REFORM

MIRKED THE ISSUE

anat body is adjustle, is the theme of general regret on the part of the Conservative press. The explanation of the ex-Premier's reticence accepted in Unionist circles is that his indress being made only forty-eight hours after that of Lord Rosebery, he did not have time to consult with his colleagues as to an alternative programme. Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour has promised to adiress the Conservatives of Newcastle on Newmer 13, if his health will permit. The manimity of demand of the party that they be given some idea of their leaders' policy with regard to the House of Lords is so complete and so well grounded that Mr. Balfour must be more explicit than was Lord Salisbury or leave the country convinced that the Tories are repared to fight to the end for all the rivileges of the peers.

of the party that they be given some idea of their leaders' policy with regard to the House of Lords is so complete and so well grounded that Mr. Balfour must be more explicit than was Lord Salisbury or leave the country convinced that the Tories are prepared to fight to the end for all the privileges of the peers.

Among the Unionists several propositions are being debated, including one for the appointment of a selection committee of the House of Lords to consider what changes can be made that would promote the efficiency of the Upper House. The appointment of such a committee was prosed by Lord Rosebery in 1889, but it was at the time rejected. In the present critical situation such action might serve to stave off the attack upon the people by the Commons. The project of Lord Duraven for the restriction of the number of executive peers to 180, chosen by their order in a similar manner to the existing practice of the Scotch representative peers, with the bulk of the House composed of life peers, has been revived and meets with considerable favor among the Unionists. One thing is certain, and that is whatever, plan the Conservative leader decides must be quickly put into operation. Unless the Liberal Unionists speedily prevail upon Lord Salisbury to agree to some reform of the Government the coming general elections will sweep the Unionist out of Parliament. Since Lord Rosebery's speech in Bradford all of the political parties recognize the fact that question of reform of the House of Lords question postponing all consideration of home rule, general lay accept the Government plan as eventually the surest read by which to reach their goal. The clanar of the Redmondites that home rule must remain in front of all other questions is not supported by a single practical suggestion as to how this is to enable Ireland to attain relief of the number of corruption made against him, is subsequent condemnation at the politics are all vaccept the Government plan as eventually the surest read by which to reach their goal. DEATH OF THE CZAR.

Nov. 2.—A despatch to from Yalta, Livadia, say as to mourning, which are to be published in an extra Gazette.

Alexander III, Czar of all the Russias, who succeeded to the throne on the murder of his father by millist conspirators on March 18, 1881, was born March 10, 1845. For some time after his elevation to the throne he seldom appeared in public, but lived in the closest retirement in Gatchina, being in constant dread of the machinations of the secret societies of socialists. His coronation took place at Moscow, on May 27, 1888. He married, in 1886, Mary Feodoryna (formerly Mary Sophia Frederica Dagmar), daughter of Christian IX, King of Denmark, and sister of the Princess of Wales and King of Greece. The principal concern of the Czar was to put down nihilism, to develop the military power of Russia, to organize her Asiatio and Caucasian provinces and to keep a steady eye on Constantinople.

From the beginning of his reign periodical attempts upon his life were made by the Nihilists. Twice officers in his own army tried to shoot him. In 1888 he and its family narrowly escaped death in a railway accident near Borki. The train was thrown from the track and many passengers were killed, but the Imperial party were hardly injured. The derailing of the train was supposed to be the work of Nihilists. Last spring a plot was formed in Finland to blow up the castle which the Czar was expected to occupy during the fall manœuvres round Smolenski.

CATUGA, Ont., Nov. 2.—Mrs. J. Lint, wife of Mr. J. Lint, sen., strayed away from her home in the village of Kohler on May 7th. Search was immediately made for the missing woman. The entire neighborhood searched the woods and dragged the river. Several times women were found wandering through the country and word was immediately sent to her family that she had been found.

Yesterday three young men, out hunting in Mr. Leggitt's bush about a mile from Kohler, found the body of Mrs. Lint. SALISBURY SHIRKED THE ISSUE siness in Unionist Circles—Mc-Carthyites Satisfied to Await the Result of the Strug-gle With the Peers.

LONDON. Nov. 5.—Lord Salisbury's shirking of the task of formulating a system for the reform of the House of Lords, while admitting that a reconstruction of that body is advisable, is the theme of general regret on the part of the Conservative press. The explanation of the ex-Premier's reticence accepted in Unionist circles is that his address being made only forty-eight hours after that of Lord Rosebery, he did not have time to consult with his colleagues as to an alternative programme. Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour has promised to address the Conservatives of Newcastle on November 13, if his health will permit. The unanimity of demand of their leaders' policy with regard to the leaders' policy with regard to the Lords is so complete and so wel ry convinced that the Tories are to fight to the end for all the tions are being debated, including one for the appointment of a selection committee of the House of Lords to consider what changes can be made that would promote the efficiency of the Upper House. The appointment of such a committee was proposed by Lord Rosebery in 1898, but it was at the time rejected. In the present critical situation such action might serve to stave off the attack upon the people by the Commons. The project of Lord Dunraven for the restriction of the number of executive peers to 180, chosen by their order in a similar manner to the existing practice of the Scotch representative peers, with the rvative leader decides must be nickly put into operation. Unless the iberal Unionists speedily prevail upon ord Salisbury to agree to some reform of Daily News Tem Yalta, Livadia, says the Car died & $\frac{1}{2}$ p.m. yesterday.

The news did not reach Balmoral until 7 o'clock in the evening. The Queen was not surprised as she had been informed of every phase of the Czar's ilness, nevertheless she was deeply moved when she learned that the end had come. She sent a long telegram to the Czarina, and issued to the court officials the usual instructions as to mourning, which are to be published in an extra Gazette.

Alexander III., Czar of all the Russias, who succeeded to the throne on the murder of his father by 'unitilist, conspirators on March 18, 1881, was born March 10, 1845. For some time after his elevation to the throne he seldom appeared in public, but lived in the closest retirement in Gatchina, being in constant dread of the machinations of the secret societies of socialists. His coronation took place at Moscow, on May 27, 1883. He married, in 1886. Mary Feodorvna (formerly Mary Sophia Frederica Dagmar), daughter of Christian IX., King of Denmark, and sister of the Princess of Wales and King of Greece. The principal concern of the Czar was to put down nihilism, to develop the military power of Russia, to organize her Asiatic and Caucasian provinces and to keep a steady eye on Constantinople.

power of Russia, to organize her Assiste and Caucasian provinces and to keep a steady eye on Constantinople.

From the beginning of his reign periodical attempts upon his life were made by the Nihilists. Twice officers in his own army tried to shoot him. In 1888 he and his family narrowly escaped death in a railway accident near Borki. The train was thrown from the track and many passengers were killed, but the Imperial party were hardly injured. The derailing of the train was supposed to be the work of Nihilists. Last spring a plot was formed in Finland to blow up the castle which the Czar was expected to occupy during the fall manneuvres round Smolenski.

The Czar was deeply religious. He was under the influence of such bishops as Pobadonoskef, attorney general of the Holy Synod, and his group, and persecuted the space of this season. At Prince subject of the late Thomas Moore and his melodies. But the young baronet suddenly interposed.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Stuart," he began hastly, and in a somewhat nervous voice; but there is a subject very near to my heart on which I should like to speak to you this evening."

Trix sat straight up in the stem of the boat, as if she had been galvanized. Her heart gave one great ecstatic thump. "Oh," thought Miss Stuart. "he's going to pop! He's going to pop, as sure as I live!"

There was a pause—unspeakably painful to Miss Stuart. "Yes, Sir Victor," she faltered in her most dulect and encouraging accents.

"I had made up my mind not to speak of it at all," went on Sir Victor, looking embarrassed and rather at a loss for words, "until we reached England. I don't wish to be premature. I—I dread a refusal so unspeakably, that I almost fear to speak at at all."

"Good gracious me!" (this is what she thought) "why don't he speak out, and not go beating about the bush in this ridiculous manner! What's he afraid of? Refusal, indeed! Stuff and nonsense!"

"It is only of late," pursued Sir Victor.

do wish you joy and nappisses from the bottom of my heart."

And she meant it. Against the baronet himself, she felt anger deep and strong still. How dared he seek her out as he had done, select her for his confidante, and look love in fifty different ways, when he meant to marry Trix? What a fool she might have made of herself had she been a whit less proud than she was. Since then she had avoided him, in no marked manner, perhaps, but she had avoided him. If he felt this avoidance, he showed no sign. Perhaps he thought Miss Stuart had dropped some hint—girls, despite their promises.

here, pernaps, out she nad avoided him. If he felt this avoidance, he showed no sign. Perhaps he thought Miss Stuart had dropped some hint—girls, despite their promises, have been known to do such things—and this change was becoming maidenly reserve. Trixy's unremitting attentions were sisterly, of course. He felt grateful accordingly, and strove to repay her in kind. One other thing he observed, too, and with great complacency—the friendship between Miss Darrell and her cousin Charley had come to an end. This was as it should be; certainly Beatrix must have dropped that very judicious hint.

Two carriages awaited them at the Chester station. Into one entered Mr. and Mrs. Stuart, Sir Victor, and Beatrix; into the other, Lady Helena, Edith, Charley, and Captain Hammond. They drove away through quiet, quaint Chester, "rare old city of Chester." Presently an endless stretch of ivied wall appears in view, inclosing a primeval forest, it seems to Edith; and Lady Helena sits up and rubs her eyes, and says it is Catheron Royals.

They emerge from the chill darkness of dawning day into a blaze of light—into a vast and stately entrance-hall. A long file of servants are drawn up to receive them. And "Welcome to Powyss Place," Lady Helena says with kind courtesy. "I can only wish your visit may be as pleasant to you as you made mine in New York."

Without changing their dreases they are ushered into a lofty and handsome diningroom. More brilliant lights, more silent, respectful servants, a round table luxuriously spread. They sit down; forget they are tired and sleepy; eat, drink, sand are merry; and it is five before they were shown up to their rooms. Then, hasty disrobing, hasty lying down, and all are at peace in the land of dreams.

Next day, about noon, Miss Stuart, clicking sleary in her ways are all high hashed.

the trouble."

It was all the same to Edith—the Lime Walk, the eminence, or any other part of the park. She took Sir Victor's arm, as he seemed to expect it, and went with him slowly up the elevation.

"It is a wonderfully pretty place." she said. "I should think you English people, whose ancestors, time out of mind, have lived and died here, would grow to love every ivy-clad stone, every brave old tree. If I were not an American girl, I would be an English miss."

She langhed and looked up at him, her spirits rising in the sunshine and the free, fresh air. His eyes were fixed upon her face—passionate admiration, passionate love, written in them far too plainly for any girl on earth not to read. And yet—he had proposed to Frix.

"You would?" he sagaply exclaimed. "Miss Darrell, do I understand "you to say you could live in England all your life—give ap America and your friends, and pass your life here?"

She surraged her shoulders.

She interrupted him, a faint smile curling her lips.

"I thought it was Trixy," she said.

"Miss Stuart! Then she has told you nothing of that night at Killarney—I really imagined she had. Miss Stuart h s beem my kind friend, my one confident at 1 sympathizer. No sister could be kinder in herencouragement and comfort than she."

"O poor Trix—a sister!" Edith thought, and in spite of every effort, the laugh she strove so hard to suppress dimpled the corners of her mouth. "Won't there be a scene when you hear all this!"

"For pity's sake, Edith, speak to me' the young man exclaimed. "I love you—my life will be miserable without you. It you are free, why may I not hope? See! I don't even ask you to love me now. I will wait; I will be patient. My love is so great that it will win yours in return. O darling! say you will be my wife."

Her hands were in his. The fervor, the passion within him almost frightened her.

"Sir Victor, I—I hardly know what to say: I wonder that you care for me. I wonder you want to marry me. I am not your equal; I have neither rank, nor wealth, nor descent.

"You have the grace and beauty of a goddess—the goodness of an angel; I ask nothing more. You are the mate of a prince; and I love you. Everything is said in that."

"Lady Helena will never consent."

"She smile pt, deeply, deenly she hend gain at a laym and the wint golden to be in with golden to be in wide to be his wife.

"What were you talking about?"

"Many things," Miss Darrell responded, promptly. "The beauty of the prospect—the comfort of English homes, and the wather, of course. If I understood shorthand, and had been aware of your anxiety on the subject, I might have taken notes of pur sonversation for your benefit."

Toronto News: Chief Justice Armour made a statement at Kingston yesterday that should be brought to the attention of every man in the Province who owns live stock. The statement was regarding the responsibility of such owners for damages caused by animals owned by them and was made in connection with a case before the court.

A man, who had been thrown from a buggy as result of a collision with a cow on a rural highway, brought action to recover damages against the township. The plaintiff was non-suited, the judge holding that the municipality was not liable but the owner of the cow was. Then his Lordship referred to the fact that a freight train had been derailed and three men killed in Northumberland county owing to a stray cow getting on the track and said that the owner of the animal in that case could be hald answerable to the case could be hald to the past as water towers and they were nothed inth

The conductor knew the man in the rear seat, and when the tickets had all been punched sat down beside him. They rode in silence for some time. Then the man in the rear seat asked abruptly, "What's the matter?"

The conductor took his left leg off the right knee and crossed the right one over the left. "I keep thinking about a man that travels with me sometimes," he ensured.

"What about him!" "It's what he told me about his wife. She ran away, you know, and he's trying to find her. He says she's a pretty woman, with large, soft, brown eyes, and a sweet, tender mouth."

From the walls the whole city looks like an immense orchard, with here and there one-story buildings shining out through the trees. In its centre there is a walled-off inclosure filled with massive buildings, roofed with yellow tiles. This is the imperial city, in the innermost parts of which is a brick pen inclosing several square miles, where the emperor lives, surrounded by cunuchs. Devotion to gastronomy, laughter and plenty of sleep is said to be the prime promoter of plumpness. At any rate, the woman who proposes to train her flesh may well take her one from the system of feeding and "massive exercise" now in vogue in the private "Nervines" frequented by the fashionable and wealthy. The patient in these nervines is compelled to gorge, as it were to make up for years of faulty alimentation. "Digestives" that secure speedy and complete assimilation are taken with each meal and successfully intercept bilious disorders and uncomfortable sensations of repletion.

Usually, the menu is a restrictive one at first, consisting of little besides milk, which more than any other one food contains all that is essential to the making of blood, bone and fat, and eggs, which administer directly to the nerve and brain force. An egg and a glass of milk, alternately, every two hours, is the initial quantity often prescribed. Later on, a gallon of milk and a dozen eggs, in addition to such highly nutritive dainties as toasted bananas, pate de fois gras sandwiches, hot chocolate, whipped cream flummeries and a pound of tenderloin steak are disposed of daily with positive nonchalance by the woman who four or six months earlier had scarcely been able to make away with a glass of wine and a chicken's wing.

The seeker after plumpness further-more should take her daily airing in a carriage, and not on foot. If a carriage is out of question, an excellent substi-tute, for the country girl, at any rate, is found even in winter in plenty of fur robes and a well-cushioned arm-chair placed in sequestered corner of the broad piazza. Here she may sit, filling up her lungs with oxygen, with perfect safety for an hour at a stretch. This stationary "constitutional" is quite as beneficial as the drive in a close carriage. I have heard that one of our society leaders, whose least word, act or caprice of toilet sets a precedent, has had a low board platform built and placed in the little yard at the back of her town house. On every sunny morning during the past winter the platform has been spread with skins: this beauty and social law giver, enveloped in a pelisse of fur and half hidden in the capacious embrace of a sleepy hollow arm chair, with foot stool and Nerwegian footmuff for her aristocratic little feet, has sunned and oxygeniated herself without doffing pei

Almeda Chattelle Admits He is the Aurocare of Joseph Katht.

Listowell, Oct. 27.—The train arriving here yesterday from Stratford carried Almeda Chattelle. Crowds thronged the way to the station. By a ruse of the authorities, however, a hack was employed and met the train where the railway crosses the road some distance from town. A crowd assembled at the jail on arrival of the hack carrying the prisoner, and as he was being hurried into the cell cries of "Hang him?" "Lynch him!" and similar expressions were heard, and for a time there appeared indications of trouble, but the officers of the law succeeded in placing the prisoner securely in the cell of the jail.

The adjourned inquest was then proceeded with. The prisoner occupied a seat

He replied that he was guilty and had nothing else to say. Then he was removed to the cell, where he was stripped and his clothing examined. Many blood stains were found on his drawers.

While being searched he repeatedly said he did not care how soon he was put out of the world.

MRS. HARTLEY IS FREE. The Jury Says She Is Not Guilty of Her Husband's Murder. BRANTFORD, Oct. 29.—The trial of Maria

Hartley for the murder of her husband, Caleb Hartley by poisoning at New Dur-ham on Sunday, May 13, 1894, commenced Wednesday before His Honor, Mr. Justice

MacMahon.
On the fourth day of the Hartley murder trial a large number of farmers from the vicinity of New Durham crowded the court and listened to all the details of the rall with intense interest.

The defence was commenced, and Mr. Osler put forward witnesses to show that Ling has a bad reputation for veracity. After producing twenty witnesses to swear that they would not believe Ling upon oath, the defence rested their case. Counsel began at one o'clock to address the jury. the jury.

Mr. Osler made the most powerful address of his career. He began by pointing out the gravity of the case, and drew the attention of the jury to the fact that it was a woman and not a man with whom they were dealing. He claimed that there was a marked absence of sufficient motive for the crime, inasmuch as the amount of money to be realized was small.

Mr. Osler then asked the jury not to condemn Mrs. Hartley, but to do what was just—to acquit her.

The jury retired at 70 clock.

At 10.15 they returned to court, when the foreman announced that they had found the prisoner, Marie Hartley, not guilty of the charge.

A loud cheer at once burst from the audience, which was immediately sup-

The judge ordered three of the offenders to the cells for forty-eight hours as a punishment.

The prisoner was warned of the narrow escape she had and was thereupon discharged.

A Decision Important to Tenants,
TORONTO, Nov. 1.—A decision has been given by Châncellor Boyd which, if confirmed by the higher courts, will be a great hardship on tenants unless the law is amended. The tenant, in this case, covenanted to leave the premises in good repair, but the Chancellor held this as also referring to fixtures put in by the tenant at his own expense during the term. Further, all fixtures attached by screws, nails, ètc., become part of the freehold and cannot be taken out by the tenant. These gas fittings, gasaliers, shelving, mirrors, awnings and even the furnaces are held to come within the meaning of the covenants in the short form of leases as becoming part of the freehold and therefore the property of the landlord. It will not be safe now for tenants to attach any fixture to the walls or basement or houses they do not own.
