CHAPTER XXXV.
 The portrait of Miss Cleveland was pronounced by an art critic to be a chef d'œuvre—with the strength of a Rembrandt, the accuracy of a Reynolds. It was exhibited under the pseudonym of Collis Ernscliffe—for the artist's real name was Noel Campbell. It was exhibited at Burlington House, and the young barrister woke up one morning to find himself famous. He was sought for by the leaders of fashion, and even received commissions from royalty itself.

But during these years of success—fascinating to one of his years—he had overlooked the claims of Lazarus Cohen, and the wily Jew hid his time. He had bargained for the artist's work imperpetually, and Ernscliffe had no right to paint for any one else. If he insisted upon doing so, then the Jew would attach all the proceeds. Not only that, but he would put upon the market many worthless pictures that Collis had painted in his early days.

In the end the Jew had to be bought up. He asked for twenty thousand pounds, and could not be induced to accept one penny less than fifteen thousand.

"You have sold your soul to the devil," Lazarus Cohen said, "and there is only one way out of the difficulty unless you mortgage your life. It is simple, and has been offered by Miss Cleveland, who admires you sincerely. She will lend you the money—say, give it to you, for she loves you, my boy."

What could Collis do but accept? He had no doubt that he could repay Miss Cleveland in a short time, and to be rid of this awful incubus—this terrible Old Man of the Sea—was like being released from a rampart that was drawing from him his very life. He gave nothing derogatory to himself in taking this loan.

Miss Cleveland was a friend of the family; her step-father was their legal adviser, and had really great difficulty

In placing Miss Cleveland's wealth out at a good rate of interest. The artist agreed to pay one per cent. more than could be obtained elsewhere.

So the claim of Mr. Lazarus Cohen was liquidated—was bought up, and Collis Ernscliffe—or Noel Campbell, as he will in future be known to the reader—was indebted to Miss Adeline Cleveland in the sum of fifteen thousand pounds.

Then it soon became apparent that she was deeply in love with the handsome painter. He admired her beauty, her statuesque figure, her general charm of manner, but not with the eyes of a lover. She was several years his senior, and Miss Cleveland was a worthy young woman. She loved Noel Campbell as much for his talents—for his future prospects, and Mr. Grant had given her many hints concerning future possibilities—she loved him as much for these things as for himself. He would make a husband to be proud of, and his genius would be an open sesame to the portals of the beau monde.

Campbell, on his part, was grateful to Miss Cleveland; she confessed that she owed her a big debt—a debt easily contracted, but difficult to repay. Mr. Grant placed this before him in a strong light, and Noel consented to make Miss Cleveland happy, because it would please his mother more than himself. He had dreamed of love in a fashion that imaginative young men are wont to dream, and he told himself that this marriage need not interfere with the ideal enshrined within his soul.

Thus did he review a little of his past as he left Blairwood behind, and walked miles out of his way because he feared detection and was too great a coward to face it.

"I have been a fool in the hands of Grant," he thought, bitterly. "While I have been wrapped up in my art, he has been doing cruel things in my name. And to what end? Merely to gratify his own greed for wealth, for place and power, at my ultimate expense, even had his infamous intrigues been crowned with success. Oh, Heaven! what a worthless wretch I must yet appear to be in my darling's eyes! I listened to his insinuations, and believed my uncle to be the basest among men—to have appropriated even my mother's fortune; the slayer of my injured father, and a libertine! I listened, and gave my tacit consent for money to be spent to secure such evidence as would restore what was mine and my mother's by right. But, thank God, my eyes were opened in time, even if Mr. Grant has increased my indebtedness to upward of twenty thousand pounds. He little dreams that I have undermined his precious schemes—that I shall be too much for him and my Lord Somerton!"

He returned to London, and from the station went to his club to dine. A letter was handed to him by the clerk in the hallway, and he saw at a glance that it was from Mr. Grant.

Divers Grope for Bullion 100 FEET DOWN IN OCEAN.

One hundred and twenty feet beneath the waves that swirl off the Donegal coast among rocks covered with the slime of the ocean depths, and surrounded by little-known forms of marine plant life, a squad of divers has been busily engaged for four years recovering the £7,000,000 worth of bullion that went down with the great liner Laurentic.

The story of their achievements, when fully told, will read like an "Arabian Nights" romance. The divers, highly skilled members of the British navy, have in the aggregate spent months under the waves, blasting away many obstructions, and sending to the surface box after box of gold. No treasure hunt has ever been more successful.

Some little-known facts about divers and their methods were given by the head of the firm of Siebe, Gorman & Co., the best-known submarine engineers in the world.

Before a man can become a diver, he must be passed as medically fit in every way, while frequent examinations by a doctor are carried out during training. To begin with, the novice, in complete diving kit, is submerged in from 10 to 20 feet of water. His first job consists of locating lost articles and signaling them in the approved fashion, so that they can be sent to the surface. Clearing propellers of fouling material, recovering cables and removing rust from ship's bottoms are other jobs that fall to the lot of the beginner, who cannot qualify as a fully-fledged diver until he has worked at a depth of 120 feet.

A diver first removes his own clothing and puts on an assortment of underclothing, including woolen vests, pants, stockings and a thick jersey with a woolen cap. The shoulder pad is then put on, after which the diver has literally to be forced into his deep-sea armor. The weight of the complete outfit, including boots that weigh 15 pounds each, and 80 pounds of lead to shield the shoulders, is 175 pounds.

The art of diving, apart from that associated with swimming feet, has been known well over 2000 years. Divers were employed during the defence of Syracuse (415-413 B.C.) to remove barriers which had been sunk in the harbor. It is recorded that Alexander the Great was lowered into the sea in a machine specially designed to keep out the water and to admit light. Diving by means of air tubes was also practised at this period.

One of the forerunners of the modern diving dress was that invented by a German marine engineer, whose device, a cylindrical arrangement with air pipes attached, was in use up to a hundred years ago, when Augustus Siebe produced a form of diving dress not unlike that worn now, although it possesses many crudities that were not eliminated until many years later.

The greatest depth at which a diver has worked with success is 123 feet, the hero of this exploit being a Spanish diver, who recovered £1200 in silver from a wreck off Finisterre. It has been proved, however, that it is possible for a diver in certain circumstances, to work at the great depth of 210 feet.

A remarkable fact in the history of modern diving is that although divers all over the world wear suits of British design and make, no accident has yet occurred as a result of faulty workmanship or defects in the materials used.

In the case of the Laurentic, attacks by giant dogfish have had to be guarded against, while on one occasion a large octopus appeared on the scene threatening the diver with its unpleasant embraces.

"More concerning the progress of this precious business!" he muttered, scornfully, crushing the letter into his pocket unopened.

He ate his dinner in silence, then read the letter, his face flushing hotly. It had been lying at the club two days.

"If I am a man of honor!" he said, wrathfully. "How dare that man taunt me about honor? I will see him in the morning and have it out with him. There is a volcano at his feet and mine!"

He spent an hour at the billiard-table with a literary friend, and then ordered a cab.

His tastes were, perhaps, extravagant for a young artist, but the use of a cab was an essential to him as perfect-fitting garments. He eschewed showy jewelry, being content with one ring containing a magnificent diamond which had cost him several hundred pounds. He rented a handsome residence in St. John's Wood, in the rear of which he had erected a spacious studio embowered in trees.

The expensive household he maintained for his mother's sake. She was a pale-faced, fretful woman, who had once been handsome, but had permitted the caterpillar of envy and ill-nature to prematurely age her. She had never forgiven her father the sin of dying intestate, and hated her brother for enjoying so much wealth—hated him because her husband had hated him, and would have gladly hunted him to his death for his injustice, his inhumanity, and other sins, of all which she professed to believe him guilty. And yet Sir John allowed her a thousand pounds per annum.

But this was a paltry item when Mrs. Campbell's style of living was considered. Her son humored her in every way, and she never paused to consider the cost of the luxuries with which he surrounded her. His talents she appreciated, but only to the extent that it made of him a valuable acquisition among the wealthy, marriageable ladies who cast longing glances upon him from every quarter. But his engagement to Miss Cleveland pleased her more than anything else. Miss Cleveland was rich, and in the natural course of events, Noel would inherit Blairwood Park, where, as dowager lady bountiful, Mrs. Campbell hoped to reign supreme—at the expense of her brother's honor, his life, and the ruin of his only daughter.

When Noel had borrowed Miss Cleveland's money it had been his intention to speedily reduce the liability, but a year had passed, and not one shilling had been paid.

His brush had not worked so easily, and his inspiration had been weak. The knowledge of the debt, and the heavy expenses that were daily being incurred, added as a deterrent rather than an incentive.

He jumped out of the cab as it pulled up before his home, and tossed the man a couple of half-crowns, saying: "I must go to the city to-morrow morning. Biddell. Call for me at ten sharp."

The cabman saluted with his whip, and drove away. Noel Campbell was one of his best customers.

The young artist saw that several rooms were brilliantly illuminated, and rightly judged that his mother had company. He sighed wearily as he passed through the hallway, and walked into the library.

"Tell Mrs. Campbell," he said to a servant who followed in close attendance, "that I am here."

In one minute his mother entered the room, glancing at him reproachfully.

Bowring Park in Autumn

The wind, in violent gusts, drives from the eaves
The rain, whilst o'er the lawn, grim Boreas stalks,
And trees, long since turned golden,
shed their leaves,
In wild profusion, o'er the gravelled walks.

Each flower too, that, but a few days past,
Had spread its petals, 'neath a summer sky, Now bends beneath the storm-king's sister blast,
And slowly withering, droops down to die.

Thy silvery lake, in warmer days, the scene
Of pleasant loating, and of fun galore, By force of wind, is churned to muddy green
And boats are high upon thy grassy shore.

Deserted are thy walks, and shady dell Resounds no more, with laughter's joyous thrill.
But, for the swaying tall trees' plaintive swell,
The place seems strangely lonely, weird, and still.

Where are the many, who, in summer days, Patrolled by rose-lined by-ways, far and wide, Greeting thy scenery, with admiring gaze,
Or strolling by thy winding river side?

Or on thy Main Street, moving everywhere,
On foot, on bike, or limousine Tasting the sweetness, of thy fragrant air
Or grouped, in merry clusters, on the green?

Perchance, some stranger greets, with gladsome eyes,
The noble statue of our Country's pride:
Perhaps some drowsy loungee, seeks to lie,
And woo Morpheus in some shady side.

A sickle world; subdued by Beauty's might,
Thy youthful bloom could easily hold in sway, Thy mature golden glories still delight,
Reverses come, then friends soon fade away.

Trifling With Honor

STAR MOVIE MONDAY.

If ever evidence was needed to show the popularity of the one and only Fawnette, it was afforded this talented artist at the Star Movie last evening. We all remember the severe accident of last Monday night when this lady broke a blood vessel, which obliged her withdrawal. Last night she resumed, and the minute she appeared the large audience broke loose with applause. It is typical of a Newfoundland theatrical audience, that if they do not like your work they remain quiet, but if you are pleasing you receive a big hand, but last night the audience went to it "boots and all," and Fawnette has every reason to-day to feel proud of her work. Her partner Mr. Tesori needs no bouquets, as he has already established himself, and as one of the gathering remarked, "that fellow could not but be liked by everyone." The big attraction for Monday is the super special Jewel, "Trifling with Honor," in ten parts, and it is a picture that every member of the entire family should see. Fawnette and Tesori will sing and dance "Oh, Gee, Oh, Gosh, Oh, Golly," and the admission is the popular one, twenty cents.

Canada's Premier On the Empire.

The Prince of Wales and the Dominion Prime Ministers at the Overseas League Dinner.

The Prince of Wales and Mr. Mackenzie King were the chief speakers at a dinner given by the Overseas League at the Ritz Hotel, London, on Tuesday night to the Dominion Prime Minister, Sir Ernest Borchers, chairman of the council, presided over a gathering of nearly 350, with all of whom the Prince shook hands as they entered. The Prince, who was enthusiastically received, proposed "The Dominions and India" in a neatly-phrased and thoughtful speech. In a humorous reference to the reception we offer here to the Dominion representatives, he said they had already made many speeches and their questions would be greatly answered. His speaking of the greatness of the Empire and the problems with which it faced, his Royal Highness emphasized the great importance of fraternal knowledge of the Empire and the need of encouraging the spirit of travel in statesmen, journalists, writers, teachers, and in all who are distributors of ideas and information to the public of Great Britain. Referring specially to teachers, he remarked: "How very much better equipped are their work they would be if they could see something of the Empire. If it were the case I should not wonder if that the one I received yesterday from a girl of 14 years—(laughter)—who wrote to me and said she hoped I had had a good holiday, and was anxious to know what the basis of Canada looked like." (Laughter.)

"A FELLOW FEELING." Mr. Mackenzie King, who was loudly cheered on rising to respond to the toast, said:— "May I on behalf of those of us who have the privilege of representing our countries from overseas, be the first to express to the Overseas League our appreciation of the honour which they have conferred on us in extending to us this hospitality this evening? I express to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales our deep sense of gratitude at his graciously consenting to honour this occasion by his distinguished presence? (Cheers.) May I at once also thank his Royal Highness for the very hearty welcome which he has extended to us? He has very rightly said that, since the moment he was our privilege to hear the shores of Britain to this hour, we have received nothing but continuous hospitality. I think that his Royal Highness referred to the effect of numerous banquets and generous speeches upon the direction there must have come into the minds of many here the saying that follows: 'Following makes us wonderful'—(laughter)—for certainly if there is one citizen of the Empire who ought to know what it is to attend all kinds of functions, to eat all kinds of dinners, and to address all kinds of gatherings, we have that distinguished person in the person of his Royal Highness, Jimmie. (Laughter and cheers.)

EMPIRE TRAVEL. I am sure that no theme could have been more properly presented to us on this occasion, or could have met with more ready acceptance from all parts than the one to which we have the privilege of attending. It must be the experience of everyone who is privileged to travel throughout this Empire that the more one sees of its vast extent and the variety of its resources, and the more one has the opportunity of meeting its citizens face scription of his Royal Highness, his country, and to the world—it is (Laughter and cheers.) We have had the privilege of having two visits from him, and if the hearts of the men as well as the ladies are any indication of what our wishes are, we trust that we may have very, very many more. (Cheers.)

THE UNITY OF THE EMPIRE. "There is another reason why this toast seems to come appropriately from the lips of the Prince of Wales. The Crown is the symbol of our Empire. (Cheers.) The secret of the strength of the Empire lies in service, which is the motto on his crest. (Cheers.) If there is anyone who by example has shown what service can mean—service of his fellow-men, to different parts, the greater is one's outlook, one's capacity for enjoyment, and one's own ideals and aspirations. Those of us who have been privileged to enjoy this great opportunity should feel it as a special obligation to further, to the best of our ability, the provision of like facilities for those who are less privileged in this respect. I am sure the appeal that his Royal Highness has made, that the Governments of the different countries concerned should do what they could to help teachers and other disseminators of knowledge to learn—more of the Empire, will not be made in vain. I think we will all agree that, after all, there is nothing like coming to know people, coming to know them intimately, to see how much more there is of common interest in all of us. There is an old saying, that "Familiarity breeds contempt." That may be true among a certain class of people, but among strong people familiarity breeds not contempt, but confidence. (Cheers.) That is what we need to inspire in the breasts of all who are seeking to work together for a common object.

A CITIZEN OF THE EMPIRE. "It is indeed proper that his Royal Highness should propose this toast to the Dominions and to India. For after all, he is, as I have said, perhaps more of a citizen of the Empire than any other individual in it. No one by example, by word, by precept, in every way, has so revealed to his fellow-men what can be done by a single individual in the way of spreading good-will and developing good-will between all the classes who comprise the Empire. (Cheers.) I venture to say that no single man in the history of the world has ever met as many people or today knows as many people individually as his Royal Highness—(laughter and cheers)—and that no one has done more to help to inspire all with a common love for the Empire and for the Sovereign and the Royal House that he represents. (Cheers.) I hope that in replying to the letter which came from the young lady of 14 his Royal Highness gave an accurate description of the Canadian Isles. (Laughter.) I can tell him that there is not a young lady in Canada of 14 or over that cannot give a pretty good dean individual without the authority of the people on whose behalf he is speaking. It is well we should get this thought clearly into our minds, because it is only as we see clearly and define clearly those influences which make for political right and political freedom that we will help to make endurance this structure which we all wish to see maintained.

I feel that his Royal Highness regards the Throne of which he is the representative as resting upon any constitution, but rather in the hearts of the people of the British Empire; and, realizing that the Throne of Britain, the Throne of the Empire, rests on the hearts of the people, it will be the wish of every loyal subject to see that whatever advice is tendered to the King or to his representatives, it is the voice of the people that comes to the foot of the Throne. That is all I wish to say in regard to my conception of the constitutional development of the Empire. I think that we are proceeding on these lines at the present time. I think it is of importance that we should realize this significance to the full, because I think we are only at the beginning of a vast development, and it is of importance that we should start on right lines, because, if we start on right lines, the development throughout will be correct.

THE STARS AND THE OCEAN. "I spoke the other evening of the British Empire, according to my thought, as representing what one sees in the great firmament of the skies as one looks out at night, and discerns, coming from the infinite deep, a stream of light which seems the light of a single star; but, under the magnifying influence of the telescope, that single star is seen to be not one star, but a great cluster of stars, each moving gracefully in its own orbit, but all bearing relation to a common centre—one great astral system shining through space, maintaining its position there; seen closely, made up of many different stars, but seen from a distance, shining as with the light of one. The name of this organization under which we meet to-night—the Overseas League—suggests the reflex of this thought. Instead of the infinite sky and the infinite blue, we have this vast blue ocean which encircles the entire globe, with its seas and vast continents, some in the south, some in the Pacific, some in the north and some in the south, but all related into one great whole. There is the continent of Australia, there is the continent of New Zealand, there is India, there is Newfoundland, there is Canada, and there are the British Isles. All this vast system, like so many great stars, is moving within its own orbit, each managing its affairs and polluting more or less belonging immediately to itself, yet all united by one great bond of common interest, common sympathy, and common purpose. Prohibition Which Does Not Prohibit.

Ever since the Prohibition Act was placed on the Statute Book, it has been a subject for controversy which has done little or nothing to satisfy anyone as to the merits or demerits of the case.

The result of a plebiscite, it was passed by the Legislature, and the methods by which it was to be enforced were but casually discussed if they were discussed at all.

Not only in Newfoundland but in many other of the younger countries, Prohibition has been adopted. In all of them it has been realized since what sweeping changes it has effected, what difficulties have had to be faced in enforcing it, and what a legion of new evils have followed in its wake.

In several of these countries so menacing have the latter become, and so insuperable the former, that the whole question has been reconsidered, and with few exceptions, with the sanction of the people obtained by a referendum, the measure has been modified.

The opinions in Newfoundland regarding this Act appear to be so conflicting and the violations so numerous, that the time seems to be ripe to submit the whole question to the people again.

That it has failed in its purpose cannot be questioned in the face of the conditions which prevail. The police court records daily furnish evidence of drunkenness, illicit liquor dealers are constantly appearing in court, smuggling is increasing, and bootlegging has become a business.

The returns of the Controller's Department must be taken to prove either that chronic ailments have become far more prevalent of recent years, or that a very considerable amount of liquor is consumed as a beverage.

The Old Country has frequently been the subject of criticism because she has not fallen in line with this movement. If there is one trait more noticeable than another among the British law makers, it is their disinclination to pass measures which are far reaching in effect without first considering them from every point of view.

It cannot be said that they have been the losers thereby, and as a country with far less experience in making laws, it would be to our advantage to take the lesson to heart. In the last session, for example, a measure was passed by both Houses of our Legislature entitled "Of the Customs."

With the exception of the Hon. R. K. Bishop and one or two others who opposed it in the Upper House, it was generally approved. On August 18th we made the following reference to it editorially, and unless we are mistaken, it was the only comment which appeared in the Press:—

"Another measure that calls for comment is entitled 'Of the Customs.' It is true the revenue will be increased to a certain extent, but the effect must be to bring the port of St. John's in line with St. Pierre as a rendezvous for bootleggers. The question whether Prohibition is beneficial or injurious to the country does not arise, but the fact remains that we have on the Statute Book a Prohibition Act, and the present measure is in direct contravention to the principle of that Act."

Apparently the Fishermen's Protective Union have the matter of an amendment of the Act under consideration. We fear that amendments, unless they are of a sweeping nature, will not materially improve matters. It is an issue that has to be faced in toto, and the sooner the better. If we can bar the door effectively well and good, but to have it fastened by a lock that any juvenile delinquent can pick, is but to place temptation in the way, to encourage lawlessness and to make the enactment a mockery.

STOWAWAY CAUSES FIVE DEATHS BY FIRE. MARSEILLES, Nov. 24. A stowaway is said to have caused a fire on the British steamer Otterburn just after the vessel sailed yesterday for New York. The captain and four others were burned to death and others are believed to have perished. A Maltese trying to escape from the ship was arrested on suspicion of having caused the fire.

STRICT MEASURES AGAINST COMMUNISTS. BERLIN, Nov. 24. The dissolution of the German Communist, Nationalist, and the National Socialist Party organization was ordered yesterday by General Von Seeck, Commander in Chief of the National Army. The confiscation of the Communist funds was also ordered, and the holding of Communist meetings and the publication of Communist newspapers were prohibited. The order applies also to organizations supporting Adolf Hitler the Bavarian Fascist leader, Capt. Erhardt and General Ludendorff.

POINCARÉ'S VICTORY. PARIS, Nov. 24. The French parliament by one of the most sweeping votes of confidence in its history yesterday approved the policy of the government of Premier Poincaré. The recent negotiations in the Council of Ambassadors chamber gave the Premier Carte Blanche to execute his programme for future forcible action in enforcing complete execution of Versailles Treaty for protection of France's national interests and security, in accord with Allies if possible, but alone if he must. The vote was five hundred and fifty to seventy. The Premier in his address did not flinch in his attitude of stern determination to force the chamber immediately to proclaim either its approval or disapproval of his policy. His words seemed to remove the smouldering discontent expressed by the deputies in the lobbies during the past week, at what was termed the Premier's retreat before Great Britain's view point. Opposition with elections approached. No one seemed desirous of assuming responsibility for disapproving of the acts of the man whose popularity apparently is supreme throughout country.

BRITISH STEAMER ASHORE ON N.S. COAST. HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 24. The British steamer River Wye, from Swansea to Boston, lost her bearings in the dense fog off the Nova Scotia coast and piled up on Port Mouton Island, Queen's County, at five o'clock this morning. The crew was taken off safely and brought to the mainland in small boats that put off from the shore. The scene of the stranding is about ten miles from Liverpool and nearer the village of Port Mouton. Few particulars have been received but it is believed the River Wye is not in a hopeless position. She is a steamer of 5288 tons, and is believed to have a cargo of Welsh coal. She sailed from Swansea November 6. Wireless messages from the steamer sent out soon after the stranding asked for immediate assistance as it was feared the steamer was breaking up.

RUBR MINE OWNERS SUBMIT TO FRANCO-BELGIAN CONDITIONS. DUESSELDORF, Nov. 24. The biggest step towards restoring economic life in the Ruhr since the cessation of passive resistance was made last evening when Herr Volpert of the Deutsche Luxemburg mining group acting in behalf of Rubr Mine Owners Association, signed the conditions originally stipulated by Franco-Belgian Control Commission for recommending reparations of coal deliveries.

Magistrate's Court.

A resident of the Higher Levels was summoned into court by District Inspector Newborough, charged with being drunk and disorderly, and otherwise misconducting himself on the public street on the afternoon of the 20th inst. The evidence showed that the defendant threw stones at a number of children who were congregated on Parade Street. His honor pointed out the seriousness of the charge and gave the accused a sound lecture. A fine of $2 was imposed.

A boarder of the Seaman's Institute was arrested by the police last night for being drunk and creating disturbance in the institution. Mr. A. E. Holmes, the Superintendent, who gave the man in charge, stated in his evidence that the accused used very abusive language, within hearing distance of several ladies who were in the building. He did not wish the accused to be punished, owing to his former good character. The judge read the defendant's sound lecture, and had it not been for the Supt., who did not wish to press the charge, severe punishment would have followed. He was allowed to go.

Two cases for assault were withdrawn.

Head Constable John Byrne summoned a resident of Duckworth St. into court, charged with selling moonshine. Head Const. Byrne, in his evidence, stated that he visited the premises of the accused during his absence on the 9th of the month, and found in a room at the rear of the shop, two casks filled with beer. He took a sample of the brew from each cask, and after labelling it sent it to Mr. D. J. Davies, the Government Analyst to be analyzed. Witness also stated that he made a further search of the premises and found a still which had every appearance of being in full operation. He seized the outfit and brought it to the lock-up. The Government Analyst stated that he analyzed two samples. No. 1 sample showed 4.46% by volume. The accused, who pleaded guilty to the charge was given the minimum fine of $100.00, with the option of 30 days, it being his first offence.

His honor spoke at length on the moonshine traffic carried on in this city and stated that he intended to stamp it out.

Lt.-Col. T. Nangle, C.F., Addresses Nfld. Highlanders

"BATTLEFIELD MEMORIALS AND THEIR SIGNIFICANCE"

The Newfoundland Highlanders under command of Lt.-Col. W. H. Herder paraded at the Presbyterian Hall on Thursday night all officers being on parade and a good turn out of 100 of A. B. and C. Companies, with pipers and drummers. One hour's drill and physical training was given from 8.00 to 9.00 p.m. The members of the Newfoundland Highlanders Council were also present and at 9.00 p.m. J. C.
Hepburn, Esq., President of the Council, introduced Lt.-Col. Nangle, C.F., to the ladies. Lt.-Col. Nangle then gave an able address for one hour, "Battlefield Memorials" and a brief practical history of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and of the 28th and 9th Divisions. In the course of his address the lecturer took the ladies through the war zones from Cape Hel-les and Suvla in Gallipoli to France, Belgium, Germany, England, Scotland and back home to Newfoundland.
Lantern slides were shown which illustrated memorials being erected by Great Britain, Canada, Australia, 9th (Scottish) Division, Newfoundland, Belgium, France, and by the Imperial War Graves Commission throughout the British Areas, Great Britain and British Dominions. Several views were shown of British Military Cemeteries in France of which there are over three thousand. The address was most ably delivered, the general public being thoroughly at home in his subject and was given a most attentive hearing by the ladies who thoroughly appreciated the address.

Reference was made to the National Memorial being erected on the Beach and which will be unveiled on July 1st. of next year by Earl Haig, and Lt.-Col. Nangle hoped to see the Newfoundland Highlanders take their place in full strength on that occasion to honour the distinguished soldier of Scotland whose fame and name as commander in chief of the British Armies in France was known throughout the whole world.

The Highlanders were pleased to welcome Major J. J. O'Grady, M.B.E., of the C.C.C. who attended and will be prepared to give a hearty welcome to all ladies and gentlemen supporting the cause to attend the course of addresses to be given through the winter.

The next address will be given on Dec. 8th by Lt.-Col. C. MacPherson, C.M.G., who will address the ladies on "Gas and its effects on Active Services" and it is hoped that all friends and supporters who would care to spend a pleasant and instructive hour will keep this date open as a cordial welcome awaits them.

Wedding Bells.

ROSE-CARILL.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday Nov. 20th inst. at 6 o'clock at the R. C. Cathedral, the contracting parties being Miss Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ross, Merabeen, P.B., to Const. M. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cahill, St.
Mary's. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. Mons. McDermott. The bride, who was daintily attired in a gown of cream Canton crepe with grey velvet hat, looked very attractive. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations and maiden hair fern. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Nellie Walsh, who looked charming in a dress of pink Canton crepe, also carried a bouquet of pink carnations and maiden hair fern. The groom was ably supported by Const. G. Yovette. After the ceremony the party motored around Bowring Park, then back again to No. 4 Bond Street, their intended home, where supper was served, at which over fifty guests were present.
During the night dancing was indulged in by the party until an early hour of the morning. The bride and groom went to Topsail by motor, kindly placed at their disposal by Mr.
Murray. They were the recipients of many valuable presents which testified to the popularity in which the young couple are held. We wish Const. and Mrs. Cahill every happiness in their future home.

WILLIAMS-CORNICK.

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's Church on the 21st inst., at 8 p.m. by the Rev.
A. B. S. Stirling, with full choir in attendance. The contracting parties were Pearl Isabelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams to Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Cornick, both of this city. The bride who was daintily attired in a gown of grey satin with overlace and a Paris hat of grey and blue, looked very charming.
She carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums, carnations and sweet peas, and was attended by her cousin Miss Violet Williams, who wore a dress of tawn caston crepe with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white and yellow chrysanthemums. Little Lawrence Morgan acted as flower girl being daintily attired in pink silk with over-lace and black hat trimmed with blue, and carried a basket of carnations and sweet peas. The groom was ably supported by Mr.
Fred C. Martin, cousin of the groom.
After the ceremony the party motored countrywards, returning to the home of the bride's parents, Hamilton Avenue, where the reception was held.
The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace, to the bridesmaid a birthstone ring, to the flower-girl a gold piece and to the best man a set of finished gold cuff links. The many beautiful and costly presents testify to the esteem in which the young couple are held.

Grand Card Party and Dance will be held at St. Joseph's Hall on Tuesday night, Nov. 27th, under management of Mrs. Ed. De Burke. Two prizes will be offered. Tickets 50c. Teas extra 20c.

What's the Matter With the Insignia?

A correspondent makes the following comment:

It is passing strange that some customs officials are furnished with brass buttons and others without the badge of office. Why is this? If it is in-frigid for a suit to be worn with the brass buttons, why are they furnished with a suit at all? If it is considered beneath them to wear a uniform bearing the official insignia, why do they not consider it beneath their dignity to wear a suit of clothes, which, in any case, is given them.

The 3rd Card Tournament of the series of 4 Card Tournaments which the Star R.R. & B.
Committee is holding, will be held in the Star Hall on Monday night, November 26th, at 8.30.
There will be three prizes as usual and the special prize of a games in the four tournaments.

Obituary.

BIRDIE SLANEY (St. Lawrence)

Poignant grief which nearly always accompanies death was never more intense than it was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Slaney on Friday, the 16th inst., when their beloved daughter Birdie after a short yet protracted illness passed to the Great Beyond. Her death at the early age of twenty-four years has caused a great shock to the whole community, and many are the expressions of sympathy and condolences from her many friends to the afflicted family on the irreparable loss sustained by them. She bore her sufferings with patience and resignation, and after receiving the last consolations of Holy Church accepted the call with true Christian fortitude. Though suffering for a long time with an internal malady which often baffled the efforts of the most skilled physicians, her life was never despaired of until the disease became so insidious as to weaken her vitality and bring on her end with such pathetic suddenness. Her sad but edifying death is an example to us how we should view the stern realities of life which shows the unscrutable ways of providence, and be always prepared to accept the maxim, "In the midst of life we are in death." Deceased was a lovely companion during youth; always cheery and bright, and to know her was to love and esteem her. In a religious sense she was a model; always noted for her sanctity and holiness, and her every day actions were always a preparation for the life beyond. This characteristic in herself will ensure her eternal happiness. She was an inmate of St. Clare's Hospital for a number of years, and I am sure the good Sisters with whom it was her wont to be associated in the capacity of domestic servant or otherwise, must be sorry to hear of her sad passing. She has left to mourn a father and mother, one brother, Augustus now at Prince Rupert, two sisters, Jessie at New York and Bertha at home. The writer in communion with her numerous friends and relatives deeply sympathize with them in their sad bereavement. R.I.P.—

PATRIOTISM.

One need not hate an alien land to be A staunch and true defender of his own.
I hold my country first, and make it known
By all the strength which God has given me.
I never raise my eyes her flag to see But what my love and gratitude are shown.
A fairest banner winds have never blown Above a temple spire or ship at sea.
Yet I can breathe my love of this, my land.
And count the blessings which have made her great.
Rejoice that I am hers and that I stand Each day within the shelter of her gate.
Can give her all my love and service, and Still speak of alien countries with-

Wine Glass Fast Replacing
Stein in Germany

By the souvenir he brings back shall ye know him. Through this medium the customs officials daily greeting American tourists on their return from Germany judge with unfailing accuracy the quality of each and every tourist. When an inspector finds a stein in a trunk—and he finds many—he knows that the traveler is a pleasure seeker of the conventional type. For the stein these days is in the same category as the mustache cup. Its days of practical usefulness have passed, and it is fast becoming a souvenir.

In Berlin to-day the German indulges in his traditional beer. Even the most hesitant suggestion that beer may be losing its favor there will awaken the most pacific German to a state of wrath. He takes as much beer as he ever did—perhaps more; but he drinks now from a sturdy little mug and not from the highly decorated stein.

The university students of Berlin, Kiel and other cities have forsaken the distinguishing mark of Germany.
When they engage in their bar-room festivities they retain, with the exception, all the trappings of old.
The jaunty caps, the little mats that go under each container and serve as an adding machine in determining the price of the evening's enjoyment are all in their appointed places, but the stein is gone. Whatever beer the students imbibe is taken from plain mugs.

But in the Ruhr, the industrial centres and the provinces one finds the stein supreme in every beer garden. There, where the old customs prevail, the agit to keep the stein in use rather than on the shelf is being vigorously waged—bit by bit. Commercialism sweeps all before it. The manufacturers of Germany no longer make a feature of the stein. In its place they offer a round, plain mug.
The broken stein is hard to replace.
The factory manager knows that the stein is fast becoming passe, he will make only a few, enough to supply the wants of the tourist, for his leading product is and will continue to be the mug.

The stein has retired from active service. It has been relegated to the sidelines, where it accumulates dust and honor. One of its most formidable enemies has been the wine glass a startling foe, one that was hardly expected by a German product, yet its entry came naturally enough. Not long after the financial crisis struck Germany the worker, the clerk, the manager and the married man demanded his pay at the end of each day. Deflation was so rapid that what was a thousand marks one day was five hundred, sometimes less, on the subsequent day.

Even when wages were paid daily the Germans saw that they had to be spent immediately if full value was to be realized. Investments, even now few and seldom safe, were unknown soon after the signing of the armistice.
In spite of the chaos, many retained their senses and the rent was paid and necessities purchased. Often a tidy sum remained. It had to be spent; tomorrow it was worthless. So the German bought wine. It cost much more than beer and the German liked it.

Then a wave of reaction struck Berlin, the ripples of which extended far out into the countryside. Wine was the national drink of France.
Discussion was carried on for months and then it was remembered that the early production of wine had not been limited to any one country—in fact, that Germany had always been engaged, to some extent, in its manufacture—so the tongue and taste were found mightier than patriotism, and by degrees wine drinking became the accepted indulgence.

ROBERT MATHERS

1795-1875
There are several families in the last century, came to Trinity, and settled down in the desire of their lives. It was in which they were all poor, and as individuals they had their full share of the place. Though they lost their names, they were a roll of citizens, and their memories, and they were represented to-day in the lesser lights of their day. Their names are commonplaces in the parish materials, and their story. They were stately, and respectful, and definite recognition, with any underlining of those who lived and the interesting part of the giving occasionally to those whose names are to me. I have heard of my brother-in-law, who (because of the Brookings' and their grandsons) and he was one of the most stable, and steady, and pond, and that was right!

Robert Mather was born in the county of Dorset, England, and came to Trinity, New Brunswick, as a gardener to a company. His professional training fitted him for the requirements of a reformed without a fault. His kingdom was known as "the big garden" and he was known to "the big garden" to which he was sent to "the big garden" to ever growed under his surprising what was when the garden was led by Brookings and the old servants (the) were continued in the entry in the Mather of the Church, and of an interesting life: 1871—Married, 1872—

G.W.R.—You are slightly mixed about the Harp. It was made and owned by Thomas Northover, and was an interesting curiosity when I was a boy. It is still preserved, and is all today what it was fifty years ago.

S.J.R.—The following entry in the old Church Book will throw some light on your question: 1785—Married, William Mearshale, of Bridgeport, Dorset, England, and Mary Miller of this harbour. This is the only entry that I can find with this name in it.

My notes till the end of the year will appear fortnightly, including a Christmas Number.

By Ruth Cameron.

THAT IRRITATING SELF-SATISFACTION.

How hard it is to forgive self-satisfaction. Even when the person has reason to feel it, there is nothing more irritating than a complacency which does not take the slightest pains to modify or conceal itself.

Whereas when you find real worth combined with honest humility you feel as if you had indeed found a pearl of great price, something to be treasured up in that storehouse of the heart where we keep our ideals and our admirations.

I underline honest humility, though perhaps that is hardly necessary, for everyone knows that false humility is more detestable than complacency.

He Was Under Oath.

I fell to thinking of the annoyance and antagonism self-satisfaction arouses concerning two stories about actors, that came lately to my attention. Or in fact about three actors.

I won't tell you the name of the actor about whom the first was told but

WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP
No gripping or inconvenient stools. A gentle liver and bowel cleansing with "Cascarets." Sick Headache, Biliousness, Gas, Indigestion, and all such distress gone by morning. Most harmless laxative for Men, Women and Children—10c. boxes, also 25 and 50c. sizes, any drug store.

maybe you can guess. This actor was suing for breach of contract and was demanding very large amounts. The question of the size of the damages was being taken up and the actor himself was on the stand. He was asked why they should be so large. "Well, you see," he explained, "since I am the greatest living actor, the damage done to my reputation should be paid for at a higher rate." Afterwards one of his friends asked him why he said that and delicately suggested that it might be well to leave that to someone else to say. "Yes, but you know," said the actor, "I was under oath."

He Knew A Worse One.

The other tale relates to the comedian, E. A. Sothern, and Edwin Booth. They were talking over their past experiences at one time and Sothern said, "The worst performance ever seen was my Armand Duval."

Booth thought the matter over and then he inquired, "I don't know . . . did you ever see my Romeo?"

No one who retains a clear vision, whose eyes are not blinded by flattery or self-admiration will ever really be complacent. He will know that he has done some things worth while and will accept praise for them graciously (but not blantly or condescendently). But at the same time he will be frank about his own deficiencies, ready to take off his hat to worth superior to his own, and, which is harder, to let other folks do the same.

And With How Little Satisfied. And this applies to small folks as well as to great ones, and to small achievements as well as to great ones.

There is a little poem in once read in a magazine which has struck in my mind though the name of the author has vanished (perhaps someone can help me out). It pictures a fine blend of complacency and the wrong kind of humility in a way that is a caustic warning to anyone who has a tendency to either fault.

"Self-satisfied are most of us Except when singled out for praise And then the larger host of us Put on youth's most embarrassed ways, Disclaiming any marked success And claiming all unworthiness And lo, not one in ten has lied! Self-satisfied are most of us And with how little satisfied."

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING, Nov. 23rd.

Attended two sales of cattle, sheep pigs and poultry at Campbell & McKay's, all were carefully handled, some complaints were made about pigs being kept in crates so long, but this could not be helped, the pigs get plenty to eat and I don't think any better could be done for them.

I also looked after the shipping of 3 horses to White Bay by the S.S. Prospero, also another horse which went by schooner. All were carefully handled and everything was done satisfactorily. I was out to the country about a complaint of a horse being kept in a stable and not properly fed. I investigated and found the owner who denied the statement, but he promised to be kinder to the horse in future. I have had several complaints from people about cats being left out all night. One lady in the East End has six cats around her back yard which do not belong to her she wants something done for them. There are a number of lame horses receiving attention. I have been kept busy all this week looking after the general traffic of the city, and all teamsters caught riding on loads against the grade will be brought before the magistrate. I hope that in future teamsters will take notice and govern themselves accordingly as there is no work harder than coal hauling for a horse. I cautioned the driver of one of the Railway Express horses about his animal that was lame. He said it was a cord. I ordered the shoe off and the matter is now O.K.

MRS. BUDGE SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

"River Desert, Que.—'I used to have severe pain in my side. I would be unable to walk fast and could not stand for any length of time to do my washing or washing, but I would have to lie down to get relief from the pain. I had this for about two years, then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had had good results. I certainly got good results from it, too, as the last time I had a sore side was last May and I have not had it since. I am also glad of having good nursing for my baby, and I think it is your medicine that helped me in this way.'—Mrs. E. V. Surpin, River Desert, Quebec.

If you are suffering from the troubles of a displacement, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness, or a pain in the side, you should lose no time in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Allments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write for it to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario. This book contains valuable information that every woman should know.

Man Killed at Corner Brook.

The first accident of a very serious nature in connection with the development works at Corner Brook occurred on Friday morning when Vincent Gabriel, belonging to Stephenville, had his head so badly crushed by a steel column that he died a few hours later. The unfortunate man was engaged at riveting when a steel column being unloaded from a car quite close by swung around striking him in the head just near the temple and pounding his head up against another column, he was rendered unconscious but later somewhat revived for a short while. Upon medical examination, however, very little expectation of recovery was entertained and he passed away at 5 o'clock on Friday evening.

The Magistrate and Head Constable Cox went to Corner Brook on Saturday and viewed the body. The Company gave every facility to the inquiry, including office and stenographer. The finding was that the accident was unavoidable and no blame could be attached to anyone for the sad happening. The man was a widower, 38 years of age, no children. The remains were taken to his old home for interment.—Western Star.

Amateur Contest Attracts Huge Crowd

AT THE CRESCENT LAST NIGHT. The Crescent Theatre was jammed to its utmost capacity last night, when one of the best Amateur Contests seen in a long while, was held. The programme was snappy from beginning to end, and out of the ten contestants taking part, it was rather a herculean task to define the three best items. Well, after some careful considering on the part of Dan Delmar, little Mickey Michaels was awarded the first prize for his splendid solo.

The second honours went to Charlie Peters. Lilian Donnelly in a fascinating dance won third prize. The whole bill was thoroughly enjoyed by all, and the applause tendered each number was tremendous. As announced, another Contest takes place next Friday night when another big time is anticipated.

In the production "One Week of Love," Elaine Hammerstein is unquestionably at her charming best. A girl who was as much at home guiding an aeroplane as guiding a social career was necessary for the role, an actress who combined red and blue blood, who could dance the latest steps at social functions and climb with those same dainty feet the most difficult mountain passes. And Lewis Selznick chose, of course, "The star without a failure"—Elaine Hammerstein. Have you seen it yet? If you have not—to-night is positively your last chance.

Wembley the Wonderful

ALL ROADS LEAD TO LONDON.

(By SIR JOHN FOSTER FRASER.) Whenever, in a swift automobile, slip from the roar of London-town to Wembley, I am reminded of the amazing Arabian Nights when a golden city would spring into being overnight. Baddad of the story book, however, was fiction; Wembley the wonderful is real. It is taking many months to build, but each week brings an increased beauty which would have made an Arabian wizard gasp with envy.

In ancient times all roads were said to lead to Rome. Next year all roads will be directed to London—and in a loud whisper let me say that quite apart from the Exhibition, which will make all the world's previous Exhibitions, in Paris, in Chicago, in London itself, like side shows in comparison, the genial, amiable Londoners are making arrangements to give their relatives of Saxon stock a right jolly welcome when they come to the biggest city on earth.

For this is not going to be a world's Exhibition. People belonging to other nations will come and be welcome, but the happiest thing about it will be that it is a family affair, a gathering of Britons, from all the far-flung Dominions, to look each other proudly in the eye and, in the great halls, show each other what they are doing and so all be proud of the Empire.

If I lived in South Africa or New Zealand, Australia or Canada, or in India, or in a Crown Colony or a British Settlement, I would feel that going to Wembley in 1924 was the sacred mission of a loyal Imperialist, a sort of pilgrimage with one's duty not fully done till it had been made—like the journey of good Moslems to Mecca.

Proud of the Dominion or Commonwealth to which I belonged, I would feel I owed it to myself, on this great occasion in one's lifetime, to make the journey to London. But if I were old and unable to travel I would counsel all stalwart young men within my hearing "For a month or two cease worrying about your business.
Pack up and get you to Wembley. Understand that the Empire means to you and what you mean to the Empire. There will be inspiration in a thousand things. And when you return home you will be forthright with a knowledge which will be a spur, an incentive to greater prosperity in business."

Of course I'm enthusiastic about Wembley—a booster, a barracker, a drumbeater, a trumpet-blower, anything you like—for in my travels, I have seen much of the lands over which the Union Jack flies. I want my friends to come and see us. I want to meet again the fine big fellows I have met on the wheat lands of Canada, to get again a grip of the first of the men who have made Australia what it is, to renew acquaintance with the cherry hospitable folk of New Zealand, to meet South Africans who have made the Union a land of fulfilled promise.

Above all these people should meet each other. Our Empire is so big, and our possessions so far apart, that there is a danger of each section becoming self-contained, self-satisfied, with limited knowledge of other countries. What it is to renew acquaintance into the relationship of distant countries instead of maintaining the bonds of brotherhood. Yes, I feel that one of the marvellous consequences of the Empire Exhibition will be that Britons from all over the world will get to know one another and so be increasingly disposed to do each other a good turn in the way of trade.

Wembley is not going to be just a stack of exhibits—always rather bore-some, I admit. Imagination accompanies enterprise, and we are going to have the real duplication of life throughout the British world.
The Indian bazaar will be like a real bazaar in India, picturesque, dusky, and with the aroma of the East in the air and real Indians will patter round his head was covered with sore eruptions.

He cried and rubbed his head and his hair all fell out. He got but and squat in their little shops and make for you the things they make in Benares and Delhi and Armitar.

And if you want a violent change, well you can get it—constructed at the cost of millions of pounds—and see Northumbrian colliers at their work.

Was it not in the Arabian Nights we read about the magic carpet, reflecting upon which one was wated to any part of the world, a sort of luxurious dream-born aeroplane? But at Wembley all the world will be brought to you—and you may well rub your eyes at the kaleidoscope marvels of the Empire. The Dominions will each make a brave show—I like the way in which their representatives at Wembley are now in happy rivalry so that in captivating interest they can outdo the other—but there isn't a part of the Empire which will not be represented.

What are those smiling, pigtailed Chinamen doing in the picture? Well, they are British, for they come from Hong Kong and they will have a Chinese meal. And not only India will be inviting—already the mirrored Indian section is completed—but the orient will be further unfolded in the Malayan and Cingalese and Bur-mesa halls. East Africa will provide people from Zanzibar and Uganda and Kenya and Tanganyika and from West Africa will be the people and the products of the Gold Coast and Nigeria and Sierra Leone. You will be able to imagine you're in Malta and Cyprus or amongst the tropical islands of the West Indies. Besides—a point which should not be forgotten—the British, not inclined to advertise by shouting, are preparing some spectacles which will make the visitors exclaim, "We didn't know the old folks at home had such splendid things to show us."

All the countries and all the peoples in the British Empire are getting ready to do their share in making Wembley an exhibition the like of which will never be seen again in our lifetime. At a minimum you will be spending a week in merely sampling round the place; but in that time you will have made a tour of the world and learnt more than five years of reading what the Empire is doing.

And amusement—why the Stadium alone can seat an audience of 125,000.
Do you know that the Palace of Engineering covers over 600,000 square feet? Nearly twenty buildings are now erected. Australia has an area of 150,000 square feet, and is spending £250,000 on its exhibit. The Canadian pavilion occupies 100,000 square feet and two Canadian railroad companies have another 20,000 feet.
A special railway line has been built to transport people from London—about 12 minutes' journey—the lawns and the lakes are visions of loveliness; the architecture of the great halls is noble and dignified, and at night times they will be, inside and out, flooded with varying tones of electric light.

If Haroun-al-Raschid revisited "the pale glimpses of the moon" next year he would have to admit that he-dizened Bagdad was a mere bagatelle compared with the wizardry of Wembley.

"MORE AND MORE TRUST IN THE GOVERNOR."

It is earnestly hoped that when the promised "Commission of Inquiry" gets to work here next month, or next year, or the year after—nobody seems able to fix even an approximate date—his Excellency the Governor will insist upon the cesspool of political turpitude left us by the late Administration being probed to its deepest depths. Lord Bryce has reiterated that the public is inclined to put more and more trust in Governors, and less in state legislatures, partly because an individual can be more easily watched and held responsible than a group of representatives. However, in the present instance we shall wait and see!

THE SOCIAL DEMANDS OF POLITICS.

How true it is that every day, even in our small community, the social demands of politics are crowding the more purely political ones to the rear! Once the diplomatist was the centre of the storm; to-day it is rather the economist. Franchises and parliaments, balances of power and spheres of influence are fading like the heat of the leaf. Wages and hours of work, even such academic speculations as the monopoly of labor, fill men's minds, as democracy asserts itself more and more. There was a time when the trades union was regarded as the outpost of revolution; in this twentieth century scores of employers regard it as the breakwater of the red deluge. But in England, where organized labor is far ahead of any other country in power, the question is being asked whether the trades union has not spent its force, or, indeed, what the class consciousness has to do with a democracy. The effort to protect a class, industrially, is analogous to the attempt to safeguard an industry by a tariff. It ends in protecting a part against the whole, provided always the country is big enough. So new dilemmas are raised for a government week by week, because earthquakes are not necessarily physical, but have their seat of commotion in the human mind.

AN UGLY WORD BUT AN EXPRESsive one. According to the International Interpreter, sociocracy—an ugly word, as that master of words, Lord Morley, admitted, but having for its meaning the service of society—is taking charge more and more of the political whirligig. The diplomatist is being round out, in more senses than one. He is rarely equal to the strain he is can paper, there has been reborn the lawyer-smuggler, the gentleman who believes in paying tithes to authority—a safe but very expensive method. This is how they put it in the vernacular of the illicit traders:—

"Tell me about protection, Bill," I asked.

"Well," Bill answered, "Protection's the paying of dollars to the officials and the police. If you pay enough, they'll let you alone. You don't suppose our boat gets into port for nothing, do you?" Bill, he it said was a sometime saloon keeper, and knew everything there was to know of the graft of the city. And Bill, reckoning up the number of people to be paid, opined that the lawyer method, though safe, was an extravagant one, and made a half dollar for him a drink a very reasonable price indeed.

Big Bill at the Majestic

WILL BE REPEATED THIS AFTERNOON AND NIGHT.

"The World's Champion" and "A Friendly Husband" are eleven big acts of fun and merriment, tingling over with an interesting portion of pleasing romance. Wallace Reid in the first mentioned provides a series of thrills, peculiarly fascinating. The story is one of unusual strength and appeal. "The World's Champion" is a story of a ne'er-do-well who puts his snobbish family on the may. The picture is based upon the celebrated play "The Champion." "A Friendly Husband," a super-comedy, gives the popular Lupino Lane great scope. It is the one and only film picture that solves the mother-in-law hoodoo. These five reels of fast and furious fun start with a smile, run into a laugh, and end with a riot of roars—a laugh that lasts

TAXATION AND THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

On Water Street today the opinion prevails that "the commercial interests of the country are ruinously affected by excessive taxation." While I do not deny that serious injury has been done thereby, I refuse to admit that it is ruinous. High taxes, hard to bear as they are, nevertheless are not insuperable obstacles to business expansion. A few years before the great war people would have stood aghast at the prospect of half what they now pay. By that time they had forgotten the rates after each war of the past. Through all these experiences business has preserved a great deal of vitality, and it can do so now. Yet it will certainly, and very properly, resist to the utmost any political combination in the next session of the Legislature to increase the super-taxes when all the graduated rates should be reduced as uniformly as possible.

CURIOUS THINGS ABOUT THE ILLICIT LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

By the way, I observe that one of the curious things about the illicit liquor traffic is the way in which it has brought back to life all the old paraphernalia of the great smuggling days. Now, as then, there are the "poor honest men" who defy the revenue service, and run their cargoes in storm or under gun fire. Witness the song of the tobacco smugglers when George the Third was King:—

"Or if by quick sailing (Thick weather prevailing) We leave them behind (as we do now and then), We are sure of a gun from Each frigate we run from. Which is often destructive to poor honest men." On the other hand, says an Amerininety minutes. Last night to permit Professor King to attend to a later engagement, the artists, Pauline Thurston and Fritz Bruch, took the stage at 8.40. Miss Thurston's dancing fully justifies the many appreciative references of those who have already had the good fortune to witness her demonstration. Many of the beautiful dancer's interpretations are entirely of her own creation and composition. Her rendition of a dramatic episode likewise forestalls her qualifications as an elocutionist. Fritz Bruch scored new successes and won new friends last night when many who heard his musical treat for the first time ardently applauded each item. The same bill will be repeated to-night and afternoon when the children will be especially cared for. On Monday a

M. G. C. A.

The Sports Committee and other members of the above Association held a meeting in their Club Rooms last night to arrange the winter programme of sport. M. Gus Herder, Chairman of the Sports Committee, outlined the object of the meeting, and conducted the election of officers for the hockey season, which are as follows: Capt. Erol Munn; Vice-Capt. Herbert Coultas; Secretary, Stan Lumsden; League Delegate & Manager, Gus Herder. The Guards have all the available men for hockey this winter as last, except "Robbie," their late star defence man; but with the addition of several new men of hockey fame, they will have no trouble to select a good man for that position. The various runners for the track teams are getting down to practice for the A. A. Sports next month, and the Committee are looking forward to a successful winter season. The Guards hope, if suitable arrangements can be made, to help to bring back again into the line of sport Baseball, and further meetings will be held to decide on this question.

Club Tournaments Arranged.

Following the Sports Meeting, the Entertainment Committee met and decided to hold an auction forty-five card tournament to take place in the club rooms on next Tuesday night. It is hoped that a large attendance will be present as a very interesting evening will be in store for all. A valuable prize has been kindly donated for competition. It is also the intention of the Entertainment Committee to make arrangements for the holding of a Smoking Concert, which will be set down for the following week.

BASEBALLERS HOLD ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING.

Programme Outlined to Help Defray Expenses Securing New Field.

A large and enthusiastic gathering of baseball players and supporters attended a meeting in the office of Mr. T. V. Hartnett last night. The meeting was called for the purpose of devising ways and means whereby baseball may be brought back stronger than ever next season. Judging by the large attendance present and the enthusiasm manifested throughout, it is safe to say that baseball will come back in all its glory next year. Mr. J. B. Orr, President, occupied the chair, and amongst those present were: J. W. Morris, C. S. Frost, C. J. Cahill, A. Cohen, T. V. Hartnett, A. H. Thomas, C. Quick, E. Clouston, N. Ellis, G. Edens, W. Skinner, W. McCradie, P. Dobbin, E. Foway, B. Power, D. French, J. Dunphy, T. Manning, D. Kieley, A. Hill, besides a large number of fans. Mr. Orr in his opening remarks pointed out that the meeting was called to talk over matters with a view to revive the game. Baseball was not played during the past season, simply because there was no field available, and under no consideration would the Nfld. Football League give over the use of St. George's Field for that purpose, although the two leagues were the joint holders of that property. Mr. Orr felt assured that baseball could be brought back stronger than ever, and that he would give the game of baseball his entire support if all the players were willing to act. The chief object of the meeting was to make arrangements for the securing of funds to help defray the cost of a suitable ground. It was suggested that one means of obtaining funds would be the organising of entertainments, etc. Mr. Arthur Cohen undertook to look after this end, and will be assisted by Messrs. W. Skinner, P. Dobbin and G. Edens as a committee. The announcement was made that they would hold a big dance in the Grenfell Hall on a date early in December, and an extra effort would be made to draft up a programme of events to follow. Mr. Cohen opened a subscription list with a donation of $20.00. The following field committee was appointed: Messrs. T. V. Hartnett, N. Ellis, C. Quick, E. Clouston. Finance Committee: Messrs. J. W. Morris, C. J. Cahill, C. S. Frost and T. V. Hartnett. The matter of interesting the public in the game was also considered and it was pointed out that the cause of very little interest being manifested was due to the fact that the teams were mostly non-representative and generally had no supporters with result that very few cared who won. It was urged that only a limited number of teams be permitted to enter next year and that these will be only from recognized clubs who would guarantee a good team. The entry of two clubs is practically assured, and the Secretary will write other clubs asking their opinion on the matter. After much discussion on other matters the meeting adjourned until next Friday night when reports of the various committees will be received. The meeting was full of enthusiasm and it looks as if baseball will be back again next year more interesting than ever before.

FOOTBALL AT NIGHT SUCCESSFUL IN U.S.A.

Although several colleges and semi-professional football teams have discussed the possibility of night games on electrically lighted fields, the first actual trial of the sort was staged last Saturday night in Cincinnati. The University of Cincinnati defeated Kentucky Wesleyan 17-0, and the game was pronounced eminently satisfying from the standpoint of both players and spectators. A white football was used and was perfectly handled by the winning team. Forward passes worked successfully, and a 30-yard drop kick featured in the final rally.

she having lost a man overboard Saturday morning while about 20 miles off Bay of Islands. There was very little wind at the time and the schooner was making only 2 knots when seaman Ellsworth fell overboard while taking in the lights. The dory was put over but the unfortunate man sank before he could be reached. He belonged to Rocky Hr. and leaves a wife and one child at Sydney.

WESTERN STAR NOTES.

FIRE AT CORNER BROOK.

A small mill was burnt at the townsite at Corner Brook in the early hours of last Saturday morning. The watchman had left only a few minutes to attend other duties when the place was discovered on fire. Large number of men soon gathered and set to work to fight the flames. Two tractors recently purchased were stored there. These were saved but not before one of them had been somewhat damaged.

Capt. Pine who sailed the U.S. cutter Columbia in the recent International Fishermen's Races, arrived in Curling by Sunday's express on herding business. His schooner the Columbia has been fitted at Gloucester and is now on her way here for a cargo of herring.

The S.S. Sable I left Halifax yesterday en route for this coast and is due here Sunday or Monday. The Sable will ply on this route for the remainder of the season.

The first sleighs for the season were out on Monday. Last year the first sleighs were on the roads on the 10th and the previous year on the 7th November.

MAN LOST FROM SCROONER.
