New McLaughlin Light Six K-6-63

Is a continuation of and improvement on the H-6-63

This new model embodies all the splendid features which have made the McLaughlin Light Six the outstanding car for power and economy in gasoline consumption. But it includes many new points which make the K-6-63 more efficient from a mechanical standpoint.

Among the outstanding changes are an increased wheelbase 2-115 inches; a stronger frame with box type centre cross member and a much wider rear cross member; new special expensive design cushion and back construction, making the upholstery of the most comfortable and luxurious type; improved fenders, heavier wheel spokes; improved design tire carrier equipment and a specially designed top.

Longer New Springs—Width of plates increased: front from 1 1/4 to 2"; rear from 1 1/4 to 2 1/4". Fitted with special phosphor bronze bushings, eliminating squeaks and improving the riding qualities.

The new K-6-63 McLaughlin Light Six touring car is a genuine McLaughlin model and upholds the established McLaughlin reputation for quality.

This model is finished in green with black fenders and chassis. The upholstery is of genuine black pleated hand-buffed leather. Instrument board is of walnut; the top is made of mohair top material.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Sunday School Lesson VII. May 16, 1920, Victory Under Samuel, 1 Samuel 7:2-17. 7:2-12.

Commentary.—I. Israel desiring the Lord (v. 2.) 2. While the ark abode in Kirjathjearim—Kirjath-jearim was about five miles southeast of Bethshemesh. The people of Bethshemesh sent to Kirjath-jearim for men who were to take the ark of the Lord away from Bethshemesh to their home. This was done and it was placed in the house of Abinadab. Eleazar, the son of Abinadab, was consecrated to take charge of the sacred treasure. It was twenty years—the ark of the covenant remained in the house of Abinadab from the time it was brought there from Bethshemesh until David took it from there to remove it to Jerusalem. The twenty years mentioned is the time from its being placed in the house of Abinadab to the victory of Israel over the Philistines as described in this lesson. Lamented after the Lord.—The Israelites were not satisfied with what they were able to get from the heathen gods they were worshipping.

II. Confession and prayer (v. 3-8). 3. Samuel—Who had been judge of Israel from the death of Eli was preparing the people for the reformation that was about to be accomplished. "When the right moment came and the desire for better things sprang up as the fruit of his prophetic labors he was ready to take his place as the leader of the nation."—Cam. Bib. Spake unto all the house of Israel.—The influence of Samuel's piety and efforts extended to the various tribes of Israel. Most of the judges expected an influence over a few tribes, but Samuel gained a hold upon the whole nation. Put away the foreign gods (R.V.)—There was a disposition on the part of Israel to return to the God of Israel and this purpose was to be manifested by giving up the gods of the heathen. Prepare your hearts unto the Lord.—Direct your hearts unto Jehovah.—R.V. 4. Did not Ashtaroth and Asherah.—It was a long step in advance when the people of Israel put away foreign gods. They were on the way to victory. Baalim is the plural of Baal and Ashtaroth is the plural of Asherah. 5. Gather all Israel to Mizpeh.—Mizpeh denotes a watch-tower. It is thought it was about five miles northwest of Jerusalem, but there is a difference of opinion as to its location. Some would place it at Scopus, a hill a mile northwest of Jerusalem. This assembly of the people was for the purpose of getting ready to throw off the Philistine yoke. Samuel would pray for Israel as they were thus gathered. 6. Drew water, and poured it out.—This act indicated penitence. It also may have had the force of a pledge to God on the part of the people to serve him. Fasted.—In token of their contrition and determination. We have sinned against the Lord.—The people publicly confessed their sins and thus humbled themselves before the Lord. They turned from strange gods, turned toward the Lord, repented, and confessed their sins. Samuel judged the children of Israel in Mizpeh.—He declared to the people the course they must take to secure the divine favor and obtain relief from the Philistine oppression. It is probable that he acted as a civil magistrate. 7. Philistines heard, etc.—They supposed that the gathering together of the Israelites was a warlike movement. They had gathered to humble themselves before the Lord and seek his help, and naturally the next step would be to make preparations to gain the victory over their oppressors. Lords of the Philistines.—The leaders of the nation. Went up against Israel.—They hastened to put down any insurrection that might be planned by Israel. Were afraid of the Philistines.—The Israelites had experienced in the past to their sorrow the strength of their enemy. 8. Cease not to cry unto the Lord.—In their fear and distress, since they had humbled themselves before the Lord, they saw that their only safety was in getting help from God.

III. Victory for Israel (vs. 9-14). 9. A burnt offering wholly unto the Lord.—The "sucking lamb" must have been at least seven days old (Lev. 22:27) and was offered whole, that is, it was not divided. "The whole animal was burned upon the altar to denote the entire consecration to Jehovah of those who were pleading for deliverance." Samuel cried unto the Lord.—The work he had been doing for Israel for years was proving effective. 10. Drew near to battle.—In the midst of the religious ceremony the Philistines advanced to attack Israel, who were unorganized and unprepared for battle. From a human standpoint the advantage was wholly on the side of the Philistines. The Lord thundered with a great thunder.—The language is forceful. It gives prominence to the divine agency. It declares the great violence of the storm, which threw the Philistine army into confusion. "This amazing miracle was wrought in answer to Samuel's prayer, and was a confirmation of his words to Israel as recorded in verse

3.—Whedon, smitten before Israel—Heretofore Israel had been smitten before the Philistines. 11. pursued the Philistines—They followed up the advantage the Lord gave them. under Beth-car.—The exact location is unknown, but must have been west or southwest of Mizpeh toward the Philistines country. 12. called the name of it Eben-ezer.—Samuel would commemorate the victory and at the same time ascribe the glory to God.

13, 14. 7:3 expression that had afflicted Israel for a period of forty years was at an end, and the Lord restrained the Philistines from making fresh inroads into the territory of Israel. Samuel's administration was a vigorous one. He succeeded, as the Lord's servant, in breaking the enemy's power in those cities which had been wrested from Israel. The cities between Ekron and Gath were restored to Israel, but the two cities named remained in the hands of the Philistines. The Amorites were second to the Philistines in power among the enemies of Israel. They inhabited the highlands of Judah and Ephraim, and the Lord gave to the Israelites deliverance from them. Under the capable leadership of Samuel the people of Israel had found help from the Lord.

IV. Samuel's Judgeship (vs. 15-17). Samuel was a prophet as well as a judge. The Lord spoke to him and he delivered the message to those for whom they were given. He was regarded with reverence by the people. As a judge he was far-seeing and impartial. As a man of God he had great power in prayer. He accomplished for the people of Israel that for which he was raised up. In his old age Samuel made his sons judges, but they were only his assistants, while he retained his judicial office. Saul was made king while Samuel lived, but Samuel continued to execute his office to a considerable extent.

Questions.—What exhortation did Samuel give to Israel? What reform took place in Israel? How did the Israelites show their return to the Lord? Where did they assemble and for what purpose? Why did the Philistines come up? How did the Lord put the Philistines to confusion? How did Samuel commemorate the victory of Israel?

PRACTICAL SURVEY

Topic:—Qualifications for leadership.

I. A great leader prepared.

II. A penitent and pardoned people.

III. Victory, rest, restoration.

The history of the Philistine possession of the ark is full of interest and instruction. Its presence in the house of their god Dagon was disastrous to that idol. "When right and wrong come face to face, there must be always a sharp collision." Carried from town to town, its presence plagued with increasing severity each place where it rested. It made itself terribly felt. The account teaches that when the people of God fail to bear testimony for him among the nations, he becomes his own witness. He vindicates his honor against the Philistines by compelling his return of the ark by their own hands. The Lord's sword is two-edged. It cuts both ways.

1. A great leader prepared. A great leader must be great both intellectually and morally. Up to the present time we have no express communication from Samuel himself. He has now come into the full exercise of his prophetic and judicial prerogatives. "All Israel—knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord." "And Samuel judged Israel," "And Samuel judged Israel, Gilgal, Mizpeh and Ramah, his birthplace and home. His position and authority were fully recognized. In the present crisis he assumes a sublimely uncompromising attitude toward the corruption of the faith, and with as great fidelity points the path of return. "Prepare your hearts unto the Lord." The gospel does not deal with superficial effects. The heart is the object of its message and the sphere of its mission. By righting the heart life it puts the extremities right. By regenerating the individual it revolutionizes society.

11. A penitent and pardoned people. Confession must be attested by deeds of penitence. The first expression of penitence was to "put away the strange gods." Prayer was "cleansed breath until this was done." "Cleanse your hands, ye sinners." There must be not only consciousness of sin, but defeat must be contrition, moral anguish, self-renunciation, and penitence toward God. Then, only can prayer be effectual. "Gather all Israel to Mizpeh." The apostasy had been national and the repentance must be as general. A common calamity has great unifying force. It was the Philistine oppression that brought the Israelites to such unanimous action.

111. Victory, rest, restoration. The Philistines unshaken themselves the occasion for the fulfillment of the promise by attacking Israel; as the opposition of Pharaoh gave occasion for God to fulfill his promise to Abraham (Gen. 15: 14). Israel rebellious, and Israel repentant, Israel against God, and Israel with God, represented the immeasurable distance between utter weakness and complete invulnerability. The Philistines "came no more... all the days of Samuel." The victory brought rest to Israel for many years. A decisive moral triumph secured often a prolonged season of rest from spiritual conflict. Samuel embodied national gratitude by a pillar of remembrance at Ebenezer. It is always well to mark the scenes of spiritual victory.

W. H. C. Worms are encouraged by morbid conditions of the stomach and bowels, and so subsist. Miller's Worm Powder will alter these conditions almost immediately and will sweep the worms away. No destructive parasite can live in contact with this medicine, which is not only a worm destroyer, but a health-giving medicine most beneficial to the young constitution, and as such it has no superior.

WANTS TO RISK HIS LIFE IN IT. In this barrel Mr. C. C. Stephens, of London, Eng., intends to "shoot" the Niagara Falls. He has already performed a number of daring feats, and proposes to test the barrel and its breathing apparatus in London before he comes over to this country to try the dangerous trick.

DELICATE GIRLS MADE STRONG

Rich, Red Blood Needed to Keep Up Their Vitality.

If growing girls are to become well developed, healthy women their blood supply must be carefully watched. Mothers should not ignore their unsettled moods or the various troubles that tell of approaching womanhood. It should be constantly borne in mind that pale, bloodless girls need plenty of nourishment, plenty of sleep and regular open-air exercise. But a lack of appetite, and tired, aching limbs tend to hinder progress. To save a weak, thin-blooded sufferer she must have new rich, red blood and nothing meets a case of this kind so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills not only enrich and increase the blood supply, they help the appetite and aid digestion, relieve the weary back and limbs, thus promptly restoring health and strength and transforming anaemic girls and women into cheerful happy people. Among the thousands who have obtained new health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Miss Violet Booth, Glenora, Ont., who says:—"For a long time I was in a badly run down condition. I was pale, breathless at the least exertion, and could hardly do any housework without stopping to rest. I often had severe headaches, and my appetite was poor and fickle, and I would get up in the morning without feeling the least bit rested. I had tried to benefit from anything until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When I had taken two boxes I could see an improvement, and after using six boxes I found my health fully restored. I feel altogether different since I used the pills that I strongly advise them for all weak, run down people."

If you are weak or ailing in any way, avail yourself at once of the splendid home treatment which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills so easily afford, and you will be among those who rejoice in regained health. These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville.

FRUIT DESSERTS.

There are many refreshing fruit desserts to be made from fruit on the market, fresh or dried, that will be a more fitting end to the hearty meals of the nourishing winter season. For instance, a delicious blanc mange can be made from figs, as follows.

FIG BLANC MANGE. Use your favorite recipe for blanc mange using the proportions for a quart of milk. While hot, add a half pound of washed figs cut in small pieces and cooked until tender, with one-fourth cupful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Turn the whole mixture into molds and serve when chilled with a meringue made from the whites of eggs, a tablespoonful of powdered sugar for each egg and about one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice.

SCALLOPED APPLES. Butter a deep baking dish or casserole. Starting with the crumbs from a stale loaf of bread and three cupfuls of sliced apples, alternate crumbs and apples in thin layers, pouring over each melted butter and sprinkling with sugar and nutmeg. This will take about two-thirds of a cupful of butter and only one-half cupful of sugar, unless the apples are very sour. Add the juice of half a lemon before you put on the last layer of bread crumbs, which should be on top. Bake until brown and the apples tender.

Asthma Doesn't Wear Off Alone. Do not make the mistake of waiting for asthma to wear away by itself. While you are waiting the disease is surely gathering a stronger foothold and you live in danger of stronger and yet stronger attacks. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy taken early, will prevent incipient condition from becoming chronic and saves hours of awful suffering.

Species of Fern. The island of Mauritius, less than one-third the area of Delaware, has 235 native species of ferns; Java, a little larger than New York, has 460, while Brazil contains 337. All Europe furnishes but sixty-seven species, the arctic zone, 26; North America, north of Mexico, has about 100 native species.

PROFESSIONAL CRUELTY. "The trouble with this tooth," said the dentist, probing it with a long, slender instrument, "is that the nerve is dying." "It seems to me, doctor," groaned the victim, "that you ought to treat the dying with a little more respect."

Worms feed upon the vitality of children and endanger their lives. A simple and effective cure is Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator.

She—I don't think it is right to say a woman can't keep a secret. He—What makes you say that? She—No woman ever tried.—The Widow.

POULTRY WORLD

Why should we produce winter layers? Because there is an increasing demand, not only at home but abroad, for poultry and poultry products. What has caused this great demand? There are several reasons which, when taken collectively, are very convincing why such a shortage should exist in poultry and, of necessity, poultry products.

Firstly, because Canadians are eating more eggs every year. Secondly, because there is a greater export demand for Canadian eggs and poultry than the latter having been depleted of their laying stock during the war. Thirdly, because of the high prices of feeds and the comparatively low prices of market poultry during the third and fourth years of the war, meant that a great many laying hens were killed off. Fourthly, because not sufficient attention had been given to the hatching of early chicks for winter layers. Consequently, the poultrymen found their returns were not sufficient to meet their expenses, and an increase in poultry raising has been very slow to what is might have been, had there been sufficient profits realized out of the poultry industry.

While it is not intended to mislead you into the fact that big money can be made out of poultry and their products with the prevailing high prices of feeds, yet this can be said, that your returns may be increased very materially by producing winter layers. The following results, which were obtained on the Experimental Farm, Nappan, from five of the best winter layers, also five of the lowest, from October 1st, 1919, to March 31st, 1920, will bear this out.

The five best birds laid 413 eggs at a total cost of $8.21. The total value of the eggs laid and sold for eating was $23.78, leaving a profit of $15.57. The five poorest laid a total of 34 eggs at a cost of $8.10 with a profit of $1.99, making a loss of $6.11 for the six months. Figuring on a basis of 100 hens like the first five, you have a profit of $312.00 against a loss of $122.00 from the latter. In computing the above, only the actual food consumed is taken into consideration—labor and interest on investment neglected. Now it can readily be seen that the winter layer is by far the more profitable hen to have. More especially when the high cost of feed is taken into consideration.

In order to produce profitable winter layers, we must select eggs for hatching from not only our most healthy and vigorous birds, but from our best laying strain. Hatch these along about the first of April and not later than the last of April. When the chicks are hatched, great care must be taken that the baby chicks do not get stunted, otherwise, they will not be as good as later hatched birds at maturity. Keep brooders and brooder house clean, light and free from dampness and draught. Give such as baby chick scratch grain baby chick grit, oyster shell, charcoal and sprouted grain. Keep an even temperature at all times during the early stages, for that is the most critical time in the development of the winter layer. Keep them growing well throughout the summer. Do not overcrowd your house. Feed plenty of good growing feeds, such as grain mixture of 200 lbs. cracked corn, 200 mixture of oats, together with a dry mash mixture of 100 lbs. bran, 100 corn meal, 100 crushed oats, 100 shorts and 20 lbs. of beef scraps, keeping at the same time plenty of grit, oyster shell and charcoal where they can have access to it.

During September, select your most promising pullets from the flock and get them into their winter quarters in order that they may become accustomed to their new surroundings. For winter quarters the house or pens should be light, free from draught or dampness and have plenty of fresh air. A good winter ration for the grain mixture is 200 lbs. corn, 200 wheat, 100 oats and 100 barley and dry mash 200 lbs. screenings, 100 bran, 100 shorts, 100 cornmeal and 20 of beef scraps. Hens should always have plenty of grit, oyster shell and charcoal before them and in this way you can easily double your poultry profits.—W. W. Baird, superintendent, Experimental Farm, Nappan, N.S.

HOUSING GROWING CHICKENS. Growing chicks should be provided with a house that will give them a place to stay in bad weather and at night. No particular styles of house is recommended, but it should be so built that it will provide ample ventilation, dryness, sunlight, freedom from draughts, and arranged so it can be cleaned easily and frequently.

The lumber from piano and dry-goods boxes can be used in building such a house, and when covered with ordinary roofing paper to keep out the rain, will make desirable quarters. It is suggested that the houses be built on the colony plan, so they can be moved from place to place, thus providing the chicks with fresh ground to range over. Elevating a house six inches above the ground will help to keep the floor dry, by means of the circulation of air, and the space under the house will also provide shelter for the chicks.

In placing the chicks in their growing house for the first time, it is best to confine them for several days by erecting a temporary yard wherein they can run for five or six days, until they learn where to return when the fence is removed and they are allowed their liberty. Care should be taken not to crowd the chicks by placing them too many in any one house. When the chickens cover the greater part of the floor at night, it is an indication that they are too crowded. At such a time they should be thinned out and placed in another house.

COMMERCIAL CHICK FEED

When one has only a few chickens it is less trouble to purchase prepared chick feeds, but where a considerable number are reared it is sometimes cheaper to buy the finely cracked grains and mix them together. Some chick feeds contain a large quantity of grit and may contain grains of poor quality, so that they should be carefully examined and guaranty as to quality secured before purchase.

A Frightful Death, Suffocated by Asthma

The Dread of Such An Unhappy End Oppresses Every Sufferer.

Every sufferer from Asthma knows the terror, the abject fear that overcomes them when struggling for breath. The old-fashioned remedies may relieve, but never cure. Best results come from Catarrhose, which cures Asthma after hope is abandoned. It's because Catarrhose kills the asthma germ that it cures. Choking spells and labored breathing are relieved, suffocating sensations and loss of breath are cured. Every trace of asthma is driven from the system, and even old chronics experience immediate relief and lasting cure. Equally good for Bronchitis, throat, trouble and Catarrh. The large one dollar outfit includes the inhaler, and lasts two months, sold by all dealers or from the Catarrhose Co., Kingston, Canada.

WEEDS OF USE.

According to an expert connected with the Department of Agriculture at Washington, most of the weeds are our best farmers, contrary to the usual belief. They are busy, it appears, working their roots down deep into the soil to bring up unclaim elements, at the same time making the soil porous. Most of them have other uses, and it is doubtful if a single plant in existence that illustrates "pure uselessness." The story of beggarweed is a good illustration. It got its bad name when it was supposed to be a weed and nothing more—the veriest plague of the cotton fields. A little while ago this same weed was found to be the best forage and hay plant in the Southern States. Horses, cows, pigs, bene, everything devours it with greediness. The leaves are being ground up to make flour, out of which bread said to be of excellent quality is made.

The velvet bean was a vine used only for ornament, but it has turned out to be a producer of the largest quantity of valuable hay and fodder known in the world.

Away With Depression and Melancholy—These two evils are the accompaniment of a disordered stomach and torpid liver and means wretchedness to all whom they visit. The surest and speediest way to combat them is with Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which will restore the healthful action of the stomach and bring relief. They have proved their usefulness in thousands of cases and will continue to give relief to the suffering who are wise enough to use them.

The Shepherd Moon.

I saw a wonderful thing last night in the pasture of the sky; The shepherd Moon was guarding her flock, As the sheep went filing by.

Out from the purple mist-hung west, Eastward bound were they, And never a sound nor call they made, And naught did the shepherd say.

Two by two they gently moved, Three by three and four, Six by six and eight by eight, And oh, ten thousand more!

Billowy soft and lily white, Between them the tender blue, Those wonderful, beautiful sheep they came, Wading the pasture through.

And the Shepherd Moon went in and out, Among her lovely sheep; Guiding them safe to the great corral, Where they must go to sleep.

A Household Medicine.—They that are acquainted with the sterling properties of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the treatment of many ailments would not be without it in the house. It is truly a household medicine and as it is effective in dealing with many ordinary complaints it is cheaper than a doctor. So, keep it at hand, and the call for it may come most unexpectedly.

Her Ears Open.

A little girl who always has her ears open for the conversation of her elders, heard her grandmother diagnosing a case of the hives. Later this little girl noticed a red spot on her arm. She ran to her grandmother, exclaiming: "Oh, grandma, see, I have the hives, too."

There is no poisonous ingredient in Holloway's Corn Cure, and it can be used without danger of injury.

Lawyer—And now that I have saved you from that bootlegging charge, what do you consider my services worth? Negro client—I ain't got no money, boss but I'll give you two gallons of whiskey.—Stanford Chaparral.

TOO WELL COACHED.

Lawyer Won His Case, Lost His Fee.

It would not be fair to assume, on the strength of a single instance, that collusion between counsel and client is of frequent occurrence, but in earlier times, before the advent in court of expert testimony, when the tests of mental derangement were legal and not medical, it is conceivable that the barefaced "arrangement" here quoted from the Washington Post might get past a judge. Some years ago a lawyer in somewhat irregular standing had to defend a man named Marshall, charged with larceny, against whom there was very strong evidence. The day before the trial the lawyer visited his client. "Now," said he, "your only chance of escape is in a plea of insanity. You must play the lunatic, and play it well." On the day of the trial Marshall took his place in the dock, pale, haggard and wild-looking. "Guilty or not guilty?" began the clerk. "Spoons!" drawled the prisoner with a blank stare. "Come plead guilty or not guilty," counseled the clerk impatiently. "Spoons!" murmured the prisoner, in a deep melancholy voice. "Prisoner," exclaimed the judge sharply, "will you answer the question put to you or do you want to be punished for contempt?" "Spoons!" sighed the prisoner casting his vacant gaze upward to the ceiling of the courtroom. At that point the counsel for the prisoner arose. "Your Honor," he began, "it is clearly—it is plainly—evident that my unfortunate client is mentally deranged. To proceed with the trial is an outrage on a free citizen of this commonwealth." "Do you understand what is said?" the judge demanded of the prisoner. "Spoons!" he breathed vacantly. It was evident that the man was insane, and the judge ordered him discharged. He was taken in charge by his sympathizing and faithful friends who were present by arrangement, and left the court with them. The lawyer followed them and congratulating Marshall on his escape, suggested that it was a good time to pay him his fee. He client stared at him in blank amazement. "Spoons!" he said simply, as he moved away, leaving the lawyer outwitted by his own wit. Muggins—The self-made man is naturally proud of his success. Bugins—And the self-made man is, of course, stuck on her escape.

Righted in Time

It was grim enough earnest to Moya. Each time she thought of Guy's deep true words, his sincere, grey-eyed gaze, she felt ashamed. What a silly child she had been! But there was only one thing for it now—to go on groping her way along the labyrinth, whatever way it might lead. There was no turning back now.

"I dare not," she said truly. "Not yet Barry. Not till—till he's gone. Oh, he won't stay long. We're not his kind of people. I realized that. We're little in common with him. He'd think ours an aimless, poor sort of life. He won't stay long. Besides there's the matter. Oh, no, Barry, we must carry it through, now we've begun it."

Barry swung himself down from the breakwater, avoiding an incoming wave with agility. It was not perhaps very chivalrous of him, but he was feeling rather sore just then. If seeing how inoffensive they were, and very often quite pretty as they shone, wet and glistening like jewels, in the sun.

His own sense of self-esteem was as ruffled as Moya's. If she felt paltry, so did he. He had not considered one bit what that piece of good fun—their mock engagement—would entail. But just as Guy's words had opened Moya's eyes to the sacredness and depth of love, of which they had made such a mockery, so had Barry's mother opened his.

Like most boys, he had a deep love and reverence for his mother unspoken and unconfessed, and her gentle, loving words had made him feel "pretty shabby," as he called it to himself. She had spoken of love, of betrothal and marriage in such a way as he had never thought of before. Far more had she said than he told Moya. She seemed to think it was the most sacred and wonderful thing that could happen in life to him, instead of being—a kind of joke, a heedless bit of fun, embarked on in a mad moment.

"I feel a low-down cad," muttered Barry to those pebbles viciously kicked from his path. "Why didn't I think of that before, I wonder? Help Moya out of a hole!—it seems as if we're in a precious deep one at this moment. Oh, but why did the mother want to talk to me like that? I just wish she hadn't."

She had talked so simply so tenderly. She had told him of her own youth and its long-ago romance, now buried in his father's grave. He had been startled from his boyish heedlessness into a new considering of life.

He walked far along the sands and then struck inland down the narrow, verdant lanes. And, turning a corner, he met Una Raleigh.

She smiled at him in her wondrously quiet way. "Alone?" she said. "You alone, too? Why everyone seems solitary this morning. Everyone seems on their own. Is there no party, no excursion mooted? Is everyone pining for solitude? But I thought at least you would not be alone. Wherever is Moya?"

"I left her down on the sands," said Barry moodily, an undercurrent of irritability sounding through his voice—a warning note which said: "I have put up with a lot, but patience is near its breaking point." He did not seem to notice this lack of chivalry in the abandonment of his betrothed by the sad sea waves. But Una looked faintly surprised.

"I haven't congratulated you yet,"

Dear Sir—Just a few lines in favor of your Lintment. I would not be without it will relieve almost anything. When I go hunting I always take a bottle in my pocket. It is the best for Cold in the Head I ever used; and for Cold in the Chest, and every other part of a person. And for Sore Throat it has no equal. It is also a good liniment for the hair as I always use it. I have also taken blemishes off of horses with MINARD'S LINTMENT and I would use no other for any reason for Man or Beast as I think it is far the best.

she said, "Oh, I want to do so. I hope—"

But Barry broke in on her swiftly. "I'm sick to death of congratulations. Fed up with them! For goodness' sake spare me any more!"

Una was silent. He looked at her, then, and laughed awkwardly. "Moya and I are not the romantic kind, you know," he said.

"No," said Una slowly and added: "That was what she said."

"Oh, we don't want people to make a fuss about it," said Barry. "I hate a fuss!"

Una said nothing to that. He had turned round and was walking slowly by her side. And he gave another awkward, uneasy laugh in the silence. "That isn't your idea of things, I know. But then you never do approve of me. You think me an empty-headed sort of chap. I don't come to your standard. I've always known that."

Una turned her clear, steady gaze on him, though her color had mounted a little.

"No," she said, in her gentle way. "I don't think that at all. I simply think you don't do justice to yourself."

Barry tried to laugh again, as if he would have laughed all sentiment away with scorn.

"You don't give yourself a chance," went on Una steadfastly. "You laugh away anything serious—smuggle away any deep feeling as if you were ashamed of it. No, that's what I think, if you really want to know."

She was silent a moment. "Why did you never tell me that before?" he asked then.

"Because you've never spoken in this way to me before, I suppose," answered Una. "And, perhaps, because I'm not in the habit of talking much about what I think to anyone."

She was not. It was more often people confided in her, told her their own thoughts. She was that rarely, a good listener. She had the gift of sympathy, and there was an even more rare peace of soul and spirit about her, so that with her one felt at peace, too, with the world and with oneself.

SUNKEN EYES BRIGHTEN QUICKLY, HEALTH RETURNS

In a Message to Ailing Women Doctor
Hamilton Tells How It Is Done

In speaking of the ills from which women suffer, Dr. Hamilton points out that nine out of every ten women are by nature inclined to habitual constipation. Harsh purgatives are resorted to which only intensify the trouble. Although not generally known, it is a constipated condition of the bowels that causes half the sickness and tired weariness with which all womankind is so familiar. It was after long years of study that Dr. Hamilton perfected the pills which have been of such marvellous benefit to women the world over. In his pills of Mandrake and Butterbur every sufferer will find an absolute specific for constipation, sick headache and biliousness. It is safe to say that Dr. Hamilton's Pills bring better health and keep the system in a more vigorous condition than any other medicine ever discovered. At all dealers, in 25c boxes.

way," said Barry point blank. "No, I often think you avoid me. I'm not good enough to waste time on, I suppose."

He spoke moodily again, frowning at the ground. Una stopped and faced him.

"Oh, why do you say that?" she cried distressed. "I don't do anything of the kind. If you must have it—I do keep an eye on the way. Because—well, I'm not as gay and lively as Moya. I'm much more likely to bore people with my dullness. And, besides—"

She smiled at him, but not very spontaneously.

"Oh, surely you need not be told. That two is company just now, and three is none. You must know that yourself—and would soon grumble if prospective sisters-in-law gave you and Moya their uninteresting society at every turn!"

Barry took a quick step forward as she turned away.

"Look here, Una, I'm going to have none of that nonsense. That's got nothing whatever to do with our engagement. If you're going to absent yourself like this—"

But she was hurrying away. She said over her shoulder: "Can't you allow me to share the fashionable and universal desire for solitude? No, you're not coming with me. I want to be alone."

But Barry, left alone, too, growled something unamiable, but intelligible beneath his breath. Usually Una was the most sensible and understanding of girls. It was all rubbish if this engagement means an evening and uninterrupted tete-a-tete with Moya, and an end to other intercourse. It was absurd that people should look surprised if she sat on the sands alone and he equally chose to walk in the lanes alone. It was beyond all reason for Una to look as if she blamed him. Absurd. Ridiculous! Well, there were no words for it. Barry left off trying to find any.

Once let him get safely out of this engagement, vowed Barry, and he would never be such an ass as to get engaged in reality. Trust him for that!

CHAPTER IV.

"You and Barry haven't quarrelled, have you?" began Una, anxiously. Moya turned round sharply, and her voice was quite as sharp as she answered: "Of course not. Whatever makes you think so?"

Una hesitated. She could not have put her reasons into words. Indefinable they were, but troubling for all that.

"Oh, I don't want to appear interfering," she cried, uncomfortably, and then the anxious words burst from her loving sister's heart. "But you don't seem happy, Moya. And—oh, surely not the first few days of an engagement are so precious!"

"Precious!" Moya could have laughed aloud. Embarrassing, boring, irritating and annoying—she could have found plenty of adjectives for those first few days, but hardly the one which came from Una.

"I'm perfectly happy," she declared, obstinately. "I'm quite willing to own that I may not come up to your standard of romance. Una. Please don't expect me to do so. And as for Barry, he'd simply hate anything verging on the romantic or sentimental."

Una looked earnestly at her. "Are you sure you understand Barry?" she asked.

"What do you mean?" said Moya to that.

"Oh, Moya, dear, men are not like us. They often hide their deep feelings as if they were something to be ashamed of. But they want those feelings satisfied, all the same."

"And you mean," interrupted Moya, with a certain curiosity in her voice, "that Barry's dissatisfied?"

A shadow of trouble passed over Una's face at those words. Her deep, clear eyes were perplexed and seeing.

Moya laughed lightly—perhaps she had to laugh in lieu of any other words. "You're not to know more about him than I do," she said, flippantly. "You just distress yourself about nothing. Because we don't come up to your standard, or fulfil that story-book ideal of yours."

She went out of the cottage singing gaily. Una followed her into the garden, but no further, as Moya went on to the shore. Moya never used to be flippant, thought Una, perplexedly.

She used to be gay, the life of the family, but not flippant—unfeeling.

"Oh, I wish things were different," thought Una, anxiously. But in what way she wanted them to be different she did not know. There was a lack somewhere, she only realized that—something lacking in Moya's and Barry's relationship, and something, too, brooding and gathering, like a rising storm in the home atmosphere that so little a time back was bright with the spirit of holiday.

THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chealey, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my housework, milk eight cows, and do a hired man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish."—Mrs. HENRY JANKE, R. F. No. 4, Chealey, Ontario.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

FRUIT DESSERTS

There are many refreshing fruit desserts to be made from fruits on the market, fresh or dried, that will be a more fitting end to the heavier foods of the nourishing winter meal. For instance, a delicious blanc mange can be made from figs, as follows:

FIG BLANC MANGE.

Use your favorite recipe for blanc mange, using the proportions for a quart of milk. While hot, add a half pound of washed figs cut in small pieces and cooked until tender, with one-fourth cupful of sugar and two tablespoonsful of lemon juice. Turn the whole mixture into molds and serve when chilled with a meringue made from the whites of eggs, a tablespoonful of powdered sugar for each egg and about one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice.

SCALLOPED APPLES.

Butter a deep baking dish or casserole. Starting with the crumbs from a stale loaf of bread and three cupfuls of sliced apples, alternate crumbs and apples in thin layers, pouring over each melted butter and sprinkling with sugar and nutmeg. This will take about two-thirds of a cupful of butter and only one-half cupful of sugar, unless the apples are very sour. Add the juice of half a lemon before you put on the last layer of bread crumbs, which should be on top. Bake until brown and the apples tender.

Best Medicine He Has Ever Taken

FATHER TELLS OF SON'S HELP FROM DODD'S MEDICINES.

He Recommends Everybody Who Has Shaking or Pain in the Heart to Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Birmingham, Sask., May 10.—(Special.)—Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best medicines my son has ever taken."

This is the statement of Mr. Johannes Reinson, a well-known resident here. "When he started to take them," Mr. Reinson continues, "there was not much hope of him. Soon after starting to take the Dodd's Medicines he began to improve in health and now he is well."

He advises everybody who has shaking or pain in the heart to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

The Dodd's Medicines act on the two essentials to good health. The Tablets help to digest the food and produce good blood. The Pills act on the kidneys, healing and strengthening them, thus ensuring that the blood is kept free from impurities. For the work of healthy kidneys is to strain all impurities out of the blood.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not heal and strengthen the kidneys.

DO INSECTS THINK?

They Do and the Honey Bee Proves It.

Certain insects are rated as intellects—the ant, the bee, the cockroach, and eke that old and loathsome friend of ours, the bedbug. They've got brains. Nor is this merely a figure of speech. The mosquito, an undeniable clever insect, possesses a recognizable brain; and so likewise does the housefly which, though it neither toils like the ant nor spins like the caterpillar, is probably the smartest of the whole bunch.

The nervous system of a caterpillar is a mere thread along which is strung a series of tiny knots of nerve-stuff. One finds the same arrangement in a mosquito, but with a nerve-knot at one end expanded into a recognizable brain. The knots are called "ganglia."

It is much the same way with a human being. In a man the thread of nerve-stuff is represented by the spinal cord. An enlargement of one end of the latter (speaking in rather crude terms) is the brain that does your thinking; and the box of bones which houses your mind machine is a composite of several vertebrae at the top of your spine, expanded and modified in form to serve this important purpose.

The intelligence of an spider, which is an arachnid, is more highly developed than that of an insect. Crabs and lobsters have fairly complex nervous systems, and must suffer frightfully when they are broiled or boiled alive; yet, because they cannot cry out, their frantic struggles under such torture excite no attention.

Even an oyster has a brain of a sort, and a clam likewise. The brains of fishes are very inferior, as compared with those of mammals, but the optic lobes are enormously developed, because finny creatures, to get the full of their need, must be able to see well in dim light under water.

Reptiles generally are very stupid creatures, and so it is not surprising to find that their brains are remarkably small. That of a twelve-foot alligator is no bigger than your thumb.

It used to be imagined that thinking power had in time, to do with the complexity of the brain convolutions. But this is surely not a fact. I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. Customs of Ancient Inns.

Abroad, where many quaint and curious hotels, taverns and inns of respectable antiquity abound, it is natural to find numerous odd customs. For instance, there is an inn in a town on the Rhine wherein whenever a patron is heard to swear he must place coin equivalent to the bar on the counter.

Until recent years there was a most respectable old inn in Warwickshire, the proprietor of which was accustomed to invite all his patrons to accompany him and his wife on Sunday morning to a church directly opposite the inn. On returning from service each customer was expected to partake of refreshments offered by the hospitable landlord free of charge.

Those who put up at one hotel in Edinburgh obtain, if they are accustomed to the ways of the place, a first-hand knowledge of the Scottish disposition. Patrons of this hotel must remember to keep their shoes or boots in their rooms overnight, otherwise their footgear will be blacked, regardless of its original color.—Tit-Bits.

(London Blighty.)

He had held forth for so long on the subject of his adventures that the entire smoking-room was distinctly bored. Finally he reached India.

"It was there that I first saw a man-eater tiger," he announced, boastfully. "Took that's nothing," said a mild-looking little man, edging towards the door. "I once saw a man-eating rabbit." And he sauntered gracefully out.

"We!" he echoed emphatically. "I like that. 'You,' you mean I should think. There was not much 'we' about it. You engineered all this. You proposed it—proposed to me, madam, I'd have you know! Appealed shamelessly to my sense of pity—rushed me into a mad-cat scheme against my better judgment. No, I wash my hands of it. It's your lookout."

He took a too hasty step on the soft sand. Moya chuckled gleefully. It was not pleasant to have one's actions cast in one's teeth. It made her feel spiteful.

"You'd better look out," she counselled acidly. "Wash your hands! You'll be washed away if you don't look out. Ah, I thought so!" As an unexpected big wave besegged Barry and besprinkled plentifully.

He gave her a parting scowl for farewell. Moya sat on there. Her contemplations were not the most delightful perchance. Barry, of course, was annoying. But still Barry was hardly to be blamed. If anyone was to be blamed it was undoubtedly the little figure sitting on the breakwater, the sunbeams playing into dark eyes that held shadows in them, for all that smiling radiance of a perfect summer day.

As for Barry, he went on along the sands, kicking stray pebbles out of his way with unnecessary violence.

she said, "Oh, I want to do so. I hope—"

But Barry broke in on her swiftly. "I'm sick to death of congratulations. Fed up with them! For goodness' sake spare me any more!"

Una was silent. He looked at her, then, and laughed awkwardly. "Moya and I are not the romantic kind, you know," he said.

"No," said Una slowly and added: "That was what she said."

"Oh, we don't want people to make a fuss about it," said Barry. "I hate a fuss!"

Una said nothing to that. He had turned round and was walking slowly by her side. And he gave another awkward, uneasy laugh in the silence. "That isn't your idea of things, I know. But then you never do approve of me. You think me an empty-headed sort of chap. I don't come to your standard. I've always known that."

The leaping brook trout painted in natural colors on the cover of the May issue of ROD AND GUN IN CANADA will quicken the pulse of every nature lover. This issue of Canada's leading sportsman's monthly contains the first installment of Harry M. Moore's thrilling story of adventure entitled, "The Silver King." "The Kananskis Lakes" is the title of an interesting fishing story from the Elbow River valley, it has seven clear cut photos to illustrate it. Bonnycastle Dale tells in his own gripping manner the story of the wild cat, its range and habits throughout Canada. S. C. Cain humorously relates the story of four fishermen on a week-end trip to Lake Scugog after bass. The Guns and Ammunition and Fishing Notes Departments are up to their usual high standard in this number. A valuable addition to the fisherman is the inclusion of the open fishing seasons for the Dominion. ROD AND GUN IN CANADA is published monthly by W. J. TAYLOR LIMITED at Woodstock, Ont.

ALMOST A WHOLE FAMILY PERISH.
Two sisters, sole survivors of a once happy family, greeted us pleasantly, as we visited in a sunny ward at the Muskoka Free Hospital.
The mother and several other members of the family had died of consumption, and the plague had marked these two girls also for its own; but fortunately they were found in time.
One of them said: "I feel the hospital has done me a great deal of good; everything is lovely, and I like it awfully well." The other: "I have gained twelve pounds, and think I will be able to go home for good in six months."
Such is the work of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. Thousands of grateful patients can testify to the help they have received therein. It costs a great deal of money to carry on the work. Will you help?

TOWN HALL DANCES.
Editor of the Reporter:
Sir—Please give the writer a little space to say a few words regarding the many dances which are held in the town hall, at Athens annually. I have no objection to dances being held only where they are carried to extremes, and if there is any place where dances are too numerous, it certainly is the town hall at Athens. There are too many and the fee is too high. Parents, both in the village and surrounding country are endeavoring to send their children to the high school in order to fit them for the time when they will have to provide for themselves. The cost of an education today is not small. Books, clothes, railway fare in some cases, all means a lot to parents. The majority of parents have little money to throw away in dances for their children and where there are a couple of boys who attend one of those big dances every two or three weeks at $1.25 each it hits the purse of the parents rather hard. Then the girls have to take a cake worth 75c, or a $1.00 not saying anything about the extra party dress.
The pupils must have amusement but we know that those dances fill their minds full and so hinder their progress at school.
I would not suggest cutting the dances out altogether but I think three or four dances in the town hall in the course of a year are quite sufficient. Instead there are about a dozen, say nothing of the smaller ones held in the institute rooms.
We think it is high time some of these dances were cut out.

WHAT A NURSE FOUND.
While making her visiting rounds one morning a nurse of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives discovered a particularly sad case.
On a dingy street, in a hovel which they called "home" she found a mother dying of consumption.
The house was in a filthy condition, the rolled garments, unwashed dishes, and food lay about, even in the bedroom itself there stood a loaf of bread and an uncovered bottle of milk.
Amidst it all two children played, both too young to help or to realize that they would soon be left alone. The mother died before an ambulance could be summoned.
This is but typical of the wastage of consumption; the poor are its especial victims. Too ill to work they are unable to supply even the necessities of life. You will wish to help. This can best be done by assisting our Hospital work.

The old saying that "One man's meat is another man's poison" appears to be true in the case of different kinds of live stock. It is a fact that some plants which poison horses are not injurious to cattle or sheep, and some which cause loss among cattle and sheep are not eaten by swine and horses. In Bulletin No. 39, Second Series of the Experimental Farms, "Principal Poisonous Plants of Canada" by Miss Faith Fyles, B.A., obtainable free upon application to the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, a list of plants which do injury to the various classes of animals is given. Save the surface and you save all!
—and this is the greatest surface saver of them all.
LOSS from paint-neglect is vastly greater than the cost of paint-protection. But it is to be noted also that the real cost of using ordinary paint—however cheap it may be—is vastly greater than that of painting with a pure and durable paint such as
B-H "ENGLISH" 70% Pure White Lead (Genuine B.H.) 30% Pure White Zinc 100% Pure Paint
If you would avoid constant repainting—if you would have the paint that has maximum covering capacity, investigate the cause of the high reputation attained by B-H. You'll find that the favor in which it is held by so many experienced painters is due to a truly remarkable degree of purity—a purity attained by using such ingredients as the famous Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead—together with pure zinc and the purest linseed we know how to make in our own splendidly equipped mills. Your investigation will result in a trial of this brand—and that trial will make you a confirmed adherent of this paint that goes so far and that lasts so long. Its fine, smooth surface never cracks or peels—the tough, air-tight coat it gives affords the surest kind of surface-protection against time and weather.

Perils of Thunder Mountain

By ALBERT E. SMITH and CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

SYNOPSIS.

John Davis and Hawk Morgan, ex-scutors of the estate of John Carr, miner, disagree over the disposition of the profits of the mine. Morgan seeking the gold and Ethel, Carr's adopted daughter, for himself and unsuspected by Davis whom Ethel really loves, makes several sensational attempts upon the life of Davis. Suspicion is diverted to a mysterious hermit. They all go to San Francisco to get machinery for the mine. There Davis miraculously escapes more attempts upon his life. Morgan conspires with a dock foreman to imprison Davis in a diving bell.

EPISODE 10

THE FLAMING SACRIFICE

John Davis, lured into the diving bell by the hiring superintendent of Morgan, found the contrivance in which he was confined being lowered to the depths of the bay. Soon becoming aware of the fact that he was rapidly being asphyxiated in the small iron chamber, and with no way of escape possible, he seized a hammer and knocking off a valve leading to a tube which communicated with the dock above, shouted several times for help. Receiving no response he sank exhausted upon the floor of the upper chamber.

Ethel Carr, reaching the rock above the bell and realizing that something wrong was going on, drew a revolver and compelled a near-by workman to raise the bell by means of its hoisting machinery. As the ponderous affair came up, its lip struck a submerged pile, tipping it violently and causing John's half unconscious form to slip through the trap which was in the floor of the upper chamber in which he was confined. When the bell reached the top, Ethel, mounting a ladder, opened the entrance door and looked down into the bell's interior. No one was there. Believing that her lover had met his death, she swooned and fell back into the arms of a workman who eased her to the wharf. At that moment Morgan and Bellas came running up.

"We had better go back to the hotel," said the Hawk as the girl revived. "That is, all of us except the Spider, who will stay here and report to us if he learns anything." Not knowing any better mode of procedure, the girl assented.

As soon as the three were out of sight, the Spider got in the Seabird and started across the bay for the Waterside saloon where he was sure he would find the superintendent, Simpkins.

That John was not dead was due to a series of coincidences. When the bell tilted he had slipped into the lower chamber of the machine, and it therefore into the water. Another second or two and the bell had risen above him, leaving him at the mercy of a strong inflowing tide which bore his body under the wharf and out of sight of those above. Struggling feebly and half unconscious, he drifted along until he came in contact with one of the crosspieces which bound together the great wooden piles which supported the wharf. Throwing his arm over this piece he hung there gasping for air, and in no condition to call for help or make further effort to save himself.

As the minutes passed, however, his strength gradually returned. Presently his attention was attracted to a small-painted "bob" such as fishermen use to keep their bait afloat, and which now came drifting past him, borne under the wharf by the tide as he had been. Seeing that a fishing line was attached to the bob, and that the line ran up over the edge of the wharf, he seized it, gave it a series of jerks as he feebly called for help. On the wharf above the youth who was holding the other end of the line, felt the tugs and responded vigorously as he cried out that he had an old whopper of a fish. Then as he heard the cry from below his eyes nearly popped from his head in his astonishment.

"Holy mackerel! The fish is talking!" he screamed. Dropping his line he went scampering across the foot-bridge, not stopping until he reached home and mother. He threw himself into her arms.

"I caught a whopper of a fish and it yelled for help," he panted. Becoming worried at the persistence with which the boy repeated his assertions, she finally called her husband.

"Mebby the kid did hear something. There might be someone under the wharf, so I guess we'd best go and take a look," was the man's response.

Under the wharf, John, minute by minute, had been regaining his strength. Hearing the approach of the man and woman who had been brought here by the story of the boy, he raised his voice in a shout.

"The kid was right after all," cried the man, and bending over the edge caught sight of the wet, upturned face below.

"Get a rope in a hurry. I'm most all in," gasped the one in the water, and with a word of encouragement the man hurried away. Almost instantly he came back with a boat's painter, and making a loop in it lowered it to the half drowned one who promptly slid it over his shoulders. Then with the three who stood above hauled upon the line, the man whom they were rescuing giving them what little aid he could.

"You must come over to our house and get some dry clothes," said the woman sympathetically, and the rescued one thankfully accepted the offer. At their cottage he was quickly provided with one of the man's suits, a half seaman's rig with boots and cap. Wholly comfortable once more, he ate a little food and felt himself fully restored. The man, who proved to be the caretaker of the island, addressed him.

"Well, Mr. Davis, you have had a rough deal and I don't understand it. But I took Simpkins, the superintendent, across the bay in the ferry. He was headed for the Waterside saloon when I left him. Maybe he can explain."

"I'll give him a chance," returned John grimly. "If you are ready we will go." Handing the youthful fisherman who had been the means of his being rescued a good-sized bill, John and the caretaker stepped into the motor ferry and started across the bay headed for the Waterside saloon.

Within that joint the Spider, Simpkins and others were playing cards. With an exclamation of disgust at his ill luck, the former threw down his hand and stepping to the window looked out across the water. The next instant an exclamation of anger burst from his lips, and turning away he hastened back to the group.

"He's got away again, curse him, and the caretaker is bringing him across in a launch. How had we better receive him, Simpkins?" Unmistakably excited that gentleman arose to his feet and led them back to the window.

"See that schooner?" said he as he indicated a craft that lay in the bay, hove short, sails in the brails and evidently ready to make a quick start.

"If we get him aboard the Sarah J., Cap'n Jacob will have him thoroughly tamed before they get back from Honolulu. Savey?" The Spider nodded and pointed to an adjoining room as he addressed the barkeeper.

"If he comes into the saloon looking for anybody, send him in there. You, Simpkins, take a seat facing the door, and we will wait for Mr. Davis behind the door of that next room. Hustle now." Quickly they took their places as the Spider had commanded.

Having landed and hidden the caretaker farewell for the time being, John went straight to the Waterside saloon and entered. Stepping up to the bar he asked the aproned one behind it if he had seen Simpkins.

"He's in there alone—takin' a little nap, I guess," was his reply. John crossed the floor and opened the door. Sitting before him upon a chair and smiling wickedly through his cigar smoke was the man whom Davis sought. Three steps and the incomer stood before him.

"You tried to murder me in that diving bell," he said as his hand fell upon the other's shoulder. "But now—"

From behind the door where they had stood unobserved by the entering one, a figure came sneaking with heavy revolver upraised. As John's fingers closed upon the shoulder of the man who had tried to foully kill him, the butt of the weapon descended upon the back of his head and with a gurgling cry he pitched forward upon his face.

At Simpkins's order ropes were secured and the victim securely pinioned. This done he was carried from the place, tossed into a rowboat and swiftly sculled to the Sarah J., craft of the ill-famed Captain Jacobs. Still senseless but showing signs of returning consciousness, John was passed aboard and delivered into the tender mercies of the skipper.

Shortly later the shanghaied one upon the forecastle bunk opened his eyes and stared about. At once he recognized his whereabouts, and the swish of water against the bow of the schooner told him that the craft, whatever she might be, was under way. Determined to learn the meaning of it all, he went up the short ladder and stepped upon the deck.

He started aft but had made but a few steps before he was intercepted by the mate. Pushing the latter aside by a sweep of his arm, the shanghaied man stopped not until he stood before Captain Jacobs. The skipper whirled upon him with an evil look.

"What do you mean by coming aft, you slob?" he demanded fiercely. Davis looked him squarely in the eye.

"I am John Davis, an attorney of Los Angeles. I demand to be put ashore." The skipper sneered.

"Likely looking attorney you are, in that rig. I'll tell you who you are, all right. You're a foremast hand on my schooner. Go for'd and turn to."

worthy collapsed upon the deck. Pausing only long enough to see the effect of his blow, John grabbed the painter of the dingy which the Sarah J. was towing, leaped into it, and cutting the painter got out the oars and began rowing desperately for the shore just as the mate and several of the crew came running aft.

The smitten skipper arose to his feet, roaring.

"Lower a boat and get after that man, or I'll skin every jack of you alive." Climbing into the quarterboat and with four seamen at the oars, Jacobs seized the tiller and the pursuit began.

Rowing his best, the escaped one saw that he could not hope to hold his own with the four oarsmen who were so hotly pursuing him. That he would soon be overhauled and taken back to the schooner to be grossly manhandled and carried to the knew not-what foreign port, was a fact that became more and more apparent each moment as the distance between the two flying craft swiftly diminished. Driven to desperation, John decided upon a ruse which if successful might put the advantage upon his side. Abruptly he ceased rowing.

Thinking that the fugitive had recognized the impossibility of escape and resigned himself to the inevitable, Captain Jacobs ordered his men to cease rowing and hold their oars perpendicularly that he might swing the quarterboat alongside the dingy. As the four seamen obeyed and the skipper with a sweep of the rudder brought his craft within a few feet of the now listlessly floating boat of John, the latter leaped to his feet, boat hook in hands.

Two vicious sweeps of the iron tipped hook he made, and before those savage blows the upraised oars of the quarter boat went down with a crash as saplings fall before a hurricane. Two were snapped off at the blade, one knocked into the water and the fourth badly splintered. Throwing down the boat hook and resuming his oars, John with a parting laugh swept on his way, leaving his enemies raging impotently with no means of propelling their craft in pursuit. Fifteen minutes later he was debarking at the spot where he had been landed by the caretaker, and wiping the perspiration from his brow started for the Waterside saloon. With his blood thoroughly aroused by the treatment he had received from Simpkins, he had no idea of leaving the place until he had settled accounts with that vile scoundrel.

Opening the door of the place with a swift push, Davis looked within. Simpkins was at the bar drinking with the barkeeper, the others who had taken place in the assault having left the place. As the returned one stepped over the threshold the superintendent, uttering a curse, took a step back and began tugging at his revolver, while at the same instant the barkeeper reached beneath the counter for his weapon. Quick as a flash the incomer snatched a bottle from the bar. Before its blow the saloon man went down with a crash and lay prone, and with one enemy disposed of, John wheeled upon the other.

Simpkins had drawn his revolver and was in the act of firing. With not a second to lose, Davis hurled the bottle at him, and as the heavy glass missile landed full in the superintendent's face, the latter reeled backward and dropped to the floor. But quick as a cat he was upon his feet again, and seeing his opponent advancing upon him, and with no time to regret the revolver which had flown from his hand, the murderous-minded one turned and fled with John in hot pursuit.

Mortally in fear of his antagonist now that his revolver was gone, Simpkins ran with the agility of an ape. Bounding up a flight of stairs he reached the room above, where springing upon a table he threw up a trap which led to the roof above and pulled himself through. John, close at his heels, was in the act of following when the one upon the roof slammed the trap-door down. For a moment ensued a struggle between the one above and the one below, then with a violent effort John hurled the door aside and leaped upon the roof of the building. Simpkins, at bay and desperate, rushed at him like a cornered rat.

They closed in hand to hand combat. Three times with savage blows John knocked his antagonist flat, but such was the vitality and toughness of the man that each time he leaped to his feet and renewed the battle as fiercely as before. By a lucky blow upon Davis' chin the villain staggered him back, and seizing advantage of the second's opportunity this gave him, the superintendent whipped a knife from his pocket and rushed in with a savage sweep of the weapon. Barely in time John caught his wrist, and then ensued a silent but desperate battle to a finish between an unarmed man and a foe nearly as powerful who possessed a deadly weapon. From edge to edge of the roof they fought for the mastery, with the issue ever in doubt. John, his clothing slashed in a dozen places, still managed to divert the keen blade from his body, and finally securing a hold that gave him the necessary leverage, raised the other high in air. Poising him for an instant while he gathered all his remaining strength, he sent the writhing, squealing would-be assassin flying headlong through the air and over the edge.

Panting from his exertions the victor returned to the saloon in search of the barkeeper, but that worthy having had enough of Davis' game had incontinently fled. Pausing but long enough to assure himself of this fact, the ragged conqueror left the place on his way to the hotel.

Back in the temple of Ram Chunder, the dead body of the fakir lay in state before the image of Siva. Shallum and the rest of the Hindus were gathered before an East Indian basket three feet in diameter, and which possessed a lid in the center of which was a round hole. A Hindu boy, small and delicate, was seated upon it. All were listening to the words of Shallum.

"I will put presents in this basket for the white devils, and the boy here shall be hidden beneath them. I have explained what is to be done." At a motion of his hand the boy curled himself in the bottom of the basket and was covered with laces and embroidered series, then, at a further signal from Shallum, Joo-Singh and another Hindu raised the receptacle in their arms.

"Follow me," commanded Shallum. They reached the Hotel Mackenzie, and Shallum rapped at the door of the Americans. As it was opened a glance within showed him Ethel, Morgan and Rainface. As the three started up in surprise, the Hindu made low obeisance.

"Please, Sahib. I come in sorrow and repentance, not in war or hate." At his motion Joo-Singh and the other Hindu appeared, bearing the basket between them. Shallum spoke again.

"The Holy Ram Chunder is dead, but before he went to the abode of the gods he commanded me to ask the Sahibs their forgiveness and accept his gifts in token of his repentance." He opened the lid of the box and began laying the laces before Ethel, but Morgan interposed roughly.

"Very well. We'll forgive him seeing he is dead. Leave the stuff and get out." With a bow which concealed his glare of hate, Shallum and his followers retired. Scarcely had they disappeared than in came the Spider.

Ethel rushed up to him with hands outstretched.

"John—Mr. Davis! Did you find trace of him?" she cried. Solemnly the Spider shook his head.

"No, Miss. Not a trace. We dragged the water in front of the dock, but found nothing."

Throwing herself upon a couch the heart-broken girl covered her face with her hands.

"It certainly is too bad," consoled the Hawk hypocritically.

Suddenly she sat erect, eyes wide and ears straining. Then with a cry she leaped to her feet and went running to the door.

"He is coming!" she almost screamed. "I heard his footsteps in the hall." With a face flown white she threw the door wide, and there upon the threshold ragged and dirt-covered stood Davis. Another second and she was in his arms.

Great as was their surprise and rage, the Hawk and Spider were compelled to swallow their emotions. As Davis released the girl, the scoundrelly pair came forward with hands outstretched and smiles upon their faces. The greeting over, all demanded that he tell the story of his adventures which he briefly did, ending up with a grim laugh.

"So you see I've been run over, crushed, blown up, drowned, assaulted, shanghaied—it is evident I am doomed to die in bed after all." Admiringly Morgan looked him over.

"You've played in great luck, old man. We have engaged the men, closed the deal for the machinery and are ready to start back for God's country—which is the mine, of course."

"Meanwhile for another suit of clothes, then we will all go down and dine," said Davis. Going to his room he made his change, and this done all left the apartment.

Scarcely had they departed the room than the head of the Hindu boy arose from the basket silent as a cobra's. Making sure that he was alone, the youth took from his pocket several little pierced silver balls, and going to a faucet, held them under the running water. The balls contained the sleep producing perfume of the Orient, which when the water reached it after being absorbed by the outer covering of the balls, would then escape and fill the air with its sweet smelling fumes. Going to John's room he put one under the mattress, another in the same place in Ethel's chamber and four more in different hiding places in the living room. This done he went out of the window and secreted himself upon the fire escape.

Having finished their meal in the dining-room below, John stifled a yawn.

"Inasmuch as we must make an early start and are all tired tonight, I move that we adjourn to bed. Rainface and I will take the middle room and watch until midnight. Morgan and Bellas can have my room until twelve o'clock, then watch until morning. We must not take any more chances." All agreeing to this sensible proposition, they returned to the apartment.

Late evening came. Creeping along the fire escape the Hindu boy peeped into each room successively. A glance told him that Morgan and the Spider were already soundly sleeping beneath the drug, while in the living-room Davis was beginning to nod heavily and Rainface, sliding slowly from the couch, came to full length upon the floor. Ethel was also unconscious, and with a smile of satisfaction the prowler crept into the room.

Taking a rope from the basket he approached a window which fronted over an alley and lowered it, giving it two or three signal jerks. A moment later it became taut and, one close behind the other, Joo-Singh and a follower entered the room, while as they did so the boy went sliding down. Joo-Singh, passing through the apartment, saw the victims all asleep and uttered a malediction. Rainface, who because of his slipping to the floor had escaped most of the fumes and still retained his consciousness, had rolled under the lounge out of sight as the pair entered.

Binding the sleeping four and covering their mouths with handkerchiefs the Hindus lowered them one by one to the ground where Shallum, aided by the boy, quickly deposited them in a covered automobile truck. This done, the Hindu helper slid down the rope and Joo-Singh, tossing the basket out was preparing to follow, when from under the couch a sneaky brown hand crept, clutching his ankle as in a vice. Before the victim realized what was happening his legs were jerked from under him and he fell like a log, his head crashing against an iron radiator and fracturing his skull.

In the covered truck below Shallum was waiting the coming of Joo-Singh with ever increasing impatience. Hindu whom he had left on guard came running up to him.

"Officers are coming," was his report. Shallum seized the wheel of the machine.

"We can wait no longer for Joo-Singh. Siva will protect him." Starting the engine, they drove swiftly into the night.

Rainface crawled out from beneath the couch, and with a single glance at his fallen foe ran swiftly from room to room. All were vacant. His senses half bewildered by the fumes of the balls, and lying as he had been beneath the low couch, he had not seen what had passed, and as all had been done silently and without words the disappearance of his companions was a profound mystery to him. Now as his head cleared in the fresh air of the open window he bent over the prostrate form of Joo-Singh and shook him. No signs of life appearing, he secured a glass of cold water and dashed it in the other's face. Slowly the eyes of the Hindu opened.

"Drawing his knife the Indian put its point against the throat of the fallen one.

"What have you done with them? Where are they? Speak or you die," he said fiercely. Joo-Singh gasped.

"When the first sun rays mingled with the fire in the woodland altar of Holy Siva, the god will demand his sacrifice. I die. My curse will lay heavy upon you and them."

His eyes rolled wildly and a low rattle came to his throat. He half raised himself to a sitting posture and stared horribly at the man who had given him the fall which had fractured his skull, then with a gasping shudder fell back to arise no more.

Sorely puzzled and greatly alarmed at the mysterious words of the now dead man, Rainface arose and began a close inspection of the room. A moment later he found the rope dangling from the window and peered down into the alley. Wondering whether he had not best go to the office and report the mysterious affair to the hotel authorities, then his Indian instinct of secrecy and personal action prevailed. Having first made a hurried exploration of the hall and all the rooms to which he could secure access and finding no one there, he returned to the apartment, and once more peered from the window. Below him he saw two officers in uniform passing, and waiting until they had gone a short distance past the rope and their backs were turned to it, he grasped it and slid swiftly to the ground. A few steps brought him up to the sauntering policemen.

"You see some white men and white woman go out of here pretty quick 'go?" he demanded as the blue-coated guardians scanned him up and down in curiosity. The pair laughed at the queerly pronounced words of the ancient one.

"Hello, Injun! What are you doing here? Are you lost?" A heavy scowl settled over the questioned one's face.

"No, me no lost. Me here. White folks lost. You see 'um, mebbysot?" One of the officers pointed up the alley.

"No, Injun, we didn't see anybody, but we did see a yellow covered automobile truck go up the alley and drive down the street. Some kind of foreign dago was at the wheel. They turned to the right when they hit the street." With the dart of a wolf the red man was upon the trail, leaving the uniformed pair staring after him in wonderment.

As he ran swiftly down the middle of the deserted street, in the dim light of a curb lamp he saw an object lying on the pavement and stopped to pick it up. It was a handkerchief which he recognized as having belonged to Davis, and thrusting it into his pocket he reduced his pace to a dog trot, carefully scanning the road as he passed. Something further on he saw where a machine had passed through a small bed of mud but a few moments before, and a quick inspection of the wheel tracks fixed their peculiarities in his mind. For one who could track a soft-footed beast through the forest mile after mile, the following of the wet-tired automobile from now on was as simple as though it had run upon rails.

Far ahead of the pursuing Indian the van drew up before a shack in a wooded valley. Its walls were low and a large tree stood close beside it, one strong bough overhanging the pyramidal roof. Before this rude woodland temple of Siva the Hindus prostrated themselves, then carried the unconscious quartet within the house. At the far end of the room stood an image of the god Siva, looking down upon the big stone altar close before him. Upon this place of sacrifice the four were placed, and retiring to the outside the Hindu shut the door and placed brush about the edifice. Shallum lit a pipe.

"Thou wilt not appear before Siva alone, Oh, Ram Chunder," he said.

In the east the sun was rising and a ray of light, passing through a rift, lighted upon the faces of the victims. One by one they came to life and lifted their heads to see the face of the dead god leering down upon them. Outside they heard the incantations of the Hindus and a blast of smoke and flame swept over them. Realizing that they were to be burned alive they began to writhe and struggle. Hotter and hotter the breath of the fire swept over them.

Binding the sleeping four and covering their mouths with handkerchiefs the Hindus lowered them one by one to the ground where Shallum, aided by the boy, quickly deposited them in a covered automobile truck. This done, the Hindu helper slid down the rope and Joo-Singh, tossing the basket out was preparing to follow, when

SPRAYING
(Experimental Farm's Note.)

If the fruit grower, vegetable grower, or flower grower does not spray nowadays, he is almost certain to have inferior products in his orchard, small fruit plantation and garden. There are so many injurious insects and diseases which affect a large proportion of the plants he grows that if they are uncontrolled there will either be no crop left or else the value of the crop will be very much reduced.

There are few of these insects and diseases which cannot be well controlled there will either be no crop left or else the value of the crop will be very much reduced.

RABBIT RECIPES

These are the days when one's friends bring or send you the fruit of a day's hunting in the woods. Many a housewife has looked at the little rabbit as a nuisance because she doesn't know how to cook it. She has tried, possibly and it was so tough that the family refused to try it, and she is afraid to make another attempt. Following are some recipes that game lovers have passed on as tried and true:

A baked rabbit stew is delicious if made after this New England housewife's rule. She cuts her rabbit into pieces and leaves it over night in a pan of cold water. In the morning she dries it well. She cooks a half pound of salt pork cut into small dice, then adds the rabbit and cooks until both are a rich golden brown. In a baking dish she puts first a layer of the rabbit, then a layer of thinly sliced onions. When it is all used she pours over it a cup of water and a cup of tomatoes. Cook in a slow oven for two or three hours. When done, thicken the gravy with flour and butter. Serve with a big dish of creamy mashed potatoes.

JUGGED RABBIT.
We often read of jugged rabbit. It is not hard to make. Joint the rabbit and cover it with cold water, to which a cup of vinegar has been added. Leave it in the water and vinegar for an hour. Into a stone crock slip a large onion. Put the rabbit into and cover with bacon slices. Add enough water to just cover and season with salt, pepper, paprika and a dash of cayenne. Put the cover on tightly and bake in a slow oven for two hours. Thicken the gravy in the "jug."

the year, and it would seem that fifty years from now some new source of supply for gas must be looked for. A prominent chemist to-day, discussing the future gas engine fuel, predicted that the new fuel for motors will be potato spirit. Much as cane sugar has been supplanted by beet sugar will be the growth of the potato spirit industry. The chemist stated there have been very successful experiments with the potato spirit fuel, and though the process has not been perfected to the extent to make the product a commercial possibility, it will take but a few years to produce it from the humble spud in quantities to enable competition with gasoline. There is one thing certain, potatoes will have to reach a lower commercial level than at the present time to make the production of the spirit a paying proposition.

AN ORIENTAL GARDEN.

Persian City of Shiraz Retains Much of Beauty.

In the midst of a broad expanse of barren ground lies the flat-topped Persian city of Shiraz, which was once so wonderful a sight as to cause the visitor to cry, "God is great!" and by the fascination and beauty to make him forget forever his native land.

The Shiraz of the present is still fascinating, though its power over the travellers' memory has waned. The stranger may hurry through the narrow streets lined with square houses, but on the outskirts of the city he must linger and dream awhile in the Persian gardens celebrated in many songs by the poets of the land.

The citizens of Shiraz honor most the man who can quote most fluently and extensively from the poems of Hafiz; yet his grave, in the garden beyond the city, is neglected and desolate. A high brick wall encloses the garden. Within, the tomb of the poet is marked by a pavilion and a marble slab, on which is carved one of his verses. All about the beloved singer lie his followers and admirers,

WEEDS OF USE.

According to an expert connected with the Department of Agriculture at Washington, most of the weeds are our best farmers, contrary to the usual belief. They are busy, it appears, working their roots down deep into the soil to bring up unclean elements, at the same time making the soil porous. Most of them have other uses, and it is doubtful if a single plant is in existence that illustrates "pure uselessness."

SEE REVOLT IN MEXICO A SURE SUCCESS

Carranza Expected to Flee As Did His Predecessors.

GONZALES CERTAIN Or He Would Never Imperil His Great Interests By Revolt.

Washington despatch: The Governor of Sonora, where the new Mexican revolution first succeeded, is now regarded as the head of the revolt and those abandoning President Carranza have accepted him as the leader for promoting a new civil government, according to semi-official advices received here to-day.

United States Government officials look on the revolt as practically successful. There is a certain degree of belief in official circles that Carranza will accept the ultimatum of the revolting generals and leave Mexico. It was pointed out that the fact that the general has fixed a date for his capitulation indicates that they are prepared to let him leave the country un molested. Huerta and Diaz were allowed to leave after they had been beaten.

The navy department stated officially to-day for the first time that the ships which had been asked for on Sunday night, in telegrams from United States consuls, had been ordered from New York. Their first port of call on the way will be Key West, the six destroyers, and the tender to go with them are the Isherwood, Case, Lardner, Putman, Read and Beale and the Black Hawk.

Administration officials are hoping that by the time the destroyers reach Key West, the situation may change from one of gravity, so far as American interests are concerned, to one in which Carranza will have accepted the inevitable and resigned his office.

There is also ample confirmation of the report that Gen. Pabli Gonzales is at the head of a big revolutionary force near Mexico City. It is pointed out here by experts in Mexican affairs that the defection of Gen. Gonzales is practically positive proof of the downfall of Carranza. He is reported to be worth ten million dollars, and to hold immense properties all of which he would have endangered if he were not sure of the result. It is thought that he and Gen. Obregon are in camp near Mexico City, and are only waiting for the exit plans of Carranza.

All the reports to the revolutionist headquarters and to the United States Government say the standards in front of the city. The revolution headquarters, however, say that there will be no attack on the city while the ultimatum is being considered. It is this disposition of the revolution forces that gives hope to the officials here that the revolution will be both "complete and bloodless."

Although the ultimate port destination of the United States warships is not disclosed, the understanding is that most of them will be needed at Vera Cruz. If Carranza should come out that way there is the chance of an outbreak, and he might ask the protection of the United States warships before leaving the capital. Officials indicated to-day that in the interest of peace he might be taken off at Vera Cruz.

FARMERS TO GET $2.55 FOR WHEAT

Winnipeg despatch: James Stewart, chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board, announced to-day that the value of the participation certificates will not be less than 40 cents per bushel. This, with $2.15 already guaranteed, will bring the price to $2.55. United States wheat averaged $2.14. Many of the farmers believe that the price will indeed be much higher than the most optimistic had hoped for, on account of the abnormal increase in the price of wheat from the time it left the farm until it was sold to European buyers.

CENSUS OF HIDES.

U. S. Congress Plan to Cut Shoe Prices.

Washington despatch: Relief from the present high prices of shoes is expected to result from the passage of a bill favorably reported to House to-day by the Census Committee.

The bill authorizes the Director of the Census to take a census every month of the number of hides in the country, and makes it mandatory upon all hide owners to give full information to the census takers.

"The committee is of the opinion," said Chairman Stegel, "that there was no necessity for the increases in the prices of hides, and the present high prices of shoes, are entirely unnecessary, uncalled-for and unprecedented. The alleged shortage of leather is a pure subterfuge put forward as a justification for increasing prices."

47 FLIGHTS IN NINE MINUTES

New York despatch: Howard Le C. Hoome, a real estate broker, who years ago was a star half-back and pole vaulter at Yale, yesterday won a wager of $1,600 from J. Ford Johnson, another broker, by climbing 940 steps in the Equitable Building, 47 storeys from boiler room to flag pole, in record time of eight minutes 51 2-5 seconds. Several thousand dollars are said to have changed hands on the sporting event along friends of the two men.

$56,000,000,000 IN PAPER MONEY

The Present Supply of Entire World. Ratio of Gold Down to 12 Per Cent.

New York despatch: In an address before the Sales Managers' Club of New York, O. P. Austin, statistician of the National City Bank, presented the latest figures of the world currency, national debts, interest charges and other Governmental expenditures, showing that the paper money of the world (exclusive of that issued by the Bolshevik) had increased from $7,000,000,000 at the beginning of the war to $40,000,000,000 at the date of the armistice, and $56,000,000,000 at the present time; also that the national debts of the world had grown from $40,000,000,000 in 1913 to $265,000,000,000 in 1920, while world credits, another form of inflation, had also enormously increased.

The ratio of gold to paper currency of the world, he said, which stood in 1913 at about 70 per cent., was at the close of the war 18 per cent., and at the present time approximately 12 per cent. Especially startling was the fact that, while the increase in world paper had been $33,000,000,000 during the war period, the increase since the close of hostilities had been $16,000,000,000, or about one-half as much in the 18 months of after-war peace as in the 51 months of actual war.

The world budgets are now approximately five times as much as before the war, and the annual interest charges on world national debts now cover $9,000,000,000 per annum, as against about $1,750,000,000 immediately preceding the war.

WORLD TO GET BELGIAN TIME

Radio Signals Boon to Railroads, Steamships.

Allied Countries Endorse, May Share Costs.

Paris cable: Wireless telegraphy may yet prove to be the means of preventing many railway and sea catastrophes. To this end, in fact, an International Time Bureau is being formed in Brussels, which intends to develop methods of transmitting throughout the world time signals of the greatest precision.

The bureau is in charge of M. Bigourdin, member of the French Academy of Sciences, who for many years has been attached to the Paris Observatory. Discussing the aims of this new organization, M. Bigourdin has called attention to the fact that all through the war the Eiffel Tower sent daily signals that were picked up in the most remote quarters of the globe.

"It is most essential that navigators know at every instant the precise time," says M. Bigourdin. "Extensive experiments have been carried out in the last year and we have reason to believe that the efforts will lead to unexpected discoveries concerning the variations in actual longitude similar to those known to exist with respect to latitude. With precise knowledge of the time, the sun's location and the consequent geographical position ships will more easily avoid dangerous areas."

M. Bigourdin is confident that many sea accidents have been due to the impossibility of ships picking up accurate time signals. He points out also the necessity for the most reliable records for despatching trains in all countries. Further experiments will be conducted with intermittent Hertian waves, approximately 2,600 metres long, to replace those of shorter length now used.

M. Bigourdin whose investigations are receiving support in all Allied countries, hopes to create a system whereby the expenses will be distributed among all nations, for it is obvious that once the signals begin to work there is nothing to prevent any mariner from taking advantage of an organization in which French scientists are taking an important part in putting into operation.

STATE RAILWAYS.

London, May 4.—The Government is considering a proposal made by the Ministry of Transport by which the State would purchase a majority of the smaller railway companies in the country and lease them to the large companies, according to the Evening Standard.

The newspaper adds that the railways would be administered in four groups and that large economies in administration and cost of running would be effected. There now are 125 distinct railway companies, a majority of which are very small concerns.

THEY ARE CATCHING 'EM YOUNG IN POLAND. Here is a group of Polish boys who are being conscripted for the Polish army.

Other Great Colonies to Have Ambassadors

Montreal report: A London cable to the Star says: "If Canada is permitted to establish an individual diplomatic representative in Washington, three other great British colonies may be expected to ask for the same privilege. This is the personal opinion of several members of the Foreign Office staff, voiced to-day. The Dominions referred to are New Zealand, South Africa and Australia.

These officials take the view that the Dominions should be accorded the fullest freedom in conducting their international tariffs, customs, boundaries, and immigration offices. The only matters which should be strictly reserved for the British Ambassador are those pertaining to the foreign policy of the Empire as a whole, they believe.

URGE FARMERS TO HOLD PARTICIPATION CERTIFICATES

Canadian Wheat Board to Issue Interim Report for That Purpose.

Winnipeg report: It is understood the Canadian Wheat Board will very shortly issue an interim report indicating the approximate value of the "participation certificates." It is further understood that the board has been led to do this by a desire to protect a number of farmers who, in spite of previous urgings to hold these certificates until the end of the crop year, are being induced to sell them at lower figures than their actual value.

With a turn-over of something like $400,000,000, it will not be an easy matter to make even an approximate estimate of value, especially in view of the fact that all the wheat has not yet left the farmers' hands, but apparently the Canadian Wheat Board realizes that the need of protection for the farmers warrants an attempt in this direction.

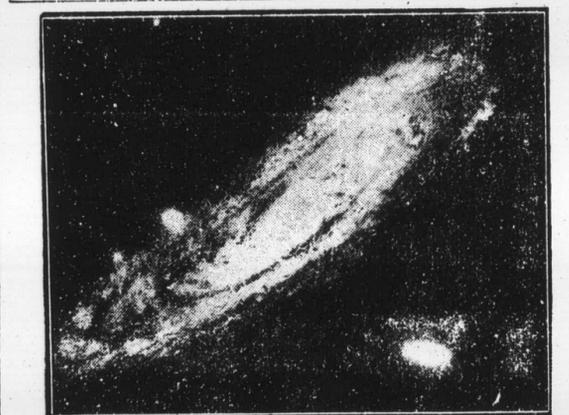

MAY GET 30C PER BUSHEL. Ottawa, May 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Canadian farmers may get as high as thirty cents per bushel for the participation certificates on wheat sold through the Canadian Wheat Board, it was predicted to-day by members of the Commons who have watched the situation very closely. This, with $2.15 already guaranteed, will bring the price to $2.45. United States wheat averaged $2.14.

TURK LEADERS TRYING FOR TERMS WITH NATIONALISTS

Sultan's Party Realizes the People Are Not Behind Them.

Constantinople cable: After consultation with the entire Cabinet, Damad Ferid Pasha, the Grand Vizier, decided to-day to send Nasim Pasha, former chief of staff, and Nouredine Pasha, formerly Governor of Smyrna, to Angora, for the purpose of effecting a compromise with Mustafa Kemal Pasha, the Nationalist leader.

The efforts to induce Turkish troops to oppose Mustafa Kemal's forces appear to be becoming more difficult daily. Three thousand Turkish prisoners, who had just been repatriated from Egypt, mutilated when they were told they would be sent to Anatolia for this purpose. In another case of three thousand recruits, under training in the War Office compound, one third drew a month's pay and asked to go home to say good-bye to their families, but failed to return. The remainder are now being locked in the compound.

ANOTHER UNIVERSE! A photograph of a universe which may be as great in extent as our own. Situated in the outermost reaches of space and trillions of miles from the Earth, it is the only one of the millions of nebulae that can be seen with the naked eye. It has been observed in the constellation Andromeda, and its estimated velocity is about 330 kilometres per second. The cut is from a photograph taken at the Lick Observatory, California.

SCHLESWIG IS AGAIN DANISH

Land Long Held By Germans is Restored.

Copenhagen cable says: Danish troops to-day occupied northern Schleswig, the people of which on Feb. 10 last in a plebiscite provided for in the Peace Treaty voted by a large majority for a return of this part of the territory to Danish nationality. The Germans had been in control there since 1866.

Enthusiastic scenes accompanied the arrival of the Danes at Sonderburg. There the entire population, among them a number of aged persons, who still remember the rain of German lead on the town fifty-five years ago, and about 50 veterans of the war of 1864, were out to cheer the soldiers when they landed.

A force of Danes also arrived in Hadersief, and were welcomed by a crowd estimated to aggregate 20,000. Danish and French troops marched through beflagged streets to the barracks where, amid great rejoicing, the German colors were hauled down and the Danish flag was hoisted. At Tondern British troops were drawn up to receive the Danes.

Admiral Sheppard, Commander of the allied occupation forces, will officially transfer the military authority to the Danish Commander at Sonderburg.

In the war of 1864 Prussia and Austria wrested the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein from Denmark. Two years later Prussia's victory over Austria resulted in the incorporation of the Duchies in the Dominion of Prussia, with the provision that the people ultimately should decide their nationality by plebiscite. This agreement never was kept by Prussia, and was repudiated by her on the formation of the German Empire in 1871.

SHAUGHNESSY IS OPTIMISTIC

Urges for Slow, Gradual Deflation.

Must Increase Production, End Waste.

New York report: "Increase production and waste less" is the advice tendered by Lord Shaughnessy in a review of the present-day outlook published to-day in the Wall-Street Journal. "It should be our prayer," says Lord Shaughnessy, "that contraction be not swift, and that price correction be orderly and spread over a long period. The United States through its reserve system, and Canada, through its branch banks, can hasten this process through judicious conservation of new credit. It is the task of the farmer, merchant and manufacturer, and, finally, of the consumer, to cooperate with the bank to produce natural deflation." After the warning against the dangers of too rapid contraction, the statement proceeds: "For the past fiscal year Canada has a favorable trade balance of $221,000,000. Our current commercial debt to the States is the one serious drawback. Perhaps America immigration more than compensates for that disparity. Over 100,000 men, women and children have come in in the last 12 months. Half British, half American, we are getting the best classes of settlers on the earth. We have labor troubles up here. They are the natural outcome of the war. The workmen must be fed and clothed after a war as well as before it.

"The American soldier's demand for a $2,000 bonus has its counterpart in the Canadian's claim for $2,500. Canada has provided for her soldiers, their widows and children. She has fitted them for occupations and has supplied the occupations. We have all our present cares and troubles. These summer clouds will soon disappear. But we must be brave enough and true enough meanwhile to impose some further moratorium on our individual interests. That lesson of the great war we need practice a little longer."

ULTIMATUM TO ARMENIA

Communist Gov't. at Baku Sends Threat

But the Armenians Refuse to Obey.

London cable: Diplomatic advices state that the Government of Azerbaijan sent an ultimatum Saturday to the Armenian Republic of Erivan, demanding that the latter withdraw from disputed frontier territory, failing which, the Azerbaijan forces would cross into Armenia.

Armenia refused to comply with the ultimatum. No military action has thus far been reported, but the situation is serious. The latest news from Baku, on the Caspian Sea, is dated April 29, the day after the Bolsheviks entered the seaport. It states that on that date all Allied subjects in Baku are safe.

The question of whether the League of Nations ought to take action concerning the fighting between the Poles and Russians under Article 11 of the covenant of the League, and whether Great Britain was prepared to refer the matter to that body, was raised in the House of Commons to-day by Lord Robert Cecil and other members. Andrew Ear Law, the Government spokesman, replied that the Government was not prepared to suggest action by the League. He pointed out that the Russo-Polish situation was not new, although he admitted that Article 11 applied equally to threatened wars and wars already begun.

SWITZERLAND BARS VON KAPP

Geneva cable says: Dr. Wolfgang Kapp, leader of the recent revolt in Berlin, has been refused permission by the Swiss Government to reside in Switzerland.

Four other German notables, including two revolutionary generals, also have been denied a haven in Switzerland by the Government.

CHEAPER FOOD

Some Prices On the Decline in Chicago.

Chicago despatch: Some food prices were on the decline here to-day, according to the United States Bureau of Food and Markets. Reports of bumper crops of onions and cabbages on the way to Chicago were said to be one of the reasons.

The price of Texas Bermuda onions dropped fifty cents a bushel yesterday. Nearly 6,000 carloads were reported to be on the way.

May eggs were put into storage at 44 3-4 cents a dozen, 40.00 cases being stored yesterday. The amount reported on hand was more than 500,000 cases, against more than 700,000 cases reported at the same time last year.

CONGRESSMEN AGAIN MEDDLE

88 Join in Cable to British Parliament

In Connection With Irish Affairs.

Washington despatch: Eighty-eight members of the House of Representatives joined to-day in a cablegram sent to Premier Lloyd George and the British Parliament protesting against further imprisonment without arraignment or trial of persons arrested in Ireland for acts of a political nature.

Following is the text of the cablegram sent to Lloyd George and Parliament:

"To Honorable David Lloyd George, Premier, and to the Parliament of Great Britain:

"With the profound conviction that further wars and acts of war should be avoided, and believing that wholesale arrests without arraignment or trial disturb the peace and tranquility of a people, are destructive of human rights, and are at variance with that principle of liberty which is embodied in the United States constitution in the provision that no person shall be 'deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law' the undersigned members of Congress of the United States of America protest against further imprisonment without arraignment or trial of persons resident in Ireland arrested for acts of a political nature, and we ask in the spirit of American freedom and love of justice, out of our friendliness to the peoples of England and Ireland, and in the name of the international peace, that hereafter, if arrests based upon acts of a political nature are made in Ireland, by color of some form of authority, the right of trial shall without unreasonable delay be accorded to the accused."

SHARING UP HUN WARSHIPS

Four Dreadnoughts, 124 U-Boats, to Britain

London cable: Six former German warships, the Baden, Helgoland, Posen, Rhineland, Westfalen, and Nuremberg, and 124 submarines, have been allocated to Great Britain, according to an announcement in the House of Commons to-day. The United States will get the Ostrisland and Frankfurt.

According to the announcement French has been awarded the Touring and Emden and 35 submarines; Japan will get the Oldenburg and Nassau and Augsburg, and Italy will receive seven submarines. The ships scuttled at Scapa Flow, says the announcement, are to go to Great Britain. Allocation of the remaining 12 light cruisers, 59 destroyers and 50 torpedo boats, the Commons were informed, depends on the selections made by France and Italy from the ships to be surrendered under the Austrian treaty.

WILSON TO FIGHT THE KNOX MOVE

As Firmly as He Did the Lodge Resolutions.

Washington report: President Wilson has determined to stand as firmly against the Knox peace resolution as he did against the Lodge reservations to the peace treaty.

This was the clear intimation from the White House to-day. At the same time, Secretary of State Colby, in a conference with Democratic senators of the Foreign Relations Committee, informed them that the President would veto the resolution Colby's assertions as to the President's attitude toward the Knox resolution were so positive that Senators were led to believe he spoke with authority from the White House.

Secretary Colby also intimated that President Wilson has resolved to send the treaty back to the Senate. Whether this will happen while the Senate is wrangling over the peace resolution or whether it will be returned with the veto message on the resolution is still unknown.

$25,000 FOR TACKS IN SOUP

New York despatch: For serving tacks in a plate of soup to Dr. Moritz D. Spitzer, the Childs Restaurant Company, which runs a large chain of eating houses, was mulcted in the sum of $25,000 by a jury to-day in the Supreme Court. Dr. Spitzer swallowed one of the tacks before he discovered their presence in his soup, according to evidence offered, which included an X-ray photograph displaying the tack embedded in his stomach. He said he had swallowed but one of the tacks. "You are a single tacker, then," remarked one of the lawyers.

A. H. S. Notes

Inspector J. P. Hoag paid us a visit last week.

Arthur Webster has left school to take up banking. We wish him success.

The memorial tablet will be unveiled about the first of June.

The lectures illustrated by coloured lantern slides obtained from the Committee on Conservation and given by Principal Burchell were very instructive.

The baseball team is practising hard. The school windows appear in the way at times.

Eloida

Mr. and Mrs. Williston Barnes have returned to Eloida for the summer months.

Mr. Clifford Collins and Miss Emma are slowly recovering from their recent attack of jaundice.

Mrs. Bert Alguire was a visitor to Eloida last week.

The season for night fishing is ended and there are a few disappointed creels whom we know.

Mr. Thos. Houghfield had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse this week.

Eloida was well represented Sunday evening at the Mothers' memorial service, Athens.

Owing to the coolness of the weather housing is somewhat delayed this season.

Mr. Philip Livingston has a good general purpose horse for sale.

Guideboard Corner's

Mr. Jas. Sheldon spent a part of last week at Charleston doing carpentry work at "Lonetta Lodge."

Jack Coleman and his friend, Cecil Campbell, of Brockville, spent Sunday last at "The Lilacs." Jack returned on Tuesday morning to take a hand in the farming operations.

Dr. Peat is managing the working of some of the land on the Wight farm, and had his men speeding the plough in good season.

Miss Marie Wight last week received congratulations from friends over getting a prize and ribbon of excellence for fine needlework, exhibited at a contest given by the Arts and Crafts Guild, Montreal.

Mrs. Erastus Livingstone made a pleasant call at "The Lilacs" one day last week.

We are all glad to have Mr. Burton Alguire at his home again, and hope for a speedy recovery after his long illness in the General Hospital, Brockville.

One of the very pleasing sights of these May mornings is the daily passing of the trio of High School students, May and Marjorie, "fair as the morning," and Sammy with a countenance of sunshine.
