Theories Concerning Ocean Currents.

In the Marine Record of Cleveland, Ohio, there appeared recently the following interesting paper on ocean currents. It is from the pen of Captain B. F. Sberburn of Eureka, Cal. He says:—

For more than a century scientists and philosophers have been vainly trying to discover the origin and cause of the mysterious current in the Atlantic Ocean called the Gulf Stream; why so called is not apparent, as nothing in the Gulf of Mexico is in its composition. There have been many theories which have been abandoned, some perfectly absurd, such as its being caused by the earth in its revolution on its axis; for if it had the power to draw this stream at the rate of five miles an hour from the coast of Florida it would draw all the water from the east coasts of North and South America at the same velocity. The prevailing theory is that the northeast tradewinds drive a current into the Caribbean Sea, and, aided by the feeble equatorial stream, heap up the water in the Gulf of Mexico, thence rushing around the south of Florida through the source of the Gulf Stream. But there is no such a heaping of the waters in that gulf. The waters there are sluggish, and there is no perceptible current leading towards the Gulf Stream, or anywhere else. This theory has been accepted for want of a better, but those who favor it are not entirely satisfied with it. The Gulf Stream is an independent body of water, having no connection with the water around or behind the point where it emerges. It is warmer and of a deeper blue than the surrounding seas, and gushes forth from the starting point off Cape Sable at the rate of from five to six knots an hour, with a temperature of about ninety degrees, lessening gradually as it proceeds on its journey of thousands of miles across the Atlantic Ocean, warming the western shores of Europe.

Having seen the fallacy of the theories concerning the Gulf Stream, and, some folks take you into their confidence too much. You are overwhelmed with their trust in you. They want to tell you all their sins and their shortcomings. This sort of thing needs careful pruning. Repose in conversation is one of its charms. Frankness and naturalness are always commendable traits, but there is no necessity of recounting your symptoms when you are asked how you are. Truth is beautiful, but your cold in the head will be a thing of the past tomorrow, and your neighbor may be spared its relation. Some people get to be nothing but symptoms, and finally they become a nuisance in their varying grades of illness and well-being. This talking about illness, disease and death is always one of the worst of lapses. Yet it is permitted, in spite of all that is said and written against it. Many otherwise admirable persons will insist on discussing their ailments even over their tea-tables. And the imaginary invalids are always the worst. Persons with first-class appetites and apparently in the best of health will hint at their hidden ailments. The horror-banter is always one of the most tedious of bores. He sees nothing but disaster and adds to all real sorrow by looking forward to other. We should cultivate a healthy optimism, in our talk at least. Above all, utter no evil prophecies; don't go about reading awful happenings in dreams and omens. Groaners are always bores. So are fault-finders. Nothing bores so much as a fixed and such an unpleasant habit as this constant fault-finding. Discontent, they say, is divine, and all great things spring from it; but keep it hidden in your soul if you must cherish it, and don't blast it at the cook. Many grown persons are like spoiled and greedy children putting over the good things fate has sent them because they are not more plentiful. And others are like potted pug dogs, and snarl and whimper because they wish to be condoled with.

It starts spontaneously from a spot a few miles from the south end of the island of Formosa, in the Bashiue Channel, following the coast of Formosa northeasterly, past and through the Loo Choo Islands, skirting the coast of Japan; thence turns eastward on its long journey across the wide Pacific, warming the coast of America from Puget Sound to Mexico. Its dark blue waters are in striking contrast to the surrounding seas, giving it the name of Marra Sagar, or black water. It is an independent stream, where no combination of winds or currents can possibly cause the mighty rush of warm blue water with a velocity of from five to six knots an hour from the start.

In its characteristics of heat, color, and direction it resembles the Gulf Stream in every particular, and the origin of the two streams must be the same, whatever they may be, which I shall endeavor to show later on. There is another ocean current similar in all respects to the other two, with the exception that it runs in an exactly opposite direction. Starting from the vicinity of the south end of the Island of Madagascar, it runs southwestward around the Cape of Good Hope, where it disappears off Cape Agulhas. As a current, probably a part of it is diverted into a steady set of the easterly current, caused by the prevailing westerly winds in that region. No scientist, so far as I am aware, have attempted to account for this current. Having now proved beyond refutation that all theories advanced as to the cause of ocean currents are groundless, it remains to be proven what the true cause is.

It must be admitted that the currents have a similar origin, as they are identical in every respect as regards color, heat and velocity, springing forth in the same manner spontaneously from the earth in some mysterious way. There is no place on the surface of the earth, where the water can be heated to furnish the heat contained in these streams that gush forth from the depths of the sea; consequently the forces must be subterranean, and can only be accounted for by large bodies of clear, blue water from the ocean forcing its way into the depths of the earth under its crust, where it burrows a channel of its own to the surface again, having received its warmth on the way by contact with the internal heat of the lower regions of the earth, forced on by continual pressure from behind. That there are orifices in the earth's crust can not be denied, else what becomes of the vast volume of water that can not be computed which is constantly running at the rate of from four to six knots an hour from the Atlantic Ocean, through the Straits of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean Sea. The numerous rivers, too, are continually flowing in, and yet the sea remains at the same level. Evaporation can not account for it, for what is evaporated is formed into clouds and is precipitated again into the sea by the medium of storms and frequent rains.

A Little Talk on Boredom.

The person who talks too much is a bore, and the person who measures his words and guards his expressions is also a bore. Dumb people are never bores, although deaf people are frightfully so. Doctors are seldom bores, because they are always being bored by their patients, but can't afford to show it. The person who is awfully bored and tells you so is one of the worst of the class. The unconscious bore is never so through temperament, but has become so through some uncorrected mannerism or conversational habit. Women are worse bores than men because they talk more. The intensely reserved woman whose opinions are so expressed that they might mean anything is, if possible, a worse bore than the gusher. Too eager and exuberant a manner of speech, while not one-half so trying as over-elaborate conversation or the carefully-guarded expressions of the person who hesitates as to consequences before telling you the time of day, is to be avoided. Repression must be cultivated. Over-sympathy is sometimes as embarrassing as over-hospitality. You dine with some people and they make you feel as though you never had dinner before. In you do this you will become a worse bore than all the others put together. Don't try to give sly digs in conversation. This is going to stamp you as provincial, and what you think is clever repartee is sometimes only impertinence, and as you get older it will develop into sourness of speech. Don't over-apologize for things that you have made an error in. Remember it and avoid the fault in the future. Don't bemoan anything. Just bear it and look out for the next time. Try to tell the truth in conversation. It is very bad form to lie nowadays, and, besides, one has to have such a good memory.

Don't talk about yourself at all and as little as possible about your husband, your children and your servants. Don't talk shop of any sort. Don't talk about your illnesses or your bills. Don't talk about the faults of other people. Don't talk too much about clothes. Avoid personalities and criticisms of your acquaintances. Neither must you go about like a conspirator, working your eyebrows and giving the impression that you are a mine of secret information. Don't over-manoeuvre your hands and let your manners get ragged at the edges. Above all, don't be any of these kinds of bores.—Sun.

King Alfred.

King Alfred seems to be in some danger of being proclaimed as the precursor of jingoism. No character, surely, in history can lend itself less to such a construction. If Alfred drew the sword it was in strictly defensive and absolutely unavoidable war. Nothing is more clear than that Christian civilization, not conquest or military glory, was the paramount object in his mind. He took the first opportunity of bringing the war to an end by a treaty, which gave the land rest, and turned at once to the work of restoring learning and reorganizing political institutions. The whole tone of the man's utterances and the whole tenor of his life are as much opposed as possible to the unscrupulous, arrogant, and blustering militarism of which a gust is just now sweeping over the world. In Alfred we have a noble example of force without violence and dauntlessness without swagger. If jingoism can be said to have existed anywhere in those days, it was rather in the marauding Dane, whose life was strenuous with a vengeance. There was, however, no nonsense about the Dane. He did not affect to believe that in cutting the throats of other people, taking their goods, and burning their homes, he was carrying out a providential mission and imposing peace on the world.—Goldwin Smith.

His Eminence Cardinal Moran, of Sydney, Australia, is expected in Rome soon on his visit ad limina.

Before returning to Australia he will visit Ireland.
The altar piece, the Madonna of Sasso Ferrato, which was stolen some time ago has been recovered. The manner of its recovery does great credit to the Italian police. A detective went about among dealers in pictures and antiquities, giving it out that he was an English millionaire in search of the works of old masters. After a while the thieves got to hear of the wealthy Englishman and brought the Madonna to his hotel. They were immediately arrested.

Referring to an announcement made some months ago that Cardinal Martinelli would probably be succeeded at Washington by Mgr. Diomede Falconio, O. F. M., now Papal representative in Canada, the Rome correspondent of the "London Catholic Times" says: Since then nothing has occurred to render this nomination less probable than it was a year ago. Mgr. Falconio would be a "persona gratissima" to the United States Government as he is a naturalized American citizen, speaks the language perfectly and has a thorough knowledge of the various problems which are of equal importance to the Holy See and to the welfare of the United States.

Rheumatism

No other disease makes one feel so old. It stiffens the joints, produces lameness, and makes every motion painful. It is sometimes so bad as to render a person unable to get up or down stairs; and it should never be neglected.
M. J. McDonald, Toronto, Ont., had it after a severe attack of the grip; Mrs. Hattie Turner, Bolivar, Mo., had it so severely she could not sit anything and could scarcely get up or down stairs; W. H. Shepard, Sandy Hook, Conn., was laid up with it, was cold even in July, and could not dress himself.
According to testimonials voluntarily given, these sufferers were permanently relieved, as others have been, by which corrects the acidity of the blood on which rheumatism depends and builds up the whole system.

The Cathedral at Rheims was the first church in France dedicated to the Blessed Virgin. Between the pulpit and the railing there is still a black marble slab to indicate the spot where St. Ninoise (or Ninoise), the Archbishop, was beheaded in the year 407. The font used by St. Remi (or Remigius) for the baptism of King Clovis was lost at the Revolution. The walls along the aisles are completely covered by the splendid tapestries given to the church in 1530 by Cardinal de Lenoconcourt. The treasure of the Cathedral are unique, and include the famous ampulla which contained the "balm sent from heaven" for the baptism and coronation of Clovis and which was used at every French coronation till the time of Louis XVI. At the Revolution it was broken, but some slight portions were rescued and mixed with the obrium used at the coronation of Charles X. St. Remi's chalice, of solid gold, studded with gems, was only used at the coronations. It is made with the gold which composed the famous vase of Sissoiens, given by Clovis to Archbishop Remi. Many of the objects belonging to the Cathedral were on view in the Petit Palais during last year's Paris Exhibition. Curiously enough, the ancient Book of the Gospels on which the French Kings took their oath is in Russian as well as Latin.

Side by side with the increase of taxation necessitated by the huge armaments of Continental Europe is seen the increase of socialism, says the "London Catholic Times." At Luebeck, in Germany, during the past week the delegates of the Socialist organizations have been holding a series of important resolutions. These delegates represent over two million voters, who send sixty members to Parliament. Thirty years ago only two Socialists were elected to the Reichstag, the votes recorded for them numbering 113,000; in 1898 2,113,000 voters sent up fifty-six members to the Reichstag, and since that date when the general election took place four turned. The Socialist voting strength is greater in numbers than that of the Catholic party. Were proportional representation adopted in Germany, the Socialists would have 109 members in Parliament. These figures show the enormous growth of Socialism in the German Empire during the past few years. Catholics, it is needless to remark, are not infected with Socialist principles; a strong Catholic press keeps the Catholic workman free from taint. In addition, workmen's leagues are almost universal, the priests everywhere taking a great interest in the welfare, material and spiritual, of the struggling toiler. By these means the Church in Germany has so far escaped the danger which threatens other institutions in that land of militarism, and it is to be hoped that no untoward circumstance will weaken the mutual confidence between priests and people.

Except in very rare cases, the internal administration of the public hospitals throughout Belgium is entrusted to nuns of one or other of the many congregations that devote themselves to the care of the sick, to the great gain both of the municipal finances and of the poor patients under treatment. It two or three places attempts have been made to carry out the process known as "laicisation," but the results have been the reverse of encouraging. Some twenty years ago the central town of Lidzberg (a town near Ghent), in which body the Liberals had just gained a majority, decided on dismissing the Sisters in charge of the public hospital, replacing them by lay nurses. A proceeding which naturally provoked considerable indignation among a large section of the inhabitants. But so frequent and so numerous have been the complaints against the lay nursing staff, and so costly has the experiment turned out, that the managing committee of the hospital, composed almost exclusively of Liberals, have unanimously deemed it advisable to recommend the municipality to recall the Sisters, one of the leading members of the committee, who also occupies the post of Alderman, threatening to resign his functions if the proposed change was not effected. The committee's recommendation came before the town council some days ago, when the proposal for the re-entry of the nuns was adopted without a dissentient voice. Socialists as well as Liberals expressing themselves warmly in its favor. Under the management of the Sisters not only will the annual budget of the hospital be reduced by one-half, but—which is of still greater importance—the sick pool of the town are certain to receive all the care and attention which their condition requires.

At Rest.

(Winnipeg Northwest Review, Oct. 16th.)

A most sincere Christian, noble citizen and true friend has just gone away from us to the rest of the great God.

John A. McInnis died last Thursday, the 19th inst., at 8.30 p. m. at his residence No. 246 Selkirk Ave. For some time back those who knew him intimately had noticed a falling of health in him; but when he took to bed only a few days previous to his death he was in the full enjoyment of his health.

He had been suffering from a nervous prostration for some time, which some days of rest would completely remedy. The patient also, owing to his well-known unobtrusive energy, persisted in saying that he was not sick, that he felt no pain, whatever. However, early on Thursday morning he fell into a comatose state from which he never rallied; diabetes was then severely finishing its fatal work of destruction.

The funeral took place on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of the deceased, 246 Selkirk Ave. The Rev. J. A. McInnis, who had all along been a regular attendant at the patient's bedside, lost no time in administering to him the last Sacrament of the Church, trying at the same time to impart the required courage and Christian resignation to the afflicted wife and children, who attended the solemn ceremony, mingling their tears with the prayers of the Church.

Mr. J. A. McInnis reached his last resting place at 11 o'clock, and was buried in the presence of a large number of friends, who were present to witness the last rites of the deceased. The funeral was held in the presence of a large number of friends, who were present to witness the last rites of the deceased.

John A. McInnis was born at St. Peter's, N. B., on the 12th of August, 1832. His parents, both of whom are now dead some years, were by name Donald McInnis and Anastasia McInnis. He was the youngest of five children, three sons and two daughters.

He was educated in the common schools of his native place, and also in the St. Peter's school, where he received a liberal education. He was a member of the Methodist Church, and was a devoted and successful teacher for many years.

He was a man of high character, and was respected by all who knew him. He was a true friend, and his death is a great loss to his family and to the community.

church the casket was opened and all had a last look at the countenance of the dear departed, now calm in death. A High Mass of Requiem was sung by the pastor, Rev. R. J. Gillis, while Rev. Dr. McMillan, of Cardigan, presided at the organ. After Mass and Libera, all that was mortal of John A. McInnis, the affectionate husband and father, the devoted citizen, the true friend and the devout Catholic, was borne to the adjoining cemetery and, amid the prayers and tears of his brothers and sisters and numerous friends, committed to its kindred dust beside the graves of his deceased parents, that he may await the resurrection. To his widow and children and other friends we again extend our heartfelt sympathy in their sore bereavement. "Eternal rest give unto him O Lord, and may perpetual light shine upon him."

Visit of the King's Son to Halifax.

The welcome which Halifax extended to the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on Saturday will live long in the memories of the people of the Province by the sea. From Citadel crenels to all circumstances points the city fairly glowed with enthusiasm. Great demonstrations have been witnessed in that city many a time, but not since the Royal visit of His Majesty Edward and the Duchess to Halifax has there been such a general expression of loyalty to the Crown of England. The weather throughout the day was favorable, but shortly after nightfall the rain fell in torrents, but nothing could check the flow of enthusiasm.

The streets were filled with a gay and enthusiastic crowd. Early Saturday morning the royal train arrived at the station, and the Duke and Duchess were met by the Mayor and other officials. The Duke and Duchess were met by the Mayor and other officials.

after a long and illustrious reign—reign unsurpassed in the annals of the Empire for its effect in promoting the welfare of her subjects.

We respectfully invoke the heartfelt sympathy and homage of the people of Prince Edward Island, than whom no more loyal subjects can be found in His Majesty's dominions, and we earnestly pray that he may be long spared to rule over his people.

We indulge it the fervent hope that the visit of Your Royal Highness to Canada may still further strengthen the bonds which bind all parts of the Empire to our King and country.

On behalf of the people and Government of Prince Edward Island,

F. A. McINTYRE,
Lieut. Governor.

D. FASAGAN,
Premier.

THE MARCH
To the address from P. E. Island His Royal Highness replied as follows:

"The kindly words of greeting contained in the address from the people and Government of Prince Edward Island and from the city of Charlottetown recall to me happy recollections of my visit to your province several years ago and of the warm and friendly reception which I received there."

"I thank you for your loving words in reference to her in whose precious life the affections of her people were so truly centered, and I shall have much pleasure in making known to my dear father, the King, those declarations of fealty and homage and those earnest prayers in his behalf to which the people of Prince Edward Island give expression in this address."

"Conspicuous among the many features of the reception here in whose precious life the affections of her people were so truly centered, and I shall have much pleasure in making known to my dear father, the King, those declarations of fealty and homage and those earnest prayers in his behalf to which the people of Prince Edward Island give expression in this address."

After the review, the Duke presented medals to the South African veterans following this with the presentation of the new colors to the 66th Regiment. A religious service was conducted by chaplains according to a liturgy prescribed by the war office.

The city and fleet were magnificently illuminated at night, the search-lights from ten warships being strikingly effective. The rain held off till night, but during the reception at the provincial building in the evening it simply poured.

Sunday was quietly spent by the Duke. He did not attend services but sat in the morning at the Ophir. At night he was visited by Admiral Bedford.

The Royal Family left for Halifax on Monday morning at 9.30 o'clock. They go to St. John's N.B. At ten o'clock sharp the Ophir backed out from her dock yard and took her place in the naval procession. A torpedo boat, the destroyer Queen, the Tribune, the Pallas, Psyche, Crescent, Ophir, Diadem and Nicta were also present.

There was a royal salute from Citadel Hill and bands playing on all the ships. A large number of people stood on the water front and another salute was fired from York Redoubt.

It was a regular Canadian send-off as the Duke and Duchess left the harbor. The Duke and Duchess were met by the Mayor and other officials.

A BASKET social and musical and literary entertainment, in aid of the church at Tracadie Cross, will be held in St. Dunstan's Hall, at that place on Wednesday evening next 30th inst. An excellent programme is in course of preparation which together with the worthy object and the reputation and success of former similar gatherings is a sufficient guarantee of a first class entertainment and a fall house.

George Herriek Duggan, designer of the Seawanhaka cup challenger, declares that the absence of a capable crew would be the chief difficulty Canadians would have to contend with in challenging for the international cup. It would take at least two years to train a crew thoroughly and a nursery would have to be established. From all that can be learned the iron and coal magnates have not given the matter serious consideration.

LIEUT. Col. Hudson of Kingston, Ont. refused to accept the South African medal. He says that officers his junior who had seen little or no service were decorated with the C. M. G. or raised a grade, while he who fought at the front was not remembered except by receiving a medal such as given the ordinary soldiers.

The case of Geo. Pippy and Samuel Wood, charged with firing the barns of Robert Jenkinson, was before the Court on Saturday. The evidence shows that Pippy and his brother-in-law, and his horse the abo had been removed, and the hoof a peculiar one, destroyed. The magistrate, in the absence of the case, ordered that in Wood's case he would permit a renewal of the bail but in view of the evidence against Pippy he could not accept bail.

A CASE of rare heroism is reported from Montreal. Some time ago the nine-year-old son of E. R. Mitchell, of that city, was injured in a railway accident. In order that the raw wounds might be cleaned over, his father, Mr. Mitchell, seventeen years of age, offered himself as a subject, and last Wednesday at the general hospital, sixty square inches of outside were removed from her body and grafted upon her brother's body. The operation was one of the most extensive ever performed.

The Charlottetown Mounted Rifles are now under the instruction of Sergeant-Major Macdonald, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Toronto, who has been engaged to drill the new company. The Sergeant served in South Africa, having gone out with the first contingent and being afterwards transferred to the Royal Canadian Dragoons who did such good work in capturing the game at Modder River. He is a clever man with the sword and intends organizing a class for fencing if a sufficient number offer themselves.

The largest body of militia men who ever left the shores of P. E. Island under a command, took passage Thursday night last by the S. S. Northumberland for Halifax. The strength of this force was 425 officers and men, all in light marching order, and was made up of the Charlottetown Engineers, the Regiment of Artillery with their band, Nos. 5 and 6 Companies of the 82nd Regiment, and No. 8 Company of the Army Medical Corps. They were under the command of Lieut. Col. Longworth. They arrived home Monday morning at daylight.

WESLEY Roberts of Murray Harbor, was drowned in McClure's mill pond, Tuesday of last week. He, in company with his nephew had gone duck shooting, and succeeded in dragging one bird, perched on a branch some distance from the bank. He stripped off with the intention of swimming for it, but when within about fifty feet from it, he thought to get nearer and started to swim back. He had not gone far when he began to sink, and the saying could be done, he sank in 20 feet of water, evidently having taken a cramp. The body was recovered the next morning. The deceased was in his 63rd year and leaves a large family to mourn.

A VERY bad accident occurred at Montague on Wednesday. While little Mary Regis Murphy was playing she ran against her grandmother striking a teapot she was carrying with such force that it broke and the contents of boiling tea scalded her badly. Drs. McEwen and McIntyre were summoned immediately but in spite of all that medical skill could do to relieve her pain the little sufferer died on Thursday. The deceased was only two and a half years of age, and the daughter of Mr. Frank W. Murphy formerly of Montague but now of Bonnyville. Mrs. Murphy and family were visiting at the home of her father Mr. William Robertson when the accident occurred.—Patriot.

ANOTHER bad accident has occurred on the big dredge, which is used in connection with the building of the Hillsborough bridge. The dredge is lying between Pointe and Pook's wharves undergoing repairs to the injuries which were received some weeks ago, which caused it to sink. On Wednesday afternoon last two workmen, Isaac Clark, of Newfoundland, and Benj. Shephard, son of Mr. Geo. Shephard, this city, were on top of the boom attempting to remove part of the gear, when suddenly the guy gave way and the boom buckled and broke about fifteen feet from the boom into the water. Benj. Shephard and Clark were both precipitated with the boom into the water, a distance of thirty feet. Clark escaped with a bad cut over the eye, but received no serious injury. Shephard was not so fortunate. He received a bad gash below the knee and had his hip dislocated, and is otherwise badly shaken up. He was removed to the hospital, where he is now under treatment.

A farmer had a very profane son, and as the minister was coming to tea, he entered into a contract with his boy to the effect that if the boy would refrain from profane language in the presence of the minister he would buy him a side. The boy fully intended to keep his contract—but alas! he knew not the strength of the temptation that was to come. At tea the father asked the minister, who by the way was something of a dreyptic and very, very gloomy, if he would have beef, and the minister said, "Oh, no; I cannot take beef." "Will you take lamb?" "Oh, no; I cannot take lamb." "Will you have some of our nice chicken?" "Oh, no; I could not eat chicken." By this time the boy's temper got the better of him and he shouted out, "I'll give up all de feathery. Ask de d-ol fool if he can suck an egg."

It was in the speaker of a railway train that sanctimonious men forget their natural antipathies and antipathies and feel that the world is not such a bad sphere for temporary residence. In the view of the sanctimonious surrounding the permanent future location of morality. The judge had the floor, and as the conversation waned, between him and a story of the uncertainties of horse trading. The smart man was taken with the appearance of a countryman's horse and approached the rustic for a trade. He looked the beast over, felt his legs, gazed at the horse's teeth and shook his head wisely. The countryman remarked: "The horse was a good one, although not much of a looker."

The horse cried inquired if he was countryman and the rustic replied: "He is just as you see him, good roader, but not much of a looker." The sage inquired tenderly of the condition of the horse's wind. "Oh, he's all right in the wind, but he's not much of a looker." A few minutes haggling over price and the trade was made. As the new purchase proudly trotted after him, the rustic called out after him: "You'll find him a good one, although not much of a looker. The owner discovered the truth of that statement, for the fancy horse was shod blind.—St. John Telegraph.

The Prohibition Act

Ain't effecting us a bit. The people are drinking harder than ever. They must be, for our sales are increasing every month. We don't fear the inspectors. The more inspectors that visit us the better we like it. We invite every one who likes a cup of good TEA to become an inspector of the quality of our

"EUREKA" BLEND.

Temperance advocates will also find in it a mild and pleasant beverage. So many of our customers are acting as informers (we mean acquainting their friends of the good qualities of this Tea) that our sales are increasing on it continually.

Price 25c. per Pound. WE CARRY A FULL LINE OF General Groceries Which, like our "Eureka" Tea, will stand inspection. We buy the best quality of everything we handle, having found from a long experience that it pays in the end to do so. Though having to sell at a smaller profit we hold our old customers and gain new ones; for a satisfied customer is the best advertisement a merchant can have. We buy Eggs, Butter and Wool. We are agents for Mill View Carding Mills. R. F. MADDIGAN & Co Lower Queen St., Charlottetown. Telephone No. 28
