THE Phantom Lover.

(By the Author of "A Bachelor Husband.")

CHAPTER XXIV.

June raked up another appointment for the following day. "I'm behaving like an angel to you," she told Micky.

He was standing beside the car at Miss Dearling's gate, and Esther was upstairs putting on her hat. She had protested twenty times that she did not really want to go; she had begged June to take her place; she had implored Micky to take June instead; but they had both refused.

"I'm not keen on motoring when it's cold," June declared. "Besides, I've got my business to see to, and I don't want Micky. You go, Esther, and amuse the poor soul—just to please me."

Esther said "Very well," and tried to look as if she were not anxious at all, but she was really looking forward to another drive.

"Didn't you really want to come?" Micky asked as they drove away.

Esther laughed. "Of course I did; I wanted to come so badly I had to pretend that I didn't just for decency's sake."

There was a little silence. "Did you have good news from Paris yesterday?" he asked deliberately.

He felt as if he must speak of Ashton, to in some way check the wave of joy that had filled his heart at her words; it was not to be with him that she had wished to come, but for the drive and the comfort of the car.

He saw how her face clouded at his question. "Yes, thank you," she said, but her voice did not sound very enthusiastic.

Presently, "Mr. Mellows," she said suddenly, "do you know that I have always been sorry that I did not go to Paris that day when I wanted to?—I wish I had now."

"Why now?" Micky asked. She gave a little troubled laugh. "I don't know. I really can't explain it. She did not understand herself what she really meant, but last night when she had read Raymond's letter, it had suddenly come over her with a sickening feeling of dismay that in some indefinite way he was really getting to be what June had always called him—a phantom lover! It seemed so long since she had seen him. After all, what were letters and words? But she could not explain this to Micky.

ting tired of this separation. Is that it? Letters are all very well, but they are not enough. . . .

She looked up at him in surprise. "Why, that is just what I do mean? How did you know?"

He laughed rather ruefully. "Perhaps I've felt like it myself," he said.

"Have you?" There was a little note of wonderment in her voice. "I said 'perhaps,'" he reminded her.

She changed the subject; she drew his attention to the country through which they were passing. It was bare and wind-swept, but there was a sort of rugged picturesqueness about it that appealed to Esther.

"I believe I should like to live in the country, after all," she said suddenly. "You seem to be able to really breathe down here; it's not shut in like London is."

"Dear old London," Micky said. "We all run it down, but we're all glad to get back there when we've been away for more than a few days." He leaned forward, wrapping the rug more closely round her. "Where do you think you will live when you are married?"

He asked. "The hot colour flooded her face; she looked up at him in a scared sort of way.

"What a question! How do I know? I've never even thought about it."

"Haven't you?" said Micky. "I have, crowds of times. I've worked it all out to a nicety. I shall have a house in London and a place in the country as well, so that if my wife doesn't like to live, then I shall."

"We are not all rich like you are, you know," Esther said drily. "I dare say when I get married—if I ever do—I shall just have a little flat some where and stay there for the rest of my life, and be very happy too."

"Yes," said Micky after a moment. "I think I could be very happy in a flat, too, for the rest of my life—with the right woman." He looked down at her, smiling thoughtfully. "The only trouble is, that I shall probably have to marry the wrong one."

"If you do, it will be your own fault, I should think," said Esther laughing. She could not quite understand this man. Had he ever really loved her, or had it all just been a pretence? "No," said Micky promptly. "I think it will be your fault."

slightly of all that he held best and dearest. She made no attempt to answer him, and presently he said again with change of voice—

"Are you hungry, I wonder? Because I am! And I've got a firm conviction that we're coming to a wayside inn. Do you see the chimneys through the trees?"

He slowed the car a little. "There's another car outside—what do you say? Shall we risk it?"

"It would be rather nice," Esther admitted. She was feeling cold; she was rather glad when the car stopped and Micky gave her his hand.

"They've got a fire anyway," he said cheerfully. "I saw it through the window, and we'll ask for some coffee." He led the way into the parlour. Two men wrapped in heavy coats stood by the fire; they moved to make way for Esther. After a moment they went out of the room, and she saw them in the road bending over the car next to Micky's.

"We can have coffee and buns," Micky said, coming back after a moment. "I don't know what they'll be like, but—"

"I shall enjoy them anyway," she told him. "I really am hungry." He pulled off his gloves and dragged a chair up to the fire for her.

"This is fine," he said. "Have you ever thought what a novelty a honeymoon would be touring through villages like this? I should like to just start away and go on driving for miles and miles, just staying anywhere and getting meals anyhow."

Esther laughed. "I should have thought it was just the sort of thing you would hate," she said.

"That's where you're mistaken," he told her. "I live in town and in the way I do because people expect it of me, and I'm too lazy to bother to change. It's not a bit the life I should choose if I had my way. I hate dressing for dinner, and wading through six or seven courses, and being bored stiff half the time by some dressed-up woman beside me. . . ."

He looked at her with a comical expression. Esther leaned her chin in her hand and raised serious eyes to his face.

"Well, how would you really like to live, then?" she asked.

Micky sat down on the edge of the table and stuck his long legs out before him. He kept his eyes fixed on his boots as he answered—

"Well, I should like a place in the country, as I said, and a garden—a ripping garden, with lots of roses and grass—walks like you see in old-fashioned pictures, and a high box hedge—that's one of the things I simply must have! Have you ever smelt a box hedge after a hot sun has been on it? No? Well, you ought to; it's fine!"

He paused reflectively. "I should like to look after the roses myself, I think," he went on presently. "I dare say I should make a mess of it, but I should like to have a try, anyway. And I should like to keep lots of animals, horses and dogs and chickens. Do you know?—The half turned to her. "I've always had a fancy for great Danes—you can't keep 'em in town, only in the country. Some people I once stayed with down in Lincoln had a couple—ripping dogs they were—almost as big as ponies, and they used to let the kids play with them and pull them about. Old Lancing had a boy, you know—a ripping little kid of five—a real sport he was, too—Uncle Micky he used to call me. Micky chuckled reminiscently. "It must be jolly nice to have a youngster of your own like that," he added.

sound of a match being struck and a little pause while he puffed at a cigarette.

Esther turned in her chair; it was odd how the mention of Paris always seemed to grip her heart. She looked at the two men, but they were both strangers to her.

"Perhaps he won't really marry her," the elder one said yawning. "There's more to a slip you know, and from what I know of Raymond Ashton—"

He shrugged his shoulders eloquently. "The girl by the fire sat very still. She was staring at the two men with piteous grey eyes; she felt as if all the blood in her body had ebbed to her heart, where it was hammering enough to kill her."

Like some one in a dream she heard the laugh the other man gave. "Not marry her! My dear boy, he must! It's his last chance, and he knows it! He's up to his neck in debt and borrowed money. As a matter of fact, I shouldn't be at all surprised if Tubby Clare's little widow hasn't already changed her name for Raymond Ashton's."

Just Folks. Old Man Green will be missed round here. For he was the sort of man you miss. The quiet kind that some think queer, yet just fit into a place like this. Like the trees an' plants an' the vines that creep. Which you walk by all of the summer long. An' scarcely notice, as still they keep, but if one should die you'd know something's wrong.

Old Man Green is dead an' gone. An' the old town doesn't seem quite the same. There's a great soul lost, though it wasn't one. Known to fortune or worldly fame; Just a kindly voice an' a cherry smile, Which are needed so in a place like this. Made every hour of his life worth while. An' that is the way of men you miss.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron. DO YOU BELIEVE IN FRIENDSHIP AT FIRST SIGHT?

Not long ago I asked a friend of mine how she liked the new nurse recently acquired to look after a chronic invalid; who is a member of her family and who has had a long succession of nurses.

"I don't know," she said. "What's the objection?" I asked. "Liked her too well At First."

"Well, I liked her so well the very first day that I'm afraid of her. I've found that the ones I like so very well at first I seldom like so well afterwards. While the ones I like slowly are apt to grow upon me."

Did you ever have an experience like that, Reader-friend? I don't mean about nurses, but about any new experience in personality. Or are your first impressions the lasting ones? Look back over the sifted few of your friends whose adoption has been tried out by the years and see how many of them you liked at first sight.

I tried that and found that a few were the result of instant liking, but more were people who had grown upon me. The Good Mixer Not Necessarily the Best Friend. The qualities that make for true friendship are not necessarily the qualities that show on a first meeting. Many people who have splendid qualities entirely lack the gift of making a good first impression. And many people who are skillful at "selling themselves" on a first meeting, turn out to be shoddy when the hard wear comes. The vivacity and self-assertion that are necessary to make a vivid impression at a first meeting, sometimes become tiresome when you are in closer contact with them.

I think this is often the case in one's experience with children. I know a family in which there are three children. Strangers always like the second, a bright little girl who is quick to make friends with them and to do all her little tricks. But this same self-assertion on closer acquaintance soon becomes forwardness and a tiresome pertness. Any one who really knows these children soon shifts his preference to the oldest, a shy but thoughtful and worthwhile boy, or the youngest an adorable baby whose lovable qualities gradually unfold as you get him to include you in the select circle of friends for whom he will smile.

Which Is It With You? I never did feel that love at first sight was apt to be a very reliable passion and I am inclined to feel the same about friendship at first sight. True, I have, as I said before, some friends whom I did take to at once. But there are so many more friendships in which the growth was a slow one that I have more faith in the latter experience.

DO IT NOW. "I plan to build a nifty shack," the thoughtful voter says, "when normal times again come back, and costs don't hit the skies." I'll go about the business sharp, nor waste a golden day, when carpenters consent to carp for wages I can pay. When lumber, plaster, nails and lime are sold for what they're worth, I shall not lose a moment's time—I'll build with pep and mirth. A million men are talking thus, and if they'd go and build, and cease to brood and fret and cuss, with dire misgivings filled, we'd soon get back to normalcy—you've heard of that, mayhap; the normalcy that Warren G. has placed upon the map. DYSPEPSIA IS GREATEST ENEMY OF MODERN MAN.

Distressing Malady Is Most Prevalent of All Present-Day Diseases—Thousands Are Relieved by Tanlac.

Of all the conditions that afflict humanity, chronic dyspepsia, or what is more commonly known as indigestion, is probably the most prevalent. This most universal malady has baffled the medical profession for years, and the most skilled specialists have been unable to cope with it successfully. Hours might be consumed in describing the sufferings, mental and physical, of the sufferers from chronic dyspepsia and their failure before the various remedies which have been set up as a cure for this condition of the mind, aside from the nervousness and physical suffering, as the usual condition of the average dyspeptic. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, as the case may be, is usually caused by the action of too much or unsuitable food, and the mucous membrane of the stomach becomes irritated, and there is nothing more than an acute or sub-acute gastric catarrhal condition which prevents the proper digestion of the food. This food is apt to ferment and decompose, and as a result of the familiar distressing symptoms of dyspepsia may arise. In mild cases there is nothing more than an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach, with a certain amount of depression, headache, loss of appetite, perhaps belching of gas and occasional vomiting. There may be also accompanying intestinal symptoms, such as constipation, pains in the back, colic, etc. There may be only the familiar heartburn due to the inflammation of the stomach from excessive gases of fermentation or putrefaction. In the most severe cases—those that last over a day or two—the symptoms generated may be much more intense. The distress may be marked and the general constitutional symptoms more evident. When this stage is reached the loss of appetite, the mental depression, and the general uncomfortable feeling in the stomach are much more pronounced. This is particularly true in acute gastritis. It frequently occurs from continued errors in diet that this condition becomes chronic, and the symptoms persist for an indefinite period. The appetite is very apt to be varied, but at times very good. Heartburn is frequent, is not constant. The stomach is painful on pressure, the tongue is coated, there is a bad taste in the mouth, and there are changes in the amount of food eaten. Constipation is also usually present, although diarrhoea may alternate. Most cases of dyspepsia can be cured if the diet is properly looked after and with the proper treatment. Proper eating, the proper amount of food and hygienic living are the most important features of the treatment. Most people eat too fast and eat too much. One noted authority has said that the stomach is the fountain head of health or disease, as the case may be. Tanlac was designed primarily for the regulation of the stomach, liver and bowels, but it is a uncommon thing for persons who have used it to find that they have also been relieved of rheumatism and other ailments not generally recognized as having their origin in stomach trouble. There is probably not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the whole system. Next it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest its food, permitting the assimilation of the nourishing elements. Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by the Tanlac treatment after other remedies had failed, but many of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.

He Didn't Mind.

Many amusing stories of his ballooning experiences are told by Mr. Frank Hedges Butler, pioneer of aerostatics and motoring. During one balloon ascent he dropped, soon after midnight, in a rookery close to a house. "We halloa'd," he says, "and very quickly a man put his head out of a bedroom window. Judge of his surprise to see us sitting on the top of his tree, with the great balloon towering above. A conversation of this sort ensued:— "Goodness gracious! Who are you?" "Balloonists resting. Where are you stuck?" "Oh, no, we're very happy. You don't mind us sitting on top of your tree, do you?" "Not at all. Good-night!" "And then the window banged and I should think he was soon snoring."

Strike Atmosphere Clearing--Miners Themselves the Obstacle--Germany Must Make Gold Deposit--Huns Protest Allied Customs Regime.

A FAVORABLE ATMOSPHERE. LONDON, April 18. While the strike of the coal miners continues, there is distinctly favorable atmosphere to be observed in London regarding settlement. The Prime Minister in the House of Commons to-day was very conciliatory, and declined to be hurried by recent happenings into legislation curtailing the privileges of Trades Unions. The Prime Minister was firm on the question of nation pool of profits, which he asserted was impossible, but he admitted that some of the wage proposals of the miners were indefensible and ought to be amended, and in reiterating that the Government agreed with the principle of national wage settlement, he expressed the hope that a plan would be evolved whereby the miners would have a real interest in the prosperity of their industry. Both Government and mine owners are ready for another conference with the miners, and everything depends upon whether Frank Hodges, Secretary of the Miners' Union, will secure a vote of confidence from the miners on Friday. It was his proposal for a conference which the miners refused to accept, with the result that the other two sections of the Triple Alliance, railwaymen and transport workers, withdrew from their threatened general strike. All news from the coal fields represent the miners as still in an angry mood, refusing to listen to any compromise, some even urging that the Federation withdraw the safety men from the mines. The Federation itself has given the owners another opening by issuing a statement inviting the owners to submit the exact details of the amended offer.

PARIS, April 18. The new customs regime, established in the occupied territory of Germany under Inter-Allied Rhineland Ordinance of April ninth, constitutes a new and flagrant violation of the Versailles treaty, says a note transmitted by the German Government to the Council of Ambassadors here to-day.

ANOTHER NOTE. PARIS, April 18. The new customs regime, established in the occupied territory of Germany under Inter-Allied Rhineland Ordinance of April ninth, constitutes a new and flagrant violation of the Versailles treaty, says a note transmitted by the German Government to the Council of Ambassadors here to-day.

CONSIDERING COERCIVE MEASURES. PARIS, April 18. Consideration of coercive measures to be applied to Germany should such action become necessary through refusal of the Germans to give satisfactory assurances by May first of an intention to pay reparations sums due, was taken up to-day by Marshal Foch, General Weyand, Acting as Secretary of the General Staff, Louis Loucheur, Minister of Liberated Regions, and M. Eydoux, who represented France as financial expert during the Brussels conference. Absolute secrecy was maintained as to the decision of the conferees, who will meet frequently to frame details of proposed measures and assemble them for presentation to the Allies of France.

Legislative Council.

The session opened at 4 p.m. A Bill entitled "An Act to amend the Woman's Patriotic Trust Fund Act, 1920" passed the second reading. The Municipal Bill was sent to a select committee. There being some 390 sections in the Bill it was thought it could best be handled by a select committee, who could obtain information on several obscure points from those who framed the measure.

Death of the Earl of Beaconsfield.

On Tuesday, April 19, 1881, Benjamin Disraeli, who had been three times Chancellor of the Exchequer, and twice Prime Minister, and had been created Earl of Beaconsfield in 1867, died at his house in Curzon Street, London. Born on December 21, 1804, at 6, John Street, Bedford Row, London, was the son of Isaac Disraeli, an author. The latter was a Jew by descent, but having left that religion Benjamin and his other three sons and his one daughter were all baptised at St. Andrew's Church, Holborn, in 1817. Benjamin at first entered the legal profession, but abandoned it, and wrote numerous novels, of which one is well known as "Coningsby." As a Conservative, he was elected to the House of Commons for Maidstone, in Kent, and married the widow of his fellow-member, Mr. Wyndham Lewis. He accepted for her a peerage as Viscountess Beaconsfield in 1868, but for eight years he would not accept a title for himself. In 1867 he was created Earl of Beaconsfield, that title being his second one, Viscount Hughenden being derived from the places of those names in Buckinghamshire, where he had purchased Hughenden Manor in 1847. It was in his church, according to his express direction, that he was buried next to his wife on April 26, 1881, the announcement of his death caused such a burst of national sorrow as was scarcely equalled by that of the great Duke of Wellington. The highest tribute paid to him was that of Queen Victoria, who so well knew his value as a counsellor and applied to him the words, "Kings love him that speaketh right." The flower which was his favourite and the pet which was the petmoss, and therefore April 19, the anniversary of his death, is called Primrose Day. The Conservative Society, which originated the day in 1881, was called the Primrose League, and on its anniversary every member of it is supposed to wear a bunch of these flowers. Beaconsfield was always a strong and firm Premier, and no country dare offend England in his days. Would that we had as strong a man at the helm to-day.

CANADA'S PAPER INDUSTRY SUFFERING.

WASHINGTON, April 18. Canada's industry is facing ever increasing competition from European countries in the United States market, according to figures issued by the United States Department of Commerce, which show a decline for February last compared to February, 1920 of a quarter million dollars in business. On the other hand, European manufacturers are credited with big increase in business. Germany has been an active factor in competition, and Belgian mills are also beginning to send paper to this market.

Made Him Look Small.

A newly-married couple were entertaining their friends, and amongst the guests was one whose rudeness made him extremely objectionable to the rest of the company. His conduct was tolerated for some time, until at supper he held up on his fork a piece of meat which had been served to him. In a vein of intended humour, he looked round and remarked: "Is this pig?" This drew forth the remark from a quiet-looking man sitting at the other end of the table: "To which end of the fork do you refer?"

"I had been bothered for nearly two months before I started using Cuticura, and after I had used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss L. Champneys West Notes.

The work of the C. of E. new School building was re-started here on April 4th and the old one taken down, part of the lumber being good went towards the new one, which now is ready for teaching, and in the fall the men hope to have it completed. The size of the building is 40 feet long, 23 feet wide, and 12 feet high, built under Dr. Blackall's plans, the foreman being Mr. Walter Goldsworthy, and he is well known among us as a hustler in getting work done. All praise to him and all members who so nobly responded to help in the work.

The work of building a new Church is also considered to be started this spring, and the ladies are working hard to raise money for the purpose, for which they have a goodly sum in the Royal Bank of Canada, Trinity.

Miss Mary Freeman, daughter of Wm. Freeman, is our teacher here and she is well liked by all.

A. L. Goldsworthy is our Lay Reader again. For 4 years he was absent from the place, residing at Trinity, employed by Messrs. Ryan Bros. as general clerk, for which he is fully experienced, and since coming home 2 years ago has been manager of the business known as Messrs. Thorne & Goldsworthy.

The men are getting their traps ready for the coming season. Hope the Government will take firm steps to maintain good prices for our fish. If not we will have to face hard times the coming winter.

The men here have quite a lot of fish to sell this spring, which will supply their needs for the summer, providing they get a fair price.

Miss Amy Penney arrived from St. John's, after spending the winter there. Glad to see you Amy.

Mr. Nehemiah Goldsworthy recently lost his horse. The animal fell over cliff, which meant $130.00 loss to him.

Our clergyman, Rev. W. K. Pitcher, is leaving for St. John's on a business trip, and will be absent for a few days.

Contracts made with car owners for supplying their season's gasoline. Monogram Lubricating Oil, $1.80 per gallon, at J. McKINLAY'S, Lime Street.

Ghosts That Haunt Kings.

Virtually every European royal family has its "spook" or ghost. Perhaps the most widely known case of royal hauntings is that of the Hohenzollern family, which possesses a ghost commonly known as the "White Lady" of the Hohenzollerns.

This apparition is said to appear before some dire catastrophe to the ex-royal house of Prussia.

In December, 1628, prior to the death of the representative of the house, several of the officials in the palace at Berlin were immeasurably startled by seeing the illomened figure in the white robes suddenly appear before them.

Uttering the words "Veni, Judica vivos et mortuos! Judicium mihi adhuc superest." (Come, judge the quick and the dead! I wait for judgment), it glided away from them, disappearing quite inexplicably in one of the ancient archways.

On another occasion, far more recently, it revealed itself to one of the princesses of the late royal house during her sojourn at the Castle of Neuhau, Bohemia. She was standing before her mirror one evening, trying on a new robe, when, wanting something, she called to her attendant.

In response there was a shuffling movement in the rear of the room, and, turning round to ascertain the cause of it, the princess perceived to her horror the tall figure of a woman clad in white, with the face of someone long dead.

Death Followed Warning.
In slow and measured tones the figure pronounced the words: "Zehn Uhr ist es ihr Liebchen!" (It is 10 o'clock, my love!), which is the mode royales in that part of the world adopt in addressing one another, and then, stepping backward, vanished behind a screen. The princess was taken ill soon afterwards, and died.

The last time the "White Lady" is said to have been seen was in July, 1914, prior to the declaration of war against Russia.

The late Czar is said to have seen his double shortly before the great revolution. According to a rumor prevalent in Moscow at the time, the Czar was passing through the city on his way to the front, when, descending the staircase of his headquarters one morning, he met a figure slowly ascending with its head very much bowed.

On approaching the Czar, the figure suddenly looked up, and Nicholas then perceived to his consternation, the exact counterpart of himself, but with this difference—the countenance revealed to him was that of the dead and not of the living.

The royal family of Italy is reported to possess several ghosts, one of which takes the form of a man's head, which is seen looking through a doorway whenever the death of a prince or princess is going to occur. Another of the ghosts is the shadow of a gigantic plume that is seen waving to and fro on the wall or floor prior to a royal death, or some very grave catastrophe.

It was alleged to have appeared during a banquet at which the late King, Victor Emmanuel, was present, and to have been seen by every one there, saving the monarch himself, who died within a week of the event.

Danish Ghosts.
Denmark has a very unpleasant royal ghost, that of a prince who murdered his brother in circumstances of almost unparalleled savagery even in those times. For that and other offences he was buried in unconsecrated ground near the Wood of Poole, which his spirit even now haunts in a guise so terrible that those who see it sometimes go mad with terror.

It was reputed to have appeared to a number of soldiers prior to the Schleswig-Holstein war of 1866 and again to servants of the royal family before the death of the late King.

Another Danish royal phantom is that of Valdemar IV., that haunts the Forest of Gurra, near Helsingfors. This ghost is alleged not to have any particular significance, excepting if it shows itself to any one connected with the royal household, when its appearance must be taken as a portent of ill to the nation, and to the royal family in particular.

Famous Fat Man.

The heaviest man in France, Pierre Guindalet, of Bourges, is dead. He weighed 558lb., or two pounds short of forty stons.

This is a prodigious weight for any human being. Nevertheless, Pierre Guindalet would have cut a sorry figure by the side of Daniel Lambert, who died in London in the early years of the last century.

Lambert was the heaviest man of whom we have any authentic record. He weighed 739lb.—52½ stons.

Another famous fat man was Mr. Bright, of Maldon, Essex, who weighed 610lb. Some time after his death a wager was made that five men, each twenty-one years of age, could be buttoned in his waistcoat. It was decided at the Black Bull, at Maldon, when seven men were enclosed in it without breaking or straining a button.

TRINITY.

NOTE—Robert Phaire, M.D., C.M., was the Medical Doctor in Trinity from 1793 to 1798.

During the years from 1786 to 1790, two young men—Robert Phaire and Thomas Nicholls—were fellow students in Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland. Robert Phaire of the county of Waterford, Ireland, was a medical student; and Thomas Nicholls of Devon, England, was a student in arts. Those two young men were particularly drawn to each other by their fondness for the "gentleman's game" of cricket. As they got to know each other better, they found that they had other tastes in common, one of which was music. Robert Phaire's father, as a young man had been a student in the old college, and during his student days he had made many friends in Dublin; hence, when Robert left home to begin his studies there, he took with him letters of introduction to one of his father's old friends, Bernard Fallon, now a well known barrister in the city.

This introduction secured for him a cordial welcome to "the Grange," the name by which Bernard Fallon's beautiful home was known. The prospect of many happy hours there, was all the more pleasing when Mr. Fallon introduced him to his niece, Miss O'Brien, whom he had practically adopted, after his wife's death. Miss O'Brien was passionately fond of music, and some of the happiest hours of Robert Phaire's student days were spent at "the Grange," singing the songs of his country, accompanied by the piano by Miss O'Brien. Robert Phaire's friend, Thomas Nicholls, was singularly gifted with a fine baritone voice, and no musical gathering in college was complete without him. One evening, at "the Grange," Miss O'Brien announced a new song, the words and music of which she had found in a music store that afternoon, and she offered to accompany Robert Phaire on the piano, if he would undertake to sing it. Robert, however, quickly found that it was beyond the compass of his voice, whilst at the same time he recalled the fact that it was one of the songs that he had heard his friend Thomas Nicholls sing so well at the last musicale in college. He mentioned this to Miss O'Brien, with the result that she asked him if he would kindly bring his friend with him to "the Grange" the next evening.

Other emotions besides those that had been stirred by the music, were being experienced by Robert Phaire whilst in Miss O'Brien's presence, and although he was not anxious to risk sharing them with another, he could not well refuse to convey to his friend the kind invitation to "the Grange."

The next evening Robert Phaire and Thomas Nicholls were the centre of attraction at a musical entertainment at "the Grange," to which Miss O'Brien had invited several of her friends who were fond of music, and who had been invited particularly to hear Mr. Nicholls render the song that had so taken her fancy. When Miss O'Brien introduced Mr. Nicholls to her friends, and then asked him to sing the song, to which she was to accompany him, Robert Phaire realized that by his own indiscretion, he had introduced a dangerous rival, to the place which he had got himself to believe he had secured in Miss O'Brien's affections. Robert Phaire, however, was too much of a gentleman to betray his feelings at the time and when he and his friend Nicholls, upon their return to college, discussed the pleasant evening, there was nothing in Nicholls' remarks to indicate that he had given more than a passing thought to his fair hostess.

This negative action of Thomas Nicholls, however, did not by any means do justice to his positive feelings at the time; for he had, during that short evening, fallen deeply in love with Miss O'Brien. After this, Robert Phaire was a constant visitor at "the Grange," but as Thomas Nicholls' invitation was not often repeated, he did not see much of Miss O'Brien, though he never dismissed her from his thoughts. The year after he left college, he was not surprised to hear that Robert Phaire had graduated with high honours, as a surgeon, that he had married Miss O'Brien, and that they had left Ireland for one of the colonies, where he had secured a position as surgeon.

Thomas Nicholls always had a hankering for the sea, and after he was graduated at Trinity College, he bought a commission in the Royal Navy, and within the next ten years promotion followed rapidly, and he found himself in charge of H.M.S. Defiance, with orders to report to the Admiral of the North Atlantic Fleet, stationed in St. John's, Newfoundland. He was still a bachelor, and in the rack in his private cabin—side by side with the photographs of his father, mother, and sister, was that of a beautiful girl, whose peculiar type of beauty was distinctly Irish. The Captain always referred to it as the photograph of a college friend, and he was never surprised, (though always pleased) to find those who saw it, fascinated by the rare beauty of the face—the face of the only girl he ever loved; the face of one he still loved; the face of one of whom he had no idea as to where she had gone years ago, or even as to whether she was still alive. Though he had not seen her since his college days, and though he knew she had married the old college friend, he always believed that some day he would meet her again, and that she would then be at liberty to say yes to a question, that several times during his college days he had all but made up his mind to ask her.

The colony to which Dr. Phaire and his bride had gone so many years ago, was Newfoundland, and they had settled down in Trinity, which at that time was the most prosperous outpost in the colony, and where, for several years they were very happy. During the summer of 1798 Dr. Phaire's health began to fail, and an entry in the Burial Register of St. Paul's, Trinity, tells the result:—September 18th 1798; "Interred, Robert Phaire, Surgeon, son of S. Phaire, Esq., of Broomfield, County of Wexford, in the Kingdom of Ireland." After the doctor's death, his widow decided to remain in Trinity, where she had made many friends, and where she was a welcome visitor to the homes of rich and poor alike.

In the summer of 1800 Capt. Nicholls of H.M.S. Defiance was ordered to cruise along the coast of Newfoundland, visiting the principal harbours en route, with a commission as magistrate to hear complaints, and to settle such difficulties as may arise in those places, where living was more or less transitory, and law was not too clearly defined. During the winter the ship was laid up in St. John's, and with the coming of spring Capt. Nicholls left St. John's late in April, direct for Trinity, so that he might be there before the men of the fishing fleet arrived from England. Upon arrival at Trinity the ship was prepared for visitors, and invitations to a reception, to be followed by a dance, were issued to the representatives of the business firms, and the professional men, together with their wives, daughters, or any other lady friends they might feel disposed to bring with them. Captain Nicholls, in cocked hat, gold lace, epaulets and sword, looked every inch a sailor, as he stood under the awning to receive and welcome his guests, as their names were announced by the local J.P., John Bingley Garland, Esq. He was in every sense at ease, and his courteous manner made others to feel the same, as he welcomed them to the ship. That ease, however, was considerably disturbed when a lady, with William Kelson, Esq., as her escort, came on board, and Mr. Garland announced:—"Mrs. Phaire, the widow of our late beloved doctor," and there, before him, stood the Miss O'Brien of his college days—the Miss O'Brien whose photo still had that honoured place in his private cabin. The recognition was mutual, but unknown to any but the Captain and Mrs. Phaire. The other visitors wondered why Mrs. Phaire was asked by the Capt. to dance with him so often, and why they spent the rest of the evening in serious conversation. The Defiance remained in Trinity for several weeks beyond the original date assigned for her leaving, and it did not take the people of Trinity long to decide, that something more than usually interesting was being planned by Captain Nicholls and Mrs. Phaire. Later it became known to everybody that they were old lovers, and that they had agreed to be lovers to the end—and the following entry in the Marriage Register of St. Paul's Church, Trinity tells how it was done:—"May 12th 1801, Married, (by Rev. John Clinch) Capt. Thomas Nicholls (Ship Defiance) of Dartmouth, in the County of Devon, Great Britain, and Elizabeth Phaire, widow of the late Robert Phaire, Surgeon."—N.E.—That Doctor Phaire lived in Trinity from 1793 to 1798 is an historical fact, attested by records in my possession.

The entries as given in this story of doctor Phaire's burial, and of his widow's marriage to Captain Nicholls are given verbatim from the old Register of St. Paul's Parish, Trinity. The rest of the story is fiction; or, I may put it in another form—some of this story is true; but all of it is true, I think, to human nature.—W.J.L.

Interesting extracts from the old Church Registers:—"March 27th, 1785, Baptized, an Esquimaux Indian, belonging to Mr. Stone, age about 30 years, named William Hikkleanna."

To-day, a hundred years ago: "April 16th, 1821, Baptized John and Thomas, children of Thomas and Hannah Pilgrim." Baptized by Rev. Aubrey G. Spencer. John Pilgrim was Mrs. Earle's father.

Mr. Robt. F. Parker, who is Manager in charge of the Royal Bank in Trinity, during Mr. Rankin's absence, was born in Canning in the Annapolis Valley, N.S. After passing through the common and high schools of his native place, he took a course in the Maritime Business College, and after qualification there, he was appointed to its teaching staff for a term. During the war he volunteered for service in the Flying Corps, passed its most trying examinations, and was accepted. After eighteen months training in Ontario, he was given a commission as Lieutenant in the Imperial Flying Corps, and was sent to England for active service. Just after his arrival in England, the Armistice was signed, and he was given his discharge. He then returned to Canning, where he conducted a country business for some time. He came to Newfoundland six months ago, and was appointed Assistant Accountant in the Royal Bank of Canada, St. John's. This is Mr. Parker's first visit to the Colony, and he is favorably impressed with what he has seen of Newfoundland in general, and of Trinity in particular. We, of Trinity, extend to him "the freedom of the city," and a welcome to our home, social, and church life.

Mrs. Miriam Moore—one of the many lovers of Trinity, now in Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., celebrated her 80th birthday on April 5th. She still lives in Trinity once a week, as she reads the Trinity Notes in the Saturday Evening Telegram. She kindly refers to them as "more than delightful," and I assure her that the writer is more than delighted, to know that he is giving so much pleasure to so many Trinitarians at home and abroad. Good Luck!

Mr. Rankin, of the Royal Bank, Trinity, is spending his vacation at St. John's.

Mrs. Dampier, widow of Thomas Dampier, died on Sunday last.

Mr. Somerton left by Wednesday's express, with his daughter, Mrs. Parsons, who is suffering from appendicitis, and will go to the General Hospital, St. John's, for an operation.

Rev. Canon Bolt, D.C.L., was in town this week, on his way to Trinity East, where he held a meeting of parishioners to make the necessary arrangements for the election of a new rector. We are always glad to see the venerable Canon, knowing as we do how much he owes to Trinity, and how deeply he is interested in our welfare. Mrs. Bolt was born in Trinity. Come again. —W.J.L.

First Illness at 146.

For the first time in his life the oldest man in the world is ill. He is Zora Mehmed, a native of Turkish Armenia, and his age is 146! He is suffering from indigestion, for which he blames a set of false teeth. All his life Zora has been a carrier of heavy weights, ranging from two hundred to a thousand pounds. During the Napoleonic wars he made a bet that he could lift five hundred pounds with his teeth, and he ruined them in making the attempt.

For some time he got along without any teeth at all, and then he got a set which he wore out; about twenty years ago he got another set, which he says have always given him indigestion, and have finally caused him to go into hospital.

Zora carries his age very well, and only looks about seventy; he has a son aged ninety, and a daughter who has only seen fifty summers.

A Reply to Mr. Smallwood.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—As a believer in the motto that Providence helps those that help themselves, in company with a number of others I attended the preliminary meeting of Workmen held on Friday evening, for the purpose of devising some means and taking such steps as would alleviate the present deplorable condition of the working class of this city, and first and all the time it was distinctly expressed and understood that Politics was to be kept free of the movement in any shape or form. The workmen of this town felt themselves abandoned by those in authority; neither the Press, Government, Opposition, Professionals or Mercantile class were making any effort to give them a helping hand in the way of finding employment, so there was nothing else left but to "go it" themselves. This they did, and Saturday night's meeting and its outcome is the result. The Government and City Commission have held consultations and not a day too soon.

A writer in your paper last evening, signing himself J. R. Smallwood, starts in very kindly a day after the fair to champion the cause of the poor unintelligent, benighted workers, who are unable to look after their own interests. Thanks, very much; but he forgets that the schoolmaster is abroad, and has been abroad for some time. He also casts some responsibility—almost specific charges in fact—that the meeting was rigged. (Of course being only a workman and therefore unenlightened, I would be excused through ignorance if I insinuate that he was looking for Government patronage.) Perish the thought. Had not his own paper, the "Times" circulation sufficient to spread himself on the subject. He sticks of the Resolution re Fish Regulations, as having no bearing on the unemployment question. Let us see. There are nearly three hundred of my business (coopers) idle from four to five months, as a direct result of this legislation, and the stagnation caused by the strangling of the trade of the island can be traced to this ill-considered measure. And if steps are taken to have this act repealed, as anybody can see except those that don't want to, so as our fish exporters can carry on their business without this sword of Damocles hanging over their heads, and an atmosphere of confidence established, this will tend towards more employment, issuing of supplies, etc., which will not happen if this measure is left on the Statute Book. As far as the Sugar and Control Board are concerned, by what stretch of imagination does he connect this with politics? No unemployed worker to-day uses sugar. In fact he can't purchase this luxury of the wealthy, and therefore the child in the cradle will be attending the movies before the end of this Sweetened Scandal is in sight.

Mr. Smallwood may or may not be an egotist; he also may be as great a personage as he thinks he is; (ain't he an editor?) but this much let me whisper to him, that when the workers require his assistance they will ask him for it, but in my opinion they can get along without him. Mr. Smallwood is a great man, and has tackled and unravelled problems from Torbay to Timbuctoo, and those from Petty Harbor to Patagonia, and now that there seems to be nothing left undone on this ball of mud, he might make an ascension in that aeroplane with the exclamation, Farewell poor mortals. I'm off for the planet Mars for more worlds to conquer.

Yours truly, —J.J.P.

War Memorial.

(Communicated Officially)

At what may be described as the final meeting of the Patriotic Association held on the 21st March, a Resolution was passed requesting the Governor to call a public meeting of the Executive in order to reconsider the whole question of a Memorial to those who fell in the Great War.

His Excellency having received this request conceives that he can only respond to it either through responsible Ministers or through the Municipal Authorities. After inquiry he decided that the latter was the best course. He accordingly requested the help of Mr. Mulhally, who is in the Chair of the Council for the moment, and having obtained his cordial cooperation decided to have a preliminary discussion with the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association before carrying the matter further.

As a result of a very full discussion between the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association there has been a further general meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association at which the Association as a whole has provisionally affirmed its attachment to a previous scheme for a Memorial, and it has now been arranged at a conference between the Governor, the acting Chief Civic Commissioner and the Association of the Executive of the Patriotic Association that action should be taken on the following lines:—

- (1) A statement to be sent to the press explaining the position of the question so as to give every one ample opportunity of considering the question raised before a public meeting is called.
- (2) The acting Chief Civic Commissioner to arrange with the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association for a large public meeting at which it is hoped that the women of the Colony should be fully represented at some date early in May. It has been proposed that the Governor should be asked to preside.
- (3) The suggestions of the Great War Veterans' Association to be laid before the meeting, not as binding in any way, but to be considered within a limited number (say 3) other suggestions if any such are made at the meeting.
- (4) A small committee of 7, on the lines suggested by Father Nangle, to be appointed at the meeting with full power and discretion to carry out as seems best to them and at such time as seems best to them any one of the schemes to be referred to them and to take steps for raising the money required.

The whole idea of the public meeting is that there should be finality, and with that end it is desired to concentrate attention upon certain definite proposals. It is therefore thought worth while to indicate what proposals might properly be considered at the public meeting. In the first place then the following fresh resolution has been handed in to the Governor by the Great War Veterans' Association:—

"RESOLVED:—That the Great War Veterans' Association of Newfoundland affirms that there should be no further delay in the erecting of a memorial to the Men who died. That this Association suggests that the Memorial should take form of:—

- (a) As a National Memorial to be subscribed to by people of the whole of Newfoundland, including St. John's, a large size replica of the Carillon as erected on the Battlements of France and Flanders, this to be placed on the highest point of Signal Hill so as to be visible from both land and sea.
- (b) As a Local Memorial, to be erected by the citizens of St. John's, another Monument comprising a naval and military or another symbolical group to be placed in the City of St. John's.

Secondly, there is the scheme outlined by Mr. R. G. Rendell, C. B. E., in a letter addressed to the press on the 21st of March.

Thirdly, there is a suggestion made by His Excellency the Governor at his meeting with the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association. The essential element in the Governor's scheme is that there should be some room or chamber in which the names of all the sailors and soldiers of Newfoundland should be recorded in some form. This carries out the central idea of the scheme adopted by the Patriotic Association, at the instance of the Great War Veterans' Association deputation, on the 7th January, 1920, and this could be done alternatively,

- (a) If a small building of record with arch or arches attached were built on the King's Beach not far from where the Great War Veterans' Association arch stands on the occasion of the Prince of Wales' visit.
- (b) By means of an arch and guard house near the Colonial Building either replacing the iron gates which at present form the entrance, or standing back to the West of the Colonial Building with its own approach from Military Road.

In either case suitable figures representing the Navy and the Army could be introduced and it thought wise the Caribou could surmount both.

It is not now desired to anticipate discussion which should be reserved for the public meeting but it is fair to say that at the meeting of the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association with the Governor, when this matter was thrashed out in a way that it was never thrashed out before, there was a strong majority of those present who favoured one Memorial in St. John's if there were not sufficient money to carry out 2 Memorials.

Now this is important, because the probability is that there will not be sufficient money to provide 2 Memorials. At any rate it would be unsafe to go on with such an idea, unless there was a strong promise of support from all the outports in Newfoundland. In any case the Committee should be empowered to delay the collection of the money if they thought that wise.

Finally, it is worth while to remind the public that though there has been great talk of delay on the part of Newfoundland this Colony is in no way singular in its difficulty of making up its mind. There is no part of the British Empire at present where anything in the form of a big Memorial has as yet been decided.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Sir M. P. Cashin—To ask the Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries if any correspondence, tolerable for the public meeting but it is fair to say that at the meeting of the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association with the Governor, when this matter was thrashed out in a way that it was never thrashed out before, there was a strong majority of those present who favoured one Memorial in St. John's if there were not sufficient money to carry out 2 Memorials.

Now this is important, because the probability is that there will not be sufficient money to provide 2 Memorials. At any rate it would be unsafe to go on with such an idea, unless there was a strong promise of support from all the outports in Newfoundland. In any case the Committee should be empowered to delay the collection of the money if they thought that wise.

Finally, it is worth while to remind the public that though there has been great talk of delay on the part of Newfoundland this Colony is in no way singular in its difficulty of making up its mind. There is no part of the British Empire at present where anything in the form of a big Memorial has as yet been decided.

Government Asks Assistance of Opposition--Will Remove Regulations But Cannot Accept Amendment Now Before House.

The House met at 3 p.m. yesterday. Notices of Question were given by Sir M. P. Cashin, Messrs. Fox, Bennett and Walsh. Answers to questions on the Order Paper were then tabled by the various departmental heads. Questions on previous order papers were also answered.

Sir John Crosbie then rose to continue his speech on the Address in Reply. He first dealt with an article which appeared in the Daily Star on Saturday, the responsibility for which he laid at the door of the Premier. The Star was the latter's paper and on his head rested the responsibility. "It is about time you were put in your place, sir," said Sir John, "and your daily stunts in your filthy rag hurled at some other than myself. The Star sneers at me because it thinks I am uneducated. That is my misfortune. Owing to illness when young I did not have the opportunity the Prime Minister had and although I may not possess the powers of oratory the same as he possesses, I possess something just as good and that is common sense. But if I had the education and made such a mess of things as he has made with the Government I would run away somewhere where people would not look at me. I am attacking you in the House in your political capacity and charging that you are absolutely incompetent and incapable to run a Government. All the answer I got from you is abuse. All the Prime Ministers we ever had before you always stood up in this place and gave some reason for their actions until we struck you. When we attack your Government you come back in the Star with filthy abuse, and if you cannot use up enough of your billingsgate to make it effective you then raise the religious cry. You have made such a mess of things by your methods that I give you notice that before I lend a hand to the helping out of this country from her present position, you, sir, will have to depart. Now take a note of that and remember in days to come what I have now said."

Sir John then turned his attention to the Fish Regulations and said that the situation was more acute than ever and if they were not repealed there would be serious trouble. Letters were being constantly received by members on both sides asking for the repeal of the Regulations. He then read the following letter received by the Leader of the Opposition from Capt. W. T. Hollett of Burin:

Burin North,
April 13th, 1921.
Hon. Sir M. P. Cashin,
St. John's.
Dear Sir.—The Trade of this coast is waiting to see what the Government intends doing with the act referring to the exportation of codfish. If the Act isn't repealed at once, the business men cannot attempt to meddle with fish in any way. When we think of the losses made possible on this coast by those fool-hardy regulations, when one watches his business driven into bankruptcy by the actions of an individual power, and delighted to put the West Coast out of business, it is time to take notice. Certainly the intelligence of the people will demand that the Act be repealed, so that Coaker and his machinery won't be allowed again to bring about conditions that will paralyze trade and complete the ruination of the country.

The standardization is useless and costly to the shipper if not to the country. If a shipper wishes to ship poor quality he will reap the results, if a firm will ship good quality it will be to his advantage, and rightly so. I personally have had to deal with several inspectors and have had to show them what fish was suitable or otherwise.

And again, why should we continue to pay thirty cents per quintal export tax, in most cases on $4.00 fish, meaning anywhere from five to ten per cent. and with an increasing duty in Port-au-Join making it hard to do business? The shipper should demand that the tax be raised as $1000 paid on a cargo of fish is mostly an addition to the heavy loss to be borne by the shipper on the other side. In other countries the Government usually tries to encourage trade and export, and why should we be taxed on our losses, it is bad enough to be taxed on our profits.

Why should the revenue of this country be used for the benefit of the northern fishermen more so than the West Coast fishermen, as I understand on the purchase of salt in 1920 there was considerable money lost. What about the report of purchase of a quantity of Labrador fish by the Government? If it is true that upwards of $340,000 was paid for Labrador fish by Government guarantee, it is time for the West Coast to demand the reason for this discrimination. If one man is guaranteed why not all? We are supposed to be living in a land of equal rights. We do not wish this protection because we know the revenues are not equal to it, but we do demand equal rights and free trade.

Repeal the Act referring to the exportation of codfish, remove all taxes relating to shipments, dispense with the standardization and give those inspectors that are receiving one hundred dollars per month, a hundred and one of them, a chance to earn a living in some other way; end bring back our fish commissioners that are enjoying their fat salaries living at the rate of five thousand a year, thus costing the country ten thousand dollars each.

The above is a just reason why the regulations, standardization and the whole outfit should be thrown out, and the country be permitted to do business on usual lines.

Yours very truly,
W. H. HOLLETT.

St. John's,
April 18, 1921.
SIR MICHAEL'S REPLY.
Capt. W. H. Hollett,
Burin.
Your message received. Myself and associates are in entire sympathy with you and your fellow sufferers through Government's blundering policy respecting fisheries which has proved so disastrous to country. If representatives of southern districts had been as much alive to your interests as they were to securing fat salaries and other pickings for themselves present deplorable condition of staple industry would never have occurred. Opposition has amendment to Address in Reply now being considered by Assembly which amendment demands repeal of Coaker fishery policy and we are vigorously insisting on this step being at once taken. If we are outvoted we will take other steps to secure this repeal.

and you can count confidently upon Opposition doing everything possible to put fishermen and exporters in position where they can carry on their industry this summer.

M. P. CASHIN.
"We have done our best," said Sir John, "to see that justice is done men like Capt. Hollett but our reward consisted of ridicule in the Government press. The West Coast merchants could no longer supply if the Regulations were kept on the Statute Book. He would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if it were correct that the Regulations were to be lifted."

Mr. Coaker—Yes, they will be lifted. (Loud cheering greeted this remark.)

Sir John Crosbie thanked the Hon. Minister and then stated his intention of dealing with the Railway Policy of the Government again. At this juncture the Premier left the House and Sir John asked for adjournment until he returned. The Minister of Justice said the Premier had been called out to see the Mayor but there was no reason why the adjournment of the Debate should not take place. Sir John then asked if the amendment could be voted on before he went on with his speech. The Minister of Justice thought it was a very good idea. Sir John then asked the House to accept the resolutions. After what Mr. Coaker had said he thought they would do so. If the Regulations were taken off the Statute Book they would all be willing to help put the country into the path of prosperity again.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries then spoke in defence of his policies of last year as regards fish. The Minister's defence was a weak one and as bare as the Speech from the Throne. He admitted that the Fish Regulations had been a mistake but said that if the trade of the country had been unfettered they might have been successful. He also placed a great deal of the blame for their failure on the rates of exchange in our various foreign markets. The depression now existent all over Europe and in fact, all over the world, was also responsible to a great extent for the failure of the Regulations. The Governments of France and Italy had changed four times since the Armistice. In Spain, Italy, Portugal and the United States there were millions of unemployed. What damage—if any—had been done when the regulations had been recently taken off. The Regulations were useless for the purposes for which they had been made, as there were no penalties for those who broke them beyond the loss of exportation license.

It was the intention of the Government to introduce a Bill to repeal entirely and forever, the Fish Regulations. The Regulations had been the Trade regulations, not his, Mr. Coaker then went on to try and explain away the salt question and the Government purchase of fish. For several minutes he dwelt on these matters but his explanations were entirely devoid of any weighty statements and in fact were nothing more or less than quibbles. He concluded by saying that the country was up against conditions that no man on the Government side of the House ever had to face and he said that everyone should work for the country's best interests.

Mr. Bennett then rose to speak to the resolutions. The whole House was pleased to hear the remarks of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, but he could not congratulate him on his defence of his administration. Everybody expected to hear something from the silent members of the other side. But Mr. Coaker's speech was in keeping with the Speech from the Throne. It was also devoid of anything that will give satisfaction to those who had suffered. The Minister had been warned that his policy was a suicidal one, but he would not listen to the warnings. Exchange was not the sole reason that our fish was a drug in the market. Our misfortunes began when we had to sell our fish through Hawes. They started wrong in the first place. Discrimination was rampant throughout the whole business of the Fish Regulations. Mr. Coaker had put forward the excuse of exchange being against us in the European markets. But what explanation had the Government got for the way the regulations had been applied in the American markets. Exchange was not against us there. He cited instances of misuse of the Regulations. He would say with Lord Morris, "tear up the laws rather than the people should starve." Mr. Coaker, himself, sold 7,500 qts. of fish at $8.50 per qt. to Sellers. This was at a profit of 50 cents per quintal. Did not the fish from the West have as much right to be sold as that from the North. Discrimination was rife everywhere. The letter of Capt. Hollett's which Sir J. C. Crosbie had read had voiced the people's sentiments. The country had been prosperous until the Regulations had been enforced. Now, every child on the street was calling out against these nefarious restrictions which had been the cause of beggary in the country. When the Government bought fish why did it not buy herring, salmon, lobsters, drums and other things? He did not believe that there was no hope for Newfoundland in the future, but there would be little chance of redemption with a government led by men like those at the head of the present administration. The present Government had been tried and found incompetent and incapable.

Capt. Lewis was the next to speak to the Resolutions. He too did not think much of Mr. Coaker's defence of the Regulations. In an attempt to get a higher price for fish, the Hon. Minister had broken the law of supply and demand, Mr. Coaker says people get a high price for fish on account of the Regulations. It is true they kept the price of fish up for a time in the foreign markets, but that price was for the merchants, not for the fishermen. The price of fish could have been considerably lower in the foreign markets and yet our fishermen could have got the same price that they obtained last fall. At one time merchants in this country were satisfied with 50 cents profit on fish, but last year Mr. Coaker wanted $3.00 profit, and it was to secure this that the Regulations were enforced. He then went on to deal with the effects of the Regulations on our various markets. One of those who had been completely sold out and ourselves completely sold out to Canada. The Government had squandered the people's money in all directions and when the country had been cleaned out Mr. Coaker came and cried for mercy. Capt. Lewis hoped within a very short time to see a new administration pilot the country to safety.

Mr. W. J. Higgins also spoke to the Amendment. He had a question to put to Mr. Coaker which he hoped that gentleman would answer, for on that answer depended the length of the debate. Mr. Coaker had acknowledged he was at fault and said he would bring in a Bill to lift the Regulations. The Opposition have introduced an amendment to the address in reply, which exactly covers Mr. Coaker's intentions. We say the regulations have been disastrous to the trade of the country. Mr. Coaker says the same. He admits everything this afternoon that we have been charging against the regulations and throws up his hands and says, "I surrender." He appeals to us as an Opposition to help the Government get the country out of the hole she is in. He appeals to us to throw aside party leanings and be big, be magnanimous and help the Government. If Mr. Coaker is sincere he should be the first to start. He should set the good example. Now then here is our amendment, which is true in fact. Mr. Coaker admitted every line of it. If they were going to be big and broad now was their chance. Was Mr. Coaker going to vote for the Amendment? He appealed to the Hon. Minister. Was he or was he not? He only wanted one word in reply, either yes or no. A lot depended on the answer. If it were yes he (Mr. Higgins) would sit down and the debate as far as the Opposition was concerned, would be closed. But, if the answer were no, then that hour would start the full dress debate, which would eventually succeed in lifting not only the Fish Regulations, but also the Food Control Board, and the War Measures Act.

Hon. Mr. Coaker would not give Mr. Higgins a satisfactory answer and tried to beg the question. He absolutely declined to say he would vote for the Amendment.

Mr. Higgins then said it was evident Mr. Coaker would not vote for the Amendment. What a lovely position the Hon. Minister was in? He cried for mercy and yet could not sink his differences. Mr. Higgins went on speaking until nearly 6.30 p.m., when the Minister of Justice rose and tried to explain the Government's position. He was not going to vote for the Amendment. Not because of party feeling, of course, but merely as a matter of principle.

Mr. Walsh moved the adjournment of the debate until 3 p.m. to-day.

The Late John Brunlees.
(H. F. SHORTISS.)
The many friends in St. John's will hear with feelings of regret the death of Mr. John Brunlees, for about sixty years a highly respected resident of Harbor Grace.

Mr. Brunlees was a native of Kelso, Scotland, and came to this country in the early sixties of the past century, entering the employ of the well-known firm of Rutherford Brothers, who, for many years, conducted a large and prosperous mercantile business in Harbor Grace. In fact, they issued their own coin, and the historic "Ram" half-penny piece, with the name of Rutherford, Bro. thereon, passed current throughout the country, and, even to-day, a few of them are to be seen.

After severing his connection with Rutherford Bros., Mr. Brunlees entered the enterprising firm of Panton & Munn (afterwards John Munn & Co.), where he held the dual positions of clerk in the large provision store and time-keeper in the laborers' office. At that time there were some hundreds of laborers employed on the premises during the busy season. Mr. Brunlees must have been in this employ for at least a quarter of a century.

He was a man who was universally esteemed for his many fine traits of character, and which he exhibited not only to those who knew him best, but to those having merely a casual acquaintance. His death is regretted by all classes of the community. For many years Mr. Brunlees was one of the elders of the Kirk, the duties of which he performed to the satisfaction of all.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—It may be of interest to your readers, particularly all women readers, to know that the lists of signatures to the Woman's Suffrage Petition are coming in daily, with encouraging letters attached.

Bay de Verde still heads the list with the greatest number of signatures. Fortune comes next, and now this from a very important place in Conception Bay, where practically every woman has signed.—

"I am sending you by registered post the Suffrage Petition. The names attached are all reliable, and we could have got many more. Everyone is in favour that we spoke to. We do hope it will pass and will write or see our members on the subject. I am indeed glad that at last this great boon is likely to be granted to women, and am indeed grateful to those who are working for it. Practically all laws affect women as well as men. Therefore we should have a voice in the making of them. Hoping for speedy success."

Then this from a big settlement in the North:—

"I am sending along the Petition for signature. We had a meeting of the women and had a great crowd, and we had several papers read on the subject and quite a discussion after. Then the signing and election of a committee to look after any further business, of which I was appointed Chairman. We sent on a report of our meeting to the Public News Department, but have seen nothing of it. With best wishes for the success of the cause."

From the West Coast we have:—

"Please find enclosed a petition signed by all but two old ladies, who did not care to vote. All the men are enthusiastic over the idea and you may call them unanimous for the vote."

And again from the West Coast:—

"Your letter, with Petition enclosed, for the women to sign to give them a right to vote at the Parliamentary and Municipal Elections received. I called a meeting immediately on receipt of this and as you will notice from the petition enclosed, we had a very successful result. I might say the women of this place are very keen and agree with the women of St. John's that they are entitled to a vote. I will be glad to further any other thing that you suggest in connection with this."

We have a great many more letters that I should like to publish, but feel that I have already taken up too much space.

I remain, with many thanks,
Yours faithfully,
AGNES M. AYRE,
Secretary.

The Ferry Boat Service at St. Joseph's.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir.—The easterly wind of Monday the 11th has cleared our harbor of ice so that traffic is once again open after a hard winter. We are anxiously looking out for the ferry boat to operate. Last June the boat was handed over to Mr. P. Tremblet, North Side, with a small salary of $1500. The boat was to operate by contract beginning on July 1st but for some reason Mr. Tremblet did not appear until July 13th. His services until the end of October were anything but satisfactory, at which time he put the boat ashore, as we understood, to change her into an icebreaker. Owing to some reason unknown she has not been seen on the harbor since, although traffic was open until late in December. Now that the harbor is open again it is likely that Mr. Tremblet will remodel the boat to make her suitable for passenger service. By the time this is done it is not unlikely that the harbor will be again frozen over. We should like to know if Mr. P. Tremblet is paid his salary—and if so for what? It is time that the service should begin, and it could have commenced on Monday.

Yours,
SUBSCRIBER.
St. Joseph's, Salmonier, April 13th, 1921.

When M. P.'s Fall Out.

On more than one occasion fierce discussions in the House of Commons have led to blows being struck. Once, indeed, there was something very like a free fight on the floor of the historic chamber. This was in July, 1892, when Mr. Hayes Fisher—afterwards Lord Downham—struck another member in a fit of temper.

In 1912, again, Mr. Ronald McNeill hurled a book at Mr. Winston Churchill's face; and the latter, white with passion, challenged his assailant to "come outside."

In the old duelling days, when knights of the shires—as members of Parliament were then termed—came wearing their swords, such challenges were not infrequently led to serious trouble, and once swords were drawn in the House itself.

To prevent a recurrence of this it was ordered that members should divest themselves of their weapons on taking their seats, and hang them up along the walls behind a barrier.

them after the splendid and self-sacrificing service they gave us, can we wonder, if Pilate-like they wash their hands clean of the whole business.

We killed the goose that laid the golden egg! Can we resuscitate it? I fear not, but, I hope, that some specific may yet be found to thrill that inert body again with life.

Yes, it is dead, I attended its obsequies.

I was one of the few mourners who stood last and foremost, and awaited the fatal stroke of twelve, when the throbbing electric fluid would be bled from it, and render its limbs inert and lifeless.

The final handshakes, if any can put it that way, the expressions of regret and goodwill, which flashed through its copper core, crammed in a few seconds of time, by the operators at its terminals, in their eagerness to wish each other a last good-bye are still with me.

Yes, it was death, all present felt that, laugh if you like you hardened old sinners, who murdered it, but I repeat, to us, who knew and appreciated its activities, its silencing was DEATH.

Our grim old chief David Stott stood behind me, while I transmitted with trembling hand the order, which was to do the baneful deed. What were his thoughts? Not happy ones. One could see that. He feathered the system, he reared it, he nurtured it, he watched it grow, and in the twinkling of an eye it laid dead at his feet, and we all turned sorrowfully away.

The present administration, we understand, has been doing its utmost to negotiate with our old connections some kind of an arrangement, whereby the great breach made by this predecessors might be mended. But can it be done? The Commercial claim that Newfoundland Government is so impossible, that they cannot deal with them. Some reputation, what! In the face of the treatment accorded

Riding to a Fall.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—If there is anything particularly disgusting about the hypocritical bunch that constitute the present administration it is, when the results of their insane blundering are laid bare and that sickly smile they assume, who so forcibly disclose their utter helplessness to offer the slightest justification for the criminal squandering of public money or the shameless manner in which they violated the sacred obligation imposed upon them as representatives of the people.

When in the fall of 1919, with that conspicuous machiavellianism characteristic of his type, the leader of the Government set out with his carefully conceived plans to captivate by his blarney the electorate of this country, the death knell of his chief industry was sounded. Business and professional men, men whom years of experience in the business and public life of the country had equipped with a knowledge that enabled them to foresee and appreciate the dire results that was bound to succeed a period of his administration, at once afflicted themselves with the various movements inaugurated to defeat his object.

But that gentleman actuated by the sordid purview of achieving his ambition, and the acquisition of its honor and prerogative set out, determined, despite all opposition to launch his insidious campaign of duplicity on the unsophisticated people of this country. He visited the most illiterate sections and exerting the powers of his rhetorical faculty, with which to enforce his tactics, held up to the eyes of the unsuspecting multitudes the mirage of a modern Eden.

He succeeded, and no sooner did he assume the duties of office than this extravagant squandering began. Men who realized the seriousness of this blundering rose up in protestation, but the Squires-Cooker homeopathic, hypothetical, if not hypocritical, theories were applied as a panacea for the supposedly existing evils and to-day, Newfoundland crushed and crippled, is hovering tremulously over the indigent stricken abyss of mendacity.

But there is a limit to human endurance, and the boiling indignation of an outraged people which culminated in the L.S.P.U. Hall on Saturday night, is an indication of the indomitable sentiment of the country that is threatening to raise the political edifice of Squires-Cooker, and Co., which stands as an insult to its intelligence and a perpetual menace to its progress. Let us hope that the day is not far distant when we will again see the destinies of our country placed in the hands of capable men, who will hurl that idiotic agglomeration in the status of political oblivion and chant their Requiem.

Sincerely yours,
THOS. BRADBURY.

Young Girls Need Care

FROM the age of twelve a girl needs all the care the thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter make life easier for her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions. It can be taken in safety by any woman, young or old.

Cobourg, Ont.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me for my daughter. She had trouble every month which left her in a weak and nervous condition, with weak back and pain in her right side. She had these troubles for three years and frequently was unable to attend school. She has become regular and feels much better since she began taking the Vegetable Compound, and attends school regularly. She is gaining steadily and I have no hesitancy in recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine."
—Mrs. JOHN TOMS, Ball St., Cobourg.

Toronto, Ont.—"I have suffered since I was a school girl with pain in my left side and with cramps, growing worse each year until I was all run down. Some of the doctors wanted to perform an operation, but my father objected. Finally I learned through my mother of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and how thankful I am that I tried it. I am relieved from pain and cramps, and feel as if it has saved my life. You may use my letter to help other women, as I am only too glad to recommend the medicine."

FIRST COAL SHIPMENT OF SEASON.

The first cargo of coal to go from the Scotia Company's piers this season will be taken by the Newfoundland and term schooner Asquith, which came down the stream to-day and pulled into the big wharves. The Asquith will be remembered, sailing last January from St. John's for this port, but owing to weather conditions lost part of her cargo and was obliged to run for Barbados, from which port she arrived here last week with 150 tons of molasses, for the Cape Breton Wholesale Co. She will take 450 tons of coal from here for St. John's.

LONGSHOREMEN ADJUST TROUBLE WITH FIRM.

An amicable agreement has been reached between the Farquhar Trading Co. and the members of the local Longshoremen's Union, over the rates to be paid during the coming summer. The Company asked that the members accept the same rates as are paid by the Reid Newfoundland, pointing out that trade conditions would not warrant them in retaining the old rates which were slightly higher than those paid the Reid Co. The members of the Union saw the justice of the Company's position, and unanimously agreed to accept their terms. With this difficulty cleared away the Sable will continue to make her regular summer sailings from this port.

A Boston Transcript Printer.

Benjamin Keeping Was a Native of Newfoundland.

Benjamin W. Keeping, for nearly twelve years in the composition department of the Boston Transcript, died suddenly of heart disease last night at his home in Revere. He had not been in good health for some time. Mr. Keeping was sixty-two years of age, and a native of Newfoundland. He earned the printer's trade in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, and came to Boston when twenty years old, first associating himself with the printing establishment conducted by George H. Simonds, who at that time printed the Youth's Companion. Later he was in charge of the composition room of the Christian Endeavor World, where he remained for nearly twenty years.

Mr. Keeping had been prominent in the political life of his home city, and when it was a town he was chairman of the board of selection for several years, and a member of the finance commission. He is survived by his wife, who was Bertha Walking; three daughters, Mrs. William Oraf and Miss Ruth and Miss Doris Keeping; and a son, Paul Keeping. He was a member of the Boston Telegraphical Union and the Transcript Mutual Aid Society. He also had been active in the Odd Fellows, and was past noble grand of Neptune Lodge of Revere—Boston Transcript, April 2.

(Contributed to the Telegrapher.)

In the House of Assembly a few days ago the Prime Minister replying to a question put by one of the members of the Opposition, made the statement that the Commercial Cable Co. had on March 11th paid a sum of $184,000 into the Treasury.

This was the original claim of $112,000 made against that company some five or six years ago with interest, and taxes accruing since the institution of legal proceedings.

I could not help wondering how much would have been saved to the country, if this short sighted and stupid policy had never been pursued. How is it that the administration of our public affairs is one long series of colossal blunders such as this? It is my contention at the time the Canoe to Port aux Basques cable was grounded at the latter place, on July 31st, 1918, that we would be money in pocket if the Government would give the Commercial Cable Company a receipt in full for the amount of the claim, and declare the bill settled. Time has proved conclusively that my contention was correct.

In the three years since the cutting of communication with Canoe we have lost roughly $360,000 worth of business. To offset this we have $184,000. Some $78,000 of this we would have

Anglo-American Telegraph Company.

Effective commencing April 9, deferred Cable Service is reinstated in Great Britain and Ireland, and the principal countries in Europe, Africa, Asia, Dutch East Indies, Australasia (rate for Australasia is that via Eastern and Indo only), Argentine, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay, Peru (except Wireless Stations), Uruguay and Brazil (except Acre District and Amazon River stations). The deferred service will be, on the usual basis of plain language and deferment in favor of full rate messages and the carrying of a prefix LCO, LCD or LCF as the case may be, in all cases including that of Great Britain and Ireland exactly one half the regular or full rate to country of destination.

This valuable service at one half normal rates has not been available since September 1918, when it was necessarily suspended because of the congested condition of the cable system throughout the world. The Anglo-American Telegraph Company and the Western Union have taken advantage of the first opportunity since the war to reinstate this service.
