Sopwith now takes the place of the special train in an emergency.

A NARROW ESCAPE
About 2:30 on Sunday afternoon (July 21st, a McLaughlin touring car, driven by Mr. J. Had the pole not been situated at the end of the street the car and its occupants would have gone over the revetment wall and probably into the lake.

WIT AND HUMOR

Modern Hercules
I have seen a man take a sitting hen off the nest and hurl her viciously across the floor. Evidently he did not care whether he killed her or not. He would treat a cow, a calf or a sheep in the same manner.—Poultry Item.

"Have you left anything?" is a sign placed in many large hotels in America. A more appropriate question to the departing guest would be "Have you anything left?"

Valuable Package
"Tommy, can you tell me one of the uses of cowhide?"
"Er, yessir. It keeps the cow together."

"You sell anti-knock gas?"
"Yes, sir."
"Let me have a pint. I want to rub some on my girl's knees."

The taxi corporation was interviewing an applicant chauffeur.
"Are you honest and straightforward?" he was asked.
"Yes, indeed."
"Absolutely trustworthy?"
"Positively."

1929—"Let's park in the drive this evening."

Real Encouragement

"I'll say she has. Last night she asked me if I snored."

What Did She Mean?

She—Oh, go jump in the lake!

An uncle from Toronto was visiting a girl in the country this spring and noticing him working in the field enquired of her aunt what he was doing and was told he was "galling."

"Isn't that the potato field next to where he is working?"
"Yes."
"Well, why doesn't uncle roll that field too, then he could raise mashed potatoes this year."

MIXED FUR FARMER

Many have been trying out the fox farming business with more or less success, but only a few have reached that stage where they can continue to carry on with profit. Mr. James Beattie, of Ockerby Mills, seems to have satisfactorily solved the problem of breeding and raising foxes, and is so encouraged by his success that he is preparing to extend his operations into another branch of the fur producing business. Recently he bought a farm that is well adapted to the raising of muskrats and purposes taking it up on a large scale. The property is on lot 5, con. 11, Elderslie, and has been lately owned by Mr. Jas. Martin, from whom it was purchased. It's chief value as a muskrat ranch is the small lake on the farm, surrounded by marshy land, where the little animals are naturally perfectly at home, and at the same time can be quite easily kept within bounds for feeding and handling.

The opinion prevails in some quarters that once a man gets elected to the Legislature or the House of Commons secret sources of wealth are at once opened up to him. The late Right-Honorable W. S. Fielding was 41 years in public life and for 29 years a Minister of the Crown. For 17 years he was Finance Minister at Ottawa, an able statesman and capable financier; a man who in private life might have amassed a fortune. But Mr. Fielding died a comparatively poor man. Public life has its attractions for many, but financially it is a sacrifice of personal interest.

BEWARE THE BUMBLE BEE

The husky little bumble bee is growing in importance. In days of old he made his rounds, gathered his need of honey for home consumption sang his little song and only used his warmer end in self-defence. Now he has become a factor in the transportation problem. When he flies in at the window of the family car there is only one thing to do. Stop the car and give him your entire attention. Not till he has sung his song, finished his visit and flown away, must another wheel be turned. Otherwise there will be casualties in the family and bills for repairs of the car. "Ward the Bumble Bee" is the motto now posted on the auto windows.

LAKELET

A committee is at work arranging to have the cemetery here put in decent shape. One family, who has relatives buried here offered $200.00 towards cleaning it up. This amount together with what they expect to collect from others interested will go a long way towards putting this neglected piece of ground in presentable shape. It is nothing short of a crime to let country grave yards grow up with weeds, straggling fences and fallen tomb stones. It is a worthy cause and we trust the committee may show to others that Lakelet has not forgotten its honored dead.

Jean Wright and Faith Wright have passed the Entrance exams at the recent examinations. There were four wrote and two made the grade. Very few schools passed one hundred per cent. this year. The Preachers are now due for their holiday. August is the month most of them take them. Personally we think there would be nothing lost were all the churches closed while the ministers are gone. The members want a little relaxation, too. Want to visit other churches, etc. Very often those who substitute do not draw a crowd and we believe pastor and people would re-unite after the holiday and feel invigorated and refreshed as a result of a holiday.

The crusher, which has been idle for some weeks, is going to start work this week. The Reeve and Deputy Reeve were in Goderich last week looking after repairs for the machine. GORED BY BULL

At an early hour on Tuesday morning, July 23rd, Mr. William Farrell, 10th Huron Township, while doing the chores in his barn, was attacked and badly injured by a bull.

Mr. Farrell entered the box stall in order to tend to the animal as usual when it attacked him. He was thrown violently to the floor and was badly shaken up and bruised. One of the horns of the animal punctured Mr. Farrell's leg and tore a long wound that required seven stitches to close.

No doubt that enraged bovine would have done Mr. Farrell death had not Walter Lingham come to his rescue. Lingham had to beat the beast with a bar about the head to drive it back and displayed considerable bravery in his act. Medical aid was summoned immediately and the victim's suffering relieved. Although his condition is not regarded as serious Mr. Farrell will be laid aside for a time.—Kincairdine Review-Reporter.

CATTLE ON HIGHWAY

In the second division court in Toronto, a judgment was given dismissing an appeal which is of interest to motorists and to owners of cattle. While driving at night on a highway, the motorist turned aside to pass a couple of calves, when a third bobbed up from the ditch and was struck by the car, which was damaged to the extent of $300. The motorist sued the owner of the calf and secured judgment for the full amount. On appeal the judgment was sustained. The court held that the plaintiff was not guilty of negligence and the sole cause of the accident was the negligence and disobedience of a statutory duty owed by the defendant. By the Highway Improvement Act, R. S. O., 1927, Chapter 54, Section 73, (3) it was pointed out that, permitting one's cattle to run at large is forbidden; consequently the presence of these calves on the road was unlawful—so much so as if forbidden by legal law.

CLEVER CHEQUE ARTIST GETS LONG JAIL TERM

One merchant in Acton, another in Warton, and five others in Georgetown have learnt, through bitter experience, that a pretty face and a dashing smile is not sufficient warrant of integrity. Elsie Robertson, aged 25, pretty Georgetown girl and a short time ago one of the most popular girls of the town, has gulled dozens of Ontario business men to the tune of thousands of dollars, winning her way with nothing to aid her but a pleasant word and charming disposition.

Last week, Elsie Robertson, in a crowded court-room in Milton, was sentenced by Magistrate H. P. Moore to serve three years in penitentiary for passing bogus cheques. She was also sentenced a week previous to a two-year term for similar offences at Barrie and Parry Sound. The sentences run concurrently, and unless Elsie can melt her jaspers with her smiles, she will not be free for three summers.

Miss Robertson, a Toronto girl, arrived in Georgetown three months ago. Within a few days she had established herself as a member of the young society of the town. She became a member of the United Church choir and young people's association. Her friends were legion and her suitors many.

One day she presented herself to a Georgetown motor car dealer, flaunted a cheque book and a gay glance and drove away in a big new sedan. Georgetown faded away in a cloud of exhaust, and Barrie was her next stopping place. There, she soon won her way into the hearts and graces of the local Salvation Army troops. Clad in bonnet and long skirts, the appealing blonde did a lot of collecting for the Army. She even collected a dollar from the chief of police, who had a sheaf of warrants for her lying on his desk at the time.

She was not content with her first car, so one day she traded it in and purchased one still better. The deal-ever questioned her bank account—her face was enough.

"Only too pleased to serve you, Miss Robertson; do call again."

But Miss Robertson never called again; it was part of her technique never to call on anyone more than once. She called on a lot more people in other towns—Warton and Parry Sound. Silk stockings, bright hats, gas and oil, spare tires for her car; she got them all with her compelling glance and her cheque.

And then came the end. One day Miss Robertson learned that there were in the neighborhood of twenty warrants out for her arrest. She might have accelerated her car and disappeared across the border; she might have done lots of other things, but Elsie Robertson was a true lad. Politely and without any fuss, she drove up to the police station at Barrie and paid a social call to the chief there. The chief was pleased to see her. So were the judges in Barrie, Milton and Parry Sound. And so will the wardens at Kingston.

CLIFFORD,

Miss Irma Werner, nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Werner, of the Elora Road, was operated upon last Wednesday afternoon in Walkerton hospital for a severe and serious acute attack of appendicitis. Dr. W. A. Proud, of Guelph, and Dr. A. F. Thaler, of Clifford, performed the operation.

Little Elmer Hill, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Erhart Hill, of the Howick-Carrick boundary, was badly bitten by an angry dog several weeks ago but we are pleased to report that all danger of hydrophobia setting in is past. The dog was killed immediately after attacking the child Verna, the seven-year-old daughter in the same home, is recovering nicely from an attack of a mild form of scarlet fever. Dr. T. A. Carpenter, of Mildmay, has been the attending physician.

Miss Rhoda Widmeyer, of Warton who is a sister of Mrs. Ira McClure and well known to many in Clifford and vicinity, has been successful in obtaining a first class certificate at the normal school examinations. Mr. Morley Zurbrigg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Zurbrigg, of the 11th con. of Howick, was also successful in obtaining a second class certificate. Both young people have been students at the Stratford Normal school during the past year and are to be congratulated upon their success.

It's rough on a girl if her best neglects to shave.

Kitchener old age commissioners have appointed a paid secretary, but the members of the board themselves are asking no remuneration.

The name of the provincial highways of Ontario is to be changed to "The King's Highway." Even this won't prevent the road hogs from acting as though they own the roads,

YOUR DUTY—BUY AT HOME

This is the first of a series of twenty-six editorials which will appear in the "Gazette" on "Buy-at-Home." These articles are designed to impress upon the residents of Mildmay the obligation which they owe to the community to purchase their needs from local merchants, a duty which they owe, not only to themselves, but also to every organization in the town.

The Gazette is an advocate of community buying because it believes that in the theory of buying at home and supporting home industries depends the success and advancement of this town. The merchant is responsible for the position we hold in the province today. Through his efforts our schools, churches and public institutions have been established as well as all civic rights we enjoy. He has shown his confidence in the town and in you by establishing himself in business here, assuming the greater burden of taxation and community responsibilities.

The Gazette seeks to point the way to a greater and better interest. This series of editorials is designed to benefit the merchant by securing for him your confidence and support and by so doing enable him to render you a more efficient service. If this task is accomplished, much will have been done to place Mildmay well up in the list of prosperous Ontario towns.

Sunday School Lesson

August 4. Lesson V.—Belshazzar's Feast (Temperance Lesson)—Daniel 5: 17-28. Golden Text—Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess.—Ephesians 5: 18.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL, vs. 1-16.

II. THE INTERPRETATION, vs. 17-31.

INTRODUCTION—There are two ancient accounts of the fall of Babylon and the end of the Babylonian empire, with which the story told in this chapter may be compared. The first of these is found in inscriptions of the latter part of the sixth century, B.C., apparently contemporary with the events recorded. According to these inscriptions Cyrus, who in B.C. 549 became king of the little country of Aushan in the southern part of Persia, and who in B.C. 546, or earlier, was called "king of Persia," invaded the Babylonian country in B.C. 538, defeated the army of Nabonidus, last of the kings of Babylon, captured the cities of Sippar and Babylon, and took the king prisoner, and nearly four weeks later the king's son, Belshazzar, was slain in a night attack upon some stronghold, in which he must have been making a prolonged resistance. It is possible that Belshazzar was declared king after his father was taken prisoner, but this fact is not recorded. The second story is drawn from the writings of two famous Greek historians of the fifth century, B.C., Herodotus and Xenophon, both of whom had visited Persia, and tells how Cyrus diverted the waters of the river Euphrates into another channel, and entered the city by the dry bed of the river while the king and the people were holding a festival. There are differences in detail between both of these stories and the account here given in the book of Daniel, but it is quite possible that with fuller knowledge they may be reconciled. Belshazzar, for instance, in the ancient records, appears to be the son of Nabonidus, not of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel 5: 2, 3. It is suggested that his mother may have been a daughter of Nebuchadnezzar, and he, therefore, a grandson.

I. THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL, vs. 1-16.

Belshazzar made a great feast . . . and drank wine. The feasting and wine-drinking are represented as unusual at all times, the Babylonians, however, are said by one ancient writer to have been given to excess in such matters. On this night danger threatened the city, and the king and his lords might have been much better employed in its defence. They seem to have been confident in the city's strength, and in their ability to repel the invaders. It has been suggested that there was treachery within the walls, and that aBylon was lib in the use of the golden and silver vessels, once consecrated to the service of God in the temple at Jerusalem (see ch. 1: 2 and Jer. 52: 19). These vessels were returned by Cyrus to the company of exiles whom he permitted to go back to Jerusalem, and to rebuild the temple, Ezra 1: 7-11.

The word "father" may quite properly have been used for "grandfather" or "ancestor" (compare Gen. 28: 13 and 1 Kings 15: 11). The presence of women at the feasts, at least among the Persians, is vouched for by Herodotus. The Septuagint, the ancient Greek version, adds to verse 4 the words, "but the eternal God they praised not who hath power over their spirit." How could men whose minds were befuddled by drink, in such a scene of riot, praise the eternal God? Compare v. 23.

In the full light of the candlestick there appeared a mysterious handwriting on the plaster of the wall. The wine which he had drunk had not added to the king's courage. He was seized with panic and superstitious fear. Verses 7 and 8 suggest that the king at first sent a message to the wise men offering a rich reward for the reading and interpretation of the strange writing, and after that they came in to the banqueting-hall. Now the queen (vs. 10), showed more wisdom and courage than the terrified king and his astonished lords. She remembered the great reputation of Daniel, who must, at this time, have been a very old man. He had been carried captive as a boy from Jerusalem to Babylon sixty-seven years before, ch. 1: 1-6. Daniel was sent for and promised an almost royal dignity, high rank, and a place of authority in the kingdom (v. 16), if he could read and interpret the writing.

II. THE INTERPRETATION, vs. 17-31. Daniel does not, and will not, exercise his great gifts for such rewards as the king can offer. To him the price of wisdom is above purple robes, gold chain, and royal dignity. Out of the past which he remembers so well he recalls to the king the example of his great predecessor, Nebuchadnezzar, and the humbling of his pride (see the story told at length in ch. 4). Belshazzar might have taken that lesson to heart. Now his pride, too, will be humbled. His doom is pronounced in the handwriting on the wall.

In v. 25 the writing contains four words, the first word being repeated. In the interpretation there are only three words, the third from the same root as the corresponding word in v. 25, but in a different form. So also in the Greek and Latin versions. The words seem to have each a double meaning. "Mene" may be identical with the Hebrew "maneh" and Latin "mina," a weight equal to sixty shekels. Tekel is the Aramaic form of the word "shekel." Peres, of which the form in verse 25 may be plural, is half a mina. At the same time the sound of this word in the plural suggests the word Persians. With some doubt as to the primary meaning of the three words therefore, we may venture to translate, a mina, a shekel, two half-minas. The first word suggests number, the second weight, and the third division. Daniel's inspired interpretation, therefore, can be understood.

To A Greek Statue

What eyes have worshipped thee, O Passionless Cold stone, thou darling beauty of dead men
And hurried worlds! What hearts in those days when Beauty was god have longed for thy caress,
As, 'mid voluptuous feast and wild excess,
They saw the dawn-light of the Eastern skies
Crimson that brow and kindle in those eyes,
And felt their glutton passion's emptiness.
And still thou mockest us, O cruel
stone,
And still thine eyes are gazing far away,
Drinking out man's love that loves
thee all in vain.
Yea, to all time, thy beautiful
white lips say,
"Love's deepest yearnings leave man
most alone,
And in man's deepest pleasure there is pain."
—Frederick George Scott.

Canada and Divorce

Manitoba Free Press (Lib). The case for devolving this duty upon a properly-constituted court is, over-whelming; but it is by no means certain that this will be done, though Mr. King gave a promise that he would deal with the matter. The present arrangement is preferred by a majority of the members at least of the present House of Commons; their consciences will not permit them to vote for the establishment of a divorce court, though they make no difficulty about acting themselves as members of a divorce court which grinds out divorces by the hundred under conditions which afford no guarantee that in all cases, or in any case, justice is done.

Holiday Hints

Some Primary Essentials for Securing the Best Results From a Holiday by the Toronto Department of Health

GOOD ADVICE

First—Make sure of the water supply of the resort or hotel to which you contemplate going. If this is in Ontario, you can secure a report from the Provincial Board of Health as regards the safety of the water. If you are going to a farm house and the water supply is taken from a well, secure from the Department of Public Health a bottle in which you can take a sample of the water which will be tested for you.

Second—Make sure of the milk supply. If the milk supply of the hotel that you are stopping at is not scientifically pasteurized and approved of by the Provincial Board of Health or by our Department of Health, we would strongly advise you to have it scalded, or in other words, brought to the boiling point and then quickly cooled and kept at as low a temperature as possible until consumed. Do not give raw milk to your infant or small children.

Much of the permanent benefit that you will derive from your holiday depends on the safety of your water and milk supply.

Third—Be prepared to protect yourself against mosquitoes. Some people are very susceptible to this poison and the bites of a mosquito is to them a great source of discomfort. Do not scratch the little elevation left by the bite of a mosquito, but just firmly press it with a piece of cloth as that will afford quite as much relief as scratching and will not in any way endanger you by infection.

Take a supply of netting with you on your holiday. If there are mosquitoes, you can wrap this loosely around your head, in camp or in your room, and then get to sleep, setting these pests at defiance. It is true the hum of the mosquito is not at all musical, and certainly gets on your nerves, but not if you know that the mosquito cannot get near you.

People who are very susceptible to the poison of the mosquito should take with them a small bottle of ammonia. One drop, or even the moistened cork taken from the bottle, if promptly applied over where the mosquito has bitten, will off time neutralize the poison and prevent subsequent itching. Under no consideration scratch to relieve the itching; simply press the affected part with a cloth.

Fourth—Another not infrequent source of annoyance, and one which will materially interfere with the pleasure of the holiday, is poison ivy, and every precaution should be taken to avoid coming in contact with it. In the event of coming in contact with poison ivy, endeavor to obtain some jewel weed, crush this and apply the juice to the part affected. This is one of the most reliable antidotes you can possibly get and the jewel weed is usually available as it grows in low, wet, marshy places, to a height of from two to four feet. It has a juicy-looking stem that is semi-transparent, an dit is usually studded with orange colored hanging flowers, with brown spots on them. These flowers hang gracefully, and if you remember the combination of pale green juicy stem and a yellow or orange flower with brown spots, you can usually locate it without any difficulty.

If you are unable to get the jewel weed, you will very often find satisfactory results from using freely, strong andry soap. We emphasize "laundry" soap, because it is necessary to have a soap containing an excess of alkali. In fact, fresh lime water, as you get it from your druggist, answers the purpose very well in many cases.

Be sure you take an emergency case with you when leaving for your holiday. This case should contain: 3 or 4 bandages, 2 or 3 inches wide, 1/4 pound of sterilized gauze, 1 ounce of absorbent cotton, 1 or 2 ounces of tincture of iodine, 1 small roll of adhesive plaster about 1 inch wide, 1 ounce of boracic acid, 1 or 2 ounces of bicarbonate of soda.

A hot water bottle, 2 ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia.

The hot item is important in the event of a collapse. From one-half to a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a wine glass of water acts more promptly than either whiskey or brandy. It is one of the best stimulants we have.

In the event of one of your children having an abrasion of the skin, either a cut or a severe bruise, in which the skin has been broken, or even a splinter in the finger or the foot, cleanse the part with soap and water and then paint it over carefully with tincture of iodine.

Avoid being overly zealous in your efforts to get sunburned—take it gradually. Half an hour at a time is quite as long as any part of the body, not accustomed to exposure, should be subjected to the strong rays of the sun, for the first few days; then it will be quite safe to increase the time to an hour, and after a fairly good coat of tan has been developed you are well protected against the dangers of sunburn. If you do not take these precautions you may be caused a great deal of annoyance and have the pleasure of your holiday materially marred.

Furthermore, recent revelations as regards the therapeutic value of the chemical rays of the sun have been such as to make one feel that it would be difficult to over-estimate their importance. Therefore, we recommend for small children the sun suits which can be obtained in any of our stores. These suits only protect the hips and upper parts of the thighs and leave the balance of the body exposed to the sun's rays.

Of course in the case of an infant or small child one requires to be particularly cautious about the length of time of exposure until a satisfactory coat of tan has been established. In this connection we wish to emphasize the fact that it is much easier for brunettes to get a coat of tan than for blondes, their blood being supplied with a larger percentage of pigment. In the case of blondes (who came originally from northern stock where they were not accustomed to powerful sun's rays), many are incapable of developing a tan and, therefore, have to be more or less cautious constantly as regards the time of exposure.

It is well to bear in mind that in order to get the therapeutic benefits it is not absolutely necessary that you be exposed to the direct rays of the sun—the sky shine, or reflected rays from the sky and clouds. On a clear day you may lie on the shady side of the house, with the blue dome above you, and get from one-third to one-half of the benefits of the rays of the sun that you would get by exposing yourself directly to them.

Do not be on the go all the time during your holiday. Take some reading matter with you and spend part of the day, particularly in the middle of the day, in the shade of the trees, in your hammock, or in an easy chair, or lying on a rug on the ground. Do not dance every night during your holiday and expect to come home rested and refreshed for the balance of the year.

Warships to Visit Popular Resorts

Vessels Will "Show Flag" to Britons on Holiday at Seashore

London.—Various vessels of the royal navy will in the next few weeks be "showing the flag" not in odd corners of the world but off the seashores of some of the most popular resorts of these seagirt islands. The Briton of the middle-class therefore during his annual fortnight by the briny waves with his amiable spouse, will be able to combine an inflation of his normal patriotic feelings with the satisfaction of beholding something substantial in return for his income tax. The outstanding success which has attended the annual military tattoo at Aldershot has led to the suggestion that a similar exhibition by the navy would be equally popular. The practicability of such enterprises is rather doubtful and it is possible the senior service is not entirely enthusiastic over the idea. It is said men high in military matters incline to the opinion that military training nowadays is not carried on so much in preparation for possible warlike operations as for the next tattoo.

Farm Notes

FEEDING OF DAIRY CATTLE

Experiments would indicate that there is little to choose between mangels and sugar beets for the feeding of dairy cattle. A test made at the Agassiz, British Columbia, Experimental Farm last year indicates that slightly better yields of milk were obtained from the use of sugar beets, which, however, were offset by the greater difficulty of growing the beets. The experiment was conducted during February and March. Each cow under test was fed, in addition to a ration of mixed grains, alfalfa hay and ensilage, thirty pounds of roots. The experiment procedure was on the three periods plan. During the first and third periods one of the two roots was used in the ration during the second or intermediate period the other root was fed. The results of the test are given in the report of the Superintendent of the Station for last year, published by the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa. Ten cows were used in the trial. In the table of results it is shown that to produce 100 pounds of milk there was required in addition to the other feeds, 115.03 pounds of mangels as compared with 111.6 pounds of sugar beets. The cost of the entire ration to produce 100 pounds of milk was 1.97 when the mangels were fed, and $1.91 from the sugar beets. In the production of a pound of butter fat there was almost a cent difference in favor of the sugar beet ration. During the week the ten cows were getting mangels, according to this report they gave 56.9 pounds of milk less than the week they were fed on the sugar beets. Since sugar beets yield slightly less crops and are more difficult to harvest, Mr. Hicks the Superintendent of the Station regards it as wise practice to adhere to the beets for the feeding of milking cows, growing mangels rather than sugar beets for the feeding of milking cows.

EGG LAYING CONTESTS.

The Egg Laying Contests conducted by the Experimental Farms of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa have been operating for nine seasons. Tests have been conducted year by year for all Canada and for the Province of Ontario at Ottawa and at one or two points in each of the other provinces. In the report of the work for the sixth, seventh and eighth annual contests published in Bulletin No. 108 of the Dept. of Agriculture, it is shown that up to the end of 1927, 25,820 hens had been tested in trap nests. The testing began in 1919-20 with 1,610 birds, which gradually increased to the point of 4,820 in 1925-26, which was ten birds higher than the year following. During these years there was a steady increase in the average egg production up to 1925-26 when it reached 179.5. This was an improvement of 57 eggs over the average of the first year of the contest. In these contests, which have the twofold purpose of stimulating interest in the breeding of birds for egg production and the providing of a medium for qualification for registration, the birds are kept constantly housed in flocks of ten and include the following breeds: Barred, White and Partridge Plymouth Rocks; White and Silver Laced Wyandottes; Single Comb and Rose Comb Rhode Island Reds; White, Brown and Buff Leghorns; Single and Rose Comb Anconas; Buff Orpingtons; Chanticleer; and Jersey Black Giants. The report, which is available at the Publications Branch of the Department, is a most interesting document on the work of poultry improvement.

A Purpose

One of the rarest arts of life is to be serious of purpose without losing that lightness of touch which differentiates the interesting personality from the bore. The man who is profound and pretentious about everything and who looks upon the whimsical and humorous side of existence as something to be shunned is one of the curses of a civilization which demands that everyone shall be at least partially educated. Only their wives know the full tragedy of living with them.

Making a Living

Merely to make a living is a very low ambition. We are here for something much higher than that. We are here to make a life that is immortal, to gain treasures to carry with us into the world eternal.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single "doubtful" drug. Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Rouen Is Unique

With Rouen we must start our survey of Normandy, for Rouen is not only the ancient capital of the province, but it is the French town which contains the most marvellous collection of ogival architecture and the most exquisite examples of Renaissance construction. It is a compact city, and its chief sights are to be found in a small square area round the cathedral.

The plan is simple, and, in spite of the rich and varied spectacle that Rouen furnishes, a glimpse of it can be obtained in a few hours. Its steeples rise high into the air, but all of them are overtopped by the cathedral. One can contemplate the incredible group of buildings from the Cote Sainte-Catherine or from the height of Bonsecours. There at one's feet is the winding river, in a series of deep loops as it swells to the sea, with the masts of great ships by the transporter bridge, succeeded by older bridges which lead to the industrial suburbs, from which rise gigantic chimneys. There are the modern boulevards, clean and pleasant, and planted with trees. And there in the center is the old town, in which is concentrated this marvellous cluster of edifices, each of them a gem polished by the centuries.

Rouen is the Gothic queen of France. There are those who complain because it has grown into a town of one hundred and twenty-five thousand inhabitants, and has taken on, in parts, an aspect of brightness and of animation. I do not so complain; Rouen remains unspoiled. Rouen preserves a civic pride, and, though it be true that certain monuments have disappeared, the best have been preserved, and for perfection and for elegance they are unequalled. Piled by human hands, these stones, daintily disposed, have been soaked not only by the sun and the rain, but by the soul of Normandy. They are not... pieces of a museum. They are alive to-day, for all their venerable age. They are stones which speak—or, rather, sing. They remind us of a time when men worked with faith and with devotion, and when the anonymous artisan was an artist. Rouen is unique: if one has not seen Rouen one has missed one of the most significant sights that France has to offer. There are many quaint and narrow streets with wooden facades and shops which, lighted as they are by electricity, still seem to belong to the Middle Ages.—From "Normandy," by Sisley Huddleston.

Lacquered Islands

Caribbean waters are never just plain sea-color—nor are they ever spread with one color only. The silken sheen of those seas is always a gorgeously shot silk—a watered silk—striped and ringed and zig-zagged with orange, grass-green, lemon-yellow, plum-purple. The colors of sea and sky do not wait for sunset there, or conform to the probabilities. And these endless, jewelled surfaces are studded with polished platinum islands fringed with jade palms.

I forget how many Bahamas there are—something like seven hundred, I believe. Every Bahama gazes out with delight upon its bright brothers, large and small, crowded exquisitely upon its horizon. It is a sort of Mutual Benefit Society of Islands—"I'll decorate your skyline, if you'll decorate mine..." Even a little button on an island can take its place in the brilliant little scheme, so long as it can lacquer its sands with silver and wave a grove of thin, shock-headed palms.

Every Bahama Island is a potential treasure island. The pirates—who must have been men of excellent taste in islands—made the Bahama group their headquarters and are said to have sown a crop of treasure that has not yet all been reaped. I have myself crawled down rough seaweed steps into several pirates' caves—steps that dip down abruptly between one bright shrub and another into a hole on the edge of the low coral cliffs, and lead into white caves that look out through natural cliff windows on to the gorgeous sea.—Stella Benson, in "Worlds Within Worlds."

Retaliation

Vancouver Province (Ind. Cons.): The "brick for brick" policy is no good, because it is not going to help the people who will be injured by the American tariff. If anything, it will do them more harm. It is dangerous because it will lead to a tariff war, and in a tariff war between a nation of 100,000,000 and one of 10,000,000, the chances are just about ten to one that it is the smaller that will get hurt.

Papa—"Is that young man waiting for Elsie to come home?" Mama—"Yes, and if she doesn't come soon we'll have to invite him for breakfast."

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"It isn't always a Ford that opens up and rattles when you step on it."

Not Nearly Enough to Go Round

Ottawa Journal (Cons.): Washington figures published recently estimate that $30,000,000 worth of Canadian liquor entered the United States last year. This, no doubt, will be seized upon as an argument that if it weren't for Canadians, who are pandering to the appetites of poor thirsty Americans, there would be no trouble at all in enforcing the Volstead law. But it will be a stupid argument. Thirty million dollars worth of liquor at current prices represents, roughly, about eight million bottles. Considering, therefore, that there are 120,000,000 people in the United States, how far would 8,000,000 bottles go—in a year? Actually, they would supply about two drinks in twelve months for each American adult.

Upper Canada Centennial

At the centennial celebrations of Upper Canada College in September there will be present the descendants of two of the men most concerned in the first days of the College. The Hon. Ulrick Colborne-Vivien is a grandson of Sir John Colborne (later Lord Seaton) who, when Lieutenant-Governor of Upper Canada, was active in founding the School. Mr. Montague Harris, who is also coming from England for the occasion, is a grandson of the first Principal. A further link with the past will be the unveiling of a tablet near the corner of King and Simcoe Streets—the site of the original College buildings in the days of Muddy York.

Nancy, who was only 5, was much impressed when a large bunch of roses arrived for her mother. "Why did you get them, mother?" she asked. "You see, Nancy, seven years ago today daddy and mother were married," explained the mother. "Goodness! He was a long time sending them, wasn't he? You'd think he'd have sent them seven years ago."

Man-Made Gems

Rubies, Sapphires, Diamonds, and Pearls Can All Be Produced Artificially—and are Just the Same as the Real Thing.

Another step in the age-long search by man for a process by which he could manufacture gems artificially has just been taken. Chemists have succeeded in making sapphires and rubies from pure clay.

Specially designed vessels are employed to melt the clay, drops of which are then cooled and turned into the gems. They are already being sold for use in delicate grinding and cutting appliances, in watches, and for personal wear.

It was thirty-six years ago, in 1893, that man first made his own version of that monarch of gems, the diamond, by chemistry. The celebrated French chemist, Henri Moissan, then started the world by producing diamonds obtained by heating iron, which contained dissolved carbon, in electric furnaces of his own invention, and suddenly cooling the molten material.

But in spite of the sensation, the diamonds were unmarketable. They were minute and exceedingly costly. And to this day they have never been made cheaply enough to be a commercial proposition. There seems no reason, however, why some modification of this process, or perhaps an entirely new method, should not make the production of artificial diamonds as successful as that of rubies and sapphires.

The well-known "paste" diamonds are in a different class. They consist of a special kind of glass, but an enormous trade is done in them!

Pearl Trade Secrets

In one direction man-made gems have had complete success. That is the pearl trade. It is well known that a pearl oyster deposits a secretion which eventually forms its pearl. It occurred to men to regularize this production by inserting a foreign body into living oysters, the deposits on which would make fine pearls.

This process, operated chiefly by the Japanese, has proved very efficient, and a very large trade is done in these "cultured" pearls, as they are called.

Other man-made pearls are made from mother-of-pearl, and hollow glass beads filled with wax and coated with a combination of gelatine and minute silvery scales from a little freshwater fish called the bleak. But these, like "paste" diamonds, are mere imitations and have not the same chemical constituents and properties as the originals, as is the case with "cultured" pearls, electrically produced diamonds and the latest German rubies and sapphires.

At the same time, so far as looks are concerned, many of the artificial pearls sold to-day are so perfect that it is impossible to tell them from the real thing.

Luck

Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up. Labor, with keen eyes and strong purpose, will turn up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes that the postman would bring him the news of a legacy. Labor turns out at six o'clock and with busy pen or ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competence. Luck whines. Labor whistles. Luck relies upon chance; labor upon capital.—Cobden.

Great Things

Some would be thought to do great things who are but tools and instruments, like the fool who fancied he played upon the organ when he only blew the bellows.

When Pain Comes

What many people call indigestion is often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acids instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention. One spoonful of this harmless, tasteless alkali in water will neutralize instantly many times as much acid, and the symptoms disappear at once. You will never use crude methods when once you learn the efficiency of this. Go get a small bottle to try.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

True Life

"How can life be true life without friends?" Constant and solid, whom no storms can shake, Nor death unfix, a right friend ought to be;

And if condemned to survive, doth make No second choice, but grief and memory. But friendship's best fate is, when it can spend A life, a fortune, all to serve a friend. —Katherine Phillips.

SASKATCHEWAN MARRIAGE

A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon, July 17th, at 4 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, when their eldest daughter, Annie Arline, became the bride of Roderick William MacLean, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. MacLean of the Weyburn district. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. R. McClung of Calvary Baptist church, in the presence of a few immediate friends and relatives.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. Mrs. E. H. Phillips presided over the tea cups and Mrs. A. D. McDonald cut the loaves. Assisting them were Mrs. McAdoo, Mrs. Lloyd Benning, Mrs. V. H. Carruthers and Mrs. T. Temple. Later the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti on a motor trip to Carlyle Lake en route to Winnipeg and other points for a short honeymoon. The bride's travelling attire was a green georgette dress, navy coat, with hat to match, mesh purse and fox fur.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. MacLean will make their home in Swift Current, where the former is principal of the College of Commerce. The bride's mother is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harper of Carrick.

BOOZE CACHE IN FAIR BUILDING

About seven cases of bottled beer, and some stronger stuff, were understand, was the hidden treasure discovered beneath some boards in the annex to the Fair building by men who are at work there this week. No information is obtainable so far as to who the wealthy proprietors of the liquids may be. It had been noticed that cars were rushing about on the fair grounds there at uncalled for hours, mostly in the evening, but no one had a suspicion of the place being haunted by wet goods dealers or their patrons. However, should there happen to be an empty church in the community at any time hereafter, it might be well worth watching, as the crafty beer guzzler would probably find that the most likely place in which to cache his supplies for himself and his pals. The stored liquors were removed before our police chief got wind of its presence. Whether it was taken away by the owners or stolen by others is another bit of information unrevealed.—Paisley Advocate.
