Report of the Principal.

(Approved and adopted by the Committee of Management.)

I have the pleasure of submitting the following statement of the progress of the above Institution during the year which has just closed.

We have been favored, perhaps more than in the two previous years of the existence of the Institution, in the enjoyment of good health, in the earnest co-operation of its Officers for the welfare of our inmates, and in the desire of the pupils themselves to assist those who are working for their good by a prompt and willing obedience to the rules laid down for their guidance, as evidenced by the general harmony which has prevailed between teacher and pupil with scarcely an exception throughout the whole session. While we cannot expect from our location so large a number of visitors as we should like, yet the number of influential ladies and gentlemen who have honored the Institution with a visit, and the terms in which they have spoken of our objects and the way in which we are endeavoring to carry them out, show increasing confidence on the part of the public, and indicate growing interest in our work.

ATTENDANCE.

The School Session extends from the 1st of September to the 1st of July, and seventeen pupils representing the following counties, York, Carleton, St. John, King's, Albert, Charlotte, and the neighboring State of Maine have been in attendance.

Two pupils were removed, the vacancies having been filled with a little girl from Carleton County and a youth from Canterbury, York County. It would be a comparatively easy matter to increase our number of pupils, and I have no doubt that whenever funds permit, the Committee will see the wisdom of extending the advantages of the Institution to other candidates for admission.

THE SCHOOL.

We have made no important change in our methods of instruction. Being convinced that every deaf mute child who is not deficient in intellect can be most successfully taught through the medium of signs, that system has been very generally adopted.

A few cases occasionally occur, however, where there is some amount of hearing and perhaps a retention of the pronunciation of the words learned in infancy, which affords a basis for instruction by articulation. All such cases have received the benefit of that mode of teaching. The capacities of our pupils vary to a considerable extent, but we endeavor to adapt our teaching so as to give the best opportunities to each, and thus secure the greatest good to the greatest number.

The educational work of the year has been conscientiously performed, and it is gratifying to report a satisfactory advance in the scholastic attainments of most of our pupils, which is to some extent due to the earnestness manifested on their part in supplementing the efforts of their teachers. While that advance is not so apparent in some cases as we could have expected or desired, yet we are warranted in concluding that so far from the year's work being barren or stationary, we have cause to rejoice at the results attained, and may consider the efforts put forth to educate the children under our charge as having been largely crowned with success.

THE LANGUAGE OF DEAF MUTES.

The English language which is one of the easiest for hearing children, is the hardest we have to teach. All that is done by hearing parents for their little ones in infancy, in teaching them to lisp the names of persons and things about them, and all the language the child gets in its play with its brothers and sisters, and the daily drill from friends and acquaintances who speak to it or in its presence, is in the case of the deaf mute completely lost.

His lessons in English generally date from his entrance into the school room, but if parents would devote themselves to the development of their child's dormant powers, much might be done to pave the way for a trained instructor.

While a deaf mute is cut off from all sounds, his sense of sight is continually utilized and he becomes a keen observer of all that is passing around him. He soon learns to distinguish the prominent characteristics of things and eventually creates a language to make his wants known. The actions and gestures spontaneously called forth by his natural desire to give expression to the feelings by which he is animated, afford a basis of communication on which his after education is built.

The natural aptitude of the deaf mute to express things by representing characteristics is also taken advantage of by his teacher to develop his intelligence. From rude and primitive signs a system is evoked by which even abstract ideas may be conveyed to his mind almost as readily and plainly as words can convey them to our own.

The common wants or conditions of the body as thirst, hunger, pain, lassitude, etc., are expressed as follows: When thirsty the child touches his throat, and intimates the action of drinking; when hungry he points to his mouth and pretends to put something in it. If he has the headache, earache or a pain anywhere, he puts his hand to the spot and shows in his countenance a feeling of distress. If tired or sleepy he allows his muscles to relax and puts his hand on the side of his head as if to lay it down. Heat and cold are represented in the one case by drawing the hand across the forehead to wipe off the perspiration, and in the other by putting the hands together and shivering. The movements and appearance of certain animals suggest the signs used in designating them. An elephant is indicated by making a sign for its trunk; a cow, by its horns and going through the process of milking; a fly, by pretending to catch it with the palm open; a tiger, by the lines on its skin and showing its carnivorous nature by biting the left hand; a fish, by showing its action in the water; a dog, by patting the right thigh and pretending to whistle for it; a cat, by its whiskers and stroking the back of the left hand; a pig, by touching the right side of the nose to indicate the ring in its snout ; a bear, by putting the arms across the body and hugging some imaginary hunter ; a bird, by stretching the arms out as in the act of flying ; an ass, by putting the hands on the side of the head to represent its long ears ; a hare, by putting two fingers up on each side of the head and going through the action of leaping.

Inanimate objects are shown by some distinguishing mark of the thing itself, the place where it is found, its influence on other objects, or the uses to which it is put.

The sun is shown by shading the eyes ; the moon, by its shape, and the time when it is usually visible ; the stars, by stretching all the fingers out, pointing the heavens and apparently dotting them with the fingers.

A country ; province or State, by doubling the right hand, and placing it on the back of the other, and stretching both out ; a mountain, by its shape ; a river, by putting the hands close together and gradually increasing the distance between them ; a lake, by giving the letter W for water and describing a circle ; a ship, by its shape and the work it has to perform. Objects on the table are easily represented, bread, by cutting ; butter, by spreading ; pepper, by shaking an imaginary pepper box ; tea, by holding the forefinger and thumb to the mouth in the act of drinking out of a tea-cup ; beef, by representing the animal from which it comes, stretching out two fingers of the left hand as if using a fork and cutting with the right.

Individuals are represented by giving some distinguishing mark in their features, dress or occupation. A person with prominent eyes is shown by putting the two hands half-closed over the eyes ; a large nose or a dimple in the chin is taken advantage of and forms the sign of the person possessing it. A king is the man who wears a crown ; a clergyman is known by a white necktie, and putting the hands out as if delivering an oration ; a judge is known by his wig, and putting the thumb and then the little finger of the right hand on the left, to indicate that the decision as to the merits of a case remains with him ; a soldier, by placing the arms as if drilling with a gun ; a sailor, by drawing in a rope and climbing ; a doctor, by feeling the wrist of the left hand ; a farmer, by holding a plough ; a teacher, by holding the two hands up before one as if conveying something to the minds of others; a drunkard, by putting two fingers of the right hand on the open palm of the left and working them from side to side to show instability; a prisoner, by closing the two hands and putting the wrists together.

Words denoting the qualities of objects are indicated in the same way. Short, by putting the hand out palm downwards; tall, by raising the hand high; stout, by putting the hands over the shoulders and drawing them down at right angles to the face, making a semi-circle; thin, by pressing the hands against the sides downwards; hard, by knocking the knuckles together; soft, by pressing the cheek with the forefinger; heavy, by attempting to lift an object which tries your strength; light by doing it easily: flat is shown by rubbing the palm of right hand over the left; strong is represented by clenching the fists and keeping the body erect; weak, by apparently lifting something and letting it fall.

Verbs are expressed by the action indicated, as walking, running, leaping swimming, drawing, writing, etc.

Abstract ideas as faith, hope, piety, justification, goodness, virtue, vice, crime, etc., generally need a combination of signs to convey the exact idea represented by the word.

So full and comprehensive is this language of signs that a sermon or lecture may be conveyed by its means to a class of intelligent deaf mutes with the same facility with which it is being delivered orally to a hearing and speaking audience. The use of signs is not limited to the deaf and dumb. It is adopted to some extent by railway employees in the shunting of trains, and might be used in signalling with advantages in many of the various walks of life.

GOVERNMENT GRANT.

I would again call the attention of our Legislature to the claims which the deaf and dumb have equally with speaking children to an education within the borders of their native Province.

The Government of the United States, as well as other countries, actuated by considerations of policy and humanity, have fully recognized this claim, and now every deaf mute child throughout the Union has the privilege of acquiring a good and liberal education at the expense of his native State. The wisdom of this policy is shown by the numbers of youths of both sexes annually leaving these Institutions, prepared by their training to enter on the struggle for independence in competition with their more fortunate brethren, and to add to the prosperity of the country by their labor and influence, instead of being pensioners for existence, as would otherwise be the case, on the industry of the community in which they live.

Such a course commends itself also from principles of Christianity. This class of our fellow creatures is heavily burdened to the close of life, despite all that education can do, and to refuse to lighten their load from motives of economy would be unworthy the spirit of the present age. There is no just reason why our Province of New Brunswick should lag behind other countries in this respect. A grant of Five Thousand Dollars, with what could be raised by voluntary contributions, would enable us to erect a building on the beautiful site at Hawthorne Hill, which would go far to meet the present requirements of the Province. It might be built so as to permit of enlargement as it became necessary, and in time we should have an Institution fully equipped for its work, and commodious enough to accommodate every eligible applicant throughout the length and breadth of the Province.

A necessary public work of this kind, having for its object the welfare of that section of humanity who are debarred by their affliction from sermons, lectures, music, conversation, and nearly everything that makes life endurable and profitable, should not be long delayed nor meet with opposition from any, who are in the happy possession of all their faculties.

OUR PRESENT BUILDING.

The building in which we are at present located, while not built for the purposes of an Institution, nor adapted for the reception of a large number of pupils, is pleasantly and healthily situated, on the road shaded by beautiful forest trees, with garden, orchard, and ample play grounds adjoining. It is not a stately, imposing edifice, nor yet a cheerless one. It bears a comfortable, home-like look, and this is indicative of its character within. Our pupils come from various portions of the Province to spend five-sixths of every year with us till the completion of their education, and our desire is and has been to make the Institution a second home to them, not as an asylum, but in the best sense of the word, a place endeared by precious associations, pleasant memories and happy influences.

It has been a pleasure to provide innocent and rational amusements whenever practicable. We have endeavored by watchful care and kindness to restrain the evil and develop the good. The vital interest we have taken in their welfare has been exemplified by our best counsel and advice, by inculcating habits of neatness, order and industry, by exercising a parental influence over them, by taking pleasure in their enjoyment, and by adopting a course of training which we trust will not only bring them prosperity in this life, but lasting happiness hereafter.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

In conclusion we beg to return our sincere thanks for the support received from our Legislature in the past, with the hope that as time goes on, increased confidence will be extended to this work, its importance fully recognized, and that substantial aid rendered by which the best and highest results can only be obtained.

We would also acknowledge the voluntary contributions received from our friends who are watching its progress with interest and who desire to see its success guaranteed.

Our best thanks are also due to Dr. Brown for his kind and gratuitous services. Very little sickness has occurred among the pupils during the past year, but his invaluable help has at all times been at the service of the Institution. His readiness in responding to our calls does much to ward off serious illness and at the same time relieves us of considerable anxiety.

Mr. Geo. H. Davis merits our thanks for supplying the Institutions with medicines free, and Dr. Torrens for proffered professional services when needed. Numerous illustrated and other papers gladly read by our little ones. Annual Reports published by Institutions throughout the United States, Canada and the Mother Country, and copies of the "Maritime Farmer," "Graphic," "British Workmen," etc., from Mr. McNutt, Mr. Creed, Mr. Perley and other friends in Fredericton, have been very welcome.

Our Christmas Tree was profusely decorated with useful and valuable presents from Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wilmot, Fredericton ; Messrs. Manchester, Robertson & Allison, Daniel & Boyd, McMillan & Co. W. H. Thorne & Co.. A. Everett, Geo. Robertson. T. R. Jones, and other friends in St. John, through the kindness of Postmaster King. Parcels of fruit and confectionery were received from Mr. Whelpley on New Year's Day, a barrel of shad from Mr. Coleman, two barrels of potatoes from Mr. Gilman, a turkey from Mr. Wheary, of Keswick ; confectionery from Mr. Tabor, brooms from Mr. Reid, stove from Messrs. Emerson & Fisher, St. John, and a large box of biscuits from Messrs. Whittier & Hooper, Fredericton.

Could our friends witness the enjoyment and appreciation with which their gifts are received by our little ones, their kind thoughtfulness would be to some extent repaid.

In this review of the past, there is much cause for thankfulness, and while noting the errors and difficulties which have beset our path, we look forward with confidence to the success to be achieved, by the labors of another year.

Physician's Report.

To the Commissioners of the Deaf and Dumb Institution, Fredericton.

GENTLEMEN,

I have much pleasure in again submitting my annual medical report of the Deaf and Dumb Institution in this city.

There is nothing in a medical point of view to offer.

The School has not had an interruption from any cause for the past twelve months.

The building and every surrounding connected therewith, has been kept in a most perfect state of neatness and cleanliness. This, with a perfect system of vigilance on the part of the Principal in looking carefully after the diet, personal cleanliness, healthful employment and exercise of the pupils is to be attributed the almost entire absence of disease.

In December last I vaccinated (successfully) every inmate of the Institution.

Yours respectfully.

T. CLOWES BROWN, M. D.,
