BUICK'S LEADERSHIP

In winning and in maintaining year after year, for the seventh consecutive year, the first choice of space at the American National Auto shows, Buick has demonstrated conclusively that the true value of any automobile is reflected in the consistency with which the public buys it.

Since the introduction of the 1925 Buick models public patronage has increased to an even greater degree.

The Heir to Beecham Park

CHAPTER V.

Margery jumped lightly from the wall to the soft turf, and then watched the easy way in which the collier and retriever scaled the wall. "How clever they are!" she cried, stopping to pat them.

"But you have not answered me," said Stuart, as they strolled in the cool shade of the trees.

Margery looked at him quickly. "I have never thought about it, Mr. Stuart," she replied. "Would it be wrong to wish it?"

"Wrong?" he repeated. "No, Margery, of course not."

"I love Hurstley," the girl went on, thoughtfully. "Mother lives here, and Reuben, and Lady Coningham, though I cannot remember her well—still I love her; then there are Miss Lawson and all the village."

"No one else?" queried Mr. Crosbie, fixing his eyes on her face.

"Yes—you, Mr. Stuart," Margery answered, softly. "You are here, too."

"But suppose that all these friends were to go away—suppose you were left alone—would you care for Hurstley then?"

Margery's face paled. "I never thought of that," she murmured. "Oh, I could not stay then; it would be terrible!"

Stuart opened his lips as if to speak then closed them firmly again, and for a while there was silence between them as they walked. At last the young squire spoke. They had reached a clump of trees, a cooler, shadier spot, and here he stopped.

"Let me unpack that gigantic basket here, Margery," he said, lightly. "This is the very nook for a picnic."

Margery tossed off her bonnet, and the young man, stretched at full length on the soft grass, feasted his eyes on her radiant beauty, feeling that with every look his determination to see less of this girl was slipping from him, and that for him happiness was found only when in her presence.

CHAPTER VII.

Vane Charteris found the day pass very slowly with no one but her aunt to amuse her. She sat listlessly beside Mrs. Crosbie during the long drive, feeling bored and wearied, and yawned through the afternoon in her room, finding no pleasure in her mother's society and less in her own.

The thought that had come to her suddenly in the morning grew stronger as the hours passed. As Stuart Crosbie's wife, she would taste once more the sweetness of her lost power.

She was leaning by her open window, thinking this, heedless of the beauty of the picture that stretched before her, when her eyes fell on a man's figure strolling leisurely on the lawn—a strange, odd-looking man who seemed not quite at home in his surroundings.

Miss Charteris, roused from her languor, watched him intently, and at once determined that the intruder was a tramp—perhaps one of a gang of thieves. She rose quickly, and made her way from her room, picking up her sun-shade as she went.

Her aunt was out at a garden party, which she had vainly tried to induce Miss Charteris to attend, her mother was enjoying a siesta, and her uncle was absorbed in his books.

There was no one about, and the castle seemed quite deserted as Vane walked across the hall to the back grounds. The man was standing as he had seen him last, his hands in his pockets, his hat pulled low over his brows. She went toward him at once.

"What are you doing here?" she asked. "Do you know you are trespassing?"

The man turned at her first word; he looked at her keenly from a pair of earnest gray eyes, then slowly, and with unmistakable courtesy, removed his slouched felt hat.

"Trespassing?" he repeated, in a cool tone. "Do they prosecute at Crosbie Castle if a man is found gazing only?"

"You are insolent," Miss Charteris responded, frigidly; "and, if you do not leave at once I shall send some of the servants to you."

The man replaced his hat, with a curious expression on his face. "Pray save yourself that trouble," he said, dryly. "I am going; but may I ask if I have the honor of speaking to Mrs. Crosbie?"

Vane's face flushed. "No," she said, coldly. "Ah! Miss Crosbie, perhaps?"

"No," she repeated again. "Indeed! Then, madame, by what right do you eject me?"

"I am Mrs. Crosbie's niece, and, in her absence, do what I know she would desire."

"I shall answer no more questions," she said, quietly. "I must request you to go away at once."

"There spoke George Charteris!" muttered the stranger, as if to himself.

Vane started; she could hardly believe her ears. This shabby man to mention her father's name! It was extraordinary, and not pleasant.

"I do not know who you are," she said, with marked irritation; "but you have heard what I said, and you take no notice of my words. It now remains for the servants to see if they will be more successful."

"Softly, softly, my young lady!" said the man, putting his hand on her arm. "You are much too hasty, and, like all intemperate spirits, judge by appearances only. How do you know whether I have business here or not—whether my visit may not be that of a friend?"

"Friend!" echoed Miss Charteris, sarcastically, at the same time hurriedly drawing her arm from his touch.

"I see," continued the stranger, half closing his eyes, and fixing her with a look which annoyed and flattered her. "I see you count Squire Crosbie's friends by the cut of their coats. Stay; let me convince you that people are not always what they seem."

At that moment a footman was passing along the colonnade; and, calling in a loud voice, the stranger attracted his attention.

"Is your master in?" was the question, put easily and naturally.

The footman hesitated for an instant; but the presence of Miss Charteris reassured him.

"Yes, sir."

"Kindly inform him that I am here."

"What name, sir?" the man asked. "Sir Douglas Gerant."

The footman bowed and turned away, while Vane felt that she wished the ground would open and swallow up this queer, dried, cynical cousin or herself—it mattered not which. Never had she been in so disagreeable a position. Sir Douglas came to her rescue.

"Will you forgive me?" he said, quietly extending his hand, a long, thin white hand, which seemed strangely at variance with his rough, ill-cut clothes.

"It is I who ask that," she replied. "Of course, had I known—"

"Naturally, naturally," interrupted Sir Douglas. "Let us say no more about it. So my cousin Constance is out? Well, I hope she will forgive me for taking her by storm in this way. And where is her boy?"

"Stuart has gone to Chesterham."

"Hum! And is he a nice fellow? Do you like him?"

Miss Charteris hesitated.

"Yes," she replied, slowly. "I like Stuart very much. You will see him this evening."

"Hum!" observed Sir Douglas again; and at that instant the squire's tall, thin figure appeared, a look of undisguised pleasure on his face.

"My dear Douglas!"

Carnation Improves Home-Made Candy

Creamy full-bodied fudge, crispy nut-crackle, smooth, velvet-like chocolate creams all follow the use of Carnation Milk in candy recipes. Carnation adds a smooth richness to your candy, for Carnation Milk is just pure, fresh milk, evaporated to double richness, kept safe by sterilization. Economical—it keeps indefinitely in the can, and for several days when opened. Order from your grocer several tall (16 oz.) cans or a case of 48 cans.

FUDGE
2 squares chocolate, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 cups sugar, 1/2 cup water, 1/2 cup Carnation Milk. Melt butter and chocolate, in saucepan, add sugar. Carnation Milk and water. Cool until mixture forms soft ball in cold water. Cool without stirring; beat until creamy. Mold on buttered plate or waxed paper.

CARNATION GARELS
1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup white sugar, 1/2 cup corn syrup, 1/2 cup Carnation Milk. Mix well and boil, stirring often, until the mixture makes a firm though not brittle, ball when dropped in cold water. Pour into a pan which has been rinsed with cold water and allow to cool without stirring or disturbance. When nearly cold mark into squares and cut when cold. May be laid in the pan before pouring in the candy. If chocolate flavor is liked, add one square of the best chocolate before the candy has finished cooking.

This coupon entitles you to receive free of charge a copy of Mary Blake's Cook Book which contains over 100 carefully tested recipes. Cut out this coupon and mail to Milk Products Co., Ltd., Aylmer, Ont.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

THE WOMAN WHO WOULDN'T GIVE IN.

A woman whom I know but slightly but whom one of my neighbors knows very well, complacently collapsed the day after Christmas with a violent attack of neuritis.

"I've been having it for weeks," she told her sympathizing neighbors, "but I had so much to do I simply wouldn't give in to it. Besides all my own Christmas work and my Christmas cards, (I gave 52 gifts and sent out 69 personal cards) I addressed Henry's business Christmas cards and you know he sends out several hundred."

"Why, I think it was terrible of him to let you do all that," said one of her sympathizers, "when you were suffering so."

Not One To Complain. "Oh, Henry didn't know anything about it," declared the lady with the neuritis, "I don't believe in talking about one's pains and aches. I never said a word about it until the day after Christmas. I fainted away that day and they had to get a nurse and send for Henry. He was scared to death. You know I'm not one to complain about anything the matter with me until I just have to."

My neighbor reported that conversation to me as a sample of the lady's pluck and unselfishness.

And I shocked my neighbor by refusing to see it in any such light.

Kinder To Let Him Help Her. Are you shocked too? Or do you feel with me that that woman would have been a great deal more sensible and a great deal more helpful to her Henry if she had told him there was something the matter with her and let him help her head it off, before it got to the fainting, trained nurse, husband-called-from-the-office, stage?

Of course there are a lot of people who talk about every ache and pain, and complain and groan, and crave special indulgence when the least thing ails them. No one questions but what they are bad citizens.

But at the other extreme is this type of person (and I do think it is a type, if not a common one) who hides a

But You Only Looked Cross.

Which last points the moral of the tale. Of course he (or she) wouldn't have been so cross. But how was he to know when you only looked cross and puffy yourself, and didn't say you were sick? I think there are grievance hunters who really take solid joy in keeping an ailment to themselves and then complaining because they haven't received special consideration on account of it.

What we need to sweep away these cobwebs of illogical and harmful actions is more common sense, more consideration.

Common sense and a habit of considering the probable results of actions logically will help us to decide when it is considerate not to talk about our ailments and when it is more considerate and in accordance with the golden rule to let people know about them.

The Typical Englishman

"A recent notice in our personal column invited a 'typical English gentleman' to pose for photographic advertising," says the Times. "By the terms of the offer he was to be young, tall, and fair; but no other restriction was set upon any man's choice of himself as an ideal representative of his nation. The field of honour was allowed to be very wide, for even the prescribed boundaries of youth, height, and fairness are more variable than exact, and are open to the opposed interpretations of modesty and conceit."

"Are forty years too many and seventy inches too few? Every man's answer will depend upon his own age and stature and upon his desire, or regard as 'a typical English gentleman.' For it is not to be assumed that there is a universal wish to be considered."

"There are thousands who would be so shocked by the offer of such a title that they point their shoes in the Parisian manner and encourage their youthfully romantic whiskers with all the blandishments of Spain. A suggestion that they were typically English would be received by them as an insult. They have an elegant contempt for the nation to which they belong, or to which they have at least attached themselves. Invite them to self-analysis, and they will murmur smoothly of European culture. Speak to them of heredity and, with a flutter of their stout young hands, they will impudently discuss the problem of cosmopolitan descent. But typically English? No, no, no—not that. Having enjoyed so much emphasis, they will smile with all their teeth, and thus persuade even the dull English to agree with them."

"Ours is a race mixed and various, the product of conquests and 'adoptions' of the strongest commingling of fierceness, tolerance, and chance. From one source we draw that stolidity which strangers call dullness; from other sources, many of them Celtic, that swiftness of imagination which the dull call erratic. Less easily, perhaps, than any other people are we to be summed up in a single portrait. John Bull is certainly not our physical representative, nor is there any obvious substitute for him. A substitute may not be discovered."

"THE AIR IS FULL OF THINGS YOU SHOULDN'T MISS"

"We don't dread the winter any more. Radio brings the companionship of the world right into the living room."

The lonesome evening hours are fast disappearing under the magic of radio.

Now the whole family can enjoy the world's best music, can listen to church services and receive the latest news of the world.

A good radio receiving set will do this, and more—but every radio receiver needs the best batteries, when you purchase a radio, be sure to buy EVEREADY RADIO BATTERIES to make it operate at its best. THERE ARE NO BETTER.

Insist on EVEREADY RADIO BATTERIES. They last longer.

EVEREADY Radio Batteries

Mistakes

When a plumber makes a mistake he charges twice for it. When a lawyer makes a mistake it is just what he wanted, because he has a chance to try the case all over again.

When a carpenter makes a mistake it's just what he expected. When a doctor makes a mistake he buries it.

When a judge makes a mistake he becomes the law of the land. When an electrician makes a mistake, he blames it on the induction; nobody knows what that means.

When a salesman makes a mistake the customer was an obstinate man. When an editor makes a mistake good night!

Ask Grandma—She knows.

DISMAL DIVES
Fine fur silken dress and waist, pomp and don't banish distress, a man poses the hums of his strolling language will bring new force to their planning of life, and everything cheer-up stuff distaining. Say to dance and sing. They have time to ponder o'er every little describing, as they wander, all elements they may know, a rusty cap yonder, and here a swollen leg. The poor man, toiling, sweating, he may get the sack, has little for fretting o'er aches that red rack, he finds himself forgetting stitches in his back. He hustles here gone on strike, he complains that fever or flu has him tired, the foreman pleads clearer and tells him he is tired, so he is concealing the facts about cold, insisting that he's feeling Thompson's two-year-old; he has some sunshine spilling to show hale and bold. But rich men have bosses to make them stand around and so they talk of crosses that this world abound, they feel like losses, and raise a dismal sound, seems the fates are spiteful, to the rich men's sun; this world may be delightful to those who have mon, but illness is frightful, spoils all human fun.

Strike in Buckingham Palace and London Public Buildings

Manitoba and Quebec Show Large Profits on Liquor Rates.—Police Probe in Montreal Finished.—Dr. Drummond Suggests Repealing Church Union Act.

EIGHT UNIONS INVOLVED.
LONDON, Jan. 27. Eight Labor Unions, involving all the elevator operators, engineers, electricians, stockers and unskilled laborers of Buckingham Palace, the Houses of Parliament, Law Courts, Bessons and other public buildings, have gone on strike because an election would not pay his membership dues to the Union and was not discharged by his employers. The King and Queen, being at Sandringham, have not suffered, and enough volunteer workers have been engaged to relieve the situation somewhat.

ENGINEERING STAFF ON STRIKE.
LONDON, Jan. 27. The electric lighting, heating, and other engineering services at Buckingham Palace, the Houses of Parliament, Hampton Court and Kew Gardens are being run by volunteers today owing to a strike of the engineering staff of the office of works, because of the employment of a non-union man in the Eastern Division. Only 200 men struck and it was expected 900 would be involved later.

ANOTHER RESIGNATION.
HAMILTON, Jan. 27. Rev. Dr. Drummond, Minister of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and Chairman of the General Board of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, has tendered his resignation as the Chairman of the Committee. He was a strong advocate for consulting the people again by ballot before legislation was sought. He feels that the voters now coming in prove how unready the Church as a whole is for union, and that, in short, these who were parties to the original agreement that the union would not be attempted without practical unanimity are now in honor bound to seek the repeal of the United Church of Canada Act.

THE BARRIER.
PARIS, Jan. 27. An agreement between German metallurgical and mechanical interests is alleged by the French press to be hampering the Franco-German negotiations for a commercial pact.

MANITOBA'S LIQUOR PROFITS.
WINNIPEG, Jan. 27. The net profits of the Manitoba Liquor Control Commission for the year beginning August 7, 1923, and ended August 31, 1924, amounted to $1,846,161.84, according to a report and balance sheet tabled in the Legislature. At Winnipeg, the net profit was $1,228,145.01, and branches at country centres made profits as follows:—Brandon, $31,135.94; Portage La Prairie, $27,913.92; The Pas, $26,156.94; Dauphin, $22,911.53. The total of goods purchased ran into $2,287,270.78, and the total sales amounted to $3,639,179.85.

STACOMB'S HAIR COMB.
Men are finding in Stacomb what they have always sought—an easy, natural way to keep the hair looking always as trim and neat as their favorite barber leaves it. Women find Stacomb just the thing to control stray hairs, to make the curl stay in, and to keep bobbed hair in place. Stacomb is a smooth, velvety, invisible cream—non-staining, and non-greasy. It comes in jars and in tubes—compact, economical. You can get it at all drug and department stores.

THE QUEST WILL GO NORTH.
OSLO, Norway, Jan. 27. Sir Ernest Shackleton's famous exploration ship the Quest, sturdy veteran of the Antarctic, this year will penetrate the frozen realms of the Polar sea. It will carry two hunting expeditions, one to the White Sea by way of Nova Zembla and Franz Josef Land, returning by way of Bear Island and Spitzbergen; and the other to the remote island of Jan Mayen and the east coast of Greenland. Captain Schielderup will be in command. Seal, reindeer, polar bear and muskox will be the principal game sought.

BARON GRENPELL DEAD.
WINDLESHAM, Surrey, Eng., Jan. 27.—Field Marshal Baron Grenfell, one of Great Britain's most noted leaders, died here to-day.

MONCTON HOTEL DESTROYED.
MONCTON, Jan. 27. A fire which resulted in the death of one aged woman and the injury of two others, in addition to a number of narrow escapes, practically destroyed the Windsor Hotel here, the fire starting at 2 a.m. The hotel had 25 rooms, was valued at $25,000, and partly covered by insurance. The dead woman is Mrs. Cordelia Scott, aged 66, who had been a guest at the hotel for some years. She jumped from the third story of the Windsor and died shortly after being taken to hospital.

DIPHTHERIA OUTBREAK AT NOME.
NOME, Alaska, Jan. 27. Nome has a Diphtheria epidemic and has no antitoxine. The nearest known supply is at Anchorage, 600 miles away, and may be sent by dog team. Several deaths have been reported.

ACCUSES CATHOLIC SISTERS OF LACK OF INTEREST.
MONTREAL, Jan. 27. That Catholic women did not display sufficient interest in civic affairs and did not co-operate enough with non-Catholics in working for the general good of the community, was the point stressed by Mrs. W. H. Lovering, National President of the Catholic Women's League and Vice-Chairman of the International Travellers Aid Society, in addressing a supper meeting of the business women's unit of the Catholic Women's League here last night.

SOLUTION OF TUESDAY'S PUZZLE

Hooley's Nfld. Spec

In the News of the World has been appearing for some time an account of the various schemes undertaken and dealt with through Ernest T. Hooley during his chequered career. In the last issue received is the following account of Mr. Hooley's entry into a Newfoundland speculation, which, if he did not pull it off, seems to have enabled him to make a fairly considerable scoop. The following is his account of the transaction:—

PULP AND TIMBER

My Masterpiece in the Art of Making Profits.

Among the numerous people who bought shares from me was a Mr. Arthur Paine, the licensee of the Windsor Castle Hotel, Victoria. I had very considerable transactions with this man over a period of three or four years, which ultimately resulted in my appearing in the dock at the Old Bailey with an old acquaintance of cycle-boom days, H. J. Lawson. Paine complained that he had bought 211,000 worth of Siberian shares from me on the understanding that over £4,000,000 worth of gold had been extracted from the mines. Later, I shall have something further to say concerning the trial at the Old Bailey, and in the meantime I had better tell the story of the Newfoundland Pulp and Timber Territories.

When the late Alfred Harnsworth, or Lord Northcliffe as he afterwards became, thought of the scheme to create a paper supply of his own, I was naturally impressed with the idea, not with the thought of running newspapers of my own, but because of the wonderful financial possibilities which lay behind something similar. About the end of 1909 there came to England one named James Henry Green, who had bought an option on a big tract of territory immediately adjacent to Harnsworth's Anglo-Newfoundland Development Co.

Mr. Green was quite a modest individual in his way, and for the sum of £2,500, plus one-third of the shares, he was agreeable to hand over his rights, lock, stock, and barrel, and let me get on with the business. My idea, if I could get enough money, was to build up a rival organization to that of the Harnsworth concern, and ultimately induce them to buy us out, and so that there should be ample margin for negotiations, I registered at Somerset House the Newfoundland Pulp and Timber Territories, Ltd., with a capital of £1,000,000.

I look upon this company as my masterpiece in the art of making profits. My worst enemies could not accuse me of being over-modest, but in those days was of much use to me. My actual cash outlay on Newfoundland Pulp and Timber Territories was about £3,000, and I allowed myself £997,000 profit.

It was a godsend to me for quite a long time. Along with the Siberian Goldfields, I was always in the happy position of being able to accommodate anyone who wanted a good speculation. There was a dear old gentleman in Watford who bought some shares in a business concern from me, and bought them back. But he was more than content when I gave him Newfoundland shares in exchange, and for some years I had plenty of them to dispose of to people who believed in the magic of my name. The first Viscount Astor had 80,000 of them through a certain lady, while dozens of other people bought them from time to time, and were happy enough in the thought that one day Alfred Harnsworth would buy them out at their own price. He never did, but that is another story.

Note:—An enquiry at the Dept. of Agriculture and Mines fails to throw any light on this transaction, and it is impossible to find out who the modest individual called Green really is. Further the Department has no knowledge of the Newfoundland Pulp and Timber Territories.

TOO LATE.

Oh, whether it be a train or ship to beat me on my way,
Or whether it be a friendly call and a cherry word to say,
Or whether it be a rose I send with love for a fellow mate,
Let me not linger and have it said: "You have come, but you're just too late!"

For the train pulls out and the ship departs and the lagger stays behind,
And little use for the lardy soul does the old world seem to find;
And life goes on in its steadfast way, for none will it ever wait,
And vain are the joy and love we bring if we come to the door too late.

Let me come to the station or pier of life in time for the ship or train,
Let me prove my love when the need is great and not when the need is vain;
Let me tell it all with my friendly deeds, not rush at the end to state

Poor words which the living had smiled to hear, but are spoken at last too late.

Let me be a friend to my friends to-day, and let them know what I think and feel;
Let the man I am and the deeds I do the depth of my love reveal;
Let me stand with them in the battle's heat, when the need for a friend is great;
And not trust it all to a wreath of flowers which is sent to his home, too late!

Two Mondays Every Week

Oddities Of Time That Even Greenwich Cannot Regulate.

Most of us celebrated the birth of 1925 as soon as Big Ben's strokes had sounded twelve midnight on December 31st, 1924. But until this year the world of science, especially that of astronomy, and consequently that of shipping, did not start the New Year until twelve hours later. In other words, the "civil" day has always started at midnight; the nautical or astronomical day at mid-day. With 1925 came the change, a bigger one than most of us realize, and in future both days begin simultaneously at midnight.

The Royal Observatory at Greenwich is the creator of time for the whole civilized world. Greenwich Mean Time dominates time for all nations that use Standard Time. By standard time is meant time which differs from Greenwich Mean Time by whole hours. Through Greenwich Observatory runs the first degree of longitude, and for purposes of Standard Time the world is divided into zones of fifteen degrees, or one hour breadth, the Greenwich Meridian marking the zero zone.

A Mammoth Telescope.

For example, Belgium and Holland keep Greenwich time, but the time in Switzerland, Sweden and Denmark is one hour earlier than Greenwich Mean Time. North America is so huge that it is divided into five time-zones. Standard time in Japan is five hours earlier than Greenwich time.

Greenwich Observatory was founded by Charles II. in 1675, and his instruction to Flamsteed, the first Astronomer Royal, proved that he realized the value to commerce of a correct standard of time. He told Flamsteed "to apply himself with the utmost care and diligence to the rectifying of the tables of the motion of the Heavens."

The mean time standard clock at Greenwich is connected by electric action with the standard sidereal clock. The latter is kept in an underground room called the Magnetic Basement, and is regulated by which are known as the clock stars. The latter are fixed stars some 200 in number, which are used for determining sidereal or star time.

They are observed by means of the transit circle, which consists of a large telescope, the outside of which resembles a great cannon. It is fitted so that it can be elevated or depressed to point still north or south, yet never to diverge from the north or south line. Upon looking through this telescope the observer notices what appear to be a row of vertical steel bars across the opening, but these are, in fact, delicately-strung lengths of spider web. Exact time is obtained by observing the precise instant at which the clock stars cross these web lines.

Up to 1883 each country had its own meridian of time, France at Paris and the United States at Washington, but these difficulties were such a worry to navigators that eventually the Greenwich meridian was settled upon, with uniform allowances for the distances of various countries.

In any locality time is earlier or later than Greenwich according to the distances east or west and this leads to a middle when one reaches places lying on or near longitude 180—that is, the exact opposite side of the world from Greenwich. A vessel sailing eastwards across the Pacific, say from San Francisco to Yokohama, has two days of the same name as it crosses the critical meridian; in other words, one day of nearly forty-eight hours

Address on Wembley Exhibition

By D. J. DAVIES, B.Sc.

As you may have heard, we had a day in our Pavilion when the King and Queen accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire visited Newfoundland. I accompanied the King and the Daily Mail next day and his Majesty in the Newfoundland Pavilion was "smiling and laughing" like a man without a care. The most interesting visitor from the Masonic standpoint was our Grand Master, His Royal Highness the Duke of Devonshire. He stayed for about 15 minutes or more.

As expected, according to the circular I received from Bro. Lewis, to give you an informal address on Wembley in general and the Newfoundland Pavilion in particular. Wembley in general is a pretty big subject for an address, and I may say there are several brothers present here to-night who are well able to talk about Wembley in general. I came to see Wembley in general with my hands full with the Newfoundland Pavilion. I think it is of every importance. I think it is the most important of the Exhibition. I had the advantage of being selected privately around a good part of the exhibits; for instance, I had a private view of the dolls house which everything was explained by Sir Lawrence Weaver. It was a wonderful exhibit: all the furniture, motor carriages, etc. were all to scale. As a rule I walked through these things without seeing much as I was on my way to a conference or trying back to the Newfoundland Pavilion.

The greatest attractions were the things put on at the Stadium. The opening ceremony was the most important, a fitting setting for the gathering together of the citizens of our vast Empire. Thanksgiving Sunday, May 25th, the stoutest hearts, and the will of the two minutes silence will never be forgotten by those present. Later in the season we had an insight into the life of the prairies in the Bodeo. People marvelled at the address and experience of the cowboy, speaking personally, one by one with mixed feelings about the whole thing. Next came the great Empire with its 15,000 pictures. These lasted three weeks, and took three consecutive nights to go through all the episodes. First night was "Westward Ho," Newfoundland and Canada; second night "Eastward Ho," India and other Eastern countries; third night, "Southward Ho," Australia and New Zealand.

It was a great historical feast and wonderful at the endurance and bravery of our Empire pioneers as their feats were portrayed in the Pavilion. The Newfoundland episode were cheered to the echo, and the landing of the cable, Marconi's genius and Alcock and Brown's Atlantic flight were of intense interest to the whole world. The next big event in the Stadium was the Military Tattoo put up by the British and Territorial units as the London Scottish. On the evening night we had a whole row of Newfoundlanders behind the Royal Canadian Mounted Police marching and marching with and without torches. The general saying was that, "I never put up by the British Guards more than I did."

As I must hurry to Newfoundland in particular. I know you want to hear about our modest but effective participation at Wembley. I am sorry to say that I have had to give interviews and articles on our show to the press, and it is difficult to do so under great difficulties at the start. Our Government—not the present Government—did not decide to take part in the Wembley of 1924 until, I believe, the October of 1923, and it was impossible in the time at our disposal and the small sum of money granted us to gather together new exhibits for every section, and we had to depend on many things that were collected for the Festival of Empire held in London as far back as 1911. It is true we had the fur animals reconditioned, but they had not the stamp of newness and freshness of new exhibits about them. The collection of caribou and caribou heads was a magnificent effort, and the committee responsible deserve every praise. It was the best collection of heads at Wembley. The Timber Committee and Mineral Committee of which I was the convenor worked well, and insisted on new exhibits and our efforts were crowned with success. The Anglo-Newfoundland Development Co. put up a most attractive pulp and paper section, which proved of great interest to paper makers from all over the world. In connection with our Pulp and Paper Exhibit must have been a very favourable impression on the investing public when the new lines of the Armstrong Whitworth Company appeared in the English press. I hope it may also help the promoters of the Gander proposition when they are ready to place their valuable holdings before the financiers of Britain.

I had to meet timber operators and investors time and time again to discuss with them the possibility of carrying on operations in Newfoundland and Newfoundland Labrador, and several propositions are being discussed and considered during the winter months. Some operations are being carried out on our West Coast, this winter as a result of these discussions and I earnestly hope they will prove successful.

OUR MINERAL EXHIBIT. With regard to the mineral section I may say that a great many mining engineers from Europe and America came to make enquiries about our minerals. The principals of some of the big mining corporations of England brought their expert engineers and smelters to consult me at my office, and I was very glad that my knowledge of metallurgy enabled me to talk to them intelligently on the methods of smelting that would be suitable for our ores. Alden Smith, President of the Chemical and Metal Bank and at one time the most prominent member of the big Burmah Corporation, visited my Pavilion with his experts, John Taylor, one of the principals of John Taylor & Sons, mining people, who own vast holdings in India, came to see me and lunched with me at Wembley. Vere Herbert Smith, a director of the Kusto Asiatic Copper Corporation, whose ancestors spent tens of thousands of pounds at Ming's Eight, paid me several visits, and I have been asked especially to keep in touch with them and when the price of copper begins to climb I have strong hopes of inducing them to come to explore the mineral areas of Newfoundland. They are the right type of people and it would have been very difficult to meet them and interest them in our mineral resources were it not for our mineral section at Wembley.

Lead and Zinc smelters were delighted with our collection of lead and zinc ores, and I am expecting some of the representative men in the lead and zinc world to visit our colony next year. It is essential that we should keep our country always before them otherwise they may be diverted to other lands. The Stamp exhibit was acknowledged by expert Philatelists to be the best collection of stamps at the Exhibition, Edgar's table top and wall map of Newfoundland. They were done by him many years ago when he had very much more patience and speak volumes for his patience and taste. The Linde and Twines of the Colonial Cordage Company were always surrounded by fisher folk from England and other countries, and when I longed for a country with a better climate than England I would go and sniff at their tarry smell and imagine myself back at some waterside premises in St. John's.

Our unique show of Berries excited considerable interest among the housewives who visited Wembley. The committee in charge of the berry section would have put up a much better show if it had been decided to take part in the Exhibition before the berry season closed. As it was they had to make a house to house collection among the thrifty housewives of St. John's. The great medicinal product of the Empire—the Cod Liver Oil of Newfoundland was very well displayed. Special photographs of the plant were taken by request to enable University students to grasp how this great vitamin containing substance is manufactured, and many enquiries were received from the drug houses of Britain, France and Australia. I have a great opportunity of getting another market for this product. I interested a millionaire mine owner, whose hobby is hog farming, in our Cod Liver Oil, and I have an invitation to visit his farm of 4000 hogs in Surrey and instruct his foreman how to use the oil in the feeding of hogs. If this experiment should prove successful it means another great market for our Cod Liver Oil, and possibly even our Crude Cod Oil.

A GLIMPSE AT THE PAVILIONS.

I shall deal very briefly with the Pavilions and Palaces. Each one deserves a separate evening. Canada's magnificent was easily the best of all the Dominions and Colonial Pavilions, but then the Canadian Exhibition staff are professional exhibitors, and they have done nothing else for a period of twenty years or more. The principal members of their Wembley staff were the same that took charge of Canada at the White City in 1908. The scenes were most realistic and they must have had a tremendous influence in beckoning emigrants to that great country, but I saw nothing there showing the cold and snows of winter and the glaring suns of summer. The Prince of Wales on his E.P. ranch depicted in butter must have proved an easy feat of all the exhibits in the whole of the Exhibition. Australia had a splendid Pavilion, if anything, on a larger scale than Canada, but the exhibits were not set up with the same finish as those of its giant neighbour. I consider that the mineral section of Australia was the best in the Exhibition, and intensely interesting from the technical viewpoint.

The New Zealand Pavilion was not at its best until June, and from that time on they had a most attractive show. They featured their frozen meats, in bulk with cold storage facilities, and I am wondering if anybody succeeded in guessing the weight of the mammoth cheese in their Pavilion.

The South African Pavilion housed the exhibits of the different sections of that great country from Cape Town to Rhodesia. I may say here that Australia, South Africa and Newfoundland produced the prize babies of Wembley. The Exhibition Commissioner for South Africa went up three times to receive prizes for his country's babies, and I went up once on behalf of John Angel, Strange of Newfoundland. I felt most utterly and hopelessly bashful as the crowds in the Conference Hall put me down as being responsible for the baby. One popular feature of South Africa was the dinners they sold in a train's dining car, an exact copy of the dining cars used on the South African railways. The ostrich farm was another popular attraction. The South Africans went in for money making, and Newfoundland has now taken a leaf from their book and we have arranged for a sales counter in our Pavilion for the Wembley of 1925.

The Pavilions and Palaces of Wembley formed such a wonderful and varied agglomeration of buildings and exhibits that it is really very difficult to give an informal talk on it. The carved Pavilion of Burma with its minarets and tinkling bells was considered to be the most beautiful. The great Indian building resident of the east, The Walled City of Africa. The shop of Palestine with replicas of the Temple of Solomon at different periods of its history as a side show. The Asiatic buildings of Hong Kong and Ceylon. The stately Government House of the homeland. The diminutive Fijian Pavilion and Newfoundland's delightfully modest building. They all leave a tremendous impression on our minds of the might, the majesty, the magnitude and glory of this great Empire of ours.

NEWFOUNDLAND IN PARTICULAR. I must hurry to Newfoundland in particular. I know you want to hear about our modest but effective participation at Wembley. I am sorry to say that I have had to give interviews and articles on our show to the press, and it is difficult to do so under great difficulties at the start. It means another great market for our Cod Liver Oil, and possibly even our Crude Cod Oil. The big glass case containing Marconi's Wireless set with which he obtained his first signals across the Atlantic Ocean at Cabot Tower, St. John's, together with the photographs of the first messages and a photograph of the inventor taken by Mr. Vey, excited very great interest in this broadcasting age. The scenic view of the Humber country with the great construction works of the Armstrong Whitworth Company outlined on it, was a very popular section in our Pavilion. A great number of operators and mechanics have left England for Corner Brook. A good many more came to see me in order to get some encouragement to go out there. The wives and sweethearts, parents and children and aunts and uncles of these all came to see me at Wembley, and you may depend upon it that I gave them a beautiful description of our delectable land. To the engineer had to acknowledge that I was the best recruiting sergeant the country ever had. The "Nona" knitting room were artistically displayed by Miss Furlong. They were very well made and compared favourably with knitted articles from Fair Island. There is bound to be a great future for this industry in this golfing world.

I want to say a few words about the exhibit that took more of my time and energy than any other section of our Pavilion. I mean the bales of Eel Grass and mattresses manufactured from it. This Eel Grass or Goose Grass, known in the upholstery trade as "Alva Marina," is a very fine and springy seaweed and a good substitute for the very much more expensive horsehair. Large quantities of the same type of seaweed used to be imported from Holland, but the market was spelt by damp bales and also by the presence of large quantities of sand. The people were struck with our product; the best they had ever seen, and it was very difficult to convince them that the bales had not been collected specially for Exhibition purposes. Letters came from all over Great Britain, Germany, Belgium, Spain, Chile, China, Rhodesia, Scandinavia asking for samples and prices. The samples were sent at once, but it was a difficult matter to get prices. At last I put the business in the hands of a competent broker and he has come to the conclusion, after a good deal of haggling and trouble, that we will succeed in obtaining a good market for this product at remunerative prices. The Assistant Goods Manager of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway came specially to my Pavilion to point out to me the superiority of the port of Garston over Liverpool, for handling the eel grass. A big warehouseman from Liverpool came offering to put large warehousing facilities at our disposal. Brethren, the market is there, it is our business to supply the commodity.

The Seal Exhibit was particularly interesting on account of the beautiful collection of leather goods manufactured from the seal skins. The pouches, pocket books, book-bindings, evening shoes were a revelation, even to many visitors from Newfoundland. The articles were acknowledged to be equal if not superior to similar goods made from the best Morocco leather and exhibited at the Palace of Industry.

ENGLISH SPORTSMEN ARE ATTRACTED. A great number of English sportsmen came to talk over the tourist facilities of Newfoundland. Many of these people used to visit Norway annually for the salmon fishing, but in recent years the Norwegian salmon fishing is getting more and more expensive and is now beyond the reach of the "new poor" of England. They were delighted to hear of the free fishing and the comparative cheapness of a holiday in our country. One Anglo-Indian officer, who came to the West Coast during the summer had the courtesy to write to me on his return and thank me for having put him in the way of a most delightful holiday. He has decided already to pay another visit next year. I believe there is a great future for our country in this respect, but we must have the necessary facilities. A headquarters hotel in St. John's with small branch hotels on our sporting rivers appear to be necessary in order to encourage the tourist business, and another essential is a good fortnightly service between St. John's and Liverpool.

Brethren, I feel my informal address is getting rather lengthy and it is quite possible that I may have left out some of our exhibits, but I hope that I have given you a general outline of our Pavilion which may have direct bearing on the commercial side. Before I conclude I should like to touch upon some of the educational advantages of our participation at Wembley.

OVER 2,000,000 VISIT NFDL. PAVILION. The greatest surprise to me was the enormous number of people that were attracted to our Pavilion. Our small but stately building was visited during the 166 days of the Exhibition by over two million people. This number is not given as pure guess work, but was obtained by systematic counting at different times during the days and months of Wembley and by comparing these numbers with the totals that passed daily through the turnstiles of the Exhibition. In one respect I am inclined to think that Newfoundland in proportion to its population, has created a record in that a number equal to eight times the population of the Dominion passed in through the doors of the Pavilion.

A great number of these people who came to see the land of fogs were tremendously impressed by the mural decorations of Wembley and by the beautiful paintings of Mrs. Power, which portrayed in a most artistic manner the delightful colour tints of our Island Home. These people left with the impression that our country is not a land of fogs and dogs, but a land of bright sunshine, sparkling streams, tall timber and green glades.

The 35,000 postcards that were sold during the last three months of the Exhibition were in two series of six views each. These series were enclosed in envelopes on the backs of which was a short article written by me on the industries and attractions of Newfoundland. The great educational value of these views spread over so many thousands of homes all over the world cannot be estimated at the present time. The British people, though they have the reputation of being stolid, are, really, among the most sentimental people in the world, and that sentiment could be felt when they visited the Pavilion of Britain's Oldest colony, the foundation on which the great overseas Empire has been built, made Terra Nova the first stepping stone to this vast Empire of ours the practical Gilbert and designed by the visionary Raleigh. The great Em- That sentiment nearly brought the Representation All Awry!

Certain things improve with old age; others become obsolete or in course of time decay and disappear; others again continue to exist long after their term of usefulness has ended, and in the latter category must be placed the Statutes which lay down how and by whom the members of the Representative Assembly of Newfoundland are chosen for their responsible offices.

For generations public men have wrestled with this problem in the hope of improving the system, and from time to time suggestions have been made, but fear of the consequences or political considerations have been allowed to overcome their better judgment, and the matter has been deferred sine die. Like many another question which vitally concerns the welfare of this country, it has so often been referred to in the press as to have become a "chestnut," or it is looked upon simply as a topic for an article when no subject of immediate importance offers, and although the man on the street frequently discusses it, neither he nor anyone else believes for a moment that any alteration in the existing system is ever likely to be effected. And yet why not? In view of the important changes which have been made elsewhere in this respect, can we afford to admit that we are incapable of evolving a better system, or to argue that what was good enough for our grandfathers is good enough for us? In fact it is not probable that were those grandfathers still with us, they would be the first to show the way?

Under present arrangements 18 Districts are represented in the House of Assembly by 36 members. The population, according to the last census, is about 260,000, which allows on an average one member to every 7,222 persons. How far the actual representation falls short of or exceeds this average is only too evident by glancing over the following summary, familiar though it may be to everyone:-

Table with 4 columns: District, Pop., No. of Members, Per Capita Representation. Lists districts like Twillingate, Fogo, Bonaville, etc.

One or two examples quoted from the above are sufficient to show how utterly unfair this system of representation is in operation, and how inconsistent it is with the principle laid down. Ferryland has a member in the House for each 3,008 people; Bay St. George, on the other hand, has one member for 13,556, and St. Barbe one for 12,176. In other words, one voter in Ferryland is equal to 4 voters in Bay St. George or in the District of St. Barbe. Harbour Grace has 3 members for 11,925, while St. John's East has 3 members for 28,419, and so it goes on.

Why it has gone on year after year without a murmur from these disfranchised districts it is impossible to say. The question is whether it will be allowed to go on century after century. Various administrations have promised to give it their consideration, and so they have, and the result of their deliberations has been to leave it alone. They have been frightened by the very aspect of it, based as it is on denominationalism and buttressed by material of the same kind.

If the only objection to the present distribution of seats was on the ground of disfranchisement, it would be sufficient to condemn it, but there is another evil which results from it. In the case of a two or a three man district, it is a practical certainty that the popular party will have all their candidates returned by it, even though possibly only one of the team is in any way suited to occupy a seat in the House. It is always conceded that, provided circumstances are favourable, one strong man is able to carry the other or others with him to victory, and past elections have proved that such a plan of campaign can be and has been relied upon. As a result, the country has to depend upon men utterly unfitted for such responsibility, to make the laws which govern them and to approve of contracts or intelligently to oppose and criticize them.

The only way out of the difficulty seems to be to scrap the present system and to split the whole country up into one man districts. Even though it may be impossible to make the divisions strictly on the per capita basis, it should not be difficult to devise a scheme in which the scale of representation would be far more equitable than it is at present.

Here then is the despotic giant, which makes of our system of representative government a mockery, but where is the David that will rally forth to give him battle?

The Board of Trade.

Elsewhere is published the Report of the Board of Trade which was presented at the Annual Meeting held yesterday. Of the Report itself it is sufficient to say that it deals with the most pressing problems in connection with our commercial activities and is deserving of the most careful perusal by everyone who is desirous of furthering Newfoundland's chief interests. Unfortunately it is lacking in statistical facts, but that is not due to any fault of the compilers.

The Report is the work of the most part of the Council, and to those members great credit is due for the time and labor they have willingly given during their year in office. Unfortunately, however, there is little to indicate that the Board of Trade as a whole is equally alive to the importance of the part that the Chamber should take in the affairs of the community. Its membership is far below what it should be, and even when meetings to consider matters of moment are called the attendance is small and little or no interest seems to be taken in the proceedings.

It seems to us regrettable that such indifference is observable, for the Board of Trade cannot hope to function as fully as it should until its membership roll comprises everyone who is concerned in the trade of the country, and the members themselves determine that it shall be a virile factor in all measures under consideration to improve our standing in the commercial world.

Nothing Doing

Dear Sir.-In connection with the proposal to re-rail part of the cross country service, it is said that certain contractors are at work to have the order for the new rails placed with a German firm. Rumour has it that German concerns have already submitted quotations but as to the occurrence of the report it is impossible to say. A few years ago our own flesh and blood were receiving iron and steel from Germany in small parcels sent on an errand of death, and many are the homes in Newfoundland today which still have cause to remember the result of those deliveries and the spirit in which they were sent. Less than eight years ago Newfoundlanders stood on the bridgehead of Cologne, at watchposts over the horde that had been driven back to their own fastnesses. To-day the Allies are standing in the same spot, engaged in the same duty, because Germany has been proved as faithless in peace as she was ruthless in war. Are we going to have any further truck in iron and steel with these people, while British and American firms are equally capable of supplying the order? Even if the firms of Germany, by repudiating her debts, and by begging money from the world to feed her starving millions, while Fritz enjoyed himself to the height of his bent in every holiday resort in Europe, is capable to quote terms lower than other corporations, is that any reason why we should lend ourselves to her infamy and play into her hand? Newfoundland has need to economize, but Newfoundland has not yet fallen so low that she will remain oblivious of the bloody hand in which the offer from Germany is made to outbid her friends.

Yours faithfully, SHRAPNEL.

"The Merry Cobbler"

THE SUCCESS OF THE SEASON.

The largest audience in the records of Holy Cross greeted the performers in the second performance of "The Merry Cobbler" last evening, and as on the previous night, hundreds of people were unable to gain admittance. The players were entirely at ease and handled their respective roles with a precision worthy of professionals.

The play is one of the best seen here for some time, and fairly carried the crowd with its wave of rippling incident. Dramatic moments and thrilling climaxes were worked out with an effect indicative of unusual histrionic ability. The audience expressed appreciation in the fullest measure and at times the performers were unable to proceed until the applause had subsided.

Mr. Percie Jardine's interpretation of the title role was worthy of his best efforts, and amply proved his versatility. Although with an all star cast special mention must be made to the brilliant acting of Misses Mollie Horan and Winona McDonald in the leading feminine roles. Both young ladies excelled all previous efforts, and were the recipients of handsome boxes of chocolates during the performance.

A comic recitation by Master Kevin Jardine, with the Hornpipes, eight hand reels and jigs, and the club singing were delightful specialties, whilst popular airs were discoursed by the Mount Cashel Band during the evening.

The performance will be staged again to-night, and in view of the large number of people unable to gain admittance, and according to popular demand the Management has decided to repeat the production on Thursday night. The production provides a variety of entertainment, and all who appreciate talent should not fail to see it.

The Value of Medical Inspection of Schools

"Respecting the value of medical inspection of schools I entertain no doubts whatever. It has been tested in other countries, such as the United States and Great Britain, for several years, with most beneficial results. In my Educational Reports I have on different occasions pleaded for such inspection for our schools throughout the country. And if I may judge from reports forwarded me by city teachers the work of Nurse Loder is making a decided improvement in many ways. The movement for its continuance and expansion at St. John's has my enthusiastic support."

(Before the Full Bench.) The grand jury present were addressed by His Lordship the Chief Justice on a charge of larceny and falsification and embezzlement of accounts preferred against Alex. Rooney of the Postal Department. Accused is charged with embezzlement to the amount of $12,369.91. The bill contains five counts for embezzlements for small amounts, eight counts for larceny and five for falsification of accounts. The jury retired at 11.30 a.m. to consider the bill. Before they took up consideration of the matter, Mr. C. J. Fox for the Crown drew the court's attention to the fact that one of the grand jurors, Mr. Edwin LeMessurier, was a Crown witness. By order of the Chief Justice he was relieved from deliberating on the bill. As there are more than a dozen Crown witnesses to be examined, the jury's findings will not likely be made before late this afternoon.

WORST BLIZZARD EVER EXPERIENCED. WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 27. What is described by train passengers arriving here as the worst blizzard in their experience, and some of them are pioneers, raged to-day over Manitoba. In some instances trains from the West were delayed, telephone and electric power wires were snapped, and the snow was drifting into huge drifts making the roads into many towns impassable. Winnipeg got the full force of the blizzard early this afternoon with a southeast wind travelling at a velocity of 30 miles an hour piling high snow drifts along the principal thoroughfares. The city's electric railway and power systems were seriously interrupted, and it was with great difficulty that the car service was maintained to the suburban divisions. To-night the wind had moderated somewhat, and the temperature was higher. The weather bureau reports nine above zero with a 14 mile southeast wind.

This afternoon to the Board of Trade for the annual meeting, but have never seen such apathy, being that when the time comes for the meeting to open not even a quorum present. After a while, divers people coming in the meeting to proceed. Among other things the report do regret the fact that there are not more members, and the Board this year has a financial deficit. Mighty little discussion and is indeed, the shortest meeting of the Board I have yet attended. Passing along Queen's Road this day do see many men to work on the street car line clearing away the snow, and seems how the Street Railway Company has awaked to its responsibilities, which is a good thing. No other news this day of the Rose Blanche fishermen that are still missing and several steamers searching for them without result. This night to stay at home, having much work that I have greatly neglected, but my wife with her petty chatter makes it impossible for me to do anything, so needs must I put the work away and content myself with a book.

U.S. MAY BE OFFICIALLY REPRESENTED AT THE LEAGUE. GENEVA, Jan. 27. The entire problem of adjusting official relations of the United States with the League of Nations has been opened up anew in League circles by the decision of the leaders of the International Opium Conference to-day to make the League Council, together with the United States, the official body which will appoint a central board to have control to supervise international traffic in narcotic drugs. The significance of to-day's action is that it has suggested to the officials generally a possible means of solving the problem of how to arrange and organize relations of the United States with the League, which seem to be really increasing. This suggested solution even goes so far as to advocate the appointment of a permanent representative of the United States Government to the League, who would follow systematically those League activities in which the United States was interested.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

GERMANY'S PROTEST AGAINST ALLIES' RETICENCE. PARIS, Jan. 27. Germany's reply to the recent Note of the Allied Ambassadors which was handed to Lord Dabernon, the British Ambassador, by Foreign Minister Stresemann, in Berlin, to-day, protests against the refusal of the Allies to give immediately a bill of particulars on Germany's alleged violations of the disarmament clause in the Treaty of Versailles. It also re-asserts that Germany has really disarmed and is fully entitled to the evacuation of the Cologne area. The Berlin communication reviews the Note of the Council of Ambassadors, which was handed to Chancellor Luther yesterday and which declined to examine the question of the non- evacuation with Germany, or to go into further details regarding the reasons for maintaining the Allied forces in the Cologne zone. The German Note then says that the Allies have given merely a formal reply which in no sense advances an affair of such great significance to Germany and European reconciliation. The Stresemann communication continues: "The Allied Governments continue to keep the German Government as well as public opinion, in ignorance of the material facts on which they seek to base the decisions they took several years ago. The German people again find themselves accused of not having executed the Treaty without being given the possibility of defending themselves against these accusations. The Allied Governments draw from an unilateral judgment of facts the gravest consequences, and in their last Note refuse in the most formal manner even to examine the affair jointly with the German Government."

Annual Meeting of Nfld. Board of Trade

The annual meeting of the Newfoundland Board of Trade was held in the rooms yesterday afternoon, and was attended by only a small number of members.

Hon. F. H. Steer, President, occupied the chair. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and confirmed, after which the President presented the adoption of this year's annual report, making the following address:

Gentlemen! In presenting the Council's report for your consideration and adoption, I might say that the Council seriously considered a suggestion made at the last annual meeting that the report should be presented in proof form at this meeting for its consideration and printed in pamphlet form, but for various reasons found themselves unable to do so. It is evident his appeal was warranted, although it has only brought a negative result, for whilst in 1921 the income from membership fees was $3,527, it has gradually declined year by year to $3,287. This taken in conjunction with the fact that our income from rent of rooms and fish inspection has also been considerably reduced, has left the funds of the Board in a very disheartening condition. At the end of 1924 the financial statement showed a credit balance of $671.12, which was largely accounted for by the fees received for fish inspection, under the regulations of 1920. This credit balance owing to declining income receipts has been turned into a debit balance of $473.17, and this has happened without any increase in expenditure which for the four years under consideration has been practically stationary—$5220.75, $5261.11, $5196.16, $5192.98. There seems to be a certain amount of prejudice in certain quarters against this Board, which is not warranted, for there is no question but that this Board does perform a distinct public service and has been the means of bringing about a few much needed reforms. It therefore merits a much greater support than it is getting, not only from the business community, but from the public at large, and it is to be hoped that every member will do all in his power to add to its numbers. That the optimistic spirit pervading the report of 12 months ago was warranted, has been borne out by the condition of the country for the past twelve months, for the betterment in labour conditions, added to the high prices obtained by the fishermen for their products, has created a corresponding improvement in business generally, by which the whole country has benefited, and we are justified in feeling that this condition will prevail throughout the present year, more particularly when we consider that owing to reduced expenditure on the part of the Government and the increase in revenue, we feel warranted in looking for an expecting a further reduction in taxation.

Your Council has had a very busy year, and matters almost too numerous to mention have been brought before them for their consideration, notably, the question of Export Duties on Fishery products; the removal of the remaining Export Duties on such products, was brought about on the representation of your Council, by the Government. The question of Canadian Inland Freight rates was also taken up, and negotiations resulted in a reduction in rates on flour moving over Canadian Railways consigned to Newfoundland. It was also brought to the attention of the Council that certain local ports enjoyed discriminatory freight rates to the detriment of other ports. The matter was brought to the attention of the proper authorities and equitable adjustments were made. The Council also initiated negotiations with the Government, which has resulted in promised action, during the next session of the Legislature, towards the appointment of an Honorary Harbour Commission, which will have control of the harbour of St. John's and whose aim will be to improve conditions, that the port will be made attractive to vessels in distress and needing repairs, instead of as it is at present, when shipowners avoid this port on every occasion when it is possible to reach some other. Also, acting on the representations of our Council, the Postmaster General issued instructions for the opening through the fall of outport telegraph offices till 8 p.m., and 1 hour in the morning and 1 hour in the evening on holidays. In 1923 your Council found this boon unobtainable.

In fact so varied and so important have been the many matters brought before your Council, that at times I could have wished that some one with more time at their disposal, and perhaps with more ability, had held the guiding reins during the past year. I have to thank the members of the Council for their loyal support and co-operation on all occasions. The authorities have seen fit to impose a close season of three years for lobsters and deer, and I think every one must agree that this step was most necessary. The laws relating to the killing of deer have been practically ignored, and one case is reported where a gang of men only within the past few years went to the woods with twenty horses and carabams and returned laden with deer, the Warden on their return shutting himself up in his house so that he could say he did not see them. Similar infringements of the law have been perpetrated in the case of lobsters. And your Council feels strongly that if the close season is to have any good effect at all such infringements of the law should be severely punished without fear or favour, and Warden, some of whom are notorious for not doing their duty, should be promptly dismissed.

Before closing I should like to make some reference to the Wembley Exhibition and your Council's connection therewith. As you will remember in 1923 the then Council was approached by the Government as to the advisability of Newfoundland participating in this Exhibition, and they expressed unanimous approval, stipulating, however, that the expenditure should not be more than 50-60 thousand dollars. Amongst those appointed from this Board to act on the Committee to look after Newfoundland's exhibit was Leonard Outerbridge. He was afterwards selected as chairman and there cannot be much doubt but that much of the success attained as well as economy displayed, the expenditure having been kept within the 60 limit must be attributed to him. I have great pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

Mr. R. F. Horwood seconded the motion, and in congratulating the Council on it with reference to what the President had said about the annual reports, he thought it would be a pity if things of an argumentative nature were left out, as if this was done, members would not have the opportunity of expressing their views on matters as they would like to do. However, the present report was entirely satisfactory, lucid and full. It was a pity that we still have to speak approximately regarding the catch of fish; it is time that some department of the Government should devise some system whereby it could be definitely stated what the catch is. He was pleased to note the increase of price, and to note the causes to which this is attributed. In the matter of research we have been too slow, as in this connection our fishermen should benefit greatly. A small country like this cannot afford a bureau of research, as they have in other countries, but it should be possible to get on more friendly terms with our sister dominion and get the benefit of her bureaus. It was pleasing to note that our cod oil has created such a favorable impression, and these expressions would form excellent propaganda to be broadcasted so that our oil will get wider recognition from wholesale medicine houses. That general trade has increased to the extent of eight million dollars, is a thing for which all should be glad, especially because the greater part of it was done with Britain and her colonies. This is a fitting thing to point to when speaking of preferential trade, but it can hardly be considered preferential when we learn that the new steamer to ply between North Sydney and Port aux Basques is being built in a foreign country and by foreign workmen. It is interesting to note that $1,300,000 of our revenue was obtained from duties on liquor in Ireland, and Mr. Horwood was not so sure that our neighboring country would look kindly on our helping their law-breakers to break their laws. With reference to the Wembley Exhibition, it was to the credit of the Council of the Board of Trade that the Government had been so well assisted in this matter, and all the more so that the expenditure was kept so low as it was. The reference to manufactured wood, this country has suffered considerably from fire, and as a result our forests are not now what they were twenty-five years ago, and it is a pity that so much of this wood is being sent out of the country after giving so little labor to our people. It was pleasing to see the advent of new industries in the country. It must be plain to all that just now there is not sufficient labor to go around. Especially is this true in St. John's, which is now greatly overpopulated. Much of our fish is being shipped from the outports and packages are also being made in the outports, whilst there has been a great exodus to St. John's in the past few years. The proposed new four mill to be erected here is a thing to be welcomed as will anything that will provide much needed labor, and speaking of industries one cannot omit reference to the great project of Corner Brook, which promises to be operating on June next. This promises to give employment to a large number of our people, a town of seven or eight thousand people is being looked forward to, and these people will help to pay our revenue. But with all this a thing to be remembered is that the country is involved in it to the extent of ten million dollars, and we have taken no steps to protect ourselves. Mr. Horwood was of opinion that a committee of supervision should be appointed to see that matters are conducted properly as if the project is to be a success it will depend on the amount of capital that is put in it.

A short discussion then took place after which the motion was put and carried. The President then announced that the result of the ballot for new Councilors for the Board showed the election of Messrs. John Campbell, Argh Mann, E. R. Bowring, Jr., and A. T. Goodridge. He then asked the new President, Hon. Tasker Cook, to take the chair.

Mr. J. B. Job moved and R. G. Winter seconded a vote of thanks to the retiring President and Councilors, which was carried unanimously. The new President then briefly thanked the members for the honor conferred on him, and he hoped that the coming year will be one of profit. However, unless the Council gets the hearty co-operation of the members, it will be an uphill climb, and nothing can be done. Many members never come around and something should be done to increase interest.

There was no further business and the meeting adjourned.

GO OVER THE TOP.

The Campaign organization was present at last night's meeting and went "over the top" at 10 o'clock, and are already advancing over the Old Collegian's camping ground. The campaign was opened by Arthur Mews, Esq., President, who in a few well chosen words welcomed the workers and stated that though their College was destroyed the Old Collegian spirit was very much alive. S. T. Harrington, Esq., also addressed the meeting and thanked those present for coming to the help of their Alma Mater. He emphasized the great benefit to the schools which had come through the operation of the Clinic department and other activities of the association. T. C. Hogg, Esq., addressed the meeting and showed how Old Collegians had helped develop athletics among the older scholars and asked for help in organizing athletics among the younger pupils. The organizer's final instructions were given and the teams settled down to the allotment of names of prospective members. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will be devoted to the canvass and all are asked to give the workers a hearty response. The annual meeting of the Association will be held on Wednesday evening next in the Gower St. Lecture Room.

To-night the same bill as last night will be repeated at the Majestic. "David and Jonathan," the feature photograph, is an ideal story, full of interesting situations with a fascinating and unexpected climax. Jacobson and Evans, the popular musical team, are in increasing favor. Last night the Majestic patrons applauded their numbers enthusiastically. The rendition of "Doodle Do Do," "Negro Spiritual," and "Nobody Knows What a Red Head Mama Will Do," received rounds of applause. To-day's express will bring the much spoken of feature "The Marriage Circle" and, in all probability, it will be shown on Monday. A classy bill is booked for the last half of this week, and special provision for the children's big matinee, on Saturday afternoon. See to-morrow's papers for particulars.

Bathing in Their Clothes

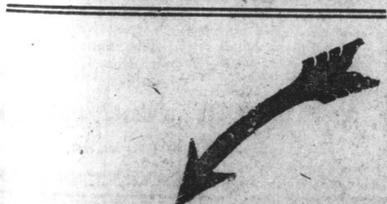

The interesting item of information that the Tibetan Lamas now visiting England indulge in but one wash a year suggests a state of primeval savagery to our Western ideas of what is right and proper. But in various parts of the world strange customs prevail which to the practical British mind would be classed as sheer madness.

It is probably news to many that high-caste Hindus take their daily bath with their clothes on! And yet it is a fact. Their religion compels them to have a bath daily. They will neither touch nor eat anything before having their bath. It is considered indecent to bathe naked, even within their own houses, and a rich zemindar by a poor Burman obeys the same rule.

Men, women, and children are generally seen bathing in open wells, tanks, or on seashores with clothes on. A dhoty is a piece of white cloth about six to eight yards long, wrapped round the body. After the bath they first wrap a dry dhoty round them and let the wet one slip from underneath, so that they neither expose their body nor let the dry cloth get wet. Even when travelling they manage to have their daily bath at stations where the trains halt for about twenty minutes. Most of the railway companies have wells near such stations specially for this purpose, and the spectacle of this strange religious rite being carried out with unflinching regularity is one which causes Europeans to marvel at such a zeal.

GILLETT'S PURE FLAKE LYE

Washington Letter
By Our Own Correspondent.

JANUARY 19.
Ray Stannard Baker, of Amherst, Mass., has been chosen by the widow of Woodrow Wilson to write the life story of the late President. It is mainly because of promises made to Mr. Stannard by President Wilson himself that the important commission is now being entrusted to him with the accompanying privilege of untrammelled access to the papers, letters and memoranda of the deceased chief executive of the American Republic. The work of writing the story of Wilson's life and especially that phase of it beginning with the outbreak of the world war is one of major moment for it involves the disclosing of many incidents connected with America's belated participation in the conflict which have hitherto remained hidden from the public gaze.

The national capital has at least one centenarian. Ambrose Hines, whose father was a Revolutionary War soldier and who himself saw America grow up from her infancy, today celebrates his one hundredth anniversary. Newspaper men prepared for a big story on the rules and regulations of living by means of which Mr. Hines has managed to keep " hale and hearty" throughout a whole century of ups and downs, but the results of their interview with the centenarian were somewhat disappointing. To the multifarious queries prepared for him by the enthusiastic pressmen as to what marvels of proper living he attributed his prolonged sojourn in this Vale of Tears, the old gentleman made the unexpected reply, "Rum and Tobacco".

The total taxable income of the American people, personal and corporation, amounted in 1922 to $28,300,023,673, and on this amount the Federal Government collected taxes of $1,644,823,576. These figures, made public to-day by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, showed that 6,787,441 individuals and 332,883 corporations filed income tax returns in 1922, the records for which have just become complete. The aggregate net or taxable income as reported in the individual returns was $21,336,212,580 with an increase of 125,305 in the number of returns and of $1,759,000,002 in net income reported over 1921. Individual income taxes netted the Government $861,057,308 in 1922, an increase of $141,670,202 for the year. Corporation returns showed that 212,535 firms realized net income on their 1922 business, earning a taxable profit of $6,963,311,143 from which the Government received $783,776,268.

that if they meet with the approval of the Capital audiences their success in the larger city is assured. Yet Washington sees, hears and, if it thinks it the proper thing to do, approves, and so these filthy and vulgar shows begin their real work with the seal of general approval set upon them. The theatrical companies are giving the public something "realistic" in the modern play is the defence offered on their behalf, but as one paper has remarked, so is the mud on the street realistic yet no sensible person would deliberately lie down and wallow in it. Only a week ago Lionel Barrymore, the famous stage and screen star appeared in Washington in a play which is now running in New York under the title of "The Piker," and the language which the world-famed Lionel was compelled to use in order to be realistic in the title role would make the blood of the proverbial trooper run cold. No less than a dozen times in the course of this play is the name of Jesus uttered in blasphemy and fastidious and fashionable Washington, whose criticism makes or breaks a stage production, applauded and commented on the wonderful realism of it all.

lonely off-shore island, and killed by the natives. There are caves there in which it is said the white men lived. MacMillan will visit these caves with his exploring ship, the Bowdoin. While in the north, he plans to search for the party of four explorers which, under Commodore William Washburn Nutting, disappeared last fall when bound from Greenland to Labrador. He believes that their ship was caught in drift ice off Cape Farewell.

Eighty miles up a lonely Greenland fjord north of Gothaab, under the Arctic Circle, fringed by grim ice mountains and lit on winter nights by the frozen fires of the Aurora Borealis, lie the ruins of the homes of one of the group, according to the stories told by Eskimos. There are 120 farm-houses, of enduring stone, and 24 churches, roofless below the Arctic sky. Here, possibly in graves hewn out of the frozen soil, MacMillan hopes to find the record of the lost nation of 10,000 Norsemen, recounted in old sagas.

In an hotel room above the roar of Michigan Boulevard, wearing an everyday sack suit, starch collar and entirely conventional tie-looking in fact, like almost any business man, who likes outdoor sports—the explorer told of his new Arctic plans. On the earlier trips to the Far North, he has sought trace of the lost nation. He read of these people first in the Norse sagas, that told how emigrants from Iceland braved the western seas, found a land of green valleys and settled there. From study of the sagas, he discards the theory that this land was Cape Cod. "A land of trees—then a land of flat stones"—the sagas run. Newfoundland and Labrador were these lands, he believes.

There are records that the colony in north Greenland held communication with England hundreds of years before the voyage of Columbus. But in 1585, when the British explorer, John Davis, visited the colony, the stone houses were empty. The entire nation had disappeared.

Myths of the white man prevail. MacMillan says, on the Labrador coast. Eskimos there told how the last white men were surrounded on a

Notes on Votes

"Woman's influence!" A term that is calculated to make every woman curl up with self-satisfaction! How much does it mean? We are told that if laws are unjust they can be corrected by woman's indirect influence. Possibly, but the indirect way is needlessly long and hard. If women were forbidden to travel from Halifax to Vancouver by rail and complained of the injustice, it would be no answer to tell them that it is possible to get to Vancouver round by the Panama Canal or Cape Horn! The slowness with which some of the most inequalities in the laws are corrected shows how unsatisfactory is the indirect way, besides which it is demoralizing. There is often reason to believe that some fine project for public good has been gained or lost by the appearance or personality of the depute. It is tragic to think that women inspired with a passion for service in some greatly needed reform should plead in vain because of such things as these!

It is often said that men will give women all the political protection they need, and women therefore do not need the vote. Centuries of manly protection have not brought good housing for the women who have most to suffer from bad housing conditions, have not brought safe streets, nor sufficiently hygienic conditions, nor many other things in which women are vitally interested.

Furthermore, protection does not bring development to the protected, but undermines self-reliance. The best educationalists to-day introduce self-government into schools to teach children responsibility and set them on the right road to good citizenship. Do the mothers need self-reliance less?

When Gladstone, the famous Victorian statesman, was introduced to the agricultural labourer of England, he was told by his opponents in the House of Commons that the said labourer did not want it. "Don't want it!" Victoria's great Prime Minister replied, "What has that to do with it? They need it for their development!"

Veterans of the Sea

"It is now some forty or fifty years ago that the steamship effectually displaced the sailing vessel, and lately many persons have discovered an interest in these vanished or vanishing masterpieces of shipbuilding," says the Morning Post.

"Sail, of course, survives. There are French and American five-masted sailing ships plying to-day, and in the carrying of lumber from the Pacific Coast of America to Australia there are many large barquentines and schooners regularly employed. Of the famous steel sailing ships built since the clipper epoch, the most have been broken up, or are employed as hulks, and a few are still at sea. In the pleasant little book, More Survivors of a Glorious Era, just published by the Syren and Shipping Company, an excellent account of some of the old ships is numerously illustrated with photographs.

ship becomes a sort of family investment, much like the arrangement which prevailed in this country eighty or a hundred years ago. "There is, for instance, the Matro, a four-masted barque, sailing under a South American flag, once the Sir Robert Fernie, owned in Liverpool. She did much business in the war. The Melanope was launched in 1876, employed in the Oregon trade between Alaska and Tacoma, and has now fallen to the duties of a coal barge out Vancouver way. There are sailing ship masters alive to-day—and commanding steamships—who served their apprenticeship in a small barque, and went on to full-rigged ships in which they sailed to every quarter of the globe.

"One such captain commanded a barque in which, by order of her owners, a Bible was served out to each member of the crew. 'Fasted on the inside of the cover was a printed note asking the receiver to make a practice of reading one chapter daily.' And a very good practice too. Another master served with the famous Captain Starkey of the Black Ball Line, of which it was said that no ship had ever hove-to in a gale. It is recorded that in 1901 the Lock Carron, a four-masted barque, accomplished the passage from Glasgow to Adelaide in 76 days, a performance recalling the records of the clipper ships. It is perhaps not impossible that one day the sailing ship will return and, in the meantime, all the records and models of the old vessels should be carefully preserved."

THE OIL SECURITIES.

Two Important Factors Point Toward Strength.
Boston—Richardson, Hill & Co. say of "The Oil Securities":
With few exceptions the petroleum stocks are the only group of securities quoted at the present time below their high level of the last few years. While nothing in the statistical position of the Petroleum industry indicates an impending scarcity of crude or refined products, the combination of favorable developments has led to a renewal of bullish sentiment on the oil stocks.
After an extended period of overproduction it would appear as though the oil companies are in a position to reduce stocks on hand and keep production and consumption on a balance again. The production of petroleum in the United States for 1924 is estimated at 715,000,000 barrels, a decrease of 10,702,000 from 1923 and the first decline in annual production since 1906.

To our mind there are two important elements in the situation which point to better conditions in this industry. First is that seasonal price tendencies are upward and the other is the action of the government in regard to the conservation of oil and the elimination of waste. The Federal Oil Conservation Board appointed recently by President Coolidge to cooperate with the oil interests in formulating a program for conservation and elimination of waste has sent a letter to officials of twenty leading companies asking them to submit their views of the methods which should be employed in limiting production and stabilizing the industry.

STEEL EXPANSION.

Public Weakness Disappears And Interest Centers In Volume And Prices For Second Quarter.
YOUNGSTOWN—Interest is centering in steel circles on second quarter volume and prices. Any price weakness evident prior to Jan. 1 has disappeared in this territory, owing to sizeable releases issued against contract business. Output is high and shipments larger than in December. Most of low-priced sheet business accepted was shipped in November and December, and current shipments carry higher prices.

Tin-plate producers report larger specifications are being issued than usual at this season, can makers desiring to protect themselves against heavy demand during the summer. Makers are largely sold up for first half output, and little change in prices is looked for over the next few months. Additional advances probably will develop on second quarter business in heavy products, such as bars, shapes and plates.

BOSTON—Directors of Fisk Rubber Co., at their meeting Thursday, declared a dividend of $1 a share on the first preference stock. No dividends have been paid since May 1, 1921.

BOSTON—On announcement that Fisk Rubber directors had ordered a dividend declaration of only $1 a share instead of the expected disbursement of $1.75 a share, the first preferred stock sold down to $81 a share, compared with $85 Wednesday night's close.

The West Coast Disaster

THIRTEEN MEN STILL MISSING.

Details of the disaster which overtook Rose Blanche and vicinity are still lacking. The body of James Hayward, who was lost from the Annie Hanham, has been recovered. Three boats are still missing with their crews totalling 13 men. In reply to enquiries made yesterday by Capt. W. Winsor the following report was received last evening:—

"To Capt. W. C. Winsor: This report includes from Rose Blanche to Petites. It is supposed Burnt Islands people are doing their own work. Boats still missing three: one from Rose Blanche, containing Charles Buffet and three brothers and another young man, two married; from Petites, Ephraim Hann and three brothers, one married; Herbert Groves' three men, two married and one single. Four boats abandoned, crews saved. About 15 dorries lost. Amount of disaster unknown. Will inform you later. The community has no hopes of missing men. James Crewe arrived from Frenchman's Cove with James Hardy and crew. Reports storm the worst they ever witnessed. Cannot describe their experience."

Enquiry Continues

A magisterial enquiry into the derailment near Manuel's Bridge was conducted before Mr. McCarthy, J.P., yesterday afternoon, when the conductor of the ill-fated train was called and gave evidence.

CALENDAR.—The Newfoundland Light and Power Company, Ltd., has our thanks for a very pretty calendar.

INJURED BY COASTERS.—An aged lady named Yabsley, whilst proceeding over Long's Hill last evening was run down by two boys who were coasting. Mrs. Yabsley who is about 70 years old, was badly injured and had to be conveyed to her home Victoria Street, where she is now under the doctor's care.

He estimates the property loss there at not less than $25,000.

GLENCOE TOUCHES AT ST. PIERRE.

Mr. H. A. Saunders, Supt. of the Anglo, received a message from Supt. Hagon of St. Pierre, at noon to-day, stating that the steamer Glencoe had called there at 10 o'clock and had left again almost immediately. No further particulars were available. The Glencoe proceeded there to take home Blagdon's crew, but judging by the message received it looks as though they had not been taken on board. A similar message was also received from Capt. Blagdon by the management of the railway.

The Kyle and Prospero have given up the search and are now back on their former routes. The former is on her way to North Sydney, while the latter is coming east from English Harbour.

Resolved: "That the Government should raise the Tariff against imported articles that could be made in Newfoundland." Such was the topic of debate at the regular weekly meeting of the Wesley Young Men's Literary Class. The set speakers for the affirmative were W. Grouchy and Mark Davis, and for the negative R. Morgan and Cyril Potties.

The main points raised by the affirmative, were that the Government should encourage home industry by raising the tariff on imported articles that could be made in this country, such as boots, soap, paint, furniture, candy, etc. By raising the tariff on such articles they would become too expensive for merchants to import, and if any were imported, it would be difficult to dispose of them because of the high price. Then more of our local manufactured goods would be bought and would result in keeping our men employed and save thousands of dollars for our own country which to-day goes to enrich other countries. The affirmative also pointed out that Germany, prior to the war, gave her manufacturers a bounty as a means of encouraging home industry.

Wesley Y.M.L.C. Debate

The negative maintained that to raise the tariff on imported articles that could be made in this country was an unwise policy. That those countries so affected would retaliate by raising the tariff on our articles which we export. The negative further contended that many articles which we import can be sold much cheaper than the local article, and more superior, and the people of any country always buy the articles which give the best value.

The debate was very instructive and many members spoke on the subject from the floor. On a vote being taken the negative won by a large majority.

Streets Need Attention

Further attention to the streets along the trolley car route is necessary if accidents to teamsters are to be avoided. This morning a milkman crossing the track near Holloway St., upset his van with the result that bottles and milk were scattered. A similar accident happened about the same time to a milkman crossing the track near Adelaide St. On the corner of Duckworth Street and King's Beach recently, a truckload of coal upset and the owner of the black diamonds was considerably short of the weight in consequence.

A bronze tablet to the memory of three of their members who gave their lives in the Great War, was a couple of days ago placed at the entrance to the library of the Supreme Court by the members of the Law Society. The tablet is inscribed as follows:—

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

Guards and St. Bon's Will Clash in Opening Game Second Round.

The opening game of the second round of the league hockey series takes place in the Prince's Rink to-night, between the Guards and St. Bon's. When these two teams met in the opening game of the season, St. Bon's triumphed in what was a good game by six goals to two. The games played since then have brought forth many a surprise to the fans, therefore anything is likely to happen to-night. Despite the two losses suffered by St. Bon's team, they are out to make a bold bid for the championship, while the Guards are equally as determined; and they will enter the arena to-night, confident of chalking up a third successive win. The teams will appear as follows:—

ST. BON'S—Goal, S. Ryan; defence, G. Halley, E. Phelan; forwards, Ferguson, Cahill, Canal; subs, Skinner, Kent, T. Ryan.

GUARDS—Goal, Currie; defence, J. Paterson, J. Herder; forwards, H. Coultas, W. Clouston, H. Munn; subs, E. Munn, M. Whelan, Johnston. Referee—E. Churchill.

CURLING.

Yesterday morning the Ladies' Association played for the Gosling Trophy on points. This was won by Mrs. Rennie, with a score of 28 points. The scores were made as follows:—Mrs. Rennie, 28; Mrs. Chesman, 27; Mrs. Marshall, 26; Mrs. Kennedy, 25; Mrs. Hickman, 24; Mrs. Duder, 23; Miss Macpherson, 21; Mrs. L. E. Emerson, 21; Mrs. B. Stafford, 20; Mrs. Charles Harvey, 18; Mrs. T. B. Clift, 18; Mrs. Bradshaw, 17; Mrs. R. G. Reid, 16; Mrs. R. B. Job, 14; Mrs. Gordon Winter, 13; Miss Mary Mackay, 12; Miss Annie Hayward, 10; Miss Alward, 10.

MERCANTILE HOCKEY.

ROYAL STORES 17
HARVEY & Co. 1

The second game of the Mercantile Hockey League series was played at the Prince's Rink last evening, and resulted in a crushing defeat for last year's champions at the hands of the Royal Stores, the score being 17 to 1.

At the outset the Royal Stores began to score and in the first period notched up six goals, whilst their opponents were able to score only one. The second period saw the Royal Stores increase their lead by four goals, and in the last they added 7 more. Harvey & Co. were unable to increase their score.

Features of the game were the individual play of Kennedy of the Royal Stores, who was responsible for more than half of the goals scored for his team, and Tilley of Harvey & Company, who also played a fine game and gave a splendid exhibition of stick-handling.

The line ups were:—ROYAL STORES—Goal, Hutchings; Defence, Noseworthy, Gillis; forwards, Kennedy, Crane, Scott; subs, Thorburn, Marshall, Carroll.

HARVEY & Co.—Goal, Hynes; defence, Heale and Duggan; forwards, Tilley, Godies, White; subs, Pearce and Brewer.

Referee—Ern Churchill.
Timekeepers—E. Martin, J. Wall.
Next game will be A. Harvey and Co. vs. Bowling Bros.

ENGLAND COMES UP ON AUSTRALIANS.

Requires 27 Runs to Win Third Cricket Test Match.

ADELAIDE, Australia, Jan. 22.—(C. P.)—With A. E. Gilligan, captain of the team not out, 29; Freeman, the Kent bowler, not out, 17; and the veteran Surrey wicketkeeper, Strudwick, still to bat, England require 27 runs to win the third cricket test match with Australia, and so remain in the running for the rubber.

Continuing their last innings of the match to-day the Englishmen carried their overnight score of 133 for three wickets to 348 for eight. Australia scored 489 and 290, England replying in their first innings with 365.

It is not at all certain that the English tail can "wag" sufficiently to-morrow to bring about the first victory of the present test series. While both Gilligan and Freeman have made good scores occasionally it is questionable whether they will be able to stand up to-morrow to the deadly Antipodean bowlers after they have been refreshed by a night's rest. Freeman was included in the test team on account of his bowling, while Gilligan, who is England's best fast bowler, is still feeling the effects of a strained thigh. Strudwick may be depended upon to do his utmost defensively.

England's pluck and tenacity were admired by the 8,500 people present. The play was thrilling. Sutcliffe was out after bringing his overnight score of 58 to 83, but A. F. F. Chapman and Whysall took the total to 218 for four wickets.

Chapman was put out after getting 58, Whysall following shortly after with 75 to his credit. Chapman, batting with dash and confidence for two hours and twenty minutes, included two sixes and seven fours in his total. Whysall, whose outside play was attractive, batted steadily for two hours and forty minutes, hitting seven fours. Kilner was steady till put out at 24. Tate scored 21 and then Gilligan and Freeman added 46 to the total amid the tensest excitement, every run being cheered. Both received an ovation on their way back to the pavilion when stumps were drawn. Rain held up the play for three-quarters of an hour near the close, and the showery conditions made the wicket easy.

To-Morrow Night's Dance

IN AID OF THE REDUCTION OF DEBT ON THE G. C. C. "GAIETY" HALL.

The dance to-morrow, Thursday, at the "Gaiety" Hall is the big attraction for the week, and the Committee in charge are expecting a large number of dancers, as there is quite a lot of talk about it, and they would strongly advise all to get their tickets at Hutton's or G. Byrne's Bookstore, before they are all sold as there are only a limited number and none will be sold at the door to-morrow night.

The music on this occasion will really be wonderful, as Mr. Foster and his splendid Dance Orchestra now playing at the Star Movie, will on their arrival at 10 o'clock, play a full programme of Dances and Extras, and a picked orchestra from the Mount Cashel Band will play extras from 9 to 10 o'clock, until the coloured artistes arrive. Those who miss the Dance to-morrow night will miss a treat, and one of the best Dances for the year. The tickets are Gent's $1.00, Ladies' 75 cents. Avoid disappointment and get your ticket to-day.—Adv.

All the old favourites and latest hits from Jacobson and Evans.—Jan. 22, 11.

C. L. B. Cadets

Tuesday was Battalion night. The Colonel was in command, and Captain Stick, Adjutant, was on duty. The Chaplain read the prayers. Burin Company reported by telegram that they had appointed Rev. J. A. Meaden O.C. and Lieut. Geo. E. Bartlett, as representatives to the Governing Body about to be incorporated. Well done Burin, other Companies nearer Headquarters are trailing along way behind you.

The genial and very popular Chaplain, Rev. E. M. Bishop, of Bay Roberts Company, has gone to England by the C.P.R. Steamship "Montrose." He has gone for a holiday and rest. All ranks wish him "bon voyage" and a safe return perfectly restored again in health.

Lieut.-Colonel Franklin, D. S. O. writes cheerfully from Nairobi, British East Africa, under date of December 15th. He regrets to hear that Bell Island Company, our pioneer outfit Company, is not going strong as it always did in the old days—and says to keep the Company going by all means. He appreciates the cable of greeting sent him by the Old Comrades at their annual meeting in November and has so written them.

Trinity East, Port Rexton Company has at last moved into line ready to march with the Governing Body. Their O. C. has reported to Headquarters the appointment of Rev. F. P. Law and Second Lieut. R. Plowman as representatives. Three more Companies have not reported, evidently lagging behind to see which will have the honour of being the rear guard.

Regimental orders contain the names of one Lance Corporal and two privates—dismissed for non attendance. This is not very creditable. No lad thinks it an honour to be dismissed. We advise these lads to apologise and seek reinstatement. Following recruits have passed their examinations and been posted to A. Company:—Ptes. William Carberry, Chesley Baker, Norman Sidel, Walter Bradley, Geo. Grover, and to F. Company:—Ptes. Fred Candow, Fred Dawe, Cyril Reid, Job Saunders, Walter Chambers, Graham Noseworthy, Max Kennedy, R. J. Harvey, James Pike, Jack Thomas, William Kirby, William Parsons and Otto Bradley.

A drummer of the Bugle Band has been dismissed for non attendance. He loses more than the "Brigade does" so apply and rejoin again drummer, or you will be sorry later on!

All ranks were glad to see our Chief Medical Officer, Dr. Burden, again on duty. He finished up "the Red Cross" lectures last Thursday to the lads of A. Company and Tuesday night examined all the new bunch of recruits. Every lad was found physically fit excepting one who was given a friendly tip to be cautious. These medical exams are much appreciated by H. Q. staff.

Last Thursday, Mrs. Claude Noonan, held a very successful card party during the afternoon and night. Bridge and Auction Forty-five were played. Mrs. Noonan placed her spacious home at the disposal of the C. L. B. Ladies' Auxiliary, and quite a handsome sum was realized as the result. The affair was quite a social success in every way, and we congratulate the promoter on her enterprise, and the financial results.

Instructor Morgan and assistants were busy putting the lads of F. Company through their courses on horizontal and parallel bars, vaulting horse and ladders last night. Many lads were also instructed in club swinging after the Battalion was dismissed.

One hundred and nine all ranks answered the roll Thursday, including twenty-six recruits, and one hundred and fifty on Tuesday. The Battalion Band were busy practicing their music under Assistant Bandmaster Vavasour and their harmony was much enjoyed.

DANCE—To-morrow, Thursday, at the "Gaiety" Hall. Music by Mr. Foster and his wonderful Dance Orchestra. Tickets at Hutton's or G. Byrne's Bookstore. Gent's, $1.00; Ladies', 75c. Dancing at 9 p.m.—Jan. 22, 11.

By the terms of her aunt's will, Blanche Ingram must marry within twenty-four hours. She decides to marry a decrepit old man who, the doctors say, is within a few hours of the grave. The ceremony is performed at a sanitarium where the old man is a patient, but instead of marrying the invalid the girl marries Tom Burton, who had made up to look like the intended groom.

The invalid was Blanche's uncle, recently returned from Australia, where he had amassed a fortune. He had come to America in order to spend his last days with his late sister's child, Conrad Jasper, his secretary, passes off Hector, an underworld gunman, as the missing child. They plan to kill the old man and divide the fortune.

Blanche takes Tom, disguised, to her country home. The plotters follow and join forces with Clarence Topping, the girl's fiancé, who was barred from marrying the girl under the aunt's will. He would like to see Blanche's husband killed that he then might marry the girl.

Burton is placed in an awkward position when he is found in the house without his disguise. He explains that he is John Ingram's nephew and had come to pay his respects to the bride. His place in the wheel chair is taken temporarily by Judd, his valet, who dons the disguise.

The three conspirators continue their murderous intentions and several times Burton and Judd are within an ace of being slain. To add to the confusion the real John Ingram appears on the scene.

Judd overhears Jasper and Hector plot to shanghai the whole household. He calls for help, bringing the fire department, police department, letter carriers, the Ku Klux Klan, and a score of other organizations. The conspirators are overpowered and their explanations are made, and Tom Burton finds that instead of being a temporary husband he is to be a permanent husband and everyone concerned is happy.

Berry Picking

What is the use of talking about Berry Picking at this time of the year, but if you go to the Nickel to-morrow you will see the way the Cranberry Industry is carried on at Cape Cod.

The greatest place in the world for growing Cranberries is in the Bogs of Cape Cod near Boston. The Indians gathered these berries there long before the Pilgrim Fathers arrived there over three hundred years ago.

About fifty years ago some energetic men started to cultivate these berries on a small scale as the people of New England were so anxious for Cranberry Sauce with their Thanksgiving Turkey.

From a few hundred barrels per year this industry has now grown to over 500,000 barrels per annum, and more money is made per acre from these worthless bogs of Cape Cod than is garnered per acre in the most prolific wheat belt in America.

EASY TO TAKE

is the easiest and most palatable Cough Mixture that we know of to take for the cure of Coughs and Colds.

The proper time to take a mixture of this sort is immediately you feel you have taken cold. Don't wait until you have a cough for two or three days and then commence taking it.

In addition to our regular 35c. bottle we are now putting up what we call a "Family Size" bottle and which you can purchase for 60c., it contains double the amount of the 35c. one and is the best size to always have in the house.
