Apparently a Mistake

From the Lewistown Courier. A story comes from a Kentucky town of a woman who says that she has had a communion with the Almighty. She says she delivered to those of us who have a message that she has brought on high. The fact that a message sometimes takes on a very peculiar line does not alter their value, in her opinion. She went into the office of a lawyer and approached him only as one about to receive an attorney's fee. He looked up and smiled. "That is a mistake," he replied. "The Lord knows I have never seen you before."

An Election Seventy-Two Years ago, in Charlotte County

A book containing the names of voters and candidates, in Charlotte County, in the year 1837, was left with us a few days ago, and contains some interesting facts concerning the methods in vogue at that time in choosing members of the general assembly. In this election the candidates were: Thomas Wier, James Rait, James Brown, George S. Hill, Patrick Clinch, Robert Thompson, W. F. W. Patrick, St. George, St. David, St. Stephen, West Lakes were polling places. Many of the voters were not allowed to vote for reasons noted after their names: "bad man," "objection till he brings his deed," "alien," "French and object." In the election at St. George, Sept. 27th, James Rait resigned. Many names appear that familiar in the town and parish, as Henry Seelye, Eligh Fishery, George Steen, Chas. Brockway, Gay Clinch, Peter Dewar, Peter Goss, Elliott Munson and others. The result of the election: Wier, 1287; Brown, 885; Hill, 858; Clinch, 612; Thompson, 772; Owen, 704. The candidates were nominated by: Dr. Samuel Pyle, James Bowd, Joseph Williams, Donald D. Morrison, Peter Sims, Colonel Hugh McKay, Willard Fisher.

Hestia was Twelve Miles Out of her Course

Yarmouth, N. S., Nov. 3.—In view of the attempts which are being made to attach blame for the Steamer Hestia accident to the Marine Department, and of the irresponsible statements which are being made by various party newspapers, your correspondent deems it wise to present such information as is available of character as he has been able to glean after a careful examination with several well known master mariners. Third Officer Stewart, the only surviving navigating officer of the ship, caused to be published in St. John's statement in which he accuses the Marine Department, as to the aids to navigation, and particularly to the gas buoy on the Old Proprietor shoal where the Hestia struck, as being responsible for the disaster which resulted in the loss of thirty-four lives. There is a small reason to doubt the truth of this assertion. Captain Adolph McKinnon, of the steamer Le Tour and one of the best navigators in these parts was near the scene of the Hestia wreck on Thursday last and found the buoy on Old Proprietor in position. It was daylight at the time, and Captain McKinnon was not able to tell whether or not it was lighted, as a matter of course. He declines, however, that the Government steamer Lamorne came along immediately after him, cruised around it for half an hour and ascertained whether it was properly marked, but also ascertained that the buoy was not lighted. Capt. McKinnon is a strong believer in the stories circulated to the effect that this buoy had been unlighted for some time. After the consultation which your correspondent had with permanent master mariners this afternoon accompanied by a joint examination of the chart, there can be no doubt that Captain Newman was about twelve miles out of his course. The regular procedure for masters of steamers coming from Britain and bound for St. John is to make Cape Sable and then steer to the Larcher Lightship off Yarmouth, from which they steer to a point off Northwest ledge where the Hestia was lost. Third Officer Stewart's statement that the ship was steering the middle course, and after sounding had found a depth of 100 fathoms cannot be true. That depth could only be found off Northwest ledge where the Hestia would have been had she been on her proper course. Had she been there she would have been 12 miles from Old Proprietor. The theory of experienced master mariners here is that Captain Newman did not sight any of the leading navigational aids after making Cape Sable. It seems almost certain that he never sighted the Larcher Lightship, but entered the Bay of Fundy on more or less of a venture. The heavy northeast wind and the fog which prevailed before the wreck carried him over towards Grand Manan and to the scene of the disaster. Mr. C. G. D. City, Mr. L. H. Bliss and others followed, and repudiated any such doctrine as Mr. Wiggins wished to lay down, and whether contrary to the law of God or not, they expressed their firm belief in the principle of the Scott-Munson and to the scene of the disaster. Act.

A Terrible Tragedy in Lion's Cage

The Mouset Theatre in the Montmartre quarter, Paris, has been the scene of an awful tragedy. During the performance of a play, "Papa Le Vertu," a young actress named Josephine Ripoché aged only 21 years, committed suicide in a terrible fashion. She was in a state of hysterical despair after a quarrel with her lover, and approached the cage in which there were two lionesses and a lion offering her body as a prey to the savage beasts.

In the second act of the piece there is a lion-taming scene, and in order to lend reality to it a cage containing the three lions is brought upon the stage and placed at the back. Four steps lead up to the cage, which is raised some feet above the stage.

The tamer's assistant, a young man named Adolphe Baillaud, aged 21 years, had for two years been living with the unfortunate woman. To-day Baillaud was to have joined the army for his military training. The two had recently had many serious quarrels, the cause of which was the woman's suspicion that her lover was about to abandon her. Yesterday morning the poor girl discovered that her lover was in fact no longer true to her. A violent scene ensued, during which the girl implored the man not to abandon her, threatening at the same time some desperate stroke if he persisted in his intention.

Josephine came to the theatre in the evening. While her lover was busy preparing the cage for the night the girl sat in her seat obviously in misery. Then she walked slowly up the steps to the bars, and began to stroke the lion's head with her hand. A moment later she suddenly slashed the beast severely with a whip which she carried.

DRAWN THROUGH THE BARS
Saddened, the lion sprang to its feet, snarling with anger, and seized the girl's arm with one front paw, while with the other it reached through the bars of the cage and dragged her towards it.

The sight of the blood roused the two lionesses, and they also sprang upon her. In a moment the girl's head, face, arms and shoulders were horribly lacerated.

The tamer and the young lover of the girl rushed to drive off the beasts, but it was some time before they succeeded, and when at last the girl's body was rescued it was almost unrecognizable as that of a human being. Josephine Ripoché was, of course, dead.

In the meantime the audience having heard that something was wrong was growing uneasy, and when an actress rushed terrified upon the stage and said that all was well at once went on with the rest of the piece. This presence of mind saved the situation, and the audience sat on until the end, knowing nothing of the frightful scene that had been in progress behind the scenes.

Britain Still Rules the Waves

The British Admiralty have invited tenders to be delivered at Whitehall on November 5 for the building of the additional large armor ships which were included in this year's estimates as contingent on the progress made with new vessels for other powers.

"When the programme was issued" says Engineering, which makes the announcement, "it was stated that four armored ships as well as various other vessels of small size, would definitely be laid down, and that His Majesty's Government may, in the course of the financial year 1909-10, find it necessary to make preparations for the rapid construction of four further ships, commencing on April 1 of the following financial year."

"We expressed the conviction at the time these contingent ships, as were termed, would be laid down, and this belief, founded upon confidence in the sea Lords of the Admiralty, has been justified by events. Not only were the ordinary ships of the year's programme ordered at a very much earlier date than usual, but the four contingent ships will be laid down in January.

"The firms invited to tender have been asked to submit a price for building a battleship, and also the price for building a cruiser to be completed in each case by March 31 1912 under severe penalties for delay. The design, so far as the battleship is concerned, will follow that of the new ship to be laid down at Portsmouth, while the cruisers will be of the new Indefatigable class, which, as has already been stated in Engineering, will be larger and have more fighting power than any vessel yet constructed and have more powerful Parsons turbines than have yet been supplied to any ship.

"It is probable also that, as foreshadowed in a different article, some of the ships will be fitted with 13.5-inch guns instead of 12-inch guns. From this point of view the vessels will mark an enormous advance in fighting power. The new weapon is chosen, as we indicated in a recent article on warship design, not so much for its longer range—because the twelve inch gun satisfies this condition owing to the limits of vision—but for its immense striking power. Ten such guns firing 1,350 lb. projectiles, at a muzzle energy up to 60,000 or 70,000 foottons, would even at five miles range, have a more disastrous effect than when using explosive shell of high bursting charge."

The Bachelor's Wisdom

We never know how much we love until we try to unlove.

You may have the greatest troubles but if you turn them round you will find joys on the other side.

We should always keep a corner of our head open and free, that we may make room for the opinions of others.

False happiness is like false money it passes for a time as the true, but when it is brought to the touch it is found to be alloy.

Why Horseshoes are Lucky

Why is an old horseshoe supposed to bring luck to the owner if hung in the hall or behind the door? Horseshoes were at one time nailed up as a protection against witches. Many houses in the West End of London had one of these emblems of superstition on the threshold, and in Monmouth street there were seventeen in 1813, and seven so late as 1855.

Lord Nelson had a horseshoe nailed to the mast of his ship Victory, and our forefathers loved to nail one on their house door.

There is a legend that the devil asked St. Dunstan one day—who was noted for his skill in shoeing horses—to shoe his "single hoof." Knowing who his customer was, Dunstan tied him tightly to the wall, and proceeded with his job, but purposely put the devil into so much pain that he roared for mercy. And it was not until he had promised that he would never again enter a place where he saw a horseshoe displayed that Dunstan would release his captive.

Prominent Members of the British Cabinet and Some Of Their Troubles

Montreal Standard

The present contest in Great Britain over the Budget has resulted in a most extraordinary shake-up in political parties. The old lines of demarcation have to a very large extent disappeared. Former radicals have become the mainstay of Conservative interests and scions of old aristocratic houses are in the van of the Socialistic procession. A Standard correspondent, discussing present conditions, remarks that any man who strikes out a new line in English politics has a hard row to hoe; but doubly hard is the lot of the man who deserts his class and places himself at the head of the disinherited mill in their effort to gain for themselves a larger share of the good things of life which have been monopolized for so long by the small class composed of those bearing titles and their immediate relatives.

POSITION OF CHURCHILL

This is the position in which Winston Churchill, now president of the Board of Trade, but who many well-informed politicians predict will be one day Prime Minister of England, finds himself. Mr. Churchill is one of the most picturesque and forceful figures in politics to-day, and much of the interest attaching to him is due to the fact that he is the son of one of the most aristocratic houses in the kingdom, is the acknowledged leader and darling of the most extremely democratic faction in the British Parliament.

"Winston," to give him the only name by which he is known to friends and foes alike, is a young man. He was born in 1874, but he has crammed a lot of experience into his 35 years of life. Just now he is undergoing what is probably the most unpleasant—a social boycott.

Winston, it is said, walked into the Turf Club—one of the most exclusive social organizations in London, the other night, and when he entered the smoking room every man in it got up and went out. At the Marlborough Club he was also snubbed, and I am told that he has not dared to visit his other clubs for fear of an even more unpleasant scene.

English politicians are asking themselves what Winston hopes to gain by his course in politics, but few of them have been able to supply the answer. He is able to give it from his own lips. He says it to a member of the present Liberal Cabinet a few days ago. He believes that a great wave of socialism and democracy is coming over the country and is going to submerge all the ancient institutions.

"The people want a first class man to lead them when the time comes," said Winston, "and I intend to be that man." In other words, this young English aristocrat thinks that there is going to be a commune in England, and he intends to be its Robespierre. He has carefully paved the way for this by courting the labor and Socialist party in the House of Commons. In fact, he declared, not long ago in a public school that he saw nothing improbable in the suggestion that he might at some future date hold a portfolio in a Socialist Ministry.

RESEMBLES HIS FATHER

In many ways Winston resembles his father, the late Lord Randolph Churchill. Lord Randolph was erratic in politics and he, too, had a tendency toward democracy, but he called it Tory Democracy and wanted to capture the working-class vote for the party of the dukes. He also had a gift of vigorous expression, but in his days politicians of all parties were more dignified in their choice of language than they are to-day. There is no doubt that Winston inherits a good part of his brains from his clever mother, now Mrs. Cornwallis West, who was Jennie Jerome, of New York and in a good many ways he resembles his cousin, William Traverser Jerome, the fighting District Attorney of New York. Like Mr. Jerome he has the gift of coming striking phrases, and he is a fearless fighter. Like his father, Winston is to-day the most cartooned politician in England.

Some of Winston's enemies are chuckling over the plight in which he will find himself when his party goes out of office, as it must do before long. Winston is penniless, except for his salary as president of the Board of Trade, and he married an equally penniless girl about a year ago.

A POSSIBLE BACKLASH

Under ordinary circumstances—that is to say if he were a quiet, respectable Tory politician, his cousin the Duke of Marlborough, might be expected to finance him for a few years, until he found some lucrative office or until his party came back to power, but Winston has included his cousin by name in his denunciations of the dukes; and his Grace of Marlborough does not speak to him.

Cooks on top of the stove, bakes in oven at same time

You can cook over every pot-hole and bake in Pandora oven at same time—and get perfect results. That's because cooking draft is also baking draft. Flues are so constructed that heat passes directly under every pot-hole and around oven twice before passing up chimney. No wasted heat—instead fuel does double duty, saving Pandora owners both time and money.

McClary's Pandora Range

For Sale by Grant & Morin

I am told, however, by a well-informed politician that Winston need have no fear for his future.

In the meantime the situation in the Liberal Cabinet is decidedly interesting. The two men who absolutely dominate its policies now are Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, whose "socialistic budget" is causing all the trouble, and Winston, who is credited with having a good deal to do with the framing of that budget. The Prime Minister is said to be wax in their hands, and Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Minister, who was the hope of the Conservative faction in the party, has given up the tical fighter, and it also confining himself strictly to the duties of his office. Mr. Haldane the War Minister, who is also a Conservative, is not a political fighter, and is also confining himself to administration.

But a most amazing situation has developed. The two men in all the Cabinet who were most feared by the Conservatives are now their idols, and are making a gallant fight for the preservation of old Liberal traditions which are threatened by the rising tide of radical and socialist thought. These two men are Lord Morley of Blackburn known to all the world as John Morley, the famous literary man who began life as an extreme radical and even republican, and John Burns, ex-socialist and labor leader. They alone of all the Cabinet have refused to accept the new principles, and are fighting at every step against the proposals of the faction led by Winston and Lloyd George.

One of the strangest results which may follow the present situation was hinted at a few nights ago by Lord Onslow in the House of Lords. He was opposing a bill because it gave too much power to the Local Government Board, of which John Burns is the head, and he seized the opportunity to pay a high tribute to Mr. Burns, declaring that he would have no fear if Mr. Burns were always to be in charge.

"But a general election is coming," he said, "and after it Mr. Burns' activities may be confined to Battersea or he may be translated to a higher sphere."

A FUTURE FOR BURNS
"Translation to a higher sphere" is the formula which is used in describing elevation to the peerage, and it is generally believed in political circles that the remark was thrown out as a feeler to see how John Burns and the public in general would take it. I am told, that in event of John Burns coming boldly over to the Tory party he could have a peerage for the asking. Few stranger things have happened, but after all, John Burns, ex-socialist and labor leader, as a peer of the realm would be little more incongruous than John Morley, ex-radical and republican. And an excellent peer he would make, too, is the general verdict. There is no more dignified member of the House of Commons, and there is no man in England better informed on every public question than John Burns.

After he took office he was invited to various political parties with fear and trembling on the part of the hostesses, who evidently expected to find him some grimly, uncouth son of toil, who dropped his h's and ate with his knife. John, however, held his own with the best of them, and he is voted generally to be one of the most cultured and charming men in London society.

A Bad Case That Proves Cramps and Stomach Disorders are Cured Fast by Nerviline

"The distress I suffered with cramps last summer I thought it meant death," writes P. R. Emmerson, of Guys Hill P. O. I was doubled up with pain and in such bad shape I couldn't walk a hundred feet. I remembered having Nerviline on hand and took half a teaspoonful in sweetened water. In five minutes my stomach was well and my stomach derangements disappeared entirely.

THE SUFFRAGETTES AND THEIR CRUSADE.

THE SUFFRAGETTES AND THEIR CRUSADE.

That is a unique case which is now before the courts in England—the case of a Suffragette who takes action against the Home Secretary, Rt. Hon. Hebert Gladstone and certain prison officials, on the ground that she was forced to eat food against her will. The prisoner, according to the ingenious tactics of the Suffragettes in England, refused to partake of food. The prison officials forced food down her throat, causing much suffering. The nice question is—shall a prisoner be allowed to starve herself to death? This is a form of suicide, and suicide is an indictable offence. Society through its laws, says that Brown, who may be of little account and destitute of putting an end to an existence which never enjoyed the luxury of unlimited change in the pocket, shall remain in the place of food at the disposal of the prison officials? Or, are they under obligation to see that the food is administered to preserve life? On the other hand, if, in the humane act of preserving life, assault be committed and suffering undergone can you put the Home Secretary in penitentiary?

Their lordships appear to be puzzled. No such case ever came before the courts. No doubt, the Suffragettes are enjoying the situation. They have disclosed an ingenuity, a subtlety of strategy quite beyond the capacity of the dull male creature, but this was the crowning effort—to refuse to eat food, and thus effect a double object—first, the making of Bumble ridiculous, which is more fatal than any other mode of attack or depreciation, and second, to compel the prison officials to open the doors before the sentence was served. By this time all the authorities, whose business it is to uphold the law, have agreed painfully. Mrs. Parham is now in New York recommending militant tactics to the American ladies; but as the latter have more power, distinction, influence, than any other women in the world, there is so far an indisposition to proceed to the extremities which are found to be necessary in England, where, immorally, the women seem to have tamely accepted the domination of the men.

MR LUD NORTHCLEIFFE

It is not yet too late for Lord Northcliffe to have himself interviewed on such subjects as he may inadvertently have overlooked. Naturally he is a busy man. It is no light task to conduct a group of newspapers and operate pulp and paper mills to supply them with raw material. When to this is added a general oversight of the relations between Britain and Germany, and the task of advisor-in-chief to the British empire, the pressure upon his lordship's time must of necessity be somewhat heavy. It may therefore be regarded as a fortunate thing for Canada that he has devoted even a passing glance to the government railway system of this country. Lord Northcliffe is not burdened by local prejudice, or by political considerations. He is simply a great man. Hence he can tell you off-hand everything about anything or all about everything. Wisdom exudes, as it were, from his person. When he criticises the Intercolonial Railway, there is nothing for it but to sell the road to a company, or leave it to the patriots lately discovered in the neighbourhood of the Halifax Chronicle and St. John Sun. It is useless to go on permitting blundering statesmen and boards of management to bedevil the road and the region which it traverses. Since Lord Northcliffe cannot tackle the job himself, being shortly needed at home to ward off a German invasion, he has at least indicated the course which should be pursued. Being himself a journalist, he knows the capacity of journalists, and there can be little doubt that if he should speak with more definiteness it would be to instruct Hon. Mr. Graham to appoint a commission of newspaper men to run the Intercolonial, with head offices both in Halifax and St. John. Then defects would disappear, the hemlock would give place to the orchard, lowing kine would replace the moose, the six-year would seek the Maine woods in order that lumber might fatten in peace, towns and villages would spring up, immigrants would come in from the shores of all the seas, and whenever Lord Northcliffe came to any way he would receive a fresh and every station, with band music, and glorious outlook. It was his lordship to speak the magic words, and conjure up so enchanting a vision that he not come, we might have believed what other visitors that the I. C. R. is one of the best equipped railways on the continent. John Times.

BY THE WAY

Canada's population is estimated at 6,500,000.

A quarter of a century, boys, since we affixed our names to that charter.

The season for acquiring "big beads" is drawing to a close. Don't extend the time.

In a speech that he delivered at New castle lately Mr. Lloyd-George said that "a fully-equipped duke costs as much as a couple of Dreadnoughts."

Although Red Granite Division was out of commission for a short time, it is marching in the front rank at present, with one hundred and fifty members.

"John," said the wife gently, "you are interested in temperance movements, are you not? 'Of course I am,' he answered. "Well, suppose you go and make a few of them at the pump-handle. I want a pair of water at once."

Be happy over the work that is before you, because if you cannot draw happiness while you work you surely cannot while you are idle. To postpone being happy until what you suppose to be clouds shall lift, is to think like a degenerate.---Halifax Herald.

"Doctor," said the blushing young lady to the young and bashful doctor, "how can you tell by feeling the pulse if one is well or sick?"

"We count the heartbeat and judge by that."

"But when you hold any woman's hand her pulse must beat so much faster that I should think it would fool you."

The doctor blushed furiously and fixed up a mixture for that patient that wasn't very hard to take.

Geoph's Board of Education has decided to cut out home study entirely in the public schools. The best way to cut it out is to do it, and there need be no fear of a resulting revolution. It is like early closing of the stores, and about the same kind of argument is presented in each case. It imposes some individual cases of hardship at first, but in the aggregate the community soon adjusts itself to the change.---Windsor Record.

It is true that the elector who is thirsting for information and eager for guidance may read the parliamentary reports and political editorials in the newspapers. But while we naturally set a high value on the product of our own pens and the pens of our brethren, we do not think they can take the place of the personality and voice of a speaker who has been present in parliament and taken part in its proceedings.---Toronto Record.

The Recall

I am in the land of their fathers,
To me the virtue stays;
I will bring back my children,
After certain days.

Under their feet in the grasses
My clinging magic runs
They shall return as strangers,
They shall remain as sons.

Over their heads, in the branches
Of their new bought ancient trees,
I weave an incantation,
And draw them to my knees.

Scent of smoke in the evening
Smell of rain in the night,
The hours, the days and the seasons
Order their souls aright;

Till I make plain the meaning
Of my thousand years--
Till I fill their hearts with knowledge
While I fill their eyes with tears.

---Rudyard Kipling.

We always boasted of having a good band, and one that on every occasion, either at home or abroad, could furnish a program of music that was creditable to the members and to the town. There are a number of young men who could enjoy one or two evenings a week in joining this organization. The older member would gladly assist them, and no doubt arrangements could be made to engage a teacher during the winter months. With the present members, and the addition of some new talent, a splendid organization could be formed that would sustain the reputation already made, and keep the band in the front rank of the musical organizations of the county. We trust the young men of the town, musically inclined, will interest themselves, and be in a position next summer to furnish open air concerts that will delight the young and old. Get together boys, and we feel certain that the citizens will gladly assist in any way, to keep the band up to a standard that will reflect credit on an organization that has always been the pride of the town.

Mr. Currie Steadman, the clever short-stop of the Calais baseball team, met with a painful accident Monday. He was reaching under a circular saw in the mill of the Calais Box and Lumber Co., where he is employed, and his left arm came in contact with the saw, cutting it to the bone. It isn't so difficult to strengthen a weak stomach if one goes at it correctly. And this is true of the Heart and Kidneys. The old fashioned way of losing the stomach for stimulating the Heart or Kidneys is surely wrong. Dr. Shoop first pointed out this error. "Go to the weak or ailing nerves of these organs," said he. Each little organ has its controlling or ailing nerve. When these nerves fail then those organs must surely falter. This vital truth is being recognized everywhere to dispense and recommend Dr. Shoop's Restorative. A few days test will surely tell! Sold by All Dealers.

Empire Liniment Co. Ltd. Bridgetown, N. S.

Dear Sirs,
Your Capt Burns gave me a bottle of your Empire Liniment at the Grand Hotel, Sydney, C. B. At the time I had contracted a very severe cold which settled on my lungs, and which confined me to my bed. A generous application of Empire Liniment on a flannel cloth relieved me so much I was able to go home the next morning and my Doctor tells me I broke up a very bad case of pneumonia. I consider your liniment a splendid remedy and I have placed an order for your goods in my drug store and will push it on its merits.
Yours very truly,
J. W. McLean.
