CHAPTER XVI.

"She does not look very strong," remarked Mr. Milner.

"Oh, she is strong enough! She rarely has anything the matter with her. Stephen," she added, raising her voice as she addressed her brother, "that is not what to Cotley. What are you thinking of?"

Stephen laughed carelessly as he turned his horse's head in another direction, and the color rose slightly in his brown cheek. He had lost himself in reverie, half bitter, and half pleasant, the pleasantness being in the thought of what might have been, the bitterness in the thought of what really was. If Sidney had loved him, how happy, how nearly approaching perfection, their lives might have been! But she did not love him, and it was all a failure.

When he married her, he had hoped that by patient endeavour and tenderness and love he would win that love she had kept from the wreck of her first love affair; he had believed that she was learning to forget Frank Greville; but on his wedding-day this belief had been torn from him, and he possessed instead—or thought he possessed—the certainty that she still believed in, still loved Frank, who he felt was guilty of the hideous crime of which he was accused. Had he not held such a belief, he would have left no stone unturned to prove the innocence of the man whom Sidney loved; even had that innocence parted her from him—Stephen—forever. He loved her well enough, he told himself again and again, to have made her happy at any cost. But, believing, as he did, he had forbidden his wife, out of very pity for her, to make any efforts to prove Frank's innocence. A close inquiry into the matter would probably only result in overwhelming proof of his guilt; and it was better, he thought sadly, for Sidney to mourn for her lost lover and his hard fate than to know that he was unworthy either of her love or of her sorrow. There can be no greater suffering, he knew, than to know the unworthiness of one we love. This, then, was the true reason of the severe and decided prohibition which Sidney resented so bitterly, and which stood between husband and wife like an iron wall which neither could break down, and which gave color to the terrible suspicions which were about to be implanted in the young wife's heart and almost to shipwreck her whole life.

"I wonder Mrs. Daunt does not hunt!" remarked Lloyd Milner, when they were riding abreast again.

"This is stiff country, you know," Stephen said carelessly. "Sidney is a very good horsewoman; but I am glad she does not care for hunting."

"Has she ever tried it?"

"Yes, once," Stephen said, briefly, recalling the occasion with a keen pang of pain, remembering all that had taken place since then, and how in the dusk of the wintry evening he and Frank Greville had ridden up the street together and seen Sidney's slight girlish form in the window of the front room in the Gray House.

"Did she come to greet that, she has not repeated the experiment?"

"No."

"Then I am surprised she did do so. It is becoming so very general for ladies to hunt."

"Yes, more's the pity!" Stephen answered carelessly. "In my opinion, women are out of place in the hunting-field."

"That is an exploded notion, mon cher."

"I know that. May I ask if you intend Mrs. Milner to hunt?" Daunt inquired, laughing.

The color rose in the young barrister's cheeks.

"Mrs. Milner—if ever there be such a person," he said, laughing—"will not have the chance. She will not be able to afford it."

"Nonsense! We know what big fees Q. C.'s get."

"No doubt. But Q. C.'s are few and far between."

"Here is Cotley," said Dolly, who had been silent for some minutes, and whose cheeks were very pink—possibly from the exercise. "Is it not a charming old house, Mr. Milner?"

"A fine place, decidedly," answered the young man, looking at the rosy cheeks with more interest than at the Big redbrick house which rose above the trees of the park. "We are in good time, Daunt."

"Yes; the meet is in a field to our right."

"No doubt it was the short conversation he had held with Lloyd which brought to Stephen's mind so clearly and vividly that other meet at which Mrs. Rutledge had made her first appearance after her return home, and at which Sidney Arnold had been present, with a knot of violets at her breast and her handsome fiancé by her side. As he rode into the field, he almost expected to see the well-appointed carriage, with its black horses and its beautiful occupant, to meet Frank Greville's mocking glance, to see the unfortunate Squire's angry face, to hear again Sidney's earnest voice—"I do trust you—I do trust you, Stephen"—and to see her pretty drooping figure as she rode away.

The meet was a full one. The weather was so essentially hunting weather that even the most languid sportsmen had donned their pink. There had been a breakfast at Cotley Hall; and Lady Cotley, a handsome middle-aged woman, as straight a rider and as ardent a votary of Nimrod as her lord himself, rode up to Stephen to reproach him for his non-appearance.

"Why did you not bring your beautiful wife?" she said in her loud cheerful voice. "I believe you are so jealously inclined that you would like to shut her up in a Bluebeard, and deprive us of the pleasure of looking at her. Headache! She has a headache, and you left her at home, when the very best remedy in the world would have been a good straight cross-country gallop! Miss Daunt, why do you let him act the marvellous, and why were you not here earlier?"

"We said we would come to the meet, Lady Cotley," Dolly answered, smiling.

"I told Lord de la Poer that you were coming to breakfast, and he has looked as angry as possible ever since. Ah, here he comes!" added her ladyship, gayly, as she turned to greet some other late-comers; and Lord de la Poer came up, raising his hat to Dolly and glancing rather suspiciously at the face and figure of her cavalier, who returned the glance frankly enough, and yet with a quick jealous pang at his heart, for the Earl, leaving his title and rent-roll out of the question, looked as if he might be a dangerous rival.

Eighteen months of foreign travel had bronzed the handsome patrician face and given the tall slim figure a greater breadth of shoulder, so that Lord de la Poer was a decidedly handsome man; but his sojourn in foreign lands, which had so improved his appearance, had not entirely obliterated the impression Dolly Daunt had made upon him at the Hunt ball, at which she had made her debut, and when he returned home he was greatly pleased to find that she was still unwon. It was true Dolly was not quite in that circle from which the Earl should take his bride; but was not her mother an earl's daughter?

Since his return home Lord de la Poer's attentions had been as marked as his languid manner and natural indifference would allow them to be; and since Sidney's return from her wedding-tour, and Dolly had been her guest at Easthorpe, he had haunted her pretty drawing-room persistently, and had become, as Sidney said sometimes, almost as regular as the institution of afternoon tea itself.

"Good-morning, Miss Daunt. Will you let me have the honor of escorting you to-day?" he said, as Dolly gave him a little gloved hand and a pretty smile of greeting.

"Thank you," the girl answered, laughing; "Nichols is going to have that honor to-day."

"Nichols?" queried his lordship elevating his straight dark brows.

"Yes, Nichols, my brother's groom," exclaimed Dolly, laughing.

"Are you not going to follow?"

"No; I never hunt, you know. Let me introduce Mr. Milner to you," she added rather shyly. "Mr. Milner—Lord de la Poer."

Two stiff bows were made; the earl's dark eyes glanced at the young lawyer's with an expression which seemed to ask, "Who are you, and what are you doing here?" and Lloyd returned the look with perfect calmness and composure.

"Is this your first visit to these parts, Mr.—Mr. Milner?" asked his lordship.

"Oh, no," Milner answered coolly, "not my first by several."

"I have not had the pleasure of meeting you before, have I?"

"No; your lordship has generally been absent from home, I think."

"Ah, probably! Mrs. Daunt is not with you this morning, Miss Daunt?" asked the earl, turning to Dolly again.

"No; Sidney preferred to stay at home."

"Too cruel of her! And you too arrogant to desert us!"

"I should be far too great a coward to do anything else," said Dolly, smiling. "Even now Lady Goffightly is far too frisky for my peace of mind, and too crab-like in her motions. I am afraid I shall not be able to hold her in," she added nervously, glancing appealingly at Lloyd, whose eyes brightened as he leaned forward and put his hand upon her bride.

"I don't think you need fear," he said, smiling, with a tender protectiveness in his tone and manner which was anything but satisfactory to Lord de la Poer. "She is just a little excited, as we all are this morning; she will calm down again directly."

"Perhaps I had better return," she suggested, dubiously.

WALKING THE FLOOR

Jinx owed nine dollars at the store, for cans of shrimp and herring; "I'll let the merchant walk the floor," he said, not greatly caring. The country's full of men like Jinx, who owe all kinds of money; their fame grows worse, their credit shrinks, and still they think it funny. Collectors do not make them sore, duns don't disturb their slumbers; they let the merchants walk the floor in sad and weeping numbers. The grocer grimly scans his books, where Jinx's name is written, and says, with sickly smile, "Gadzooks! Again I have been smitten. Oh, once again a chronic beat has worked me for a sucker; I'll soon be driven to the street to pawn my bib and tucker. And now I'll spread the news around, to all my brother dealers, that Jinx is but a barking hound who should be pinched by peelers." He puts the merchant princes wise, throughout the bustling city, and now when Jinx goes forth and buys, he is a thing to pity. He finds it useless to demand, to promise or to wheedle; unless he has the coin in hand he cannot buy a needle. There comes a time to men like this when they're by hard luck swatted, and then how dolefully they miss the credit that's unspotted! They look back on the days of yore when they with mirth decided to let the merchants walk the floor, and credit they derided. They realize that they were blind, their arrogance was shocking; and now it's up to them, they need, to do the weary walking.

Do Men Buy Style?

YES---Certainly. But they buy one of two kinds. One kind concerns just so many buttons---certain lines and curves---call it Mathematical Style if you wish.

The other kind is the style of gracefulness---it concerns itself not so much with inches and numbers of buttons---it is the style of good fit, of grace, it is an air of correctness. This is what

The allegation that in Palestine the graves of all German soldiers in German firms had been given the our territory, and it is impossible to fulfill that condition unless bodies of German soldiers were denied. "The greatest possible care has been taken," said the official, "to ensure that no contract of this kind has been placed in ex-enemy hands. Certificates of nationality have been required from every firm with whom contracts have been placed." So far as the graves of British soldiers who died in Germany are concerned, the official admitted that they are being cared for by the War Graves Commission, no being born by the Germans in connection.

Truckmen's Union Meeting

OFFICERS ELECTED. The 27th annual meeting of the Truckmen's Union was held last night when the election of officers, conducted by Mr. D. Fitzgerald, assisted by Messrs. H. Dunn, H. Simmonds and G. Clooney, resulted as follows:— President—M. Power, re-elected. Vice-Pres.—J. Barrett, re-elected. Asst. V.P.—P. Murphy, re-elected. Secretary—P. Murphy, re-elected. Asst. Secretary—J. Rice, re-elected. Treasurer—M. O'Neill, re-elected. Asst. Treas.—J. Cole, re-elected. Fin. Secretary—T. Rice, re-elected. The reports of the past year showed the Union to be in a very satisfactory position, financially and numerically. Various matters of interest to the members were discussed and it was decided to tender a dinner to the crew, stroked by T. Breen, which won the Truckmen's Race on Regatta Day.

"So This is London"

"Dulcy" attracted another large audience at the Casino last night, and all were delighted with the charming comedy. It will be put on again Saturday night for the last time. Don't miss seeing it if you want to enjoy a hearty laugh. To-night, by special request, the great comedy hit of the season, "So This is London," under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor, Sir William L. Allardye and suite. "So This is London" made quite a hit with the patrons of the Harkins' Players on its recent production here and no doubt a large audience will be present at the Casino to-night. At the matinee Saturday afternoon, "Spring Cleaning," and in the evening "Dulcy." Next week will be the last of the Harkins' Players in St. John's. The play chosen for the closing week is the most popular of the century, "The Bat." It is thrilling, mysterious and dramatic. Critic after critic has declared unequivocally that one character in "The Bat," is unquestionably the funniest character ever seen on any stage, no matter what the character of the play. And this, mind you, in a play that has been called "the greatest mystery play ever written." Reserved seats now on sale for all performances at F. V. Chesman's, Water Street.

To Harness the Tides of Fundy

"More power to Maine," is the way one editor expresses the general press congratulation offered to the State of Maine on the decision of its voters to go ahead and turn its ocean tides into electric power. In Maine, the Portland Press-Herald quietly states the feelings of eight out of nine citizens voting in the referendum, when it says: "If there are any persons anywhere in the world with courage and enterprise enough to want to come to Maine to spend $100,000,000 to develop hydroelectric power, we believe the best people of Maine can do is to give them a chance to do it." And so, remarks the Philadelphia Public Ledger, the "tides of the Bay of Fundy, famous in song and story, are to be turned at last to the industrial uses of mankind." Maine, it continues, "has pointed the way to similar action elsewhere along our Atlantic coast and to the final realization of a long-cherished dream of mankind to utilize a mighty potency that now goes chiefly to destroy ships and to pound and mold the shore with results that are scenic but are not industrial." "Harnessing the tide," remarks the Pittsburg Sun in the great coal-producing State of Pennsylvania, "may be merely the advance step in a number of moves that will make regions without coal independent of the fuel." The energy to be developed in Passamaquoddy Bay, a branch of the Bay of Fundy, will be 500,000 horse-power, which, says Arthur Brisbane, in the New York American, "will last, rushing through turbines, as long as ocean tides rise and fall," and "will make Maine one of the greatest industrial States in the Union, and add tens of millions to the State's wealth." Not only Maine, but the whole of New England, says the Providence News, "should benefit by a greatly increased supply of comparatively cheap power." The special election of September 14 was held to determine whether the State should permit the backers of the Bay of Fundy project, if developed, to sell electric power outside the State. The voters said yes. The Newark News notes that "approval of the United States and Canadian Governments and of the provincial government of New Brunswick must still be obtained before the plan can be set in motion, but this is expected to involve little difficulty." Dexter P. Cooper, who built the Keokuk Dam across the Mississippi, and who has had experience at Muscle Shoals, Ni-

agars, and in South America, is the originator of the project. As The News adds, he "has worked his dream out in detail as an engineering problem." The project is briefly explained in a New York Times editorial: "If the scheme can be carried out, Muscle Shoals, as a power dam will look like a minor conception. The Tennessee River was to provide 600,000 horse-power when at flood, but only 100,000 at low water, whereas the promise is that the waters of the Bay of Fundy, impounded by dams and controlled by gates, will furnish a minimum of 500,000 horse-power throughout the year. Maine, after using as much of the generated power as she wants, will sell the rest all over New England, and beyond, and in Canada. "Out of Passamaquoddy Bay and Cobscook Bay, Mr. Cooper will make an upper and lower pool to take in and let out the tides. One bay contains 100 square miles of water, and the other 50 square miles." At the mouth of the upper pool a wall 4,900 feet long and 70 feet high will be built. Thirty-three gates will be set in it. A wall 2,400 feet long, also provided with gates, will close the lower pool. Between the pools there will be power-houses. When the tide is rising the gates of the upper pool are to be opened. During the ebb tide, the lower gates will be opened. The fall of the sea-water through turbines into the lower pool will be harnessed for electrical uses." Mr. Cooper says in a New York Herald Tribune interview: "I design to get a constant and regular downfall of water. The difference in the level of the water in the upper pool from that in the lower pool will give a fall of from fifteen to twenty feet, according to how high the tide lifts the water in the upper pool. "The dream of mankind to put to use the restless energy of the sea is about to be realized. The slogan of the future will be 'Let the ocean do the work.'" Mr. W. S. Murray, of the New York engineering firm of Murray and Flood, who is investigating the feasibility of Mr. Cooper's plan, is quoted in the same newspaper as saying: "So far as I know there is no other place in the world where there is the same favorable combination of high tides and land configuration. "In all probability this will be the basis for the formation of a great distributing system which will sweep southwest through New England and be joined on the west by lines bringing power from Niagara; and thus a great reservoir of power will be formed which will serve the most densely populated part of the United States." —Literary Digest

Another Bid for Power

Members of Party Have Hopes of Turning Out the Baldwin Government

LONDON, England, Sept. 30.—Members of the Labor Party have been turning out the Baldwin Government a great deal sooner than public belief possible a year when the Conservatives came into power. This was made clear in the discussions of the parliamentary party conference.

Right Hon. J. Ramsden, former Labor Premier, and Right Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Colonies, Labor gets a chance to get in again even as a minority government. It will take it, and not long time until it can be a major proposal.

Proposed Voted Down.

Mr. Thomas told the convention that he was convinced the Baldwin Government was going to be brought down by its industrial policy. Both he and Mr. Ramsden opposed a resolution proposed by Ernest Bevin, General Secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, asking the convention to take the stand that it would be acceptable for the party to accept a minority government.

Mr. Ramsden said this was an absurd resolution that would put the party in a silly position, while Mr. Ramsden talked the prospective top leader of the Conservative Government. The convention took their side and defeated Bevin's motion 5 to 1.

an equally overwhelming majority of the moderates in the party put several proposals of their moral brethren. One was a resolution demanding that the Labor executive through Ramsden, MacDonald, and an apology to the Russian Soviet Government in connection with the Zinovieff letter, which admitted the overthrow of the British Government, and which was made public when the MacDonald administration was in power.

Through the Ballot Box.

Another resolution urging the Labor Party to withdraw from Parliament before the resignation of the Baldwin Cabinet was similarly rejected, a show of hands.

Addressing a party demonstration Mr. MacDonald declared that any revolutions would have to be made in this country was through the ballot box. He urged his followers to keep their noses to the grindstone of constitutionalism—"not the kind of merely lying down and waiting for what comes, but the constitution of men who see the great problems of poverty in front of them."

The party at a private session tonight is understood to have decided to double the levy imposed on every member of the Trades Unions for the purpose of raising party funds. Estimated memberships number 4,000,000 and the levy would be reduced from 3 pence to 6 pence, and would yield about £100,000 yearly.

BRICK'S TASTELESS is a wonderful Tonic. Try a bottle.

See at Night

Effort to discover means by which the night vision of naval officers might be improved has led to interesting observation by Sidney H. Quast, from the proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine in the United States (Chicago). He finds that a comparatively rested eye is more sensitive to light in the blue-violet region of the spectrum than when the eye becomes sensitized, and sharpness of vision is greatly improved in the presence of distant and dimly lighted objects, when they are illuminated by light of longer wave-length than that which sensitizes the eye. We read: "The experimental work consisted of training the eye with very small flashes of blue and violet light and training the eye on distant objects which were difficult to distinguish."

As the study proceeded, it was made into the sharpness of vision under ordinary night conditions and into the transparency of the pupil to different regions of the spectrum. It was found that the human eye is very absorbent of anything beyond the limit usually set to human vision. Examinations of the eyes of normal animals revealed extraordinary differences in the degree to which violet and ultraviolet radiations are transmitted by the whole visual apparatus.

Of the ox, the cat, the owl, the dog and other animals were studied means of measured light transmitted through quartz glass, bearing out the fact that the eyes of nocturnal animals are markedly transparent to human eye. The absorption of light by the eye itself within the range of normal vision probably accounts for differences in night vision of different persons. It may not be such a matter of the retina as of the component of the eye. There really is a selective absorption of

Other People's "Union Jack"

SOME THINGS WE SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FLAGS.

The man claims to know all about flags will have to look to his laurels, for of late, mainly on account of the provisions of various peace treaties, there have been numerous additions to such emblems.

Some of the new flags are interesting innovations. One, seen for the first time last year, is flown from Westminster Abbey, and represents the Banner of the Abbey Church of Westminster. This flag is intended to inaugurate a new order. It is hoped that all cathedrals that have official coats of arms will grace their towers with their own distinct emblems, and reserve the Union Jack or the Red Cross of St. George for the King's Birthday and other days of special importance.

This is in accordance with flag law, under which any person or body with a coat of arms is at liberty to use it on a flag that can be flown on his or its house. When the Duke of Norfolk is in residence at Arundel Castle, Sussex, his family flag may often be seen flying from the staff, and the same custom is observed at other stately homes.

Certain new national flags also depart from established usage. In general, the designers use only red, white, blue, yellow, and black, and strictly observe the laws of heraldry. If, for instance, you want to have yellow in a flag, you must, to be in order, have black also. The correct combination appears in the Belgian flag. But the new Belgian Royal Standard sets tradition and usage at defiance. It is purple, with a gold shield in the middle, surmounted by a crown.

Some of the new national flags, moreover, are distinctive without being indicative. They have been created in nearly as haphazard a fashion as were many house flags in our merchant service.

A good instance is the "duster" of a certain firm. Originally this was the Red Flag of St. George, which is identical with the flag of an admiral in the navy. One day the admiral commanding a certain station saw in the harbor one of the firm's ships flying its house flag, whereupon he sent a message to the captain, ordering him to remove it immediately. The skipper had to obey, but he was not defeated. Twenty minutes after the flag had been down, it was run up again, with a blue silk handkerchief sewn in the middle, and this was afterwards the house flag of the firm as long as it existed.

Well-known national flags were not created in this casual manner. When Napoleon made Italy a kingdom, he decided to have a flag which, while distinctive, should indicate, by its close resemblance to that of France, the source to which it owed existence. The result was the tricolor of green, white, and red. This flag, though suppressed on the downfall of Napoleon, was revived by the Italian Nationalists, in 1848, and, with the addition of the arms of Savoy, accepted by the King of Sardinia as the ensign of New Italy.

Perhaps the most elaborate, and therefore most perplexing, national flag is that of Tibet, because, apart from the main design, which is curiously complex, the spaces in it are filled up with alternate triangles of red and blue.

The Canadian Government is considering the most suitable design for the Canadian national flag for use ashore. The Canadian flag now authorized is used by the Government-owned vessels and other vessels on the Canadian registry. In the former case the flag is the Blue ensign with the Canadian arms in the fly, while merchant vessels on the Canadian registry use a similar Red Ensign. Some years ago it was provided that the Red Ensign, with the Canadian arms in the fly, be flown over the office of the High Commissioner in London as well as over Canadian offices abroad, but the flag was never authorized.

A Generous Job

A Holyoke, Massachusetts, man in Worcester found that he had spent all his money, and began looking about for a chance to earn some. Seeing a group of men digging for the foundation of a new building, he asked the foreman if he could go to work. "Sure," said the foreman, "help yourself to a shovel." Picking up an idle shovel, the newcomer worked away for a couple of hours. Finally, when he paused for a rest, one of the men who was working beside him said: "I don't seem to know you—where do you live?" "I live in Holyoke," replied the newcomer.

"What are you doing here?" asked the other. "All of us Worcester men are giving a day's work free to help build the new Presbyterian church." Boston Globe.

radiation by different eyes. Hitherto there has been no physiological explanation of the visual power of nocturnal animals. This research is not extensive enough to permit dogmatic assertion, but it opens up extraordinarily interesting questions, states Dr. Russ. It is known that during the war certain Australian horses, wild and not artificially adapted, were selected by preference for night work. The extraordinary fitness of some persons to go about in dim light is apparent.

Transparent Steel

A new method of making sheets of metal of unprecedented thinness, invented by Dr. Karl Maelor of the Physical Technical Institute of Berlin, seems likely to prove of considerable importance, we read in Science Service's Daily Service News Bulletin (Washington). It says: "He has succeeded in producing sheets of steel so thin that they are as transparent as the clearest glass. The test plates used to determine the transparency of optical glass, and ruled with lines one twenty-five-hundredth of an inch apart, were photographed through such a metal sheet, and when enlarged to four hundred diameters the scale lines showed distinctly without any distortion. This absence of aberration proves that the structure of the film is perfectly even and equal in all directions. The metal sheets are so thin that atoms will pass through them without impediment. Alpha rays from radium, that consist of streams of the strip atoms of helium, and are completely blocked by a sheet of paper, are not perceptibly weakened in passing through such metal sheets. It is calculated from the specific gravity of the metal that in these sheets there are not more than thirty layers of atoms in thickness. Yet the sheet of metal is so strong that when fastened in a frame it may be bent out by blowing on it to a sixteenth of an inch without rupture. Dr. Mueller makes these sheets by depositing an extremely fine film of the metal on a smooth surface by means of the electric current and afterwards separating the film from the foundation on which it was fixed. Many applications have already been made by scientists and inventors to secure these transparent metal sheets for experimental purposes. They seem likely to serve as semi-permeable membranes for the separation of gases. They may greatly advance the progress of telephotography and television. They also seem likely to prove serviceable in metallurgical research, and in the making of galvanometers, radio receivers, and apparatus for measuring the action of the heart."  Str.—Since the horses have started rock from the crusher at the dock night and day, the South-west can compare to "Salisbury Plain" after heavy military traffic and boys knew what that meant. We have through mud over ankle deep several times a day to our different camps, and if a motor should pass—its cost or costume is practically as good as lost. Our Council, or Government, cannot afford a few cartloads of mud to make a side path, I would expect that they provide a pair of waders to every man, woman and child west of Long Bridge to the crusher. Immense Crowds at Majestic Theatre Balloon Scramble

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock the great delight of all—the balloon scramble—was held at the roof of the Majestic Theatre. The balloons were released from the eastern section of the city. The balloons contained a ten dollar bill to an admission ticket to the Majestic Theatre, and after the scramble, the kindness of the Management of the Theatre all the children entertained to a free moving picture show. The children completely entertained and were given a pointers on the Honey Contest, as well as secure votes. Children from sections of the City are entering contest, and there is bound to be an effort to secure the first prize. In a genuine Scotland Pony, the first is in store for the children Saturday afternoon when they see an amusing and instructive picture act of mistifying magic, which will be given in conjunction with the picture on Saturday afternoon. On Monday evening the lovers of this city, will have pleasure of hearing Mr. G. Hervey, in the cornet and piano selection. Mr. Perry will give the selection "Post and Peasant" which is considered rather intricate piano solo. Mr. Perry will be accompanied by Miss Grills at the piano. Another feature of the evening will be the appearance of Albert E. MacNutt, a member of "The Order of the Flag" and "The Order of the World." "When the World has Peace" and many other songs of the period, and "Radio Joe," "Over Radio," "Come, get me," and the popular fox-trot of this season, "A Prince," written by the present Prince of Wales, danced by him and the guests who depicted in the big formal dance held last year at Newport, Rhode Island. Mr. MacNutt will depict the baseball classic "The Union" in character, as written by him in "Liberty" Magazine, and will be accompanied by Mr. Perry at the piano. Mr. Perry has been Mr. MacNutt's arranger for a number of years and expects to do him for the best work on many of the lists above, and others too good to mention.

He will also continue post-graduate work in science.

Woman Gave Birth to Her 29th Child

GLADOLIN, Spain, Sept. 28.—(U.S. News.) Camille Lorenzo, has given birth to her 29th child—a son—age of 68. It is believed that this is a record in modern times, although the Bible tells that Sarah gave birth to Isaac when 90 years old. Only one woman in 2,300 gives birth after reaching 50 years of age, say physicians.

Miami's Madness

FLORIDA'S AMAZING LAND BOOM.
(By Theyre H. Weigall.)
Miami, Florida, Oct. 4.—Within the past six months Miami, until recently an unimportant little sea-coast resort of South-Eastern Florida, has suddenly become the centre of one of the most remarkable land booms in all history. The popularity of Miami as a millionaires' holiday resort has given rise to wild optimism about the future of the place as a residential, farming and industrial area, and unscrupulous estate agents and "fat catchers" are feverishly engaged in selling not only land along the sea-front but swamps in the far interior.

Miami has seen, and is still seeing, more fantastic fortunes made in a night than ever came out of the Alaskan gold fields or the oil wells of Yellowstone Park. There is no gold in Florida, nor any oil worth mentioning. There is nothing, indeed, beyond a fertile soil and a delightful climate. Yet land in Miami—where only twenty-five years ago sixteen square miles had been bought for $200—is now selling at a fabulous price per square foot. Get-rich-quick salesmen are exploiting on a gigantic scale the curious fact that in America there are millions who will buy anything provided it be only advertised enough.

When or how it will end no one can say. Everything in Florida to-day is so artificial, so obscured by the flamboyant advertising of syndicates and company promoters, that it is impossible to judge calmly what may be the real meaning of the whole amazing situation. The probabilities would seem to be that even if Miami itself is not heading for a collapse the surrounding territories which have taken advantage of the boom are certainly doing so, and will as certainly carry with them into their swamps and deserts the millions of dollars that have been speculated on their "desirable home and industrial sites."

EASY MONEY.
To the student of human nature Miami to-day is one of the most extraordinary spectacles in the world. It is a mixture of Venice and Bedlam, with Bedlam strongly predominating. Hatless, coatless men—nobody wears coats in Miami—rush about the blazie streets, their arms full of papers, perspiration pouring from them as they strain to buy or sell some "speculation" that has just come their way. Everywhere there is dust, a thousand automatic rifles pour out their deafening musk, a thousand drills and hammers and winches add to the chorus. Everybody is real-estate mad. Towering office-buildings, almost entirely occupied by "realtors," are the scenes of indescribable enthusiasm and confusion. Everywhere there is hand-shaking, back-slapping and general "hooping."

Everybody drives a car; everybody drives, moreover, with a recklessness getting to shame the timid taxicab-drivers of Paris, and the clanging and hooting and grinding of brakes add yet another note to the mad volume

PAINS IN BACK AND SIDES

Ended by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fusilier, Sask.—"For two or three days every so often I would have such pains in my back and sides that I could not get on my feet. I could not even lie quietly in bed, and my head ached, too. I was this way about three years, but was worse after I was married. I was in a firm with not a better position than five miles from home. My next person to advise me was my sister-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham. I had heard about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I bought it. I took her advice and I have been thankful for it ever since. I feel like a new woman. I can go to my work and I can say it has helped me a lot and I am doing fine. I am glad to recommend the Vegetable Compound to others and you may publish my testimonial." Mrs. HELEN BALANOFF, Fusilier, Saskatchewan.

Often a slight trouble will cause a general upset of the system. Such symptoms as nervousness, painful times, irregularity, backache and headache indicate some form of female weakness. Women so bothered should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. This dependable medicine has helped thousands of women and it is reasonable to expect that it will help you. Try it today. Your druggist sells this medicine.

of sound that is never, by night or day, even for an instant stilled.

SWINDLING THE PUBLIC.

Every day one hears fresh stories of millions that have been made by lucky speculators who have bought land or swamp and "passed the buck" to the public. Admitting that most of these stories are grossly exaggerated, there is still no smoke without fire; and I personally can vouch for the man who made $75,000 in three days, not by speculating but simply by selling land on commission for one of the largest firms of brokers. A young friend of mine who has just left school has been spending his holiday at Palm Beach, and he tells me that without interfering with his holiday he has been making $100 a week ever since he has been there.

The commonest story is that of a rich man who invested $100,000 three months ago in an estate for which he has just refused an offer of $3,000,000. In the words of one of the advertisers in Miami-avenue, "What's the use of a lifetime of toil, anyway?" Considered purely as pleasure-resorts, Miami and Palm Beach are certainly almost idyllic. Wide, golden beaches sweep down to a crystal-clear blue sea that is always warm; behind them palm-groves and great sweeps of vivid green lawn stretch away towards brilliant white Spanish houses half hidden behind hibiscus and magnolia trees. Boulevards sixty feet wide with surfaces that almost put a billiard-table to shame lead on and on into the entrancing forests, with now and again a graceful concrete bridge, dazzlingly white, spanning a river or a canal, and always the endless procession of tall electric torches that at night-time make these country highways far more brilliant than Piccadilly.

"FACTORY SITES" IN THE SWAMPS
Every few miles along the coastline some vast fifteen-storey hotel rears its stately towers into the cloudless sky; and in the evenings—if you can afford it—you may dance in the roof-garden or stroll about on the moonlit golf links or bathe by searchlight in that incredible sea. And when you come in again you may order your cocktail or Cordon Rouge or what you will; for nobody worries about the Eighteenth Amendment in Miami, nor for the matter of that in the whole of Florida.

For the millionaire pleasure-seeker the forty miles between Miami and Palm Beach is an earthly paradise. But when one is told impressively of "factory sites" and "industrial centres" one begins to grow skeptical. Florida so far has no particular industries, and no harbours worth the name. Yet when one sees what has happened at Miami during the past few months, and hears rumours of the vast textile factories that are coming to Tampa and Jacksonville, and remembers the truth of that beautiful maxim that a fool is born every minute . . . well, is it any wonder that there are so many "realtors"?

New Steps, New Styles in Dancing

Usually the winter is full of rumours of new dances, and everyone is spending money on learning them. This year it hasn't been so, and you may take it for granted that you will dance anywhere without finding yourself consciously "out of it" if you have achieved the fox trot and the waltz. But these dances to-day are not in the least like those of even a year ago. The Blues, waning even from the small popularity they ever had, have influenced the fox trot in one direction and the American bands have influenced it in another. Consequently, you may find yourself demanding a fox trot to a measure reminiscent of the blues, although quicker, or racing through another to music played so quickly that you feel after a few moments as if you had been dancing the last one step of the evening!

And steps don't matter; the fewer the better, says a writer in the "Women's Pictorial."
"Style is everything, and here's a hint given to me by that famous dance teacher, Alec MacKenzie. Remember that nothing is so ugly as a dancer who throws her feet out sideways. What you need is to keep your feet close together, and Mr. MacKenzie says that to get a good style you need, as far as possible, to walk always with your feet in a straight without turning our your toes at all, and getting a clear swing from the hips, to keep your head up, your chest out, and hot, on any account, to hang on to your partner. If he's not tremendously tall, try to get your fingers, which should be closed, just under his coat collar in the middle of his spine, and then keep your arm clear of his shoulder. Don't make it necessary for him to hold you tightly to prevent you from running away from him altogether. If your chest just touches you should be able to dance almost as one without any further contact than that. If you have an extra tall partner you must be content with laying a hand on the upper part of his arm.

"After the fox-trot the waltz! People are going to waltz more than ever, and this is what Mr. Philip Richardson, of the "Dancing Times"—who is, perhaps, the keenest critic of modern dancing—told me about the waltz.
"The chief fault of the waltzing of the moment is due rather to the band

(Boston News Bureau, Sept. 26th.)
SOUTHERN PACIFIC'S AUGUST. All Features Excepting Passenger Earnings Encouraging.
N.Y.—Southern Pacific's August earnings statement is the most encouraging in many months, since it shows reversal from the downward trend of gross in first half-year and from the decline in net in July. Excepting June, gross was the largest since last October, and net was 20% larger than in any month since last October.
The only unencouraging feature of the month's display was passenger receipts, which resumed the weak tendency exhibited for 15 consecutive months prior to last June when the first increase was scored since February, 1924. Last month, passenger receipts of $5,167,000 were off $200,000 or 4%, against a decline of only $12,000 in July and an increase of $48,000 in June. In the first eight months passenger receipts were 7% below last year.
The backbone of the business, freight revenues, showed the greatest increase for any month except June since January, 1924. August freight revenues of $18,217,000 were $715,000 or 4% over last year and converted a decrease in freight revenues of $190,000 for seven months into a $521,000 increase at end of eight months.
Operating Ratio Broke 70%.
Ratio of operating to revenues was below 70% or the first time since last October's post-war record low of 4.8%. Total expenses of $17,738,000 were 69.6% of $25,469,000 gross, against 75.7% in July and 72.0% in June. For eight months operating ratio was 77.5%.
While revenues for the month were $314,000 above last year, expenses were $269,000 higher. Maintenance expenses were 23.0% of gross, against 27.7% a year ago, and transportation expenses took 35.0%, against 37.0% a year ago. Operating ratio a year ago was 71.5%.
Taxes have resumed their normal proportion to gross. The sharp increase in June was for one month only, and in both July and August taxes have been slightly below last year. For August the reduction was $172,785. As in July equipment rentals were greater than a year ago, but August yielded a $92,922 greater credit balance from joint facility rentals.
August net of $5,531,000 was the largest of any August since Federal control, and brings earnings for 12 months ended Aug. 31 to 9% on $344,380,000 stock. Net for eight months, on a seasonal basis shows earnings at annual rate of 9.1%, against actual earnings of 10.2% in 1924.

Poisoned Chocolates
The Rotherham, Yorkshire, police are investigating a case of sending poisoned chocolates through the post. The parcel, which was posted at Warwick, was received by a woman who, noticing that the sweets seemed to have been tampered with, had them analysed. They were found to contain salts of lemon.

The Unterrified Bangs
In these "evolutionary" times it is interesting to quote a few lines by John Kendrick Bangs. They are: "Who or say forebears may have been, Aps! Insider, bird, fish, fowl, or fin, I am myself, and, rain or shine, intend to fill the place that's mine. Say what you will, prove what you can About the origin of man— No line of monkey ancestry Can make a monkey out of me."

Edith Cavell Lodge Anniversary

At Victoria Hall on Tuesday, Oct. 6th, Edith Cavell Lodge celebrated the 5th birthday anniversary with fitting ceremony. Worthy Mistress Mrs. M. Jeans occupied the chair and carried out her duties to the satisfaction of all present. An address which was listened to with closest attention was delivered by Sir Richard Squires and was followed by Mrs. Julia Salter Earle, who congratulated the officers and members of the Lodge on the excellence of their work. We were kindly assisted in our entertainment by the following:—Mr. Walker, Mr. Redman, Miss M. Harrington, Miss Hayse, Miss Mary Murphy, Miss Beatrice Hooley, Mr. Bugden. A vote of thanks moved by Mr. Wiseman of Davidson Lodge was seconded by Mr. Hooley of Edith Cavell Lodge, after which tea was served. The celebrations concluded with the National Anthem.
SADIE JEANS,
Rec. Secretary.

Old Mr. Carter Helped by Simple Mixture

"After taking Adlerika I feel better than for years. At my age (60) it is ideal—so different from other medicines." (Signed) W. W. Carter. Adlerika is a simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., which removes GAS in ten minutes and often brings surprising relief to the stomach. Stops that full, bloated feeling. Brings out old waste-matter you never thought was in your system. Excellent for chronic constipation. Sold by all leading Druggists.

At the Nickel

"THE FAST SET."
Do authors become so involved in their world of fiction that they fail to keep in touch with the real persons about them? Do they pour all their romance into book form and have none left for their own wives?
In "The Fast Set," William de Mille's latest Paramount picture, which opens to-night at the Nickel, Elliott Dexter appears in a role which gives support to the contention that to an author a manuscript is more real than life itself.

In an opening scene Dexter is shown dusting cigar ashes from his manuscript with his wife's silk scarf. It symbolizes his blindness for the charms of his wife, the role played with fine touches by Betty Compson. When a philanthropist playfully touches the scarf, however, the author becomes indignant. The presence of "the great lover," a role in which Adolphe Menjou is ideally cast, arouses the novelist out of his work of make-believe into the realm of actualities.
The philanthropist's attentions anger the novelist, and he finally plays a trump card to win back the woman he loves; he invites a social outcast to sit with his wife and friends at a dinner party.
In "The Fast Set" the producer-director and the scenarist have introduced many delightful touches similar to the use of the scarf. The script of the screen play is considered one of the finest of its kind—telling in deft pictorial form a dramatic story which relied upon brilliant dialogue in its stage form.

Gives Full Play to Suspicions in Will UNHAPPIEST MAN IN THE WORLD WAS APPARENTLY A RICH ENGLISHMAN.
The unhappiest man in the world was apparently a rich Englishman who died recently. Not many poor men would have been willing to change places with him if they could have read the will which he wrote to dispose of his property. This is the document which proves that it takes more than wealth to bring happiness:
"To my wife I leave her admirers and the knowledge that I wasn't the fool she thought I was. To my son I leave the pleasure of earning his living. For thirty years he thought the pleasure was mine. He was mistaken. To my daughter I leave $50,000. She will need it. The only good piece of business her husband ever did was to marry her. To my valet I leave the clothes he has been stealing from me regularly during the past 10 years. To my chauffeur I leave my car. He's almost ruined them and I want him to finish the job. To my partner I leave the suggestion that he take some other clever man in with him at once if he expects to do business."

A Juvenile Archangel

Wanted Boy—High school graduate to work in general merchandise store in small interior town and learn to be a shoemaker. One who can help milk the cow and play in the band preferred. Must be youth of clean habits; cigarette smokers, shanks and loafers, need not apply. Boy who understands Diesel gas engine and Fordson tractor will be given preference. Users of intoxicating liquors and profane language will not be considered. Boy who gets this job must not be too proud and aristocratic to mingle with the live stock and chickens and help out in the kitchen now and then. Tenor singer who is a good strike-out baseball pitcher will find this an ideal situation. Must be early riser and not afraid of work. You will work in a very healthful climate with beautiful surroundings, fine fishing, woodlands abound in wild game and flowers. Horse to ride Sunday afternoons. Good chance to learn a trade and the principles of business and see the country. Must be good, etc.

INSTALL A CALORIC PIPELESS FURNACE

IN YOUR HOME.

The CALORIC System of Heating conforms to all practical and scientific standards of the present day and meets the requirements of the average builder better than any other type of heating plant. It saves fuel and labour, and represents the greatest progress that has been made in the science of heating and ventilating.

The CALORIC System saves from 1-3 to 1/4 the fuel. CALORIC castings are correctly designed and have a much larger radiating surface than other types of furnaces. Instead of a cellar filled with large heat-wasting pipes, that run in all directions, you have a clean, cool and pipeless cellar.

We have two of these furnaces now in stock which we will be pleased to demonstrate, and we are prepared to make a very liberal offer to anyone wishing to purchase.

A Lucky Cinder in the Eye

Fifteen years ago a tiny cinder flew into the eye of a man on a train, writes Arthur Williams, vice-president of the New York Edison Company, in a recent press bulletin (New York). He happened to be an executive, an engineer and an inventor. What happened to the cinder in this man's eye has happened to cinders in millions of other cases—it was washed out by the natural watering of the eye. Immediately the thought occurred: "If nature uses a stream of tear-drops to wash a cinder out of an eye, why not use a stream of water to wash the cinders out of the fue-gases of power plants?" This little incident and the expenditure of several million dollars led, we are told, to the development of a device—remarkable for its simplicity as well as for its efficiency—which washes every bit of cinder and dust out of gases arising from the great fires under the Edison boilers in Manhattan. We read: "To grasp the full significance of this, one must know that it takes from 4,000 to 6,000 tons of coal a day to generate the electrical energy needed for light, heat, and power in Manhattan and the Bronx. Before the perfection of this device as much as two per cent. of the coal burned in the generating plants escaped as cinders and dust from the smokestacks. This means that in New York City a full hundred tons of cinders and dust would be sent up into the air each day were it not for the gas-washing and cinder catching device inspired by the tiny cinder that flew into that eye. Let me describe the device briefly.

"Back of each row of boilers in each of the Edison generating stations is a long horizontal tank half filled with water. Along the full length of this tank, extending from the top to within a few inches of the water-level, is a sheet of steel called a baffle plate. As the gases and cinders leave the furnaces they are forced by strong draft into the tank. The cinders and any other solids carried by the gases hit the baffle plate and fall into the water at the bottom of the tank; at the same time the gases which enter the tank horizontally are deflected downward by the baffle plate, are forced to pass along the surface of the water at the bottom of the tank, and then upward into the smokestacks.

"Once every twenty-four hours, the cinders and dust accumulation at the bottom of the tanks are drawn off into scoops and hauled away with the ashes from the fires under the boilers. This large tonnage of cinders and dust, which would have been sent up into the air were it not for this cinder-catching device, not only does not get into the atmosphere of New York but—like all Edison coal and ashes—is even eliminated from our city life without the necessity of being hauled through the streets.

"The man who invented this device is Thomas E. Murray, senior Vice-President of the New York Edison Co. Engineers and technical men from nearly every country in the world have taken occasion while visiting New York to examine this ingenious and effective fue-gas washing equipment.

"Incidentally, the company has created for one man a job which is undoubtedly the only one of its kind in the world." On the roof of the new Edison service building at Forty-first Street and First Avenue has been built a small observation tower at a height equivalent to the fifteenth floor of an office building. In this tower there is stationed the official fue-gas observer of the Edison Company, whose duty it is from morning to night to study the color and the volume of the gases coming from the stacks above the Water-side Stations directly across the street. The only equipment in the gas-observer's room is a chair and desk, on which are mounted eight little electrical switches, one for each stack at Water-side. These switches operate red signal lights in the boiler-rooms of the generating station. Although it is not commonly known, the color and density of the gas emitted from a smokestack is one of the best indications of the efficiency with which the boilers below are being operated. To the highly trained technical combustion expert every little change in the color or volume of gas has a meaning of its own.

"The moment the fue-gas observer notices any undesirable change he closes the switch bearing a number corresponding to the number of the stack involved. Instantaneously, a red light bearing the same number flashes in the boiler-room; the engineer in charge quickly inspects his battery of boilers, and within a minute or two the mixture of air and coal has been restored to its proper proportions, and perfect combustion of the fuel is again secured."

Quebec Birth Shows Increase

FIGURES FOR 1924 TOTAL $4,815—MARRIAGES AND DEATHS ALSO GAIN.

QUEBEC, Sept. 22.—Based on figures from a report on births, marriages and deaths in the Province of Quebec in 1924, issued this morning by Col. G. E. Marquis, Chief Provincial Statistician, there was a slight increase in the number of deaths.

The bulletin is as follows:—The number of births registered in 1924, is 84,815, of which 78,128 are Catholics and 6,687 Protestants and other denominations.

During the past 11 years, the number of births has not been below 80,000, but the figures have varied at different times as is shown by the following table:—1922, 85,377; 1923, 83,579; 1924, 84,815.

The number of marriages during 1924 is 17,696, of which 14,829 are Catholics and 2,868 Protestants and others.

The following figures cover the past three years:—1922, 16,609; 1923, 17,361; 1924, 17,696.

The number of deaths registered in 1924 is 36,850, of which 33,797 are Catholics and 3,053 Protestants and others. This is an increase.

Taking as a basis the population, as estimated by municipal statistics, at 2,673,993, the birth rate, per 1,000 inhabitants, is 31.7; marriages 6.6, and that of deaths 13.7.

The natural increase is shown to be 48,135 or a proportion of 18.0 per 1,000 population.

Why the Sea is Blue

Holiday-makers are sometimes disappointed to find that the sea is not colored that beautiful azure blue which we love. A glass of sea-water is perfectly transparent and colorless, yet the ocean is often colored any shade from yellow to purple.

It is the salt in the sea-water which causes the blue color, for all the innumerable small particles of salt in the water filter the sun's rays and reflect the blue light. Seas which contain a large proportion of salt are colored the deepest blue. The Mediterranean, for example, which is rich in salt, is perhaps the deepest blue known. And the Pacific Ocean is dark enough to be called indigo.

Near the shore, the sea often changes its color to green. A stretch of white sand below shallow water will cause it to appear water-grey, or light green, whilst a deep yellow-colored sand, lashed with the blue of the water, produces a darker green. In the Bay of Loango the water appears to be deep red, which is on account of the red bottom.

Another cause of watercolors is the large numbers of minute organisms always present. In some of the salt lakes of Tibet, and in the South of France, a certain red organism gives to the water a vivid crimson hue. When a rope is thrown over the side of a boat, it is sometimes found that the water is phosphorescent. The drops of water hang to the rope like a blazing necklace of pearls.

At one "arm of the sea" in Great Britain, practically any color of the rainbow can be seen, from a glowing crimson to a glittering gold. This is due chiefly to sunlight effects. If anyone doubts this, they should go to the Bristol Channel, where Turner, the great painter, produced some of the most wonderful seascapes the world has seen.

An Irish Blessing

the best

Subsidizing marriage among bachelors seems the purpose of a new ruling of the State Civil Service, which salaries of future clerical grades. The plan is rather shrewdly Dublin Irish Statistician that has always been leader of the Irish. It will be recalled that a new project, unmarriage Free State Civil Service the same annual pay as a entry, rising to £2,000 and then by annual increments to £150. As the men unmarried at the age of 21 will receive an average of £10 up to £200, at a lump sum payment equivalent to twenty years' pay. In addition a bonus up to £600 will be paid to each of the sixteen years. As the Minister Gazette has said, "The cost of living will be paid." Women receive after not less than six months may receive a gratuity than one month's payments for each year of a maximum of three years. A gratuity is regarded as to marriage, and when between two civil servants the man's bonus and gratuity will amount to "sum."

The really serious of this innovation, according to Statesman, is that it will be a boon to other employees of the State is supposed to be but what would be the principle were general? It asks this weekly, which own question as follows: "Inevitably in the industrial system the would be squeezed out unmarried man would be a great deal of help to people the effect would be to chances of marriage. The changed moral of the next service department without thinking of it. His principles, which should correspond to the corollary that the man he needs to support more than an average other relative. He should remain a celibate he shed for this, and he

An Irish Blow to the Married Man

Subordinating marriage and penalizing bachelors seem to be the chief purposes of a new ruling of the Irish Free State Civil Service with regard to the salaries of future members of its clerical grades. The danger in this plan is rather sharply noted by the Dublin Irish Statesman, a weekly that has always been a staunch defender of the Irish Free State. It will be recalled that, according to the new project, unmarried men in the State Civil Service will receive the same annual pay as women, £80 in 1925, rising to £70 at eighteen, and then by annual increases of £5 to £150. As the press informs us, men unmarried after the age of twenty will receive annual increases of £10 up to £200, and will receive a lump sum payment on marriage equivalent to twelve months' back pay. In addition, it appears, allowances up to £50 will be payable in respect of each dependent child up to sixteen years. As the London West-End Gazette has pointed out: "The cost of living bonus will also be paid. Women retiring on marriage, after not less than six years' service, will receive a gratuity of not less than one month's pensionable emoluments for each year of service, up to a maximum of twelve months. The gratuity is regarded as an inducement to marriage and when marriage between two civil servants takes place, the man's bonus and the woman's gratuity will amount to handsome sums."

perform no better service for the State or society, paid at a higher rate. We are not really afraid that industrial employers will copy the Civil Service, simply because they would not dare to introduce any such principle. Labor knows only too well what would be the result if the unmarried bricklayer, carpenter, mason, agricultural laborer or railway man could be had at a lower rate than the married. It would strike at the first attempt to make such distinctions, and it would be quite right, for it would find the married man as more expensive being shovelled out of employment. "No married need apply" would become the unwritten law. We hope Deputies will question the innovation when the Dail meets. If distinctions have to be made between the married and unmarried, between those who have children and a wife to support and those who have none, and we do not say they should not be made, the distinctions and allowances should be made by the taxing authority, not by the employer. The country should not stand for a moment the application of a principle by the State to its employees which, if applied generally, would drive the married man out of the labor market, and what the effect of that finally would be on the morals of the country we leave it to the stupid wits of the highly moral persons who devised the new Civil Service scheme to imagine."

A Lawyer in Church

A young criminal lawyer was always full of quips. A few years ago I attended the funeral of a millionaire financier—one of those "high financiers" whose low methods he loved to turn the light on. I arrived at the funeral a little late and took a seat beside him, and whispered, "How far has the service gone?" He nodded toward the clergyman in the pulpit, whispered back tersely, "Just opened for the defense."—Everybody's Magazine.

Presence of Mind

A few minutes after an alarm of fire was given in a hotel, one of the guests joined the group that were watching the fire, and chaffed them on their apparent excitement. "There was nothing to be excited about," he said. "I took my time about dressing, lighted a cigarette, didn't like the knot in my necktie, so tied it over again—that's how cool I was." "Fine," one of his friends remarked, "but why didn't you put on your trousers?"—Everybody's Magazine.

Dogfish Hinder Operations

A report to the Board of Trade states the fishery between Long Point and South Head of Bay Bulls is very poor, the total catch being only 447 quintals, with 120 for last week. Dogfish are plentiful and hindering operations. Sixty-five dories and skiffs are said to be in the bay.

A Short Crust

Beat up 4 to 6 eggs with 1/2 gill of vinegar, or cream, and pour this gently over the contents of the dish. Soak, simply, and wash the fish, cut them open and remove the bones. Lay the fish out flat and sprinkle the inside of each with salt, cayenne pepper and chopped parsley. Grease a pie-dish (they use butter in Cornwall),

Film of Angry Bears

Pictures of enraged Polar bears have been obtained by the cinematograph operator attached to Captain Bernier's Arctic expedition, which has just returned to Canada. Numbers of ravenous bears approached the ship seeking fresh meat. The crew opened fire at fifty yards, wounding several bears, which became very furious. The pictures are said to be the most realistic and terrifying photographs of savage animals yet produced.

Little Jack Rabbit
by David Cory

The Old Red Rooster strutted along, Singing his cock-a-doodle-son. His feather coat all shiny red And a big red comb upon his head. By and by, after a while, and more than a mile, he came to Chickentown, a pretty little village far from the Leticemore Railroad. Twice a day the Billygoat Stagecoach rattled back and forth from Bannysbridge, taking passengers from the railway station to the little grocery store which served as a depot in Chickentown. "Hello!" shouted Mr. Shanghai, a big rooster who was sitting on an empty drygoods box in front of the grocery store, "Did Mr. Lucky Lething-foot give you a holiday?" "He certainly did, or I wouldn't be here," answered the Old Red Rooster. "Paid me part of my wages, too, Cock-a-doodle-doodle!" "Uncle Lucky's the kindest old gentleman rabbit in all the world," said Mr. Shanghai. "Have you any business in Chickentown?" "Going to help my old aunty move into her new bungalow," replied the Old Red Rooster. "I'll rest a bit before I go on," and down he sat beside Mr. Shanghai, sticking the spur on his right leg into the side of the wooden box to balance himself. Just then Peter Pig in his donkey cart drove by. Goodness me, his old cart was piled high with furniture. The next moment the Old Red Rooster spied his old aunty hen seated on the top of a bureau. She was looking into the mirror, arranging her feather curls, and so didn't see the two old roosters side by side on the drygoods box. "Hold on," shouted the Old Red Rooster. "Hello, Aunty." "What?" grunted Peter Pig, and in obedience to his master's command, the donkey stopped short, just like that, almost upsetting Miss Plymouth Rock, the old lady hen. "Mercy me!" she gasped, turning about to see what was the matter. "Oh, it's you," she added, as the Old Red Rooster strutted over to the cart. "That brings you here?" "Thought maybe you'd like me to help you move," he answered, with a flap of his wings and a wiggle waggle of his long tail feathers. "You're too late for that, but you can help set the furniture in my new bungalow," answered his old aunt. With a hop-tee-edy and a flutter of wings, the Old Red Rooster sat down beside her. Then turning to Peter Pig, he crowed:

"Cock-a-doodle-do. Drive on a mile or two. At Henville you must surely stop. If you don't know the way, just ask the Cop."

Down he sat beside Mr. Shanghai. "Gid-ap!" shouted Peter Pig, and off went the donkey, flapping his long ears in much the same manner that the Old Red Rooster clapped his wings. "Crack, crack!" went the old wheels, and bumpety bump! joggled the cart. Wonder it didn't shake the mirror from its frame and the bonnet of Aunty Hen's feathered head! And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Sark's Ban on Cars

FATE OF THE FIRST TO ENTER.
There is a part of the British Empire, not 100 miles from the south coast of England, where motor-cars are practically unknown and certainly not wanted. It is Sark, the smallest of the Channel Islands, and the authorities have made a law forbidding any motor-car to run over their roads. The people of the island had never seen a motor-car until last May, when Dr. P. Lake Hope, the newly appointed medical officer of the island, innocently enough shipped his car from England. Dr. Hope, however, was not allowed to run the car over the roads, and when his daughter defied the law by driving it the four and a half minutes' journey from the little harbour up to their house she was severely admonished and fined £2, and warned that the next time the car would be confiscated and a fine of £10 imposed. The medical officer has been compelled to store his car and use the engine to drive a dynamo for electric lighting and for charging accumulators for electrical treatment for patients.

CLEVERNESS AND SINCERITY.
One was clever, and one sincere,
One was handsome and one was plain,
One drew laughter and left a tear,
The other winced at another's pain.
And he seemed dull when the clever spoke,
And he seemed slow when the wit began,
For never he sharpened a fibe or joke
To wound the soul of his fellow man.
For he could feel, as it were his own,
The sting of envy and malice keen,
And he knew, ere ever the barb was thrown,
The cruel hurt such a hit would mean.
Now the clever man had a greater fame,
For laughter pleases the care free throng,
But he who toiled with a humble name
Had a truer knowledge of right and wrong.
We laugh at the jibes, be they foul or fair,
We smile when a nimble mind is near,
But of cleverness must we all beware,
So we give our love to the one sincere.

Majestic Theatre
Scene of Unparalleled Excitement

"A LOST LADY," FIRST CLASS FEATURE.

The Majestic Theatre was the scene of much excitement yesterday afternoon and from all accounts, the Pony Contest promises to be one of the most popular events pulled off in the city for some time. The balloon event attracted thousands of children to the vicinity of the Majestic Theatre, yesterday afternoon, and much enthusiasm was evinced by the children and others in the combat for the much prize balloons, one of which contained a $10 cheque and amongst the others were fifty $1 bills. After the balloons had been released and captured, the children thronged into the Theatre and, ere the show started, fully two thousand had filled the spacious auditorium to capacity. Special pictures were screened for the children and, needless to say, were thoroughly enjoyed. The Majestic are making a special point to cater to the children in the Wednesday and Saturday afternoon matinees.

Last night "A Lost Lady" won the approval of Majestic patrons. It is one of those first class features in which Irene Rich plays her foremost part. She is assisted by George Fawcett, John Roche, June Marlowe, Matt Moore and other noted stars. It is a strong, appealing story—a melodrama that wins the interest of the fans from the very beginning to the last reel. "A Lost Lady," is one of those stories which is possible in everyday life, and certainly starred Irene Rich to the best of her ability. The many who saw it last night claim it to be one of the best pictures exhibited for some time. It will be repeated to-night for the last time, and those who failed to see it last night should make it a point to witness it to-night.

Partridge Cookery

Like all game birds, partridges when young should be plainly roasted, garnished with watercress, and served with brown gravy, browned crumbs, bread sauce (if desired), and a green or an apple and celery salad. Old birds, however, may be converted into most desirable dishes, such as:

Partridge Hot-Pot—Two partridges, 2 to 3 sheep's kidneys, 1 onion, 1 gill of stock, salt, pepper, 1 dozen oysters, 6oz. of bacon, 1oz of butter, 1lb. of potatoes, parsley.
Pluck, draw, and clean the birds and cut into neat joints. Skin and slice the kidneys. Peel and chop the onion and slice the potatoes thinly. Grease a casserole with the butter. Place a layer of bacon at the bottom, then put in layers of partridge, onion, kidneys, bearded oysters, and seasoning. Pour in the stock. Put more bacon on the top and cover all with the potatoes. Melt the remainder of the butter and pour it over the potatoes. Cover with greased paper and bake in a moderate oven for about two hours. Remove the paper. Sprinkle chopped parsley over the potatoes, and serve in the dish in which it was cooked.

Partridge Mousse—Two partridges, ½ gill of brown sauce, 2 eggs, pinch of nutmeg, pepper, 1oz. of butter, 3oz. of ham, ½ gill of cream, 1 tablespoonful of mushroom ketchup, salt, 2 gills of tomato sauce.

Remove the meat from the uncooked partridge and skin. Put the meat through a mincer with the ham. Pound it in a mortar with the butter. Add the eggs one by one, and the brown sauce. Rub through a wire sieve. Add the mushroom ketchup and lightly. Season well. Put the mixture into greased moulds. Cover with greased paper and steam for about 1 hour. Turn on to a hot dish and coat with tomato sauce.

New Rights for Mothers

CONSENT TO MARRIAGE NEEDED
(By Arthur S. May.)
The equalization of the sexes has now brought about a considerable change in the law relating to the marriage of a minor.
Since the passing of Lord Hale's Act in 1753, such a marriage has required the consent of the father only, so long as he lived. It was a right of which none could deprive him, however unfit he might be to exercise it.
After October 1, when the new Guardianship of Infants Act came into operation, the mother's consent, as well as the father's will be required, so long as husband and wife are living together. If father and mother fail to agree, recourse may be had to court of law—High Court county court, or court of summary jurisdiction, at their option. The child can perhaps appeal, too, to hope to wear out obdurate parents by taking them to one court after another.
The Act directs that when one of the parents cannot be asked to consent owing to "absence, inaccessibility, or some disability," the consent of the other parent being sufficient. Where the sole person having the right to give consent is the father, and he is similarly inaccessible consent may be dispensed with altogether, or one of the courts mentioned may be invited to consent instead.
This is a useful provision, for when the father has vanished or become mad the only practical way out of the difficulty hitherto has been to put the child on Roman Catholics and others whose scruples made them object to a ceremony according to the rites of the Church of England. And if it happened that the marriage could not stand over for the necessary three weeks—for instance when one of the parties was going abroad—it could not take place at all.
Under the new Act the right of consent is lost in various ways. If the parents are divorced or separated by agreement it goes with the custody of the child. If one deserts the other only the one who is deserving will have it. If both parents are deprived by a court of the custody the right will go to the person to whom the custody is committed by the order.
Illegitimate minors have not in recent years required any consent to their marriages, as they have no lawful parents. They must henceforth obtain the consent of their mother. It would seem that if a wife deserts her husband and takes her child with her it will not be she but her husband who will have the right to consent when the child comes to be married. The Act is silent as to what is to happen where the parents have been divorced without any order for custody being made.
Whenever the marriage of a minor is to take place otherwise than by banns the written consents of the persons named in the Act must be procured. In the case of a marriage in church after banns, which is the way most people marry, it will not be necessary, and unless one of such persons express their dissent to the clergyman before the ceremony is performed it will go through as heretofore.

Remember October 17th is the day of the Halifax Road Race Winners in the Halifax-Manthorpe Sweep, which is based on this race, will share $6,450.00—will your name be amongst them? Westminster Gazette Comment

ON RESIGNATION OF SIR HENRY GRAY, FROM MCGILL.
LONDON, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press)—The Westminster Gazette, commenting on the resignation of Sir Henry Gray, K.B.E., from the position of Surgeon Chief of the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, as a result of differences between him and Sir Arthur Currie, Principal of McGill University, thinks there is something wrong with a system which results in a call for the retirement of so eminent a surgeon as Sir Henry Gray.
"No body of men should find difficulty in assimilating and working with a man of admitted distinction," the Gazette says, "and it comes as a shock that one heard of this incident in connection with McGill University, which stands among the universities of the Dominion, perhaps even among the universities outside of Europe, for its progressive character."
The Gazette expresses the hope that for the good name of McGill University the full facts of the case, which made known, will weaken the had impression made by Sir Henry Gray's resignation.

Mothers

AGE NEEDED (May.)
 The sexes have considerable differences in their mental development. Lord Hardwicke's marriage settlement of the 18th century provided that a woman could be divorced by her husband when she was found to be incapable of performing her marital duties. This was a very early recognition of the fact that a woman's mental development is often slower than that of a man's. In the case of a woman who is found to be incapable of performing her marital duties, the husband is entitled to a divorce. This is a very important point for mothers to remember, as it affects the legal rights of their children. Man-Made Static

The following list of causes of radio-interference, with advice or suggestions for their elimination, has been compiled by the Radio Committee of the National Electrical Light Association. Our quotations are from Radio Retailing (New York). The Committee places direct-current arc-light circuits at the head of its list, and has this to say of them:
 The direct-current arc-type street lights are frequently the cause of disturbance to radio listeners. The most likely causes of interference from arc-lights are grounds, loose connections and lamp-jumping. The first two rarely occur, and are easily found and fixed. Lamp-jumping is usually due to one of the following three causes, and can be easily repaired: 1. Broken, chipped or loose flexible globes. 2. Broken or loose flexible-connection-strip from upper electrode to upper electrode box. 3. Broken flexible connection cable to movable clutch-rod.
 Other items are specified as follows:
Street Lights Using Rectified Alternating Current—Mercury-vapor tubes for rectifying alternating current for street-lighting system sometimes cause radio interference. The vacuum in these tubes changes occasionally, and boiling in water is done to restore the vacuum to the proper point. When these tubes are properly repaired, static disturbances are reduced to a minimum.
Incandescent Street-Lighting Systems—In some cases the disturbance from these systems is audible several hundred feet, caused by static leakage across the porcelain base in the lamp itself. Replacement of the defective sockets with new ones eliminates the trouble.
Elevator Controls—Elevator motors and controls are the source of disturbance frequently difficult to remedy. Most of the disturbance originates in the contact in the elevator shaft, as the operator of the car moves the control-handle back and forth. Sparking of the motor and control equipment also cause trouble.
Thermostats—Thermostats are now used to control dozens of different forms of devices, ranging from large industrial undertakings to the furnace in the home. Thermostats sometimes cause disturbances, depending upon the size of the controls and the amount of current they are handling. Condensers and radio-frequency chokes coils properly placed will eliminate these disturbances.
Heating Pads—The make-and-break contact thermostat in some of these pads has caused trouble, which can be remedied by proper attention to the design of the equipment.
Small Motors in the Home—Caused by sparking of the commutator. The cleaning of these commutators, and installing of new brushes from time to time will reduce the disturbance to a minimum.
Small Motors in Industry—Small motors using direct-current are frequently sources of disturbance, covering limited areas, and usually confined to the place in which they are installed. Dirty and worn commutators and sparking brushes cause most of the disturbance. Connect a condenser across the motor leads, with the grid-point grounded.
Slip-Ring Alternating Current Motors—When these are subject to heavy load, and also when pitting and corrosion of the slip-ring occur, causing sparking, radio disturbance is likely to occur. Proper repair and attention to the condition of the motor will eliminate much of this disturbance.
Battery-Charging Devices—Vibrating, mercury-vapor, vacuum tubes and other forms of battery-charging devices will interfere with radio reception for several hundred feet. Much of the trouble can be eliminated by the judicious use of condensers and chokes.

The Welcome-Home

THE PRINCE TO MAKE A SHORT TOUR OF LONDON.

Plans are being formulated for the reception to be accorded the Prince of Wales on his return from his tour on October 18.
 It is understood that the reception will be similar to that accorded his Royal Highness on his return from Australasia. Members of the Royal Family will be at Portsmouth to meet the Repulse, while the King and Queen will await the Prince's arrival at Victoria. Members of the Government will also be in waiting at the station and before the Prince goes to Buckingham Palace and on to York House he will make a short tour of London to satisfy the desire of the hundreds of thousands of people who will wish to be among the first to welcome him home.
 After his return the City of London will, it is expected, invite the Prince to accept a royal address.

Playing Both Ends Against the Middle

One of the witnesses at a royal commission appointed to inquire into a case of alleged bribery in an election, stated that he had received $25 to vote Conservative, and in cross-examination it was elicited that he had also received $25 to vote Liberal.
 Mr. Justice Matthew, in amazement, repeated:
 "You say you received $25 to vote Conservative?"
 "Yes, my lord."
 "And you also received $25 to vote Liberal?"
 "Yes, my lord."
 "And for whom did you vote at the time?" asked the astonished judge, throwing himself back in the chair.
 And the witness, with injured dignity in every line of his face, answered with great earnestness:
 "I voted, my lord, according to my conscience."—Vancouver Province.

In Moscow Pay

£4,000 EACH TO 40 MEN TO MAKE TROUBLE IN ENGLAND.
 Captain S. R. Streetfield, prospective Unionist candidate for the Durham division, repeated at Durham the statement which he made recently that a list existed showing that certain extremists were receiving salaries and other money from Moscow to create trouble in this country.
 "Thirty or forty of these extremists during the last few years," he said, "received in bonuses £4,000 each from Moscow."
 "Male Communists of suitable age are instructed to take every opportunity of joining the Territorial Force, so that they may have ready access to rifles and ammunition. All these things point the same way—to armed revolution."

Eve's Appetite

"One day," said a story-teller, "at the close of a hot day, Adam was returning with his box on his shoulder from a hard day's labor to his humble cottage. Maybe it was a cave. That don't matter; for it was a humble abode. Young Cain was running ahead, boylike, throwing rocks at the birds. Suddenly they came upon a beautiful garden.
 "O father," said Cain, "look at that beautiful garden. I wish we could live there."
 "We did live in that garden," said

Mr. Paul H. Vogel, a 30-year-old professional cyclist belonging to Gera, Saxony, has arrived in London to start on the final stage of a bicycle race round the world.

Two other competitors are left in the contest, an Englishman, named Morrison, of Liverpool, and an American, named Davidson, of Philadelphia. The competitors set out from Hamburg on February 23 last and have to make the circuit of the globe in 10 months with a minimum of 28,750 miles covered by bicycle.

The German estimates that he is leading his remaining rivals by 1,000 miles. They are now in New York. The race has been promoted as the greatest reliability trial of the kind ever undertaken, and a prize fund of £10,000, half of which goes to the winner, has been subscribed by 28 cycle-manufacturing firms and sporting organisations in Britain, America, and on the Continent.

Vogel, who reached London from Liverpool (200 miles) in 13 hours, has still 7,500 miles to ride. On his journey so far of 21,250 miles Vogel has had 194 tyre punctures, and has worn out 9 outer covers and 18 inner tubes. He carries two spare wheel rims on his back.

WASHINGTON WINS OPENING GAME.

The opening game of the World's Baseball Series, between Pittsburgh Pirates and Washington Senators, the 1925 champions of the American League and the defenders of the world championship title, took place at Forbes' Field, Pittsburgh, yesterday afternoon, when Washington, with Walter Johnson on the mound, won the game by 4 runs to 1. Lee Meadows was the pitcher for Pittsburgh.

GRANVILLE WINS BIG ENGLISH RACE.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Philip Granville, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., now settled in England, to-day won the Manchester to Blackpool road walking race of 51 and a quarter miles. He walked it in eight hours, six minutes and 59 seconds. Last year's winner, F. Holt, of the Yorkshire Walking Club, was second, in eight hours, twenty minutes and forty seconds.

HEAVYWEIGHT BOUT POSTPONED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The boxing exhibitions featuring Paul Berlenbach, world's light-heavyweight champion, and King Solomon, of Panama, which were scheduled for the Polo Grounds to-night, were postponed until next Monday afternoon. THE MOST COMMON HUMAN FAILING.

If you were asked to name the most common human failing, what would you name? The Man who Envy. Think has a candidate for this distinction. Envy. "When you come down to it," he said, "I think there are very few of us who don't have some pretty bitter envious in their hearts. And the characteristic thing about envy is that it doesn't generally express itself as envy. It burrows and comes up somewhere else. We are ashamed of envy. We won't admit even to ourselves that we feel it and so we do some protective thing and express it in some other way."

Do you know what he means? "I'm Not Envious." If you don't, try it out on yourself on someone whose character and his reactions you know intimately. Doubtless your first reaction was "I don't think I have any very strong feeling of envy for anyone."

What makes me think so? Because it was my first reaction. I said to the Man who Thinks (to my later regret), "Well, goodness knows, I have plenty of faults but I shouldn't have said envy was one of them. You see I have so many of the things that I want. I'm a bit of a strong for material things and I like our way of living and I like my work. If I saw anyone else who had these things when I didn't, I might envy them, but as it is I don't think I have any deep seated envies."

The Man who Thinks said nothing to that. Leaving Its Trail of Bitterness. But the next day when I was speaking critically of a neighbor of mine for her neglect of her children, a sudden thought came to me. "Is it possible that you are envious of this woman? She has certain gifts that you would give much for. You have never liked her. You have always been quick to criticize her. Can it be that you envy her and that your envy has burrowed down in your heart leaving its trail of bitterness and has come to the surface as criticism of her relation to her children?"

I have a neighbor who has had a great deal of "hard luck" in his business. He is bitterly envious of some of his friends who are successful. And his envy takes the form of obstinacy. Under no circumstances will he accept any kind of suggestion from anyone—even from someone who has the greatest good will in the world to him, and the capacity to help.

Envy Reappears as Bidsale. I know a man who is always making fun of one of his old friends, holding him up to ridicule in the clever way of which he happens to be master. I never could understand the bitterness so inadequately masked by his pretense of honest amusement. And then one day someone told me that when the two were in college together, the good natured giant was a tremendous success in athletics. Not long afterward the man who makes fun of him confessed in a moment of self-revelation, "I would rather have been a success in athletics than anything else in the world. But I was always a second rate in college. I just didn't have the weight or the physique." Is it not plain to see how that old envy has burrowed down and come to the surface in a new guise?

Of course all such bitternesses as these hurt those who harbor them more than those against whom they are harbored. That is the nature of envy. That is the nature of the envy in your search for hidden envies. Look in and who knows but you may find some unconscious envy masquerading as a righteous criticism, and in recognizing it, have taken the first step toward rooting it out.

SURPRISES IN OLD COUNTRY FOOTBALL.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(C.P.)—The splendid weather that was enjoyed throughout the United Kingdom on Saturday brought out immense crowds to witness the football games, and in the first division of the English League they were rewarded by some stirring contests and also by several upsets that ran contrary to form. Arsenal was expected to put up a much better fight against Newcastle United than they did. The availing by seven goals to nothing was a particularly severe defeat for the Highbury Club, all the more so when they had reached a point where their fans believed them to be turning the corner. The game saw Arsenal six goals down at the end of the first period and they made a spirited rally in the second, but this served simply to reduce the rate of scoring. The home club were in excellent form and beat Arsenal in every department of the game.

Sunderland were again checked yesterday when they ran into a four to one defeat administered by Manchester City. Tottenham Hotspur defeated Blackburn Rovers before a crowd of 50,000 and was the only metropolitan team to win the first string to come out with a victory.

Huddersfield Town resumed their winning form at Everton when they came out of their contest by the odd goal in five.

Men and Women Shoppers

By LADY FORD. Who make the best shoppers, men or women? This question is of more than academic interest to most households, especially to the breadwinner. Does his partner get good value or could he do better himself?

The instinct to garner for immediate and future wants is a strong feminine trait in all animals. Doubtless that is why the shopping instinct is more developed in woman than in man. Again, the bargain instinct is stronger in women. The success of crowded sales proves that. In dress women appear extravagant, especially to bachelors. Subject to every gust of fashion, her clothes are outdated long before they have rendered service proportional to cost. But in spite of this a girl with her own allowance will stock her wardrobe with more judgement and economy, and make a far better show, than her father or husband would if he laid out twice that amount for her.

A man knows just what he wants before entering a shop and buys that and nothing else. He may inwardly demur at the price. But will seldom bargain. In fact, his bargain sense is not always on a par with his judgement. In his place, his wife would have done better, though he ever so softly at her bargain sales! Men have not the nerve and diplomacy women have in securing a bargain.

There is one phase of shopping peculiar to women, a weakness peculiarly feminine. That is "shopping" as a pastime. In other words, "shopping" without buying. A harmless amusement if it stops at that, however doubtful the benefit to trade! The danger is that such philandering may lead to running up bills for unwanted goods, trifles perhaps, but bad bargains at any price if unnecessary.

In dress, household and domestic shopping, and all that really matters in a home, a woman will get better value and be more economical than a man. She will prove the more expert shopper, not only because it is a large part of her daily business to spend the money made by the man, but because she is endowed by nature with the instinct of acquisitiveness peculiar to her sex throughout the animal kingdom.

A plain grey jersey dress is tucked vertically and combined with plain yoke, sleeves and hem.

Mr. Dumas's Pithy Mot

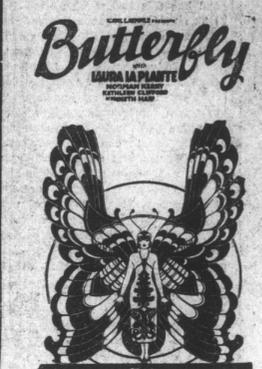

It is said that M. Alexandre Dumas, the younger, once administered a very happy rebuke to a high Parisian lady who had invited him to tea as an attraction for her fashionable guests. When the hostess asked M. Dumas to tell a story, he replied: "With pleasure, Madame, but allow me to take my turn. After M. le Capitaine d'Artilerie, who has just entered your drawing-room, has fired a cannon I will tell a story." While it is possible that this anecdote may be a pure invention, it is good enough to be true.

Swank O.K.

The supercilious young man was being shown to his room in a small seaside hotel. "That will do," he said patronizingly. "And—er—I suppose every one heah dress for dinner." "Oh, yes, sir," replied the very young chambermaid, "meals in bed is charged extra."—Boston Transcript.

Missing Star

The complaints of mercantile marine officers that the abridged Nautical Almanac for 1925, issued under the directions of the Admiralty, lacked certain stars upon which they had relied in reckoning the position of their ships, have led to the decision that in future the Almanac shall contain the same number of stars as the 1924 edition.

A supplement containing the additional stars is to be issued for the 1925 and 1927 editions, already published, and in the 1928 edition a complete list of stars will be included.

Professor W. Seeley PHYSICAL DIRECTOR.

I have had so many requests, from all parts of Newfoundland, since I have been in St. John's, to teach my Physical Culture Course by mail that I have decided to do so and now make this special offer:

As I am making these courses a sideline, in Newfoundland, with my Show Work, Study and Training, I give these lessons either personal, in classes or by mail to any part of Newfoundland for the small sum of $10.00, thus saving you $20.00, as these courses have never been sold under $30.00 before.

Arrangements have been made this week, with

Mlle. OTILJA LEITLAND, Hygienic Beauty Culturist, to give Scalp and Face Massage, Skin and Hair Treatment, Systematic Exercise to reduce flesh and develop sound and symmetrical body.

Any lady or young girl who would wish to beautify her form, face and hair may write, phone or call at my office Renouf Building, P. O. Box 1302. Phone 2146.—oct.8,21

World Wheat

Crop Higher

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Foreign pects for wheat, announced yesterday by the Department of Agriculture, indicate that in 24 countries of the northern hemisphere the yield will be 2,432,000,000 bushels, compared with 2,382,000,000 last year, while in the southern hemisphere, crops are growing and a record acreage is apparent.

In 15 European countries, an increase of 191,000,000 bushels over last year's harvest was estimated. German production estimates placed the crop at 1,070,000,000 bushels, compared with preliminary estimate of 1,000,000,000 on the basis of the June 1 condition report, while the crop there last year totalled 88,000,000 bushels.

S. Questions to British Firms

British merchants are expressing concern at the action of the American Consul-General in London in sending a letter to firms a form containing a series of questions relating to their business.

A covering letter states that the information is sought for the preparation of a classified directory. The details were not for general publication and would be kept on a file at the Consular offices in London and in Washington for the guidance of American merchants having or contemplating business relations abroad.

Two of the questions are:
"To what extent does this firm produce its plant and stock by fire and marine insurances?" and
"What do you buy chiefly, and if abroad, where? State countries and proportion from each."

Details are also sought as to the firm's organization; the number of its branch houses and travellers, and the territory covered, financial references, bank capital, the annual volume of business, and the number of employees.

The Mercantile Guardian says that the sheer inquisitive impertinence the Consul-General has never been equalled, not even in the days before the war, by German spies and commercial agencies.

30,000 Mile Cruise

Dartmouth is excited, for the St.
George's Scientific Expeditionary Association's vessel, has returned to port after an 18 months' cruise in the Pacific. Of the original party of eight scientists, only two have completed the whole voyage.
Dr. P. H. Johnson, of the University College, London, the biologist of the expedition, and Mr. C. L. Collinette, who is the entomologist.

Mr. Johnson told me:
"Altogether we have covered 30,000 miles. We have been longer on the voyage than we anticipated, but the St. George proved herself a thorough-seaworthy vessel."

On one island—Gorgona—the expedition found some curious carved wooden idols of monkeys and frogs, weighing up to half a ton each, and alleged to belong to pre-Inca times.

Old Church Relics

Writing Fragments Together—Tourists Help.
When the old church at Dixmude,
Belgium, was practically destroyed during the war it was feared that two interesting ancient memorial brasses which it contained were irretrievably lost.

A search in the ruins after the war resulted, however, in 42
fragments of the brasses being found seven pieces of the figured portions and 35 pieces of inscription. Unfortunately, nobody knew how to place them correctly together.

Within the devastated area last month Mr. Reginald H. Pearson, an architect of 10, Old Burlington-street, London, was shown the fragments. An enthusiast concerning old memorial brasses, he remembered the rubbings of the two brasses taken some 40 years ago by the late Mr. James Deals and preserved in the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington.

He took rubbings of the fragments and informed the authorities of the Museum of the matter. The Museum officials undertook to make enlarged photographs of the rubbings in their possession, and these photographs recently reached the care of Dix-mude, who, no doubt, will soon be able to arrange in their proper positions
the fragments of his church's brasses, which date from 1499 and 1513.

British Lead in Motor Trade

Proposing the toast of "The British and Motor-cycle Industry" at the annual banquet in London of the British Cycles and Motor-cycle Manufacturers' and Traders' Union, Sir Arthur Stanley said they were proud to know that the greater part of overseas trade in cycles and motor-cycles was in British hands.
In 1922, 4,500 motor-cycles were sold to Australia, while in 1923 the number was 11,000.

Bricks Tasteless!

the best all round TONIC and BLOOD BUILDER that is on sale in the country to-day. If you feel "run down" or suffer from lack of energy, get a bottle at once and see how quick it will help you. It will certainly give you a good appetite—THE ONE WHO TAKES IT MUST EAT.

A Good Tonic

is what most people need at this time of the year, as the weather being so changeable, it is hard to avoid colds and other diseases that are prevalent unless your system is kept in good condition.

Thousands of bottles have been sold in the country, and there will be thousands more sold this Fall and Winter. We have our first shipment just in of over 1,500 bottles, with four or five shipments to follow during the month, and can supply all you need.

BRICKS TASTELESS can be purchased everywhere, and if you want results insist on getting BRICKS when you ask for it.
