The democratic national committee has issued an address to the people of the United States saying: Cleveland and Hendricks are alceted with 219 electoral votes. The address names the states which have given democratic majorities, including New York, New Jersey, Con-necticut, Indiana and West Virginis. The address concludes: No fraud or counten-sance can defeat the will of the people of the United States thus publicly and de-liberately declared. committee has issued an address announc-ing that while the vote is very close, re-turns and estimates from the most authen-tic sources justify the belief that the people of the state cast a plurality in favor of the republican candidates. The committee have received copies of official returns filed in all but eleven counties, and feel justified in asserting with entire confidence that the state has gone republican. An associated press bulletin issued at 2 this morning says : Official county re-turns and very close figures on twelve counties which have not been officially re-ported and compared indicate Cleveland's plurality to be considerably increased, reaching nearly 1000 in the state. FRIDAY MORNING NOV. 7. 1884.

The Times out of Joint. The times are out of joint, surely, in this era of low prices, still falling markets, and "over-production." But the Hamilton Times is the worst out of joint of all. The farmers are holding back their wheat because the price is so low. Merchants suffer in consequence; and so do the railways, because the freight which they ought to be carrying is held back. This lamentable state of things draws from the Hamilton oracle these words of wisdom :

oracle these words of wisdom : The right way to start that grain moving would be to reduce the Tilley tariff on im-ports. Importations have been failing off. Great Britain sent £701,374 worth of goods to Canada in September, 1863, and only £562,627. In September, 1864. For the nine months end-ing with September, the failing off was £1,215,-468. The import taxes make the goods so dear that Canadian farmers do not like to trade their wheat for goods. It takes too much wheat to buy a small amount of silk or earpet, so they use the old clothes and furnishings and hold the grain for a change in the condi-tions, thus incidentally cutting off the earn-ings of the railways and condemning the rail-wages. It must have cost something of an effort to crowd into so little space so much per version of fact. The memory and ex ample of George Washington are not held in reverence in the Times office we fear. Talk about dear goods these times ! Why, everything that farmers have to buy, from a pound of nuts to a reaping machine, and from a yard of factory cotton to a man's not by any reasonable concessions obtain best suit or a woman's silk dress—is now these 40. The socialistic element—his phenomenally cheap. Tea, coffee, sugar and groceries generally never were so cheap here since Canada was a country. Bat some articles are dear notwithstand ing. True, but just come down to details, if you please, and tell us what they are. Such articles of necessary household use as are dear now are every one of those things that Canadian farmers produce and have for sale. Take your choice : name to us those necessaries of life that can be called dear at present, and we warrant you they are all the produce of Canadian farmers. Never before did the articles that farmers have to sell bring so much ference the letter was frequently alluded that farmers have to sell bring so much

He becomes actually lavish in the odds he offers. urchmen in regard to disestablishment, churchmen in regard to disestablishment," confining himself to the special point that their duty is to take care that dissensions from within shall not bring the establish-ment to an end. Mr. Gladstone remarks that since the reformation the anglican church has been almost the only one which has deliberately set itself to include both the parties which struggled together in the Roman catholic church before the reforma-tion. The anglican church has deliber-ately set itself to include both parties, just as parliament includes both political par-ties; whereas most other churches have taken up the position of political cluss, all These will show his loyalty, his deep conviction that the right (right from his standpoint) will prevail. Elsewhere we copy the London Spectator's summary of what the premier has to say on "the duty of churchmen in regard to disestablishment." In the con-ference the letter was frequently alluded to as "a magnificent letter," and as one "worthy of the premier's transcendant without a state of the strenuousness of past and parties have done great service to the church, and that neither should try to push the other out.

illustrates. He was not aware of the approach of death, as Dr. Carnochan loved him too tenderly to tell him the serious nature of his illuess. Brignoli had written a duet for two voices, which was to be sung at a school concert, and he asked Signor Al-bites, husband of Mme. Gazzaniga, to take his place at the plano and play the accom-paniment over, in which he wished to make some alterations. While Albites was playing, the dying tenor, who was propped up in bed, became so interested in his own composition that he began to hum and then to sing the tenor part, his voice ringing out clear and loud with all his old-time fervor, to the intense suprise and sad pleasure of those who were present. Even five minutes before his death, after Dr. Carnochan had given him a mix-ture of ammonia and cognac, his eyes sparkled, and after trying his voice to see that it had not been impaired by his ill-ness, he exclaimed with great animation: "Ah! surely be our wisdom to buy no more imported goods than we really need, and so avoid running in debt to England. We owe England too much already, shall we better ourselves by recklessly "taking on" further and heavier bills ? Yet the Times talks as if the importation of more goods would be a benefit.

All kinds of store goods are phenomenally cheap just now ; but the way the every time. Times defies facts by talking about dear goods is the more startling phenomenon of the two. Hear it, all ye storekeepers ; and all ye honsewives, too, whose business it is to go shopping. The Hamilton Times says that goods are dear in Canada at present. Now we come to a pause.

The Condition of the Great Western in 1882.

We said at sight that Sir Henry Tyler's statement that the Great Western railway, when taken over, was in worse condition than the Grand Trunk, would surely provoke criticism. The expected criticism has been promptly forthcomin in London. The Times publishes the following:

lowing: 4. St. James' Place, London, Oct 24. SIR: Referring to your report of the meet-ing of the Grand Trunk railway company, at which the chairman, Sir Henry Tyler, is re-ported to have said that the £100,000 at re-ourgel sugnemes account was necessary, owing which the chairman, but the £100,000 at re-ported to have said that the £100,000 at re-newal suspense account was necessary owing to the condition in wnich the Great Western was handed over to them-will Sir Henry Tyler reconcile this statement with those pub-lished under the authority, not only of him-self, but the board, which are as follows: eff. Sixtract from engineer's report, Great West-ern division :

 "Extract from engineer's report, Great Western division:
 "At the close of the year the length of iron track use 24 miles; the total length of steel track is 830 miles. The condition of the permanent way is excellent; all other parts of the company's property have also been kept in good reparts." Now, sir, this report from which I quote was rublished more than six months after the Grand Trunk had taken over the road, and signed by a gentleman of the highest character, who is their present engineer.

In its remarks on the Grand Trunk meeting the Montreal Gazette says :

meeting the Montreal Gazette says : One fact of importance stated by the presi-dent will be learned with satisfaction, name-ly, that the condition of the line, road-bed, equipment, etc., is being well maintained, and in this connection it will be learned by a good many people with surprise that the condition of the Great Western line when taken over by the Grand Trunk was not nearly so good as the latter. On this point Sir Henry Tyler said: "When we came to take over the Great West-ern, which was formerly held up as being in so much better order than the Grand Trunk, what did we find ? We had to put as much baltast on that line in six months as had pre-viously been laid upon it in six years. We found their bridges wanted renewing in stome and fron in all directions. I shall have some-thing, also, to say on that subject presently. We found that the car stock wanted renewal. Since the fusion we have actually renewed two affiths of the car stock of the Great Western company. grain until the spring in the hope of an improvement in prices by that time.

THE LITTLE CASK. Translated from the French of Guy de Mare passant by the New Orleans Times-Democrat. Maitre Chicot, the innkeeper of Espre-ville, pulled up his tilbury before the gate of Mere Magloire's farm. He was a great kulking fellow of about 40, red-faced and stout, who had a tolerably mean reputation. He fastened his reins to a fence-post, and entered the yard. He possessed some real estate adjoining the old woman's land, which he had long coveted. her; but Mere Magloire obstinately refused. "I was born here; and I'm going to die here, too," was what she always said. He found her peeling potatoes in front of her door. With her 72 years of age, she was dry, wrinkled, stooped, but indefa-tigable as a young girl. Chicot patted her on the back in a friendly way, and then sat down beside her on a stool. Well, old mother, how is the health-always hearty, eh ?"

"Spectral ways nearby, en?" "Spectral you, Maitre Chicot?" "Eh! eh!-just a little twinge once in a while; otherwise I'm all right enough." "Allons—so much the better."

"Allons—so much the better." And she said nothing more. Chicot watched her working. Her crooked fingers, knobby and hard as the legs of a crab, caught up the gray potatoes from the big basket; and she turned them round and round quickly, taking off long bands of peelings under the edge of an old knife which she held in the other hand. And as soon as each potato was all yellow, she threw it into a bucket of water. Three impudent chickens would come one after the other to nick up the peeling even from te no richer fare than a crust of buttered bread and a little soup. Chicot, much disappointed, coaxed her in vain. Neither would she drink. She refused to take any coffee. He asked : the other to pick up the peeling even from the folds of her skirt, and then would run away as fast as their legs could carry them, with their booty in their beaks. Chicot seemed to be worried, hestated

Chicot seemed to be worried, hesitated and anxions,—with something that clung to the tip of his tongue and would not venture to leave it. At last he made a decided effort. "Say ! Mere Magloire." "What ean I do for you ?" "Well, that farm of yours ;—you still don't want to sell it." "If that's what you want—no ! Never come for that here. What I say I say

Then Chicot, in a burst of generosity, The old woman gazed at him with sus-picion, -smelling a snare. She asked: "That is all very well for me; but how about you? that won't give you the farm?" He went on again to explain: "Don't you bother your head about that. You'll stay here just as long as the good God allows you to live. You'll al-ways remain here at home, in your own house. Only, you'll sign a little paper at the notary's so that it'll come to me after you. You've got no children-nobody be-longing to you, except those nephews that you don't care anything about. Now, how does that please you? You'll keep your property during your whole life; and I'll pay you down one hundred and fifty frances every month. It's all clear profit fied air imaginable. The old woman remained dumb-sur-prised, uneasy, but nevertheless visibly tempted. Finally she said: "I'll not say ro. Only I want to reason with myself about the affair. You come back and we'll talk it over again-some time next week. Then I'll tell you just Till be." And he got into his tilbury. Four days later he returned. The old woman was sitting at the door, busy cut-ting up bread for her soup. He sat down beside her, bid her good-day, bent his face down very close to hers while talking for the purpose of smelling her breath. And he smelled a strong smell of alcohol. Then his face brightened. "Say, mother, I'm sure you'll offer me a little glass,—ch?" And they took two or three drinks to-gether. what I think about it." And Maitre Chicot went off as happy as a king who had just conquered an empire. Mere Magliore remained thoughtful. She did not sleep the next night. For four whole days she was in a fever of hesitation. She felt sure there was something unlucky for herself in such an arrange-ment-something to her disadvantage, but gether. the thought of the thirty ccus a month-of that fine ready cash that would be poured But very soon there was a rumo through the coantry that old Mere through the coantry that old More Mag-loire was drinking, and getting hepelessly drunk, all by herself. Sometimes she was picked up from the floor of her kitchen, or she had to be carried in from the yard, or was found lying intoxicated in the middle of some country road, and had to be brought home, senseless as any corpse. Chicot nover went to see her any more ; and whenever anybody would speak to the old woman, he would exclaim : "Isn't it awful to see a person of her age form such a habit ? And, you see, when one's as old as that, there's no hope for one. Some day or other it'll be the end of her !" It was the end of her in fact. She died line her apron, that would come to her like a windfall, without her making the least effort to get it-tortured her with desire. Then she went to the notary and told him all abopt the situation. He advised her to accept Chicot's proposition, but told her to ask fifty ecus instead of thirty, as her farm was worth, at the least calculation, sixty thousand france. "At that rate even," said the notary— "supposing you live fifteen years more— he would still only have paid you forty-five sand francs.' The old woman actually trembled with end of her I" It was the end of her in fact. She died the winter after, just about Christmas time, having lain down very drunk in the excitement at the prospect of fifty ecus every month; but she was still very sus-picious—fearful of a thousand things unforeseen, of a thousand possible schemes to defraud her; and she remained for a whole snow. And Maitre Chicot found himself in posdefraud her; and she remained for a whole evening asking questions, unable to decide what to do. Fiually she told the notary to prepare the deed, and returned home as excited as if she had drunk four whole And Mattre Check found match in pos-session of the farm. These Pianos have now been before the pub-lit for 32 years, and have always ranked among the very best, and are celebrated for quality of tone, great power and durability of act on, prompt elastic touch, fine finish and elegant sty e of case, combined with every known in-provement. The most coa plete and unbroken list on record, embracing a period of 30 years, and made up of 28 first pizzs, medias and d ploses reclived at the principal exhibitions in Canada-Montreal, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton and London. At the Centennial Ex-hibition in Philadelphia, in 1876, we secured a edal and diploma for our plano. The great favor with which the cross-scale planos have been received for so long a period, and the re-putation they bear, h is induced others to imi-tate them. The Toronion at Last Meet More Than Their Match - Victory for the Mon-

Notwithstanding the variety of amuse ments going on simultaneously yesterday afternoon, a very large crowd of spectators assembled to see the Rugby football match between the Montrealers and Terontos for the championship of the dominion. They were by no means disappointer; for al-though the visiting team carried off the honors of the day by so large a figure as 30 points to rothing, wet the greater part of the same nor more through stiffness.

though the visiting team carried off the honors of the day by 5 large a figure as 30 points to rothing, yet the greater part of the game way very holy contested. The ball travers devery part of the field, and at no time could the piay be characterised as one-sided. The game was begun by McLennan kick-ing off for Toronto. The superiority of the Montrealers soon showed itself in the fact that the ball was kept well down by the goal of the home team, and that this latter had to touch down behind their own goal line. They rallied, however, and the contest was soon confined to the centre of area that the ball was kept well down by the goal of the home team, and that this latter had to touch down behind their own goal line. They rallied, however, and the contest was soon confined to the centre of area the occasion of a sacred concert given by the choir, assisted by some outgoal line. They railed, however, and the contest was soon confined to the centre of the field, but not before an excel-ient kick from Sterling scaured a goal for Montreal. To cut matters short, it may be said that the game was of a most varied character; every member did his utmost—Drummond (Montreal), and Muntz (Toronto), perhaps more particularly dis-tinguishing themselves. The total result was: 2 goals (kicked by Sterling), 3 tries, and 2 rouges (30 points), for Montreal; Toronto nothing.

and 2 rouges (30 points), orticeable in the Toronto nothing. What was particularly noticeable in the play of the winning fifteen was the admir-able way in which they played into each other's hands; no one monopo-lized the ball; the passing back was rapidly, frequently, and judici-ously done; every player was on the alert watching his nearest comrade and ready to assist him. To this must be traced the victory of Montreal, for in other points the Torontos were by no means their inferiors, as was shown in the excel-lent manner in which often they more than held their own in the scrimmages.
