MABEL HOWARD, OF THE LYRIC.

CHAPTER XXII.
BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Mrs. Berry smiled cheerfully at her, and nodded encouragingly.

"Don't be nervous, my dear," she said, "and all will be right. On the other hand," she added, conscientiously, "don't be too confident. The public is a fickle monster, and hard to please, and there is no predicting with any certainty. The 'Imprisoned Princess' may be a failure, and then even your sweet voice will not save us."

Altogether it was an anxious time for Iris, and it would have been more so but for Paul's unceasing and never-flagging belief in her success.

One afternoon a big box came, and on opening it they found it contained the dresses for the princess. They were very beautiful and costly—Mr. Stapleton was "mounting" the piece regardless of expense—and Iris put them on for Paul's criticism.

The boy stood and stared at her as she swept across the room in the handsomest of the costumes—one of white satin, trimmed with pearls—and his face flushed as he exclaimed:

"Oh, Mabel!"

That really seemed to be all he could say; but his admiration and delight were increased when Iris exchanged the bridal dress for the peasant's short skirt and laced bodice.

"I don't know what I like best, Mabel!" he said. "I dare say the people will like the grand dress of white satin; but you look—I can't tell you how you look in that pretty country dress!"

There was another of plain black, which she was to wear in the prison, and even for that Paul had a word or two of admiration.

"It doesn't matter what you wear, Mabel!" he said, at last; "everything seems beautiful, directly you put it on!"

"I shall ultimately be clothed in vanity as a garment, if you do not put a curb on your compliments, Paul," she said.

The admiration of the company, when she wore the costumes at a dress rehearsal, if not quite so forcibly expressed as Paul's, was none the less decided.

"Even if she could not sing or act a little bit, she wouldn't be altogether a failure," said Mr. Stapleton in confidence to his stage manager; "but, seeing that she can do both and extraordinarily well, Miss Mabel Howard is going to realize a very big hit, Thompson," and Mr. Thompson cordially agreed with him.

At last the eventful night arrived. There had been no rehearsal that day, so that Iris might rest before the trying hour; and she and Paul sat down to a cup of tea—or, rather, Iris sat, while Paul limped up and down in a state of excitement. She was excited, too; but as yet there was no trace of nervousness—that might come; and she begged the boy to take some rest and quiet himself.

"I can't keep quiet!" he said, with an apologetic laugh. "I shouldn't feel half so excited if I were going to play, or if I had composed the opera—"

"As you will some day, Paul!"

"No, but it's because it lay on, Mabel, dear, who are going through it all! And yet I know it is all right!"

They went down to the theatre, and at the stage door found Mr. Stapleton waiting for them.

Notwithstanding his experience and self-confidence, the manager looked rather pale and anxious, but he smiled and nodded.

"Here you are, then! Come early! That's right! There isn't a seat left in the house, of course; we could have filled Covent Garden, it's my opinion. Perhaps we will some day; eh, Miss Howard?" and he laughed. "Don't feel nervous, eh? No, you don't look it! As for Paul, why, Paul's just off his balance!" and he laid his great hand on the boy's shoulder. "Go down, now, both of you! Paul, keep with her as long as you can!"

"I can see she relies on you far more than any one."

"No one loves her half so well!" murmured Paul, inaudibly.

There was a considerable amount of bustle and stir behind the curtain, and a continual hurrying and scurrying in the dressing-room lobbies, and Iris met with many curious looks, but also many kindly greetings, as she made her way to her own room.

She found Mrs. Berry there, already dressed for her part.

"I thought you wouldn't mind if I came to help you, my dear," she said. "You have got a good dresser, I know, but at times like these one likes to have an old hand to speak a word to. I don't forget my first appearance, Miss Howard!" and she smiled.

"This may be my first and last!" said Iris. "I feel, now, that I shall not be able to open my mouth, or to move when the time comes!"

"And when the time comes you will feel very differently," said Mrs. Berry, with quiet confidence.

Paul remained until Mrs. Berry declared it was time for Iris to dress, and turned him out, and as he went he took Iris' hand and pressed it.

"Don't think of anybody but me, Mabel!" he said. "Just speak and sing to me. I shall not take my eyes off your face all the time. Remember every minute I shall be there. Act and sing as you act and sing to me at home, and—well, I will answer for the rest," and he raised her hand to his cheek and pressed it against it lovingly.

Iris' eyes filled with tears.

"If only for his sake, I hope all will go well," she said.

"The boy has the heart of a child—it is so tender," said Mrs. Berry. "And so true!" murmured Iris.

Presently, while she was dressing, she heard a dull, heavy sound, and stopped to listen.

"What is that?" she asked.

"That is the people coming into the house, my dear," murmured Mrs. Berry.

"My judges have arrived," said Iris, gravely.

The bustle and noise increased. Mr. Stapleton's and the stage manager's voices were heard above the din; then the stamping of feet from the front of the house.

"They are getting impatient; it is time the curtain was up," said Mrs. Berry. "Let me have one long look at you, my dear," and her keen eyes examined Iris from head to foot.

Then she nodded and smiled.

"I don't want to make you vain, my dear," she said; "but you have one thing, at least, that the public will have the sense to appreciate—good looks! My dear, you look beautiful, very beautiful!"

"You are worse than Paul," said Iris, smiling. "You forget that you are praising your own handiwork!" and she pointed to the powder and paints.

Mrs. Berry shook her head and laughed.

"No, my dear, all the powder and paint could not have done for you what nature has. I wonder how long it will be before your photographs are in the shop windows!"

"Many years and never," said Iris, quietly.

At this moment the sound of the orchestra turning up reached them, and a moment or two afterward the band broke into the overture.

A faint flush rose to Iris' cheek, and Mrs. Berry, who watched her closely, laid a hand upon her arm.

"You are not—frightened, Miss Howard?"

Iris shook her head.

"No, not frightened, but I feel as if—as if I had disappeared, gone into space, and some one else stood here in my place," and she looked down at her dress, and even at her hands and feet, with a strange wonder.

Mrs. Berry poured out a glass of wine, but Iris declined it, and again Mrs. Berry nodded approvingly.

Presently they heard the callboy calling the names of the characters who appeared in the first scene, then there sounded a sharp little bell, and immediately afterward there was the roar and clap of applause.

"The curtain is up," said Mrs. Berry, "and they are clapping the scene—it is pretty—and that's a good sign. They are evidently in a good humor."

Mr. Stapleton knocked at the door, and on Mrs. Berry opening it, thrust in his head.

"All ready, and all right, eh?" he asked, coolly; "for once the curtain was up, nervousness, if ever it took possession of Manager Stapleton, disappeared."

"All ready and all right," said Mrs. Berry.

"Then that's all right," he said. "Now, Miss Howard, don't you be in the least afraid, I tell you—and I know something of this business. I believe—that you are going to hit them hard—hard, I say!"

Iris murmured a word of thanks for his encouragement, and he disappeared.

A moment afterward the callboy called her name, and Mrs. Berry's and they went up to the wings together.

"One last word, my dear," said the kind-hearted woman. "Don't be hurried. Walk slowly, speak slowly, and sing slowly to begin with, and—don't look at anything—you won't be able to see much through the haze from the footlights, but don't try. Now, then."

Her cue had come. The moment she had been looking forward to and sometimes dreading; the moment that had haunted her, by anticipation, sleeping and waking, had arrived.

She looked up, saw through the haze the sea of faces, eager, expectant, stern, as it seemed to her—then advanced slowly into their sight.

SHE TOOK HER MOTHER'S ADVICE

Now is in the Best of Health because she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Kessock, Sask.—"My mother has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and upon learning of my troubles advised me to try it, as I seemed all run down after the flu and had leucorrhoea very bad. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I feel like a new woman. When backaches and headaches drive out all ambition, when that bearing-down sensation attacks you, when you get nervous and blue, the one great help for such ailments is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

EXPERIENCE.

This much I know, a friend or two Can compensate for twenty foes, And summer with her skies of blue Makes up for every storm that blows. What, though the failures hurt and sting And fill man's days with dark distress, The better troubles all take wing Before the joy of one success.

This much I've learned, always to smile Is not within the power of man. There shall be days when 'Zou reville And failures haunt his fondest plan; And yet if those who knew him best Rejoice in him and gladly share His days of trial and of loss, He need not falter or despair.

Friends seldom travel with the throng, 'Tis not the many who are true. The thoughtless see the little wrong And not the good man tries to do; And whether he shall rise at evening's close— That one staunch friend makes up for all The hate and anger of his foes.

Indoor Life

Spending more time indoors makes women far more subject to constipation than men.

The liver becomes sluggish and torpid, the bowels constipated and the system poisoned by impurities.

If you would get away from the myriads of ills which result from constipation, it is only necessary to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The benefits from their use are as lasting as they are prompt and certain.

Mrs. John Barry, 18 St. Amable Street, Quebec, Que., writes:

"This is to certify that I was troubled for years with constipation and used all kinds of medicines without relief. At last my husband suggested that I try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I did so, and must say that they have given me more relief than all the medicines I have taken during the last fifteen years. I may also add that I have used Dr. Chase's Chamberlain for pills with excellent results."

Different Cuts of Meat.

To learn and become familiarized with the different cuts of meat is something which should interest every economical housewife.

An excellent steak comes from the flank. The flank steak weighs from two to two and half pounds. Butchers do not cut it. The fibers are long, but the connective tissue, which holds the fibers together is largely upon the outside. The butcher draws a sharp knife across the steak in both directions on both sides, and in this way cuts through the tissue, making the steak more tender and palatable. The flank is a boneless steak.

The top of the round is used for Hamburg steak.

In the hind quarter of the beef, besides the rump, round, loin and flank, there is the hind shank, which is the choice soup meat and is excellent for broths.

In the fore quarter, besides the ribs, there are the chuck, plate and fore shank. The chuck consists of the fifth-rib roast, the chuck steaks, the clod and the neck. The plate consists of the brisket, navel and rib ends. The fore shank or shin is excellent for soup stocks and stews. A little study will enable every housewife to remember these different cuts.

The neck is used for stews, pot roasts, Hamburg steak, broths and beef loaf. Beef loaf from the neck and chuck is a cent or two cheaper than that from the plate and flank and is just as good.

The chuck contains the fifth-rib roast, which resembles the prime-rib roast in regard to proportions of meat and bone, but is an inferior piece for roasts and steaks. It should be used for stews and beef loaf.

The shoulder clod is usually cut without bone and is excellent for pot roasts or beef a la mode.

The brisket or breast is used for boiling and cornings—the finest piece of corned beef comes from the brisket. The cross ribs are used for cornings and are excellent for pot roasts. The plate is used for cornings also, and makes a good piece of boiling beef. The navel is also corned.

Besides using the flank for steaks it makes an excellent piece of braising meat; it fits for "mock ducks" and similar culinary dishes. From the rump comes the choice large roast. It may also be used for braising and makes a most nourishing stew or pot roast.

The top round makes a fine pot roast, and is used for round steak.

Hamburg steak and for braising. The second-cut round is tougher and is used for dried beef.

The wide armhole of a coat-dress may be balanced by a wide hanging cuff of dyed lamb.

Long panels feature deep fur bands which swing to and fro over a crepe underdress.

Three Cuts Are Unlucky.

You must never take three pieces of any cut food on your plate at one time, nor must you ever offer three pieces of cut food to anyone at one time. There will be bloodshed if you do, according to old Japanese superstition. Why? Well, three pieces is Mi Kira, three cuts, and it may also be, in the spoken language, Mi wo kiru, in another infection, meaning "to cut the body." Somewhat far-fetched, but it holds strong sway in the minds of every Japanese. Furthermore you must never cut only three baby dresses out of one piece of material. One "tail" the usual length of baby goods will make exactly three baby dresses, and leave a small remnant. This remnant, if you wish the baby you are sewing for not to suffer from grievous body wounds, you will cut into some part of another dress the peckband, the belt, or anything you please, so long as the entire cutting from the piece is more than Mi Kira, "three cuts." The curious belief, in sympathetic magic is strong in every walk of Japanese life, and in every set of daily existence.

READY FOR RECEPTION

Cardinal Gasparri, papal legate in London, is quoted as saying that Benedict is ready for a meeting with Italy, according to the Central News.

CURZON WARMS UP

One of the most important ever addressed by the Government of one nation to another, was delivered by Lord Curzon when the British Foreign Secretary declared if France would not and individual people in the long run, would fail to prosper. Curzon's warning was plainer terms than those delivered by Lloyd George when France was in the occupation of Ruhr. It will never be admitted that Curzon, if any one else, steels a march on a country, includes an arrangement of count. The foreign minister reminded France that she was in her own right the confidence of the world. He mentioned France that he succeeded by a reviving forward Germany, or isolated action to trust of the nations at war.

KILLED AND

In the recent disturbances in Bay, India, the total number of deaths in Reuter's correspondence, were thirty-six, including two Europeans, and 500 natives. The situation is becoming more and more serious.

READY FOR RECONCILIATION. LONDON, Nov. 24. Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of State, is quoted as saying that Pope Benedict is ready for a reconciliation with Italy, according to a despatch to the Central News.

CURZON WARNS FRANCE. LONDON, Nov. 24. One of the most outspoken warnings ever addressed by the foreign minister of one nation to another friendly nation, was delivered publicly to-day at a luncheon by Lord Curzon, to France, when the British foreign minister declared if France pursued an isolated and individual policy, she would not, in the long run, injure Germany, and would fail to protect herself.

GRAVE AND CRITICAL. LONDON, Nov. 25. As Premier Craig of Ulster went to conference with Mr. Lloyd George this morning, it was admitted officially that Irish peace negotiations have reached "a grave and critical stage."

ACROSS THE WORLD. LONDON, Nov. 25. An announcement was made last night by Marconi Company of the successful sending, for the first time, of a series of test messages by wireless from Carnarvon, Wales, direct to Australia.

DECLINED TO COMMENT. NEW YORK, Nov. 25. Premier Briand declined last night comment on the speech of Marquis Curzon in London yesterday, saying he could not do so until he had seen the full text of the speech.

NAVAL HOLIDAY APPROVED. LONDON, Nov. 24. Liberal federation meeting in Newcastle, to-day, adopted a resolution endorsing Hughes proposition for a two year naval holiday, urging British delegates at Washington to support all practical projects for progressive disarmaments, and demanding the publication of treaties. An attempt to include an amendment demanding denunciation of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was defeated, on the ground that considering Japanese hearty cooperation at Washington, it was inadvisable to give Japan such curt and brusque notice.

As Premier Craig of Ulster went to conference with Mr. Lloyd George this morning, it was admitted officially that Irish peace negotiations have reached "a grave and critical stage." This conference, it was said last night, might be the last attempt of the British Premier to induce Ulstermen to discuss alternative plans, which would protect Ulster's interest, and at the same time meet the demands of Sinn Feiners for an all-Ireland parliament.

HOW THEY GOT CLEAR. PARIS, Nov. 25. Thirteen United States citizens obtained their release from the Spanish Foreign Legion by swearing they were Canadians, and arrived in Paris yesterday, telling stories of hardships and cruel treatment. All saw service in France, and are unanimous in declaring that fighting Germans was a comparatively mild pastime compared with campaigning against the Moors.

FIXING THE STYLES. MONTREAL, Nov. 24. Girls attending the Montreal High School cannot wear excess jewelry, according to a resolution passed by their hair la. Queen of Sheba, or programme. Discussion of the financial situation began on November 8, and the closure was voted to-night preventing explanation of dozens of motions before the House. The motion, which expressed the Government's views, and obtained the vote of confidence, requested the Government to exercise vigilance in the strict execution of Germany's engagement, to take every necessary measure abroad for the preservation of the guarantee of France's claims, and not to demand new taxation before maximum results were obtained from existing taxes.

VOGUE'S CREW AT ST. JOHN. ST. JOHN, N.E., Nov. 25. The crew of the late storm's victim, the schooner Vogue, of St. John's, Nfld., six in number, reached St. John from Boston, to-day, on the way home. They were landed at Boston by the Norwegian steamer Elida Clausen, which picked them up 150 miles from St. John's on the outward voyage from Quirpon, Nfld., to Gibraltar, with fish. The schooner was struck by a storm on Nov. 12, and John Delamont was swept overboard and drowned. In the party rescued are Capt. G. Yarn, mate Joseph Embley, Thomas Yarn, Ephraim B. Yarn, B. Power, and Eldon Bart, all hailing from Conception Bay.

BOMB OUTRAGE IN BELFAST. BELFAST, Nov. 25. Two persons were killed, and eight wounded, when a bomb exploded this evening in a tram car carrying shipyard workers along Royal Avenue. Three other cars were also bombed, three persons being killed and several seriously injured. Since the disorders began, twenty-five persons have been killed. A man supposed to be responsible for the Royal Avenue bombing was arrested by troops and crowds made a desperate effort to lynch him.

A PRODUCT OF THE AGE. WINNIPEG, Nov. 25. A youthful bandit entered a drug store here this morning, and without even saying "hands up," shot the proprietor and assistant, cleaned out the till and escaped. His victims are in hospital.

Western Boat Lost. CREW SAFE. The following message has been received by the Deputy Minister of Customs from the Sub-Collector at Trepassy:—"The boat Eldorado, 24 tons, Patrick O'Reilly master, bound from Corbin, P.E., to North Harbor, St. Mary's Bay, for a load of wood, was driven ashore at St. Shott's during a gale yesterday morning. The message adds that the crew of 4 men landed safely but the vessel is a total loss."

A PLEASING APRON MODEL. DUBLIN, Nov. 24. The Ministry of Defence of Dail Eireann, to-night, issued the following statement, "in connection with the present program upon the Nationalist minority in Belfast, the public department of Dail Eireann is instructed to characterize as utterly groundless, statements made by the Unionist press of Belfast, that volunteers have been sent or have gone to Belfast from other parts of Ireland, or that local volunteers have acted aggressively. The only members of the Irish Republican Army in Belfast are members of the Loyal Battalion."

CRAIG'S INSTRUCTIONS. LONDON, Nov. 24. Sir James Craig to-night sent a message to the Ulster Government, urging defensive measures against "dastardly outrages" upon Loyalists. The Ulster Premier's message urged those who trust him, to remain strictly on the defensive, no matter how severe the provocation and promised drastic action when he takes charge of the situation on Saturday.

FORCED TO PUT BACK. S.S. Maple Dawn which left here Tuesday for North Sydney returned to port this morning for bunker coal. The ship struck a N.W. gale and thick snow off Cape Race shortly after leaving here and only succeeded in getting 40 miles West of Cape Race when she was obliged to return. The ship took about 50 tons of bunker coal and sails again this evening.

Shipping Notes. S.S. Rosalind is due at Halifax to-day, but no confirmation of her arrival has been received. It is likely that the ship has been delayed by the storm.

Our First Municipal Board.

And Those Who Served as Councillors.

(By ALEX. A. PARSONS.)

Now that our citizens are on the eve of another appeal to the ballot box, the time is not inopportune for a few comments on the first Municipal Election in St. John's and the men chosen thereat as representatives of the people—that was in 1888! Prior to that year the business of the city was managed by the general government of the island, through the Department of Public Works. But during the Session of the Legislature in 1887 it was decided, at the earnest request of the citizens, that some form of responsible city government be inaugurated. The first bill introduced was objectionable to the citizens, and even the second was not as complete as it might have been, and had to be amended at the following Session of the Legislature.

However, the election for our first Town Council took place in September, 1888 with satisfactory results. The town had been divided into five Wards, each to elect a Councillor, in addition to which two Councillors were appointed by the Government. The two latter were directors of the General Water Company under the old regime. The names of the seven Councillors were James Goodfellow, Chairman; Moses Monroe, James P. Fox, J. T. Carsell, Frank St. John, W. D. Morrison and Michael Power.

VERY POPULAR CITIZEN.

Mr. Goodfellow was born in the town of Myles, Haddingtonshire, Scotland, in the year 1828. In 1850, being then twenty-two years old, he came to Newfoundland as a clerk in the firm of Messrs. McBride & Kerr, Water Street. In 1864 he was taken into the business as a partner, and was made manager. The next year, the name of the firm was changed to McBride & Company. It was thus conducted till 1887, when he became owner of the business. Mr. Goodfellow was a highly-respected citizen, as well as a shrewd business man. He was a shareholder and director in many of the joint stock companies of the city, and had been on the Board of Directors of the Commercial Bank since 1864. He was when Chairman of the Council, Senior Director of the said Bank. Mr. Goodfellow had been identified with a number of the charitable and philanthropic societies of the city for many years, previously. His long and successful business experience peculiarly fitted him for his position as Chairman of the Council Board.

YOUNGEST ON THE BOARD.

Mr. Fox, the other Government appointee, was the youngest man on the Board. He was the eldest son of the late Hon. James Fox, M.L.C. Mr. Fox was born on Prescott Street, in this city, in 1860; he was, therefore, only twenty-eight years old. He was educated in St. Bonaventure's College, but spent three years, as a finishing course, in Montreal. Mr. Fox entered the office of Messrs. Walter Grieve & Co., in 1878, having previously spent one year in his father's business. He remained in the former firm till 1882, when he went back to his father's business in the same year his father died; and he took charge of the business, which in conjunction with his brother, Mr. John Fox—now in the Customs Department here—he conducted for some years. Mr. Fox was a highly esteemed and respected citizen and was worthy of his position on the Council Board.

LARGE-HEARTED AND GENEROUS.

Councillor Carnell represented No. 1 Ward, in the eastern part of the city. He was a typical Council-man in stature, and bore his honors well. Mr. John Carnell was born on Forest Road, St. John's, on the 6th of March, 1845. He was a son of the late Mr. Samuel Carnell, a well-known carriage-builder of this city; the Councilman followed his father's trade, and occupied the same building. He was educated at the Church of England Academy, and left school at the age of sixteen to enter and learn his trade at his father's business place. In 1873 he took charge of the business at his father's death; the next year he spent some time in the United States, getting a general idea of the improved methods in carriage-building as done in that country. On his return, he steadily increased his trade, till he had, perhaps, the largest business in his line of any firm in the city. Mr. Carnell was large-hearted and generous, and had fewer enemies than any man in the city. His son and successor in the business, Mr. Andrew Carnell, often reminds me of him.

OF STERLING WORTH.

Mr. Francis St. John represented No. 2 Ward. Mr. St. John was born on Water Street, this town, on the 2nd of June, 1852. He was the son of the late Edward St. John, baker—one of the old Liberals of St. John's, and brother to the much-esteemed Father St. John. He (the Councillor) was largely interested in the baking business, besides which he had considerable real estate, and was looked upon generally as a "solid man." He was educated at St. Bonaventure's College here, and for many years had been a member of the Irish Society and St. Vincent de Paul Society. In the former, he was an active member of all committees in connection with the construction of the new building; in the latter, he was one of the visitors of the poor, for several years. The Councillor was a man of principle and sterling worth, and was highly respected, not only in his own Ward, but throughout the city and elsewhere, where he was known.

LIBERAL AND PROGRESSIVE.

No. 3 Ward was represented by Mr. M. Monroe, M.L.C. Mr. Monroe was a native of the Emerald Isle, and was born in the country in 1842, at Honeypot, Hall, Meath, County Down. He was the third son of Mr. John Monroe. The Councillor came to Newfoundland in 1866, and entered the firm of Messrs. McBride & Kerr. In his late years in the firm he had an interest in the concern. In the spring of 1873 he opened for himself and conducted a very successful business. Mr. Monroe was speculative and had interests in almost all the Joint Stock Companies in the Dominion. He went largely into the bank fishing business, and was very successful. Mr. Monroe, who ranked as a gentleman of first-rate ability, was liberal and progressive in his views. His cheerful countenance at any gathering was always sufficient guarantee of an enjoyable time.

A WORTHY REPRESENTATIVE.

Councillor Power looked out for the interests of No. 4 Ward. The Hon. Mr. Power, M.L.C., was born on Duckworth Street, St. John's, in 1842, and is a son of the late Michael Power, cooper. He received his education from Mr. Bartholomew P. Drouney. At the age of sixteen he began to serve his time in his father's oocage, and has continued in the business ever since. In 1871 he was left sole charge of the business, on the death of his father, and has since successfully conducted it. By honest industry, he has acquired considerable property in town; and, in addition, owns a pretty well near the railway track, a short distance from town. Mr. Power is of a naturally diffident disposition, but he possesses sound common sense, together with excellent qualities of head and heart which make him one of the most representative middle men of the West End. The interest of his Ward did not suffer neglect while in his hands.

OLDEST ON THE BOARD.

Mr. W. D. Morrison, the oldest member on the Board, was elected for No. 5 Ward. He was born in Rosshire, Scotland, in 1826, and emigrated, with his family, to Pictou County, Nova Scotia, in 1853. For four years he attended school, after which he went to the printing business on the Pictou Observer. He stayed at the business, in Canada, for ten years, after which he came to Newfoundland. He worked on the Courier, with the late Joseph Woods for some time, and other papers in St. John's. In 1855 he abandoned "the art preservative of all arts" and went into a merchant's office. In 1860, he started in business for himself and continued in it up to the time of his death. He was a quiet, retiring man, and took more interest in his own immediate concerns than he did in politics. He was a staunch teetotaler and a persistent advocate of total abstinence.

MEN OF INDEPENDENT MEANS.

Of the seven Councillors, whose biographies have here briefly outlined, only one remains with us today—the Hon. Michael Power. All the others have gone to "that bourne whence no traveller returns." Not only were they men of independent means; they possessed other endowments which pre-eminently fitted them for the positions they occupied

Regularity

Nujol makes you regular as clockwork. Without forcing or irritating, Nujol softens the food waste. The many tiny muscles in the intestines can then remove it regularly. Absolutely harmless—try it!

is a power of thinking coolly, an integrity of purpose, and a willingness and ability in taking a share of the burdensome duties to be performed. Take a course of Carnol if run down in health. Over work, extra worry and ill health soon bring on nervous troubles. When depressed and tired—appetite not good—take a course of CARNOL. From the start food is enjoyed and assimilated, the system gradually gains strength until robust health is secured. Carnol is the tonic which is recommended by so many Doctors.

Our qualifications as electors perhaps render us liable to be ourselves elected. In the event, therefore, of being called forward by our fellow-citizens to fill the honorable situation of representative, it is our duty to do so; perhaps our own feelings and a portion of our title to the public service, provided we conscientiously consider ourselves qualified for the task, and that our health and private circumstances permit it.

Do all the candidates, or any of them, now soliciting our support measure up to the foregoing requirements? I express no opinion one way or the other. I simply ask the question and leave the municipal electors to furnish the answer, through the ballot-box on the 15th proximo.

It is well to remember, just now, that in all cases of election of members of civic corporations, and such-like bodies, the chief merit in candidates, after that of good general standing in the community, is soundness of judgment, and after that, activity of habits. The power of fine speaking, or eloquence, is esteemed very lightly. That which is required

The Riddle of the "Cyclops."

(Pearson's Weekly Mystery Story)

Ecclipsing the other mysteries of the World War and overshadowing all other unsolved riddles of the sea, the unexplained loss of the United States collier Cyclops stand alone, apparently one of the few cases on record where the sea literally opened and swallowed a huge boat, leaving not the slightest trace of the vessel or her crew.

The brief and formal announcement of the Navy Department, by Secretary Daniels, issued at the time that the Cyclops was officially added to the list of missing ships, gives the principal details in the case, few and inadequate as they are.

"It was on March 4th, 1918," reads this announcement, "that the collier Cyclops, 12,000 tons displacement, put into the British West Indies for coal. She was due in her home port on March 13th. Since her departure from that port there has not been a trace of the vessel, and long-continued and vigilant search of the entire region proved utterly futile, not a vestige of wreckage having been discovered.

"No reasonable explanation of her strange disappearance can be given. It is known that one of her two engines was damaged and that she was proceeding at reduced speed, but if the engine had become disabled it would not have had any effect upon her ability to communicate by wireless. Many theories have been advanced, but none that seems to account satisfactorily for the ship's complete disappearance. After months of search and waiting, the Cyclops has been finally given up as lost."

An Imperiant Passenger on Board

But these are only the barest facts in the case, and make no mention of one of the most interesting points connected with the mystery—the fact that the Cyclops carried as a passenger Al-fred Louis Morau Gotschalk, American Consul-General at Rio Janeiro, and a man who had been instrumental in stirring up sentiment throughout Brazil in favor of the Allied forces.

A number of anonymous letters threatening his life had been received by the Consul-General before his return to the United States, but the most startling fact of all was that two weeks after the Cyclops sailed, and at least a month before she was reported as missing, a notice appeared in a Rio Janeiro newspaper stating that a requiem Mass would be celebrated for the American Consul-General "lost at sea in the American collier Cyclops."

A number of Americans in Brazil noticed the announcement at the time and made inquiries about it, but the newspaper in question disclaimed any knowledge of the person who had inserted the notice, and little attention was paid to it until word was received from the States that the collier was long overdue.

American Secret Service agents then tried to trace the clue of the newspaper clipping, but the trail was too cold. The man who had brought it into the office of the newspaper had disappeared as completely as had the Cyclops! Among the theories advanced for the loss of the vessel, sea-worthy in the extreme and in the best of shape save for a minor accident to one of her engines, was that she had either been sunk by a German submarine operating in West Indian waters, or that she had been captured and taken into Germany in order that the Central Powers might have the benefit of the large cargo of manganese which she was carrying.

No Trace in German Records.

One of the first acts of the American authorities after the signing of the armistice, therefore, was to examine all German records dealing with naval operations during the period of the war, but while references were found to the sinking of every vessel which had been torpedoed, together with the date of the attack and the name of the officer commanding the submarine or raider, no mention whatever was found concerning the Cyclops.

If she fell a victim to a German submarine, it must have been one of those which failed to return to port, otherwise Tynon pride in the success of their campaign of frightfulness, would have led to a permanent record of the exploit.

Inasmuch as no storm or even rough weather was reported in the West Indies at this time, the most tenable theory appears to be that of certain naval officers who maintain that the collier must have foundered through the sudden displacement of her cargo—manganese shifting with the ease and rapidity of a cargo of wheat.

But, until the truth or falsity of this supposition is established by the discovery of some totally unexpected clue, the Cyclops must be numbered with the other vessels which have made the "port of missing ships."

It is significant, however, that the Cyclops is the only vessel equipped with wireless that has ever disappeared without a trace or a whisper of trouble.

In Defence of Darwin.

Dear Sir.—That item on page five of last evening's Telegram under the heading "Death to Darwinism" appeared me so unmerited an attack upon the memory of a great man as to warrant this rejoinder. In the first place the term "Darwinism" does not mean the theory of evolution, but the name of the man who first proposed it. It is fair to say that Darwin was a great and original thinker and a science owes much to his work and to his memory. Darwin's theories covered almost every branch of science that occupies the attention of the first half of the nineteenth century. It must be remembered that up to the time of even living great men of science, who held a professorship in applied sciences were at the greatest of colleges. One of the greatest of these was Darwin himself. He was a man who held his position up to-day of half of the world's works upon that science. It is then to be wondered at that the student of that day made mistakes. It is anything but his shame that Darwin was wrong in one great particular.

If by Darwinism is meant all that Darwin did for science the one who was a natural death to Darwinism is actually deficient in veneration, and still more sadly lacking in appreciation of all that a great worker has done for the advancement of human knowledge. Darwin made the mistake of holding man's evolution from the apes, and perhaps this is what Dr. Rader meant by Darwinism, if so, it is a pity he is not more specific. Darwin taught other things besides man's descent from the monkey, and it is not fair to condemn him in toto for one mistake, or even a dozen. Darwin himself if alive to-day would feel ashamed of his theory, and further, were he alive now, he would still be a great man, a great thinker, a great investigator. He was wonderfully versatile, and he was wonderfully kind. He was a man who embraced the solar system. He was too great a man to be swept aside so ruthlessly as Dr. Rader would dispose of him. His memory shall be green when small fry like Dr. Rader shall have been forgotten.

Yours truly,
ARTHUR ENGLISH.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, NOV. 25.

Now is the time when chaps and chaps make their appearance, and when sprayed hands, lips and face are the order of the day. There are lots of ways to cure these conditions, but there are few more efficient than Cream of Lilies, our own preparation, which is compounded with special reference to our Newfoundland climatic conditions, and has been clinically successful for winter use for years past. We can thoroughly recommend Cream of Lilies, and suggest that those whose hands are sensitive to the action of cold and hard winds, obtain a pot at once. Price 30c. a pot.

Personal.

Mr. Wm. Fitzgerald, manager of the Bank Nova Scotia at New Glasgow, N. S., who was so dangerously ill last week that his mother was telegraphed for, is now out of danger. Mr. Fitzgerald of Job's, father of the young man had a message to that effect yesterday. Mr. Fitzgerald will probably return next week.

Capt. Thomas Bonia who was around Woodhouse Bay locating new routes for the roads destroyed during the Great storm returned to the city yesterday.

Skating on Pond.

Most of the ponds in the suburbs are now frozen over. Yesterday a number of boys were skating and playing "hockey" on Furton's Pond. The frozen ponds are not yet solid, and many are open in the centres. As every year every fatality is caused by persons venturing on the ponds and lakes before they are solidly frozen, parents should caution their children.

Another Candidate.

Mr. Thomas Kent has announced his intention of being a candidate at the forthcoming Municipal Election. Mr. Kent is one of the old timers of the town and was a foreman on the building of the Great Tunnel, Water St., East. Mr. Kent has had a lot of experience at road work and promises that if elected he will be the eyes of the Council.

Shipping Notes.

Schooner Hummerist has sailed from St. John's with a load of salt for port. S.S. Sachem leaves Halifax for here on Monday. The ship is taking a large freight and is due here on Wednesday. S.S. Dicky left Liverpool on Wednesday for this port.

New Light on Trafalgar.

On the one hundred and sixteenth anniversary of the great sea fight of Trafalgar—October 21—a new account, by Lieut. Andrew Green of H.M.S. Neptune, of the French and Spanish fleets was published in England. The document was discovered by Lord Cottesloe, great-grandson of Captain T. F. Fremantle of the Neptune, in looking over neglected family papers. Although considerably passed since Trafalgar, Nelson's plan of battle is still a subject of discussion in naval circles. In 1912 an Admiralty committee, with Admiral Sir Cyrrian Bridge as Chairman, made an inquiry into the handling of British ships in the engagement. Existing models and diagrams seemed to indicate, in the opinion of some critics, that Nelson's Captains did not always understand the positions assigned to them. The committee, after a full inquiry, concluded, on all the evidence available, that the diagrams were faulty in not showing the real places of ships in the attacking fleet; also that its divisions were formed in two lines ahead which had been questioned. Collingwood, it is said, would have preferred "a line of bearing rather than a line ahead," but Nelson's tactics were strategically sounder, as the event proved. In a note to Southey's "Life of Nelson" it is said that when the flags began to go up or the Admiral's signal, "England expects that every man will do his duty," Collingwood, not knowing what the message to the fleet was going to be, exclaimed impatiently, "I wish Nelson would make no more signals; we all know what we have to do." When the signal was translated, Collingwood was delighted with his old friend's appeal, but the story indicates that a good many signals had been flown. It may have been the case that some captains became a bit confused as the curtain went up on the most dramatic of sea fights.

Lieut. Green's story of Trafalgar is in the form of notes taken every ten or fifteen minutes during the engagement. It seems to corroborate the judgment of the Admiralty Committee that the British captains knew what they were about when going into action, and that the formation signalled by Nelson was in two lines ahead and directed against the far-flung line of battle of the French and Spaniards to cut it in two. But there is nothing in Lieut. Green's version to show how gallantly, in individual cases how heroically, the enemy fought the formation of hopes against the superior skill of Nelson and the efficiency of his carefully trained crews. Southey, in his classic short study of Nelson's career, does not recognize the valor of the foe, although his book was published eight years after Trafalgar.

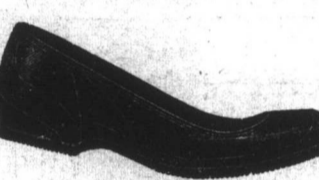

The anniversary interest in England quickened by the discovery of Lieut. Green's notes recalls the centenary celebration in England in 1906 when French naval officers came to London as guests of the nation. French and Spanish colors were shown in every town in the British Isles, and the silent toast drunk at the banquet on the Victory at Portsmouth was: "To the memory of those who fought and fell, whether friend or foe, in the glorious battle of a hundred years ago." It is true that the ill-starred allies were glorious in defeat. The story is handsomely told in "The Enemy at Trafalgar," by Edward Fraser, which was published the year after the celebration. The author had access to the French and Spanish archives, and made liberal use of them. He points out that jealousy and friction sapped the strength of the Franco-Spanish alliance. "The enemy," he says, "were in no condition to give battle, as they themselves well knew and said before they put to sea." Press gangs had filled the depleted complement of the Spaniards' fleet with raw and reluctant levies. Brave and able as was the French Admiral Villeneuve, who commanded the allies, he put to sea unready, to escape being superseded by Admiral Rosily, supposed to be coming post-haste from Paris and the choice of Napoleon. Moreover, Villeneuve, vacillating and nervous, did not have the confidence of his officers. Yet this allied fleet, doomed to disaster in advance, battled with tremendous energy, courage and fortitude.

F. SMALLWOOD, THE HOME OF GOOD RUBBERS,

218 and 220 Water Street.

Admiral Villeneuve fought until, as one of his officers wrote, the flagship Bucentaur, heaped with dead, and the wreckage from overhead, presented an appalling spectacle. It had become impossible to navigate the ship. Captain Lucas of the Redoubtable lost three-quarters of his crew in killed and wounded, almost put the Victory a bigger ship out of action, and yielded only after standing off the Temeraire as well as the Victory for hours. Captain Lucas' sword was returned to him. Admiral Magon of the Algeciras, trying to board the Temeraire, was wounded by three bullets, stayed in the fight, and was cut in two by a cannon ball. Captain Infernet of the Intrepid fought his ship to the last gasp, like a man who bore a charmed life. Spanish commanders also covered themselves with glory: Commodore Gallano, who nailed his flag on the Bahama to the mast—he was killed; "El gran Churrucra," who died like "El Cid"; Rear Admiral Cisneros, whose deck on the lofty Santissima Trinidad was a shambles; Admiral Gravina, who was terribly wounded and yielded only after the Principe de Asturias was dismantled by the British fire.—New York Times.

A Hindoo Parable.

Four blind men went to see an elephant. One touched the leg of the elephant and said, "The elephant is like a pillar." The second touched the trunk and said, "The elephant is like a thick club." The third touched the belly and said, "The elephant is like a big jar." The fourth touched the ears and said, "The elephant is like a big winnowing basket." Thus they began to dispute among themselves as to the figure of the elephant. A passer-by seeing them thus quarrelling said, "What is it that you are disputing about?" They told him everything and asked him to arbitrate. The man said, "None of you has seen the elephant. The elephant is not like a pillar; its legs are like pillars. It is not like a big water-vessel; its belly is like a big water-vessel. It is not like a winnowing basket; its ears are like winnowing baskets. It is not like a stout club; but its proboscis is like that. The elephant is the combination of all these." In the same manner those quarrel who have seen only one aspect of the Deity.—From the "Hindoo Message."

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

IT HAPPENS TO ALL OF US.

"How often in trying to do right we do wrong." In the manuscript of a very fine story which I was permitted to read in the proof and which you will, doubtless, enjoy some day when it reaches print, occurs the pregnant sentence: "Whenever I read of some reform candidate for political office, who unquestionably means to do right, I feel mixed with my admiration, a great pity for him. I suppose it is inevitable that he will be placed in positions where in trying to do right in one direction he will inevitably do wrong in another."

Of all the tragedies in human life it seems to me there is none more poignant and pitiful than those that are represented by that sentence. To try to do right, often at the expense of self-denial, and then to find after all is over, that you have given up what you wanted and in exchange for it have not gotten the satisfaction of doing the right and best thing, it seems to me that no realization could be bitterer and more disappointing. Like Buying a Precious Stone and Finding It Paste. It is like scraping all your money together, going without other things you want and need to buy a precious stone and then, after you have paid out the money, finding out that the stone is only paste after all. You remember the man in the Bible who, having found a pearl of great price, went and sold all he had to get it. I have called it a tragedy. I should not have done so. To do wrong in trying to do right is a misfortune, but

St. Catherine the Martyr

November 25 is the festival of Saint Catherine, a native of Alexandria, in Egypt, who was said to have appealed to and been brought before Maximus, a Spaniard who had become general of the Roman army in Britain. He proclaimed himself Emperor of Rome in A.D. 382, and ruling over England and Spain, afterwards conquered Gaul (now France) and then marched into Italy, where his army committed most dreadful crimes. Amongst the Christians who were persecuted was Saint Catherine, a name that she well deserved, for it is one of Greek origin, signifying "pure," as the word is translated in various passages of the English New Testament (Acts xx, 21; Rom. xiv, 21; I Timothy iii, 9; Titus v, 15; Hebrews x, 23; James i, 27). She is said to have victoriously refuted the heathen sages of Alexandria, and that knowing the character of this Roman emperor before whom she was brought, she refused to encourage his lust; he therefore had her stretched upon a spiked wheel, and tortured to death. Such has therefore since been called amongst fireworks, a Catherine wheel.

How Animals Resist Disease.

Not all persons or animals are equally susceptible to disease. Some are strongly resistant, others readily contract the ailment and are slow in recovering, or quickly succumb. Every particular in the housing, environment, feeding and management of farm animals should in the maximum degree foster and augment natural resistance, and when infectious (germ-caused) disease is prevalent artificial immun-

When the Greeks Ruled in Constantinople.

(John of London's Weekly.)
Two thousand six hundred years ago a small party of Greeks landed on the shores of the European continent and laid the foundations of the city of Byzantium. One thousand years later Constantine the Great, Emperor of Rome, and unchallenged master of the Roman world, rebuilt the city and made it his Imperial capital, and Byzantium became Constantinople.
In the later phase of its history, the Roman Empire ever tended to become less and less Roman in character. The later Emperors were rarely Italians. Constantine himself was born on the banks of the Danube, and he never regarded Italy as the most important part of his dominions.
The Gateway.
Rome was an inconvenient capital, far from the frontiers, and the Goths and the Germans were successfully dealt with and driven outside the borders of the Empire. In the sixth century Justinian gave the Empire its laws.
By the beginning of the seventh century Latin had ceased to be the Imperial language and Greek had become almost the only tongue in the streets of Constantinople. This was the zenith of the Empire. Its dominions included the whole of Syria, Asia Minor, a large part of Northern Africa, the Empire until the year 1453.

Another Constantine is now dreaming of leading another Greek army into the walls of the city and rivaling an Empire which has become nothing but a memory—thanks to Gibbon, something of a grotesque memory.
The Byzantine Empire.
The bitter controversies and persecutions occasioned by the amazing heresies that troubled the early Church vastly affected both the internal and the external history of the Eastern Empire. The story of these heresies has been told with almost gloating pleasure by Gibbon, but despite the ineptitudes of many of its rulers, and despite the religious eccentricities from which it suffered, there is much that is splendid in the story of the Eastern Empire.
Constantine died in the year 337. During the next hundred years the Goths and the Germans were successfully dealt with and driven outside the borders of the Empire. In the sixth century Justinian gave the Empire its laws.
By the beginning of the seventh century Latin had ceased to be the Imperial language and Greek had become almost the only tongue in the streets of Constantinople. This was the zenith of the Empire. Its dominions included the whole of Syria, Asia Minor, a large part of Northern Africa,

Christmas is coming! You can hear the jingle of the bells over the frosted ground and the cheery, wild halloo of Father Christmas with his load of joy.

For what would Christmas be without the giving of Gifts? A custom that's centuries old. I'm ready! You can't come too early for me. You can never exhaust the Service that awaits you here.

For every man a man's gift. And every Gift bearing the labels of famous manufacturers; bearing, too, the name, the guarantee of the City's First Haberdasher—insistent value, true worth.

No other store can serve you so well in selecting a Man's Gift. Think of the tremendous import that the name of JAEGER suggests—of Christy—of Stetson—of Borzolino. The world's greatest products in their own field. And men know me—they have walked in here and bought with confidence, with the assurance that they were getting the World's Best Goods for many years. Men can't select their own Gifts—they have to depend on you—yet you can depend on Kearney. Let him help you; buy his name in every Gift. Then listen for that joyous gurgle on Christmas morning—"Just what I wanted! From Kearney's, too!"

"For Every Man a Man's Gift--and every Man's Gift from Kearney's"

Own Your Own Home for Less Than You are Paying Rent.

For $600 cash down we build a nice plain 6 room $1,800 house and give 10 years to pay the $1,200 balance. Payments in principal and interest will average $14.40 per month for the 10 years. When payments cease and buyers own their own homes.
We build up to $3,500 house on this plan.
We accept $900 on a $2,700 house; the monthly payments for 10 years to own this averages $21.60 per month.
The actual rent on the $1,800 house is $4.40 per month, as $10.00 per month or $120 per year applies to paying the principal.
On the $2,700 house, payments on principal is $15.00 per month or $180 per year, rent therefore only $6.60 per month.
See the $2,500 bungalow we are now erecting on Mount Royal Avenue—$800 down and $20.37 per month for 10 years is the price to own this beautiful home. We are in a position to give good service and value; we operate our own saw mills on the West Coast, also our own factory on Plank Road. We have one million feet of splendid sound, clear lumber of all kinds now in the city, including clear Fir Clapboard.
To parties wishing to build their own home, we supply lumber on 10 years' credit, taking first lien on the building.
Purchasers of lumber of all kinds will find our retail prices low. Stock sound and extra well sawn. Our clear West Coast Fir Clapboard is not equalled by stock sawn in any other part of the Colony.

the island of Sicily, and the Balkan Peninsula northward to the banks of the Danube, and the Emperor exercised at least a nominal sway in Italy.
The birth of Mohammed heralded the end, though the Empire existed for eight hundred years after the death of the prophet. In the early wars against the Saracens, the Greeks first lost Jerusalem and, a few years later, Carthage, in Northern Africa. But in the year 718 the Saracens were heavily defeated in an attempt to take Constantinople by the Emperor Leo the Isaurian, and Europe was saved from the Crescent.
In the year 800, Italy definitely threw off the nominal rule of the Emperors of Constantinople and in the year 878 the Empire lost Sicily to the Saracens. There are still numerous evidences of the Byzantine occupation left in the island, notably in the decorations of the wonderful cathedral of Monte Reale, just outside Palermo.

The Turks' Threat.
In the eleventh century the Turks swarmed up the Arabs, smashed the Persians, and threatened Europe, and before the end of the century they had inflicted more than one serious defeat on the armies of the Empire.
The Crusades, intended to rescue the Holy Places from the infidels, brought not peace but the sword to the Christian Emperors of the East. The wily and entirely unscrupulous Emperor Alexius endeavoured, not without success, to use the religious enthusiasm of the First Crusade for his own aggrandisement, but the relations between the Emperors and the Norman adventurers, who were the camp followers of the Crusades, were always strained, and the antagonism led to the siege of the city by the Normans at the beginning of the thirteenth century and its capture and partial destruction.
Into the Melting-Pot.
Mr. Oman tells us:—
Down to 1204 Constantinople still contained the monuments of ancient Greek art in enormous numbers. In spite of the wear and tear of 900 years, her squares and palaces were still crowded with the art-treasures that Constantine and his sons had stored up. Nicetas, who was an eyewitness of all, has left us the list of the chief statues that suffered. The Heracles of Lysippus, the great Hera of Samos, the brass figures which Augustus set up after Actium, the ancient Roman bronze of the Wolf with Romulus and Remus, Paris with the Golden Apple, Helen of Troy, and dozens more all went into the melting-pot to be recast into wretched copper money. The monuments of Christian art fared no better; the tombs of the emperors were carefully stripped of everything in metal, the altars and screens of the churches scraped to the stone. Everything was left bare and desolate.

Thus Christian destroyed Christian. The rise of Venice as a seaport had largely killed the trade of Constantinople. The incapacity of the later Emperors, the sloth of the native population, and the pressure of the Turk prepared the inevitable end. The city, which had been won back from the Normans and again occupied by Greek Emperors, was captured at last by the Turks in the year 1453. The Sultan rode into the eastern door of the great cathedral of St. Sophia and a Moslem Mullah proclaimed from the pulpit that Allah is Allah and Mohammed is His prophet.

Why a Ball Bounces.

COMPRESSED AIR IS ELASTIC.
When an elastic substance is deformed by force, it tends to regain its shape as soon as the force is removed. If a ball of putty is dropped on an anvil, the energy due to its fall is spent in squashing flat the part touching the anvil, and the ball of putty does not bounce.
If the anvil is struck with a steel hammer the hammer will bounce back with such force that it is impossible to prevent it. Steel—especially hardened steel such as the face of the anvil and the head of the hammer—is highly elastic.
Suppose the hammer head weighs, say two pounds, and travels four feet before striking the anvil, both faces will be pushed in ever so slightly. Both, being highly elastic, will tend to recover their shape, with the result that the hammer head will be swung back with enormous force.

A Pressure of Forty Tons.
The magnitude of this force may be imagined when it is considered that, at the moment when the face of the hammer meets the face of the anvil, the pressure between them will be something like forty tons!
The hammer head will be kicked back with a momentary force of the same pressure, no wonder that it is impossible to hold it down.
Air is highly elastic when compressed, and it is largely due to this that a tennis ball bounces so well.
When the ball strikes the ground it is squashed in a little; this compresses the air inside the ball. The compressed air then pushes the ball back into its proper shape, causing it to kick off from the ground, as a person does when jumping.
Whenever we see anything bounce from a surface we may be sure that both the object and the surface are elastic to some extent, and that either or both have been knocked out of shape at the moment they met.

The Women of Missing Men

Grant me a place beside the man,
Of this, the warrior called "Old Knows"
Long have I waited, long have wept
For one who died far off, alone,
To God, when death should come,
I prayed
The one boon left—to bless his way,
But on the battlefield afar
He died beneath the shell-torments,
Hungry of heart, with empty hands
Denied the eating of his pain,
Let me but touch the casket fair
Of this my dead come home-again.
It matters not he lies unknown—
His resting-place a nation's shrine
I am his Mother, maid or wife,
Whichever name will make him
mine.
For all the nameless dead are here,
By this lone soldier homeward led;
And restless spirits, fading peace,
Turn on their pillows comforted.
So lay him down and let me kneel—
Long-cheated hands above him clasp;
I think I see him smile content
Because I tend his grave at last.
Long after burial-pomp is done,
From every homestead near and far,
My feet shall beat out many a track:
I am the Women of the War.

Wedding Bells.

CARROLL-WILLIAMS.

On Wednesday morning, the 33rd inst. at 9 o'clock, before the high altar in St. Patrick's Church, Miss M. A. (Polly) Carroll of the West End was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Joseph P. Williams of Bay Bulls, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Dr. Kitchin. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. D. Carroll, wore a picturesque Van Dyck hat of black with ornate gown of white satin trimmed with pearls and shadow lace. Her attendant bridesmaid was Miss May Rodgers, who was attired in a dress of sage blue silk combined with nixon and Orient embroidery, and wearing a black L. Q. hat. The groom was ably supported by his cousin, Mr. Frank Williams. The groom's present to the bride was a wrist watch and to the bridesmaid a brooch of gold. The happy couple were the recipients of many beautifully useful presents. After the wedding a reception was held at the bride's residence, 89 Patrick St. The bridal party then took train for Bay Bulls the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Williams. A large gathering of friends were at the station to wish them abundance of wedded happiness, and in those wishes the Telegram most cordially joins.

'Of Man's First Disobedience.'

(The readings of the new Summian tablets at the University Museum of the Pennsylvania University, according to a statement emanating from New York, "absolutely upset the Adam and Eve story. The tablets show that it was Noah who ate the apple, and Eve did not tempt him, as she was not there at the time." The tablets have been deciphered by Stephen Langdon, Professor of Assyriology at Oxford.)

How prone is this eventful age To prove, alas! prosaic. New facts to-day are all the rage: Old truths are dubbed archaic. The tale of Adam, now, and Eve Has lost (for me) its glory. Since we're expected to believe A far less tempting story.

Yet while they're polished up at last The tarnished fame of woman. And cleaned up out her clouded past. To me she's much less human. But man now bears her ancient dole. Nor to mere myth can pin her. Seeing he is himself the sole Hereditary sinner.

Cobalt Hoping to Find Gold Under Silver.

Cobalt—Cobalt is now debating the question of whether or not gold bearing ores may be found underlying the present silver bearing formation of the camp?

This new suggested possibility for the declining silver camp, comes up through the findings by Kerr-Lake miners, of gold bearing ore. True the values found are not lavish and the finds far from extensive, but nevertheless sufficient to warrant the possibilities being looked into.

This is not the first time that the matter of delving into the hidden formations underlying Cobalt, has been brought up. It is not more than a year ago, that the Crown Reserve company suggested that there was a chance that another silver bearing formation, equal in richness to the one about worked out, might be found below the present formation. The Crown Reserve people had enough faith in the proposition to spend money to prove the theory wrong. Going into one of the deepest levels of their property, which by the way is not far removed from the Kerr Lake, they sank diamond drill holes to a great depth. Nothing was found and the reports on the experiment failed to make any mention of the finding of gold bearing rock. Recently at the 15 foot level on the Oxford-Cobalt visible gold was found in perhaps much greater quantity than at the Kerr Lake or Crown Reserve but it is not present in commercial values.

The Voters' List.

A revised list of voters certified by Judge F. J. Morris will be deposited at the Colonial Secretary's Office on next Wednesday. MUTT AND JEFF

THE NEXT TIME YOU DINE OUT JUST TRY THIS IDEA.

Erratic Disease

The fact that man is a pattern in the evolution of diseases is apparent and that one man's man's poison, this disease of Sir Wilmot, the eminent physician at the World Service St. George's Hall, Liverpool, under the microscope, is a new birth. The contributions of modern science, placing first of all, anaesthetics, and secondly, not medicine, same food going into the world produce the same result. There were people of butcher's meat, who gave their victims, or certain varieties of violent symptoms. Sir Wilmot's case was a simple case of that in a soldier who had the disease in consequence of the biscuits which he ate to his battalion. He suffered from the disease, but he was able to get an account. The doctor proved to be true, and set to work to treat what was, to all intents and purposes, a porridge.

Four Varieties of Not only was one man's man's poison, but the blood of one man did not live in the veins of individuals of his race. Within the past few years, we had learned that American race there were hundreds of blood, and they agree on with another nation, although it was a disease, cut right through the veins of the human race, and nationally. The great importance of the disease many soldiers were so collapsed from the disease, the only chance was by injecting the blood. Blood was collected in large quantities, biologically examined, and the kind was determined for a given patient. The useful blood was a man.

What Inoculation? There was no doubt, a striking reduction in the number of deaths among the South African War, and the prophylactic measures, during the South African War, the strength of the Army, there were more than 100,000 men, and some of the rationed soldiers, 2,000,000, and there were not a case of typhoid, and the disease, Sir Wilmot's case, to record in the Army, the serum and the disease, the process of the disease (appliance). Erratic Diseases.

ONE MAN'S MEAT IS ANOTHER'S POISON.

The fact that man is not made to eat his own kind is the explanation of the fact that diseases are apparently erratic and that one man's meat is another man's poison.

Other man's poison. This was the interesting view of Sir Wilnot Herringham, the eminent physician, who lectured at the World Service Exhibition at St. George's Hall, Liverpool.

Gladstone Unpopular at Court.

There are some excellent new anecdotes about Queen Victoria in the London Magazine, told by a retired member of the Royal Household. The late Queen ran the Court on German lines, and was extremely severe.

The Queen was Pleased. There is also this story about the Queen: "The two subjects in which Queen Victoria showed the greatest interest in the last few years of her life were the making of her will, and about how she would read in history.

Choir Recital.

Magnificent Performance of "Ruth."
A large number of people attended the Recital given in St. Andrew's Church last night by the Church Choir, and greatly enjoyed the musical entertainment provided for them. The programme which was under the direction of Professor Mawer, was divided into two parts. The first consisted of vocal and instrumental selections and was greatly appreciated. The anthems and choruses were rendered in a most pleasing manner and the double male quartette was particularly good. The organ solos and violinello selections were performed in a masterly fashion by Mr. W. Moncrieff Mawer and Hon. A. W. Mews, respectively. The air and chorus "Inflammatus et accensus" was the feature of its part of the programme. Mrs. H. Small rendered the solo part very finely. The second part of the programme consisted of the sacred cantata "Ruth." This was splendidly performed. The soloists being all excellent voice, rendered the various songs in a manner which charmed all hearers whilst the chorus left nothing to be desired in their renditions. The whole recital reflects great credit upon the organizers for it is seldom that a local audience receives an opportunity to hear such delightful music.

The characters in the Cantata were:
Ruth Mrs. E. Campbell
Naomi Miss Ruth Cairret
Orpah Mrs. C. E. Garland
Boaz Mr. A. R. Stanfield
Chorus of Elders, Handmaidens, Reapers, etc.

M. J. O'BRIEN.

The plank that O'Brien lays before our readers to-night, while it is of vital interest to all citizens, is more particularly meant for those who have recently been brought-in with the annexation of the territory now defined by the new Charter. O'Brien has promised that "the annex" from which he comes as their candidate, will pay into the civic funds next year an amount from sixty to eighty thousand dollars; he believes this will increase very rapidly and eventually be more than the total sum received by the Council from within the original boundary of the city. As the growth of residential homes springing up like mushrooms in the new extension or "annex" is phenomenal, it is therefore very vital to the interest of not only "the annex," but every resident of the city that more fire protection be provided. The time is fast approaching, in fact it is already here, for a new fire station to be erected on the corner of Cornwall Avenue, or a bit further north towards the Ropewalk, for to be on hand when emergencies arise. Too many demands are now made on our present division, and should a fire take place in the midst of this new centre of population, which is growing so rapidly and the attention of our present division be engaged elsewhere, we shall have the horror of another ninety-two fire. This plank, if adopted, would compel the Board of Fire Underwriters to reduce the exorbitant charges which they now make up in their insurance premiums, as the hazard of fire destruction would be reduced by at least forty per cent. A most alarming state of affairs now exists in our city in respect to the condition of telephone wires, many hundreds of them being obsolete since installing the new system. O'Brien says you citizens are living in a fool's paradise, and he wonders that there has not been scores of our people electrocuted long before this by these wires. There they lie about, dangling here, tied up there, within the reach of the thoughtless children, some of them in close proximity to those heavily charged wires that feed our street cars with electric energy, and our factories with motor power, and nobody seems to mind or care. Elect O'Brien and he will at once see if those responsible are not brought to attention and have this terrible menace removed, by compelling those whose business it is to get to work at once and not have our citizens, whose duties bring them out at night, more especially men, to the darkness not allowing the vision daylight affords, to be taking the terrible chances which they now, either knowingly or unknowingly, do, being electrocuted by a live wire that has become grounded. This is a very serious matter and the apathy of our citizens is indeed reprehensible. We feel constrained to say more on the vital subject, but space does not permit. But, we ask you, trader or voter, are we not justified in saying that to enable our city to get men in the Council whose foresight sees these evils and whose business it is to expose them in their naked truth will cause all voters to say we will each mark One Vote for O'Brien—adv.

How fine cooks make cream soups to-day

Let Your Grocer Be Your Milkman

After eating a rich cream soup somewhere, do you sigh and say to yourself "if I could only afford to use real cream, I could serve soup like that, too!"

The chances are that the soup you would like to duplicate was not made with cream at all. For many fine cooks have learned a culinary secret that makes of cream soups a banquet dish at every day cost.

The secret is—make them with Libby's Evaporated Milk.

For twenty years Libby has worked to give a finer and richer milk to consumers. Their plans were far-reaching. First they sought out the finest pasture lands in America. There they encouraged the breeding of splendid milk herds and the use of all the appliances and practices of scientific dairying. And there they established their milk condenseries so equipped as to assure absolute purity and cleanliness.

At those condenseries the whole milk from the fine herds, with the cream left in, is canned for you. Half the moisture is taken from it by evaporation. Nothing is added to it. So you have in this milk just the rich, pure product of the finest cows, but with twice the food value, twice the butter fat, of ordinary milk.

This milk makes cream soups so smooth, so rich, so mellow that they taste like the soups made by extravagant cooks.

Used in coffee, this milk gives a creamy richness at half the cost of cream.

Try it in your favorite recipe where cream or milk is called for.

Your grocer has it or can get it for you.

The Storm at Melrose.

The following is an account of the losses sustained by Melrose during the big storm of Oct. 23rd. Practically everything along the waterfront, including wharves, stages, piers and even stores, were swept away, carrying with them a large amount of fish and oil, etc. Thos. Doody and Michael Mackey lost a motor boat each, besides several other small boats. Melrose is a place where the people fish very late in the season. All the boats were on the grounds and got good catches of fish the day previous to the storm. The total amount of loss to personal property amounts to over $10,000. The people are so depressed in some cases that it renders it impossible for them to proceed with their fishery again, unless they get some help from the Government. There is also a considerable loss to Government property. The main road was swept away in several places, rendering it impassable. The pier slip, which was a great benefit to fishermen, was swept away. A bridge which expands the harbor, driven 500 yards from where it formerly stood. Several other bridges were destroyed also. Repairs are already in operation.

WHAT IS AN ELECTRIC CURRENT?

A Sort of Relay Race.

In an earlier series, we spoke of the subtle lines of energy which creep underground or in remote parts, but under our very noses everywhere. Every marble that the ball boy shoots along the ground gains as much energy as a fair coal-mine. It is really a mass of billions of minute particles, which all derive, in a state of inconceivably rapid motion. If we could upon this energy, which exists every variety of matter, it would be the wave of a magic wand over industrial world.

A man of science would probably say that it may be a very long time before we can do this, but in a sense we are doing it already. We now use in the electric current, we are really using the energy of the atoms. They are, in fact, particles of electricity; and in the enormous quantities which the modern industrial world derives from electricity we are really using part of the energy of the atoms.

Millions of Atoms.
 In order to understand it, let us picture what the copper wire, along which the "current" passes, really is. The eye it looks a perfectly solid continuous surface, but that is only because the human eye is very slow in its power. At a distance a wire looks like a continuous mass of metal, but if you could get close enough to the copper wire, with something far more powerful than the new super-microscope, you would see each bit of copper wire as a collection of millions of atoms of copper, not crowded together, but at some distance from each other. Further, if you could get a super-super-microscope, and look into the heart of each tiny atom of copper, you would find that it was composed of dozens of still more minute particles—the energetic little things which we call electrons, and which are really units of electricity. All matter is, ultimately, composed of them.

Wave of Electrons.

What is it that happens, then, when we say that a current is passing along the wire? The electrons are moving from atom to atom. It is a flow or current of electrons; but a flow of a very peculiar kind. The electrons do not break away altogether from the atoms of copper, to which they belong, and flow in a body along the wire, like water in a pipe. Each atom merely passes one electron on to the next atom. It is a sort of relay race. Atom number one passes an electron to atom number two; this hands on an electron to the next atom, and so on. But the speed of this relay race is extraordinary. In each inch of the copper wire there are hundreds of millions of atoms, each of which must pass an electron to its neighbour; yet the wave of electrons, as we may call it, sweeps along the wire at thousands of miles per second.

We can now understand what starts the current. Take a simple cell such as one has in the house for running the electric bell at the front door. It probably consists of pieces of zinc and carbon immersed in sal ammoniac. Zinc, we have found by experience, is a metal that is particularly ready to part with electrons from its atoms. When it is immersed in the chemical its atoms are detached, and they leave electrons behind them, which pass to the copper and accumulate. Thus we get in the course of time a charge of electrons—atoms of electricity, remember—and, when the circuit is completed by pressing the button, the wave of energy passes almost instantaneously, for such short distances, along the wire. We fix a bell, with appropriate mechanism, in the bath of the wave or current and—the electrons work for us. We have tapped the fundamental energy of the universe.

The Magnetic Field.

For generations a more powerful current—that is to say, a heavier rush of electrons—we use what is called a dynamo. In principle it is merely a mass of copper wire revolving rapidly between the poles of a powerful magnet. Round the poles of a magnet there is what we call a magnetic field. We may picture it to ourselves as a peculiar disturbance in the ether round the magnet; though what magnetism really is, and whether there is any ether, we are far from sure. However, that may be, the moment a coiled mass of copper wire enters the magnetic field, the flow of electrons in the wire is started. When the wire leaves the magnetic field, there is a flow in the opposite direction. So the coil of wire is driven very rapidly round and round between the poles of the magnet, and we get a powerful "alternating" current of electrons. The electrician can, by certain mechanism, convert it into a continuous current.

What Happens in a Thunderstorm.

The electric spark, the flash from the wheel of an electric train or from the wire of a tram on a frosty night, is—to use a colloquial phrase—the same thing only different. There we have no steady flow along the channel of a copper wire, but an outburst, a flood, a "stampede," as one writer has said. It is as when a water main bursts under the street, and the water rushes out in a disorderly flood. In the thunderstorm you have the same phenomenon on a grander scale. The floods of electrons which, as we saw in an earlier article, the sun pours all day long upon the earth, are largely received by the atoms of the higher atmosphere. The air is "electrified," or loaded with an excess of these little units of electricity. In the storm comes the periodical release, and the vast floods of electrons sweep from cloud to cloud, and down to the earth, with the familiar blinding flash and deafening roar. There is no solid "thunder-bolt," as people used to think. They probably confused meteoric atoms with crashes of electricity. It is a "stampede" of electrons to earth to restore the balance of positive and negative electricity in the air.—John O'London's Weekly.

POWER CUT OFF.
 The work of repairing the damage to the Petty Harbor Power House was completed yesterday, but slob ice which had formed, drifted down the pond and choked the gateway in the dam leading to the flume. As a consequence all power was cut off from 11 p.m. until 1 a.m. and the city was left in darkness for two hours. It was not until 11.20 a.m. to-day that the full power was turned on.
 Yesterday afternoon the motive power was cut off but sufficient "juice" was left on to light residences and shops.

SALE OF WORK CLOSED.

The sale of work by the Ladies' Association of St. Michael's Church, which was continued last night, attracted quite a large number of people. The various stalls and tables were cleared of their stocks and a handsome sum was realized. The proceeds will be devoted to Church purposes.

He Sleeps His Night of Stars.

He knew not that he went to die. He only knew fair play is sweet. This good dead lad from Someone's Street.
 Who was quite young, as once was I. Who loved the cold rain on his face. Who thrilled to some girl's jonquil grace.

He did not long for deathless fame. He only wished to feel, to live. To try the something life can give. As once you were, he was the same! Ah, bitter luck was dealt to him—The why-of it is gray, is dim.

He laid down love, he took up pain. Because he was a fair-play boy. Because he liked right more than joy. His loss of everything to gain To you and me and all the rest. Whose chance to grow is his bequest.

We dig his grave with honor now. We lay the broken boy to sleep In softest silence green and deep. The great of earth above him bow. What make we here toward Hate's successes?

What do we now to keep his Peace? Oh, ye who stand beside his bier. Think well of what is yielded here: A man's share in the wind-swept world.
 A man's sight of the dawn, pale pearl-ed.
 A man's part of all mysteries hurled By Fate, who weaves for us the gold. And about threads to which we hold. He gave us all he hoped from joy. Can we keep faith with this dead boy?
