A CALL FOR VOLUNTEERS

British War Office Wants 9,396 Infantry.

British Temper Much Stirred Up by Von Buelow's Speech.

Rosebery Gratified With His Recovery of Prestige and His Welcome From All Sections of the Liberal Party.

ANOTHER CALL FOR VOLUN-

TEERS London, Jan. 10 .- The war office has issued a call for 9,396 infantry volunteers gradually to replace those now serving in South Africa.

JOHN BULL ROILED. British temper, as reflected by the press, does not improve respecting the German chancellor's speech. He is charged with adopting a deliberately offensive tone toward a member of the British Cabinet, who, at the worst, made an accidental mistake in the haste of extemporaneous oratory. Some journals are fatuous enough to remark that the German emperor will be seriously annoyed by the chancellor's indiscretion which exceeds in gravity Mr. Chamberlain's undiplometic reference to the Franco-German DIVISION ABOUT EDUCATION. Politicians take even less interest in Count Von Buelow's politics than stock speculators display. One or two Liberal journals reproach Mr. Chamberlain for having disturbed the peace. but the Edinburgh offense has never been regarded as an affair of any importance. There is more talk among politicians about the education bill than anything else, since there is a probability of a serious division of ppinion respecting it among supporters of the ministry. The Duke of Devonshire is reported to be both hopeless and obstinate respecting it, and disposed to forecast the downfall of the government, but he is the stalest member of the government.

LORD ROSEBERY GRATIFIED. Lord Rosebery, on the other hand, is described by his friends as brimming over with enthusiasm over the recovery of his prestige and the welcome which he is receiving from all sections of the Li al party. His partisans are bell-Bannerman that there is room for everybody except the Irish Nationalists under the Rosebery umbrella.

BUDGET PROPOSALS. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, speaking at the licensed victuallers' at Bristol last night, hinted at increased taxation in the ensuing session. He did not, of course, dis-close the secrets of the budget. A remarkable sign of the times is the announcement of Mr. Pease, M.P., that he should consider the chancellor of the exchequer justified in levying a duty of a shilling or even of two shillings on imported wheat as a war tax. Mr. Pease is not only a Radical, but comes of perhaps the most distinctively free trade family in England. EQUIPMENT WILL BE ENGLI H. The De Beers Company at Kimberley, South Africa, have decided to make electricity the motive power at their diamond mines. Tenders have been invited for the erection and equipment of a large new generating station and estimates have been received from various countries. Some of the machinery will be of American manufacture, but it is stated that the bulk of orders has been placed with English firms. GRAIN TAX PROPOSED. Sir Robert Giffen, ex-president of the Statistical Society, who has been long associated with the Gladstonian school of finance, significantly suggests in the Times today that the inncome tax be reduced from 14 pence to 10 pence in the pound, which would mean the loss of £10,000,000 to the national exchequer, and that £20,000,000 be raised by indirect takation, includ-ing a tax of 1 shilling per quarter on wheat, and 1 shilling per load on timber. The Westminster Gazette, a pillar of free trade, says: "If we could be certain that this were not the thin end of the protectionist wedge, we The St. James Gazette (Tory and Protectionist) says: "A grain tax touching the central article of our commercial creed, would raise opposition which the advantage to be gained would not make it worth while to provoke. MODERN QUESTIONS CONCERN-

ING HOLY WRIT. Rome, Jan. 10.-The membership of the Papal commission on modern questions concerning the Holy Writ is officially announced. The scope of the inquiry is to astertain the limits of freedom to be allowed the Catholic exegetist in Biblical questions of the day, and point out definitely which must be retained and which must be rejected in the interests of orthodoxy, which are allowable and which are left to individual conscience. The commission, notably the president, is said to represent broad-minded, progressive tendercies. BUDGET SHOWS DEFICIT. The Prussian minister of finance, Baron Von Rheinbaden, in the lower house of the diet, presented the budget for 1902, in which the ordinary estimates show a deficit of 70,000,000 marks. The former president and vice-presidents of the lower house of the diet vere elected by acclamation.

Departure of London's Quota to the Field Hospital.

Young Men Were Given a Rousing Sendoff by Comrades and Fellow Students.

Not since the memorable afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 25, 1899, when the London company of the "Fighting First Contingent" marched bravely through the streets to the waiting troop train, has such a display of enthusiasm been witnessed as that which marked the departure yesterday of the city's quota of three to the Canadian South African field hospital force. When the first contingent left patriotic feeling ran high. The war was not old enough to have lost its glamor, and this was the first pretentious effort Canada had ever made toward maintaining the solidarity of the empire. Small wonder that the streets were filled with crowds, eager to give a parting cheer to London's brave young soldiers; small wonder that women wept, and men howled like wild things.

The war was new then.

The crowds were not as great yesterday, but the enthusiasm was un-bounded. The war has become a grim reality now; the glamor is vanished. It is no reflection on the brave fellows who marched and fought with the first Canadian contingent to say that the spirit animating the three who left has assured the permanency of the British Empire, for they realize very keenly that the voyage of nearly 8.000 seeking to persuade Sir Henry Camp- miles upon which they have started is not a pleasant adventure. They have set out to face a menace more deadly by far than Boer builets—the scourge of enteric fever. The Tenth Field Hospital, of which they form a part, is but one of several hospital corps, a number of which are about to leave England, to be in the field when the fever season begins. As students of medicine, these three young men know exactly the nature of the perils they will be called upon to face. These reasons, together with their personal popularity throughout face.

the city, were responsible for the warmth of the parting. The three young men who left London at 4.35 yesterday to join their corps in Halifax were Quartermaster-Sergeant Edgar Barnes, and Privates Fred G. Morrow and John Gunn, all members of No. 6 Bearer Company, Army Medical Corps. The two former were fourth year students of Western Medical College, and the latter a second year student of the same institution. At the college the greatest excitement prevailed during the day. The students had resolved to send their departing friends away in style, and, needless to say, they succeeded. An open sleigh was procured, and the forses unhitched and a 50-foot rope attached to it. On either side of the rope as many students as could crowd in hitched themselves. The remainder, with No. 6 Bearer Company, in uniform, formed a formidable guard of honor about the sleigh occupied by the volunteers, and in this order, headed by the band of the 7th Regiment. the triumphal march to the Grand Trunk depot began. All the students were the purple and black colors of the college, and Sergt. Cockburn, drum-major of the 7th, proudly flour-ished the colors on his baton. At the armory of the Bearer Company, Capt. A. T. Hobbs, on behalf of the company, handed Messrs, Morrow and Gunn each a beautiful wrist watch, and Mr. Barnes, who had received a watch from other friends, a $5 gold piece. He was also given a watch to deliver to Harry Prebble, another member of the corps with the Mounted Rifles. Before leaving the school the three young men were suitably remembered by thir fellow-students, the presentation being made by Mr. Nor-From the armory to the depot the

Mesrs. Barnes, Gunn and Morrow were very popular among a large circle of friends, who wish them a safe and speedy return from Africa.

IMPORTANT POSITION VACANT. Toronto, Jan. 9.—Owing to the death of Rev. Dr. Robertson, the superintendency of Presbyterian missions for Manitoba and the Northwest, one of the most important positions in the gift of the church, must be filled. Rev. C. W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, known throughout Canada and half the world besides as "Ralph Connor," a writer of popular stories, whose scenes are laid in the Canadian West, is mentioned by many Presbyterian ministers as the man for the vacant position. VIOLET RAYS FOR CANCER CURE.

A revolution has broken out in Paraguay. President Aceval, of that republic, is said to be a prisoner.

Wm. Redmond and Joseph Devlin, of Belfast, will sail for the United States at the end of the month, to complete the work of organizing the league in America.

A riotous anti-British demonstration was provoked Wednesday at the town of Sal, in Hungary, on the occasion of

THE ADDRESS WAS PASSED

Ontario Legislature Soon Got Down to Business.

Only a Brief Debate to the Speech-No New Points Brought Out by the Opposition Leader.

Toronto, Jan. 9.-Mr. Gross (Weland), in moving the address in reply to the speech from the throne, expressed the view that if Canadians were badly governed it was their own fault. The natural fault of Canadians was that they were too pessimistic and too much given to grumpling. Dealing with the development of New Ontario, he said the Niagara peninsula was finding a market for fruit there. In his constituency they had one of the seven wonders of the world, Niagara Falls, and they would shortly have the eighth. Ontario had no coal within her borders, but this handicap was to be remedied by the power to generate be remedied by the power to generate electricity. At the present rate of progress the power generated at Niagara would within ten years turn every wheel in Toronto and other cities of the province. In connection with this development, he advocated the promotion of technical education. As to prohibition there were two questions. Should the Legislature enact and put in force a prohibitory law or should there be a referendum? This raised the further question as to whether there should be compensation for those in the liquor business. In any event the issue was an important one and should not be made a political football. "I hope the coming provincial campaign will be short and decisive," concluded Mr. Gross. "Let us hope it will be a clean and honest one. Mr. Mutrie (Wellington) seconded Mr. Whitney, leader of the opposition began by asking why no reason had been given for calling the Legislature together at so inconvenient a period of the year. He believed it was a desire to avoid the consequences of the fearful and wonderful legislation passed last session for the purpose of prolonging the life of the Legislature. As to the aid rendered the mother country, he was sorry that any contingent had been sent collect on de-livery. Mr. Whitney took up the various points of the official programme put forward by the Ross Government and said they all had practically falspirit animating the three who left len to the ground. He agreed with the London yesterday is the spirit which references to the construction of a railway from North Bay to Temiscaming, and to the necessity of increased representation for New Ontario.

The premier, Hon. G. W. Ross, de-

minister of justice that the act passed last session extending the life of recaptured by Gen. Bruce Hamilton parliament was unconstitutional. He (Mr. Ross) had taken pains to inquire into the question of constitutionality, Sir John Bourinot had stated that the act was in no sense at variance with safe constitutional government. The premier, continuing, said the Ontario cash balance this year would be nearly half a million dollars greater than the cash balance of last year. They had $800,000 cash balance last year, while now it was $1,300,000. But if the opposition had had their way there would have been no cash balance. The opposition, for instance, had endeavored to have cut in two revenues from the succession duties. Had the opposition's policy been followed the government would have had no money for good roads, for the bounty on sugar, for the development of New Ontario. The government might not have been successful in having Canadian nickel used by the British admiralty, but they had been successful in drawing attention to the vast nickel deposits of this country, and they had got the nickel mines developed to an enormous extent. As to cold storage, the government has succeeded in drawing the attention of the country to the advantages of cold storage, A British remount station had been established in Ontario, action of the government been responsible to some the to some extent for the fact that 8,000 horses had been purchased in the Dom-4 LEG tiro xzfifffffi finffffffffffffff inion for the Imperial army. As to Mr. Dryden's Dakota ranch, he yet to learn that it was an offence against any law for a man to invest his money in an enterprise in another country. If that were the case, then the Americans had greatly sinned in investing money in our nickel mines. They would find offenders all through the city of Toronto. Referring to scrap-iron assessment Mr. Ross said the intentions of the government last session were honest. They wanted to abolish the scrap iron assessment, and they did not know yet that they had failed-judges differed. If they had failed they would again; if they had succeeded and the law stood the test of the court of appeal, the deed was done, thanks to the assistance of the Municipal Association of Ontario, whose recommendation had been followed, when the government passed the act last session. "This government will never be convicted of false pretenses," said Mr. Ross. "The Ontario government had ruption and punish offenders than any government in the history of the country. The scream of corrupt practices had lost its force. Since 1898 there had been twenty-four by-elections, and the government had carried seventeen-four of them by acclamation. The electorate evidently believed that they were more likely to get honest elections under a Liberal regime than under gentlemen opposite. The address was then adopted and done more to investigate election cor-

the house adjourned until Monday. INDIANS MAKE TROUBLE. Miles City, Mont., Jan. 10.-Fort Keogh yesterday received a telegram from Forsyth asking that soldiers he immediately dispatched to the Lame Deer Indian agency. Word has arrived from the agency that trouble was brewing, and that an outbreak of the Chevennes was imminent, if it had not already occurred. The first shipment of wheat over the Canada Northern Railway arrived at Port Arthur Wednesday night, the consignees being the Lake of the Woods Milling Company.

LOVAT'S SCOUTS' GOOD WORK. Pretoria, Jan. 9.-The captures of Boers by the British columns continue at the average rate. Fifty prisoners are reported as having been taken this morning. Lovat's Scouts took the largest batch of prisoners near Aliwal North yesterday. Gen. Colville's column captured a smaller number at Kopjes River, in the Vryheid district. Col. Allenby has found the second bied that he had received any official gun lost by Col. Benson in the fight or unofficial communication from the with the Boers at Brakenlaagte about two months ago. The other gun w

Ottawa, Jan. 9 .- A cable was received by the governor-general today from the war office asking that the five nurses who were accepted for service in South Africa be sent forward to London immediately. They will report on arrival to the quartermastergeneral, at the war office, and that officer will make arrangements for their transport to South Africa. Col. MacDonald, director of military stores, has practically furnished all the equipment for the Mounted Rifles, which is considered good work in the short time that the colonel has had at his disposal. A GREAT MISTAKE

Made by Kipling in His Latest Poem, Sar Gilbert Parker.

Toronto, Jan. 10 .- Gilbert Parker M.P. was the guest of honor last night at a dinner given by the Canadian Club to the Canadian novelist. Mr. Parker, 29 response to the toast of his health, referred briefly to Kipling's recent poem about "Flanneled Fools at the Wicket," and said he had made a very great political mistake. Practice of cricket had given to Britons a temper to stand at tacks such as no other people ever had, and in evidence of this he pointed to the patience of the British in face of insulting carricatures from abroad Turning to politics, Mr. Parker urged the formation of a real imperial army. composed at the first perhaps of 10,000 men recruited in England, and 5,000 from Canada, and each of the great colonies. These men should be paid from the imperial exchequer and quartered in some exchequer and quartered in some part of the empire other than their own. Such a beginning in imperial defence would warn men like Von Buelow that the empire was one.

The thing that struck him in coming back to Canada was the permanence of everything, the high standard of achievement in morals and in material Hon. Geo. E. Foster asked Mr. Par-ker to take back to the British House of Commons the message that there should be an imperial tariff preference to rivet the last bolt binding the empire

TIDY SUM IN READY MONEY. The Price Cut No Figure With

Uncle Sam Has Ninety Million Dollars.

New Treasury Vault Completed-Location Cannot Be Told From the Outside.

[Washington Evening Star.] In the panic of 1893 there was a sudden call for bank notes from banks in all parts of the country. The demand, beginning in moderate terms, presently increased to enormous proportions. It wiped out the $5,000,000 supply of bank notes in the treasury vaults in no time, and still the call continued. The issue division of the treasury department was set to work double tides in the effort to keep up the supply. It fell behind hopelessly from the first, and at oen time there were frenzied requests for some thirty million dollars more than could be supplied. Naturally this increased the panic, and aided in bringing about disaster, and the authorities at Washingaster, and the authorities at Washington came in for severe criticism. Their answer was that $5,000,000 in bank notes on hand took up all the space available for such storage. "Provide more space" said the banking interests, and the government set about it. The result of that complication is a wonderful new vault, just now com-pleted, which will store $90,000,000 in money. With this enormous sum on hand it is not probable that any de-mand will be able to exhause the immediate resources. The new vault is 12 feet square, and its walls rise to a height of 12 feet. The lining of Uncle Sam's new money chest is composed of Bessemer steel plates three-eighths of an inch in thickness, and these are securely fastened by means of huge screws and bolts to a framework of steel, which is built into the masonry. All the pigeon-holes, nearly 6,000 in number, are of steel, and there is not an inch of inflammable material in the furnishings of the vault. ABSOLUTE SECURITY.

This receptacle of the nation's wealth is doubtless an object of deep longing to some thousands of gentle-men who make a living by helping themselves to other people's money in ways not sanctioned by the law, but it would be a very remarkable cracksman, or array of cracksmen, for that matter, who should get anywhere near the $99,000,000 securely nested in this new vault. This new vault can be entered only through the old vault, and its location is impossible to determine from the outside of the building. The government has even gone so far as to put in false windows, heavily curtained, to deceive anyone who might try to determine the resting place of the treasure from the outside. Two special guards who have for years done sentry duty over the bank notes guard the new vault as they guarded the old. But even if these guards could be over-come the mank robber who had reached the entrance to the vault-which he | ment. could never do, by the way-would be able to get no further, for the doors are practically impregnable. It was proaches. not so always. There v committee of investigation invited a delegation of bank burglars to experment on the doors. The committee believed that the place was pretty se-cure. The gentlemen of the jimmy examined the situation carefully, smiled, did a few minutes' work with their tools, and said to the investigating committee, "After you, gentlemen," as they bowed before the opened entrance Now there are duplicate locks on these doors, and the whole construction is so compact that nothing but dynamite would have much effect upon it.

Aside from this passive protection in all its various forms the gigantic storehouse of wealth opposite the White House has the benefit of one of the most complete systems of guards ever devised. About seventy watch-men are employed, and they work in three reliefs, patrolling the entire building at all hours of the day and night. In the office of the captain of the watch are recording instruments, to which each watchman must send an automatic report once every half-hour while on duty. The captain's office is continually in communication with the chief of police of Washington, the commandant at Fort Myer, and the commandant of the Washington arsenal, so that in the event of an emergency the police or a cavalry or artillery force could instantly be summon-A REGULAR ARMORY.

Stacked in the various parts of the building where money is stored are sufficient weapons to arm over 1,000 men, and quantities of ammunition. The interior of the building is also honeycombed with wires to facilitate quick communication, and should any foolhardy robber attempt to intimidate the treasurer, assistant treasurer or cashier, the official would only have to press a button under his hand to bring an armed force to his assistance in less than thirty seconds. At 5 o'clock each day all the doors of the treasury building are closed, save those at the main entrance, and by 6 o'clock every person, save the watchmen, must left the building, and the keys to all the various doors been delivered to the captain of the watch. Assisting the guards on the inside are a number of outside watchmen stationed in sheltered posts or watch houses, so disposed as to command every foot of

"I want to say for the benefit of some poor dyspeptic that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will give comfort and a oure every time. Five dollars a box would the exterior of the building and its ap-The transfer of the newly printed currency from the bureau of engraving and printing to the treasury depart ment and the dispatch of consignments of bank notes from the national treasure house to the railroad stations characterized by watchfulness equally thorough. Some of the wagons employed are virtually great iron safes on wheels. Two guards occupy the seat with the driver, two others have places on top of the van, and a trio of employes stand upon a broad step at the rear. All are, of course, fully armed. For the delivery of express shipments of coin and currency there are employed wagons with heavy iron screens, and these, like the vans just mentioned, are protected by armed guards on the inside and outside. No attempt has ever been made to hold up one of these wagons. Nothing less than an artillery company would have much chance of success, as the wagons are practically fortresses as well as

The guarding of the national treasure, in which such a marvelous precautionary system is employed, in reality commences at a point in the governmental money-making long before the currency has come into ex-istence as such. The mill at Dalton, Mass., where is manu-factured the "distinctive" paper on which the United States currency is printed, is hedged about with safeguards designed to prevent not only the theft of the precious fabric, but also to insure the secrecy of the chemical and mechanical processes whereby there are provided the two lines or bands of loose colored silk fiber which appear in each specimen of paper mo-ney, and upon which the government relies largely for protection against imitations. An amazingly intricate and complex system of safeguards prevails at the bureau of printing and engraving at Washington, where are printed all the currency, government bonds and other securities, particularly as regards the engraved plates, as the theft of a package of bank notes would be a small matter compared to the loss of plates which would print the face and reverse of a bank note, and which would confer upon their possessor a virtually inexhaustible fount of riches. RESPONSIBILITY OF IT ALL.

THE SYSTEM IN USE.

The responsibility for the safety of the printing plates really rests upon three men. Each of the large doors of the vaults contain three combination locks, one of which is operated by each member of the trio of trusted ployes. It is necessary that all three men be present in order to open any door, and should one of them be absent all work in the big printing establishment would be at a standstill unless he had deputed some person to represent him, and informed him of the combination of the lock over which he has custody. In more than a quarter century not a single plate in use at the bureau of engraving has been lost, but a few months ago some per-sons succeeded in securing several sheets of printed currency, and it has not been possible as yet to apprehend the culprits. However, in view of the relentless, untiring policy which the United States secret service always follows in such cases, it may be taken for granted that it will only be a matter of time until the thief is placed behind the prison bars.

Sister Hilda, of the Order of St. Margaret, Soon to Become the Wife of a Prominent Montreal Business Man.

Montreal, Jan. 10. - Montreal society is much upset by the an-nouncement of the marriage during the coming month of Miss Hilda Cudlip to R. P. Montague Davey, manager of the Dominion bridge works. Miss Cudlip was known until a few days ago as Sister Hilda, of the Order of St. Margaret, in which she took most solemn vows of celibacy, at the home of the order, in the Church of St. John the Evangelist in Boston. She is very beautiful and wealthy, but she decided to take the veil about six years ago, just after a visit to friends of Rev. Dr. Parkhurst in New York. Miss Cudlip entered the of the community in Boston, house about 1896, and was later transferred to Montreal, where she entered the hospital home of the order in St. Alexander street. When the home was removed to Sherbrooke street, accompanied the sisters thither. On the death of Sister Elizabeth, a little over a year ago, Sister Hilda

BURIED $ AND THE ACTIVE

A Contrast Between Ben. Franklin and Capt. Kidd.

Latter Not Only Robbed Victims But the World of Part of Its Working Capital.

Boston revels in great names, but it is safe to say that of all the many none will last longer in history and romance than Captain Kidd and Benjamin Frankthan Captain Kidd and Benjamin Frank-lin, points out a writer in the Philadel-phia Post. It is true that Captain Kidd did not become a Bostonian until he forsook his evil ways and took another name. He tried to lead a respectable life there, and it was his misfortune that he was caught at it. Two centuries have he was caught at it. Two centuries have passed and there is a disposition to show that the captain was a better man than history has painted him, and that the verdict which ended in his execution would have been set aside by another court if he lived in these days of stays, of appeals and delays. But he is dead. What we know is that he did take other people's belongings, and the present interest is the discovery of an old letter terest is the discovery of an old letter in which he mentioned the burial of his treasures. It is calculated that he hid about $5,000,000 in money gems and rich stuffs, of which only $70,000, found on Gardiner's Island, was ever recovered. The rest is still idle somewhere, and if it is ever discovered it will have only the value it had when it was buried two hundred years ago. Later in the same century Peniamin Franklin came along. century Benjamin Franklin came along. He had different ideas about money, and in an age in which money-making was difficult he built up a comfortable fortune and kept it growing by investments. He did more than this. He made his money a help to others. Young men of good habits and industry found him willing to assist them over the rough places ing to assist them over the rough places ing to assist them over the rough places —and they always paid him interest.

"The use of money is all the advantage there is in having money," said Franklin in his hints to those who would be rich, and he added, "For six pounds a year you may have the use of one hundred pounds, provided you are a man of known prudence and honesty."

He had this in mind when he gave a thousand pounds to the city of Boston.

thousand pounds to the city of Boston, and never was a finer object lesson left to posterity. He even reduced the rate in order to emphasize the growth of money. The bequest was to be used in loans at five per centum to young married artificers and the principal was to ried artificers, and the principal was to accumulate for a century. "If this plan is executed," said he in his will, "and succeeds as projected without interrup-tion for one hundred years, the sum will then be one hundred and thirty-one thousand pounds," and he directed that of this amount one hundred thousand pounds be devoted to public works, and the other thirty-one thousand pounds be continued for another hundred years, when the sum would be four millions and when the sum would be four millions and sixty-one thousand pounds sterling, of which he wished one million and sixty-one thousand pounds to go to Boston and three millions to the state.

Note the contrast: Captain Kidd's investments have not even paid two cents on the dollar. Franklin's five thousand dollars have grown into more than a million, and are still growing. Not only have his dollars been useful, but they have multiplied on their own good to humanity. Their blessedness has swelled their fullness. Their little kindnesses have mounted to a noble benefaction. The five per cent rate of interest did not seem much at the time, but it has increased from year to year, increasing on creased from year to year, increasing on each increase, and compounding the whole beneficent mass into a great for-It is the vast difference between the buried dollar and the active dollar. There are persons in each day and generation who believe the safest plan is to hide wealth, not pausing to think that each cent taken from active use is as good as dead. When the public vaults become overstocked the people suffer, business moves more slowly and entermissed from circulation. Franklin's rule is as true now as it was in the eighteenth century. Keep money moving, let it earn something for itself while aiding others. something for itself while aiding others, and the increase is as certain as the seasons. Captain Kidd did more than rob his victims; he robbed the world itself of a part of its working capital, and his bad influence has run through the years to such an extent that if the foolish people who have been digging for the buried treasures had put their time the buried treasures had put their time and money into legitimate labors they would be well off today. Of course, there is compensation in good and bad examples. Monuments were erected to Frankling—a gibbet for not have been guilty of all the crimes charged against him, there is little doubt that he deserves the reprobation of history and all honest folk. But Franklin's name shines brighter with the years, and his example will endure through all time.

If the common symptoms of rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, kidney troubles and persistent headaches are attended to when first experienced, by the use of one or two bottles of Paine's Celery Compound, these beginnings of serious troubles are forever banished. If you are out of sorts, have tired feelings, disturbed sleep, defective digestion, aches in back or side, sluggish circulation or poisoned blood, Paine's Celery Compound will give to all the functions of the body a fresh supply of nerve food, establishing strength and permanent vigor. Its use encourages an abundant supply of pure, fresh blood, without which there can be no health, happiness or real life. Paine's Celery Compound is a matchless remedy in cases of enfeebled nerves and foul blood. The use of one bottle is sufficient to prove its value. Beware of worthless imitations sold by some dealers. How to Make a ROUGH SKIN SMOOTH

There are some whose skin is naturally very tender, so much so, that a slight change in temperature, either heat or cold, will cause it to become rough and scale. This is very annoying, whether it makes the skin sore or not. A trouble of this kind is due to the skin being too dry, the underlying glands not giving it food enough. It must, therefore, be fed artificially. This may be done by using OLA CREAM, a scientific skin food. OLA CREAM is not a thin, watery fluid, but is of a creamy consistency. Prepared from a valuable formula, consisting of healthful ingredients, which feed the skin, building up the tissues, supplying to the glands that which they lack to prevent roughness.

Anyone who is troubled with roughness of the skin or chapped hands will find OLA CREAM a sure preventative. We are receiving many testimonials for OLA CREAM. We have made a study of the care of the skin, and will be glad to give any information to anyone writing us.

LOBO

Lobo, Jan. 9.-A very pretty house in yesterday's Advertiser) occurred on morning of Wednesday, Jan. 8, at the residence of John Carmichael, con. 9, Lobo, when his daughter, Mary C., was united in marriage to Angus Mc-Taggart, of Glencoe. Rev. E. J. Stobo. B. D., of Poplar Hill, read the marriage service, and only the bride's immediate family were present. The wedding gown was of cream satin, with train, and bridal veil, with orange The bride carried cream roses and looked charming as she entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father. After the ceremony the bridal party sat down at a most recherche wedding dinner, and then the newly married pair set out on a trip to London and points east. Mr. and Mrs. McTaggart are to make their home in Glencoe, where the groom has recently erected a splendid residence. Their many friends wish them much happiness in their married life.

THE LONDON ADVIRTISER COMPANY LONDON, ONTARIO

London, Friday Jan. 10.

Senator Landerkin on the Contingenis and Loyalty.

Conservatives who taunt the Laurler Government with not having been keen enough in sending military assistance to South Africa, were dealt with by Senator Landerkin at the West York nomination meeting. Dr. Landerkin said that a great deal of talk had been indulged in about the sending of the contingents C. O. D., and so on, but he reminded them the Canadian Government was the only colontal government in the Empire that had sent a contingent without the consent of Parliament. In the Conservative days, at the time of the Soudan trouble, England was sorely pressed and appealed to her colonies for aid. Australia sent a contingent, but Canada refused to send aid unless the Imperial Government would pay for equipping it. Australia was heartily thanked for her assistance, but Canada received a very polite snub. Lord Lansdowne at that time sent a telegram saying that the entire cost of any force recruited in Canada must fall on the Imperial exchequer. He read Lord Lansdowne's telegram, as follows: "Governor-General, the Most Hon. the Marquis of Lansdowne, G.G.M.G., to the Right Hon, the Earl of Derby, Feb. 25, 1885.—Government ready to sanction recruiting by Canada for service in Egypt or elsewhere. Force should be specially enrolled from different parts of local battalions under imperial army discipline act. Laurie preferable to Williams. I would suggest brigade of three battalions (five hundred) each from marine Provinces, old Canada and Northwest. Laurie migh command brigade and Williams one battalion. Melgund would like to serve as brigade-major; entire cost would fall on imperial exchequer."

The reply of the War Office to this telegram was:

"The offer of the Government of New South Wales, which has been accepted by Her Majesty's Government, was to provide an organized force, fully equipped and ready for immediate service, and the Government of the Dominion will no doubt fully appreciate the difference between the two offers as regards the use which could be made of them by Her Majesty's Government, and will not, Lord Hartington feels sure consider that in declining their patriotic offer for the presundue preference has been given to the colony of New South

enator Landerkin's clever expose of fiasco of 1885 should give the quietus to what Mrs. Malaprop termed "odorous comparisons" at the expense of Liberals.

Departure of a Worthy Londoner.

In Dr. A. T. Hobbs, who leaves th city to take the superintendency of an important institution at Guelph, London loses-but fortunately Ontario does not-one of the rising men of the medical profession; a man still young, whose original researches have already attracted attention on both sides of the Atlantic. The Advertiser wishes Dr. Hobbs every success in his new field of labor, and believes that his further opportunities for research will bring him increasing reputation.

A Word for the Galicians.

The Manitoba Free Press comes forward once more to deliver this people from the hands of their enemies, and at the same time to vindicate the action of the Dominion Government, whose policy it is to provide our Canadian Northwest with a hardy and industrious population.

A charge was brought against the Galicians by Attorney-General Campbell, that in the few schools that had been established among them they clamored for Galician teaching. At the time this statement was made it was refuted by the fact that in three instances the people had asked that Galician teachers be replaced by teachers with a better command of English. Scarcely more than a week ago an influential delegation waited upon the Manitoba Government to urge the claims of those settlers for a public school education. This delegation testifled in the highest terms in regard to the Galicians. They are said to be industrious and thrifty. Located in the district of Stuartburn, which, owing to natural conditions, would be least thought of for settlement by Canadians, they have made their habitat a prosperous settlement and have themselves become creditable citizens.

It is reported that one thousand five hundred Galician girls are occupying positions in English families in various parts of Manitoba as servants. They are said to be quick and intelligent. Such conditions, we think, would tend at least to afford a solution for the vexed problem of obtaining domestics. Education and enlightenment should make these girls more capable. It is ignorance that stultifies and makes people unmanageable. True education is the great leveler. Upon it the peace and security of a democracy depends.

"Fifteen thousand Galicians," says the Manitoba Free Press, "of whom school age, are helping to cultivate our soil, support our towns and villages, purchase our manufactures, and many of them are actually paying taxes to the Government. These people claim education from the Province as a right. They are not paupers. They obey our laws and wish to become Canadians. What more right have British immigrants or the thousands coming to us from the United States to claim school privileges than

Hen. Clifford Sifton at West Durham.

At the West Durham nomination meeting, Hon. Clifford Sifton pointed out that the pledges made to the people before coming into power had been honestly fulfilled. He referred particularly to the pledges relating to the fiscal policy, and pointed out how the tariff had been revised without doing injustice or injury to any existing interests, so that domestic and foreign trade had been promoted, the average trade had been promoted, the average of not being able to understand one yearly increase during the five years another. Little by little, two sections of Liberal rule being $29,575,558, com- of society are thus prepared, one carpared with an annual increase of $3,-701,105 during the eighteen years of Conservative rule. The reduction in taxation under the Liberal tariff was, he said, in 1901 considerably over $5,-000,000, compared with the duties which would have been levied under the Conservative tariff upon the same goods. Another result of the Liberal policy was shown in the conversion of the average annual deficit under the Conservative Government of $1,-523,685 to an average annual surplus under the Liberal Government of $5,-065,877, and an average annual increase of the debt under Liberal rule of $2,016,504, although large expenditures had been made in constructing public works, compared with an annual average addition during eighteen years of Conservative rule of $6,568,000.

One Funeral Often Causes Others.

A prominent citizen of Toronto, the late Mr. W. S. Lee, contracted the cold which contributed immediately to his death while attending the funeral of the late Dr. Sweetnam; and we observe another prominent Toronto of Mr. Lee. Seeing that one winter funeral so often causes other funerals, some revision of existing conventional arrangements might be thought out, such as would as much as possible minimize the avoidable exposure. In the excitement and pre-occupation caused by grief, even ordinary precaution is apt to be overlooked. There is much to be said, also, from many points of view, in favor of more private funerals.

The Young West.

The late Rev. Dr. Robertson was well acquainted with the vast resources of the Canadian West, and there was no theme upon which he loved to speak more than upon this favorite subject. He knew the country and its needs. He had traveled over it and met with all kinds of people. He wished to have the Gospel preached in every part of that vast land, because he had the true missionary spirit, and because he was thoroughly convinced that only by the inspiration of a living religion could the country be made really free, sober and strong. It is of great importance to the whole of Canada that the West should be built up on right lines. Dr. Robertson had his own ideas about emigration, and as a strong, independent man, expressed his view clearly and strongly. As a matter of fact, he welcomed all newcomers, and strove to do his share in ministering to their needs. There may be as great difference as ever on points of theology, but there is a growing agreement with regard to the fact that society rests on a moral basis, and that a healthy Christian church is a mighty influence to make that basis real and strong.

Smallpox in Ontario Last Year. Dr. Bryce, Provincial Medical Health Officer, reported at a recent meeting of the Provincial Board of Health, that during last year there had been 1,900 cases of smallpox in Ontario. Of this number there has been only twelve deaths, which means that so far, the disease is of a very mild type. In the United States the mortality is becoming comparatively heavy. This means that we may look for an increase in the virulence of the disease in Ontario unless great care be exercised in regard to its extermination. The chief centers of the outbreak of smallpox, reported by Dr. Bryce, are as follows: The unorgancounty 165; Brant county, 125. Smallpox thrives amid filthy surroundings, and during the winter It is reported that with the co-operation of the public ficials of Cleveland, Ohio, the medical health officer has been able to virtually stamp out the disease. This was facilitated by inaugurating a to be compelled to take so much milicrusade against uncleanliness, and in tary training, would be different from favor of vaccination. A Critical Situation.

'At present there is an exodus of certain religious orders from France. Those who wish to know the why and wherefore of this important movement can consult articles that have appeared in The Nineteenth Century and After, as well as other English periodicals; while the special student can go to the original sources. In these columns one can only point to the situation and show what the lesson is for Canada. The members of the religious orders, who, with sad hearts, are going into exile, claim that they are driven out by the action of the Government. The Bishop of Abbi says:

"Nothing like it, nothing so sad, has been witnessed in France since the re-vocation of the Edict of Nantes. Ought not that sad experience, the wounds of which are not yet healed, to have been sufficient to teach us that a people has nothing to gain from making its country uninhabitable to a portion of its children? By forcing them by a veiled measure of proscription to seek abroad a refuge for conscience's sake, the in-tolerance of the authorities saps the vital forces of the nation, and enkindles in the heart rancors that cannot be quenched." (Nineteenth Century and After, December, 1901.)

We cannot go into the details of the law against associations, but here is an extract from a famous speech by M. Waldeck-Rousseau, the French Prime Minister:

"Two bodies of youth are growing up in our midst ignorant of one another, and so unlike that they run the risk ried by the current of the revolution further and further in the direction of democracy, and the other more and more deeply imbued with the doctrines which one would have thought had not survived the great movement of the eighteenth century. Such a fact is not explained by the free play of opinion, but only by the existence of a power, which is not longer even occult, and by the constitution in the state of a rival power. The situation is intolerable, etc., etc."

This is part of an argument for rational effective legislation with regard to religious associations. The deep division between the classes of the youth is admitted on both sides. M. de Mun thus replies:

"That which so alarms you today is that face to face with the body of socialist youth growing up in your lycees, there is arising a body of Christian youth more and more numerous every day. For there is the point, as you know well, there is the great fact of our epoch, which is sufficient to show the failure of your enterprises."

He goes on to say the dominant party has wielded power for 25 years, and yet the middle classes are slipping away and demanding for their children the liberty of "Christian education." We could, however, quote from good authorities that many of the "laic" citizen is now seriously ill through a schools are more godly in their spirit cold caught in attending the funeral than ever, though they have no theological teaching. Sufficient has been said to show that the situation is complex, difficult and dangerous. The lesson for us is to avoid intolerance, and farther, to avoid the separation of our children; let them learn as much as possible in common, while there is the utmost freedom of Christian teaching. Protestants also need to learn the lesson which the Catholic bishop of France puts so pathetically. One sect a tomorrow, and those who sow the wind reap the whirlwind.

Revival of Scottish Song.

Quite a revival of Scottish song is taking place throughout the world. These national songs are a precious part of every national inheritance. One of the greatest of modern lyrical singers is Miss Jessie Maclachlan, the famous Scottish prima donna, who appears in the New Grand Opera House, on the evening of Wednesday, Jan. 15. It is hard to beat such songs as "Mac-Gregor's Gathering," "Mary o' Argyle," "The March o' the Cameron Men," "The Scottish Bells," "Auld Robin Gray" and the like.

"Conscription" In Britain. This word, we are told has a hateful sound to English people, but that of late they have become accustomed to it, and that they may in some form or other adopt the thing. Kipling has recently lent the influence of his poetry to the new idea, but as he linked with it a heavy blow against the English. man's sporting propensities, the effect may be neutralized. At any rate a new military situation is before us. At the beginning of the twentieth century, instead of turning our swords into ploughshare, and our spears into pruning hooks, we are faced by the statement that the only way to meet the facts of modern life is for every man to be trained to seize the deadly weapon at a moment's notice and use it for defense of hearth and home. The nation of shopkeepers is to become a nation of warriors. Instead of industrialism swallowing up militarism, militarism and industrialism are to exist side by side. That seems to be a poor result for our civilization and Christianity to lead to, but we can only hope that it is a road to better things. English people look upon the nations that has "conscription" as being englaved by their military. Gerized districts of Northern Ontario, 750 mans on the other hand, speak of cases; Carleton county, 237; Kent

English soldiers as "mercenaries." The Englishman sells himself as food for powder at a small pittance. The German takes upon himself a needful burden in defense of his fatherland. Here we have two different ways of viewing the same problem. Now, we have to admit that for every Englishman tem could only be applied by the consent of the vast majority. It would mean that all classes would have to render the same or similar service. One result would be that a knowledge of military affairs would be more widespread, and the people generally taking an interest in such things would not be content unless the army was put on a scientific and business basis. Even this little taste of the toil and trouble of soldiering might mean less instead of more desire for war. If the music hall "jingoes" had to spend more strength in drilling, they would probably spend less in shouting. At present the army is drawn largely from the highest and the lowest of the people. The new system would take change the whole color and tone of the army. This would be for good. If a nation is to have an army, it must not consist of poor "Tommies" at one end, and showy, extravagant aristocrats at the other. An army is a machine for a certain purpose, and as such it must be made effective, and efficiency must not be sacrificed to tradition or appearance.

in the great middle class, and would

For ourselves we wish that there might be less of this military business rather than more, but we cannot deny the elementary duty of every man to take a share in the defense of his country. If we British come to feel what that means, and that we cannot do all our fighting by proxy, we may find out that our empire is big enough, and that it needs development from within more than expansion from

The nomination in West York, the riding for which the late Clarke Wallace sat, was enlivened by a free fight at the close.

The opening of the New Year in Germany was the occasion of a duel in which a man lost his life from the effects of a bullet wound in his heart. The man who was killed was a university student, who had, along with his confreres, jostled some army officers on the street, one of whom dared him to mortal combat. It is said that Emperor William is opposed to the disgraceful medieval practice of dueling, and has threatened to demand resignations of any army officials who persisted in it in the [Principal Grant at Kingston.] "The outer framework of the Canadian nation has been almost completed, but the question presses on us. "What kind of a nation is it to be?" Is it to be a huge "city of pigs," to use Plato's phrase; or is it to be a land of high-souled men and women, and so a land to be loved wherever its people roam. Judging by the general tone of the public press, I for one am often to express. The ideals presented to us are increase of population-no matter what its quality or what the general standard of living and thinking, and increase of wealth-no matter how obtained or how saved, whether sponging on the Mother Country or groveling at the feet of multi-millionaires. It is little wonder that the average tone of our people corresponds to these ideals. What threatens life of Canada most seriously? Not. as many suppose, the drink traffic, the may be dominant today, but there is evils of which have been intensified by the remedies zeal without knowedge urges, and by immoral proposals to abolish it without compensating those who under the sanction of law have invested their all in a lawful business. No! rather the uncleanness, which does not show itself on the terialism of thought and life, which is ls Torture.

"A City of Pigs."

The Most Exasperating of All Skin Diseases-The Most. Difficult to Cure-Dr. Chase's Ointment Proven To Be an Effective Treatment.

Eczema's itch is torture, the skin seems on fire with the burning, stinging humor; and at times it almost unbearable, and in desperation you could tear the skin to pieces. You dare not exercise for fear of aggravating the itching; neither can you sleep, for no sooner does the body warm than the trouble begins, and instead of restful, refreshing it is scratch, scratch, scratch all night ong There is scarcely a moment's respite from this maddening malady at any time. Of course you have tried nearly all the washes, salves, lotions and medicated soaps, but like thousands of others have been disappointed and disgusted.

Ann McDonald, Kingsville, Ont., states: "For about three years I was a dreadful sufferer from eczema. At times the patches of raw, flaming flesh would extend from my waist to my neck, and from the knees to the ankles. The intense itching almost drove me crazy, and though I tried all the local physicians, they could not even relieve the suffering. The flesh would crack open, and I don't believe anyone suffered more than I did.
"I was told of Dr. Chase's Ointment, but did not believe that it would help me. After the fifth application of this preparation I began to feel the bene fit of its soothing, healing effects, and now attribute a cure to the persistent use of this wonderful remedy. It is truly worth its weight in gold, and I never tire of recommending it to other

You may be skeptical regarding the ability of Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure you. Most people are, after trying in vain to get relief from a host of remedies, but Dr. Chase's Ointment will not disappoint you. You will be surprised over the marvelous control it has over all itching, burning inflam-mation of the skin, and the wonderful healing powers which it possesses It takes time to thoroughly cure eczem but Dr. Chase's Ointment will do it. You will find relief after a few appli-cations, and gradually and naturally the cure will follow. Besides being a positive cure for eczema, Dr. Chase's Ointment comes useful in a hundred ways in every home for every form of skin irritation and eruption, chapped skin irritation and eruption, chapped skin and chilblains. 60 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co.,

REGARDING REFERENDUM

The Proportion of Votes Needed to Enact Prohibition.

Views of Prominent Residents of Toronto-Their Opinions Are Varying.

A point which has lately been ed with regard to the passage of a 579 for the year ending July 31, 1901. law prohibitory of the liquor traffic. There was also a deficit in the account bears upon the proportion of the electors declaring in favor of the passage to enforce total abstinence by law, of such a law. If resort were had to making a criminal offense of what tors declaring in favor of the passage a referendum, what proportion of the electorate, or what proportion of the total vote actually polled, declaring in favor of the principle of prohibition should be held to constitute a mandate? This question was yesterday submitted to a number of prominent gentlemen in Toronto. The answers given are rather diverse. Two gentle-men, Mr. E. F. Clarke, M.P., and Mr. John Macdonald, declared in favor of the recognition of a simple majority in favor of prohibition as sufficient Four gentlemen, Mr. Frederick Wyld, Mr. W. R. Brock, M.P., Mr. J. W. Langmuir and Mr. John F. Ellis, declared in favor of a very high majority. Four gentlemen, Mr. D. R. Wilkie, Mr. J. Herbert Mason, Mr. E. B. Osler, M.P., and Mr. H. C. Hammond, occupied a position of entire opposition to prohibition, and denying the right of a community to interfere with a minority in such a matter. It may be added that half a dozen gentlemen, including several strong prohibitionists, were asked the question, but declined to speak for LET THE MAJORITY RULE. Mr. E. F. Clarke, M.P., was asked the pollowing question: "In the event of the passage of a prohibitory law and its submission to the people for confirmation, what proportion of the vote of the electorate should be considered a mandate?" Mr. Clarke answered as follows: "I answer that question in a way my countrymen often reply to questions by asking you another. When any question has been submitted hitherto to the people for their decision, did not a majority of the voters govern? Take the case of money bylaws, exemptions, Scott act, etc. Why, then, should there be a different rule appli-ed to the case of the referendum?" Mr. John Macdonald, on being asked the question, replied: 'Anything in the question, replied: the way of a majority of the actual number of persons voting, so long as it is not too close." Asked for a closer definition of the last phrase, he answered that he would consider 51 per cent for and 49 per cent against as too close, but that he would consider 55 per cent for and 45 per cent against as a large enough vote to constitute a mandate. SIXTY PER CENT OR MORE. Mr. Frederick Wyld stated that he was not a believer in what might called class legislation. To him it did not appear to be getting at the root of the thing to permit the manufacture and importation of liquor; it was hardly fair that the poor man should not e allowed his five-cent glass of beer while the well-to-do could afford to buy liquor by the case or the bottle. It ardly seemed in touch with the spirit of the times. If, however, such a law were submitted to the people, he ught 60 per cent of the men who cast their votes should be in favor of thought that 60 per cent of the men on the voters' list should support a prohibition act before it could be law. That was a big proportion, but he believed that the question would bring out a larger vote than had ever before been polled, and that a large vote would have the best possible effect on the carrying out of the law if it should an indication that there is very strong opposition to the law, which would make it ineffective by reason of the opposition and evasion which might be expected. I think a clear majority of the electorate should be polled in favor of the law.'

OPPOSED TO PROHIBITION. Mr. D. R. Wilkie said: "I quite agree Bishop Potter in his opinion, to the effect that the passage of any such legislation is destructive of the moral fiber of the people, and I am opposed to it or any so-called approval arrived at even by a referendum. I am cposed to legislative prohibition because I believe that the same ends could be much more successfully attained where it is needed by education in and out of the schools and colleges."

Mr. J. Herbert Mason said: "I doubt whether any proportion of the electorate would be justified in enforcing a measure which interferes with private rights. As far as I am personally conhas been and is not now considered in that category. In saying that I may add that I was a teetotaler myself for the greater part of my life, and I am totally opposed to the taking of stimulants by young people, but there comes a time when a man may justifiably resort to their use in a moderate manner. Further, I believe any attempt to enforce such a law would be of which I have always been a supporter. The temperance movement for many years has been attended with very great success, and there is very much less drinking than was formerly the case. If the youth of our country were properly trained to the use and abuse of stimulants, we should need no compulsory legislation. I don't think any proportion of the electorate could compel others to forego their rights as individuals. I think the whole movement for prohibition is a mistake, and is the outcome of lack of practical knowledge of affairs." Mr. E. B. Osler, M. P., stated that he was against prohibition in toto, and that he did not wish to discuss it.

Passing it on any basis would lead to fraud and hypocrisy.
Mr. M. C. Hammond said: "We have enough hypocrites and frauds in the city of Terento now. I do not believe in prohibition at all."

IMMIGRATION'S TIDE

Italians Find It Cheaper to Go Home Than Pay Rent in Winter.

[From the New York Sun.] There is one period of the year when the great tide of immigration ebbs and the outflowing steam is almost equa! to that still pouring in from Europe to New York. This is the time. At any of the railroad stations when the trains come in from the west and south you can see on two days a week a living illustration of the sxiom that it is cheaper to move than to pay rent. for on these two days, the days on which the Italian steamers sail, there throng into New York parties of dark-months and will spend Christmas and New Year's under their own sunny Italian skies. They are almost all men, and the majority are young. They carry all their worldly possessions in a tarpaulin bundle swung over the shoulder on the spade with which they have earned a year's living on new railroad embankments in cuttings and excavations here, and they are leaving few regrets behind. They came here poor and are going back rich to spend their earnings, and return in the spring, empty-handed again, to make They move because rent and living are dear here in winter, outdoor work is at a standstill, and steerage rates across the ocean are temptingly low. to displace the patient ass as a means of locomotion in the Orient. Cleveland and Chicago capitalists, incorporated as the Cleveland Construction Company, have been successful in negotiating with J. F. Spanier, of Rome, Italy, for concessions for electric lines from Cairo, Egypt, to Mount Sinai, and thence along the coast of the Red Sea through Syria and Arabia to Mecca. A branch is to connect Damascus with the system at Mount Sinai. Mount Sinai.

It is figured that the business during a single one of the annual Mohammedan pilgrimages to Mecca, whither it is the pious duty of every Mohammedan to go, will pay a handsome profit on the cost of construction, the number of pilgrims being enormous. Letters from Spanier say the Sultan of Turkey has granted an important part of the concessions for the system.

Already trolley cars are running from

They are Mrs. Wm. Scott, Mrs. Sarah Scott, Mrs. John Prior, Mrs. Rachel Howlett and Mrs. A. C. Monteith.

UNION PRAYER SERVICES.

The union prayer services, held by the city Baptist churches, close this evening with the meeting in Talbot Street Church. So far, the gatherings have been large, and it is confidently believed that they have proved great-Rev. Dr. Sowerby gave a very impressive address last night at the Adelaide Street Church, from Revelation, iii, 15 and 16, his theme being loyalty to Christ and the church-loyalty as opposed to lukewarmness. The reverend gentleman's vigorous and eminently practical address was listened to with marked attention by the audience that filled the church. Rev. Messrs. Johnson, Walker and Boone assisted in the services.

Mr. Walter Mottashed, a native of this city, was painfully injured several weeks ago at New Milford, Pennsylvania, where he has been living for some time. He was out for a day's shooting, and laid his gun against a stonepile in which he was digging for a rabbit. In some manner, it is sup-posed by a stone striking the trigger, the contents of the gun entered his right arm, and splintered the bone so that two inches had to be removed. It is hoped that he will recover the use of his arm. Mr. Mottashed is recuperating at his brother's in the city.

Record of All Real Estate Sales for 1901.

Comparative Statement of Assessed and Selling Values.

Large Total of Sales—Figures for the Year Involve Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars-An Arguneral will be held on Sunday to Union ment Re Assessments.

> During the year just ended, the transfers of property that have been made in this city have been extracrdinarily numerous, and the values involved have been greater than is usual. A comparative statement of the selling and assessed values of all real estate exchanges has been prepared for the first time in the assessment commissioner's office—the record having been carefully kept by Mr. A. E. Jolly, of the commissioner's office. It shows that from January to December the sales totaled in number 567 their selling value being $864,156, and their assessment value $698,090, the difference being $166,066. This large percentage of increase of the selling value over the assessed value is pointed to by the assessment commissioner as an answer to the complaints so frequently made before the court of appeal that properties are assessed higher than they would sell for. The records of the office indicate that this claim is unjustifiable. The smallest number of sales was recorded in February, only 24 having taken place that month. January was next with 30, and only 31 were recorded in December. October was the best month for the real estate men-71 sales being the total, and April was econd with 66.

The 71 sales in October totaled only $108,453, while June, with only 50 sales, totaled $126,495, the largest total for one month during the year. The record for the year, according

o months, is as follows: Month. January ... 30 February ... 24 March 44 Totals ...567 $698,090

SOME FAMOUS LOCOMOTIVES

Fate of "Machines" Well Known in Railway World.

What Becomes of Greyhounds of the Rail Before Scrap Heap Stage Arrives.

"I see they are making a fuss because 999, once the greatest flyer of em all, has got down to pulling the milk train" said the veteran engineer, in the hearing of a New York Sun writer. "She certainly was a bird ly helpful to many who have attended. o' the rails," he continued, taking a very long pull at his very short pipe, but there was others.

"I suppose you don't remember 280, I guess you are too young, do you? but speaking of birds, there was never anything like her, at least as far as show was concerned. "She was built at West Albany in the days when each fancy machine had a name. She was the William H. Vanderbilt and a dazzling sight she was when she came out of the shops. Such a pretty machine never rode the rails before.

"In the first place she had a complete jacket of polished brass, which shone like pure gold in the sunlight. Otherwise, she was painted and powonly four men had a hand in building

"It took 'em six months to do the job, but they did it so well that no one objected on the ground of time She cost about $60,000, which is six times as much as a first-class flyer costs these days. They just about build 'em at so much a pound now. "Well, when she flashed up the Mohawk Valley, her brasses shining and Reub Allen at the throttle, I tell you there was great doings all along the line from Albany to Syracuse. People turned out in swarms to see her, and the newspapers used to make an item of it every time she passed through And wasn't Reub proud of her and didn't he look fine in her cab?

"You see, Reub was one of the show engineers of the division. He had white hair and a white beard and always wore fine corduroy clothes. Besides that he was as sure a hand as ever pulled a throttle.

"Mr. Vanderbilt wouldn't let anyone else take his private car up through the valley, and he always traveled at top speed. Reub lived at Schenectady, and he was often fined there for running through the place faster than the [Special to The Advertiser.] [law allowed. with some of the new ones. The Henry R. Keefe went the way of the rest. Maybe the scrap heap got her or maybe she was sold to some small road out West. At any rate she disappeared one day after getting away down in the world, and no one in her old territory appears to have seen her since. "Another crackerjack machine in the days when the Central beyond Albany was a two-track road and Major Z. C Priest was the boss of the Albany and Syracuse divisions was 290. You could always tell her within hearing distance, even if you couldn't see her, because she had an odd-sounding bell. "Some said the bell was half silver in fact, that was the common belief all along the road. Whether it was actually true or not I couldn't say, but she certainly did have the sweetest bell I ever heard. "Tom Dormany ran her for years. He was one of the greatest engineers on the road. He retired a rich man not long ago, after about 50 years of railroading, and he's alive and kicking vet. His last work was on the Empire State, where for a while he ran opposite to Ed. Chase.

"Now, that was a long spell for a man to be in the business and come out of it, you might say, without a scratch. arly so in the Dormany, because most of the time he was at it he handled nothing but fast runs.

"But his was a cool head, a steady head and a quick eye. I've no doubt that these pulled him out of many a bad hole, for the experienced engineer doesn't live that hasn't had many a close shave. "But coming back to machines that were the whole show in those days, you don't want to forget 600 and 601. They were built at Schenectady and you might call 'em the forerunners of the present big, high-speed locomptives on the Central.

"They'd look like pygmies beside the big fellows now, I reckon, but they were looked upon as wonders when they were first turned out. I think that 600 succeeded 280 as the William H. Vanderbilt. "But in spite of all that was expected of her, she never did amount to much. She wouldn't warm to her work, and was balky about making steam. She soon disappeared from the horizon. Her mate, 601, was as likely a machine as you ever put your foot on. She did splendid work for years.

"No. 76 had got to the switch engine stage when 600 came out of the shop to surprise the natives. But she was a hummer in her day. My, what a stir she caused when she took a train of four cars from Albany to Schenectady, seventeen miles, in twenty-four minutes!

"She was a ramshackle sort of an dered, rigged out to kill. The steel of her machinery was all imported and a spider's web. The last I saw of her was in the old Utica shop at Schenectady, twenty odd years ago. She looked then as though she was about ready to go out of business. "There was another engine up that way whose number has slipped my mind just for the moment. But I've got a fine picture of the machine itself in my mind, and I don't think it'll ever go out until my time comes. "Mounted on her boiler was a complete fire fighting appartus. The pump was a powerful one, and the locomotive was often called upon to help firemen out when there was a blaze close to the railroad. It's all of twenty-five years since I've seen that engine. She used to pull local freight up St. Johns-"Another freak in my younger cays was old No. 3. She was a wood-burner with a stack as big as a house. She used to puff and smoke along as though she was the real thing. It was a good many years after she went out of business, though, before the Central took on the pipestem stack you see on all the locomotives today.

To my thinking the greatest freak the Central ever put out in the way of an engine was little No. 0. number just hit her to a T. She'd size up with some of the hog-pulling freight today the same as a Shetland pony would beside of a big Flanders "Even in those times she was the laughing stock of the road. As Bill Caulkins said about her once, she was about as big as a pint of cider half drunk. "She had only one driving wheel on each side, and no boiler room or fire space to speak of. I've seen her try to go over the grade beyond Schenectady with ten empties, and you'd die laughing to see her puffing and blowing along the level track for a mile back to get a good start. But she never succeeded in pulling the load over. Ten empties were too much for her, about five were her limit.

"A good-hearted old soul, Ned Reardon, used to run her, and the pranks through. For a long time she took the yardmen used to play on him were the 3 o'clock run out of Albany, then something shameful. They were alone of the fastest on the road.

The train is running yet, but bless sou it ain't in it for speed or beauty that's what they called her, alongside the tracks. "She, too, passed her last days in the Utica shop. They had her wedged in among a lot of old barrels and other truck, and the last time I saw ner the dust on her boiler and cab was an inch deep.' The veteran engineer lit his pipe again and took another long pull. 'It's curious," he continued, "what a fascination the business has for men especially those who are used to fast runs. There's simply no getting away from it, as long as the road will have you. I've known men to hang on and hang on long after they were rich enough to retire, and some of them got killed or badly bunged up in the end. "One of my friends up on the Mohawk division died not long ago leaving $75,000. He had been well off for years, yet he simply couldn't let go.

"One night when he was taking th mail through he stuck his head out of the cab window and a water tank spout hit him. He was laid up for months, and when he got out he was pretty shaky all through. "He was an old man in the bargain. Yet I'd be willing to bet a hat that he'd gone back if they offered him an engine. He used to go down to the crossing every day to see the flyers go through.

"Another of my friends who had taken out fast ones all his life, took a switch engine after he had been forty years on the road. It wasn't that he had to do it, for he was well fixed, but the spell was on him just as strong then as when he first began.

"The switch engine was the best they'd offer him, asd he took it because he couldn't get anything else. Well, one day off duty he was run down at the crossing and that was the last of him. He might have lived ten years longer if he'd kept away. "But they have nice, easy ways of letting the old ones down nowadays. Generally, when they want to get rid of a man, who has outlived his use-both these dreams simultaneously. In point of fact, youth and leisure, and sudden freedom from the fetters of hard work, are fully sufficient to account for this. But, unhappily, tellers of stories have, for the most part, combined to treat the conscious wish to marry for love as a proof of youthril unwardliness.

love as a proof of youthful unwordliness and want of practicality. In reality it is not a proof of anything whatever. On the contrary, the most worldly, the most prudent, the most practical, are just as likely to make absurd and imprudent marriages for love as their neighbors.

Mark Warden's character should, even for love's sake, throw up his chances and projects, and at once purden himself with a penniless wife and her relations.

However inconsistent men may be, and are, that would be too absurd.

Nevertheless, if all this is borne in mind, and if it is also remembered that Does this sound inconsistent? If so, it so not because it was really so. The is not because it was really so. The square brow and the strong mouth, so early developed, were sure signs that the boy, young as he was, was capable of forming a purpose, and of resolutely keeping to it when it was formed. Every large school contains some such boys, though of course in an inconsiderable large school contains some such marriages for love as their neighbors.

In short, there is scarcely anything that a man may not do, however inconsistent it may be with his general character, without offending against the laws even of common probability. David betrays Uriah, and yet remains the most pious of men; Hector runs away at the mere sight of Achilles, and yet remains the bravest; Nero cannot find it in his heart to sign an ordinary death warrant, and yet remains the most cruel; Napoleon marries his first empress for love, and yet remains the most heartless. And so, to compare very great things with very small, Mark Warden spends his holiday in falling in love with his sister's friend, without ceasing to be as ambitilarge school contains some such boys, though of course in an inconsiderable minority.

Now, Mark, like most whom nature has rendered fit to do something in the world, was a born dreamer; and as he strolled with his rod and line along the Grayl and through the park of Earl's Dene, he felt to the full that discontent with his lot in life which every professional dreamer knows so well. His own position, his own prospects, were poor enough. His father, now that Denethorp had grown in size and in consequence, no longer in his own person represented the colleges of surgeons and physicians. The doctor had at first flourished simply because he had had the whole field to himself; for, as may have been gathered already, he had no qualities that render success superior to accident. It is not necessary, indeed, that a country surgeon should possess the suavity and polished manners so essential to the well doing of his confrere of the ci'y. A certain roughness and bluntness is in by no means ungraceful keeping with the character; but then, if he has them not, he must have something better. Now, while the ladles of the place, who no longer consisted of his old admirers, but to a great extent of strangers whom the mills had gathered together from various parts of the country, were disgusted with his loud and what they con.idered vulgar manners—for the ladies of the mills were mightily particular on the score of vulgarity—with his utter want of tact, and with the flavors of tobacco and spirits from which he was now seldom free, their husbands found out that, good fellow as he certainly was in the smoking room and hunting field, he was never to be found when wanted; that he took no personal interest in his cases; that he never kept an appointment with anything like punctuality; and that, from carelessness, though not from dishonesty, there was always something wrong about his bills. Besides these easily perceptible defects, his skill was not extraordinary, and his knowledge behind the times; for he never read, and saw no practi

The result of this state of things will readily be imagined; and Mark could not help comparing himself with the heir of Earl's Dene, for instance, who was scarcely so old as he, and who was yet, for no reason that his dissatisfied mind could find out, a spoiled favorite of fortune. Gradually and unconsciously, as with many another boy of lower birth and worse prospects, the idea of one day becoming rich and great became part of his very nature, and this, in due course, grew from being an unconscious idea to be a set, conscious purpose. By the time he was fourteen he had even chosen the means. These suggested themselves to him in a sudden flash, as it were, when he happened once to be in Redchester at assize time, and was told that the judge, whom he saw sitting in scarlet and ermine, and result of this state of things will and was told that the balls, saw sitting in scarlet and ermine, and heard addressed as "my lord," was now a peer of the realm, but had once swept out a shop in a country town. So he is a shop in a country town. out a shop in a country town. So he made up his mind to become a barrister not quite so easy a step to take in those days as in these. But, for him, the best road to the bar was through a college fellowship—his only road to the university was a scholarship—and to gain that he must work hard at school. And so he did set himself to work hard, and thus gained his first step towards the

But also, like most dreamers, he was reserved. He kept his schemes locked in his own breast, not because he was afraid of ridicule, but because it was simply not his nature to make confidences. Indeed, to a certain extent, he was in the same position as Marie. There was no one about him capable of giving him sympathy, far less of aiding or directing him. His father was proud and his sister fond of him; but he was outdirecting him. His father was proud and his sister fond of him; but he was outside, if not above them both, and he knew it, exaggerating the distance with the conceit of his age and nature. And thus it was that, unamiable as his character may be thought, it was quite strong enough to gain the admiration of the strength-worshiping Marie.

CHAPTER III.

Above all things, however, let it be remembered that he was, after all, but eighteen, and that a few months of comparative idleness, after many months' very hard work, were now before him. These two facts lead to the very germ whence this story springs.

In the very first paragraph of the first part of this introduction, the reader received a warning. That warning is repeated here, because, in spite of what people profess, they are, in fact, perpetually craving after complete consistency of character, and are disappointed when they do not find it. Of course, verbally, and as an abstract proposition, everybody is always quite ready to admit that there is no such thing in the world, except, just possibly, in the case of consistent stupidity and consistent obstinacy. But this creed is not held so practically as its orthodoxy deserves.

It will doubtless be gathered from this solemn opening, that the resolute and practical Mark Warden, with a by no CHAPTER III. solemn opening, that the resolute and practical Mark Warden, with a by no means impossible dream of the enforced

When a self-willed and practical boy has made up his mind that he is in love with a woman, he is far more likely to attempt to push matters to their extreme point than if he were older, or were of a romantic and sentimental nature. And yet it must not be thought from this that the reader is going to be called upon to swallow such a monstrous notion as that one of Mark Warden's character should, even

When, however, it happens, as it does sometimes, that the love is only a development of long standing and affectionate acquaintance on both sides; when age, character and position are all as they should be; when the girl looks up to instead of down upon her lover; and when the latter, though a boy in years, has the power of forming fixed resolves; then, though he will very probably fall out of love again, still, while he is in love, he does not love in play. Men, after all, fall out of love fully as often as boys; so that first and last love may sometimes be much the same thing in Montreal, Jan. 10 .- S. R. Callaway, president of the American Locomotive Trust, who is now in the city, asked regarding the construction of a plant in Canada, stated that the organizaton probably would at some future time construct locomotive works here. "At present, however," he said, "we are usng all our energy in perfecting the American plant. We are at present American plant. It very seldom happens that one so young as Mark was now finds himself really looked up to by any girl or woman outside his own family. The peculiarity of his position in this respect was in itself more than enough to flatter the vanity, which he held in common with all mankind, into a very good imitation of love, even had other circumstances not brought about something much more than a mere imitation of it. There was certainly no doubt that he was now Marie's hero more than ever. to the Grand Trunk, Michigan Central and other roads.

was enough in itself to make her whole soul overflow in return.

To wish for a thing, and to try to get it at once, are with the Mark Wardens of the world one and the same thing. They do not care for the pleasures of anticipation, and revel in coups de main. And so, with him, to wait for the end when he could seize it without having to wait for it, was simply out of the question. But then his coming college career—what was he to do? Of giving up that, especially after his recent success, he was just as incapable of as of waiting for Marie. Ambition and impatient love were fairly at war.

Meanwhile the days and weeks slipped by with that rapidity of flight that belongs to all things in that magical world in which both were now living. Very Promising Ones.

Trained by Frank McCabe at Sheepshead Bay.

New York, Jan. 9 .- Frank McCabe is training several promising young runners at Sheepshead Bay for J. E. Seagram, the noted Canadian sportsman. At present McCabe is very much in the dark concerning their merits, and with regard to the capabilities of the 2-year-olds knows absolutely nothing. They look rough and healthy, and take a daily jog on the track. That is all he knows about them. As to their probable racing capabilities, he can-not tell you whether they are good, bad or indifferent. Five of his older horses have sported silk, and the numbers of some of them have been run up a few times at the tracks in this neighborhood. At the same time, we cannot flatter Mr. Seagram by saying that his string is as strong as we have known it in past years, and only hope that under the new auspices it may speedily show improvement.

Coburg, 5, takes preference by reason of his age. him to make up for lost time.

The Suitor, 4 years, by Masetto-Soon Ban, is a fine upstanding horse, with plenty of substance. He has shown, too, that he is somewhat of a racehorse, so has been consigned to Mc-Cabe's charge. Gold Cure, 3 year, by Goldfinch-

Alannah, was bought out of Littlefield's sale, and is a showy-looking, big chestnut, with plenty of good points to re-commend him. He has not as yet sported the black with yellow sash, and will have a considerable following when he comes to meet the maiden 3year-old division, as he showed well in his maiden effort as a 2-year-old, and won some of the money. Chapparelle, 4 years, by Charaxus-Nitral, although 4 years old, has not yet started. His owner has all the patience in the world in waiting for what he considers a good horse. And he thinks much of Chapparelle. As too often happens in acting for the best, something went wrong. He put up osslets and had to be punch-fired for them. Presumption, chestnut colt, 3 years, by Golden Garter—Probability, is yet another out of the Charles Littlefield sale. He showed very fair winning form at Sheepshead Bay in the race won by Heno, and it is to be feared his good race then was the cause of his owner losing money on him in sub-sequent races. Having shown form once, he will probably do it again, and redeem himself. He did not do it as a 2-year-old, so we must expect it of him this year.

The chestnut colt, 2 years, by St. George—Margaret II., is of nice length, with sloping shoulders and a bloodlike appearance. There is plenty of him in front of the saddle, and he is better there than behind, his quarters being Pan Zagloba, 2 years, a chestnut coltby Faraday—Safety, received his name from his breeder, and there must surely have been quite a time at the christening, when his sponsors bestowed such a patronymic. He is a goodlooker, smoothly turned, round, in fact, as an apple. His shoulders might slope better than they do, but at that are clean. He has a capital middle piece, and is a short-legged fellow, with plenty of scope.

The bay filly, 2 years, by Dr. Mc-Bride—Faverel, is of medium size, but with good bone. Her shoulders are short and do not give the impression of freedom in her action. A gray colt, 2 years, by Faraday-Katydid, by King Ban, will always be as noticeable as was his sire on account of his color. He is not a colt of much size, but is nicely put to-gether, and a nice topped fellow, with a racy swing to his action. It is a strange, but true, fact, that nine out of every ten grays which are trained win races. Just calling to mind some few of them, there were Oriflamme, Boaz, Faraday, Belmar and Motley These were among the best. And all others I can think of of that color, though they might not be crackerjacks, were still good enough to earn brac-A chestnut colt, 2 years, by Imp. St. George—Weknowit, was under the weather and blanketed up, so not on exhibition.

Chestnut colt, 2 years, by Racine-Rosebud, is one of the nicest colts in the number, with capital shoulders, strong back, and the general makeup of a racehorse about him. His fore-legs rather spoil him, since he is calf-

Bees Not Using Their Stings

[London Spectator.]

There are a number of honey-making bees which apparently do not use their stings, or in which the stings are atrophied and too blunt to hurt. Someare very small, so diminutive that they are called mosquito bees. They gather quantities of honey, of which Bates, in one of the forests on the Amazon, took two quarts from one of the nests. In Jamaica, where some of these ami-able bees are also found, they are called "angelitos," a name given them by the original Spanish settlers in honor of their good temper. Some Australian dwarf bees-also "angelitos," so far as human beings are concerned—do not use their stings, perhaps because they are not sharp enough to hurt, but deal with their enemies somewhat after the manner of the Quaker on board ship, who refused to use a gun, but threw the Frenchman overboard. An enemy is held down by several of the bees, who gradually put him on the rack by pulling his limbs out tight and keeping them so, for as long as an hour, by which time the prisoner "dies a natural death." Bumblebees are popularly supposed not to sting. The males have no sting, but the females have, at any rate in the common bumblebee. There are so many sizes in a bumblebee's nest, large females, small speculation not to take the risk, though bumblebees are very easy-going creatures and only sting when pressed or

FOR PREACHERS

Mr. J. E. Seagram Has Several Laymen's Views of Anglican Clergymen.

They Are Now Being Carefully They Are Too Exclusive and Put on Too Many Frills.

> Toronto, Jan. 9 .- The clerical graduates of Trinity University last night heard some very plain talking from a number of laymen who had been invited by Provost Macklem to speak at the annual reunion of the Alumni Association. It was thought that the much-preached-to pewholders should be given a chance for once to answer back, and the lay brethren undoubtedly took advantage of their opportun-

> One of the speakers was Mr. A. M. Dymond, law clerk of the Legislative Assembly, who pointed out in opening that he did not agree with the view that the Church of England existed in this country merely for ministering in spiritual matters to Englishmen or persons of English descent. The old idea of many clergymen that if the people did not come to them it was not their place to go to the people was what might be termed the "wooden Anglican position." He wished to point out where improvements might e made. Young students should undergo probationary employment be-fore being finally installed with holy orders. It was absurd to hear a young man gravely discussing questions with which he could not have had practical experience.

A probationary term would also give opportunity for a weeding out, which could not afterwards be done without discredit to the church and fatal consequences to the careers of men. It was also desirable to stimulate the lay agencies of the church. "There is no reason," argued the speaker, "except hide-bound," copper cornered prejudice why laymen should not take a more prominent part in the services of the church." The Church of England herself, by the very sobriety of her teaching and services, and by her excessive moderation rather served to check warmth of feeling, at afl events in outward expression. Under these conditions people are apt to conceive the idea that the church was cold and formal. Clerical stipends were shamefully low in many of the dioceses. A starved clergy must in the long run mean an ignorant and degraded clergy.

TOO MANY "FRILLS." Mr. Dymond also thought there should be an increase in the episcopate; pending that, the number of archdeacons should be increased. In Toronto this was a very pressing mat-ter, one calling for immediate and radical change. Continuing, he said: "Though this may seem a small matter let us have less frills, fewer knee breeches, aprons, queer old hats, the 'My Lord,' 'Your Grace," etc. These may be very well in England, but they are utterly out of place in a democratic community, and they only tend to encourage the idea that the church is exclusive and stuck up. They lend no real dignity to the offices they adorn, and they make a gulf between the episcopate and the people which has no business to exist. There is too such stuckupishness, and a whole lot of ecclesiastical tomfoolery. If we wish to increase the influence and numerical strength of the Church of England, we cannot do so by arousing jealousy, and resentment by the assertion of superiority in matters such as precedence at vice regal banquets, etc., with which the church ought to have absolutely nothing to do."

Referring again to titles, he said:
"'My Lord' is an awful mouthful for a Canadian. It is nonsense, and en-tirely out of place in Canada." Speaking of Sunday school work, Mr. Dymond thought they could not fail to be struck with the inferiority of the methods in their own church Mission work was also sadly in need of reorganization. What was needed was more of the simple teaching of the Gospel. There was too much "building from the top" and dispro-portioned teaching, which was hin-dering the church, not only in the mission field, but elsewhere. did not exist merely to instruct the faithful. If she did, she would soon have no faithful to instruct. common form of instruction would be amusing but for the mischief it worked.

In conclusion he declared his faith in the future of the Church of England in Canada, when his present dream would be realized, and it became the dearly loved and honored Church of English-speaking Can-

TOO MUCH LATIN.

Mr. W. R. Brock, M. P., urged that a course of manual training would be a valuable addition to the young clergy-man's course of training. They were taught too much Latin, perhaps, and too little of what would be of use in the practical work of life. A missionary's ability to work a farm of his own would do away with a lot of begging. Referring to the training of girls, the speaker said the colleges now turned out a lot of delightfully educated ladies who were absolutely useless as helpmeets to poor men.

Mr. John A. Ewan, in a few wellchosen words, pointed out the advan-tage that would result from a more eloquent presentation of the Gospel from the pulpit. Rev. Mr. de Pencier, who was asked to give his experience of a clergyman's work in a small town, explained the seriousness of making intimate friends among the congregation. Mr. Beverley Jones was tired of the continued whining about the small salaries of clergymen. He believed that in the ministry, as in any other profession, the able man would get what he deserved. Rev. Mr. Harris, of Marmora, was the only speaker who attempted to contradict the assertions of the lay speakers. He thought that English Church clergymen were not any more exclusive than the ministers of other denominations.

ROBERT B. MANTELL TOMORROW One of the principal attractions of the season at the New Grand is Mr. Robert B. Mantell, who comes for two performances tomorrow. Mr. Mantell this season is starring in a repertoire of Shakespearian and classic drama, and is said to have met with extraordinary success. He has this season taken unusual pains in the selection of his company and has surrounded himself with actors of undoubted ability. No expense has been spared in the staging of his plays. The evening bill tomorrow will be "Hamlet," and a special reserved 50 and 25 cent matinee is announced, when "Romeo and Juliet" will be presented.

THE METROPOLITAN COURSE. One of the most delightful numbers n the Metropolitan Course will be offered at the New Grand next Monday evening, the attraction being Mr. Albert Armstrong in his illustrated recital of Ralph Connor's famous story, "The Sky Pilot." In his beautiful picture plays Mr. Armstrong presents one of the highest form of entertainment before the public today "The Sky Pilot" is a story in which are richly mingled tohumor, pathos and dramatic interest, and is a rare literary and artistic treat. The sale of seats opens on Saturday morning.

W. G. URLIN'S DEATH

Inquest at Dutton Closed—Verdict of Suicide Found by a Majority of the Jury.

Dutton, Ont., Jan. 10.—The evidence in connection with the inquest into the cause of the death of W. G. Urlin was concluded yesterday. The chief witnesses were Drs. Cascaden and Mc- J. H. Flock, G. C. Gibbons, R. Bayly, Killop, who held the post-mortem ex- E. Meredith, James Magee, A. amination. Their evidence went to show that, although possible, it was improbable that deceased inflicted both wounds. Two wounds were found behind the ear, around both of which were powder marks and burned skin. The bullet in the front wound was traced through thickest portions of skull for three inches, but could not be found. The bullet in back wound was traced through upper and lower The financial statement showed that was traced through upper and lower parts of the brain three inches and found lodged in the upper portion.

Mary Lena Urlin, widow of the dead man, said deceased seemed to worry about his prospects, when, in fact, he was never in better circumstances in his life. He was receiving aid from his two brothers and from his brotherin-law. He complained every day for weeks of sleeplessness. She never saw him have any bright moments since he lost his position. Deceased and her brothers were always on the best of terms. She thought he lost his reason and took his own life.

Mrs. A. D. Urlin, sister-in-law of deceased, testified that after the removal of the body of Urlin from the hencoop, in which it was found, she saw the Hertel brothers standing together in the woodshed, apparently talking. She asked what Will had taken. Albert suggested chloroform, but J. C. said we would know soon enough. J. C. denied to the coroner having found a revolver, but afterwards acknowledged it. He said to the coroner: "Come with me and I will show you what did the deed."

Edna Urlin, daughter of deceased, 16 years of age, noticed her father was melancholy prior to his death. Her father and her uncle Albert were always on good terms.

The jury in the Urlin case returned at 12:30 in the morning, eleven agree-Trustee Heath. Trustee Hamilton was by bullet wounds fired by himself while insane, and two agreeing that he came to his death by bullet wounds inflicted by himself or parties un-

A New Cereal Company.

[From the Canadian Grocer.] Mr. E. A. Shoebotham, as promoter

and manager of the Northwestern Cereal Company, London, is placing on the market in the two specialities manufactured by that firm, what he claims to be the two finest cereal products offered through the trade. He has had an experience of many years in the growing, manufacturing and selling of cereals and cereal goods. In 1898 he introduced in Western Ontario, for E. D. Tilson, of Tilsonburg, the then new process of flaked cereal goods, in Molina rolled wheat, flaked barley, flaked peas, pan-dried oatmeal, etc., and he recalls interesting stories of the tall guessing some of the mer-chants made at that time as to what the ordinary yellow pea really was, when shown to them in those large, yellow, golden flakes. Later, as agent for the Cream of Wheat Company, of Minneapolis, for over a year and a half Mr. Shoebotham successfully promoted the introduction of the product of that company, through the Cana-dian wholesale trade. His various wholesale and commission agencies, in addition to experience gained in his retail business of Shoebotham & Co. grocers and pure food specialists, St. James Park, London, has placed him in a position to acquire an intelligent knowledge of what the trade demands, both from the standpoint of health and that of popular favor. Believing in certain specific natural foods, thoroughly boiled or baked in the good old way, as essential to the building up and retaining of full physical and mental force, he is full of forceful argument that it is in the use of those natural elements of constant development and repair to the system, that we are, as individuals and as a people, what we are. With the latest scientific improvements to hand to equip Canadian mills and the best wheat berry in the world grown in the Canadian Northwest from which to manufacture, Mr. Shoebotham determined some time ago to produce two lines of goods, to be not only the finest Canadian, but, what he terms, the most superior health-food products in America. With that object in view and to give it his fullest attention, he sold out his retail business, and the result is the formation of the Northwestern Cereal Co., with its two initial "Superior Breakfast Cream (cereal) and "Superior Gluten Flour."

THE MARRIAGE OF MAYOR RUMBALL

Description of Happy Event Which Took Place Wednesday.

[Walkerton Telescope.] A quiet, but very pretty wedding took place in the Methodist Church on Wednesday morning, when Mr. Frederick G. Rumball, mayor of London city, and Millie A. Perdue, of Walkerton, were united in matrimony, Rev. Dr. Ross tying the mystic knot. At the conclusion of the wedding ceremony the small party of guests, consisting of immediate relatives of the family, returned to the house of Mrs. Shannon, Colborne street, the mother of the bride, where a dainty breakfast was awaiting them. The bride was married in her going-away gown of seal brown lady's cloth, with Persian silk trimmings, and carried in her hand a beautiful bouquet of white roses. She was given away by her uncle, Mr. I. Shannon, of Tara. The visiting guests were Miss Lillian Van Dusen, of Tara; Miss Eva Lind, of London; Mr. and Mrs. A. Lind, London; Mr. I. Shannon, Tara; Mr. J. Young, Seattle, Wash., and Dr. E. H. Shannon, of Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Rumball left on the 7:20 a.m. train on a two-months' trip to Florida and other points in the United States.
