A Saviour Sought and Found. I sought Thee when my heart was low,

- I found Thee and my hopes revived, And all the world from me shall know What comfort I from Thee derived : All that I needed, all and more, Thy presence did to me restore
- My head upon Thy tender breast, The name of Love I did repeat, And Thou dulst understand the rest .
- All I needed, all and more. Thy presence did to me restore.
- I went the sorrow of my heart, And Thou mine eyes didst gently dry, I sighed through fear that we must part,
- But Thou didst whisper " Ever nigh ; It was enough, I asked no more, Thy voice did all my life restore
- And now that life to Thee I'll give. With calmer trust and brighter joy. To do Thy will my sole employ; Thus most secure to part no more

With that sweet joy thou didst restore.

He is not a buffoon; the does not peddle stale jokes; but if any one can resist him at times he can beat those who have listened to him. His intuitive insight into men makes him a splendid bishop. He has made, we venture to say, as many popular appointments as any of our bishops ever have. He sees the wants of congregations, and reads the men with varied resources and such numerous facilities for defence as the benignant bounty of nature has bestowed upon us, and animated with wonderfull precision; and what is singular, this is not so generally known as are the striking qualities of our bishops generally. Bishop Morris is perfectly quiet, tractural about the business in hand; listens, but does his way pretty much, in hand; listens, but does his way pretty much, in hand; listens, but does his way pretty much, in the continuation of the same Protocompanions in the world. He is not a buffoon; the does not peddle stale jokes; but if any one point of the same Protocompanions in the world of a secret society, very strong-by-button. My Playfellow. The Delights of Innocence-

BY CHARLES MACKAY. What though you're only five years old, A little roguish, romping fairy, And I'm a man of care and toil-We're comrades true, my little Mary ! We're friends and playmates, close and fond, And heedless of the wind and weather; Out doors or in, 'tis all the same, We leap, and laugh, and run together

We love to sit upon the grass In summer days, in shady valleys, Or play at merry " hide and seek " ind the trees in garden alleys. And don't we wander forth alone, To gather crops of meadow daises? Or hunt the noisy grasshopper In all his green and secret places?

And don't we catch the butterfly, With mealy pinions, sailing lightly And don't you, when I let him free, Gravely decide I acted rightly? And don't we teach the dog to beg, And little puss to frisk and caper? And don't I paint you birds and fish. And cut your purses out of paper?

Together on the parlor table? And don't your father call me fool, And smile to utter such a fable? And don't I tell you fairy tales, At intercession of your mother? And don't you kiss me when I've done. And ask me to begin another?

And don't you oft, with hands outstretch'd. And eyes that shine like sun-lit fountains. Protest you love me "big as trees," "Big as the world, and all its mountains?" And don't you sometimes fall asleen.

Lock'd in my arms, quite worn and weary And don't I carry you to bed, Too drowsy for your prayers, my deary? O, yes! we're friends and comrades true, There's not a bit of guile about you; You shed such light about your path,

I'd think the world was dark without you. And if to fourscore years I'll live, However time and fate may vary, I'll wish no better friend than you, My little laughing, romping Mary.
