THE TANNENHOLZ-ROZAND DISPUTE.

THE GALLANT HUSBAND'S TROUBLES AND ROW WITH HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW.

(From Montreal Witness.)

The story of the marriage of Miss Blumenthal to Mr. Moses Tannenholz of this city, in the State of New Jersey, and the subsequent successful attempts of the parents and friends to prevent the newly-wedded couple living together, is fresh in the minds of our readers. Very naturally Mr. Tannenholz feels deeply the cloud which has passed over his prospective happiness. Friday evening, as he was walking along St. Catherine street, he noticed his wife on the other side of the street walking in company with Mr. Isaac Rozand, a merchant tailor of St. Lawrence Main street. He decidedly objected to the company she was keeping, and followed them down to Mr. Rozand's shop, where they went inside and he followed them, asking that Mr. Rozand oblige him by not going with his wife any more. Mr. Rozand ordered him out, and thereupon some very warm words ensued. A Witness reporter passed at the time, and the scene was truly picturesque. Inside sat the young wife, pale and frightened; and Mr. Rozand, a stout gentleman, was at the door with his arms, as if to repel an attack, while outside stood the unfortunate husband, disclaiming against the way he was treated by his wife's friends. Eventually a policeman, who had been sent for by Mr. Rozand, took Mr. Tannenholz in charge on a charge of obstructing and disturbing the peace, and he gave ball at the Ontario street station.

On Saturday he was tried before the recorder. Mr. Rozand and two clerks testified that he had come there and acted in an insulting and very threatening manner, and that he, Rozand, was brother-in-law to the young lady, and had a perfect right to walk with her.

A. E. Coleman, reporter for the Witness, testified that shortly after nine o'clock, as he was walking up Main street, he passed Mr. Rozand's door, and saw Mr. Tannenholz and Mr. Rozand in excited conversation. Mr. Tannenholz said he was a dangerous man for his wife to walk with, as he was poisoning her mind against him, Tannenholz. This closed the evidence, and

His Honor said he could not see any sufficient reason why defendant should object to have his wife walk down from her mother's house with her brother-in-law. The young lady's declaration states that she was forced into some kind of union with Mr. Tannenholz, and that afterwards she voluntarily left him and returned to her father's house. The only offence that was charged against her was, that she was walking publicly in the company of a relative, and one could scarcely imagine a more innocent act, and even if she did enter the store with him the place was open and the clerks were inside, and he severely characterized Mr. Tannenholz's feelings as an insane jealousy of influence of Mr. Rozand.

Mr. TANNENHOLZ—Your Honor will you allow me to give my case to the Court?

His Honor—Yes, you can proceed. TANNENHOLZ—Well, your Honor, as to the statement that my wife was forced into the marriage, I will state that it is false; I was legally engaged to her in this city, and in the presence of its most respectable citizens. I came here an entire stranger and was employed in Mr. Horowitz's establishment on McGill street; while thus employed I fell in love with Miss Blumenthal—now my wife.

His Honor—There is no need to go into a long story. Mr. TANNENHOLZ—I claim her as my wife before all the whole world. Her family encouraged me to court her (laughter), and assured me that they wanted me to marry her. I told them that my circumstances did not allow me to marry immediately, but that I hoped soon to be able to wed her. She was with me, and sought my company very often—dozens of times. Her father came to our house and told my brother and sister and brother-in-law that he would help me, and encouraged to look forward to the marriage. However, Mrs. Blumenthal—her mother—finding out that I was not so rich as they expected, looked around for another man richer than me, and gave me to understand that I should go to the States and make a fortune. I went to Chicago to seek my fortune as an honest man, and not as my mother-in-law said, to get credit for $10,000 and—

His Honor—There is nothing to do with the case now before the Court. Mr. TANNENHOLZ—Yes, it has, your Honor. She wanted me to get credit for $10,000, and run back here, as they did, from Poughkeepsie.

His Honor—This is altogether irrelevant. Mr. TANNENHOLZ—Well, after I had gone to Chicago, her parents sent her to Patterson, N. J., and she wrote me affectionate letters, and said that her mother and brother-in-law were telling her that I should come down; I can show you the letters. I loved her very, very much, and respected her, so I left my business and went down there and asked her would she and she said in her upright way that she would; "Yes," said she, "I will marry you, Moses, because I dearly love you" (great laughter). So went to the ex-Mayor of Patterson and had a legal marriage performed, and she knew perfectly what was being done. After we had been together for about two weeks, and had gone to New York to visit my friends, she came home to Montreal and just as soon as she got here, by her mother and brother-in-law—perfectly poisoned against me. They tried everything in the world in the hope of separating us. Her mother had another man in view, and so has tried to upset our marriage, but it can not be done. Between six and seven last evening, I saw Rozand walking with my wife and followed them. I followed them because I believed him to be a dangerous man for her to be with, so I said to Mr. Rozand: "You will oblige me by not walking with her; I'll allow her father, mother, sisters and brothers to walk with her, but not you," and then he came up and said: "Pshaw, pshaw; get out of here, get out of here." I went out of his store, but being high-spirited and not allowing a man to tread on my honor, I said: "Rozand, if you are a gentleman, we'll settle this outside," he didn't come out and I said, "I warn you not to walk with her or I'll take the law against you."

HER MIND WAS POISONED

His Honor, in rendering judgment, said he perfectly understood the feelings on both sides, and defendant had the right to claim his wife, but with her consent, and went on to show that she had the right to a free exercise of her liberties, and was authorized to walk with any respectable person that she pleased; it seemed rather late in the day to poison her mind, and any way he had not the right to walk into her brother-in-law's store, menace him, collect a crowd and obstruct business. His proper mode was to appeal to his wife first, and then, if unsuccessful, to the law afterward; His Honor must maintain law, but would deal very leniently with the defendant, and in the future hoped that he would act more wisely. He must fine him $5.

HAD BEEN TO NIAGARA FALLS.—There was a man at the City Hall market yesterday who had just arrived from Niagara Falls. He lives near Racine, but stopped off here to hunt up some relatives. As he was getting a bite to eat he suddenly remarked to the woman behind the stand: "You keep away from Niagara Falls."

"Why?" she naturally inquired. "I was there three days," continued the stranger, "and what do you suppose I saw?" "Something very grand, I suppose."

"Not by a jug-full, my sweet woman—not by two jug-full. All I saw was a blamed old waterfall, a small town, two bridges, and one or two scrub dog-fights. There wasn't a horse race, no stabbing or shooting, nobody going to be hung, and not one of the landlords would do as much as walk over to Goat Island with you and point out the spots."

He cut a fried sausage in two, sighed heavily, and finished: "You stay right to home. You'll see more black eyes here in one day than you can there in a month."

"It is strange," muttered a young man, as he staggered home from a supper party, "how evil communications corrupt good manners. I have been surrounded by tumblers all the evening, and now I am a tumbler myself."

Young and sentimental Henry Burns, of Nevada, killed himself, leaving a letter in which he said: "My Annie is dead, and I must be with her, lest some angel rival should win her affections."

We should practice temperance, if it were for nothing else but the very pleasure of it; it is the glory of a man that hath abundance to live as reason, not as appetite directs.

It is not the number of facts he knows, but how much of the fact he is himself, that proves the man.

How he Came to See the Centennial.

From the Philadelphia Press. While I was sitting in the Centennial grounds the other day there sauntered into the room a little boy poorly but neatly dressed, whose bright face attracted me.

"Do you know," said I, "what picture that is?" "That's the old Liberty Bell."

"And that?" pointing to another. "That's the old Independence Hall." I got him to write his name in the visitors' book in a neat, childish hand—"Willie Ferguson, Memphis, Tenn."

I exclaimed, "what! are you all the way from Tennessee? How did you come?" "A man brought me on, but when we got to Pittsburgh he left me, and I came over by myself."

"Did your papa mamma come too?" "Sally he said, 'I have no father and mother.'"

"How are you going to get home?" "No; I told the conductors I wanted to see the Centennial, and they brought me on."

"Well, what are you doing now, and where do you live?" "I live in a big boarding house on Belmont avenue, over there, and I wash dishes, scour knives, and do chores."

"How did you get into the Centennial?" "Why, I paid my fifty cents like anybody else."

"How are you going to get home?" "Why, just the way I came on, with a bright twinkles of his clear blue eyes."

"Twenty years old, and I came to see the Centennial." And all the time he was standing with one little brown hand on the back of the chair, the other in his pocket, with a broad-brimmed hat stuck right on the back of his curly head. With a few more questions on my part, to which he answered that he hoped to be a watchmaker when he grew to be a man, he bade us good-by and started off again.

Scaring away his Sister's Young Man. From the Atlanta Constitution. A young man, born of poor but honest parents, went to see his sweetheart on Thursday night. Her little brother, during the "priming interval," entertained the bear as follows: "Sis says she's going to shake you, she is!"

"Ah," said the astonished young man. "Yes, she is; she's got you down on the slate for a gran' bounce, she has!"

The Bahama Mystery.

(From the Resident Correspondent of the N. Y. World.) London, July 13.—The second enquiry into the cause of the death of Mr. Bravo—the affair known as the "Bahama Mystery"—began on Tuesday morning, before the Coroner for East Surrey, and so strangely are comedy and tragedy mixed up in this case, that yesterday morning, when the day's proceedings appeared in the papers all the newspaper reading people in London, except those who read only the Times, enjoyed a jolly laugh.

Mr. Bravo, who was married to a rich and pretty widow. He died suddenly, and under very suspicious circumstances. A post mortem made it clear that he had been poisoned, but the coroner's inquest was hurried, and a verdict unsatisfactory to his friends was returned. The only paper circulating in that remote country, and whatever appeared in its columns was taken as being undoubtedly the fact. The number containing the Supreme Court decision was about the only paper circulating in that remote country, and whatever appeared in its columns was taken as being undoubtedly the fact. "Well, said the sheriff, 'I have got to hang you, you have been here a good while an expense to the County, and the sooner the thing is over the better.'"

"There is no use being in a hurry," said the prisoner; "give a fellow a chance to get ready." "How will the first of next week suit you?" asked the sheriff. "Oh, what's the use of all that hurry, call it the last of the week."

Hanged Without Warrant.

(From the Sacramento Bee.) In the olden time in Plumas county a man was arrested for murder, tried and convicted and sentenced to be hanged. The case was taken to the Supreme Court on appeal. Finally a decision was filed affirming the judgment of the court below, and directing that the defendant be re-sentenced to death.

"Well, said the sheriff, 'I have got to hang you, you have been here a good while an expense to the County, and the sooner the thing is over the better.'"

"There is no use being in a hurry," said the prisoner; "give a fellow a chance to get ready." "How will the first of next week suit you?" asked the sheriff. "Oh, what's the use of all that hurry, call it the last of the week."

Chignecto Post.

SACKVILLE, N. B., AUG. 17, 1876.

THE GRIT PRESS.

The Moncton Times says:—

The Freeman says that the Telegraph plagiarizes its editorial on European affairs, the Globe says that the same paper is in- modest in claiming credit for reforms which were effected before it referred to them, the Telegraph says that the Globe lies, the News says that the Freeman is a Jesuit, that the Globe is wishy-washy, &c., &c.

These papers are all clear Grits, some new and some old, but all pure and unadulterated Grits, sealed with the Patrie's seal of sanctity and duty consecrated and set apart for the work of elevating the standard and reforming the corrupt-politics of the country.

The modesty of the Times prevented any reference to itself and we hasten to supply the omission.

When Sir John went down and the Telegraph cleared the fence at one bound and fell into the green fields and pastures new of the Grits—where was the Times? It had fled Sir John's Government and fled it freely. It had pocketed advertising and printing to the amount of hundreds of dollars per month, and did it show any gratitude to Sir John for these favors—did it stand by him and go down with him coils flying? By no means. That was not the Times' way of doing business—and the Times had a very distinct idea of business about that time.

Did it act with even the circumspection of the News, which after Sir John was routed and its Government fodder had been all devoured often went up to the fence, and looked longingly on the other side, where its late confere the Telegraph was virtuously browsing and it occasionally got on the fence to have a better view of the Government corn fields, but finally had to go to Ottawa to become convinced, and there became duly convinced and converted and reconstructed, and returning, it quietly stepped through the bars, and has since been nibbling:—only nibbling for the Freeman has the Post-Office printing, and the Globe has the bulk of the advertising!

Did the Times do the act regretfully and sorrowfully and after being convinced like the News? Not at all. It cleared the fence close at the heels of the Telegraph; the race was almost neck and neck between them. It exhibited the most indecent haste, and became as rabid in its denunciations of Sir John as if it had been born in the Grit fold and suckled and weaned and trained as a champion to strike down the Goliath of Conservatism. In those days the Grits were in the eyes of the Times lovely—almost Cherubims and Seraphims. The Times was never weary in proclaiming their glory. But those were days when the Times still held the seals of office—and something more substantial than seals: Those were the days when the Times refused in advertising and printing globe.

But a change has come over the spirit of its dreams. It became whispered about that the Times must lose its office. It became noised about that the prices of printing had been cut down by that ruthless Goth, Brydges. The Times hears these rumors. It becomes convinced they are alas! too true. About the time that the Times learned that the economical principles of the new Government would set like a summer's drouth on the streams of patronage that flowed into the Times' office, the opinion of the Editor as to the character of the Reform Government was suddenly changed! The Times suddenly becomes convinced that the Grit pack is rotten to the core. They are composed of hypocrites and robbers, who while affecting to elevate the standard of public morality, are in reality debauching consciences in the effort to perpetrate their reign of jobbery and snobbish and robbery!

The Times is now found again under the banner of Sir John forgetting all it has said about the "deep damnable infamy" of Sir John selling the Pacific Charter.

Truly, the Times is just the paper to denounce the Gritism of the St. John press.

Consistency.

The Christian Visitor wants a Baptist appointed to the vacant Senatorship. The Christian Visitor, at the last Election declared against allowing sectarian or religious matters to interfere with politics and was violent in its attacks on the Roman Catholic priesthood for their attempts to rule in secular affairs. It was most vigorous in its denunciations of the union of Church and State. It has stated a hundred times that the state must know the people as citizens only, and not recognize any sect or creed—and yet the Visitor turns about and wants a Baptist appointed Senator!

Snobbing accounts of Turkish barbarities in Bosnia are published. Whole villages are empty of their inhabitants, having been slaughtered and hundreds of dead bodies are floating down the Urn.

Smuggling.

To the Editor of the Chignecto Post.

Sir.—The Customs Department appears to be blind to what is known to every business man in the place, viz: that the smuggling is carried on systematically along our shores from Rockport to Dorchester and from Rockport to Sackville. Bunches are almost constantly visiting Sackville selling American goods, at less than they can be imported. I was not long ago offered dress goods at such low rates that my suspicions were aroused to such a degree that I was obliged to produce a Customs Certificate that the goods were duty paid. It is hardly necessary to say the party withdrew the goods at once. I have offered American paraffine oil at 15 cts per gal, while that article was at the same time quoted at 32 cts at St. John. Cottons I have understood have been sold here at surprisingly low rates—surprising to all but the initiated.

This matter has been represented by the Collector, to Mr. Cadip Inspector but nothing is done to correct the evil.

It is fair to the regular trader who wishes to do a legitimate trade and uphold the law? I need not refer to the abominable rascality of those heartless scoundrels before referred to in your columns, who make use of the Sabbath day to violate the law, and distribute to the fathers and sons and brothers of our families, whom they can on that day entice to their vessel.

MERCHANT.

To the Editor of the Post.

Sir:—I could ye of the maliciously ind iv me interview wid Tim an' the widdy above at the Bind. Although knocked speechless an' the skin pulled off iv the nose iv him, while the tip into the strait, Tim came to his senses in the hist iv spirils, plazed wid himself an' his frind Mick. But Tim is a rale jewel an' whither he murders a frind or gits murdered himself in a row, he is equally plazed, so he told the widdy, he must call upon his frind Mick by way iv an apology, an' he did that. His wain iv the doctor in regard to the toes was only a pretence to repair his nose, but I'll say nothing iv all that. 'Twas the widdy whose toes were hurt wid an upsk iv the big table in her murtherous haste to belabor meself. Tim's generosity would take him to pretend it was his own toes that were smashed to save the widdy the inconvenience!

I know that Tim would be right in the hist iv the widdy O murther! I fit I was done at the Bind for a time, at last; so I jumped on the cars as soon as convenient, an' was left in York Point in the city, where I riated me weary bones wid a nap on the cold sofa at me frind Jen Kostogons.

When I'd got me nap an' me bitters an' sich a breakfast as Jen can sit fernt iv, I stipped out wid Pat for a walk an' a sniff iv fresh air. Pat lid off to the ind iv Mr. Fairweather's wain. A quere place, siz I, for a sniff iv fresh air—paraphane! Ooh, murther! what a smell iv paraphane. Paraphane, siz Pat, faith, you're right about the paraphane, but I can't be a telling ye! And what'll the paraphane do till ye? siz I. It's not this paraphane, ye devil, but the Government above at Ottawa, siz he. Faith this, I know they smilt bad enough, but ye dont say the crates are so odlinive, siz I. I'm not saying they smilt so bad altogether, but I'm afraid the basthens might hear me, and put me in the court for divulging the secrets, siz Pat. What secrets, siz he! to be sure, and what's that! siz I. Sure its the dollars and cents and how to realize them for their frinds, siz he. Masha Pat sure that's no secret; ivery family, and baby wid a tooth in his hid is clare in that. Thin I might till ye about the paraphane. Do ye see Mr. Robason's warehouse there? siz Pat. Faith I do say enough, siz I. Will thin that's 500 barrels of Government paraphane stored there, barring what's leaked out and ran through the floor and what into the sea, siz Pat. And what put it there? and what's it for? siz I. The Minister of Marine bought it last March to supply the lighthouse wid next October, siz Pat. And the barrels are lacking? siz I. Faith they are, siz he, and can't ye see it floating on the water? there'll be a quarter ov it in the sea before October, and they'll have what's left, if the place dont take fire wid it and burn up intirely. And what did the Government want of the oil nine months ahid? siz I. Ye see the friends, of the Government have great oil works outside, above at Sarnia, and a dale of paraphane on hand that they dont nade, so the Government just buys it up and stores it, so as to be sure of having plenty whin its naded. And where does they get all the money? siz I. From the Province above at Ottawa, siz Pat. And does they kape all the towns supplied wid the oil? siz I. Faith, I suppose they does, siz Pat. To be sure, it lakes into the sea, but dont ye persave it gives employment to min? Your right there, siz I, and 'twould make a power of work for min, if the city should take fire wid this magazine of paraphane, and the Minister of Marine would nade another supply of the oil for the lighthouses, 'twould right, siz Pat, and all for the good of trade, a lighted match from a half drom crature's pipe might sit the town in a blaze quick enough thin.

Is the Mayor ov' your City a female? siz I. Niver a bit, siz Pat, and what put that in your crazy hid? Faith I thought she might be busy wid her pull-back and not mind or realize the danger of the paraphane.

Your Obadiah Sarvant,

MICK FINNEN.

Language.

For the Chignecto Post.

Language is the art of expressing thought. Gestures, signs, articulated sounds and written characters are some of means used in conveying information. Barbarians, uneducated races, use gestures, signs and articulated sounds, people that are cultivated use written characters. Spoken language is common to all nations, and even the bird possesses this power of giving utterances to certain intelligible ends. The Indians of North America are remarkable for their power of gesticulating; the Africans are remarkable for their written characters. The difference in the faces is evidence of this fact for the mouth utters the thought, nose and cheek bone give motion, while the pen is directed by the eye. The African is full in the mouth region, the Indian in the nose and cheek, but the Chinaman is possessed with superior abilities in imitating with the eye. The mouth is the organ of speech, the eye of sight, the nose of motion; prominence in any one gives power.

The animal conveys information through its structure of organs, we see the chirping bird, crowing cock, roaring lion, convey to each of their kind information, but the running deer, the flying eagle, the racing horse, gives warning of danger. The dog will follow a track that will trace the departed one for miles by the marks as well as scent. We could enumerate others but suffice to say that information is conveyed with those organs that are strongest and ready to hand. A man with a pen in his hand and see one with the full mouth, talking high nose, wide cheek bone moving around with arm and hand, but the eyebrow that is wide and full, will direct the hand to some work that will prove to be the fact that information is transmitted through various channels and strongest faculties. Written characters require time, patience, study, and sedentary confinement, to acquire. Therefore it lessens the other powers so that their deficiency is quite noticeable in a small mouth, contracted cheek and large head which are evidences of a good writer, and inclined to peening thought, instead of speaking or gesticulating the same. The best proof that we have that the mouth is the organ of speech is the lion and parrot, the latter with a large bill and tongue can talk, but the lion with its large throat and small lips and tongue can only roar.

Fiji.

FIFTEEN YEARS IN FIJI.—THE ISLANDS AND THE NATIVES.—POLITICAL DISTURBANCES.—SIR ARTHUR GORDON.

The Fiji Islands are kept in regular communication with the outside world by the steamships of the Australian and American Mail S. S. Company, which call there monthly on their voyages to and from San Francisco. They are situated 4,800 miles or 20 days' sail from San Francisco, and eight days' sail from Honolulu, San Francisco. New Zealand is 1100 miles south. The islands are of volcanic origin, or are perhaps mountain peaks of a great submerged continent. The group number 200. They are clustered together closely, occupying a breadth of sea room of not more than 200 miles.

The two largest islands are Viti Levu and Vanua Levu; the former is 100 miles long and 70 miles broad, the latter is 100 miles long and 30 miles broad. The islands are all surrounded by coral reefs, extending from a quarter of a mile to 15 miles from the shores. Inside the reefs the water is smooth and limpid as in a pond; outside the sea rolls in and breaks over the reefs with terrific fury. The water is beautifully clear and reveals the minutest objects to a considerable depth. These waters contain a great variety of fish, of a species totally unknown in temperate zones. The variety of their color is striking. Yellow, black, red and gold, and ultramarine are common colors for the finny tribe. Great sea centipedes, sea urchins, sharks, etc., are found inside the coral reef breakers.

The natives are expert fishermen; the sea furnishes them with their only article of animal food. When the islands were first visited by Europeans, they found neither beast nor dangerous reptile here.

Approaching these islands from the sea, they present a striking, to say an alluring impression on the traveler, whose eyes have long been wearied with a horizon of barriers day after day. From the barriers of surf and foam about their base, they rise up thousands of feet into the air, in the obscure depths of which cannibalism still lingers; the side hills and shores being covered with palms and pine, and all the luxuriant vegetation of the tropics.

The Eastern parts of the islands are covered with dense heavy forests of New Zealand pine (cedar) on the leeward side, with heavy grass. There are besides, forests of orange, pine, apple, lemon and banana. Wild figs grow with tropical luxuriance. All the islands are inhabited. The native population numbers 150,000. It was formerly much larger, but they are dying out in the face of the white man. No less than 40,000 died last March from measles. This calamitous disease was introduced as follows:—Sir Hercules Robinson took old King Cakabea (a chief) to Australia for a visit. On returning measles broke out in the war ship. After they arrived, the ex-king was taken down with it, but not until a great number of old chiefs had visited him to congratulate him on his safe return and became infected with the disease. They returned to their own people carrying the fatal poison, and the disease was spread far and wide.

Old Cakabea himself is a very good example of the civilizing effect of European life. He was formerly a cannibal and is credited with being of a most ferocious and epicurean taste, but his photograph reveals only the features of a benevolent old man, whose diet has always been of the mildest kind. He is said to have been fond of braining children, and once he is said to have cut out the tongue of a captive and ate it before the poor wretch's face! Cannibalism is now done, but relics of it are seen in some places. On one of the islands a place named here there has been a cannibal killed. It consists of a lot of upright staves over which the poor victim was run with such force as to dash out his brains.

The native population is said by some to be of Malay extraction; and others pretend to have observed some evidences of Indian origin. They are of a most peaceable disposition, are honest, high-minded and virtuous. They are inclined to be industrious. The climate is so remarkably fine, that very little exertion is required to secure food. The natives go almost naked, the thermometer the whole year around ranging between 75° and 95°. Women are adorned by their own beauty, with the exception of girdles—color of their fashion, and shell bracelets. They are graceful and often pretty. Banana leaves as dress, skirt, waist, mantle and bonnet complete the toilet a la mode there. The natives are sober and not like too large a proportion of their European neighbors, given over to the seductions of Rum. They are remarkably free from the vices of civilization. When visited first by Europeans, they worshipped snakes and images; but Wesleyan missions have done much to reclaim and christianize them. Besides natives and about 100 half-castes the rest of the population consists of about 1,000 Europeans, who are planters, traders and adventurers of all kinds.

Natives do not salute each other by hand-shaking, or with a gentle occupation, or with a nod as amongst Europeans. When they wish to say "good day," they give a sniff, as if they had a cold in the head.

Fiji houses are a novelty to Europeans, and are nearly empty. A thatch, and of various shapes. Other they are con

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.—Mr. C. W. Smith of this place while fencing on the marsh on Tuesday cut himself severely with an axe. Dr. Botsford was called.

SHERIFF BOTSFORD intends taking a trip to Europe for the benefit of his health. E. A. Charters, Esq., Memramcook is appointed his Deputy, and will make an excellent officer.

WANTED.—Copies of the CHIGNECTO POST of the following numbers for which the cash will be paid, viz:—16th July, 1875; 25th November, 1875; 16th December, 1875; 3rd February, 1876.

It is said that much valuable lumber land has been destroyed back of Grand Bay. A farmer named Somerville has lost his crops, barn, etc. A large quantity of railway sleepers have been destroyed near St. Martin's.

On Thursday at St. John while a seaman named Thomas Kennedy belonging to the barque "Eblans" was at work on the fortification yard, he missed his hold of the rigging and fell to the deck a distance of fully 80 feet. His injuries proved fatal in a short time.

BOATING.—Mr. H. L. Mitchell has commenced building a sail boat for Mr. Forde's Pond. The boat will be for hire for boating purposes, and will add much to the attractions of that beautiful sheet of water, about the shores and inlets of which, there are many delightful spots for picnic parties and pleasure seekers.

THE REFRESHMENT TABLE spread on the old Parsonage grounds, Westwood, on Tuesday afternoon, the proceeds of which are to be devoted to repairing the the Cemetery at that place, proved very successful. The sum realized was something over $50. The ladies deserve credit for their generous efforts in this good work.

THE STEAM HAY PRESS at Riverside is doing good service. It cuts a ton an hour, working easily. Its cost complete was about $1200. Its design has been before fully described in the Post.

Mr. S. J. Calhoun has shipped over 500 tons of hay to the West Indies and will ship another cargo in a few days.

TWO MEN KILLED AT ST. GEORGE, N. B., Aug. 11.—Another accident occurred on the Grand Southern Railroad. Two men named Friel and McKean, from Fredericton, were fatally injured by a blast on Hallett & Cliff's work. The men were tamping when the explosion occurred.

ACCIDENT.—On Sunday last a serious accident occurred at Wood Point. During the absence of Mr. Wm. Barnes' family, some youngsters who had been left at home got down the gun and a boy named Atkinson proposed to fire it off. In doing so, the charge struck one of Mr. Barnes boys who was standing about ten feet distant, inflicting serious wound, tearing away the scalp and hair above the eyes. Had the charge struck half an inch lower down the boy would have been killed. Dr. LeBaron Botsford was called in and under his care the lad is doing well. Another warning.

Post Office Embezzlement. S. L. T. Rankine, the P. O. clerk detected in opening letters confessed to the crime and was on Tuesday sentenced to five years in the Penitentiary. The Chief Justice in sentencing him read the following letter from the prisoner:—

SAINT JOHN, N. B. To His Honor the Chief Justice: Before receiving my sentence I would wish that Your Honor would read in open Court the following statement:—

I was brought up in life by the best of parents, who always gave me good advice and example, and if I had only lived as they advised me I would not have been before Your Honor to-day. I do not blame any one but myself, and I think God for putting the hand of affliction on me. But I cannot call it an affliction to myself, but it is a hard affliction to my poor father and mother, sisters and brothers, and I do pray that the public will not blame them, for God knows if I had taken their advice I would not have been here to-day. God help them all in their hour of trouble.

I want to say a few words to my companions: Give up your evil ways, read your Bible and look to God for comfort, where I have found it. God has given me power to suffer for what I have done and I am willing to suffer for it. But before ending I would again ask the people of St. John and elsewhere not to point the finger of scorn upon the family and say if they had given him more advice he would not have been here. May God bless and keep my poor father and mother, sisters and brothers through the time that I am imprisoned, and when I come out I hope to be a comfort to them in their old age. I will now thank all my friends for doing what they did for me and thank God to do all they can to comfort my father and mother in this hour of affliction. (Signed) LEMORE RANKIN

The American Ditcher. We are in receipt from Mr. MeLean of late copies of the Eau Claire (Wis.) Free Press, and it is pleasant to acknowledge these courtesies from our distant patrons.

In looking over the number for the 13th of July, we saw an article, headed THE AMERICAN DITCHER, giving an account of the performances of a new patent ditcher which had recently been exhibited there. It cut over 40 rods in an hour making a complete and neat ditch where the land was so hard that it would not be walked on, and where the ditch immediately filled with water; it raised the dirt out of the ditch in one solid unbroken piece with the grass side up so that the material is already sodded over; thus preventing the dirt from washing back into the ditch. It is so arranged that it will lay the slope of earth on either side of the ditch, and eight or twelve inches from it, and will cut from one to three hundred rods a day.

It states its durability, simplicity of construction, ease and perfection of work, and no liability of getting out of repair, make it a money-making as well as a labor-saving machine.

SCENE AT DORCHESTER CAPE.—A correspondent informs us that on Sunday he witnessed a most disgraceful scene at Dorchester Cape. He observed quite a number of men and boys gathered about a small coaster laid up on the shore. They were swearing and fighting and behaving in a most beastly manner generally. On closer inspection, he discovered the cause. The crew of the vessel were engaged in the laudable work of vending rum wholesale and retail to the people. There were a number of men and boys of various ages, some of whom were evidently in the habit of drinking to excess. He observed that the men were in a state of great excitement, and that they were engaged in a most disgraceful scene. He observed that the men were in a state of great excitement, and that they were engaged in a most disgraceful scene.

THE SPRING HILL MINING COMPANY. Having now fully developed their Mines at Spring Hill, and having reached a depth where Coal of a superior quality and purity is obtained, can now offer to customers along the Intercolonial Railway a fuel unsurpassed in quality, and which, in consequence of the late reduction in freight, must take the place of all other fuel along the line of Railway between Truro and St. John, and at least on the Moncton end of the line, between that town and Riviere du Loup. Wood stores are fast giving way to coal stores between the first named points, and it is probable that the same fact will be observable so soon as this superior coal can be introduced along the line between Moncton and Riviere du Loup.

The Harvest Months. From the fruitful offspring of Spencer's imagination, a poetical description of the months of July, August and September in the Fairy Queen. "Then came hot July, boiling like to fire, That all his garments he had cast away. Upon a raying yet with ire He boldly rode, and made him o'berly. It was the best that willom did forray The Necromancer, till the Amphitride Him slew, and with his hide did him array.) Behind his back a sigh, and by his side Under his belt he bore a sickle circling wide."

The London "Times" on Quebec—An Eloquent Tribute. It is now part of the Grand Tour of the educated Englishman to visit the United States. Between fifty and sixty years ago a party of young men, each destined to occupy a prominent place in the history of his country—the late Lord Derby, Lord Taunton, then Mr. Labouchere, the late Lord Wharfedale, and the late Lord Rivers, were sent together to survey the Western Democracy; but the educational pilgrimage which was then limited to persons of the highest fortune is now open to all. A great multitude are now pouring for their voyage, and are pursued with unflagging diligence the opportunities of observing the free life of the United States every where open to them. It was right they should go, and if they have anything in their hearts to be said for the United States, they are more than ever ready to say it.

At the time of the fight I was sent with a soldier on a message to the mouth of the river where the boat was to call for General Gibbon's command, and he said General Terry came just in time, one on each side of the river. When I reached the mouth there was no way of communication with the Gibbon's boat, except by swimming, and no one dared to trust the rapid and treacherous current. I peeled off and dashed in, reaching the other bank without much trouble, my experience in the broad and deep and swift Detroit, where I often swam in my boyhood, making the Big Horn a mere creek. As I approached the ways and heard the cheers of the men on the other bank urging me on I often thought of hours spent in the water at Detroit, and wondered if they still arrested boys for learning to swim there. It was only by a breach of the city ordinances of Detroit that I acquired the skill which enabled me to reach Gibbon that terrible day, and bring him to the rescue of the struggling hero. He and Terry, marching up either bank of the river, did not reach the scene of the battle a moment too soon. After fighting from two o'clock Saturday until Sunday, the Indians coolly packed up tents and departed, leaving the route in the hands of the dead and wounded and defeated. We are expecting an attack daily from them, and as I have got one of the best Indian ponies on the river, I can easily get away with some of them.

At last when half his command had been killed, he called on those that remained to follow him, and dashed boldly through the red devil and his men, leading the remnant of at least 2,000 rifles for the whole distance. His men did not follow him, and when he got through he found himself alone with a single Crow Indian, one of his scouts. He would not leave his men perish alone, and he turned to go back, but the Crow, recognizing that such a movement would be fatal, grabbed his horse and implored him not to go back. CUSTER ONLY LAUGHED, and, putting the reins of his horse between his teeth, with a revolver in each hand, he gave a wild cheer and dashed back through the hell of smoke and dying bullets. As if by a miracle he reached the remnant of his command, which was now reduced to forty men. Calling on these survivors again to follow him—which the example and success of his former charge disposed them to do—he led them from their place of peril over the path of his solitary charge. That was the last of them until the battle was over, when the whole party, with Custer in their midst, were found stark and dead within a distance of a few miles from their horses' bodies. They had evidently at the last moment saved their minds to sell their lives dearly, shot their horses, and then, raising them as bronstwork, fought on with the "fight of despair until the last man fell. What they suffered, and what they did within the fatal circle will ever remain locked in mystery. Of all Custer's men only the Crow scout above mentioned and a sergeant of company I escaped.

From the descriptions in the papers, and from the images of the scene after the battle, I went over it with the artist as the dead lay in heaps where they fell, and I shall ever remember it. General Custer was found with all his clothes upon him, but his two brothers were terribly mutilated. When the fight was in progress the Indian squaws would rush in among the wounded soldiers and beat out their brains with clubs. A DEARLY SOLD LIFE. A remarkable story is told of the fearful scene at the death of Charles Custer's chief scout, and the best shot on the Missouri River. He was shot of the back of his horse and in falling caught the horse and killed him, and making a breastwork of the beast's body he commenced a terrible slaughter of the Indians. He lay behind his horse dying and still shooting, and every shot he fired his steady aim sent a savage to the devil. When he was taken of the field after the fight twenty-two dead Indians were found around him.

At the time of the fight I was sent with a soldier on a message to the mouth of the river where the boat was to call for General Gibbon's command, and he said General Terry came just in time, one on each side of the river. When I reached the mouth there was no way of communication with the Gibbon's boat, except by swimming, and no one dared to trust the rapid and treacherous current. After fighting from two o'clock Saturday until Sunday, the Indians coolly packed up tents and departed, leaving the route in the hands of the dead and wounded and defeated. We are expecting an attack daily from them, and as I have got one of the best Indian ponies on the river, I can easily get away with some of them.

At the time of the fight I was sent with a soldier on a message to the mouth of the river where the boat was to call for General Gibbon's command, and he said General Terry came just in time, one on each side of the river. When I reached the mouth there was no way of communication with the Gibbon's boat, except by swimming, and no one dared to trust the rapid and treacherous current. I peeled off and dashed in, reaching the other bank without much trouble, my experience in the broad and deep and swift Detroit, where I often swam in my boyhood, making the Big Horn a mere creek. As I approached the ways and heard the cheers of the men on the other bank urging me on I often thought of hours spent in the water at Detroit, and wondered if they still arrested boys for learning to swim there. It was only by a breach of the city ordinances of Detroit that I acquired the skill which enabled me to reach Gibbon that terrible day, and bring him to the rescue of the struggling hero. He and Terry, marching up either bank of the river, did not reach the scene of the battle a moment too soon.
