CHAPTER XXXIV.

He had heard that the Earl of Swinford and his family were returning home, and a terrible longing came over him to see Gladys once more. The smallest scrap of news he devoured with avidity, and when alone she spent hours in the perusal of her letters, that he had read and re-read so often before.

Ada Craythorne understood why he was so gloomy and taciturn again. She knew of the visit of Spiers, but he did not mention one word of what had passed between them, and she was looking forward with glad eagerness to the time when she could make him happier than he ever hoped to be in this life.

It was six days after the flight of Agnes Matiland, and Ada could make no difference now; and it was with a heart throbbing in her throat that she decided to seek the baronet alone, and break to him the good news.

She waited until he had retired to his private room. He almost lived there now. It was rare that he entered the drawing-room; he evinced no desire for conversation. He never asked her to play or to sing. He left the entertaining of visitors to his mother entirely, merely saying that he was busy.

Ada followed him quickly, and he had not time to hide his annoyance, for she was in the room before he was able to close the door.

Courteous at all times, he waited for her to speak, but there was a nervous dread in his manner that he could not shake off.

"I know that you regard me as a nuisance, Sir Charles," Ada began; "but I want to tell you something that will make you happy!"

"Happy!" he exclaimed, with a faint smile. "I have done with hoping for such a thing as happiness, Miss Craythorne. I do not regard you as a nuisance. That is a cruel thrust it is I who am the nuisance—nuisance to myself and to every one about me. I apologize to you for showing my ugly temper; but it is not against you, believe me."

Her eyes became humid, and she strove to still the wild beating of her heart.

"I have come to return the favor that you granted me," she went on, but he interrupted her.

"Oh, the two hundred pounds! Let it rest until another time."

There was a touch of impatience in his voice, and he was surprised that she could look so absurdly happy when he was so miserable.

"Let it rest until another time," he repeated.

"No, Sir Charles, it must be settled now! I am going to make you glad to-night. Can you not see that the ambition of my life is to minister to your comfort?" she added, with passion, for his note of indifference had pained her.

"I know it; you are more than kind," he stammered, "but I have a malady which none may cure."

He smiled at her sadly, but was astonished by the transformation that passed over her beautiful face. Her passion was too strong for her control.

"Oh, Sir Charles, you are wrong—you are wrong! I can make you happy and hopeful again! I can bring peace into your life!"

She had dropped upon her knees, and was kissing his hand, her tears falling like rain. Her action was too sudden for him to prevent it, and his soothing tones only added to her frenzy.

"You must not think me unwomanly. It is my great love for you that speaks; it overpowers me. A woman has not a man's powers of suppression. A woman cannot find solace for a bleeding heart in dogs and books. Knowing all that I do of your past, you think that I am acting weakly. Ah, my love, it is the knowledge I have that gives me a right to come to you—that gives me a right to claim that love which I feel is mine!"

"No; I will not have you think I am here under false pretenses. One minute, you will read that which will tell you we are free!"

She stepped from the room, her hot blood surging through her veins—her eyes luminous with soft fire—she went to fetch for him the confession of the woman who had claimed to be his wife.

Hastings was completely bewildered. He had known for weeks that Ada cared for him, but he had never dreamed of such a passion as this. As for her language, he had no thought of her meaning. He had only thought that she had been carried away by her feelings—that she had been wrought to this pitch by his seemingly coldness and indifference.

"One minute, you shall read that which will tell you that we are free!"

The words had no real meaning to him, but he felt that there was something peculiar about them, and he waited for Ada's return with some curiosity not unmixed with apprehension. He knew how to act toward her after this outburst. The situation was most embarrassing for him, because he could not respond as she desired, and evidently expected.

The door opened almost noiselessly and closed again, but he was afraid to look up, until he heard a savage cackle, and became aware that it was not Ada who had returned. Instead, he was confronted by the apparition-like appearance of the bloated rascal Spiers!

Hastings was too astounded to speak for a moment—then he exclaimed, angrily.

"What do you want here, sir? I told you not to thrust your objectionable person into my presence again."

"Oh, no, you didn't, my fine young gentleman," jeered Spiers, with a horrible scowl. "When I left you a few days since it was to obtain proof as to what you had done to Lucy. You remember what I promised you, eh? I promised to kill you if you lied to me? You told me that you had never spoken to her—that you did not know that she was under your roof—did you not?"

"Certainly," was the impatient reply, and Hastings made a movement toward the bell-rope.

"Stop! One moment! Only one more question!"

He was so excited that he did not hear anyone enter and pause, horrified, a few feet in front of him. Ada had come back, and recognized the man she had met in the lane, and something told her that he was there for some evil purpose.

"One more question!" he repeated—"only one! Have you, or have you not, put Lucy beyond my reach?"

"I do not know the woman. Be gone!"

"You lie!" His voice rose to a shriek. "I went for proof, and I have found it. I went to Lupus, and we know that you gave my poor Lucy a check for two hundred pounds—payable to bearer. She cashed it nearly a week since and has gone—gone! Stolen from me by you—curse you!"

Hastings was too astonished to speak. A check for two hundred pounds! He turned his eyes upon Miss Craythorne, and that moment was fatal. He wished her to speak—to make some explanation. She alone had had such a sum from him. What had she to do with this man—or with the woman he had married?

As he half-turned, a revolver flashed from the breast pocket of Spiers' shabby overcoat. It was pointed at him with hate and triumph.

With the report that followed almost instantly was mingled a woman's heartrending shriek, and, casting aside the smokeless weapon, the maniac forced his way through the window and fled, howling:

"Duped! Ruined! Revenged!"

When the servants burst into the room, the master of the house lay unconscious on the floor, the lifeblood oozing from a tiny hole in his breast. Miss Craythorne was bending over him, and they never forgot the awful agony in her face.

Wrecks Belong to the King.

SOME OF THE LAWS WHICH RULE OUR SHIPPING ARE SELDOM OBSERVED, THOUGH STILL IN FORCE.

Some little time ago a plumber's labourer was hurt by a falling water-trough, when working aboard a liner in the Royal Albert Dock. He applied for compensation, and this was granted on the curious ground that a ship in dock is "part of the plant that is being used from the quay to load it."

There are all sorts of odd points in shipping law, and some of them need revision. Many of our passenger and emigration regulations date back to Acts made sixty or seventy years ago, and are quite out of date to-day.

For instance, there is still a regulation in force that passenger vessels may not carry passengers on more than two decks, though, of course, the law is a dead letter, and there would be serious trouble if any attempt were made to enforce it. Another absurd regulation, which, I believe, has never been repealed, dates back to the days before steam, and is to the effect that any vessel carrying emigrants must carry six months' provisions.

Even a Cat Makes a Difference. All British ships are periodically examined to see that they carry proper lifeboats and lifebelts, and that these are in good condition. The trouble is that foreign ships using British ports can set these regulations at naught.

A ship wrecked upon the British coasts is Crown property, but since former British monarchs have in times past granted certain of their rights to subjects, it is sometimes the lord of the manor who profits. For instance a vessel wrecked anywhere near the Cinque Ports belongs to the warden of these ports.

In order to constitute a wreck, the remains of the vessel must be fast on the land, and there must be no life saved. If so much as a dog or cat is left alive on the wreck, the wreckage is vested in the Crown for a year and a day; at the end of that time if not claimed, it becomes Crown property.

CORK CITY EVACUATED.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The Central News reports that Irregular troops have evacuated Cork city. The report says that Victoria Hotel, military barracks, and the newspaper offices have been blown up.

THE BATTLE OF CORK.
LONDON, Aug. 10. The end of the war in Ireland is in sight and the fall of Cork is hourly expected, says a general headquarters bulletin from the Irish National Army troops recently landed near Cork; so says a despatch dated from Cork to the Evening News this afternoon. The Irregulars have a full squadron of cavalry to oppose the National's advance.

FIRES IN CORK.
DUBLIN, Aug. 10. National forces entered the city of Cork today, according to an official statement here tonight. Patrick St. Victoria Hotel, military barracks, and newspaper offices are a flame, following dynamite explosions which blew up many buildings.

RALEIGH'S CREW ON EMPRESS.
MONTREAL, Aug. 10. Word was received by wireless here that the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of France, outward bound, had stopped at Point Amour, and taken six hundred officers and men of the Raleigh's crew, and the Galcutta-talking the remainder. Rescued officers and men will be taken to Southampton.

NEW MORATORIUM PROPOSALS.
LONDON, Aug. 10. That modified proposals for relieving the financial predicament of Germany will be submitted at to-morrow's Conference of Allied statesmen here, by Britain or Belgium, was hinted in British circles tonight, while in French quarters it is regarded as probable that in spite of French opposition the majority of delegates would decide in favor of granting Germany a moratorium to tide over Germany's August 15th payment, and that a further conference will be called in Brussels in September.

Episcopal Visitation to Stephenville Crossing.

His Lordship Bishop Renouf, accompanied by Fr. DuBourdeau, paid his first official visit to the parish of Stephenville on the afternoon of the 2nd ult. At two p.m. he arrived at Stephenville Crossing, and was accorded a warm and loyal reception. The inhabitants of this settlement, in the past, so loyal to Church and State spared no effort in demonstrating their reverence and affection for him when he visited them for the first time as their chief Pastor. Flags and streamers bearing appropriate mottoes gayly fluttered in the summer breeze singing their psalms of welcome, a welcome reflected on the faces of all from the tiniest tot to the most aged. The pastor of the parish, Rev. Fr. Adams with his people received the Bishop at the entrance of the beautiful arch erected in front of the mission chapel.

All being in readiness the Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to forty candidates. In the presence of the largest congregation that had ever thronged the chapel. At the close of the ceremony the Bishop addressed them in words of fatherly wisdom, reminding them of the obligations that henceforth were to be theirs, and exhorted them to always act as true soldiers of Christ, not only in youth, but in years to come when the duties of Catholic citizens would gradually devolve upon them. On leaving the church the Bishop and clergy were hospitably entertained at luncheon by Mrs. A. Nardin, after which the party proceeded by carriage to Stephenville proper. The ill effects of a dusty drive over a badly conditioned road were soon dispelled by the manifestations of welcome met with at all points through the town. The profuse display of bunting at every home, and the substantial arches were visible proof of the loyal feeling that surged within the hearts of these truly Catholic people.

Sunday, however, proved to be the red letter day in the annals of the parish. The inclement weather conditions of the early morn did not prevent a large congregation at all masses, and at the High Mass sung by the Pastor, the spacious church was filled by devout worshippers. In the afternoon the Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to seventy-five children, and the prayers of their parents and numerous friends mingled with those of the Prelate, that having received the Holy Ghost in the impressionable age, these young soldiers may subsequently become fervent Catholics and consequently good citizens.

At its conclusion his Lordship advanced to the Altar rails, and in fluent language exhorted the newly confirmed to ponder upon the fact that they are no longer children devoid of spiritual strength and without an object in life, but rather are in youth-ful soldiers with serious struggles to face, yet certain of final victory should they remain faithful to the leader in whose army they had been just enlisted. The words addressed by appropriate words addressed to the adult members of the parish, who so unflinchingly took such pains to give their Bishop such a royal reception. Particular reference was made to the splendid condition of the parish in both the spiritual and material line, and special tributes of praise were offered to ponder upon the fact that they are no longer children devoid of spiritual strength and without an object in life, but rather are in youth-ful soldiers with serious struggles to face, yet certain of final victory should they remain faithful to the leader in whose army they had been just enlisted.

CABLES TIED UP.
LONDON, Aug. 10. Americans are paying over $1.00 a word to send messages from England to New York, taking a fifteen thousand mile round, by way of Lisbon, Cape Verde Islands, and Buenos Aires. This is due to the tie-up of trans-Atlantic cables, held by Irish Irregulars. Communications between Great Britain and the United States continue to be gravely affected. Irregulars hold ten cables. There is little prospect of early resumption of normal services. In the meantime press associations and newspaper correspondents are limited to a small fraction of their usual service because of the tie up.

CANADA'S CROPS.
OTTAWA, Aug. 10. Canada's wheat crop this year is estimated at 220,965,000 bushels, or slightly more than 20 million bushels larger than the final estimate of last year's crop, by Dominion Bureau statistics. The estimated yield of oats is 509,752,000 bushels compared with 426,232,900 bushels last year, and of barley 64,881,000 bushels against 59,709, 100 bushels in 1921. The estimated yield of potatoes is 102,974,000 bushels smaller than last year's financial estimate which was 107,364,000 bushels.

Forty-Three Years in the Public Service--The Evening Telegram

Last Night's Baseball.

LIONS TRIM WANDERERS.

A fair attendance of fans at St. George's field last evening witnessed a first rate game of ball, and saw the Lions play ring-a-rosy around the Wanderers. The Blue and Whites went to bat first, but did not get any marks. In the second half of the first the red stockings notched up one. The second, third, fourth and fifth innings found the Hartnett crew with a series of ciphers to their credit. In the sixth they poked out for one, and the 7th for three--total 4. In their half of the third stanza the Hiltz gang took charge of the batting, knocking the Wanderers pitches all over the field to the tune of eight runs. In their half of the fourth and fifth they failed to connect, but in the sixth they added another, making their total 10. Donnelly and Gabriel were the Wanderers battery with Conroy and Martin on the same job for the Lions. The Blue and White pitcher had thirteen strikeouts credited to his account, while the Gray and Red lad had but six. A very fine bit of double play was done by the Wanderers. The chief feature of the game, and received unstinted applause. Following is the score by innings:--

Wanderers	0	0	0	0	1	3	4

Government to Chart Unknown Ocean Depths.

PHILADELPHIA.—Two former mine sweepers, turning from the pursuits of war to those of peace and science, are being remodelled in Delaware river shipyards, and are nearly ready to weigh anchor to start on an indefinitely long cruise in the Pacific Ocean for the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. They are steamers Pioneer and Discoverer, formerly the Auk and the Osprey, which saw service in the North Sea. Now they are to be equipped with the finest scientific instruments for sounding and surveying. Some time during the summer they are to pass through the Panama Canal and proceed up the Pacific Coast to Alaska to sound and survey uncharted territory. Contrary to general belief, it was said, there still remains much uncharted territory in that region, and many places show channels incorrectly marked and sounded. Also some places once correctly marked and sounded, have been altered by the constant action of the waves. Eleven officers and 53 men have been enlisted to man each vessel, and with the exception of the two commanding officers the crews have been selected. The Coast and Geodetic Survey has taken over also a third mine sweeper, the Flamingo, from the Navy Department, now lying at Portsmouth, N. H., enlisting a crew. Following alterations, she probably will join her sisters in Alaskan waters.

Fear of Turkish Occupation

PROMOTES ARMENIAN EXODUS.

ALEPPO, SYRIA, (Associated Press)—Armenians have begun an exodus from the Aleppo and Alexandretta district, according to reports reaching Aleppo from the surrounding country. They are fearful, it is said, of the possibility of Turkish occupation, and they know what this means from the experiences of their countrymen in Cilicia.

Rumors are current here of some understanding between Paris and the Ankara Turks by which France undertakes between Turkish Nationalists the districts of Aleppo, Alexandretta and Deir Ul Zor. This would account for the Armenian unrest. The reports, however, cannot be confirmed, but nevertheless the restlessness continues. It is argued here that the French might take such a step as this in order to lessen her military responsibilities in Syria. Recent disorders in these territories have been serious.

No New Treaty.

Dispatches from Paris last March said that Henri Franklin Bouillon, acting for France, had signed a new treaty with the Ankara Turks which contemplated the abandonment of the non-Moslem populations in specified Turkish territory. Mr. Bouillon, however, made haste to deny this statement in unmeasured terms.

A despatch from Constantinople, June 13, said that Colonel Mouglin, unofficial French representative to the Turkish Nationalist Government, had reached Ankara, and that his mission was to clear up certain misunderstandings consequent upon the non-execution of the Franco-Turkish agreement.

DENMARK STUDIES EFFECTS OF PROHIBITION.

COPENHAGEN.—A Danish delegation which has been studying the effects of prohibition in Finland, doubts whether it will be possible ever to carry through effective prohibition in Denmark. The delegates consider that the best solution of the question, as far as Denmark is concerned, is the free sale of intoxicants very heavily taxed.

Obituary.

MISS MARION SELBY HOLDEN.

The Angel of Death hovered silently during the past week over the house of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Holden, and on Wednesday last carried their pure and spotless soul of their dear daughter Marion, to the bosom of her God, to her home in Paradise. To many of us who are blinded by the joys and pleasures of life, death appears but a sad and forbidding spectre, but in this particular case it has been robbed of its terrors and served as a beautiful transition from earth to the realms of Heaven. Oh! grave where is thy victory. Oh! death where is thy sting? The deceased lady had barely entered the threshold of womanhood, being in her twenty-second year, and has been one of the best known ladies of St. John's, possessed of a dignity and charm, most engaging qualities of mind and a warm and generous nature. The deceased was in a somewhat delicate state of health for the past two years, and was for some time in the Sanitarium at Saranac, U.S.A. She bore her illness with truly Christian fortitude and resignation to the will of God. Her prayers were entreated that she would have eventually recovered, but a short time ago she was subjected to an attack of meningitis, but notwithstanding the skill of her medical attendant, and the fond care and attention of a devoted mother and friends, she rendered her soul to God as recorded above. To the family of the deceased the most respectful sympathy will be expressed in their bereavement. It will at least be a consolation to them to know that the whole community condole with them in their great sorrow. There are left to mourn their sad loss father, mother, three brothers and one sister. The eldest brother Eric, was in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment during the Great War. Hon. Donald Morrison at present of Hollywood, California, is an uncle of deceased. The funeral took place last evening in the Church of England Cemetery and was largely attended.

Never Travel Without Horns.

COLONY, East Africa.—The tooth of a single motor horn has been found sufficient, in Africa, to quiet stamped lions and cause a trio of flesh-hunting lions to slink away into the bushes. Two native drivers were recently conducting a wagon drawn by 18 oxen to the railroad camp, in the wilds near Nakuru, the site of the new Usin Gishu railroad, when the spans were attacked by three lions. The drivers fled to nearby trees. The oxen became panic stricken and dashed down the rough road, dragging along the body of one ox, killed by the lions, with the swaying wagon behind them. The lions followed their prey. This was the mad procession that greeted a lone motorist at a curve of the road. He had no rifle, and it was almost an unconscious movement that took his hand to the horn button. At the first sound the lions seemed non-plussed. The motorist then blew loud and long, as the ordinary and sustained whistling above the clamor of the frightened animals, the lions slunk away among the rocks, headed for the shelter of the bush, and the oxen swung clear of the dust-covered automobile and came to a stop at the side of the road.

Costly But Comfortable.

MOSCOW.—Passenger travel on the principal Russian railways is again approaching a state of comfort and luxury for those who can pay the price. There is a waiting list for places on between Moscow and Petrograd, Moscow and Odessa, Moscow and Shita, Siberia, and other important terminals. Restaurant wagons have been put on some trains. The fares and berth charges have been increased in Soviet rubles to equal the pre-revolution gold rate. There are no restrictions on first-class travel and there generally is a waiting list for places on these luxurious cars. The great majority of Russians, however, still travel packed like sardines in dingy third-class cars or box cars, which contrast sharply with the cleanliness of the accommodations afforded those who can pay for them.

Fighting and Bible Reading Inseparable In China.

NEW YORK.—Wars and politics around Peking do not interfere with the sale of the scriptures. The American Bible Society has announced that it recently shipped from its headquarters in Shanghai 127,000 bibles to the sub-agency in Peking. This was the largest single shipment ever sent out in the history of the Society's work in China. A year ago a record-breaking consignment of 588 packages, although part of this order, fell into the hands of robbers along the Yangtze River, the books were ultimately all delivered.

Club Root.

Every Vegetable Grower Must Wage a Ceaseless Campaign Against This Pest.

Club-root is a disease not only of cabbages, cauliflowers, turnips, and radishes, but of many common weeds, such as wild mustard, shepherd's purse, and other cruciferous plants. Whether modern methods of intensive cultivation have anything to do with its rapid spread does not matter. The disease is there, and the injury caused to root crops is enormous. Whole fields are at times so affected that the crop is an absolute failure; in fact, owing to the microscopic nature of the organism, farmers have become so baffled that turnip growing has been abandoned in some places.

Some Little Germ—

The disease is essentially a European one; but farmers "over the water" are lamenting that in many districts it has obtained a firm hold. It is easily introduced into sour or undrained land by diseased seeds or plants. Once established in a field it rapidly spreads to adjacent ground, through soil carried on machinery, the feet of animals, or by rains carrying soil from field to field. It does not take hold of ground kept in a healthy state so readily as on soured ground.

The disease is caused by a tiny organism, and the roots attacked by the parasite become distorted and swollen to many times their normal size. They are rendered so feeble that they are unable to absorb nourishment from the soil, or to transfer the food or water to the "stomach" of the plant.

This functional failure of the roots starves and stunts the plant. During warm weather, the leaves will turn yellow, and ultimately die. The last stages of the disease are marked by the roots developing a black soft rot. In the case of turnips, this rot may continue and destroy most of crop after it has been placed in storage.

There is grave danger in growing the same crop in the same ground year after year. This is just the system of land culture, which to a large extent is responsible for the club-root epidemic. At times, when space is limited, it may be necessary to have the ground planted out in the same crop; but the system cannot be too strongly condemned.

Not Fit for Animals.

As with most other things, prevention is better than cure, much may therefore be done to eliminate the disease by crop rotation, soil drainage, and the judicious application of lime. It is also essential that roots which are diseased should be collected and destroyed. As myriads of germs become liberated in soil or manure when the root decomposes, the necessity for this precaution is obvious. To feed animals with diseased roots is asking for trouble, and virtually perpetuating a soil fungus of the vilest type. All vegetables which show the least sign of disease cannot, of course, be rejected, but if used as a cattle feed it is imperative that they be properly boiled first.

Londoners Vision Air Squadrons Bombing City

LONDON. (Associated Press.)—London is still thinking of what might happen to it in case enemy airships again were to fly over the city, and the picture is not a pleasant one. The executive committee of the Parliamentary Air Committee has sent a letter to the Prime Minister in which, after referring to what was accomplished by air fighters in the European war, it proceeds to draw an appalling picture of the next air war. The letter says:—"The bombs dropped on London during the last war averaged less than 100 pounds in weight. Bombs or torpedoes are now carried of 4,000 pounds weight. Bombs of this character dropped on London could readily be conceived. There is not merely a possibility but a great probability that in the event of war, this country would be raided and London and other towns destroyed by squadrons or even fleets of airplanes, travelling at 150 miles an hour at a height of 20,000 feet, silent as to their engines and certainly by night invisible."

The committee prophesies that all great wars in future will begin with terrific battles in the air, and says that if the country suffers a real defeat in this first battle, the victor will in a few days destroy her ports, her railways, her munition factories and her capital by intensive bombardment from the air. It considers that at present England is not in a position successfully to combat an air attack, and that the Government should appoint a strong commission to investigate.

The Irish Constitution

When the text of the Constitution of the Irish Free State was made public by the Provisional Government last June, British negotiators found it unsatisfactory on four main points, which were: (1) the formula of the oath of allegiance to the King was not sufficiently explicit; (2) the authority of the British Governor-General was not recognized; (3) the appeal to the Privy Council was not adopted, an Irish Court of Appeals being preferred; and (4) a claim was put forward to the right of the Free State to manage its own affairs. Provision for the draft of a Constitution had been made in the Anglo-Irish Peace Treaty, and a Committee of Free Staters headed by Arthur Griffith completed the work and going to London submitted it to the British officials who declared that the first draft was not in accord with the treaty on the four points named. Six questions were put to the Irish leaders in order to ascertain if the Provisional Government would be able to bring forward a Constitution to which the Imperial Government could give assent. Later Mr. Griffith and his colleagues returned to London bringing with them a draft which eliminated the objections originally raised but containing others, which, however, after intensive discussion were finally overcome and the Irish Constitution was declared to be in accord with the Treaty. This was subsequently confirmed by Mr. Churchill in the Commons. Commenting on this result Mr. Griffith said that "the Constitution is that of a free and democratic State, and under it, Ireland, for the first time in centuries, secures the power to control and develop her own resources and to lead her own national life." The document itself consists of a preamble, dealing with fundamental rights, legislative provisions, the executive, the judiciary and transitional provisions. The preamble declares that where the Treaty and the Constitution clash, the former shall prevail. It is laid down under "Fundamental Rights" that all power comes from the people, that liberty of person, freedom of conscience and speech, education, shall be inviolable. The King and the two houses shall form the Legislature. All citizens, male and female, over 21 years of age are eligible to vote for members of the lower house. For the Senate only those over thirty years can vote. All members of both houses must take the oath of allegiance. The Chamber has exclusive power over all money bills. The Senate has the power of amendment but not of rejection, the Royal veto obtaining, following Canadian usage. The new State is not to take part in any war without the assent of the Imperial Parliament, excepting in the event of actual invasion. The Executive, modelled on the Swiss Federal Council plan, will contain twelve ministers. In appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, South African precedent will be adhered to. "All in all," writes a contributor to Current History, "the Irish leaders feel that this Constitution, Ireland's first essay in statecraft, holds many noteworthy and democratic features, and above all that it is distinctly oriented in accordance with Irish national aspirations. What ever disputes and objections it may still give rise to, they say, the mere fact that such a Constitution has been preliminarily agreed to is bound to exert a powerful influence on Irish imagination. They regard it as the Charter of Celtic civilization resting upon the Imperial system as upon an indispensable buttress to Irish liberty."

Not Reported To-day.

No word had been received from Point Amour up to the hour of going to press, of the condition of H.M.S. Raleigh, stranded near there since Tuesday. A Canadian Press message published in another column states that 600 of the crew are being taken to England by S.S. Empress of France, while the remainder is being transferred to H.M.S. Calcutta. This would indicate that the cruiser has been abandoned. Speaking of the Raleigh, the Western Star of August 9th, says: "H.M.S. Raleigh, flying the flag of Admiral Pakenham, accompanied by H.M.S. Calcutta, arrived in Port Wednesday afternoon. That evening a band concert was given on board the Raleigh. The following afternoon Admiral Pakenham transferred his flag to the Calcutta and left by that ship for Port au Port, en route to St. John's. In the evening the Raleigh's band came on shore and gave a concert at the 'Government grounds,' for which the Magistrate extended thanks on behalf of the community. The ship sailed the following morning for Hawke's Bay, en route to St. John's. The Calcutta has visited here on a previous occasion, but this is the first time the Raleigh has been here. She is a ship of twelve thousand tons displacement, being a light cruiser, with a speed of over 37 knots. She is 605 feet long and carries a complement of over seven hundred officers and men. She is a new ship, being launched in 1919 and is now being launched in the year of the 15th anniversary of the British North American Squadron."

Personal.

Mr. W. J. Darcy left by the Prospero yesterday on the round trip.
Mr. R. J. Green, of the Telegram staff, is spending a vacation at Topsail with his family.
Mr. and Mrs. Stanley C. Worne of Peterboro, Ontario, arrived by the S.S. Manoa this week. They are highly esteemed friends of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. R. Williams, Florence Grove, whose guests they are whilst visiting Newfoundland.
Miss Gladys L. Roberts, who has been spending her holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Roberts, "Sudbury," leaves by the "Silvia" tomorrow to resume her course in nursing at Long Island College Hospital, Brooklyn, New York. Miss May Calver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Calver, Duckworth Street, accompanies Miss Roberts and will on arrival at New York, enter upon a course at the same hospital.
Dr. Harold Sinclair Tait, son of Dr. J. Sinclair Tait of this city, has recently been appointed assistant to Dr. Lewis Gregory Cole, the eminent X-ray specialist of New York. Dr. Tait has taken up X-ray work exclusively and we congratulate him on his success as noted above. Dr. Cole is the leading Roentgenologist in New York.
Mr. Thomas G. Potter of Montreal arrived yesterday by the Manoa, and is a guest of his father-in-law, Inspector General Hutchings. Mr. Potter has been spending the summer here with his parents.
Young Girl Assaulted.
CULPRIT ARRESTED MAKING GET-AWAY.
From passengers who arrived by yesterday's express it is learned that an assault on a young girl—of a most serious character—was committed near LaManche a few days ago, and the culprit fearing arrest tried to get out of the country. He was, however, located in a baggage car at Port aux Basques and placed under arrest. A Constable has been dispatched to bring the prisoner to the city for trial.

Governor Leaves.

GOES TO LONDON VIA HALIFAX.
His Excellency the Governor leaves by S.S. Silvia to-morrow for Halifax en route to London. During his absence on leave, the Chief Justice, Sir W. H. Horwood, will be Administrator of the Colony. It is predicted that Sir Charles will not return to the Colony as his period of Governorship has expired. He came to Newfoundland in December, 1917, and has therefore been with us nearly five years. Should rumor be correct that the present leave of absence completes his term as the representative of His Majesty in Newfoundland, we trust that such honors as may be compatible with long and meritorious service will be conferred upon his Excellency. During his residence in Newfoundland Sir Charles has taken the deepest interest in the general welfare and resources, and the flora and fauna of Newfoundland was particularly interesting to him. During his term as Governor, His Excellency had many affairs of great importance to occupy his time, so that he could not devote such attention to the flora and fauna as he could have wished. His Excellency recently forwarded to the Museum two sets of Lepidoptera and other insects. The collection is very valuable and interesting, and will prove an addition to the collection already in the Museum. It is needless to say that the thoughtful kindness of His Excellency is fully appreciated by the officials in charge of that institution. The Telegram takes this opportunity of wishing his Excellency bon voyage.

St. George's Coal Fields.

NEGOTIATIONS PENDING WITH AMERICAN COMPANY.
Mr. T. J. Freeman who returned by the Silvia yesterday after a trip to Canada and the United States in connection with the St. George's Coal Fields has been successful in opening negotiations with an American Company, whose coal requirements run into over a million tons annually. This concern is prepared to take over the St. George's Coal Fields property and work it on an extensive scale, as an auxiliary to their own mines and for local consumption. Mr. Freeman met with considerable delay by reason of a downward revision of prices elsewhere, which he says has far reaching effects on industry almost bordering on panic. He was obliged to return here to discuss some features of the present negotiations with the local directorate. Mr. Freeman returns to America shortly with the hope of finalizing matters, and bringing down with him the engineers of the Company.

Express Passengers.

Digby In Port.
HAS RECORD PASSENGER LIST.
S.S. Digby, Capt. Chambers, arrived at the Furness Wharf pier at 7.30 a.m. After leaving Liverpool fine weather prevailed to within 500 miles of St. John's when fog set in, detaining the ship for 30 hours. The Digby has on board a record number of passengers, 81 in all, forty-four of whom are landing here. The ship has also the largest freight for this port since the war. An enjoyable concert was held on board Thursday night, in which the ship's staff rendered most of the items on the programme. Olwen Pritchard, saloon steward, being the star of the evening. Major N. de H. Tutnell as Chairman was assisted by Mr. E. R. Watson. A collection made for the usual charities amounting to $21.14. 6. was allocated as follows:

His Diary.

Aug. 11.—Cometh news to-day to this place (Hawke's Harbor) of the wrecking of His Majesty's Cruiser Raleigh, the ship having taken ground at Point Amour, which is in the strait known as that of Belle Isle. A mighty and happening indeed, and one which will mean the Court-martinning of the Captain and his principal officers, for my Lords of the Admiralty are very strict in such cases as I do learn from a perusal of the diary of my ancestor, who at one time was Secretary to the Admiralty, and had many like matters to deal with in his day. My father here is dropping to me, saying I shall be loathe to leave, yet feel that there are many things at home that I should be given my immediate attention, therefore with great reluctance must I make preparations for my departure and return with all speed to my duties.

Police Court.

A laborer of Cabot Street charged with being drunk, was released on paying charges.
A housewife of the Blackmarsh Road, charged with refusing or not appearing on a summons for assault on a child who had to be attended by a doctor, was fined $5 or 14 days. On another charge of damaging the roof of the home of the child's parents the housewife was fined another five dollars. After sentence was passed she asked his Honor what was going to be done about her husband's pants, which had been stolen by one of the women witnesses against her. The court did not decide.

Gasolene Price Drops.

By the Journal of Trade and Commerce Bulletin of August 4th, we note that there has been a drop of two cents per gallon in the price of Gasoline. This should be welcome news to all those who use petrol for motive power in cars and boats. The price of kerosene was reduced by one cent per gallon. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey dropped gasoline 2 cents throughout its territory, and the Transcontinental and Texas met the cuts in both gasoline and kerosene. A downward revision of prices elsewhere is awaited, as with nothing moving out of the refineries owing to the almost total suspension of export business the situation is looked upon as decidedly weak, notwithstanding the large absorption of surplus stocks through home consumption.

Missing Since Yesterday.

FRIENDS SEEK MIDDLE AGED MAN.
A resident of the higher levels named Wm. Ryan who is missing from home since yesterday morning is being sought by his friends who are anxious for his safety. The man, who is about 45 years old, and of a sandy complexion is in poor health. When he left home he was wearing dark clothes with a light skull cap.

No Fish to Export.

The Sub-Collector at Exploits has reported to the Deputy Minister of Customs as follows:—"There is no cod fish to export from this section. Some headline fishermen have but two qts. under salt. Traps have taken only a few barrels each."

Shipping Notes.

S.S. Digby sails for Halifax to-morrow evening, or at daylight on Sunday.
S.S. Sachem leaves Halifax to-morrow night, and is due here Monday afternoon.

Schooner Arthur H. Zwicker from Lunenburg has arrived at Horwood to load lumber for New York.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

CONFLICTING REPORTS.
LONDON, Aug. 11.
All military and police barracks in Cork are burning, according to a report of a Government aviator who flew over the Irregulars stronghold late yesterday, says a Times despatch from Dublin, but Nationalist forces consolidated six miles outside had not invested the city. Other despatches say the Nationalists have entered Cork. The Daily Mail correspondent says a National force has landed on the Kerry coast, closing all gaps, and hemming rebels on the Mallow, Fermoy, Mitchelstown line, where they must make their last stand. Dublin despatches say communication with Cork, except by sea, is virtually impossible, hence exact reports of the fighting are unknown. A vessel arriving from Cork, brings a report that the Admiralty building and British Naval Hospital at Queens-town are blazing, also other large buildings, and frequent explosions are occurring. It is reported the rebels have evacuated Clonmel.

SHORT MORATORIUM.

PARIS, August 11.
A despatch to Havre Agency says Germany will be granted a moratorium until the end of this year.

EXPLOSION ON ADRIATIC.

HALIFAX, Aug. 11.
Wireless messages to the Naval Staff early this morning, announced that the White Star Liner Adriatic, Liverpool to New York, was sending out S.O.S. calls, three hundred miles out, owing to an explosion in number three hold. Later advice says that two men were killed and several injured, but no structural damage, and the steamer is proceeding to New York.

WIRELESS MEN MAY STRIKE.

TORONTO, Aug. 11.
Three hundred Marconi operators scattered all over the world, may go on strike if the Conciliation Board fails to effect satisfactory adjustment of wage grievances. This situation has arisen over the fifteen per cent wage reduction, put into effect from January 15th.

HALIFAX, Aug. 11.

This morning U.S.S. Olympia bearing Admiral McCully, which set out yesterday morning to assist H.M.S. Raleigh on Labrador Coast, returned to port eight o'clock, having been advised that no further assistance is required.

Wedding Bells.

TUCKER-CLARKE.
A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday evening at St. Phillips, when Capt. Ralph Clarke, son of Capt. John Clarke of Brigus and Miss Hettie Tucker, graduate nurse of the General Hospital and daughter of Mr. Tucker of St. Phillips, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, by the Rev. Mr. Tuik of Portugal Cove. The bride looked charming in a dress of cream satin, pearl trimmed, with a bridal veil and orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of carnations and sweet peas. She was given away by her father, and was attended by Miss Florence Clarke and Miss Dorothy Chalker, sister and cousin of the groom respectively, and both looked very attractive in dresses of Rose Canton Crepe, with hats to match. The part of flowers was very daintily performed by Miss Jean Bowden. The groom was attended by Mr. Walter Roberts. The groom's present to the bride was a cheque, to the bride's maid's birthstone rings, and to the best man, cuff links. After the ceremony the bride and groom motored to Holywood, where the honeymoon will be spent, after which they will leave by the Manco for their future home in Montreal. A large number of presents were received, both costly and useful, which showed the esteem in which the contracting parties are held. We wish Capt. and Mrs. Clarke every happiness on the matrimonial voyage.

INTERVIEW WITH PHOTOPLAY-WRIGHT.

In a statement issued from his headquarters at the Cochrane Hotel today, Garrett Eblason, Fort, novelist and photoplaywright, said that the Newfoundland motion picture project was well under way and would be ready to go into actual production in a few days. After carefully considering the great quantity of original material so kindly submitted by resident authors, Mr. Fort, in conference with Ernest Shipman and the officials of the Newfoundland Films, Ltd., decided that the best story for present purposes would be "Rip Tide," the well-known novel by Kenneth O'Hara, Mr. O'Hara, an author and director of prominence, has just completed an Ernest Shipman Special at Sault Ste. Marie, and has joined Mr. Shipman in Halifax. Mr. Fort is leaving on the "Silvia" to meet them in Halifax for a joint conference. He will return next Thursday, and expects to bring Mr. O'Hara with him.

Final arrangements in New York and Halifax are being made to engage an all-star cast for the picture, and at the present time, it is expected that the Company will arrive in about two weeks. While only well known and favorite artists are being chosen for the principal roles, it is Mr. Shipman's intention to choose a number of talented persons from the city to interpret some of the less important parts. There will also be a mob scene of considerable proportion, affording an opportunity for some three or four hundred people to participate. Further details will be made public upon the arrival of Mr. O'Hara, who is to have charge of all casting arrangements. Mr. O'Hara will direct the picture, as announced previously, thus insuring success through sympathetic treatment of a subject of which he is thoroughly familiar, and close cooperation with the producing unit. The author-director idea, a comparative innovation within the last year, has met with unqualified success in great centers of motion picture production like Hollywood and New York. Authors like Rupert Hughes, Mary Roberts Rinehardt, Clarence Budington Kelland, Maurice Maeterlinck, and Gouverneur Morris have proved themselves capable of turning out the great cinematic successes of the year, and with Mr. O'Hara's long experience in both the literary and dramatic field, the result of the combination is certain to be a photoplay "knockout." Mr. Fort is confident that the first Newfoundland picture, "RIP TIDE," will not only come from Newfoundland, but also one of the greatest dramatic pictures of the year. Combining a warm heart interest and sympathetic treatment of the lives of the Newfoundland people, with a series of dramatic smashes culminating in a terrific climax, both spectacular and novel, "Rip Tide" will be a photoplay which will rank with the best.

Sportsman Shot Bear With Revolver.

Dr. Clinton B. Parker, of Brooklyn, N.Y., spent a few weeks on Upper Humber and secured forty-five salmon. His companion, F. J. Burden, landed fifteen. They enjoyed the trip very much. A Western Star correspondent had a chat with Dr. Parker on his return to Curling, and asked him if he had any experience with bears this trip. The doctor made no reply except inviting the Star man to his room at the Davis Hotel. On entering the doctor said he had learned a lesson from his last year's experience never to go into the woods without some firearms, and this year he had provided himself with a small six shooter, "and there," pointing to a table in a corner of the room, "is the result of this precaution." Upon the table were the skull bones and paws of bruin. The doctor stated that they were annoyed by the bear somewhat the same as last year, and their efforts to drive him away were of no avail, and so he had to bring in operation his little six-shooter, but not before they had lost a man and some other wares. The party went from Curling in company with Frank McIsaac, as guide, to fish at North Branch, Codroy—Western Star.

Bar Haven Church Ceremonies.

People and Children Pay Loyal Tribute to Pastor.

Among the many memorable incidents crowded into the long career of Rev. Francis A. Cacciola as rector of St. Francis Xavier's Mission, Bar Haven, and its dependencies, none received greater honor than that which was shown him on the occasion of his 25th anniversary of his ordination to the holy priesthood. On Wednesday, Father Cacciola was the celebrant of solemn high mass in St. Francis Xavier's Church at 10 o'clock. The ceremonies of the mass were very impressive and the movements of his dear little altar boys all robed in their beautiful gowns added splendor to the scene of the Sanctuary where the three great altars of the church were lit with a galaxy of lights and a profusion of flowers. The children of the school, dressed in their new white robes, which they wore at the opening and closing of the forty hours devotion, approached the altar during the exercises of holy mass and received communion for the intentions of their pastor. At the close of the sacred ceremony they moved in massed formation to the Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and sang hymns and Father Cacciola's mother, whose name was Mary, and who donated the altar to the church. Father Cacciola recalled the wonderful transformation which had taken place since taking up his abode in Bar Haven in the year 1897, and told his hearers the closer they kept to our dear Lord the nearer they would come to them. Free from the diverting influences of city and town, it is within the province of the lives of people and children here to be persuaded to the truths and teachings of Eternal Justice. This is the mission of our dear church, and the divine ministers, to render to Caesar the things that belong to Caesar and to God the things that belong to God. "A divine injunction commands us not to become spiritual survivors and moral cripples but to acquire those essentials that will enable us to make our lives sublime." The night of the mass was uplifting and the solo parts splendidly rendered. The beautiful tribute to the late lamented mother of the rector given by the school children with exceptional grace, gave a touch of pathos to the occasion recalling that Father Cacciola had tried to see her highest ambition and his arms realized. A mammoth procession in which all the grand ornaments and banners of the church were displayed was held in the evening. The girls all appeared in their white uniforms and the scene was one not soon to be forgotten, and will mark another grand luminous page in the annals of St. Francis Xavier's Church, Bar Haven.

The Romance of Salvation Army Work in Newfoundland.

(Contributed.)
Those whose privilege it will be to attend the Salvation Army's Annual Congress this year, and witness the large crowd of uniformed Salvationists gathered for the event, will find it difficult to realize that only thirty-eight years ago the Salvation Army was an unknown quantity in Newfoundland, and that the splendid force of officers, soldiers and adherents, which the Army now musters has been organized and brought together in that comparatively short space of time. In October, 1884, a lady named Mrs. Dawson, formerly Miss Churchill, belonging to Portugal Cove, but who had resided in Canada for a number of years returned home to spend a holiday. While in Canada she had become connected with the Salvation Army, and on her arrival here commenced holding meetings in the old Temperance Hall Victoria Street. A good soul-saving work immediately started, and many converts were made, several of whom are still connected with the Army in this city, such as Mrs. Jonas Barter, Sergt. Major Wm. Pike, and others. The great work done by Mrs. Dawson soon came to the notice of headquarters in Canada, and in January 1885, a small contingent of officers were sent from Toronto to formally open up the work here. They consisted of Capt. Phillips, Kimberly and Collins and Cadet Larder. These officers opened fire with a great open air meeting on the Parade Ground. Vast crowds gathered to hear their preaching and singing of the lassies in the Poke Bonnets, and it is recorded that the rough element was so much in evidence that the police had to be called in to try and keep order. The crowd eventually got beyond police control and the meeting was broken up, several of the Salvationists receiving minor injuries. Nothing daunted, the Salvationists set about to look for a suitable building to hold their meetings in, and eventually succeeded in purchasing Bearns' Furniture Factory, Springdale Street, at present used by No. 1 Corps as a Sunday School, where they commenced holding meetings regularly and a large number of people became converted. The rough element was still in evidence, windows were occasionally broken, and Salvationists pelted with various missiles when going to and from meetings, but they went steadily and perseveringly forward, and soon succeeded in convincing their greatest enemies that the mission was to do good. For a considerable time they were only permitted to hold one march a week, and that usually took place Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The crowd were generally so great on this occasion as to make it necessary to have a guard of seven police to keep order. The first enrollment was held in the building then known as Atheneum Hall which stood on the site where the Museum now stands; there is no record of how many soldiers were made at that meeting, but there was a considerable number, several of whom are still connected with the various city corps.

FIRST ARMY WEDDING.

The first Army wedding was conducted by Major Scott on Aug. 6th, 1890 in Victoria Hall, the contracting parties being Mr. Jonas Barter and Miss Mildred Reid, both of whom are still with us. They have a large family all of whom are actively engaged in Army work. Mr. Barter is at present Sergeant Major of the No. 1 Corps in this city, and is respected by all classes for his integrity and sterling worth. He is one of the army's earliest converts and never tires of talking about the change which God through the instrumentality of the Salvation Army wrought in his life. As might be supposed the news of what the Army was doing soon became noised abroad, and applications began to come from various outposts for the Army to commence work among them with the result that out of the first batch of officers, two were sent to places outside of St. John's, Capt. Collins going to Conception Bay and Cadet Larder to Greenspond. Great revivals broke out almost immediately in both these places, the influence of which made itself felt in the adjoining settlements, which in turn requested officers to be sent them, and so the work spread until to-day there are over 168 towns and villages in Newfoundland where the Salvation Army is established and devoted officers are labouring earnestly for the blessing of their fellow men.

SOCIAL WORK OF THE ARMY.

Any review of the Army work in Newfoundland would be incomplete without some reference to the Social Work which has been an untold blessing to the more unfortunate of our fellow citizens. The rescue work was inaugurated by Mrs. Staff Capt. Reid in 1892. The following extract from the book entitled "The Lady with the other Lamp" by Mary Morgan Dean, will give some idea of the conditions prevailing in St. John's at that time. "When the Reads went Newfoundland, Mrs. Read found utter apathy as to rescue work, in fact the people were rather indignant at the idea that any such thing was needed there at her influence to arouse interest in the movement, and make the people recognize the fact of the need of such a home. She wrote to the press, relative to this, the following letter: "Editor Evening Herald,

Dear Sir:—For a long time Christian workers and those who are in a position to know the real condition of some parts of the City have felt the great need of some institution or shelter for unfortunate women. Last week one of the City's prominent Ministers drew the attention of his congregation to the fact that there was no institution in St. John's to find a refuge for any prisoner after being discharged from the Penitentiary and cited the instance of one poor woman who walked the streets because, having been in jail, no one would open a door welcome to her. Finally she found refuge in the Fire Hall until morning. The Army officers are constantly besieged by poor girls for help and opportunity of leaving old companions and doing right.

PRESS TAKES INTEREST.

The Rescue Work began to be talked of and the press requested an interview. They spoke of Mrs. Read as the "energetic and courageous woman who was at the head of the Army work in that country. A tall lady of rather pale countenance, with dark, earnest eyes, and looking straight at one under a mass of raven hair." "Our work is quite undemonstrative," she said to the reporter. The police would not give us any information, but we found out the truth for ourselves without their aid and twenty cases are now being traced." When asked how she explained this, you see we have homes not institutions. That is why they succeed whereas others fail and besides the workers keep the inmates with them for six months, first directing the attention to real spiritual things and next teaching them to fill some honest and honourable position in the world."

Although handicapped for want of room and funds devoted officers have steadily gone on seeking to help their fallen sisters and the Rescue Home on Cox Street has been the starting point for many an erring girl toward a better life. The new Maternity Hospital now in the course of erection will greatly facilitate this work, and it is hoped that the opening of this institution will not be long delayed. The men's social work in Newfoundland is confined to the Home on Cox Street has been the place where a great deal of good is accomplished, and many of those who are down and out are helped to meals and lodgings free of cost, while those of limited means can get decent lodgings at a very small figure. Here as in other branches of the S.A. work much more could be done if funds were available and those of our public spirited citizens who have money to spare for charitable purposes can be sure that anything given to these institutions will not be misplaced.

STEADY PROGRESS MADE.

It will be seen from the foregoing that the Army has made steady progress in all its branches and by faithful and diligent service has made itself a force to be reckoned with. Beginning with the humble efforts of a frail woman, it very soon rose to the status of (what is known in Army parlance as) a district a little later becoming a division, then a province, and latterly it has been raised to the dignity of a sub-Territory. Thus has the great work of the Army been upheld and continued to its present status, and devoted men and women throughout all those years, have been instrumental in fostering and cherishing the good work. The names of many of the leading officers are still fresh in the memory of the public, all of whom have done good work; but we are pleased to be able to say that the present officer in charge, Colonel Thomas Martin, is beloved by his people, and is a worthy successor of those who introduced the Army, and brought it up to its present standing. Col. Martin has the entire confidence and sympathy of his followers and the public generally, and we feel sure that the present convention will be worthy of him and the welcome that on Sunday next, will be accorded Commissioner and Mrs. Sowton will be worthy the Army and worthy the people of Newfoundland.

THE WAY WE THINK.

"Life is full of grief and trouble," said the man who seldom grins; "every tribulation's double, every woe I meet is twin. And the sun is only shiny when we're suffering for shade, and the tears we shed are briny, when we should weep lemonade. Fierce the present, but I roar most when I think of days to come; everything is hind and foremost, everything is out of plumb." "If that is your way of thinking," I replied, "oh, man of care. It's no wonder you are sinking in the waters of despair. Life to me seems crisp and snappy and the world is not a frost; I'm determined to be happy, quite regardless of the cost. In this frame of mind I frolic, gay, though humble and obscure, while you have a mental colic that no acorn will cure. If you lack a grief you fake it, for the sourest grapes you reach; life's exactly what we make it, it's a lemon or a peach. If a man is hunting sorrow he can load it on a dray, and he'll find a lot to-morrow that he overlooks today. If a man is always seeking for the good things and the bright, he will see his sorrows streaking for some cavern out of sight. With your bosom full of sadness and your whiskers wet with tears you can't hope to catch the gladness in this best of whirling spheres."

"Faking" an Engine to Foil Thieves.

BEST METHODS OF NONPLUSSING CAR PERILOUSERS.

In view of the extraordinary number of thefts of motor cars which are being committed, a brief review of the various ways in which a thief who leaves his car on the street may make things difficult for the would-be thief would no doubt be considered.

A method of fooling the car thief is to install three requirements: (a) to be capable of being quickly and easily done without setting the alarm or anyone "in the know"; (b) to be of the trouble thus created must be difficult to diagnose and impossible to remedy; (c) it must be effective and render the car undriveable.

WITHDRAWING THE MAGNETO BRUSH.

Perhaps the commonest tips of all are the withdrawal of the magneto brush or the spark rod connecting the high-tension brush with the distributor. A car with this condition cannot be started up, but the thief is at once and will probably be seen for the brush and when he tries to replace it will find one from a number of spares he may carry for the purpose. A very much better tip is that of the "dud" brush. A brush made of obsolete hard rubber, which is got up to look like a real brush and made to fit where the real brush is located, will stamp nine out of ten mechanical thieves who are used for time. When they fall to an explosion out of the engine, they will promptly look for missing brushes, and seeing a brush which is apparently all right, they will never dream of looking into it more closely but will pass on to another suspected source of trouble.

PLUGGING THE EXHAUST.

A very effective way of putting a stop to action is by plugging up the exhaust. This is an extremely simple thing to do when working against time for carburetter and magnets will respond to every test. A cylindrical wooden plug, with the end driven into the centre (for exhaust) is turned down for a tight fit for the exhaust pipe and inserted in the car. When the car is left, the owner has merely to pull the plug up the exhaust pipe out of sight. To get it out again, he has merely to pull out by the centre where eyes provided for the purpose with a short iron rod with a hook at the end.

MAKING THE ENGINE THIEF-PROOF.

Of course if the would-be thief is a good mechanic and has plenty of time at his disposal, the car can be made thief-proof. The only chance the car owner has is where the thief works against time and has no tools available. He can then, with a little ingenuity, "fake" his engine in such a way that the thief will feel after a few hours' incoherent blather over an obscure fault, that he's only wasting his time over the motor car. I may here say, for the encouragement of others, that I had nearly to leave my car for two weeks and two days in a garage with a reputation for hiring out their "bums" cars. When I arrived with the car, I was not a minute late and a half fixing my "fake." Some time afterwards I learnt that the mechanic had spent hours each night to get the engine started up and that they eventually had to give up. So it can be done!

THINGS THAT WILL NOT OPERATE.

Each one of us will find his own "fake" and he will no doubt keep it as a secret buried within his own breast, at least, I do! But the effective nature of these "fakes" is the "dud" line. Beautiful imitations of the real thing, brushes which do not brush, compensators which do not compensate, insulators which

ON FACES AND GRACES.

Those lines flashed into my mind the other day in a connection which would certainly have surprised Tennyson. A girl, perhaps, annoyed him in some way, and he said, "she hath a lovely face. God in His mercy lend her grace. The lady of Shalott." "Tennyson," since I took the word "grace" in a different sense from the use in which he meant it. I had been reading the accounts of the experience of the movie scout who has been looking around the country for girls possessing the qualifications for moving picture work.

What a Star Must Have. She wants a girl who has a combination of pretty face, personal background, carriage, poise, physical proportions and personality. And she finds the pretty face much easier to locate than the other qualifications. In speaking about the things that want to be beautiful. Half of beauty is God given, but only half. The rest is made up of details like these. And that half any girl can cultivate. How strange that so few of them do. Perhaps it is partly because they think of grace and poise and personality as qualities that appeal to fussy old people, whereas prettiness and style and pep are the real thing. They now have the word of the movie scout for the opposite. And I am sure no one in the world could have more influence than she with the world of happerdom. If 40 ministers preached 40 sermons to 40,000 people against bobbed hair, they couldn't hope to have the influence that the movie scout has when she prints in a daily paper the fact that bobbed hair, unless it happens to be individually becoming, takes away from a girl's charm and reduces her chance of being selected as a movie possibility.

Queens of Love.

Nell Gwyn-The Orange-Girl Who Captivated a King.

(Pearson's Weekly.)

At eight years of age, Nell Gwyn—"Sweet Nell of Old Drury"—was left to shift for herself. Her father was a drunken creature—no one knows where. Poor little Nell fell into the hands of a woman who ran a drinking shop. She set her to carry drinks for her customers. What surroundings for an innocent little girl of eight. Then, when she was ten, Nell became an orange girl at the theatre in Drury Lane.

In those days the theatre was very different from what it is to-day. There was a "pit" but it was an open place without seats, where anybody could stand to watch the play. The space between the pit and the stage (where nowadays we have the orchestra) was given up to what were known as the "orange girls," who stood with their backs to the stage and sold oranges to the audience.

Nell, with a number of other girls, made eyes at the audience, and shouted her wares.

"Oranges, Fresh oranges was her cry. In those days it was not considered for a woman to go to a theatre unattended. Certain gay ladies, however, who wished to indulge in flirtations, would go there masked, and they would send notes to their lovers during the play, using the orange girls as go-betweens. And Nell carried many a love letter when she was not selling oranges.

The occupants of the pit, would find many a challenge to the orange girls, gay banter and all kinds of chaff were exchanged, and pretty Nell readily acquired "the gift of the gab."

Then a lover came along. Nell was barely fifteen, but her knowledge of the world was that of a woman of twenty-five. Her lover, Duncan by name, spent quite a lot of money over Nell, who had grown tired of selling oranges, and who wanted to get on the stage.

work. She was very successful, and all London rang with her praises. Although so young she was a complete woman of the world by this time, and when Lord Buckhurst fell in love with her and asked her to throw in her lot with him, Nell realized it was no good to mourn a dead lover forever, and for two years apparently they were happy together.

Was she a flirt? Remember what her upbringing had been, remember, too, the age in which she lived, far different from our own. She was only nineteen, but she had to earn her own living for ten years. Think of that as you hear the rest of the story.

The next man to fall in love with her was the King Charles II. himself. These were the days when the maypole stood in the London streets, when milkmaids with garlands on their palls, and with fiddlers playing, danced on a May morning, when this land of ours was known as "Merrie England," and the King himself as "the merrie monarch."

People adored Nell. She was one of themselves, a poor girl who never pretended to be anything other than her natural self.

Once, soon after she had gained the royal favor, the King asked her what she would like best in the world expecting that she would ask for a diamond necklace or some other expensive gift.

Nelly only laughed and shook her wise little head. "I would like to remain youthful-looking till I am forty," she cried. "Then I would like to fade out of life with the first wrinkle, but with the reputation of being only five-and-twenty."

The King laughed, as he always did at her sayings; although sometimes cheeky Nell said some things as made all the Court hold their breath and wonder what would happen next.

But it was her fearlessness, her naturalness, if you like, that kept the King her lover, although he had other ladies on whom he bestowed his favors. It was a change for him to be talked to as though he were an ordinary mortal and not a god, and being human, he enjoyed it.

Now and again in London, particularly in Chelsea, and its neighborhood, you may come across an old soldier wearing a scarlet coat, a vivid splash of color in some gay street, and you know that he is one of the Chelsea Pensioners, old warriors with a small pension, but with a lodging-place known as Chelsea Hospital.

This royal hospital for aged and disabled soldiers was built by Charles II, but it was at the suggestion of Nell Gwyn, whose tender heart could not bear to think that her countrymen who had fought and become disabled in the service of their country should go homeless. So she coaxed the King into doing this, and not only this, but many another kind deed, for which her country blessed her.

Is it any wonder that the people loved "our Nelly"? Nell Gwyn, she remained to the last although the King intended to make her a duchess.

But he died without having carried out his intention, although on his deathbed he implored those around him to look after the girl he loved. "Don't let poor little Nell starve," were his dying words.

All the other ladies of the Court were forgotten, but Nell he couldn't forget.

Poor Nell. She had very little money, she owed a great deal, and the new King, Charles II's brother, did not bother his head about her for a long time. So she nearly did starve, after all. Finally, King James II. paid her debts, gave her a house and settled a sum of money upon her for life, but Nell did not live long. She survived her royal lover only by two years. She was thirty-seven when she died, and, according to the saying of the time, she was just a "light o' love," but it is difficult to blame Nell when one remembers the whole story.

Fatherless, with a drunken mother who abandoned her when she was only eight years old, is it not a wonder that she kept any ideas of honor or virtue at all? Yet many lived to bless her name. For even as she lay dying her thoughts went to the poor whose lot she knew so well, and amongst other bequests she set aside a sum of money to be spent in freeing poor debtors from prison.

Chelsea holds memories of her, and one can never travel along the King's Road without realizing that this was the roadway made by Charles II., and so called because this was the way he journeyed to see his fair Nell. Nor can one catch a glimpse of one of the old Chelsea pensioners without recalling that it was for them Nell Gwyn pleaded andajoled the King to build their royal hospital.

Her name will never be forgotten. Perhaps she did not love wisely, and perhaps she loved too well, but had she been a more selfish woman we should not speak of her to-day as she did in olden days—as "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," the orange girl who became the sweetheart of a King.

Every Woman Should Know

That cheap soaps and even some dear soaps will ruin her clothing, also good soap costs less than good clothing; therefore, when a woman buys cheap injurious soap, she loses more than she gains, because cheap injurious soap will rot her blouses, dresses, etc., and will also rot her husband's and children's clothes. Again cheap soap will hurt one's hands, will take the print of doors and spoil linoleum.

Bishop Falls, July 4th, '22.
Dear Sir,—I am glad to say that your Heart Tablets have done me a good deal of good. I was so bad before I took them I could not do any work. I had to put my washing out and when I stooped my heart was so bad that I had to put my hand against it to press it back as it seemed to be it was falling out, and to-day I don't feel anything wrong with me or my heart whatever. I ask you to publish this in the papers as I can prove these Heart Tablets are good for any heart trouble.
Yours truly,
