SATURDAY, July 1, 1911.

Mr. H. LeMessurier's Trade Report.

We have been furnished with a copy of a "Report on the Foreign Trade and Commerce of Newfoundland, 1908-1909."

It is a printed copy of the report made last August to the Director of the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade, London, by Mr. H. W. LeMessurier who is the Imperial Trade Correspondent for Newfoundland. Mr. LeMessurier is well fitted for the work. His associations with the trade of Newfoundland, his long connection with the Customs Department, his position as deputy or permanent head of the department give him that experience with the trade and statistics relating to it, which peculiarly fit him for the drafting of such reports. This fitness was recognized by the British Board of Trade in appointing him as Trade Correspondent for Newfoundland. This was recognized by Sir William MacGregor with whom he collaborated in making the Report on the same subject which bears the name of the late Governor, and which was printed as a blue-book in 1905.

The present report is a continuation of that report. In his covering letter Mr. LeMessurier succinctly summarizes the declining proportions of Newfoundland trade with the United Kingdom as follows:—
"I have to call your attention to the falling off in trade with the United Kingdom, which has steadily decreased from 38 per cent. in 1888 to 17.6 per cent. in 1909-10."
This decrease is easily accounted for, as has been already pointed out by Sir Wm. MacGregor and by Mr. R. Grigg.

First, The neglect of British manufacturers to keep in touch with the Colony and furnish goods according to the needs and designs of the Colonists, to do as the United States and Canadian manufacturers do, send commercial travellers here and manufacture according to the patterns and needs of the purchasers.

Secondly, The freight rates between this Colony and the Mother Country have been so high that trade is driven to the neighbouring continent. No competition in freight carrying has placed in the hands of one one line of steamers a monopoly, which has been detrimental to British trade.

Freight has been carried from Liverpool to Toronto, a distance of 1,300 miles further west, at the same rate as it has been deposited in St. John's.

With lines of steamers running to New York, Halifax, and Montreal, and the railway across Newfoundland connecting with Sydney, facilities for trade with the United States and Canada are much cheaper.

3. The total value of Trade with the Mother Country will be much greater when the Exports of Pulp and Paper are added in the next year's report. The Grand Falls paper mills are already putting out large quantities of these goods, all of which are exported to the United Kingdom, and when the Bishop's Falls mills are opened next year the output will be much greater."

FULL PASSENGER LIST.

Mr. W. Caldwell, Assistant Book Keeper at Bowring Bros., who went to New York and returned in the Florida, was on board the Stephano, the new Red Cross Liner. The ship, Mr. C. says, is a beauty and was fully described by the Newfoundland papers. She left to-day for this port and she is filled with round trip passengers.

NOTE OF THANKS.

I wish to thank the many friends who so generously, and without question, subscribed towards an object undertaken on my own responsibility, and presented as a surprise to one who has lately had the misfortune to lose one of his limbs. The amount raised was sufficient to purchase one of the best artificial limbs made. M. B. VAIL.—ad.

A GENEROUS REMINDER.

As an appreciation of their services rendered to her as helpers and a memento of the Children's Coronation Festival, five of Messrs. Bowring Bros. shop-hands were yesterday presented with handsome gold pins by Mrs. Edgar Bowring. The recipients were Messrs. Clarke, White, Bastow, Edwards and Lillis. These young men highly value the memento gift and the thoughtfulness of the kind donor.

Tim Shanahan on Good Citizenship.

TUCKER GIVES HIS VIEWS.

"Well," says Tucker, "the more I think of the Children's Festival and the grand success it proved to be, the more convinced I am that we could make each other's life a great deal more happy than it is in this community. We are," he says, "only a handful of people when you come to think of it, and we have only a week or a time to live, yet we grumble and grind and try to keep the other fellow down. This is true we're not too bad to sympathize with a fellow when he meets with some great loss, but we wait till he is down and out, before we start in to do him a good turn. If a man is good and healthy we expect him to remain good and healthy, and won't put one foot over another to do him a good turn. As time goes on our people are getting harder on each other and we think we are living in an age when this should be considered right and just. No one can doubt this, no one can close his eyes to the fact that there is a great lack of true brotherly love. Our nature is such that it is no trouble for us to become as hard as nails, and what we need is a little softening of our hearts towards our fellowmen in the every day struggle of life. This hardness is more noticeable amongst the every day class than in any other. True, our unions have done good work amongst its members in time of need, but we should not wait till a man is down and out to give him a push along; we can do one another a great service and not wait till the down and out stage is reached to give each other a hint as to the right move to make in our journey through life. This might appear like sermon, says Tucker, but it is not intended as such, but my aim is to arouse if possible a more brotherly feeling in this community. We hear of a man dying, a poor fellow who was always up against hard luck and we feel very often if we had that man back amongst us once more we'd treat him differently. There were many little acts of kindness that we could do for him that we failed to perform. We were always leaving it on the long finger, and we wake up some fine morning and hear that he is dead and then we feel sorry, but we have a chance to be kind to others, to make up for our indifference, but we allow ourselves to go along in the same old way and one day we wake up to find we are dead ourselves."

You say that is the way of the world, but you know that should be the way. Nothing makes me tired like a big crowd of a funeral of a man who went through tortures all the days of his life, for if a score of the mourners who follow him to the grave treated him in a Christian manner there would be no necessity of going to his funeral for many years yet.

Yes, says Tucker, little acts of kindness count a lot, none of us are so poor that we can't give each other a kind word, a small lift along over the uphill journey, and in a small community like ours it is very easy thing to do. We would be a happier people if there were a little more true interest and evidence, and if we cut out the "jump-on-him" style that is so noticeable to-day.

Our Governor is away from us now, says Tucker, and a fellow can say things about him that he wouldn't feel like saying if he were here. He has certainly set the pace for us all in this community by his kind acts and the interest he has taken in the people, and the people showed their gratitude when he was leaving, and they assembled on his way out to give him a send-off that was heartily to behold.

And after all, says Tucker, the man with the dough has a splendid opportunity to win the esteem of the people. Some may smile at this, and this, says Tucker, and say what does the esteem of the people amount to. But, Tucker says, the man who makes light of the esteem of his fellows is not worth worrying over, and all the writing and talking that we might do from now till Gabriel blows his horn wouldn't amount to a row of pins.

Tucker says in other countries we have men building homes for the needy, giving beds to hospitals, and doing good work in a hundred different ways. Monuments are erected in public places in honour of such men, and in this way others are prompted to follow in their footsteps. We have had good noble citizens slumbering in their graves to-day who did lots of good work for this community while they lived, but there is nothing left in the way of a monument to testify to their good citizenship, they are forgotten as soon as they are buried, and Tucker says this is a disgrace to the community and a poor incentive to induce others to follow in their footsteps.

Party politics are to blame for a great deal of this, and his very questionable if party politics are a hindrance to the advancement of the country in other respects.

TIM SHANAHAN.
MINARD'S LINIMENT USED BY PHYSICIANS.

Oarsmen Dissatisfied.

The decision of the Regatta Committee arrived at last night to admit oarsmen other than amateurs into the mercantile race has caused much dissatisfaction amongst young men in shops, stores and offices. They hold that fishermen, tradesmen and laborers who work in shops or stores or on wharves should compete in the events applicable to their several callings and not row against oarsmen not as well practised as they, or not so fit physically. They also contend that it will tend to induce these workmen to hold back from the races in which they should compete, to make easy wins against shop or office hands. The belief is that the mercantile crews who competed last year will not row on the ground that those class of men hold an unfair advantage over them.

Dogfish a Pest.

The Board of Trade received from Mr. Patrick Coffey, of Angel's Cove, Cape Sable, yesterday a report on the fishery in which he states that last Monday two dorries had from 3 to 7 qts. Then the caplin struck in, and with them vast shoals of dogfish, and since which it has been impossible to catch a cod. He states that he is 63 years old and has never known dogfish to strike in with the caplin, nor did he ever see them so plentiful before.

Found a Skull.

Two fishermen, James Aspell and John Hawkes, of Admiral's Cove, Cape Broyle, were out on the fishing grounds hauling their trawls, half a mile east of Brigus Head. On one of the hooks they found a man's skull without any flesh on it. Apparently it had been in the water a long time. The bottom is muddy and they could find nothing else. Some believe it may be the skull of one of three men who left Brigus South for Cape Broyle in a boat some two years ago, and who were never heard of afterwards.

Wedding Bells.

RENDALL-TETFOURD.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's Church, Hearts Content, on Wednesday afternoon last, at 4.30, when Mr. James W. Tetford, son of Mr. Robert Tetford, of this town, led to the altar Miss Charlotte Lydia Rendall, daughter of the late Mr. Charles Rendall, and sister of Mr. Gaden Rendall, the popular Customs official of Hearts Content. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Frank Smart in the presence of a large number of friends and well-wishers. The church had been nicely decorated with flowers, &c., for the occasion, and the scene was a pretty one as the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Gaden Rendall. The bride wore a large hat, and also Miss Bessie Tetford, sister of the groom. The groom was ably attended by Mr. Rendall, cousin of the bride, and also by Mr. Gaddard. After the ceremony supper was partaken of at the home of the bride when over 100 guests assembled. Rev. Mr. Smart gave a very pleasing address on the occasion. The bride was dressed in white silk and the bride veil and looked the picture of happiness, which their many little and happy married life. The long flower girl in pink silk looked very pretty. The bridesmaids were dressed in white. After supper the party repaired to the Orange Hall, which had been hired and decorated for the occasion, where a pleasant time was spent until dawn made the guests feel that it was time to disperse, which they did, and at the same time wished the newly wedded couple much happiness. Many and valuable were the presents received, showing how popular were both the bride and groom. The happy pair intend spending a few days here with friends before going to their future home, Sydney.

Is This Evans?

People who are in the city to-day, and who came from the neighbourhood of Horse Cove say that a few nights ago a strange man made his appearance there and went into several houses asking for something to eat. He said he was famishing with hunger, but was reticent as to his antecedents, and several thought he might be the man Evans who escaped from the Penitentiary on Saturday last.

Anchor SHINGLE STAINS

The Best Preservative of Undressed Wood

Anchor Shingle Stains indefinitely postpone, if not absolutely prevent wet or dry rot. They show up the grain of the wood, giving delicately artistic finish, not only to the surface coated, but to the entire building.

We have used infinite pains in the selection of pigments best suited to combine with our specially treated COAL TAR CREOSOTE, and our success has been proportionate with our care.

Anchor Shingle Stains are being very largely used on the roofs, and in many instances also on the bodies, of the most attractive houses in our midst; they are also employed with excellent results from an economic standpoint on sheds and other outbuildings.

If your dealer cannot at the moment supply Anchor Shingle Stains, please write us to arrange for you.

We regret very much that we inadvertently omitted to credit the C. C. Band with being present at the open air concert in front of the H. G. B. & S. Factory, on Thursday week, and thank Mr. James for reminding us. The hearty way in which the band entered into the different events of the celebration calls for no small measure of praise from the citizens generally.

Mr. William Tapp, who is doing a successful auctioneering business at Halifax, arrived by yesterday's train on a visit to his parents and other friends, of which he has many in town.

Our shoe factories are now rushing to fill orders, and the whistle blowing after tea hour and again at 10 p.m. is a healthy sign.

Miss Elsie Tetford is home from St. John's on a holiday, and was present at the wedding of her brother to Miss Rendall, at Heart's Content, on Wednesday last. From what we can gather there will be another wedding at not a very far distant date when Miss Tetford will take a more important part. Her many friends here were pleased to see her.

Posters are about town announcing that the business men of Carbonara are going to close their different stores, etc., each Wednesday during the summer and allow their "hands" to enjoy life a little. Nothing has been done in that line here yet, but in all probability it will soon be arranged for.

The Management of Gas Cooking Stoves.

The substitution of gas cookers in place of the kitchen coal range is much favoured nowadays, and the various makers of gas stoves have brought them to a very high standard of excellence.

The use of gas instead of coal for cooking purposes has many distinct advantages in localities where it is obtainable at a reasonable rate.

The Advantages of Gas Cooking Stoves.

1. They are economical, providing the gas is not used carelessly.
2. They are convenient; they can be lighted and extinguished instantly, and are always ready day or night.
3. They are cleanly, causing no dust or smoke, and utensils are kept clean.
4. They are easily managed, even by inexperienced workers.
5. Heat can be regulated with the greatest ease and certainty.
6. Time is saved, as there are no flames or work parts to be replaced free of charge by the dealer.
7. Stoves can be hired at reasonable rates from the gas companies, and their broken or worn parts are replaced free of charge by the company.
8. Meat cooked in a gas oven loses less in weight than if cooked in a coal range.

Spurious Gold Coins.

We would advise business people and others in the city to carefully scrutinize the American gold coins they receive in the future, especially those of the denomination of $5. Yesterday Inspector General Sullivan received one of these from a business man. It is a clever counterfeit, but it can be seen that the metal in it is base and it looks as if some adventurer from abroad is beginning the work of "elaborating the quest" here. One or two American banks have "gone up the spout" within recent times and it is not unlikely that some of their paper might be palmed off on unsuspecting people here.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—The tourist season has made a good start. I notice from last evening's issue of your paper that one hundred and fifty trippers, as you call them, arrived by the Florizel. Many of these passengers, if they are making the round trip, would rather stay ashore for the few days—if we had hotel accommodation for them—than stay on board. I understand the "Stephano," which leaves New York to-morrow, is full up with first class passengers. What are we going to do with them? Is no provision to be made for their comfort when they arrive in St. John's, or are the steamers Florizel, Stephano and Rosalind to become excursion steamers for tourists, to be used as floating hotels while in St. John's landing cargo?

Now, Mr. Editor, we want an hotel. But the question is, what kind of an hotel do we require? To begin with, it need not be too large, but built in such a way that it could be enlarged at any time. It seems to me most unwise for the Colony to find there its insufficient hotel accommodation. The Croable Hotel, Cochrane House and Balsam Place can only take but very few. The Railway Co. and steamship owners should put up a first class modern hotel, with about one hundred to one hundred and fifty bedrooms to start with. I question if there is another town on this side of the Atlantic, and the Capital at that, that has not got a proper hotel. In a first class modern hotel, in a constructed for the comfort of travellers, the central feature is an imposing entrance hall, around which are the hotel offices, post, telegraph and telephone offices, reading room, writing room. In St. room and reception room. In a suitable place to hold a first class dinner or a banquet. To meet all that is required at the present time a capital of $250,000 would put up a building and furnish it that would do credit to St. John's.

Yours truly,
MODERN HOTEL.

Duels With Death. THE CEMETERY UNDER THE SEA.

Of all the colliery disasters which have staggered humanity, none have created a sadder impression than that at Whitehaven. One hundred and thirty-three miners were burned to death in the bowels of the earth, and in order to prevent the fire reaching other portions of the mine, they were bricked up. The spot where they sleep is under the sea, hence the title of this article. He buried, these hundred and thirty-three men, in a cemetery under the sea. Only Four Men Escaped the Flames. What caused the fire will probably never be known. Four men escaped from the burning part, but they were able to tell very little. While at work one night, they suddenly became conscious of the fact that smoke was creeping into the seam. Nothing strikes terror into the heart of the miner like fire, and the men rushed out into the passage to find out what had happened. They heard loud cries of warning, and "Fire! Fire!" and got a glimpse of the agonized faces of their workmates, who were running madly about in the smoke, trying to find their way to the foot of the shaft. Some were falling down, overcome by the smoke; others, in their frantic eagerness to find an outlet, crashed their heads against the coal and dropped unconscious, never to rise again. It was a terrible scene. Heart-rending cries rang through the narrow passage; the air was filled with the screams of the dying and the shrieks of the men who found it impossible to escape. Black faces fitted by, to be lost the next moment in the thick, deadly air, and now and again a sheet of flame would be seen, and great coal rocks, loosened by the fire, would crash down with an awful thud upon the soft earth, or upon the body of a rushing miner. This was about midnight. Near half-past twelve the men on the surface thought they heard an unusual sound below. Like a small explosion, and they endeavoured at once to get into communication with the miners. They descended the shaft, and called out to the men, but there was no answer. Then they hurried along to where the miners were at work, to find out the cause of the disturbance. The seams where the men were engaged were three and a half miles from the bottom of the shaft, but long before the investigators reached there they were met by blinding smoke and the smell of fire. Diving bravely through the smoke, they tumbled over the unconscious figures of the men who had managed to fight their way so far. It was no use attempting to proceed farther without hose pipes and proper appliances, and fire dress. So they carried the survivors back to the shaft and returned to the surface. Not Another Miner Found. But never a miner was found. The cage kept going down and coming up, but the tale was always the same—a blazing mine, and the rescuing smoke made rescue impossible. As the night wore on there was hardly a soul in Whitehaven that was not speaking out its sympathy or its sorrow near the head of the burning pit. Waiting women, crying children, and doctors, ministers, begging the relatives of the doomed men to seek solace in the wisdom of the Almighty's will. The sun peeped out on a living picture of despair, such as England, fortunately, has rarely seen. And the cage kept going down and coming up, but always with rescuers. As it rose the "hurrah!" would sound again, and the women would press forward, crying, "Is he mine, is he mine?" But they cried in vain. It was a rescuer, unconscious, and half-suffocated. The hundred and thirty-three men had gone the way of all. And at last the half-dead rescuers were forced to relinquish their task and the order went forth that the burning mine must be bricked up to stop the fire spreading throughout the whole mine. That night, Whitehaven went almost mad. It still refused to believe that the entombed men were dead, and in their pitiful indignation, the people stormed the pit-head to protest against the order. But, as I have said, and all the world knows, the bricking up was done. There are still those who believe that it was wrong, that, given time, some of the miners would have been able to drag themselves to safety, and have been brought back to their homes and their families. But those who believe this were not among the rescuers. Rightly or wrongly, the men were bricked in. And there they sleep in the cemetery under the sea, while you and I fumble at the price of our coals, and the widows and orphans stare drearily at the vacant chairs. RAILWAY WORK.—Mr. J. Powell, surveyor for the R. N. Co., will finish the work of locating the road to Heart's Content next week, and will start on the survey from Carbonear to Bay de Verde.

ever. The rescuers forged their way ahead, but they had not gone far when half their number fell down unconscious, and were in danger of suffocation. Great billows of smoke were racing forward like the waves of an incoming tide, and it seemed that to penetrate further would be madness. They returned to the pit-head with their unconscious comrades, and gave out the awful intelligence that the pit was ablaze, and that the miners must have perished long ago. The announcement was met by cries of agony, such as Whitehaven had never heard before. The scene around was a pathetic pandemonium. Women beat the air helplessly, and surged forward in a confused, heart-breaking mass, and begged to be allowed to descend, and look for their husbands and sons and fathers. Prayers mingled with shrieks, and threats with pitiful appeals. The Piteous Plight of the Women. The women refused to believe that hope had fled so quickly. They clung to the ropes, like the relatives, that things were as bad as was reported, had equipped themselves to fight the flames below. They entered the cage, and descended amid a round of cheers. The waiting women spent the terrible moments of suspense in prayer, and when the cage ropes began to move again, the policemen on guard were hustled away. And then, as the cage reappeared, and the women saw that only the rescuers had returned, they fell back and wept again. The rescuers reported that the heat below was terrific; the firemen had been unable to wear their helmets, the steel of which had singed their hair. They had struggled under the ground for over a mile, but had not given it up. Already most of the rescuers were stretched out unconscious, but others were ready to take their places, and down they went. They fought on, now taking off a jacket as the heat became greater; now collar, now a waistcoat. Occasionally a man would reel and moan, and fall down, and be carried back and taken to the surface. Not Another Miner Found. But never a miner was found. The cage kept going down and coming up, but the tale was always the same—a blazing mine, and the rescuing smoke made rescue impossible. As the night wore on there was hardly a soul in Whitehaven that was not speaking out its sympathy or its sorrow near the head of the burning pit. Waiting women, crying children, and doctors, ministers, begging the relatives of the doomed men to seek solace in the wisdom of the Almighty's will. The sun peeped out on a living picture of despair, such as England, fortunately, has rarely seen. And the cage kept going down and coming up, but always with rescuers. As it rose the "hurrah!" would sound again, and the women would press forward, crying, "Is he mine, is he mine?" But they cried in vain. It was a rescuer, unconscious, and half-suffocated. The hundred and thirty-three men had gone the way of all. And at last the half-dead rescuers were forced to relinquish their task and the order went forth that the burning mine must be bricked up to stop the fire spreading throughout the whole mine. That night, Whitehaven went almost mad. It still refused to believe that the entombed men were dead, and in their pitiful indignation, the people stormed the pit-head to protest against the order. But, as I have said, and all the world knows, the bricking up was done. There are still those who believe that it was wrong, that, given time, some of the miners would have been able to drag themselves to safety, and have been brought back to their homes and their families. But those who believe this were not among the rescuers. Rightly or wrongly, the men were bricked in. And there they sleep in the cemetery under the sea, while you and I fumble at the price of our coals, and the widows and orphans stare drearily at the vacant chairs. RAILWAY WORK.—Mr. J. Powell, surveyor for the R. N. Co., will finish the work of locating the road to Heart's Content next week, and will start on the survey from Carbonear to Bay de Verde.

Largely Attended Regatta Meeting. The weekly meeting of the Regatta Committee which was held at Woods Restaurant last night was largely attended and much business was transacted. The President, Hon. John Harvey, presided. V. P. Hiscock announced that the cups and medals had been ordered and would be here in due course. Mr. F. W. Hayward informed the Secretary that being absent from the city he could not take that active part in regatta matters which heretofore he did. He will collect, however, from the firm of Bowring Bros. Follen Protection.—F. J. Morris and A. G. Williams. Band Stand, Band and Tent.—Councillor Ryan and J. W. Morris. Programmes and Rosettes.—W. J. Higgins, P. Hanley and J. P. Crotty. Bugle and Blackboard.—V. P. Hiscock, W. J. Martin and F. J. Morris. Swimming Race.—W. J. Higgins, J. R. Bennett, Capt. English, T. McNeill, C. Ellis, W. J. Martin and J. W. Morris. Luncheon.—J. R. Bennett, J. P. Crotty and V. P. Hiscock. Qualification of Amateurs and Juveniles.—V. P. Hiscock, J. R. Bennett, Dr. Scully, T. McNeill, W. J. Higgins, J. W. Morris and J. P. Crotty. Though absent at the Council meeting it was intimated to the committee that Councillor Ryan would be glad to look after the matter of the ground and arranging the tent for Regatta Day as he did creditably last year. Mr. Ryan was unanimously appointed for this service. The rules governing the Regatta were then read by the Vice-President when certain amendments were made in them. These were as follows:—Rule 3 referring to the Brigade Race. "In this race no person shall be eligible to row who has attained his 20th birthday. As last year some irregularities were recorded in the ages given for competitors in this race, it was decided that in the event of disputes as to ages of rowers in this event arising and being referred to the Regatta Committee, a proper birth certificate be furnished immediately upon demand by the Committee." Copies of the rules governing this race will be sent by the Secretary to the various Brigades. This rule will also apply to competitors in the Brigade Swimming Race. Mechanics, Fishermen, Truckmen and others not engaged as labourers shall not be eligible to row in the labourers' Race. As labourers, tradesmen and fishermen working on the various mercantile firms for some years past this once most interesting item on the day's programme has been so detrimental that last year a revival of interest in the race was suggested that the impediment alluded to above be removed, and this was acted upon with the proviso that labourers, tradesmen or fishermen ineligible to row in the Mercantile Race on Regatta Day if they have previously competed in either the labourers' or Fishermen's races on that day. In reference to the eligibility of labourers a new sub-section (c) was introduced providing that "Continual employment shall be held to include those who may work or broken periods, provided that they are not engaged during the said 4 months with another firm." In the Truckmen's Race those eligible for competition shall be bona fide coachmen, truckmen and drivers who have been engaged regularly in such occupations for the 3 months immediately preceding the Regatta.

SOLIGNUM.

A Remarkable Test! Locally made by Messrs. W. & G. RENDELL.

To test Solignum as a preservative for Wood against the attacks of Worms, we tried a piece of 2 x 4 Spruce, about two feet in length, by painting one-third with Solignum, leaving the balance clear wood, this was suspended by a wire through the centre, in the water about one foot from the bottom, immediately over a pile of staves the remains of a sunken wharf (which is the place where our Wharf Shores are eaten off first) for Three Months. On taking it up at the end of that time we found some half-lozen small holes only a very short distance in the clear part of the wood, which shows the liquid had penetrated through the whole piece and the worms had hardly begun boring before coming in contact with it.

Last year as a test of some brands of Copper Paint we had a similar piece of wood treated at both ends, leaving the centre third clear; this was in exactly the same place as the piece for the Solignum test for Three Months and Three Days, when taken up the painted ends were perfect but the centre was riddled with worm holes.

Both these pieces of wood are to be seen at our Office by those interested in the preservation of Wharf Piles or any other wood work.
