CHATHAM FAIR

Large Attendance on Opening Night—Fine Weather.

Chatham, N. B., Sept. 17.—The third Miramichi agricultural exhibition was formally opened to the public tonight under the most promising conditions, by Lieut. Governor Snowball.

Premier Tweedie, president of the association, who presided, was loudly applauded. He spoke of the value of these exhibitions to the agricultural industry and told of the grants other towns had received for this purpose, while the only donation given to Chatham was the provincial government subsidy, but Chatham did not require any more.

Mayor Nicol, who was well received, also considered such exhibition most stimulating to the agricultural industry. He commended the policy of the provincial government of encouraging them by grants and extended a hearty welcome from the citizens to the visitors.

Premier Tweedie regretted the unavoidable absence of C. Marcell, M. P., of Bonaventure.

Hon. C. H. LaBillicois, commissioner of public works, was called upon. He expressed his pleasure at being present and congratulated the county on its exhibits and on the progress Chatham was making in other directions, after which he made a brief address in French.

Hon. W. P. Jones, solicitor general, was surprised at the fine buildings and agricultural exhibits, which equalled any he had ever seen and hoped the exhibition would be a great success.

Hon. F. J. Sweeney was glad to attend the opening of another Chatham exhibition. He had attended exhibitions in St. John, Sackville, etc., but had never seen a finer display of agricultural products. In other parts of the province it was thought that the North Shore was not as good for farming as other parts of the province, but that was not so, as was proved by these exhibits.

George Robertson, M. P., of St. John, spoke next, and extended a greeting to Chatham from the citizens of St. John. He said the agricultural display was far ahead of that at the St. John exhibition. He was particularly impressed by the quality and size of the onions, he had never seen better imported ones, and there could be a great industry. The cattle could be no better, and the race course was the best he had seen on this side of the water. The St. John people, though they should be the centre and all should visit them, but if possible he would arouse hundreds of them to visit the next exhibition here. Northumberland was a great county and had made great advances. Within a radius of 50 miles, there were more industries than in any other county.

All the speakers were generously applauded and Premier Tweedie thanked the audience for their attention.

Three cheers were given for the governor, after which his honor declared the exhibition open.

Visitors are arriving from all directions and the indications are that if the weather continues favorable this will be the red letter week in the history of Chatham. Decorators have worked artistically in the interior of the building and the effect is picturesque. The pillars are tastefully twined with bunting, hundreds of Chinese lanterns are suspended from the rafters and innumerable gaily-colored flags and streamers add to the brightness of the scene.

All the available space has been taken and the individual booths are more attractive and original than ever before.

The exhibits are numerous and of high order.

In our next issue we will devote considerable space to these.

NEW PAY SYSTEM

To go into Effect on the 1. C. R. Shortly

We learn today that a new paying system will, in the near future, be introduced on the I. C. R., which will probably do away with the present system of running the pay train over the full length of the line and branches. The section men will be paid by envelope, the train crews who are not paid in Moncton will be paid at the Superintendent's office here and those of the mechanical department will be paid from the head office of their department, Moncton.

There are few particulars obtainable at present but this is an outline of the new paying system.

NARROW ESCAPE

Gray's Mill on Fire in the Gale on Friday.

The high wind which prevailed last, caused a good deal of anxiety among mill men. About three o'clock in the afternoon a thick smoke was seen issuing from the east side of the rear portion of Gray's mill. Fortunately the mill men were on the spot quickly with the mill hose and the fire was soon subdued. Hose of the Town fire department was stretched to the hydrant at the corner of the street close by, but owing to a break in the main, which by the way, was being repaired with all speed, no water was forthcoming. Had the fire started on the windward side of mill instead of the leeward nothing would have saved the mill or the lower portion of the town. The fire was caused by the wind blowing the flame and sparks down the smoke stack.

ACTION AGAINST REV. H. E. THOMAS

Chairman of Moncton Police Board Contemplates Legal Proceedings

Moncton, N. B., Sept. 15.—It is stated on good authority that Ald. Fryers, chairman of the police committee, contemplates taking legal proceedings against Rev. H. E. Thomas, pastor of Wesley Memorial church, in connection with the statement made by Mr. Thomas last Sunday night to the effect that the chairman of the police committee was a protector of criminals. The statement was made in the course of a forceful Scott Act in Moncton and the pastor stated that when Magistrate Kay sent C. T. A. violators to jail without the option of a fine they rushed to the chairman of the police committee for protection.

Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life.

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs. M. J. Dabruz

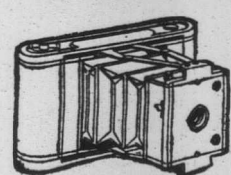

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth. When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation and you cannot hear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary J. Dabruz, of 150 Main Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba, writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a blessing to me through that delicate period known as the change of life. For six years it disturbed my entire system. I had hot flashes, was extremely nervous, became pale and debilitated, very irregular in the monthly flow, and the blood all seemed to be in my head. I had frequent palpitation and throbbing of the heart, in fact, my whole system seemed to be in disorder."

"I received no relief from the suffering incident to this period until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I date my relief from the time I took the first bottle. I gradually improved, nature took her course painlessly, and in due time I was a well woman."

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

TABLES WITH STRANGE HISTORIES

Although the table of the House of Commons at which the members of the present Parliament were sworn in before taking their seats has witnessed many fierce debates and historic incidents since it was first placed in its present position after the Westminster fire of 1834, it is by no means such an interesting or ancient piece of furniture as the old table which was rescued from the conflagration, and which is now to be seen in the tea-room at St. Stephen's.

The latter table was designed by Sir Christopher Wren, and at it the first members for Scottish constituencies who came to Westminster after the Scotch union in 1707 took the oaths and subscribed their names on the roll of Parliament. All the famous Parliamentary orators of the eighteenth century and the early decades of the nineteenth century made their pronouncements at this table, which, after the fire, was placed in one of the offices of the Board of Trade in Whitehall. It was mainly through the instrumentality of the late Sir Reginald Polgrave, who succeeded Sir Erskine May as clerk of the House of Commons, that the table was ultimately restored to the Palace of Westminster and found a resting-place in the tea-room.

An interesting story is attached to a table at present in the possession of Lord Sidmouth, to whose ancestor—successively Speaker of the House of Commons and Chancellor of the Exchequer at the end of the eighteenth and beginning of the nineteenth centuries—it belonged.

This is the table upon which, with the moistened corner of a dinner napkin, after the cloth had been removed, Lord Nelson, when a guest in Downing Street before setting out in his last voyage, drew a rough chart of the Mediterranean indicating by a cross the exact point at which he intended to come up with the French and Spanish fleets to inflict on them the defeat of Trafalgar.

Lord Stanhope, too, possesses a table which played an important part in a great political question; for it was across this piece of furniture that Pitt and Wilberforce discussed the abolition of the slave trade.

It might naturally be supposed that the story of the table around which the members of the present Cabinet sit at times to deliberate upon the affairs of the country was teeming with historical incidents. As a matter of fact, it is quite a new table, made of mahogany and costing £50, and was purchased only three years ago. It took the place, however, of an old deal table which stood in the Foreign Office—where Cabinet Councils have been held of late years—for some considerable time, and around which the Gladstone and Salisbury Administrations were wont to gather.

This old deal table, which for nearly a score of years had stood almost neglected in an upper room in the building, was first brought out for the use of the Cabinet when the Ministers commenced to use the quiet, spacious room in the Foreign Office for their meetings instead of 10, Downing Street, the official residence of the Prime Minister. The table underwent severe democratic changes in its time, and when the Cabinet was enlarged the table was enlarged also, wooden slabs being added to it in such a manner that the table which was originally square, was made oval. From time to time it was patched and mended, and, having grown crazy with wear, was at last discarded and a new table purchased in its place.

The table at which Palmerston, Beaconsfield, Bright, and Lord

Amongst other interesting pieces of furniture belonging to Parliament might be mentioned a beautiful Chippendale clock worth something like £200, which was discovered three years ago amongst some old boxes and other apparently useless articles in a lumber room of the House. When the clock was cleaned the Royal arms were discovered painted on the frame, showing that it had adorned a State apartment at some time. The clock now occupies a prominent position in one of the rooms of the House of Commons and keeps excellent time.

I. C. R. CLERKS UNDER ARREST.

Alleged that Harry W. Roome and Stanley W. Fidler are $1,200 Short Halifax, Sept. 17.—During the past week discrepancies have been discovered in the accounts of the I. C. R. freight department at Deepwater, and investigation by Superintendent Jarvis and Auditor Stewart, the train auditor, discovered a shortage of about $1,200. The auditors and a number of clerks and checkers were engaged all day yesterday taking stock and looking over the accounts trying to discover the exact amount.

A warrant was sworn out on Saturday for the arrest of Stanley W. Fidler, accountant in the office, and Harry W. Roome, assistant cashier, two employees of the department and they were placed in custody where they will remain until they come up for examination before stipendiary Fielding today.

A prominent I. C. R. official who has been investigating the alleged robbers, confirmed the report that the money was missing, but on advice of counsel declined to give any further information regarding the case.

It is alleged that Fidler and Roome were working in collusion, Roome recovering money for freight and not making an entry of it in the cash book. The parties paying the freight would receive the goods and when the delivery checks would be handed into the office Fidler would not enter them as being delivered, but would place them in a private drawer in his desk. It is stated that checks covering the missing amount were found in his desk.

Besides being clerks in the I. C. R. it is said that one of the men is interested in a fruit, and the other in a tobacco store on Gottingen street.—Transcript.

SAFE BLOWN OPEN

Amherst, N. S., Sept. 14.—The store of D. F. Archibald at Athol, a town about fifteen miles from Amherst, was broken into last night. The safe was blown open and $800 in cash taken. The robbery was evidently the work of professionals, and from appearances there were several engaged in it. Chief of Police Arthur, of Amherst police force, has the matter in hand.

Mr. Prince, the Dominion expert, who has recently returned from British Columbia, states that the Fisheries' Commission journeyed after completing a very extensive programme of work. One of the important things demonstrated was that, for the first time in Pacific waters, after many attempts, oysters from the Atlantic Ocean planted by the government have begun to thrive. The oysters were planted by the government near Queen Charlotte Sound and not only did they breed, but they have yielded spat which is now a year old and an inch in diameter.—Fishing Gazette.

MOUNT ALLISON ITS ADVANTAGES

At this time of the year when young men are choosing the colleges they shall attend it is very important that they should choose wisely. The college which can teach them best how to get the most out of their work, will enable them with high ideals for life and care best for their social training and physical health and will give them a degree that will carry weight the world over, is the one to which they should direct their steps. The most splendidly housed college students in the Dominion are those at Mt Allison. The largest Ladies College in the country gathers a couple of hundred young ladies from the best homes in the Provinces and the great freedom of intercourse allowed under the eyes of the professors and teachers between the University students is found to be a distinct social and moral advantage to both classes. The work of the Arts department of Mt Allison University will be carried on in the strong way which has characterized it heretofore. The latest additions to the attraction of this interprovincial university is the McClellan school of applied science, a large four story building in which are found well equipped shops for carpentry, wood turning, forging, chipping and filling rooms for mechanical free-hand drawing, descriptive geometry, surveying and mapping and laboratories and lecture rooms for physics chemistry and biology. A 10 horse power engine is used for motive power, the 15 forges are worked by Sturtevant blowers and exhaust fans. The class for surveying carry $800 worth of apparatus to the field and large importations of scientific apparatus are being added to the laboratories every year. Mt Allison has decided that unless some very large endowment came her way, since McGill University has gained so enormous an equipment as to place her first among the technical colleges of the world, and the McGill degree is recognized anywhere, not to attempt to compete, judging that she would be serving the interests of our young men better if she joined hands with the greatest Canadian University. Accordingly a scheme of affiliation has been agreed upon by which Mt Allison gives the first two years of McGill's courses in architectural, civil mechanical, mining and electrical engineering, and then without examination a student enters the third year of McGill work is found that by this plan that a student can save at least $200 a year for each of the two years before he proceeds to McGill, then he takes advantage of the unequalled equipment at Montreal. The smaller college, when specially equipped for the purpose can give the first two years work in even better form than the larger on account of the greater amount of personal attention which can be given to each student. These Mt Allison courses have proved unexpectedly popular. The total number of students enrolled at Mt Allison last year in all departments was 523. Of these 39 were in the second year of the work in engineering.

Chief Engineer Donkin of the mines at Glace Bay, C. B. says that at the present rate of development Cape Breton alone will require 50 young engineers a year. It is a most gratifying fact while the population of the provinces is nearly stationary the number of college students is rapidly increasing.

THE OPEN SEASON FOR HUNTING BIG GAME.

The open season for hunting big game commences today and there has been the usual haste for licenses and a good many parties have already started for the woods. The open season for shooting partridges also commences today.

There are no new regulations in connection with the game law this year but more or less trouble and inconvenience has been caused by the refusal of the Crown Lands Department to issue licenses before the opening of the season to non-resident sportsmen who come to the province to spend a few days in the woods before the opening of the season. Too much red tape has been the cause of considerable complaining on the part of the sportsmen.—Gleaner 15th.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circular and testimonials. Address: F. J. EDISON PHONOGRAPHS!

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH is to-day the most versatile musical instrument in the world. It stands alone as an entertainer. A piano, even in the hands of a master or operated by a mechanical player, will only play piano music. Nothing but violin music can be produced by the violin. The banjo, guitar, flute, or any other instrument will play but one kind of music. A singer can only sing in one voice. The EDISON PHONOGRAPH plays and sings everything. At your pleasure it will give you band, orchestra, piano, violin, flute, banjo, or any other instrumental music. It will sing selections in any quality of voice, and in solo, duet, trio, quartette, quintette, or chorus. It will do all this in a manner that amazes and delights its hearers.

The smooth, pure-toned, and natural reproductions of the Edison Phonograph are due to its improved reproducer, which does not wear itself or the record. Its reproducing point does not require changing. It obviates all harsh, scratching sounds. Let us explain this to you, and tell you how little it costs to have an improved Edison Phonograph in your home.

THE NEXT PREMIER.

A Northumberland politician had this to say with respect to provincial politics: "Has Onlooker" entered into an alliance with Premier Tweedie and Attorney General Pugsley? His writings lately seem to be with a view of turning public attention away from both the premier and the Attorney General and thereby saving them much criticism. There is little or nothing in the talk that Speaker Robinson is likely to be the next Premier of the province and that the change in his favor is likely to come soon. Unless Premier Tweedie becomes a member of the Supreme Court bench of New Brunswick, he will unquestionably lead the provincial government party in the next campaign. He has been a long time in politics, however, and if he can get a supreme court position without interfering with Hon. A. S. White's aspirations he will consider the present an opportune time for 'disappearing.' If Chief Justice Tuck retired from the bench and everybody feels that he might do so with credit to himself and in the public interest—and if Mr. Justice Landry should be called to the supreme court of Canada, there would be room for both Premier Tweedie and Mr. White on the Supreme Court bench of this province. After the conference at Ottawa with respect to better terms, or increased subsidies for the provinces, Premier Tweedie is likely to make an official declaration with respect to his own future and the date of the provincial general elections. Should Mr. Tweedie accept a judgeship, the next premier will not be Mr. Speaker Robinson, but Mr. Pugsley, Attorney General. Mr. Pugsley has faithfully served under a number of premiers and while he will be true to Tweedie as long as the latter wants to remain at the head of the government, once the present premier relinquishes office, Mr. Pugsley will take his natural place at the head of government party in this province. Once that happens federal politics will be introduced so sharply into provincial affairs that many prominent Liberals who are opposed to the provincial government as at present constituted will be forced into the support of the new provincial government led by Mr. Pugsley—just the same as prominent Conservatives were forced to withdraw their support from the provincial government, after the convention of Conservatives at Moncton had declared in favor of running provincial politics on Dominion lines. Even though Mr. Tweedie should remain at the head of the government you can count on some such programme, although for its successful carrying out Mr. Pugsley would be the stronger premier, because in his county he has been nominated at least on two occasions by the Liberal party. If the local government should go to the country on its own record, it would be beaten to a standstill. Its leaders know that an attempt will be made to make every Liberal in the provincial believe that the future of the Liberal party in New Brunswick is bound up in the success of the provincial government on its next appeal to the people."

A GREAT "FEAT"

Considerable trumpeting has followed the German announcement that a fleet of German torpedo-destroyers recently "made a successful dash to the English coast, which they reached without detection." Many journals appear to regard the news as significant and important. One gravely asserts that the tidings will "cause great excitement in the war offices of Europe, for the feat menaces that control of the English channel which has been England's great strength for generations."

A more absurd exaggeration would not be easily conceived. In the first place British waters were not guarded, in the sense that no attempt was made to prevent or even to note the approach of any vessel of any nation which might care to practice a "feat" of the kind described. Britain being at peace to the world the powerful agencies ready to guard the sea approaches were inactive. Destroyers and torpedo boats are small vessels of great engine power. Painted black, low-lying, running without light and steaming at railway speed they are well-nigh invisible at night except when exposed by the search lights of war craft or shore batteries.

Kipling's line about "striped hulls sinking through the gloom" conveys a hint of the information, common to naval men, that torpedo boats do not advertise their presence. In a word, there was no reason why, in the time of peace, the German torpedo boats might not have reconnoitred the British coast very thoroughly.

The "feat" is in no sense important or significant. Had there been reason to expect German naval activity in the direction of England the German boats would have been detected, in all probability. Unsupported they would be of little avail against warships expecting attack. But—what is still more important—Germany could not send with them a fleet heady enough to break through the British channel guard. German warships protecting a fleet of German transports carrying German troops to land on the English coast would be positive proof that the Kaiser had gone mad and that his subjects were ignorant enough not to notice it. As a trial of the torpedo boats, to test their seaworthiness and capacity for sustained steaming in company at high speed, the much-heralded German adventure may be of interest when the results are analyzed. As bearing upon German sea power and its menace to Britain the "feat" is merely food for Punch.—Telegraph.

That sixty thousand people should trample on each other in a mad rush to see the daughter of President Roosevelt is a fact which will cause a ripple of amusement in democratic countries, where queens and princesses are able to go about without causing undue excitement.

The band gave a very pleasing open air concert last evening, and though jostled by the surrounding crowd, they managed to play quite a lengthy program. A band stand would obviate this crowding nuisance—the people standing at a distance would be able to hear better, the band boys would be able to play more comfortably and would be encouraged to come oftener.

Surely our town council could have the necessary structure built. It would not cost very much. At the rate the band is progressing now it will not be very long before they will compare favorably with any similar organization in the province, and they should be encouraged. Let us have a band stand.

TELEPHONE TOLLS

Complaints have come to us from those who are frequent users of the telephone between Campbellton and St. John that they have to pay too much money for the service. For instance from Campbellton to Chatham the toll is forty cents; from Chatham to St. John it is fifty-five cents. The toll from here to winter port is one dollar. This extra five cents is the cause of the kick and those who have complained say that it is not the amount they object to but it is the principle. We learned on Tuesday in conversation with Mr. D. W. McAndrew of the New Brunswick Telephone Co. who is in town at the present time, that the company is at work now re-adjusting the toll rates over all lines owned or controlled by the amalgamated companies now known as the New Brunswick Telephone Co., and that in the near future we will have a uniform rate per mile.

Mr. H. P. Robinson of the late Central Co. is now one of the leading officials of the new company and we feel that he will carry out all the work which the late company had planned, and also, see that the rates will be re-adjusted as he promised on his last visit to our town.

The treasure was there before our greedy fingers.

Montgomery, overbalanced with his effort, staggered and fell upon the threshold, but Sheppard, who was next to him, paid no attention and, turning, looked at me. The light made no way upon the great darkness.

"Do you know where we are?" whispered Sheppard. "This is below the keep. Shall we go in?"

"Certainly," I said, "get Montgomery up." He pulled the lad to his feet, and slowly we shoved back the huge creaking door.

The chamber into which we were now came was small and square and, like that below, barred by solid masonry and unrelieved by window or grating. I found later by calculation that this must be in the very heart of the keep itself and so wholly separated from the rest of the castle that the noise of ordinary would scarcely have penetrated its deep and dismal recesses. My eyes were drawn as by a magnet to the farther corner of the barren cell, in which I could perceive some formidable shadows waving beneath the dull, uncertain light of my lantern.

Sheppard also had desecrated them and, plunging forward with a cry, flung himself upon his knees.

"They are here right enough," he called. And at his words Montgomery and I approached him. I held the light above his head, throwing the faint beams across his shoulder. There were three large oaken cases standing upon legs and simply carved upon the face. The dust lay deep on them, as upon the floor of that interior dungeon. Sheppard brushed the dust away and seized the lock. The hinge fell back to his touch, and slowly he lifted the massive lid.

The light shone still upon dark shadows, but, stooping a little lower, I thrust it into the mouth of the aperture, and our noses hung over the sides of the box together.

The treasure was there for certain. There it lay spread before our greedy faces, the gold and the silver and the precious stones that had been destined to save one king from death and another from exile. I let the pieces slip through my fingers—guineas, moldores, circlets of gold and silver, amulets and all the material gems of the market.

"How much is there?" asked Montgomery.

Sheppard seemed to ponder, measuring rapidly with his finger and computing the superficial area of the boxes.

"No one can say offhand," said he. "For there are the jewels, for one thing, among which are rubies. Now, rubies of that size," and he pointed upon one "are worth little short of a thousand pounds."

Montgomery gaped and whistled. "Let us make a rough shot and put the box at £50,000. Come, I'll take a bet that it's under the mark."

"Then there are the other two," said I. "True," said Sheppard. We all looked at one another.

"Come, boys," I said, rising; "let us get out of this. We know our way, and the treasure cannot take itself wings."

Reluctantly they obeyed, and we retraced our steps through the cupboard into the corridor and thence upward through the courtyard and into the living rooms. The dawn was brightening the eastern skies. I pulled out my watch.

"After 3," I said. "You'd better go to bed. There will be nothing happen now."

"Three o'clock!" echoed Sheppard indignantly. "Why, it is the very time for attacks and surprises. No; I'll see it out now."

"Very well," I assented. "We've got to arrange our defense, and as you are all determined not to go to bed we may as well hold a council of war."

"Agreed," said they, and we sat down to the job without further ado. We were agreed to consider 5 in the morning as the break of day for our purposes, and we were hardly exposed to an assault before 8 in the evening. The sky was still luminous at that hour. It was therefore plain that we must set a guard upon those intermediate and nocturnal hours. From 8 till 5 was a space of nine hours. That was to determine for us watch three. So far we settled the preliminaries of our defense. But we had now to consider further. The drum towers commanded the slopes of the valley like two tall sentinels, and from the embrasure of the windows a watch might be kept upon the nether parts of the Gwent. But from one so stationed the hill behind was quite concealed. In this connection it appeared that the keep would best serve us, more particularly as the upper chambers were readily gained from the inhabited wing of the castle, whereas the towers reared their formidable heads in isolation and led only to the corridors of the basement and the battlements above. It was in the keep, then, that our sentinel must hold his silent watch. The highest chamber in the keep rose immediately above the level of the battlements and was pierced by narrow slits in the masonry. This was a convenient station, or, better still, the roof of the tower, with which a flight of stairs connected the chamber.

We explored the keep thoroughly ere we had settled this point, and by that time it was 4 o'clock.

"Now, you had better go and lie down," said I to the others; "otherwise you will be nodding on your watches tonight. For my part, there is an hour yet to the time of safety, and I take first watch."

Sheppard expostulated with me for what he termed unnecessary precaution, but I held to my point, and presently they left me.

CHAPTER X.
WHEN I descended into the house I had hit upon one line of defense at least, and I at once proceeded to realize it. As I walked down I found without bridge along the moat to the back of the castle I wondered if it was practicable; but, remembering what old Kesteven had said of his predecessor's experiment some forty years before, I had great hopes that the sluices would still work.

The brook ran, as you will remember, behind the castle, at a little distance from it, and I found without difficulty the mouth of the conduit which had been formerly used to feed the fosse. I inserted my arm as far as possible, and I found without fail, by clear, though the earth had crept in and lay along the bottom, grown with grass to the depth of some inches. Still I had no fear that the flow of water would not wash this sediment away, provided always I could get the sluices up. To find these sluices was my next thought. I moved along the turf in the direction in which it seemed that the culvert must run, scrutinizing very carefully every inch of the ground. About three feet from the stream was a noticeable elevation. A grass plot rising in a mound two feet high. Here was obviously what I wanted, and so, taking a spade, I dug with a will and soon had the turf removed and the floor of a stone erection laid bare. It was a good hour's work ere I had cleared the rubbish away sufficiently to free the sluices; then I laid hands on them and pressed forward, but fruitlessly. I must plainly have assistance, and accordingly, well enough content with my labors so far, I went back to the house. At breakfast I revealed my scheme, much to the delight of Sheppard, who roundly declared that he would give five years of his life for this adventure. Supported by two enthusiastic assistants, I returned to work, fetching with me a heavy iron bar for use as a lever.

"A little more beef, Montgomery," shouted Sheppard, and himself grew as red as a turkey cock with his efforts. Montgomery flung his heavy body upon the extremity of the bar, and with a crack something came up with a jerk. At the same time I heard below a faint rumbling and rushing as of water.

"We've done it!" I shouted, and ere the words were out of my mouth Sheppard and the other were racing for the moat, whither they presently waded easily, but fruitlessly. datation," said Montgomery, and he let the sluices down. When all was done we surveyed our handiwork and were content. It was now close upon 8 o'clock. Dinner had been ready for more than half an hour, so we were informed by Mrs. Main, who must have regarded us as lunatics. The clock in the hall struck 8 as we entered.

"Watch time," said I. "Who goes?" We looked at each other, laughing. "Yes, my turn," said Sheppard, with a grimace, but I stopped him.

"No; let Montgomery," I said meaningly. "Right you are," responded Montgomery cheerfully, and taking his brace of pistols, he vanished along the corridor.

"How's this?" asked Sheppard. "I think the poor boy has earned his dinner."

"Bless you, he shall have his dinner," I answered. "Only the danger is going to be later, and I'd rather Montgomery were asleep in bed than asleep on the tower."

We had arranged that Williams should stay the night in the castle and, including him with the fear of burglars, had armed him with a shotgun in case we should come to the worst. As Sheppard remarked, we could readily tangle the Welshman's brains if he became suspicious, and if his garrulity should bring us the sympathetic assistance of the law I think we could be stupid enough and vague enough to confound his kindly efforts.

Mrs. Main was by this time bound to us by iron ties through Sheppard's contrivance, nor do I know to this day exactly how he managed it or in what directions he used his amiable and soothing fictions. The housemaid was Mrs. Main's hireling, and we need scarcely include her in our calculations.

We were now, as I conceived, adequately fortified against a surprise. From 8 o'clock until dawn upon the next morning we should be stretched upon the rack of suspense, but each of us was sturdily resolved to accomplish his duty at all hazards. That an attack would be delivered I had few doubts, but anxiety lay rather as to the watch in which it would be delivered. I had sent Montgomery to his post early, as it seemed wiser for more responsible heads than his to take the deeper and darker hours of the night. From 8 till 11 his time ran, and yet they might be upon us ere that. He was fed with some sandwiches and cheered with a little wine, while below Sheppard and I waited in a condition of tension.

"Oh, hang it!" exclaimed Sheppard presently, after dinner. "I can't stand this. Let us go and join him."

"You would be much wiser," said I, "to get an hour's sleep."

Sheppard shrugged his shoulders. "It's my turn next, you say, and I'm not used to be awakened in my beauty sleep. It's bad for me. No; I'll go to bed when you relieve me. But I'll reconnoiter from the battlements to myself."

"And I will take it," I answered. "See that Montgomery gets his supper and goes to bed like a sensible person. I'll be with you at 2 punctually."

I cannot say that I enjoyed a peaceful sleep. Although I was dog tired, partly from the exertion of the day's work and partly because I had had no rest the previous night, I still slumbered very fitfully. First I awoke in a fever and, throwing the hot blankets from me, stepped to the open window. My bedroom faced the north, and the cool airs that heralded the dawn were decided over me, reducing the fume and fire of my nerves. Far away some roistering bird was calling, not in his spring notes, but rancorous now with the summer heat of autumn. The curtain of the dawn was lifting. It was time for me to relieve Sheppard. My watch marked a quarter to 2. Having dressed, I went down to the great hall and, through the western windows open, looked out. Trees, like great ghosts, invisible, whispered in the night together. The stars glimmered down below, and I recollected suddenly that I was peering into the water of the fosse. The stillness hung so deep that I was possessed of a sudden with a hundred fears. Was Sheppard murdered? And were the castle and its treasures now in the hands of those abominable assassins? I listened for a cry, but there was none, only the gentle wash of the waters against those ancient foundations and the rustle of the leafage on the neighboring trees. The park lay, as one might have fancied, under the imminent hand of death.

I stole upstairs, clambering with a silent figure turned and a low voice spoke.

"Is that you, Ned?" The sound almost startled me, occurring upon the stillness.

"Well, I have two things to communicate. Do you see that tree?" I peered into the darkness in the direction he had indicated.

"Any news?" I asked. "Your eyes are better than mine, then," I answered.

"Maybe not. But I don't profess to see through a wall. That tree is fifty paces away, and it is an oak, very large and umbrageous."

"I believe you are right," I answered. "I think I recollect it."

"I didn't," he went on. "But I reckon to see by match light as well as any."

"I was puzzled. 'Match light?' I queried. 'You haven't been'—"

"Oh, dear, no!" he exclaimed. "My tower has been the central patch of blackness in a black night. Besides, who ever struck a match at night to see by? No; the match was in that same tree I speak of. I was silent. 'I presume it didn't strike it,' he connected."

"Lower your voice," I enjoined.

Sheppard smiled, as I could perceive even in the darkness.

"Oh, I don't see why," he declared. "There's no one there to strike a match now, to the best of my belief."

"How is that?" "Did you hear no sound?" he asked. I shook my head, and he patted his shotgun.

"I congratulate you on your soundness of health. I fired about an hour ago, and I fancy the shot did not altogether miss. There followed a still, small noise and after that again pattering feet receding. I think some one has indignation today in Sercombe's army."

Sheppard shouldered his gun and walked to the northern verge of the parapet. Stopping, he fumbled in the darkness, and the next moment his voice sounded from below my feet.

"Follow me, Ned," he called. Groping about with feet and hands, I came upon an open hole in the floor and, inserting my legs cautiously, hopped upon the first step in a stone stairway. Diligently stepping down this through sheer blackness, I came out upon Sheppard's heels into what by comparison seemed daylight. The stars glistened in the canopy of heaven. I was out upon the battlements.

"We might have known there was some communication between the keep and the battlement," said Sheppard. "You see the advantage. I've been pacing this walk like a sentinel for the last two hours."

I stole upstairs to the keep.

"Can you get right round?" "I'll show you," he returned, and led the way along that lofty roadway. The battlements naturally stretched across the width of the castle, running from wall to wall. The parapet stood some five feet high and was broken with the machicolations of the design. There was ample space, therefore, for twenty men at arms to march abreast along the heights. Sheppard moved lightly, his head just swinging clear of the parapet and the black darkness contained between the shadows of the ramparts. The leaden roof was incumbered with rubbish. Sheppard stepped on a loose stone and there rose quickly before me out of the superincumbent gloom the blacker mass of the drum towers. Feeling his way, Sheppard hit upon an iron ladder connecting with the battlements above, and presently we stood upon the topmost pinnacle of the castle and peered from it into the night. The nocturnal mists and blackness of the valley below were slowly shifting. The trees gradually grew black, showing against a vast and gray gloom. There was no light visible in those seeming changes of the elements. The night still hung about us.

The southern drum tower looked down upon deeper shadows, and I could not descry the wall below. I turned to my companion for an explanation and smiled at the confusion of my own brain when he answered:

"That's the south, Ned. You know the battlements are in ruins there. Of course they were, but I was not to be deterred from a complete circuit of the walls by that small fact, and I groped for the ladder."

"Better not. Wait till it's light."

Now, I knew very well at the time that he spoke wisely and that I was merely taking a rash hazard for no better purpose than to display to myself my own determination or obstinacy, if you will. But the feeling was strong upon me, and so, picking my steps down the ladder, I paid him no attention. Presently my foot, descending, shot through empty air, and coincidentally with that the iron bar to which I was clinging with my left hand ceased abruptly. For a moment I had a sickly sensation in my stomach, and I went quite cold. But, bracing myself together, I knelt upon the lowmost step and launched my body into space.

I have no intention, as I say, of defending my foolhardiness, nor do I take any credit for my ultimate escape from what was undoubtedly a deadly peril. My legs kicked aimlessly in the air and found no rest. I tightened my hold upon the iron of the ladder and strove to pull myself up. But my wrists had already weakened in that tedious and unavailing oscillation in space, and, to my horror, I realized that I could not do so.

Pandora Range
SAVES FUEL AND HELPS TO PAY FOR ITSELF.
It is not the price you pay for a range which makes it cheap or expensive, but the fuel it consumes after you get it. If you buy a range which costs $5 to $7 less than a "Pandora" and it burns a ton, or only half a ton of coal more in a year, what do you gain? Nothing, but you actually lose money, besides putting up with all the inconveniences, troubles and extra work which are a certainty with a poor range. The "Pandora" is equipped with many fuel-saving features which are not found on any other range. Hot-air flues are constructed so that all the heat from the fire-box travels directly under every pot-hole and around the oven twice—every atom of heat is used, and only the smoke goes up the chimney.

HEAD SEVERED

Supposed Case of Deliberate Suicide at Halifax

FOUND DEAD ON TRACK

Had Previously Attempted to Take his Life, and Was Once in Asylum

Halifax, Sept. 14.—Dead on the railway with his head completely severed from his body, Charles Almon Farrell, an employee of W. A. Maling & Company, was found this morning. The body was discovered lying outside the rail with the severed head inside.

About five o'clock this morning as some employees of the I. C. R. were proceeding along the track between the Acadia Sugar Refinery and the cattle pens near Richmond they perceived what turned out to be the body of a man lying near the outside rail. On closer inspection they found that the head had been completely severed from the body, close to the shoulders, and was lying inside the rail.

Farrell left the house last evening for a stroll, as was his custom. The firm with which deceased worked says he was one of the most faithful of their employees. About four months ago he attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. He recovered and was for a time in the insane asylum. Last night's deed was without doubt a case of deliberate suicide.

Passenger traffic still continues heavy on the I. C. R. between Halifax and Montreal especially, travel has been exceptionally heavy of late. The maritime express quite frequently goes in and out of Montreal with from 12 to 17 cars.

Monctonian died At Chatham.

Chatham, N. B., Sept. 13.—(Special).—Alphonse L. Comeau at one time, a traveller for McIntyre & Comeau, St. John, and more lately for W. H. Edgett, of Moncton, died last night at Mr. Jimmie's home here. Mr. Comeau had been in town of late and last night was taken with violent convulsions. Dr. Duffy was summoned, but in a short time Mr. Comeau passed away. The deceased had been a former resident of Chatham and had married a young lady of this town. His wife and family of two children, who are in Moncton, survive him.

The late Mr. Comeau was at one time in the employ of Mr. James Flanagan, when the latter conducted a dry establishment in the stand now occupied by J. D. Creighton & Co. He is a brother of Mr. T. A. ALPINE CLIMBERS' AWFUL EXPERIENCE

Four Men Stunned By Avalanche—One Died From Wounds

New York, Sept. 13.—A cable dispatch to a morning paper from St. Michael de Maurienne, France says: Four Alpine climbers, while returning from the ascent of the Aiguilles Daves on Sunday, were swept by an avalanche of stones upon a glacier fifty feet below. All were stunned. The first to recover his senses was a man named Maige who found two of his companions lying, seriously wounded, on the edge of a crevasse of unknown depth, in which the fourth climber, a man of the name of Questo, was dangling by the rope with which the party had been linked together. The accidental wedging of this rope in a cleft alone saved all the men from falling into the abyss of the crevasse.

Questo, who was suffering agony, shouted: "My arms and legs are broken; I am suffering horribly. Cut the rope and let me die!"

Maige vainly tried to haul him up, and finding the others helpless, he further secured the rope and started to obtain aid. It was nine hours before he returned with helpers. The rope had not broken and Questo was found still swinging from it, but he was unconscious and died soon after being rescued. He was known in Italy as a writer on Alpine subjects. The others are recovering.

BRITISH WIN

Liverpool, Sept. 12.—The steamship Tarquah, which arrived from South Africa, brings details of severe fighting in the borderland of Benin, Southern Nigeria, which ended on Aug. 8 in the surrender of the rebellious natives to the British. A native society called the Silent Ones' murdered Commissioner Crewe Read last June.

Capt. Weyling, with an expedition of native troops, was sent to recover the body, but he was wounded in the first encounter, several of his men were killed, 31 were wounded, and he was compelled to ask for reinforcements.

Capt. Rudkin, with another party, was hurried to his assistance, and after heavy fighting succeeded in relieving Weyling.

The combined British force then vigorously attacked the native town of Owa, and defeated the enemy, who though taken by surprise, fought with great courage. The severe fighting and heavy rains caused the British a loss of 130 dead and 100 wounded.

After the capture of Owa, Read's body was recovered and the murderers were tried and put to death.

The native losses are believed to have been heavy.

SOLDIERS AND VILLAGERS CLASH.

Vilna, Russia, Sept. 14.—An attempt made by the rural police to arrest seven peasants of the village of Lukonits who had been organizing disorders among the peasantry has resulted in a collision between the mob and the soldiers. The latter fired a volley, killing eight and wounding sixty persons.

PENALTY FOR REFUSING MILITARY SERVICE.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 14.—The Russian Invalid has published a law increasing the penalty for refusing to perform military service to six years at hard labor and the loss of civil rights. This measure is directed against those men who might follow the advice contained in the Vieberg proclamation of the outlawed parliament and refuse to serve in the army. The fall recruiting season has begun and reports already have been received of several attempted attacks upon local military bureaus for the purpose of destroying recruiting lists.

Caller—"Are you the chap who invented the machine for locating fires."

Katherine," roared the old gentleman in the hallway, "the bells are chiming midnight. Has that young man gone yet?"

"Sh, father!" whispered the trembling girl. "Don't offend Clarified?"

ence. Don't you know he is well. The old man rapped ominously with his yellow cane.

"No," he exploded, "but I do know he will be well fixed if I come down there."

CHURCH UNION

Work of Committee Heartily Approved by Methodists

Montreal, Sept. 13.—The subject of Church Union, upon which the most important work of the Methodist General Conference will hinge came before today's session when the report of the special committee was submitted by Rev. J. W. Colley, of Grimsby, Ont. While the time was not ripe for discussion and action on the part of the conference the report was read in order to place the delegates in a better position to discuss the findings of the committee stated briefly that it approved most heartily of the action of the joint committee on Church Union in extending to the Church of England and to the Baptist churches an invitation to proceed in the further consideration of the project of union and authorized it to take part in the further work of the committee in the event of a favorable reply being received from either denomination. It further recommended that a day in November be appointed for divine direction in the matter and that the committee be directed to prepare immediately at the close of the joint committee's meeting in December a full statement of the work completed with a view of laying it in print form before them various organizations of the church.

THE ROMANCE OF WOMAN ASSASSIN

St. Petersburg, Sept. 11.—The identification of Tatianna Leontieff, as the woman who killed the aged, Frenchman named Mueller at Interlaken, Switzerland, on Sept. 1, in mistake for M. Durnovo, former minister of the Interior, opens up the final chapter of an interesting romance, as Mlle. Leontieff, is one of the nieces of General Trepoif, who was concerned in an unsuccessful attempt upon the life of her uncle in 1905. This caused an immense sensation at the time Mlle. Leontieff was arrested and confined for some time in an insane asylum. She was eventually released upon her promise to leave Russia forever. She did, but she still maintained her connection with the revolutionary group in Switzerland. When M. Durnovo went abroad she volunteered to execute upon him the sentence of the "Flying Group, of which she is a member. Since the slaying of Mueller, M. Durnovo has returned to Russia and is living in close seclusion on his country estate.

AWFUL SUFFERING OF TWO FISHERMEN

Lost From their Vessel in Fog six Days Without Food or Water

HALIFAX, Sept. 13.—Two members of the crew of the schooner Dora W. Lawson who reached here yesterday tell a story of terrible experience at sea. On August the 9th they left their ships in the northern waters of the Labrador coast in order to haul trawls nearly two miles away. Thick fog came on and they lost their vessel. For six days they were tossed about without food or water and when picked up by the steamer, Patrick Monahan, was lying in the bottom of the boat unconscious and his partner, Charles Malmberg, was in a terrible condition. They were landed at Seal Island and for ten days Monahan battled with death, but finally recovered.

But Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy

"When by boy was two years old he had a very severe attack of bowel complaint, but by the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy we brought him out all right," says Maggie Hickox, of Midland, Mich. This remedy can be depended upon in the most severe cases. Even cholera infantum is cured by it. Follow the plain printed directions and a cure is certain. For sale by All Druggists.

"What in the world are you doing?" asked the beautiful girl in astonishment.

"Braying," replied the tall man, who was on his knees before the idol of his heart.

"Braying? How ridiculous! Why I thought lovers always sighed or cooed when they made love?"

"Some do, but as you said I always acted like a donkey when I was making love I thought I'd better bray."

CARTOONS DISPLAYING CRUELTY TO COOLIES

Being Reproduced in China and Have the Effect of Inciting Trouble

Peking, Sept. 15.—Copies of Chinese illustrated newspapers containing cartoons showing coolies on the and being subjected to refined forms of torture are being widely circulated. These cartoons are doing incalculable damage in stirring up enmity against foreigners throughout the Chinese Empire.

They are taken for the most part from the discredited book, "Slave Driving on the Rand," of which the anti-British London newspapers made much capital and which was after-wards shown to have been illustrated with pictures for which coolies were paid to pose as they were being beaten by English mine managers.

The cartoons are supplemented by statements taken from London journals giving what purport to be accurate accounts of the torture of Chinamen in one case these statements are described as being vouched for by "Professor" Clifford (sic), Chinese editors apparently having a hallucination that this is a half-mark of truth.

The cartoons show Chinamen hung by the hands to beams. Others depict them huddled up in corners, and being beaten with the "cat."

In the present inflamed state of feeling in China, when the safety of Europeans and Americans hangs on a slender thread, these pictures are having a dangerous effect on the uneducated readers who see them. These have never had any means of learning the actual conditions under which the coolies work in South Africa.

Her—"Miss Flirtleigh must be getting quite strenuous."

Him—"How's that?"

Her—"She boasts of having twisted a man around her finger at the seashore."

Him—"That's nothing. I broke four men with one hand last night."

The Maid—"I see your poets have ceased alluding to fair Luna as the 'silver moon?'"

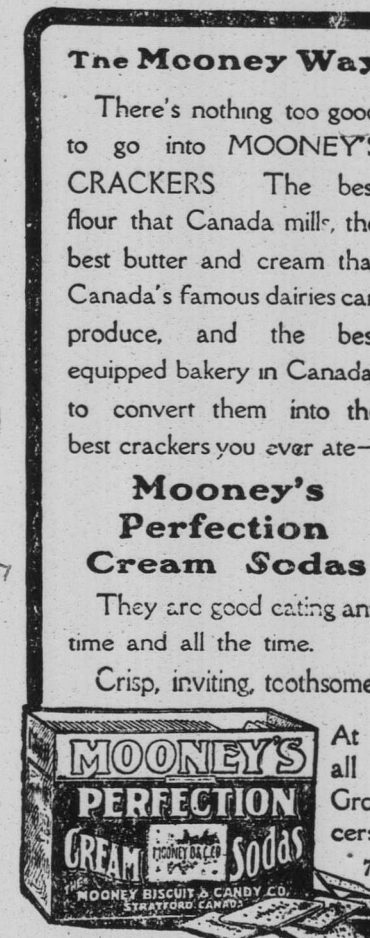

The Bard—"Yes, since airships are becoming so common—we are afraid some 'second-story man' will get one and go up and steal the moon."

OFFER TO SURRENDER

The Insurgent Leaders are willing To Give up Arms on The Denver

A Stock Exchange report from Havana says: President Palma summoned his closest friends to the Palace this morning and announced to them his intention of resigning. Congress is expected to receive his message at any moment.

HAVANA, Sept. 14.—Alfredo Zayas, President of the Liberal Party, who is with the insurgents, and General Loynaz del Castillo, commander of the insurgent forces in Havana Province, sent two more emissaries to U. S. Commander Colwell to-day offering to come in and surrender on board the Denver this afternoon. Commander Colwell replied that he was unable to interfere, and that President Palma was communicating with Washington to the matter.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—A despatch has been received at the State Department from the U. S. Charge d'Affaires at Havana confirming the reports of the destruction of sugar plantations near Cienfuegos and of the destruction of railroad bridges and buildings. It also states that no traffic is going on over the Cuban Central, Western or United Cuban railways. The Governor of Santa Clara Province has reported that Santa Clara is threatened by the rebels.

The Navy Department has not yet been informed of the arrival of the cruiser Marietta at Cienfuegos.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—A London despatch to the Sun says that the news of the landing of American marines at Havana confirms the opinion held at the British capital that American intervention to Cuba cannot be long delayed.

The Standard editorially blames the United States for the present disorder. It says that President McKinley's intervention was carried out in the name of peace and civilization, but the net result is resumed tumult, barbarism and savagery. Either the Americans must tolerate anarchy in Cuba or exercise an effective protectorate. President Roosevelt would doubtless act promptly and vigorously if he did not have to think of the election campaign. Whatever the final issue, it will be condemned by the Democrats, who are standing aside ready to make political capital out of the result.

The Morning Post says that Cuba is not strong enough to work out her own salvation. She cannot without American support maintain a Government and secure the progress of the country. Much as the American Government may regret the necessity of taking a step which will be unpopular with a large section of the country, she will not be able to refrain permanently from taking it. The destiny of the United States stands behind her and urges her imperatively on to the next step in her over-seas expansion.

THE "CARDBOARD JAIL" AGAIN

Bathurst, N. B., Sept. 17.—Saturday afternoon, William and George Lavigne, serving respectively seven and seventeen months in the common goal on charges of theft and assault, managed to escape through one of the corridor windows, which had been left open dropping to the ground, a distance of sixteen feet. They did not make any great effort to escape from town and remained around all night Saturday and Sunday, drinking and making themselves otherwise offensive. On Sunday during the morning service in the Catholic church they threw a stone through one of the church windows and broke several of the crosses on the graves in the grave yard. This latter action aroused the authorities and on Sunday night officers Hinton and Ramsay captured the criminals and lodged them in goal.

EDITOR'S MAIL

To The Editor

It is very pleasing to note the entire success of the praise-worthy efforts of the people of Dalhousie Junction, Dunce and El River Crossing to have the Breat of Life broken among them on the Sabbath during the summer. They have been in a state of semi-starvation for this during the past thirty years, and at length decided on getting an assistance for Rev. Mr. Kirk in order to have regular Sabbath services, at the same time not expecting to be able to raise sufficient funds without help from the Home Mission Fund.

The people of the above sections have however, given so liberal that all the expenses connected with the work are amply covered.

It is indeed gratifying to know that the people have such a zeal for the cause of Christ, and are showing by their actions that they are sincere in their desire of maintaining the glory of His Cross. We think it has been a constraining power in helping the people to give so liberally to witness the courageous earnestness in preaching unpalatable truths, as well as the amiability of disposition of the young student who has been labouring among them for the past five months. May he long be spared to do noble and fearless work in the Master's Vineyard.

It is in a coming summer the people should again act so generously in getting an assistant for the pastor, they would be greatly pleased if the Session of Dalhousie congregation would kindly permit the pastor to dispense the Sacrament of the Lords' Supper at Maple Green and Dundee, as there are families with not less than ten or twelve in the homes who could not possibly all get to Dalhousie, some of whom are twenty or thirty years of age and never yet have had the privilege of witnessing the administering of the Lord's Supper, and some of the aged who perhaps never sat at the Lord's Table, never having seen the Sacrament in their own churches, and many others who have not horses to take the long journey to Dalhousie or are otherwise prevented from getting there. We believe that the pastor would be willing and glad to do this for the promotion of God's cause. This is from one who is interested in the cause of Christ and in the welfare of His people.

STRANGE FIND

York County Farmer ploughed up Skeleton of an Indian

Meductic, N. B., Sept. 14.—While Judson Hillman was ploughing near the bank of the river, opposite Meductic, he unearthed the skeleton of an Indian warrior. Beside it were three tomahawks, three scalping knives and two arrows points. The skull and bones of the limbs were in a fair state of preservation, considering the great length of time the body had lain there.

The farm has been under cultivation for nearly a century. The position of the bones indicated that the body was buried in a sitting posture. The find is attracting many visitors. This, together with the reported finding of gold on the farm of Amos Knowles, is creating considerable excitement here.

INDIAN GUIDE DROWNED SATURDAY

Joe Gabriel, the well known Indian and his wife were drowned Saturday night in the St. John river nearly opposite Robinson's mills, about four miles below Fredericton. Joe with his wife and the latter's cousin, Joe Sacobi, left by canoe for down river. According to the story told by Sacobi, the only one saved, the canoe, when nearly opposite Robinson's mills, struck some obstruction and was overturned. Gabriel and his wife went to the bottom, but Sacobi climbed on the upturned canoe and was rescued about three-quarters of an hour later in a most exhausted condition. They leave five children.

SIX PERSONS HAVE LIKELY PERISHED IN OTTAWA HOTEL FIRE.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—There were 6 persons who have not been heard of since the Gilmour fire and it is feared that they are in the ruins. Lizzie O'Neil, the head waitress, has certainly perished in the fire. She was alone in the hotel that evening and her family, who reside here, have made fruitless search for her. Mrs. Agnes Beckett, who has a millinery establishment on Sparks street, had a room at the hotel, and has not been heard of since. Her room was near Lizzie O'Neil's, close to the elevator, and her store was closed all day Saturday. There is also missing Miss Loveday, Peterboro. Miss Loveday is a factory inspector for the province. She came to the hotel on Friday night about 8 o'clock from Toronto, took a room and afterwards asked for McLaren street. It is thought that she returned to the hotel before 11 o'clock. Besides these, W. Wilson, Montreal; Mr. Shillington, address unknown, and Miss Renaud, address unknown, have not been heard from since. Of these six it may be said that two are dead and four missing. No human bones have yet been found in the building but as the water is still playing on the burning embers it is impossible to make a search. There are two reports as to Miss Loveday. The other is that she was connected with the Barnardo Home.
