CHAPTER VII.

"Why do you hate him?" she asked. He shrugged his shoulders.

"That is neither here nor there," he said. "To no one but yourself would I admit that I did so; but, as I said, I am always candid when it suits my purpose. And now I don't think you ought to stay any longer on the grass."

He held out his hand and helped her to rise, and still held it as he regarded her with a smile, murmuring:

"Ah, yes, if I were not so poor—"

Then he bent and touched her hand with his lips, and left her.

The immediate result of the adventure and accident in the park, so far as Lucille was concerned, was, of course, a violent headache!

She went straight to her room, and sent down word by Susie to Mrs. Dalton that they were not to expect her at luncheon. Then she threw herself into a chair, and tried to sleep and rest, but it was impossible; every incident of the morning rose vividly before her—Harry Herne's voice seemed to ring in her ears, and she went over every little act of devotion which he had performed—with what thoughtfulness he had sent for the sunshade to shield her; how patiently he had borne with her coldness and hauteur; how gently, and again, how patiently, he had tried to teach her to drive—and last, but, ah! by no means least, how nobly he had borne the insult and outrage inflicted upon him by the marquis!

That evening the headache still hung about Lucille, and with the headache an uneasy feeling that she had not done her duty by the man who had saved her from a broken limb or perhaps death itself. Mrs. Dalton's prosing and Marie Verner's light laughter jarred upon her, and just as she had used to do at the school, she wandered away from the drawing room and into the conservatories.

Lucille walked round the stands in a reverie of admiration and delight for some time, then a thought struck her. A gardener had left his pruning knife on one of the magnificent blossoms.

Then, when she had encircled the masses of azalea and geraniums and roses in a ring of feathery maiden-hair, she stopped a footman and told him to send her maid to her with her hat and jacket.

In a few minutes Susie appeared, and Lucille said:

"I am going for a stroll, Susie, and I want you to go with me."

Susie walked in silence and curiosity by her side, and presently Lucille stopped.

"I have lost my way," she said. "Where is the cottage?"

"Yes, I am going to take them to Harry Herne, Susie," said Lucille, almost severely; "and I am not good at all—I am only just. Harry Herne did me a great service this morning, and I did not even thank him."

"Yes, miss," said Susie, with meek delight; "I understand! Ah, if all the gentlefolk were like you! Not that Master Harry wants any thanks, miss for serving you. Why, there isn't a man about the place who wouldn't jump into the river if you wished it."

"Especially if he could swim!" said Lucille, smiling. "Don't be silly, Susie. Oh, here we are!" she broke off as they came suddenly upon the cottage.

"Yes, miss," said Susie, and she went up to the door to knock. A minute afterward she came running after Lucille.

"He's not there, miss," she panted. "It does not matter," said Lucille. "Stay, go and put the flowers on the table."

Susie went back and Lucille sauntered after her.

Susie disappeared inside the cottage, but reappeared at the door the next minute, her eyes the shape of saucers, and her lips wide open.

"Oh, miss! You never saw!" she exclaimed, in a hushed whisper. "Such a lovely little room! Do come and look!"

Lucille put her foot on the step, and Susie, thus encouraged, threw open the door.

"There, miss! Isn't it pretty?" Lucille looked into the room. It was small and evidently used as a sitting-room. Outside, the cottage looked like an ordinary game-keeper's hut, pretty because of the jasmine and honeysuckle that had climbed over and nearly covered it; but this room was anything but like the ordinary gamekeeper's living room.

The walls were papered in sea green, the furniture was of oak and carved.

"Master Harry carved it all, miss! I've seen him doing something with a knife and bits of wood of an evening," whispered Susie.

Two or three good engravings, inclosed in frames, also carved, hung upon the walls. A writing table stood by the open window, and upon the table some open books and a high-class literary journal. The floor was covered with beaver skins; guns hung upon a rack over the mantelshelf, and in the corner stood a salmon rod. But the object that attracted Lucille's attention more than anything else was a carved bookcase, on the shelves of which the books stood closely packed shoulder to shoulder.

She turned to the writing table. The book that lay open upon it was a volume of Tennyson's poems! There was a sheet of paper half written upon, but she would not be tempted, and drew her eyes away. At that moment, Susie whose manners were not so fine, came up, and with her finger-tips turned over the papers and magazines.

"This is the only place in a litter, miss," she said. "That's his pipe, and that—why, what's that? Why, it's a fern leaf and an old glove with the fingers cut off. Now, whatever does he want to hoard them up for, as if they were treasures?"

Lucille looked round, and saw that these treasures which Harry Herne was hoarding were the fern leaf which she had held as a fan and the old glove which she had worn.

"Come away, Susie," she said. "We—why no right to come here. Quick!" and she stamped her little foot.

Susie closed the door and followed her, then she stopped suddenly and held up the flowers.

"Oh, miss, I've brought the flowers away with me! I'll run back and put them on the table!"

"No, no!" said Lucille, hurriedly, her face growing from red to white.

"Give them to me. I will not leave them. I have changed my mind!" Her fern leaf and the glove! Why had he kept these so carefully?

CHAPTER VIII.

Harry Herne had left the cottage only a few minutes before Lucille and Susie's visit. Beyond being bruised and shaken, he had not received any injuries in stopping the ponies; but if he had had every bone in his body broken, the mental agony he endured would have obliterated all mere physical pain.

For hours he sat staring at the wall, his hands clasped, his whole frame writhing as the tempest of a strong man's passion raged within his heart.

"Blow for blow! Go to him and whip the life out of him!" shrieked the angry spirit within him; but he would not listen to it, and at last he conquered it into silence. For her sake, he would bear even this, the greatest indignity man could put upon man, in patience.

With a sigh that was not one of unhappiness, he took the glove and the fern from his bosom and gazed at them.

"I ought to throw them away," he murmured. "They do not belong to me; they are hers. What right have I to keep them, and gloat over them? And yet keep them I must. I'll keep them for this purpose: whenever I look at them they will remind me of the difference between us, the gulf that stretches between us—wide as the ocean, deep as perdition. Yes, and they shall remind me of more than that! That in her service I can take even a blow in patience."

He sat for some time, going over the scene again and again, then he took a stout stick and limped into the woods.

"Fresh air is the best medicine for my complaint," he murmured, with a sad smile. "One can forget man's insults here—here alone with nature," and he opened his mouth and drew a long breath, as if a burden had fallen from his shoulders.

Harry Herne limped through the woods, lost in thought and apparently seeing nothing, but all the same his keen eyes were on the alert and watchful as usual, and they caught sight of a spot of crimson gleaming through the undergrowth.

Harry Herne did not stop nor turn his head, but limped on for a few yards as if he had seen nothing, then he turned and with one leap had Mr. Sinclair, the owner of the crimson necktie, in his grasp.

Write with fear and passion the man struggled, swearing and blustering, but he might as well have endeavored to evade the clutch of a grizzly bear as the grasp of the herculean arms that held him as in a vice, and presently he realized this and relapsed into quietude, glaring from his black eyes at the cool, handsome face close to him.

"What the devil do you mean, fellow?" he exclaimed. "Let me go, will you?"

"Presently," said Harry, quietly. "Who are you and what are you doing here?" and he held Mr. Sinclair at arm's length, and scanned him over, taking in the glaring tie, the over-fashionable clothes, and the huge brass chain, and pin, and rings.

"What's that to you?" retorted the man. "Can't a gentleman walk through the public woods without being assaulted by a low gamekeeper?"

"These are not public woods," said Harry, as coolly, "and not even a gentleman has any right to walk through them."

"What right have you to stop a gentleman like this, even if it is private property? You don't know what you're doing, I can tell you. I'll have the law on you for this, if my name's Sinclair."

"Thanks," said Harry. "So that's your name, is it? And now what are you, and what are you doing here?"

"I came to see some one at the house," he said, sullenly.

Harry's hands dropped from him instantly, but his keen eyes still remained fixed on Mr. Sinclair's shifting countenance.

"Why did you not say so at first?" he asked, grimly.

"Because—because—" Mr. Sinclair looked round out of the corners of his eyes, and Harry smiled.

"Don't attempt to run," he said: "my stick is four feet long, and I should be obliged to knock you down. Go on!"

"Curse you!" snarled the man, stamping his feet, his eyes blazing with impotent rage. "I came to see one of the servants. Now are you satisfied?"

"Quite," said Harry; "and you thought it was necessary to hide like a thief, my friend! Let me advise you, next time you pay her a visit, to come in an open manner. Go round to the servants' entrance and ask for her; you will be allowed to see her, and you will be well treated—if you are an honest and respectable man."

Mr. Sinclair dashed his hat on his head and, with a parting malediction, disappeared.

A contemptible kind of creature was Mr. Sinclair, but the lowest of human creatures can work an injury to the highest sometimes, and Harry Herne had made an enemy of Mr. Sinclair for life.

Messages Received During the Night.

THE BATTLE STILL RAGES—THE BRITISH ARE HOLDING THEIR GROUND.

Special to Evening Telegram.

PARIS, this a.m. The War Office, just before noon yesterday, issued the following advices from the front and declares that a big battle is now progressing favorably to the allies. The French resumed the offensive on the right wing to-day, but General Joffre soon abandoned the tactics to enable the remainder of the allied army to re-establish its original offensive line. The allies then combined in an offensive movement against the vast German army pressing forward at every point. Joffre has ordered the withdrawal of the troops from Alsace to strengthen his lines in the north, and Muelhausen has been evacuated. The French have regained their original position east of the Meuse, commanding the roads of the forest of Ardennes. The French and British troops are defending a position near Givet. The allies offensive movement was confined to resuming their first line of defence occupied on Sunday from which they were dislodged at many points. The British artillery and infantry are holding their ground but the French are building in need of reinforcements. Fighting in Lorraine is still in progress to-day. Two armies started a combined attack from Grande Gouronne de Nancy and from the south of Lunville.

UHLANS NEAR OSTEND.

PARIS, this a.m. A despatch from Ostend says a squadron of Uhlans seized a railroad station near Ostend, blew up the safe and left in the direction of Ostend.

THE POSITION OF THE ALLIES.

PARIS, this a.m. An official statement issued by the War Department last night says that in the north the Franco-British lines have been moved back a short distance. In a general way our offensive between Nancy and the Vosges makes headway. Our right, however, has been obliged to fall back slightly in the region of St. Die.

THE HOME RULE QUESTION.

LONDON, this a.m. Although the Home Rule Bill is no longer a live issue, negotiations are quietly proceeding with the ministerialists, who still hope to arrive at a compromise, which will be acceptable to all parties. Should the Home Rule Bill go on the statute book before Parliament prorogues within this month the new Irish Parliament would come into being September, 1915; but it is more than likely that a special period of grace will be given in case war is still being waged or just concluded.

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

LONDON, this a.m. Donald Macmaster asked in the Commons yesterday whether, in view of the great struggle in which the country is now engaged, it was in the interest of national safety and in the discharge of national obligations to permit men between 30 and 40 years of sound health and anxious to serve to enlist in the Emergency Army. Asquith said that the point was not being lost sight of.

GERMAN ATTACK FAILED.

LONDON, Aug. 26. The German forces of the Southern frontier on Tuesday, were repulsed and retired all along the line. This information was given out by the Official Bureau this afternoon, which announced that on August 25th the French on their Southern frontier were attacked in force by the Germans. The attack was repulsed and the enemy retired all along the line.

BRITISH CASUALTIES NOT YET DETAILED.

LONDON, Aug. 26. Since the withdrawal of the allied armies to the defence of the French frontier, no news has reached the public of the military operations in Southern Belgium. Owing to the difficulty of compiling a correct list along such an extended front no details of British casualties have been received. The announcement of the losses only seems to have intensified British determination, judging from the work which has been performed by recruiting officers to-day.

KILLED BY A SHELL.

BERLIN, Aug. 26. According to an official announcement made here, Lieut-General Prince Frederick, of Saxe-Meiningen, was killed by a shell before Namur on August 1st.

RUSSIAN ARMY NEARING POSEN.

LONDON, Aug. 26. The main Russian Army is reported to be rushing toward the German fortress of Posen. This, if true, is regarded here as being the most sensational news of the day, as it is believed to account for the falling back of the Germans in North Eastern Prussia.

SERVIANS TAKE 8,000 PRISONERS.

CETTINGE, Aug. 26. It was stated here to-day that the Servians have taken eight thousand additional prisoners near Shadatz.

REPORTED FAILURE OF JAPS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. A despatch has been received by the German Ambassador to the United States, from the German Embassy at Peking, saying that the Japanese attack on Tsing Tau has failed and that the Japanese are preparing for a siege.

TOGOLAND SURRENDERS.

LONDON, Aug. 25. It is officially announced to-night that German Togoland has surrendered unconditionally to the British Expedition sent against it from the African Gold Coast.

WAR ARGUMENT CAUSES MURDER.

BRIDGEWATER, N.S., Aug. 26. A murder, an outcome of the European war, was committed here this afternoon. Among the crew of the schooner Melba, lying at Hall's wharf, were a Swede and an Austrian. The two men got into an argument about the war. The Swede struck the Austrian in the face whereupon the Austrian whipped out a knife and stabbed the other, killing him instantly. The murderer has been arrested.

The Ports of Antwerp.

New York, Aug. 22.—The armies of the world could not capture Antwerp with its circle of modern forts. As the statement made to-day at the Belgian consulate, where doubt was also expressed as to the reported capture of Liege by the German invaders. Antwerp it was said, has the most modern of fortifications. They guard the entire city forming a circle practically immune against seizure. On the east, the west, and north and the south, are forts, and on the extreme northern section of the city are dykes which can be opened if the German army appears from that direction. Antwerp, Namur and Liege are the only well fortified cities in Belgium. It was said, the others being but slightly protected by forts of less modern construction and but lightly armed.

In the transfer from Brussels 200,000,000 francs or $40,000,000 gold were taken from the capital to Antwerp.

Still Another Great Big Two Two-Part Feature Show at THE NICKEL.

H. R. H. The Duke of Connaught.
AND ALL OUR PROMINENT CITIZENS AT THE OFFICIAL OPENING OF BOWRING PARK.

THE OATH OF OTUSURI SAN—Produced in Two Parts. An absorbing and thrilling drama, with an element of unusual novelty interest, enacted by Japanese and American artists.

THE FOREMAN'S TREACHERY—In Two Parts, produced in Wales. A great story of the Welsh mines. An old miser, his beautiful daughter, his half-witted son, a handsome young miner, and the false foreman who impersonates a ghost—These are the characters that carry a story of intense interest from first to last.

THEIR HUSBANDS—A rattling good Keystone comedy.

DEWITT C. CAIRNS, Baritone. P. J. MCCARTHY, Pianist. JOE ROSS, Effects.

Friday—WIDOW MALONEY'S FAITH. A great Irish drama in 2 parts. Don't fail to see the big Local Feature at the Nickel to-day.

The Nickel Theatre was the popular resort yesterday afternoon and last evening. The attendance was the largest in the history of the Nickel, and it is safe to say that there never was a more delighted audience, all present were charmed with it. Every picture was of the greatest interest. The principal film was the opening of Bowring Park by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. The pictures were splendid, in spite of the inclement weather when the photographs were taken. All the leading citizens of St. John's are seen in the picture. The Duke, Sir Edward Morris, Hon. E. R. Bowring, The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, Chairman Gosling of the Civic Commission, Messrs. Mann and Bowring, and hundreds of others are plainly seen. The C. C. C. Band also came out well. Never perhaps has there been a picture shown at the Nickel of such great interest, and no doubt thousands will attend to-day. "The Oath of O Tsuru San" is a two reel story. It is a thrilling drama with a strong love story permeating it; Japanese and American artists are responsible for it. "The Foreman's Treachery" is another absorbing picture which held spectators spell-bound from first to last. It was one of the best seen for some time. "Their Husbands" is a very laughable comedy. We strongly advise all our readers to attend this evening's performance. It is well worth a visit. Mr. De Witt C. Cairns will be heard in a new song.

Volunteers From Bell Island.

Over thirty young men from Bell Island have enrolled themselves for service in the Newfoundland Regiment and arrangements are now being made for their coming to the city to register at the recruiting office and be examined.

Much enthusiasm was displayed at the public meeting held at the Island on Monday night last. The meeting was convened by Magistrate Power and was held at the C. L. B. Armoury. The Magistrate after announcing the object of the meeting in a stirring and patriotic manner called for the appointment of a Chairman and Secretary. Mr. C. F. Taylor was chosen as Chairman, and Mr. L. C. Murphy as Secretary.

Jointly Quit Aching Soreness Beats It Away

NO MORE STIFFNESS, PAIN OR MISERY IN YOUR BACK OR SIDE OR LIMBS!

Wonderful "Nerviline" is the Remedy. A marvelous pain reliever.

Not an ordinary liniment — just about five times more powerful, more penetrating, more pain-subduing than any thick, oily or ammonia liniment. Nerviline fairly eats up the pain and stiffness in chronic rheumatic joints, gives quick relief to those throbbing pains, and never burns or even stings the skin.

"Rheumatism kept my joints swollen and sore for ten years. My right knee joint was often too painful to allow me to walk. In this crippled and tortured condition I found Nerviline a blessing. Its warm, soothing action brought relief I had given up hoping for. I rubbed on quantities of Nerviline and improved steadily. I also took Ferrazole at mealtime in order to purify and enrich my blood. I am to-day well and can recommend my treatment most conscientiously.

Not an ache or pain in the muscles or joints that Nerviline won't cure. It's wonderful for lumbago and sciatica; for neuralgia, stiff neck, earache and toothache. Nerviline is simply a wonder. Best family liniment known and largely used for the past forty years. Sold by all dealers everywhere large family size bottle 50c., small trial size 25c. Refuse a substitute take only "Nerviline."

FELL FROM CAR.—Last evening a teamster named Reid fell off his car on New Gower Street. He was badly hurt about the back. Dr. O'Connell was summoned and attended the injured man who was afterwards driven to his home in James' Street.

Musketry Committee Active.

The Musketry Committee in connection with the volunteer movement met last evening at the C. L. B. Armoury to arrange preliminaries regarding the use of the rifle, etc. Instructions on same were given by Sergt-Instructor Moore and a programme was outlined for training. This evening the classes for instructors will be formed.

The S. S. Sisu which is engaged in the Port of St. John's, has been ashore near Bell Island the day before yesterday, has been floated off again into deep water and did not sustain any damage.

Speeches were made by Rev. J. Stead, Lieut. W. Lindsay (C. L. B.), Capt. L. C. Murphy (C. C. C.) and Mr. C. F. Taylor, all of whom expressed themselves anxious to forward in every possible manner the volunteer movement, whereby Newfoundland was contributing her quota in defence of the Empire.

The meeting was a most enthusiastic one, and closed with manifestations of loyalty to the King, the Empire and to Newfoundland.

SLEEP.

I go to root tired out and sore, and sigh, while yet a w a k e. "There's no use living any more, life's such a grievous t a k e. It's nothing but a round of toll and tears and things like those; my heart is sorer than a boll, I have so many woes. While grumbling thus I start to snore until the bed-springs rick, and then, for seven hours or more, I sleep around a block. Ah, far and wide my snores are rung, till wakeful neighbours yell. I learned to sleep when I was young, my tutors taught me well. For seven hours, or maybe nine, I sleep with ardent zeal; then, in this withered heart of mine, new energy I feel. I murmur, as I don my rags, "How foolish is despair! I don't endorse those dismal wags who say that life's a snare. I'm glad that I have work to do, and wish I had some more; I'll gaily toil the long day through, enjoying every chore. I feel as fresh and free from aches as Adam, ere his fall, bring on your wildcats and your snakes, and I shall whip them all! Oh, sleep! It's the only dope that's never known to fail, that brings new courage, faith and hope, when man is tired and stale."

THURSDAY, August 27, 1914.

The Safety of the State the Supreme Law.

The war situation seems more satisfactory than it did two days ago. The Germans appear not to have hurried through the cordon of defence on the French frontier, and the British, comparatively small in numbers, are reported as holding their own. The most important news is that the Russians are invading the Province of Posen, which was a part of the old Poland, annexed by Prussia, and are marching on the fortress of Posen, where the early Polish monarchs used to reside. This fortress is the most important of German fortresses near the Eastern boundaries. The Russian invasion comes from Russian Poland. The Russians are apparently advancing in three great armies, with other armies behind them. The southern army is advancing in Galicia a province of Austria to the east of the Carpathian mountains, and the effect is seen in the weakening of the Austrian forces in Serbia, where the weakened forces are falling before the Serbians. The northern Russian army is advancing in north east Germany, in the district of East Prussia, and the middle army from Russian Poland is advancing towards Posen, some 150 miles from Berlin. The effect of these movements if they are in great force, should be to prevent Germany from strengthening her striking force in the French frontier of Belgium. In any case, largely through the splendid fighting prowess of the Belgians, the descendants of the Belgae, whom Caesar called the bravest of the Gauls, the German time table has been dislocated. It is 26 days since war was begun against Russia and France, and the Germans were to march on Paris within a fortnight, cripple and crumble the French army, by a concentration of their millions of fighting men, and then turn back and be ready to smash the Russian armies by the time they were brought to bear on the Russian frontier. The war will not finish as quickly as Germany expected. Great Britain and France are preparing for a prolonged campaign.

Kitchener is preparing to have a million trained fighting men ready at home within the next few months. Every care is being taken to lessen the distress of a long war. The Government has obtained from Parliament power to seize food, where there is any overcharging. The main clause of the Act just passed is as follows:—
"If the Board of Trade are of opinion that any foodstuff is being unreasonably withheld from the market, they may, if so authorised by His Majesty's proclamation . . . take possession of any supplies to which the proclamation relates and pay to the owner such prices as may, in default of agreement, be decided to be reasonable, having regard to all the circumstances, by a judge of the High Court selected by the Lord Chief Justice of England."
Next week, our own legislature meets, and we presume legislation will be provided of a character similar to that enacted at home. There may be no need to use these powers, but the Government should be armed with them, should the need arise. The safety of the State is the supreme law in the maxim to guide us in providing such legislation.

Rescued in Time.

A large fishing skiff with sails carried away, was seen by people of Logy Bay drifting past there on Tuesday afternoon. Messrs. A. Devereaux and P. Malone put out in a dory and rescued the craft and its three occupants. The rescuers had a hard time towing the skiff to land. It was well the skiff was seen so soon as on Tuesday night the wind blew with hurricane force with a heavy sea and if the fishermen had been caught out many had been swamped.

The Struggle at Charleroi

Forbodes a Long and Costly War— England Must Have More Than a Million Men in Full Military Training Within the Next Few Months.

Special to Evening Telegram.

LONDON, To-day.
In a signed editorial, J. L. Garvin, Editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, says their decisive (?) result in Charleroi after a two days' battle with unprecedented forces, means that we have to lay ourselves out for a long war in the certain knowledge that half efforts mean only a more frightful loss of life and treasure. This is the biggest fight in all our centuries. Do we fully realise the meaning of Kitchener's momentous words in the House of Lords? He is one of the few men in the world who knows just where we are going. His statement meant neither more nor less than this—we must have more than one million men in full military training in the next few months. If more are required to win, we must have still more. As for the present situation on the Franco-Belgian frontier, the withdrawal of troops from Alsace Lorraine shows the intention to fight it out on the Northern frontier. General Joffre thought the best campaign could be made on the French border. That is now to be fought. The position of the allies insure that the losses of the invaders will be three times those of defenders. Germany, which has already called out her last man and is beginning even with her last boy, must break through that line somewhere. Meantime the Russians are marching with much greater celerity than was expected, straight through Russian Poland towards Posen in Prussian Poland, a hundred and fifty miles from Berlin.

FRENCH FORM A NATIONAL MINISTRY Of Best Men in Country.

Special to Evening Telegram.

PARIS, To-day.
The French Ministers, headed by Viviani, have resigned and another Cabinet has been immediately formed. Viviani visited Elysee Palace at 10.15 last evening and notified President Poincare that the members of the Cabinet had decided to resign collectively. He said that he and his colleagues had come to the conclusion that in the circumstances through which the country was passing, the Ministry should have a wider scope and comprise all the best men in all the republican groups. The President charged Viviani with the task of organizing a new cabinet which the Premier accepted. He returned to the Elysee an hour later and made known to the President the composition of the new ministry which is as follows: President of Council without portfolio, Rene Viviani; Foreign Affairs, Theophile Delcasse; War, Alexander Millerand; Justice, Aristide Briand; Interior, Louis J. Malvey; Marine, Victor Augagneur; Finance, Alexander Ribot; Public Instruction, Albert Sarraut; Commerce, Gaston Doumergue; Agriculture, Fernand David; Labor, Blenheim Martin; Minister without portfolio, Jules Guesde. Among the members of the new Cabinet are several Premiers and many members of former cabinets. Sembat is a United Socialist, Deputy Delcasse was formerly Ambassador to Russia, Millerand is a former Minister of War.

BOMBARDMENT OF ALGIERS, 1816. For centuries the Algerines had been a terror in the Mediterranean. They attacked ships of every Power, and carried the crews into slavery. The English Government determined to put a stop to this and after a severe bombardment of some hours the Dey agreed to liberate all Christian slaves, and to pay a large sum of money for compensation.

JAMES THOMSON died 1748, aged 48. Scottish poet, author of "The Seasons." His most finished work is the "Castle of Indolence"—the work, at intervals, of fifteen years. He excelled more in descriptions than in episode or reflection, yet the "Castle of Indolence" has characterizations of a very high order.

"The Doctor's Deceit"

AND PRIMA DONNA'S SONGS—
FIRST CLASS FEATURES.

A stirring two-reel I.M.P. drama "The Doctor's Deceit," a remarkable story dealing with the crookedness of a doctor, who betrayed his friendship for his friend, a promising lawyer, by pronouncing him a sufferer of the dreaded disease Leprosy, in order to separate him from his wife by having him sent to the Leper Colony, whilst the physician attempts to make love to his wife but the remorse of his assistant whom he bribed is strong, and just at the awful moment of departure he confesses. Leah Baird, the great emotional actress is the leading lady in the great tragical drama, and William Shay, one of the highest salaried movie men is the lawyer. A Western drama something beyond the ordinary is also shown and like the feature pleased last night's audiences immensely. The Joker comedy "The Working Girl," calls for roars of laughter. Louise Fazenda and Bob Vernon are great characters. The selections from the opera Spring Maid, by the prima donna, Miss Alice Clark, gave a splendid opportunity to the talented artist to display her capabilities which brought forth much applause. Miss Clark appeared in the costume as worn when taking the leading role in this leading opera, and her encores were as equally enjoyable.

Prof. Spencer contributed much by his piano selections during the song and picture towards the enjoyment of the entire bill. To-day the same performance is repeated. See the feature and hear the prima donna.

British Naval Officer in 1912

PROPHESIED WAR THIS YEAR.

Germany's making ready has not been accomplished in the dark. The rest of Europe has kept itself fully informed of what has been going on. In this connection it is interesting to note an assertion and a prophecy attributed to Commander Carlyon Bellairs, one of the members of Parliament, retired officer of the British Navy, author of an article on navies in the "Encyclopaedia Britannica," and who is known as a critic on naval subjects.

Commander Bellairs was in Montreal in September, 1912. As related by a correspondent writing to the Boston Transcript, Commander Bellairs told Montreal friends that he felt no fear of a "German outbreak" at that time, since, so far as he could see, the German programme of army and navy expansion would not be complete until 1914. But he expressed the expectation that "about mid-summer, 1914, the Germans would seize upon any pretext to precipitate a European conflict," and added that the probable excuse would be some fairly trivial incident, "likely some outbreak in the Balkans."

Of course, this is not the German view of what happened, but it is very likely to be for all time the British view, and even in his own country Commander Bellairs will be honored as a prophet.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Has New Airship.

We are promised sensational developments in the science of aerial navigation and by such a supposedly unscientific person as a coal-miner at that. He had his airship in the county of Northumberland, his name is William Glendinning.

He has explained his idea to some of the principals of the great armament firm of Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., and they were so impressed that the company will develop his invention.

He declares that a machine built from his designs even though it weighed more than thirteen tons, could sail round the world without the slightest risk of mishap and that it could remain aloft for five days without requiring renewal of supplies.

Glendinning has spent most of his life in the study of aerodynamics and he is the only working miner who has been elected a member of the Balloon Society of Great Britain.

The Command of the Sea.

"England's fleet has performed its first great task and opened a long stretch of ocean to the commerce of her subjects. Before a serious blow has been struck on land or sea British shipping is notified that the Atlantic is clear as far south as Trinidad, and that the transportation of foodstuffs in security may be resumed at once. The official announcement of the success of this vital naval operation comes after a series of manoeuvres in which no spectacular battle was fought, if, indeed, a hostile force was even present. The importance of the allies and to this nation is greater than victory in a pitched battle on land."—New York Sun.

A Summer Tale.

"You look irritated this evening."
"I am—on warm days like this I always suffer from heat rash."
"I am liable to heat rash, too, but it never irritates me; it never has since I began to use Zylex, which at once allays the irritation, physical and mental. And I find Zylex Soap with the Ointment go far to prevent heat rash altogether."
Zylex sells at 50 cents a box; Zylex Soap at 25 cents a cake, at your Druggists.

Captain Boyton.

The interest taken just now in life-saving appliances reminds us of Captain Boyton and his life-saving dress. This was an inflated rubber garment in which the wearer floated on his back. Captain Boyton proved its efficacy by paddling in it on June 28, 1876, across the Channel from Cape Crispez to Folkestone, Kent, in 23 hrs. He afterwards made a 500 mile voyage on the Po from Turin to Ferrara, but his greatest exploit on it was in 1877, when he crossed the Straits of Messina in a storm, during which he had a terrific combat with a shark. Captain Boyton's invention is perhaps the perfect life-saving apparatus; the only barrier to its adoption on a large scale is its costliness.

Slim Caldwell.

Red McGehee says

Slim's regular moniker is Ray, but just because he's built that way the fans all dubbed him Slim. An' since the dough the fans paid in, names made no diff to him. But speak-in' of the ol' John act out to work his way he only used his wrist. He learned to pound the ol' brass key, to telegraph. That's done, y'see, with just the open flat. The end o' Slim's arm worked so good one day he got the lurch he could get out an' use it all. So out he goes to play his lurch an' after hours or on his lurch you'd find him pitchin' ball. Some bush team offered him a try. Slim gave the telegraph bye bye—a parting far from sad. His right arm started so many bouts it wasn't long 'fore his league scouts were eyelin' what he had. The Yankees grabbed him. Then he slumped. For two years he was badly bumped. His ol' arm lost its pep. He laid the wing up for repairs, the docs rubbed out a kink somewhere an' Slim came bouncin' back. He set a dizzy pace las' spring—the batters couldn't do a thing with any of his slants. An' Slim has kept that stride all year. It's been the one small ray of cheer for one-time Fearless Chance.

Fads and Fashions.

Black chintilly lace is used to trim white frocks. White capes are worn with black taffeta gowns.

A touch of color on lingerie is now the thing. Classical lines will prevail in evening gowns.

Hats and gowns for autumn will be of somber tones. Bright green taffeta dresses are one of the novelties.

There is a splash of brilliant color on almost every dress. The tailored collar is one of fashion's promises for fall.

The bowl-shaped hat is always popular for little girls. Hats trimmed with fruit continue to make their appearance.

The short cape of black velvet is worn with lingerie gowns. Gloves of contrasting color are worn by many Parisiennes.

To be fashionable the ne^o basque must wrinkle on the figure. White gowns are made of volle, crepon, batiste, organdie, swiss or sheer linen.

There is a satisfactory and pretty silk and wool crepe de chine being used for blouses.

There is a midsummer vogue for black velvet bodices, girdles, capes and other accessories.

The fashion of smocking is coming back; it especially is noticed on soft tulle de chine.

The set-in sleeve is now considered as fashionable as the sleeve that is cut in one with the bodice.

The somber costume may be brightened by the parasol. It comes in vivid greens and yellows.

The vogue for capes is steadily growing and a great deal of attention is being paid to the linings.

Velvet hats are undoubtedly going to be popular. They are fashioned of black, brown and mouse gray.

The all-white costume is much favored this season, but it must be enlivened with a girdle of contrasting color.

Very deep blue with a lavender cast as well as navy blue and a new rich shade of peacock blue will be in favor.

The prettiest of the new blouses are of lace and chiffon. They are loosely fitted and trimmed with lace or net.

The thoroughly fashionable figure should be flounced from ankles to hips and buttoned straight up from hips to neck.

The lacy blouse is so much the rage in Paris that it cannot be passed without a mention. It is even worn with serge skirts.

The tunic may be seen on one gown; then it will be removed from all but the left side of a second, and from the front of a third.

In direct contrast to the all-white costumes are the all-black creations. They are fashioned of black broadcloth and trimmed with satin-covered buttons.

Street frocks are made of sheer material; heavy linens, plumes and cotton fabrics no longer hold sway. Organdie, tulle and batiste have taken their places.

Women are perhaps wearing a bone or two more in their corsets, but there is no tighter lacing and the trend of the moment is to appear more or less corsetless.

The Aims and Policy of Servia.

(By His Excellency Nicholas Pachitch, Prime Minister of Servia.)

At this time, when there seems so much misconception concerning the aims and policy of Servia, I think that it is very necessary that the people of England should know exactly how things really are and thus be able to avoid being deceived by the efforts of ill-informed or unfriendly persons. Servia desires especially that England shall know the true situation, since that country not only helped Servia to obtain her independence, but has always been the model upon which the liberal and democratic institutions of Servia have been created and developed. I feel certain, therefore, that England better than any other nation will be able to appreciate Servia's policy and Servia's national necessities.

While we are anxious to preserve the most friendly relations with all other nations, near or far, we cannot depart from the principle that national needs must always dominate the policy of a Liberal nation anxious to develop normally. International concessions, and even friendships, must never be allowed to destroy the possibility of accomplishing the national destiny. The past has shown us that independence of trade and economic liberty are necessary for Servia's development, and even for her existence. Since the moment, some years ago, that our economic independence was partially secured, the progress of the country has been so marked as to leave no doubt possible in our minds that Servia must have complete economic independence and an outlet to the sea which shall be under no control save her own, after the sacrifices which she has made and which she may still be called upon to make.

It is the obvious truth that Servia's desires are based upon no exaggerated ideas of possible aggrandisement nor can they in any sense be regarded simply as a basis for compromise. Servian arms have conquered far more territory than Servia intends to retain, but Servian policy has established a minimum of territorial expansion which does no more than cover her co-nationals and her national necessities. For this minimum Servia is prepared to make every sacrifice, since not to do so would be to be false to her national duty. No Servian statesman or Government dare betray the future welfare of the country by considering for a moment even the abandonment of this minimum. Servia's minimum requisite to her national development is economic independence, save, possibly, in so far as regards a Customs union with her allies and a free and adequate passage to the Adriatic Sea on the Adriatic coast. It is essential that Servia should possess about 50 kilometres from Alessio to Durazzo. This coastline would be joined to what was formerly Old Servia approximately by the territory between a line from Durazzo to Ochrida Lake in the south and one from Alessio to Djakova in the north.

History might be cited to show that Servia's claims extend much further southwards. Indeed, Albania belonged to Servia formerly until conquered by the Turks. The anarchy prevailing in Albania would seem to indicate that the whole country would be better off under the liberal regime of an established Government; but we do not ask for anything more than our national necessities demand. The future of Albania south of the Durazzo-Ochrida Lake line can well be left to the Powers to decide its destiny, although we feel strongly that it will be in the interests neither of the Albanians nor of Europe if autonomy be insisted on. The reports of Austrian and Italian Consuls and of travellers such as Hahn, Stelmetz, Baldacci, and Barbaric, whose testimony cannot be suspected of Servian leanings, show a deplorable state of affairs existing in Albania. The percentage of deaths by violence in Albania ranges from 20 to 75 of the total death-rate. Europe may condemn the Albanians to continue in this state, but Servia has a very manifest duty to safeguard Servian from a continuance of such conditions. In the territories between Djakova, Alessio, Durazzo, and Ochrida Lake about 10 per cent. of the 150,000 inhabitants are Servian. More than half of the Albanian inhabitants are Christians, including the Miristes, Austrian and Italian observers such as Hahn and Baldacci admit that the Albanians in this district are of ancient Servian origin and to-day they possess many purely Servian customs such as the Slava and blood brotherhood. Under Servian rule they will enjoy the fullest liberty, schools in their own language, religious freedom, and security for life and property to a degree they have never yet known.

The communal laws of Servia, which will come into force in the new regions acquired and apply to Albanians and Servians alike, form the most democratic system of local government known in Europe. Not only are minorities adequately represented in commune and council, but the communal authority is the judicial Court for the majority of minor offences. In respect of religious liberty in Servian territory to-day the Mahomedan priests are better treated than are the Orthodox, since the former receive from the State a fixed salary, whereas the latter's revenue varies considerably. It is probable that, so far from the Albanians in Servian territory being forced to emigrate, numbers will come in from Southern Albania. To-day in Servia Mahomedans and Albanians live peacefully and happily, and in the newly acquired territories, although these are fresh from the passage of the victorious Servian armies, all races and religions are settling down peacefully and contentedly under the new administration. The reforms set forth and promised in the Berlin Treaty, which were a dead letter until the present war, are now more than accomplished in the new Servian territories in a few weeks. There need, therefore, be no anxiety as to the future welfare of the Albanians, who will become Servian subjects in the accomplishment of Servia's national necessity of an outlet to the Adriatic Sea.

Not only will the Adriatic outlet enable Servia to have freedom of export and import, it will give her new neighbours, since every maritime nation will then be Servia's neighbour as much as Austria is to-day. This is especially true of England, and Servia rejoices that the period of lack of direct contact with England and English institutions will now come to an end. From Servia's new growing ports steamers will go to the established ports of England, weaving closer every day the web of friendship and mutual advantage between the two peoples. This point of contact with England, secured by England's command of the seas, realises for Servia one of her deepest and most lasting desires, which will enable her to develop freely and liberally, encouraged and stimulated by the freedom and justice of England. It is this desire for future and increasing relations with the nations of the West, and especially England, which makes it impossible for Servia to consider even for a moment the giving up of any special economic advantages to any specific nation. To do so would not only prejudice her economic future, but would force Servia to place England and other nations at a disadvantage. This Servia will not consent to, any more than she will abandon her just outlet to the Adriatic. Servia cannot conceive that her settled determination on these points, which she is prepared to defend by all means in her power, can be considered by any foreign Government as other than necessary for the well-being of Servia and dictated by a very real desire for permanent European peace and equal opportunities for all nations desiring to enter into economic relations with her.

Friendly with all nations, the enemy of none, but before all things true to her national needs and consistently following out those liberal ideas learned from England, Servia does not fear criticism and will not draw back before interested threats. Although at war, Servia has never claimed martial law, nor has there been any check upon the freedom of the Press in this democratic land. It is open to all to criticise freely and to declare to the world whatever they may think wrong in Servia's policy, but we do not with all this unfettered criticism see anything which can make us alter our settled conviction that Servia's cause is national and just. I am convinced that all nations whose eyes are not obscured by interested desires will be with Servia in her determination to achieve her legitimate development.

Mr. R. J. Decereaux, M.H.A., received a message from Rev. Fr. Fyde of St. Kyran's yesterday saying that typhoid fever had broken out in that settlement. One death had occurred and five persons were ill of the disease. There is no doctor nearer than Placentia and arrangements have been made to have one visit St. Kyran's immediately.

Eat Whatever You Relish!

Sometimes the digestive machinery gets away off. No kind of food looks good to you.

You need Stafford's Prescription "A". It is a temporary artificial digestive process to do the work until the stomach recovers normal conditions.

Many people think Pepsin is the thing to take. Four times out of five they are wrong.

Pepsin will digest eggs, meat, etc., but has no effect on starchy foods like bread, potatoes, cake, pudding—in fact, most of the eatables that cause the trouble.

Prescription "A" is the thing. It contains all the active ingredients for the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis, nervous dyspepsia, etc.

Eat what you like.

Stafford's Prescription "A" will do the rest.

On Table Talk.

By RUTH CAMERON.

The extensive use of the weather as a topic of conversation has often been ridiculed, but to my mind it is not half so absurd as the solemn w a y in which we talk about our likes and dislikes in the way of food.

We use the weather merely as an introductory push to start the conversational ball rolling or as a sort of a supplementary courtesy to our "good morning"—a perfectly legitimate use and doubtless one of the reasons why weather was made—but we don't sit down and talk about it for half an hour at a time. We don't solemnly and at length compare notes as to our preferences in the way of weather, our reasons for these preferences, the preferences of our families and relatives and their reasons, and our experience in various kinds of weather.

At least intelligent people don't. But let the subject of alimentary likes and dislikes be brought up, and even the most intelligent people will sometimes discuss it with a prolixity and solemnity that are really quite amusing—if you can detach yourself enough to see the absurdity of it.

Take a tableful of well educated people who ought to have something worth talking about and let somebody refuse some dish—we'll say a plate of nice looking strawberries.

"What, don't you like strawberries?" says the hostess.

The guest regretfully admits that he does not. "Goodness, I like them better than any other berry," announces another guest.

"Blackberries are my favorite," says the hostess, "but I have strawberries more because they are more commonly liked."

"I like strawberries when they are ripe like this, but I don't care much for the half ripe berries we usually get," contributes another guest.

"No fruit is good unless it is perfectly ripe," says the traveller. "You can't imagine how much better oranges taste when you pick them off the trees. Now when I was in Florida—"

"Blueberries will be here pretty soon," says the hostess (the trip to Florida having been finally concluded). "I think they make the most delicious pies."

"Don't talk about them," pleads a guest, with a wry face.

"What, don't you like them?"

"Yes, but they don't like me."

"Is that so, why they ever hurt me at all. I can eat a quart at a time!"

And so the exhilarating, stimulating conversation goes on and on, each announcing his own preference with an air of communicating an important piece of information and each paying little, if any attention to the communications of the rest of the party.

Occasionally someone does get the general attention for a moment, by mentioning a violent antipathy for some almost universally liked dish. A friend of mine was lucky enough to have had a cousin who never ate any fruit and who was actually sickened at the smell or sight of oranges. When the subject of likes and dislikes came up, she always contrived to tell of this antipathy, and then basked proudly in the reflected glow of distinction.

No, to be sure there is nothing out of the way in talking about one's alimentary likes and dislikes, but the solemnity with which we discuss this matter is rather absurd, isn't it? If you don't think so now, detach yourself the next time such a conversation starts and listen to it, instead of joining it.

On the Bowery

The electric sign-boards on the Bowery had begun to glow when Marian and Barker emerged from the Chinese restaurant. The Bowery is a lesser Broadway; both were distilled in the same pot. The foreign-born on the Bowery are the Americans on Broadway. Marian gazed for the first time upon the curious night scene before her, the cheap stylishness of its young fellows, the tawdry finery of its young women, its loiterers in front of taverns and small theatres, its musty shop-windows, its gamins whom even the night did not drive off the streets, its older women juggling baskets of stuff home from market like truck horses.

"Grand Opera—Ten Cents" was on one sign-board they passed. "Let's go in and see what it's like," exclaimed Marian eagerly. Barker paid the admission fee and they entered a stuffy little theatre. The performance had begun, and most of the seats were taken. To Marian's astonishment, a scene from a well-known Italian opera was really being enacted and sung on the tiny stage. The tenor sang like a nightingale; the soprano, bubbling with temperament, was singing with power and sweetness.

"What on earth are these people doing singing in a hole like this?" demanded Marian of Barker. "Why they're artists!"

"There are a good many artists who haven't arrived," he replied. "And a good many who never will arrive. Next week, or next year, some of these people may be in the chorus, or maybe even in the castes of the Metropolitan. On the other hand they may be warbling away here until they wear themselves out. These people sing because they have to sing. The singing's the thing. Where they sing is a matter of secondary importance."

"It must be wonderful to be built that way," returned Marian.

Soon an episode in the row in front of them laid hold of Marian's attention. A young fellow had his arm tightly around the girl at his side, and frequently their lips met in brazen kisses in the dimly lighted place. A couple of girls back of them tittered as they watched. Unconcerned with watching eyes or derision, they spooned eagerly on.

Marian watched them with disgust, with the disgust which a refined woman invariably feels when she beholds inferiors indulging in affectionate demonstrations. The refined woman resents, somehow, that human affections are not confined to the better classes. It seems to cheapen her to realize that the attraction of sex governs the whole human tribe, in common with herself. It sometimes makes her resolve never again to participate in a scene even remotely similar to the one she beholds with contempt.

Marian became suddenly aware of a movement at her side. Barker's hand was searching for hers. It was an ill-fated moment for a demonstration of the kind. "Don't!" she whispered sharply, pulling her hand out of reach.

Barker muttered a crest-fallen apology, and lapsed into silence. Now and then he stole secret glances at the handsome profile of his companion in the dim light, it took on misty lines of perfection. He sighed under his breath. He rebelled against the stern fact that business would very shortly require his presence in Boston.

The curtain fell, the lights came on, and the motley crowd of opera lovers started for the door.

"A wonderful ten cents' worth, remarked Barker.

"But what disgusting people," sniffed Marian, looking about her with a shudder. "Let's get away from this East Side. I've got enough."

Our Volunteers.

There was a meeting of the Volunteers at the C. L. B. Armoury last night when fifty-five more young men offered their services.

The total number enrolled to date is 275, many of whom have been examined and pronounced physically fit. These will be required to take the prescribed oath within a few days, after which they will be registered as regular soldiers.

Last night the officers and instructors of the different brigades put the squads through the physical and manual exercises. Drs. Rendell, Macpherson, Chator, Scully, Paterson, Smith, Perkins, Wakefield and Burden were present and were kept busy examining the recruits.

The corps will parade at 7.45 p.m. sharp to-night for inspection by the Patriotic Committee after which they will march countrywards accompanied by the bugle bands of the C. L. B. and C. C. C. and the pipers of the Highlanders.

Fishery Reports.

Aug. 22. From B. Perry (Catalina South Head to North Head).—The total catch is 4,200 qts. All the traps have been taken in but 60 dorjes and skiffs are still fishing. No bankers or schooners from the grounds have arrived. Prospects are not very good and the weather is unsettled, hindering operations. No bait obtainable.

Aug. 22. From S. E. Chafe (South Head of Brigus to Bay Roberts Pt).—Two punts, 50 boats and 7 skiffs are fishing but all the traps have been taken in. The total catch is 620 qts. with 20 for last week. Prospects are indifferent and there is no bait to be had. The trapping voyage is over and the average catch is poor. There is little or nothing doing with hook and line.

Aug. 22. From R. Brown (Upper Amherst Cove to Cape L'Argent).—Prospects are very bad and no bait is to be obtained. There was only a sign of squid about three days ago. The men report cod wonderfully scarce on the offer grounds but there was a little sign along the shore, the first part of the week. Some of the traps got as high as 9 qts. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. The total catch is about 5,000 qts. and for last week 500. Six large boats carrying six men each, 25 traps and 380 dorjes and skiffs are fishing.

Aug. 22. From J. Gosse (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove).—No traps but 40 dorjes and skiffs are fishing. The catch to date is 350 qts. and for last week 200. The fishermen say they have not seen more cod in this harbor (Spaniard's Bay) the past year than now, and it is of very large size. Herring is being used for bait and if a good supply could be obtained the men would do well. Prospects are looking brighter the past week.

Wedding Bells.

A very quiet wedding took place at the Anglican Church, Petty Harbor, on the 19th inst., when Miss Belle Pike, of Knowling's West End show room, and Mr. Robert B. Williams, of Brooklyn, N.Y., were united in matrimony by the Rev. J. Hewitt. The bride, who was handsomely attired in a silver grey Bedford cord travelling costume, was given away by her brother Mr. Stanley G. Pike, and was attended by Miss Myrtis Williams, who wore a maroon velvet costume, and Miss Stella Pike who was gowned in white silk. The groom was supported by Mr. E. Lawrence, of this city. As the bridal party entered the church the Wedding March was played by Mrs. Hewitt, who presided at the organ. After the ceremony the party proceeded to Mrs. Williams' Forest Pond, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Williams left on Saturday last per Stephano, for their future home Brooklyn, N.Y., where Mr. Williams is doing business with Mr. W. J. S. Ryall, of that city.

Preparing for Herring Operations.

Active preparations are now being made at Bonne Bay for the herring fishery which usually begins about the middle of September. Last season there was not a sufficient supply of barrels, etc., for packing the herring, and to prevent a recurrence shipments of puncheons and barrels have been brought to the West Coast the last couple of trips of the S. S. Portia.

Dear Editor—I wish by a few lines in your paper to express my thanks to an anonymous friend or friends of mine who expressed to me such appropriate (and I assure them well appreciated) present on my birthday. I wish them well, and that the coming year may bring them much joy.

Long Distance Runner Dined

The supporters and admirers of Mr. Jack Kavanagh, our best long distance runner and the winner of two road races this season, tendered him a dinner last night at Wood's Restaurant. Covers were laid for thirty persons. After an appetizing menu was discussed the following toast list was taken up, Mr. S. P. Cullen presiding:

- "The King"—Prop. The Chairman; Resp. "God Save the King."
 - "The Competitors"—Prop. Mr. Hill; Resp. Mr. J. Kavanagh.
 - "Friends and Supporters"—Prop. Mr. F. Ring; Resp. Mr. S. Cullen.
 - "Our Guests"—Prop. Mr. M. Skeans; Resp. Mr. C. J. Ellis.
 - "The Press"—Prop. Mr. J. P. Grace; Resp. (Telegram).
 - "The Ladies"—Prop. Mr. J. J. Norris; Resp. Mr. J. Woodford.
 - "The Chairman"—Prop. Mr. J. J. Norris; Resp. The Chairman.
- The speeches, though brief, were humorous and interesting and were interspersed by songs rendered by Messrs. J. P. Grace, M. Power, A. Vatcher, M. Skanes and L. Kavanagh. During the evening musical selections chiefly patriotic, were discoursed by

Mr. Walker, pianist, and Mr. Chafe, violinist, contributing in no small degree to the enjoyment and success of the event. A noteworthy feature of the programme was the manly and sportsmanlike expressions made by Mr. Hill, the losing competitor in the six-mile challenge race, towards his successful opponent, Mr. Kavanagh. The event was brought to a happy termination by the singing of Auld Lang Syne, Rule Britannia and the National Anthem.

Dear Sir,—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphates of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manure. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season.

Celebrated Norwegian Jigger

Fishermen should use these Jiggers and rig them with swivels same style as in Norway, then the Jigger acts like a minnow and when spinning attracts the fish, so that instead of jiggling they really snap the Jigger and in this manner you never fail to catch them. Ordinary leads can be used, but the Norwegian style seems more simple and easily made. Our fishermen should try this great Norwegian fish killer.

German Held Up.

But There was Nothing in It.

Just as the Red Cross Liner Florizel had berthed at Harvey & Co's. pier to-day, the Customs authorities, upon perusal of the ship's papers, noticed that a man of German extraction was a round-tripper on board and ordered that passengers be disallowed intercourse with the shore pending enquiry regarding this passenger. The gangway leading from the ship's side was guarded whilst a customs official went on board and inquired about the latter who is about 45 years of age, produced some documents, which showed that he was born in Germany, but reared and lived in the United States, nearly all his life time and further that he was a naturalized American citizen. Therefore the passengers were released and allowed to come ashore.

Squid Appearing; Codfish Plentiful.

During the past few days squid have struck in at nearly all the places along the Southern Shore but only small quantities have been fished to date. There are at Cape Breyle 10 bankers waiting for bait, while others are at Bay Bulls and Caplin Bay. Codfish are reported plentiful around the shore and on the local banks, so that with a supply of bait the fishermen are hopeful of a good fall fishing.

GERMAN LINE OF COMMUNICATION WEAK.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, This Afternoon. Tests made at various points along the German army's line of communication, says the Ostend correspondent of the Daily News, show it is surprisingly weak. The Germans seem to have been going forward with the idea that they had nothing more to fear from the Belgian army. If the allies can hold their own at the front, says the correspondent, it is certain that German communications at their base can be cut at any moment. In fact their army seems to be up in the air. It has no support and everything has been changed on a victory for the advancing army, which is travelling fast, carrying its own supplies and supplementing them with levies on the surrounding country.

BELGIANS DOING GOOD WORK.

LONDON, This Afternoon. In an editorial comment on the military situation, the Times says: There is little fresh news from France. Inside its frontier the valiant Belgian army is fulfilling its correct functions by moving out of Antwerp and detaining certain portions of German forces.

Rossley's New Act and Wonderful Pictures.

There is a very good programme at Rossley's to-night, a laughable farce comedy, and some of the best pictures ever seen in St. John's. "The Drummer of the 8th" is one of the most stirring pictures ever filmed, and one can hardly believe that the wonderful sight presented is only a picture. "Only a Fire Fighter" shows a stage-struck girl gives up her fireman lover to become a great actress, but her first appearance is a complete failure and a big fire breaks out in the theatre, while the would-be actress is there. She is rescued by her discarded lover, gives up the stage and marries the fire fighter. In fact every picture is a gem. Next Monday Mrs. Rossley will present a drama without words, entirely carried out by her pupils in a series of real living pictures, very novel and beautiful.

Mass of Requiem.

This morning at the R. C. Cathedral, Requiem Mass was sung for the repose of the soul of the late Pope Pius X. Several priests from the outports were in attendance. The altar was specially draped for the occasion and a large congregation was present, including the officers of the R. C. Societies of the city. His Grace occupied the pulpit and briefly reviewed the life and ecclesiastical career of the late Pontiff, whose illustrious reign was marked by so many practical and lasting results in the Roman Catholic Church. His Grace in concluding his discourse, exhorted the congregation to pray for the soul of the late Pope, as they were in duty bound, until he is recognized as a canonized saint of the church. The flags at the Cathedral are at half mast to-day and also those at the halls and many buildings throughout the city.

The Non-Combatant: What He Can Do.

(Manchester Guardian.)
 1.—He can help to prevent financial panic by drawing from his bank only as much as he absolutely needs for immediate expenses. Let him draw out less than usual, not more. Any run on a bank would be a serious blow struck at England.
 2.—He can help to keep food cheap and all his countrymen properly fed by buying no more food at a time than his household needs for the next few days. Anyone who lays in exceptionally large stores of food is helping to raise the price of food, and to make millions of English men, women and children go hungry. He is thus helping the German fleet to do exactly what it wants to do—what it would do to us if it could destroy our navy and get the command of the seas.
 3.—He can live more simply and inexpensively than usual. He will thus be husbanding the nation's wealth. Wars have to be fought by means of both men and money. Any waste of money on luxuries or unnecessary comforts now is like a useless throwing away of soldiers' lives. It means so many casualties the more in one of the two forces which are fighting for us.
 4.—If he is an employer he can increase the country's resisting power by keeping as many of his men employed as possible, if only on short time. Any loss thus incurred by him will be a direct contribution to the most vital of all war funds.
 5.—If he is a workman he can do his best to help any employer who thus helps him and us all.
 6.—He can help by keeping, in every sense, as calm as possible, by refraining from hysterical and frothy demonstrations by being neither too much cast down at small reverses—which must come—nor wildly exultant at small successes.
 7.—He can help our soldiers to make the war an honorable and chivalrous combat by declining, as they do, to believe lightly in imputations of inhumanity and dishonor against our enemies in the field. In every war such imputations are current on both sides. Nine-tenths of them are untrue. Their circulation may terribly intensify the distress of our soldiers' families at home.
 8.—He can keep himself sober and in good health, remembering that until the war is actually over we cannot know how many who are non-combatants now may become combatants, and would be more useful to their country if fit and well.
 9.—He can help by remembering that we are all comrades in a tight place, and that it is neither manly nor safe to try to secure one's self or one's property by means that will make the way out harder for other people. If we all act like good comrades we all shall be safe and we shall have earned our safety.

The British Expeditionary Force.

The British expeditionary force under command of Field Marshal Sir John French is composed of three army corps, each comprising two divisions, and there is an extra cavalry division under the command of Major-General Edmund Allenby—a total of about 165,000.
 Each army corps is formed of twenty-four infantry battalions of about one thousand men each on a war footing, six cavalry regiments, eight batteries of horse artillery of six guns each, eighteen batteries of field artillery, two howitzer batteries and troops of engineers, signal corps, army service corps and other details. The British field force, therefore, should contain seventy-two infantry battalions, eighteen cavalry regiments, twenty-four batteries of horse artillery with 144 guns, fifty-four batteries of field artillery with 324 guns, six howitzer batteries and the usual details, according to the latest British Army list, issued at the end of July.
 The First Army Corps is commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir Douglas Haig, the Third by Major-General W. P. Pulteney, and the Second, which was led by Lieutenant-General Sir James Grierson, who died suddenly to-day, is led by General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien.
 General French's chief of staff is Major-General Sir Arvhibald Murray, K.C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O.
 Each pair of the divisions will constitute a corps. The first Corps, under General Haig, consists of the First and Second Divisions. The second corps, under General Smith-Dorrien, is composed of the Third and Fourth Divisions. A Third Corps is made up of the Fifth and Sixth Divisions. The divisional commanders are:
 First Division—Major-General S. H. Lomax.
 Second Division—Major-General C. C. Monro.
 Third Division—Major-General T. Snow.
 Fifth Division—Major-General Sir C. Ferguson, Bt.
