A. & G. W. AND CONSTRUCTION CO MADE CO-DEFENDANTS WITH ROYAL BANK

Judgment was given by Judge Beck, in the Supreme Court Thursday, making the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway and the Western Canada Construction Company, co-defendants with the Royal Bank in the action brought against them by the Alberta Government. His Lordship suggested that the statement of defence should be amended to show why they had been brought into the suit. The Standard Trust Company was not included in the action, as the judge could see no reason on the evidence before them that they should be included in the action

In his judgment the learned judge summed up the case, pointing out that it was in form an action for debt, but in substance and reality an action to recover a specific fund deposited with the bank, with certain trusts upon it, which trusts had been cancelled at the last session of the Legislature. His Lordship also foreshadowed the line of defence which would be followed by the interested parties. 1. That the Act of last session, as a matter of legal construction falls short of freeing the money from the trusts adhering to it at the

2. The bank is the creature of the Dominion/ Government; it has its head office without Alberta; the money in question is both in fact and in law outside of Alberta, subject to the bank's interest; the money belongs to the Construction Company, also the creature of the Dominion Parliament.

The act of last session does not expressly annul the contract beween the province and the Railway Company, and that under these circumstances, or some of them, the act of last session is ineffective, and ultra vires

The defendant, the judge proceeded in giving judgment, is certainly entitled to have the worth of such a defence decided by the highest Court of the Empire. It of course has the right without procuring the adding of other defendants, but it is clear to me that justice demands that the Railway Company should be added as parties defendant, not only so that they may be bound by the ultimate decision in this action upon the defence indicated above and any other that the defendant Bank may raise, but also to enable themselves to raise all such grounds against the plaintiffs' right to recover as they may
