The Honourable the Speaker having put the question whether the Senate do now adjourn during pleasure, it was—

Resolved in the affirmative.

After awhile, His Excellency the Governor General having come and being seated upon the Throne—

The Honourable the Speaker commanded the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod to proceed to the House of Commons and acquaint that House that:—

“It is the pleasure of His Excellency the Governor General that they attend him immediately in the Senate Chamber.”

The House of Commons being come,

Their Speaker, the Honourable Roland Michener, said:—

“May it please Your Excellency,—

“The House of Commons have elected me their Speaker, though I am but little able to fulfil the important duties thus assigned to me.

“If, in the performance of those duties, I should at any time fall into error, I pray that the fault may be imputed to me, and not to the Commons, whose servant I am, and who, through me, the better to enable them to discharge their duty to their Queen and Country, humbly claim all their undoubted rights and privileges, especially that they may have freedom of speech in their debates, access to Your Excellency’s person at all reasonable times, and that their proceedings may receive from Your Excellency the most favourable interpretation.”

The Honourable the Speaker of the Senate answered:—

“Mr. Speaker,—I am commanded by His Excellency the Governor General to declare to you that he freely confides in the duty and attachment of the House of Commons to Her Majesty’s person and government, and not doubting that their proceedings will be conducted with wisdom, temper and prudence, she grants, and upon all occasions will recognize and allow their constitutional privileges. I am commanded, also, to assure you that the Commons shall have ready access to His Excellency upon all reasonable occasions, and that their proceedings, as well as your words and actions, will constantly receive from him the most favourable construction.”

His Excellency the Governor General was then pleased to open the Session by a gracious Speech to both Houses, as follows:—

Honourable Members of the Senate,

Members of the House of Commons,

It is my pleasure to welcome you to this first session of the twenty-fourth Parliament of Canada. We all recall with pleasure the historic events of last autumn when Her Gracious Majesty was present to open Parliament herself and to receive the warm welcome and wide acclaim of her Canadian subjects. We look forward to the presence this summer of Her Royal Highness Princess Margaret to take part in the centennial ceremonies of British Columbia and to visit other parts of Canada.

As further evidence of the expanding sense of mutual interest among the countries of the Commonwealth as well as the growth of the Commonwealth itself, it is pleasing and significant that we will be welcoming to Canada this summer both the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and the Prime Minister of Ghana.

My Ministers have been glad to note the widely expressed desire of the peoples of many nations that the manifold advances of science shall be devoted to the betterment of mankind rather than to the arts and engines of war. My Government will continue to make unremitting efforts to assist in the peaceful solution of international problems and in the accomplishment by patient negotiation of a substantial measure of disarmament. In the meantime, my advisers will ask your support to maintain, in cooperation with our allies, armed forces adequate to deter any potential aggression.

My Government believes that the condition of international economic affairs is such as to require major concerted efforts to encourage the expansion of trade. It is accordingly very gratifying that all countries of the Commonwealth have accepted the proposal of Canada that a Commonwealth Trade and Economic Conference be held in September of this year in Montreal.

We look forward with pleasure to the visits to Canada this summer of the President of the United States and the President of the Federal Republic of Germany. My Ministers welcome the opportunities which these visits will afford for useful conversations.

My Government regrets to have to report that efforts to avert a strike of firemen on the Canadian Pacific Railway were unsuccessful. It is however encouraging to note that negotiations which my Ministers arranged between the parties have succeeded in narrowing the issues in dispute to the point where further direct discussions may yet resolve the question. My Government continues to maintain a constant watch over developments in this situation and will be ready in the light of events to recommend such action as the national interest demands and circumstances may require.

My Government will propose to you the enactment of a Bill of Rights to safeguard the rights of all persons in Canada in respect of all subjects within the jurisdiction of Parliament.

You will be asked to approve a number of measures and appropriations to continue and extend the programme of my Government in sustaining employment by the acceleration of useful public works and by encouraging the development and processing of our natural resources.

You will be asked immediately to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act in order to extend for a further six weeks, during the current year, the period during which special seasonal benefits may be paid. Already the amendments to this Act made in November last and those made to the Unemployment Assistance Act have proven their value in mitigating the difficulties of Canadians who are temporarily without jobs. Further amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act will be proposed at a later stage in the session.

My Government will continue to promote a vigorous programme of house building, which has already proven to be a strong feature of our economy and which constitutes the best opportunity for increased work in meeting the needs of our people. My Ministers are ready to cooperate fully under the authority of the National Housing Act in further projects for slum clearance and urban re-development to improve the cities and towns of Canada.

In order to ensure the continuation of our national housing programme, you will be asked at an early date to approve an increase in the public funds made available under the National Housing Act.

You will be asked to make provision for a substantial programme of public investment to be carried out by Government departments and Crown companies and to provide assistance to Provincial Governments for certain agreed types of projects. In particular, a large expansion in the construction and equipment of our system of airports and airways will be proposed and an increase in our work on harbours and rivers and public buildings.

In order to promote our national development on the frontier in the north you will be asked to authorize the construction of a railway to Great Slave Lake. My Ministers regard this as a major step in the establishment of productive industry on an economic basis in the Northwest Territories. You will also be asked to provide for the construction of important roads needed for development in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and in the provinces, with the cooperation of their Governments. You will be asked to provide for the initiation of a programme of research to assist in opening up the mineral resources of our Arctic Islands.

My Ministers have made progress in arrangements for the construction of the South Saskatchewan project. Proposals will be placed before you to make possible the commencement, this year, of the construction of the main dam intended to create a great reservoir in the heart of the prairie in order to further the productive development of this part of Canada.

The easing of the stringency in the capital markets of Canada during the past eight months encourages confidence in the expectation that large programmes of public investment can be successfully financed not only by my Government and its agencies but also by Provincial Governments and municipalities. My Ministers remain mindful of the importance of financing their large programme of expenditures in such manner as will best safeguard against a recurrence of inflationary dangers in future. They wish to urge upon all groups in our society a recognition of the dangers and inequities of inflation and the need to restrain demands which will give rise to increases in prices and the costs of production.

The improvements in our financial relations with the Provinces made by the last Parliament are having a beneficial effect upon our economy by making it possible for Provincial Governments and their municipalities to proceed with greater confidence upon expanded programmes of necessary services and works.

There will be placed before you a proposal to establish a new agency to regulate broadcasting in Canada and to ensure that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the privately owned broadcasting stations work effectively together to constitute a national system to provide satisfactory television and radio services to all Canadians within reach. Related amendments to the Radio Act will also be proposed.

To promote and guide the proper long-term development of our National Capital region upon lines worthy of our nation, my Government will request you to enact a new National Capital Act to replace the present Federal District Commission Act.

Changes will be proposed in the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act to make certain that payments may be made to participating Provinces qualifying under the Act in respect of any periods commencing after June this year.

You will be asked to authorize the establishment of a Harbour Commission to combine the growing harbours at Fort William and Port Arthur and to fit this Lakehead harbour to handle the larger traffic to be expected as a result of the Seaway.

Unremitting efforts are being made to sell Canadian agricultural and fisheries products in the markets of the world and considerably larger exports of wheat and cattle have been made. Support prices have now been established for a considerable number of products under the Agricultural Stabilization Act to carry into effect, for the current year, the desire of Parliament that agriculture should be thus assisted to realize fair returns for its labour and investment.

The Act to provide cash advances on farm stored grain has proven to be of advantage to a large number of farmers and to the economy as a whole. Certain amendments will be proposed to that Act in the light of experience in its application.

Amendments will also be proposed to the Prairie Farm Assistance Act and the Canadian Farm Loan Act.

In order to assist small business, there will be established a Small Business Section within the administrative machinery of government. The functions of this organization will be to provide liaison between the government and small businesses, to study the problems of small business and to advise on measures necessary to meet them.

You will be asked to replace the present Ticket of Leave Act with a new statute to establish a National Parole Board. There will be submitted for your consideration amendments to the Citizenship Act and the Indian Act to eliminate certain discriminatory provisions in these statutes.

Amendments will be proposed to the Veterans Insurance Act, the Returned Soldiers Insurance Act, the Children of War Dead (Education Assistance) Act, the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act, the Transport Act, the National Parks Act and a number of other statutes.

Members of the House of Commons,

You will be asked to appropriate the funds required to carry on the services and payments approved by Parliament.

My Ministers will lay before you in accordance with the law the Special Warrants which I issued upon their advice to authorize expenditures urgently required for the public good during the period since the twenty-third Parliament was dissolved. You will be invited to consider and approve these expenditures. An amendment to the Financial Administration Act will be proposed relating to the use of Special Warrants.

Other measures will be proposed to improve the effectiveness of the processes of Parliament.

The Government will ask your approval of the installation in the House of Commons of a system of simultaneous translation.

You will be asked to set up a Select Committee on Broadcasting, a Standing Committee on Estimates and a Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs, all with power to send for persons and papers. My Ministers will propose that a member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition be elected Chairman of the Committee on Public Accounts.

Honourable Members of the Senate,

Members of the House of Commons,

May Divine Providence bless and guide you in the accomplishment of the high purpose which brings you here.

The Commons withdrew.

His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to retire.

The sitting was resumed.

The Honourable Senator Brunt presented to the Senate a Bill S-1, intituled: "An Act relating to Railways".

The Bill was read the first time.

The Honourable the Speaker informed the Senate that a copy of the Speech of His Excellency the Governor General had been left in his hands.

The Speech was read by the Honourable the Speaker.

The Honourable Senator Brunt moved, seconded by the Honourable Senator Pearson—

With leave of the Senate,

PRAYERS.

Tribute was paid to the memory of Senator MacKinnon, P.C., whose death occurred on April 18, 1958.

The Honourable the Speaker presented to the Senate the Report of the Parliamentary Librarian, as follows:—

REPORT OF THE PARLIAMENTARY LIBRARIAN
1st Session, 24th Parliament, 1958

To the Honourable the Speaker of the Senate:

The Library of Parliament was re-opened two years ago and the wisdom of those who fought for its restoration after the fire is more clearly revealed every day. The distinctive "Confederation" appearance of the interior is almost the same as it was in 1876. Surrounding are modern offices occupied by an efficient staff. As the work of re-cataloguing and filling more and more shelves goes on so the usefulness of the library has increased both to parliament and government alike.

My last report was made as recently as October 14, 1957. Little needs to be added to the account then given.

From the large collection of books stored in the Supreme Court building or elsewhere since the fire of 1952, we have withdrawn over 200,000 volumes; these are now in the Library of Parliament building. Of that number 104,125 as of April 30th had been catalogued and classified. Several thousand others—some duplicates, some thought to be superfluous to a parliamentary library—have been transferred to the National Library. There still remain in the Supreme Court thousands more to be sorted and removed.

Two very large rooms under the Senate in which since 1920 we have stored 50,000 books have been repossessed by the Senate. Fortunately we have been able to find space for this material in the library and in the Supreme Court building.

My last report told of the plans made by the Department of Public Works to improve the general illumination of the main Reading Room in accordance with a recommendation of the Joint Committee on the Library of Parliament. Nothing however, has been done as yet to implement these plans.

From October 1, 1957 to April 30, 1958 our staff answered 2742 reference questions and circulated 8620 books.

Two valued members of the permanent staff, well known to Members and Senators in the past, have retired this year. Mr. Frank Fox had acted as a reference clerk for twelve years and Miss Winefride Raye had been a faithful and efficient secretary to successive Parliamentary Librarians for over thirty years.

Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd.) F. A. Hardy
Parliamentary Librarian.

APPENDIX

between

and

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

THE ORGANIZATION AND OPERATION OF THE NORTH AMERICAN AIR DEFENCE COMMAND (NORAD).

Signed at Washington, May 12, 1958.

CANADIAN EMBASSY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

No. 263

May 12, 1958.

Sir,

I have the honour to refer to discussions which have taken place between the Canadian and the United States authorities concerning the necessity for integration of operational control of Canadian and United States Air Defences and, in particular, to the study and recommendations of the Canada-United States Military Study Group. These studies led to the joint announcement of August 1, 1957, by the Minister of National Defence of Canada and the Secretary of Defense of the United States, indicating that our two Governments had agreed to the setting up of a system of integrated operational control for the air defences in the continental United States, Canada and Alaska under an integrated command responsible to the Chiefs of Staff of both countries. Pursuant to the announcement of August 1, 1957, an integrated headquarters known as the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) has been established on an interim basis at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

For some years prior to the establishment of NORAD, it had been recognized that the air defence of Canada and the United States must be considered as a single problem. However, arrangements which existed between Canada and the United States provided only for the coordination of separate Canadian and United States air defence plans, but did not provide for the authoritative control of all air defence weapons which must be employed against an attacker.

The advent of nuclear weapons, the great improvements in the means of effecting their delivery, and the requirements of the air defence control systems demand rapid decisions to keep pace with the speed and tempo of technological developments. To counter the threat and to achieve maximum effectiveness of the air defence system, defensive operations must commence as early as possible and enemy forces must be kept constantly engaged. Arrangements for the coordination of national plans requiring consultation between national commanders before implementation had become inadequate in the face of a possible sudden attack, with little or no warning. It was essential, therefore, to have in existence in peacetime an organization, including the weapons, facilities and command structure which could operate at the outset of hostilities in accordance with a single air defence plan approved in advance by national authorities.

Studies made by representatives of our two Governments led to the conclusion that the problem of the air defence of our two countries could best be met by delegating to an integrated headquarters, the task of exercising operational control over combat units of the national forces made available for the air defence of the two countries. Furthermore, the principle of an integrated headquarters exercising operational control over assigned forces has been well established in various parts of the North Atlantic Treaty area. The Canada-United States region is an integral part of the NATO area. In support of the strategic objectives established in NATO for the Canada-United States region and in accordance with the provisions of the North Atlantic Treaty, our two Governments have, by establishing the North American Air Defence Command recognized the desirability of integrating headquarters exercising operational control over assigned air defence forces. The agreed integration is intended to assist the two Governments to develop and maintain their individual and collective capacity to resist air attack on their territories in North America in mutual self-defence.

The two Governments consider that the establishment of integrated air defence arrangements of the nature described increases the importance of the fullest possible consultation between the two Governments on all matters affecting the joint defence of North America, and that defence cooperation between them can be worked out on a mutually satisfactory basis only if such consultation is regularly and consistently undertaken.

In view of the foregoing considerations and on the basis of the experience gained in the operation on an interim basis of the North American Air Defence Command, my Government proposes that the following principles should govern the future organization and operations of the North American Air Defence Command.

1. The Commander-in-Chief NORAD (CINCNORAD) will be responsible to the Chiefs of Staff Committee of Canada and the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the United States, who in turn are responsible to their respective Governments. He will operate within a concept of air defence approved by the appropriate authorities of our two Governments, who will bear in mind their objectives in the defence of the Canada-United States region of the NATO area.

2. The North American Air Defence Command will include such combat units and individuals as are specifically allocated to it by the two Governments. The jurisdiction of the Commander-in-Chief, NORAD, over those units and individuals is limited to operational control as hereinafter defined.

3. "Operational Control" is the power to direct, coordinate, and control the operational activities of forces assigned, attached or otherwise made available. No permanent changes of station would be made without approval of the higher national authority concerned. Temporary reinforcement from one area to another, including the crossing of the international boundary, to meet operational requirements will be within the authority of commanders having operational control. The basic command organization for the air defence forces of the two countries, including administration, discipline, internal organization and unit training, shall be exercised by national commanders responsible to their national authorities.

4. The appointment of CINCNORAD and his Deputy must be approved by the Canadian and United States Governments. They will not be from the same country, and CINCNORAD staff shall be an integrated joint staff composed of officers of both countries. During the absence of CINCNORAD, command will pass to the Deputy Commander.

5. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization will continue to be kept informed through the Canada-United States Regional Planning Group of arrangements for the air defence of North America.

6. The plans and procedures to be followed by NORAD in wartime shall be formulated and approved in peacetime by appropriate national authorities and shall be capable of rapid implementation in an emergency. Any plans or procedures recommended by NORAD which bear on the responsibilities of civilian departments or agencies of the two Governments shall be referred for decision by the appropriate military authorities to those agencies and departments and may be the subject of inter-governmental coordination.

7. Terms of reference for CINCNORAD and his Deputy will be consistent with the foregoing principles. Changes in these terms of reference may be made by agreement between the Canadian Chiefs of Staff Committee and the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, with approval of higher authority as appropriate, provided that these changes are in consonance with the principles set out in this Note.

8. The question of the financing of expenditures connected with the operation of the integrated headquarters of the North American Air Defence Command will be settled by mutual agreement between appropriate agencies of the two Governments.

9. The North American Air Defence Command shall be maintained in operation for a period of ten years or such shorter period as shall be agreed by both countries in the light of their mutual defence interests, and their objectives under the terms of the North Atlantic Treaty. The terms of this Agreement may be reviewed upon request of either country at any time.

10. The Agreement between parties to the North Atlantic Treaty regarding the status of their forces signed in London on June 19, 1951, shall apply.

11. The release to the public of information by CINCNORAD on matters of interest to Canada and the United States of America will in all cases be the subject of prior consultation and agreement between appropriate agencies of the two Governments.

If the United States Government concurs in the principles set out above, I propose that this Note and your reply should constitute an Agreement between our two Governments effective from the date of your reply.

Accept, Sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

"N. A. Robertson"
Ambassador of Canada.

Secretary of State of the United States,

APPENDIX

PROFESSOR DR. THEODOR HEUSS
President of the Federal Republic of Germany

to

MEMBERS OF THE SENATE AND OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

IN THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS CHAMBER, OTTAWA

ON

MONDAY, JUNE 2, 1958 AT 11.00 A.M.

Dr. Heuss was welcomed by the Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, and thanked by the Honourable Mark Robert Drouin, Speaker of the Senate, and the Honourable Roland Michener, Speaker of the House of Commons.

Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker (Prime Minister of Canada): (Text): Mr. Speaker and Members of both Houses of the Parliament of Canada: I welcome the President of the Federal Republic of Germany on this unique occasion, unique in that it is the first time that the Parliament of Canada has been addressed, and indeed it is the first time that North America has been visited, by a head of state of Germany.

President Heuss was a Member of Parliament for seven years. He has been a statesman, a professor of history and political science, a publicist and editor, a biographer and author.

Canada is a land of recent immigrants as measured in the perspective of human history, and they and their descendants have learned to live together in amity and brotherhood in this land. While the basic racial stocks are French and English, Canada is a land of many races who have all made their contribution to our traditions and development.

It is of interest to recall that the first of these races who came in the wake of the early French and British colonizers were some 2,300 persons from the Palatinate and the upper Rhine who between 1750 and 1752 were settled in Nova Scotia under a colonization plan of George III. They were followed by others of your race, Sir, who came to Canada after the Revolutionary War in large numbers from what today is the United States of America. Even at the time of Confederation there were within our country around 200,000 people of German origin. Today that number amounts to some 800,000 who have come and have made their citizenship here in keeping with the traditions of the other races who have joined together to comprise the people of Canada.

We meet here under unusual circumstances indicative of the fact that there is no finality in history; for that partnership that now exists among the United Kingdom, France, the United States, Canada and the other nations of NATO, including Germany and Italy, is indicative of those changes that have taken place in binding together the freedom-loving peoples of mankind.

During the presidency of our distinguished guest and under the wise statesmanship of Chancellor Adenauer, the Federal Republic of Germany joined and is now one of the major members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. I believe that what these nations have been able to attain in understanding and co-operation will in the years ahead, if our faith is maintained, permit a like development of freedom under law for mankind, a worthy and attainable objective.

We believe with you that the Free World must maintain its defences. We believe that the subjugation of defenceless nations on global proportions by force, infiltration and economic penetration makes it necessary that nations co-operate. Our experience in the past, of course, has been that pacts of themselves are insufficient. Deeds are needed as well as words, and for that reason Canada maintains the Canadian infantry brigade in the Soest area in Germany and bases for its air forces in Germany and France, and under the mutual aid program we train in Canada considerable numbers of German air crew personnel.

We believe that further attention and consideration to the principles of economic co-operation inherent in Article 2 of the NATO treaty is necessary if NATO is to meet successfully the changing forms of Soviet influence.

We have intensive trade relations with Germany. We are co-operating in the fields of atomic energy, taxation and civil aviation. Believing that the preservation of human freedom—I know that the Members of Parliament have the same view, and that you share that view—transcends all other considerations, Canadians intend to nurture that spirit of good will with all like-minded nations. We reaffirm our belief in and support for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as a defensive organization dedicated to peace and with no offensive objectives. I wish to make it clear that whatever threats may be made against those nations which believe in the mission of NATO and the necessity for its continuance, Canada will maintain forces in Europe as long as international disquiet and justifiable fears require Canadian participation.

My hope is that if the Western World will maintain its unity of purpose and will not weary in its pursuit of peace with freedom, however uncertain and hesitant the steps to that objective may appear to be, that peace with justice under law will have been achieved.

It is in that spirit, Sir, that I welcome you to the Parliament of Canada in this Chamber with representatives of the Senate and the House of Commons present. We welcome you for the stands you have taken since assumption of the Presidency of Germany in 1949, for that spirit of understanding and co-operation which has characterized your State. It is in that spirit that I welcome President Theodor Heuss, President of the Federal Republic of Germany, and now ask him to speak.

Professor Dr. Theodor Heuss (President of the Federal Republic of Germany):

(Text): Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, Honourable Members of the Senate and Members of the House of Commons: Permit me first to express my thanks to the Canadian people on my visit to Canada. I wish them to understand that my ability to speak English or French is not indicative of the depth of my feelings. I am sorry that I have not had practice in speaking foreign languages, either English or French, and I must ask your indulgence to permit me to speak to you in German. Permettez-moi de continuer en allemand.

(Translation):

I thank His Excellency, the Right Honourable Vincent Massey, Governor General of Canada, and the Canadian Government for their kind invitation to visit Canada.

I have asked the Governor General to convey my greetings to your Queen, Her Majesty Elizabeth II, and tell her how happy I am to become acquainted with this important and beautiful country and member of her Commonwealth.

I hold it a great honour to be permitted to speak in this illustrious House, which is at once a home and a model of the democratic spirit.

My words are at the same time addressed to the people of Canada to whom I wish to extend cordial greetings from the German people. May I accompany these greetings by my sincere thanks for the friendly reception accorded me everywhere since my arrival in this great country.

Throughout the centuries preceding our own, which has brought such tragedy to the peoples of the world, relations between Germany, whatever her form of government, and Canada were of a peaceful nature.

Then followed the two world wars, the first brought about by political misunderstanding and ineptitude, the second by evil and arrogant worship of power.

We cannot ignore these historical events which claimed so many victims and caused so much bloodshed. I still remember the war memorial honouring the Canadian soldiers who fell in Northern France in 1917 and 1918.

Out of these many battles there emerged mutual respect for soldierly gallantry, and then the understanding that it would be better to live with one another, yes! for one another! For it must not be forgotten that we have the same spiritual heritage and a great deal in common both intellectually and culturally.

Alas! Our generation knows all too well that campaigns and wars may have been brought to a victorious conclusion, but that peace has not yet been won.

The fear lurking in the souls of many nations is the result of political or military decisions still prompted by old wartime passions and worries.

We in Germany have many reasons to be grateful to the Canadian Government and the people of Canada for their early and unwavering understanding.

We appreciate what it means for Canada to maintain soldiers on German soil, to afford an opportunity to young German pilots to familiarize themselves with the constantly developing aircraft techniques, and to recognize and support the German people's demand for reunification by peaceful, democratic means.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization, of which both our countries and peoples are loyal members, is the political expression of mutual solidarity.

Due to the times we live in, this Treaty at first had military and even strategic aspects. But it is growing out of that stage, and this in itself refutes all Eastern propaganda claiming that it is a kind of aggressors' plot.

The political and economic traditions and aspirations embodied in this Treaty are much too diversified for anything like that.

Canada, with her wide-open spaces, and her rich resources waiting to be tapped, is developing her own historical rhythm. But she nevertheless still remains linked to Europe through the origin of her inhabitants belonging to separate language and cultural groups and stemming from her formative period and through the immigrants who bravely faced the risks of the new environment or, driven from the soil of their forefathers, established a new home here. What thousandfold opportunities many of them found in this land, especially the Germans expelled from southeastern Europe.

Here, where vast space fashions its own laws, it will also be appreciated that Free Europe and, in the not too distant future it is hoped, the other Europe which, together, we historically consider as an indivisible whole, is developing the elements of its unity in the economic, social as well as the spiritual and cultural fields, despite its present division.

These are the questions which find their expression in concept such as EURATOM, Common Market and Free Trade Area, but I cannot enlarge on their problems at this time and place. I think that the progress they represent is also appreciated in this country.

The psychological and political background of all this is the fact that the convulsions which characterized the relations between Germany and France for centuries have now been eliminated, after terrible experiences.

German youth has understood this to be an essential to the future of Europe.

Germany, which gratefully cultivates friendly relations with the United Kingdom and the countries in the North, West and South, has given herself authority in her Constitution to renounce her traditional national sovereignty.

The days spent here have made me richer in understanding, as I have viewed venerable and historic Quebec; seen the living present of Toronto and Montreal and had the incomparable experience of seeing the St. Lawrence Seaway and Niagara Falls. And I know you will not mind my quiet feeling of pride when I think that 60 years ago, when the Falls were first harnessed to generate power, it was my native province that supplied the first turbines.

In closing, allow me to say that this country offers immense opportunities for all those who face the future unafraid, and who love freedom. This country will help humanity in its efforts to give prosperity to everyone and to preserve peace among the nations.

Such is my fervent hope.

Honourable Mark Robert Drouin (Speaker of the Senate): (Translation): Mr. President, allow me to say to you, on behalf of the Members of the Senate of Canada, how very pleased we are to have you with us at this time and to express our gratitude for the admirable address which you have just delivered.

We have had, on previous occasions, the great honour of greeting, in this very Chamber, a number of remarkable statesmen, particularly from the Commonwealth, from the neighbouring Republic and from France. We are happy and proud, at this time, to be able to add your name to that memorable list of the best friends of our country and of the outstanding personalities of the free world.

The German people could not have chosen a better ambassador than yourself, Mr. President. We were already aware of your qualities of heart and mind, but we had yet to enjoy your great personal charm and to enter into bonds of friendship with the first citizen of that Germany which has become, not only a true friend but a precious ally in that gigantic struggle which is being waged since the end of the last war for the defence of peace and of freedom. We are glad of this opportunity which has been provided by your Government.

Our friendship with your beautiful country is an established fact. A substantial part of our population is of German origin. Naturally, for that very reason, that group has preserved a deep affection for Germany. But, moreover, no one can be unaware of all which your country has contributed through the centuries and still contributes today, to science, music, literature, philosophy and the various aspects of technical knowledge.

In addition, our two countries are solemnly associated in the North Atlantic Treaty, to face any emergency. They are thus closely linked within the Western community where Germany's influence, I am glad to point out, is increasingly being felt. We are therefore basically united by our common attachment to the same ideals and political principles.

In this regard it gives me pleasure to mention your personal contribution to the development and drafting of the democratically inspired Constitution of the Federal Republic of Germany, before you were elected first as a member of the Bundestag and then President of the Republic.

While we are already closely bound in the political, commercial and cultural spheres, we trust that this co-operation between our two countries, in facing current problems, will continue to grow in the future. Your visit, I am sure, reflects your country's determination to persevere in this course.

Mr. President, please convey our best wishes to the German people as well as to the Members of the Government and of the Parliament of the Federal Republic of Germany. Tell them, particularly, on our behalf, that our most sincere wish is that they may, very soon, with the help of the other free nations, raise the Iron Curtain which now divides them and prevents them from uniting freely.

Hoping that your visit to Canada will be enjoyable to you all, we wish you a pleasant journey home and many more years of fruitful life.

Honourable Roland Michener (Speaker of the House of Commons): (Text):

Mr. Bundes President: On behalf of the House of Commons and the Canadian people whom we are representing, although not exclusively I should say in the presence of so many Senators, may I express to Your Excellency our lively appreciation of the honour which you do us by your visit. You will appreciate from this second address of thanks that we are a bilingual country of English and French origins. After these two basic groups the third largest element in our population is of German descent. Many of these are third and fourth generation Canadians and some, such as those who founded Lunenburg, already mentioned, have a much deeper Canadian background.

As you have discovered on your recent visit to Toronto, this ethnic bond between our countries has been strengthened in the last ten years by an influx of many thousands of your countrymen. These latter, and to a lesser extent the descendants of the earlier German settlers, will appreciate your message in the words in which it was spoken; but all Canadians will welcome, in translation, the friendly message of greetings which you have brought us from the Federal Republic of Germany.

What you have said is not only welcome but important. Our future, as well as the peace and progress of much of mankind, will be affected in no small degree by the course which is taken by the German people, with their great capacities for work, invention and the arts of peace and war.

The world has shrunk since the first German immigrants came here in sailing ships. With modern transport you have had a quicker and, we trust, a more comfortable passage. Nevertheless from Bonn to Ottawa is still a long journey to be undertaken by one of your high position and responsibilities. On that account we are the more grateful to you for having come.

By your presence you have not only imparted to your message the integrity and purpose which have been exemplified in your illustrious career, but you have given us the opportunity of closer acquaintance with one of the great men of modern Europe.

We wish you happiness in your visit and a safe return to Bonn. Will you take home with you the thanks and cordial greetings of the House of Commons of Canada.

I conclude with words which most Canadians will understand and which all would wish to apply to your visit: Danke schön und auf wiedersehen.

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HAROLD MACMILLAN,
Prime Minister of the United Kingdom

TO

IN THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS CHAMBER, OTTAWA

ON

FRIDAY, JUNE 13, 1958, AT 10.00 A.M.

Mr. Macmillan was welcomed by the Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, and thanked by the Honourable Mark Robert Drouin, Speaker of the Senate, and the Honourable Roland Michener, Speaker of the House of the House of Commons.

Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker (Prime Minister of Canada): Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, Members of both Houses of Parliament: This is the third time that a Prime Minister of the United Kingdom during and since the War has spoken in this Chamber. Our thoughts are carried back to those dark days during the war when freedom hung in the balance, and when there was made in this Chamber by that indomitable statesman Sir Winston Churchill a speech which gave new hope to the legions of freedom everywhere in the world. Mr. Macmillan and Sir Winston have in common not only their devotion to national and international well-being, but through their maternal strain both unite their own country with the United States of America in its partnership with us without which freedom cannot be achieved in the world.

On this occasion I know you would want me to say as well that we are very happy that Lady Dorothy Macmillan has accompanied her husband at this time. We remember that it was during the days following the First Great War that here in this City of Ottawa Mr. Macmillan met his bride-to-be.

In these difficult days the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom approaches the critical world problems with wisdom, with loyalty, with long experience in business and as a House of Commons man, and with the scholarly clarity born of outstanding academic distinction. He is one whose mind has been tempered in his devotion to the great masters of history and politics, and whose desire for peace and the necessity of its maintenance was born of his own experience of the terrible toll of war. One of his great predecessors, Benjamin Disraeli, once offered this as a definition of a statesman: "One who represents a great idea, an idea with which he may identify himself, an idea which he may and can impress on the mind and conscience of a nation".

That definition is one to which Mr. Macmillan conforms in his devotion to the achievement not only of the well-being of his own nation and of a prosperous commonwealth dedicated to freedom, but in addition thereto in his never-ending efforts on behalf of peace.

During the last couple of days he and I and my colleagues have been associated in informal discussions. No one anywhere in the world need fear the purposes or the objectives of these and similar meetings. These discussions are not in the nature of conspiracies, but are conferences for peace designed to attain the joining of our efforts for the maintenance of an honourable and humane international society.

Today the joint purpose of all of us must be never to weary in well-doing and to realize at all times that while some may say it is a futile objective to have that idealism in the face of the sometimes sheer paralysis in the inflexible stand of the U.S.S.R., we must not consider that quest as futile. Out of this meeting has been reinforced, as I see it, the conviction that we will not be "futilitarians", however great the frustrations may be, but will continue to do everything we can to do our part simply, humbly and justly in order to bring about the assurance of peace to generations to come.

On your behalf and on behalf of the Canadian people I welcome Mr. Macmillan as a scholar, a soldier, a world statesman, Commonwealth friend and expounder; the Right Honourable Harold Macmillan, Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

Right Honourable Harold Macmillan (Prime Minister of the United Kingdom):

Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, and Members of both Houses of Parliament: I am very grateful for the invitation which has been extended to me to address the Canadian Parliament. I have spent 34 years of my life listening to speeches in the House of Commons. I therefore know what a high compliment it is for parliamentarians to add voluntarily to the burdens they may have to undertake.

I remember very well sitting in the gallery of the House of Commons in Canada in Ottawa nearly 40 years ago. At that time I was a young member of the Governor General's staff, which I joined shortly after the end of the First World War. I recall in particular the leading figures on both sides. Mr. Meighen, happily still with us, was on one side, and on the other was Mr. Mackenzie King. Those were the heroic days of parliamentary debate. Being already attracted to politics, I used to spend many hours listening to these classical masters of oratory. If I remember right the fashion of that day was that speakers were not only very polished but sometimes (dare I say it) somewhat prolix.

I listened to your proceedings as a young man, and now in revisiting your Parliament after this great lapse of time I am reminded of a story of Sir Winston Churchill who is still, I am happy to say, an active member of the British House of Commons. On a visit to America and Canada in the middle of the last war he was persuaded somewhat against his will, for he was much pressed for time, to go to Niagara Falls, which he had not seen for 40 years. When asked what he thought about it he made this observation, "Well, the principle of the thing seems much the same." So, if I may say so, it is with your Parliament.

I lived a year in Canada, and I had the good fortune to travel over the greater part of the country. In fact, I think I have visited perhaps more places from coast to coast than have many Canadians. I took away from Canada the most happy memories. I made many friendships which have lasted through the years. I also took back two precious gifts: first, the return of my health—for I was a cripple from war wounds when I came here; and second—a gift to which you have made kind allusion, Mr. Prime Minister—a wife. I am glad to say that I have contrived, in spite of the ups and downs of life, to preserve both these blessings.

The last time I was in Ottawa was in November of last year. I had already had the good fortune, Mr. Prime Minister, to make a friendship with you in the summer previous when you came post-haste from a general election to the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference. I shall always admire the way in which you arrived almost at a day's notice. Nor can I forget that at that Conference by your inspiration and persistence there were sown the seeds of the Commonwealth Trade and Economic Conference to which we are looking forward with such high hopes. The first stage took place within a few months at Mont Tremblant last year. For the second, the preparatory work of experts and officials is now proceeding. I earnestly hope that the Conference will mark a great advance in Commonwealth co-operation in trade and commerce.

When I saw the Prime Minister and the Cabinet seven months ago we had full and frank discussions; but if I remember right it was a position of some political uncertainty. Since then you have had another election and you, Mr. Prime Minister, have the satisfaction of being now supported by a large majority in the House.

Perhaps you will allow me without impertinence to make some reflections upon the ups and downs of politics. You have had them in this country, and we have had them in ours. Great successes are very agreeable when they come, and defeats are correspondingly disappointing; but both victory and defeat are in our democratic system part of the game. We learn to accept them cheerfully and look forward to the next time. We recognize that the rights of minorities must be respected as well as the powers of majorities, and perhaps this is the special strength of our tradition and our democratic system. It is based on, and indeed it can only be preserved by, good humour, common sense and fair play.

This leads me to venture some observations about the Commonwealth as a whole. I have had in the last few months a most wonderful experience. I made a tour, much too rapid to be satisfactory but comprehensive enough to be inspiring, of five Commonwealth countries in as many weeks. All of them have their problems, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Australia, New Zealand. I hope I may be allowed some day to make not only these occasional visits to the capital of Canada, but a more prolonged visit to other parts of the country. This tour which I made in January made me realize more deeply what I had already known but perhaps had not fully comprehended, the immense force for good which the Commonwealth is and can be in the world today.

What is it that binds us together? The United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa—we are, of course held together by common origins and tradition. We feel a deep and personal loyalty to the Crown, perhaps never more than today. We are fortunate indeed to have in our Queen so noble a representative of the royal function. But there are many countries of the Commonwealth which do not share common origins or common allegiance. We are not, all of us, bound together by ties of race, colour or religion. In these countries of Asia and Africa even the Crown itself, so dear to you and to us, is respected more as a symbol of Commonwealth unity than as a real and personal object of loyalty.

What, then, is this spirit that breathes upon this unique community of nations? It is, I think, closely connected with what I was trying to say just now about our parliamentary system and how we work it. It is the idea of free government, freedom of the law, of law and government separated, the judiciary uncontrolled by legislature or executive. It is the belief in government by consent, by debate, by committee, by local authority, by parliament.

Above all, perhaps, it is the conviction that the state was made for man and not man for the state. People who believe in these ideals will never surrender to materialism or to tyranny.

Of course the new nations of Asia and Africa have many problems and difficulties, but I have been deeply impressed with the deep impact which our people and our institutions have had upon these peoples of the East. I am quite sure of this; we do not gain in their estimation by denigrating the very real contributions which we have made. I am not thinking only of the great viceroys, the famous governors, the conquering generals; I am thinking about the work done throughout the subcontinent of India and throughout many parts of Asia and Africa by quite simple people—the district officer, the doctor, the missionary, the school master. These men come from humble homes; the small squire, the professional class, and above all from vicarage and manse. The work they did is not forgotten. It is still fruitful, more fruitful perhaps than they ever could have dreamed. All these ideas and examples have revived the old societies of the East, and if now the new vigour and bursting energy of these lands seems sometimes wrongly directed, let us remember this simple fact. In the great struggle for the future of mankind which has continued throughout all history and is now perhaps more intense than ever, the ideals of the Commonwealth, steadily pursued, have put the Commonwealth nations firmly on the side of freedom.

Military alliances, economic pacts, formal guarantees; all these are good and necessary and have served us well. We, in Britain, are proud to be the only nation to belong to all three defensive groupings in the world—NATO, SEATO and the Baghdad pact. Nevertheless these do not of themselves bring us new friends or win over the hesitant and doubtful, for this is a struggle partly of power and partly of ideas. In this struggle it is, in my view, the ideas and the ideals which will count in the long run, and in all these the Commonwealth of today has a vital role to play.

It would be wrong to think that in this world struggle we can take only a defensive posture. The steady growth of the Commonwealth is, indeed, the best evidence that our way of life is positive and vital. That is what we have to show to all the other peoples of the world who are hesitating to commit themselves, as well as to those who are at present under the yoke of Soviet domination.

You may ask how will it all end. I do not believe that we need fear the future if we hold firm to our faith and our ideals. In time even the monolithic dictatorships crumble and change, for although the Free World by its very diversity often seems weak, in its variety and above all in its freedom it is fundamentally strong. I do not believe that a purely materialistic concept of life will forever satisfy men and women; nor do I fear a continuing struggle of ideas. This I think should be our chosen battleground.

(Translation): In this large family which is the Commonwealth, Canada represents a link of vital significance. Yours is a special position. I believe that Canada and Great Britain have never felt closer than at this time. We hope and strive to increase that co-operation in all fields. I have already referred to the economic conference. It is more than that. It is the feeling that you and I have Mr. Prime Minister as members of the same team, serving the same Queen, and humbly dedicated to identical aims.

And to you, French-speaking Canadians particularly, I can say that you are living examples of unity in the free world. The traditions of French civilization were entrusted to your forefathers. In preserving them with unwavering tenacity, you have nevertheless successfully transformed and adapted the traditions of the past. And by this transformation you yourselves have developed. But other Canadians have changed too. And from this blend, unique in the world, rises the splendour of Canada as it is today.

(Text): May I with your permission, Mr. Speaker, add a few words about the Old Country. It is not too often that the people at home talk much about themselves, except of course in self-criticism. If you were to read what the newspapers say about us, what the Opposition say about us, what the back-benchers of the Government party say about us, what the popular writers say about us, what the television stars say about us, and what the broadcasting experts and columnists say about us, you would really think that the poor Old Country was on the way out. But this habit of self-criticism in the British people—I should really say the English people—can be very misleading.

Being half a Scot and half an American I can look at the English people with that special devotion which only those with no English blood would dare express. They are really a most wonderful folk. They go on grousing away, but do not be misled. Quite a lot of people have been misled in my life-time; the Kaiser was, and so was Hitler. The truth is that although they affect to be idle, flighty and even cynical, they are in fact a most hard-working people with deep-rooted principles and a strong sense of duty and devotion. The only thing is that they do not like talking about it.

In the 12 years since the War the Old Country has carried a pretty heavy burden. When I was a young man and joined the army in 1914 the national debt of Great Britain was £800 million. Today, it is £27,000 million. We have not repudiated these debts; we have not got out of them by wild inflation as some other countries have done. We have tried to pay our way by honest money. We have raised our standard of living to almost the highest in the world. Since the last war we have raised our exports from £900 million to £3,500 million. We have increased industrial production by nearly 60 per cent, and we have increased investment at home by 120 per cent. We have increased our lending abroad to an average of over £200 million a year—now running higher than that, because I said an average—and all of this invested in the Commonwealth.

In the five years immediately after the War we naturally had great difficulties. The average deficit in our balance of payments was £80 million a year. Over the last five years we have had an average surplus of £170 million a year, and this improvement is continuing. Naturally, since our reserves are too slender for the immense business which we finance, we are always subject to temporary difficulties. Almost 40 per cent of the world's trade is done in sterling, in our money, and we have only 4 per cent of the world's reserves to support it. But we shall get through future difficulties as we have done the last ones. The only thing that up to now we have not been good at is salesmanship, and that, with your help and by your example, we are now learning.

I was particularly pleased at the job done by the visiting Canadian delegation a few months ago. The contacts that were built up and the close association that we have now with Canadian industry are going to produce some remarkable results as the months go by. We have with your Government the closest understanding. We have between your industries and ours novel and quite remarkable developments in practical co-operation. Your industrialists have been to see our country and how good the stuff is that we have to sell. We hope that our recent mission to Canada under Sir William Rootes will have helped us to add still further to our understanding. We are looking forward, therefore, to increased mutual trade and closer working in all industrial and economic fields.

Our two peoples, among so many other things in common, have also this which ties us together. There is a word, which like most of the sacred things we do not find it easy to bandy about; which we do not talk about, but feel, and that word is "loyalty". Canada was founded on loyalty. The people of the Old Country, with all their differences and divergences, are a profoundly loyal people.

I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that it is with deep emotion that I have the honour to speak in this Chamber as Prime Minister of the United Kingdom. I never dreamt as a young man of such a possibility. Now that it has come I can scarcely believe it, but the message I bring to you is one based upon the thoughts of my early youth and confirmed by later experience. Our people and your people have been tested twice in my lifetime, tested in a hard school through two long wars and the harsh and difficult problems that follow war, but never were Canada and Britain closer together than they are today. Each of us can say to the other, with sincerity and truth, those beautiful words we know so well:

Whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge:
thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

Honourable Mark Robert Drouin (Speaker of the Senate): (Translation): Mr. Prime Minister, may I, on behalf of the Members of the Canadian Senate, express the pleasure your visit to Canada has brought us. We were happy to learn that you had kindly consented to address us in this House, and I wish to offer my most sincere thanks for the admirable speech you have just delivered. Each of us, I am sure, has found in it food for deep thought.

I would also like to avail myself of the opportunity, Mr. Prime Minister, to express, on behalf of those Senators and Members who, like myself, are of French descent, the pleasure we felt while listening to you speak to us in our native tongue.

Our country is rightly proud of the visit of so illustrious a personage as you are, and we are most happy to have you with us at this time.

As was said by the Right Honourable Prime Minister, this is the third time in less than 20 years that a prominent spokesman of the United Kingdom has honoured this House by his visit and, enlightened it by his authoritative statements.

In December 1941, it was the Right Honourable Sir Winston Churchill whose engaging personality was the hope and inspiration of the democratic world during the dark hours of the War. In February 1956, we welcomed the Right Honourable Anthony Eden, who played such a great part in the administration of the foreign affairs of his country. Today, we welcome you, Right Honourable Mr. Macmillan, who in these uncertain days, continue to play the same prominent part as your predecessors. To us, you are the personification of the importance and the greatness of the United Kingdom. This relationship between our two countries is of the highest order. Owing to our frequent consultations, we have been in a position to work in perfect understanding for the promotion of our mutual progress and development. Has it not been said, and rightly so, that the Commonwealth countries constitute a vital part of the business world? Although those countries have evolved and have reached nationhood, the similarities which they have preserved create among this group of parliamentary democracies a relationship which allows them to spread their influence throughout the world and to contribute to the establishment of a spirit of understanding and cohesion.

We are confident, Mr. Prime Minister, that this relationship will continue to be strengthened with the years.

The whole of Canada welcomes you as an ambassador of friendship and of peace, two sentiments which are made especially alive by your kind presence here today. May I say to you, Sir, how deep an impression you leave with us? Your visit here has extraordinary importance at a time when some international problems remain unsolved. Moreover, it symbolizes the loyalty which unites our two countries, it is the symbol of the sustained efforts your country made after terrible years of hardships. If, at the most critical time of history, we sometimes tend to lose faith in the future, we only have to look upon the glorious past of your country to find new courage and energy.

We are all rightly proud to be members of the Commonwealth, this group of partners who, in a spirit of equality and fraternity, work for the maintenance of peace and freedom in co-operation with other agencies of world security. Such is the ideal you represent, Mr. Prime Minister, and in closing my remarks I should like to endorse the opinion expressed by one of our French-speaking newspapers, on the occasion of your visit:

There is no doubt that, as were previous ones, this meeting between the head of the Government of Great Britain and the head of the Government of Canada will be friendly and will afford both countries a new opportunity to strengthen friendly ties which are not to be neglected in the Western world at the present time.

Therefore, I have the great honour, Mr. Prime Minister, of expressing to you, on behalf of this assembly which represents the Canadian nation as a whole, our deep gratitude for your visit, and I should like to transmit, through you, to all your fellow citizens, our sincere and friendly regards.

Honourable Roland Michener (Speaker of the House of Commons): Mr. Prime Minister Macmillan, on behalf of the House of Commons I have the honour to add our words of appreciation to those expressed by my colleague of the Senate. From our point of view it is particularly appropriate that you should have spoken to the Canadian Parliament and people in this Chamber, the Green Chamber of the Commons. Although it may look a bit strange to your parliamentary eye by reason of its expanse and its comfortable armchairs and desks as contrasted with the narrow benches of your own House, the Speaker's Chair, which is an exact replica of the one in Westminster from whence it came as a gift of your Parliament, should fill you with that familiar sense of uncertain security which this ancient seat has symbolized for generations of House leaders.

You will agree, I believe, that in spirit we are a true House of Commons in which responsible government is carried on in the British tradition, with only such variations as were needed in a federal union of two races and many regions. As you have remarked, these parliamentary institutions and practices have taken root in all the self-governing nations of the Commonwealth, and bind us together with an understanding of each other's politics which is certainly a broader if not a stronger bond of union than those of language and race. So it has been in your travels about the Commonwealth; you have been welcomed with pleasure and understanding by fellow parliamentarians, Asian, British and French, all speaking the same language of the standing orders and rules of procedure.

You have been welcomed, of course, for your own sake; for your friendly charm and your great personal attainments and, as our Prime Minister has mentioned, in this case for the presence of your charming wife. But this Commonwealth welcome is deeper. It recognizes in you as the Prime Minister of the original Parliament, a personification of the ancient source from which we have all drawn and to which we still look for living example and inspiration, and through which we communicate one with the other.

Knowing your heavy responsibilities, although you do your best to conceal them, we are the more grateful that you have found time to speak to us today. We thank you for your message and your greetings. We ask you to accept our heartfelt good wishes and to carry them with you to your own House of Commons and people.

OF

MR. DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER,

President of the United States of America

TO

IN THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS CHAMBER, OTTAWA

ON

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1958, AT 10.00 A.M.

Mr. Eisenhower was welcomed by the Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, and thanked by the Honourable Mark Robert Drouin, Speaker of the Senate, and the Honourable Roland Michener, Speaker of the House of Commons.

Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker (Prime Minister of Canada): Mr. President, Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, Members of the Parliament of Canada, President Eisenhower comes to us as the renowned leader of a mighty state, but what is more meaningful today is the fact that he comes to us as a good neighbour and friend. We are happy that he is accompanied by his gracious wife and helpmate, for Canadians are very fond of her, too.

(Translation):

I now wish to add a word of welcome in the French language, and to assure you, Mr. President, that the warmth of Canadian feeling towards you and our great neighbour, is one that comes from the heart.

To you and to your gracious wife, I extend the most cordial welcome.

(Text):

In visiting us unaccompanied by pomp and circumstance the president is following an old and precious precedent in the relations of our two nations.

Although you come to us, Sir, as the head of a powerful state, the intelligence service informs me after diligent inquiry that you come bearing no arms and carry no armour other than a brassie and a putter. May I, Sir, as an aside, express the wish that under clear skies and on fairways not too narrow you will be able, while here, to use this armour and add to your list of victories.

The Communist world is waging an intensive economic global offensive of "aid and trade", an offensive which is not designed to secure profits in a bookkeeping sense in order to secure the ordinary values of trade for its peoples, but an offensive whose success will be measured by the degree to which the souls and hearts and the freedoms and aspirations of the recipients will be subverted under Communist tyranny.

I think this is a very great occasion. We say what we have said on occasions in the past, our countries are united in defence. I believe, Sir, that the Soviet challenge demands that we can be no less in economic objectives. I believe that each of our nations, and each of the nations of the Free World, in forming economic policies, while at all times looking primarily to the welfare of the individual nations, must as never before take into account, in the common interests and for survival itself the effects of such policies on the economic welfare and interests of all other Free Nations. And I go even further and suggest that to meet the ever-enlarging expansion of Communist economic cold war, that joint action is imperative to the end that world trade will be expanded and the financial base of liquid resources necessary for such expansion will be materially increased. I feel sure I speak for all Canadians when I say that Canada stands prepared to assume her full share and to make her full contribution to such a bold policy.

Mr. President, our two lands have a glory of their own, the glory of two peoples moving forward together, not complacently, but with a humble pride, and joined in fraternal association that has extended through a century of tragedy and storm in different parts of the world.

We can, on this occasion, in the simplicity of our faith, thank God that our nations know nothing of ancestral hatreds or animosities. Above all, we may hope that this spirit of peaceful and co-operative relations will in due course become the fortune of all mankind.

Sir, as you came into our City you drove by and crossed over a small canal. Few know today when or why it was built. It was built more than 100 years ago to help protect this country from yours. Today it is a museum piece; it represents a past that is past.

I would recall to you, Sir, on this the occasion of your visit to our country one of the earliest visits by Canadian parliamentarians to Washington. When Abraham Lincoln went to Gettysburg to deliver his immortal and timeless address, one of those who accompanied him as his guest on the Gettysburg platform was the Honourable William McDougall, one of the Fathers of the Canadian Confederation. Mr. McDougall had been in Washington with Mr. Galt on a small matter regarding trade and Mr. Lincoln, with that informality which has continued since to characterize our relations, invited Mr. McDougall to accompany him. It is of interest, too, Sir, that when the next day Mr. McDougall wrote to his family in Canada his opinion, so different from many opinions uttered that day, was that the President's words would live in history.

In the years since there have been many comings and goings; there have been meetings and not all brought satisfaction to both sides, but there has remained that glory to which I referred a moment ago, that we can discuss, that we have discussed, and that we shall in the days ahead continue to discuss our problems and our differences with the candour of free men in friendship, understanding and manly frankness.

I have often been asked by other nationals what is the secret of the dedication of these two nations to neighbourliness and mutual respect. The answer, we know, is this. We trust each other in a union of hearts based on common ideals and the abiding principles of freedom and the rights of men. Our peoples are North Americans. We are the children of our geography, products of the same hopes, faith and dreams, products as well of those forms of expression which have been nurtured and enriched in the traditions and common heritage of Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights and habeas corpus.

When, thirteen years ago, you were given the freedom of the City of London, another great warrior-statesman, Sir Winston Churchill, said of you that you had shown "the capacity for making great nations march together more truly united than they have been before". I take leave to quote your noble reply in which in part you said:

"Humility must always be the portion of any man who receives the acclaim earned in the blood of his followers and the sacrifices of his friends."

Mr. President, it is in your clear knowledge that it is only by constructive deeds of living men that the sacrifices of the dead can have their proper values that Parliament, yes, the Canadian people, as a whole, give you their warmest welcome and acclaim. I salute you, Sir, as the wartime commander under whose leadership the legions of freedom marched when liberty was under seige and no man knew where salvation lay. I greet you, Sir, as one whose wisdom, humanitarianism and prestige are once more humanity's major hope for freedom and for peace.

Members of the Parliament of Canada, I have the high privilege of presenting to you a great and good tribune of freedom in war and in peace, the President of the United States.

Mr. Dwight D. Eisenhower (President of the United States of America): Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, Mr. Prime Minister, Members of the Canadian Houses of Parliament, distinguished guests and friends: As I begin, may I be permitted to speak a few words in my halting French to my French friends in Canada. The Prime Minister did this with great courage. I assure you I do it in abject fear.

(Translation):

Here, in Canada, you have demonstrated that differences in speech and forms of speech need not impair communications between free peoples. So it must be among all nations of the free world. Though we may speak in different tongues and accents, that fact does not weaken our determination to work for a just and lasting peace. All of Canada has a great and rich tradition in the service of this high purpose. Her dedication to it has been staunch and persevering. Her example encourages free men everywhere.

(Text):

Mr. Prime Minister, I want you to know of my deep personal appreciation of the warmth of the welcome you have extended to me and of the generosity of the remarks you have just delivered concerning me. Along that same line, I should like to express my very great appreciation of the warmth of the welcome that Mrs. Eisenhower and myself have experienced throughout the City, along its streets and in every meeting in which we have had a part. We are truly grateful.

This is my fourth visit to your beautiful Capital. I recall so well that when your gracious Queen came to Washington from Ottawa we spoke together of the beauty of this City and of the greatness of Canada. It is good to return, to see old friends and to make new ones.

I came here first in 1946 to congratulate the Canadian people on the brilliant role played by the Canadian forces you placed under my command in the World War which had then recently ended in victory. My next visit was made as Commander of NATO Forces in Europe. In 1953, I returned as President and talked in this House of some aspects of the relationship between our two countries.

I then spoke of the St. Lawrence Seaway in prospective terms. Today it is near completion and next year it will be opened. This is truly a great joint accomplishment. It will open up important regions of both Canada and the United States to ocean traffic. It will ever stand as a monument to what can be achieved by the common effort of two sovereign nations.

On that same occasion I spoke of the need to devise ways to protect our North America from any surprise attack. Since then we have made great strides. The Distant Early Warning or DEW Line has been built and placed in operation. In the process of its construction I am sure much has been learned which will contribute to the more rapid development of the northern reaches of Canada and our new State, Alaska.

Last month an agreement was concluded between our two Governments to establish a combined Air Defence Headquarters for this continent. We have also, both of us, striven, as we will continue to strive, for the Soviet Union's agreement to a system of inspection to protect against surprise attack through the Arctic. Recent Soviet communications have strengthened the hope that they will come to see that by such a system any basis for their professed fears of an attack across the Pole will be removed. For Canada and the United States such a system in operation would add measurably to our security against a sudden attack. Possibly it might also pave the way for still further measures of arms control and permit some reduction of the burden and danger of modern armaments.

Both of these developments, the Seaway, a broadened, deepened road for peaceful commerce, and the strengthening of our common defence of this continent strikingly illustrate two things.

The first is that change is the law of life and of relations between nations. When two great peoples such as ours, energetic and optimistic, live side by side in all the diversity that freedom offers, change is rapid and brings in its wake problems, sometimes frictions.

The second lesson that I see in these common achievements in diverse fields is that by mutual respect, understanding and with good will we can find acceptable solutions to any problems which exist or may arise between us.

It is important to remember this. Such differences as are from time to time expressed never affect the similarity of purpose which binds our two countries together.

Of course, each of us possesses a distinctive national character and history. You won your independence by evolution, and the United States by revolution.

Our forms of government—though both cast in the democratic pattern—are greatly different. Indeed, sometimes it appears that many of our misunderstandings spring from an imperfect knowledge on the part of both of us of the dissimilarities in our forms of government.

And yet, despite these dissimilarities in form, our two Governments are developing, and are increasingly using effective ways to consult and act together. This we do to meet the problems that confront us in our relations with each other, and in the relations of both with other nations of the world.

We share the basic belief that only under free institutions, with government the servant and not the master, can the individual secure his life, his liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. We are both determined to frame and follow policies which safeguard the lives and homes of our people, their peace of mind, their material well-being and, above all other things, their ideals. True to these ideals both of our countries, for example, are determined that the great decisions of peace and war will remain always under civilian control.

Moreover, we both recognize a design of aggressive Communist imperialism which threatens every free nation. Both of us face a military threat and political attacks. Our system of free enterprise is challenged throughout the world by a state-directed, state-controlled economic system. Indeed, this could well be the area in which the competition will be most bitter and most decisive between the free world and Communist imperialism. We must never allow ourselves to become so preoccupied with the differences between our two nations that we lose sight of the transcendent importance of free world co-operation in the winning of the global struggle.

Acting in accordance with our common dedication, the two of us, with others, have drawn together in collective security arrangements. The most notable of these is the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in which both Canada and the United States are equal partners. We are both determined to maintain what George Washington described as "a respectable military posture". We are equally determined to maintain our institutions in good repair and to ensure that our own economies function well.

Thus we seek not only to meet the expanding needs of our people but also to set an example of free men's accomplishments which will encourage and attract those less fortunate. Finally, we are agreed that we shall never cease striving for a just and lasting peace to be achieved by negotiation with those who challenge us. We overlook no opportunity to settle the issues which divide the world and under safeguarded conditions to reduce the burden of armaments.

Now, against this background of similarity in basic factors and policy, let me now point to some of the matters which it seems to me are troublesome between us. Among these are the surplus wheat disposal policies of the United States, the imbalance of our mutual trade, certain aspects of United States private investment in Canada, and Canadian fears of a trend in the United States away from forward-looking policies in the field of trade.

I am sure you agree that we should talk frankly to each other. Frankness, in good spirit, is a measure of friendship. It should be the practice, I believe, on both sides so to speak, when either feels that important interests are adversely affected by actions contemplated or taken by the other. Happily, these instances are rare. In mentioning today specific problems on which we do not see eye to eye I am doing so, of course, as an American, expressing an American viewpoint. I can assure you that your Prime Minister, in discussing these problems with my associates and me, most loyally and eloquently expresses the viewpoint of Canada.

It is my conviction, in which I believe he fully concurs, that for all of our present problems and all of our future ones, we will find acceptable solutions. It will take understanding, common sense and a willingness to give and take on both our parts. These qualities we have always found in our dealing with Canada. I hope that you have not found them lacking in us.

First then, in some detail, I should like to comment briefly on our surplus wheat disposal policies. I think that no one can quarrel with our purpose, though some of our methods may seem unorthodox by traditional standards. Simply stated, our wheat disposal program has three aspects.

In times of local famine or disaster we give wheat away. We have also bartered it for strategic materials. Finally, we sell wheat for local currency to countries which cannot afford to purchase it commercially. In these cases our policy is to lend back to the government in question most of the proceeds for local economic development. Our intent is not to damage normal commercial markets, and in this I think we have been generally successful.

I know that in the past there was criticism of certain aspects of these programs and particularly of our barter arrangements. I believe that the basis for these objections has been largely removed. Increasingly close consultation between officials of our two Governments has ironed out many misunderstandings respecting our surplus disposals. Your Government knows in detail what we are planning. I assure you that it is our desire and intention to keep the doors of consultation fully open. There must never be a final word between friends.

In several respects, despite inconvenience and even occasional damage in the past, Canada stands to benefit from our moving some surplus agricultural commodities into consumption overseas. First and most evident of all, many hungry people around the world have had food which they otherwise would not have had. Secondly, had these products remained in dead storage they would have had a depressing influence on the world market and world prices. Finally, the funds which we have been enabled to make available to recipient countries should in the long run help to raise standards of living and create enlarged markets for all of us.

I come next to the question of the imbalance of trade between our two countries. You buy more from the United States than you sell to us and this fact is of concern to many thoughtful Canadians. There are a few basic points which should be noted in this connection.

First of all, the United States and Canada are not state traders. All the products of industry manufactured in the United States and sold to customers abroad are sold through the enterprise of the private seller. These articles come to you in Canada only because of the desire of the individual Canadian consumer to buy a particular piece of merchandise. The United States Government does not place goods in Canada as part of a state-directed program.

This aspect of our trade with each other is the natural consequence of two private enterprise economies working side by side and trading with each other.

Then, we should also remember that the free world represents a multi-lateral trading community. To try to balance our books once a month or once a year with every nation with which we trade would stifle rather than expand trade. I assume that Canada is as interested as we are in the expansion of world trade rather than in its artificial redirection. Both our people want to buy and sell in a climate of economic vigour and expansion. An imbalance in trade with one country, in such a climate, is usually balanced or largely offset by the state of the accounts with other trading nations.

This is the case with Canadian trade. Your export deficit to the United States is offset by export surpluses to other countries and by the flow of investments to Canada. The promotion of healthy multilateral trade, as opposed to artificial bilateral balancing, is an important objective of the international monetary fund and the general agreement on tariffs and trade, to which both Canada and the United States belong.

For a moment I want to address myself as well to the other side of the trade equation, namely your exports to the United States. Here you can rightly say that, through quotas and tariffs, our governmental policies can either expand or restrict your opportunities to sell to us. The same is of course true of actions taken by your Government which can affect the volume of our exports to Canada.

Neither of our countries is a "free trader" in the classical economic sense. Each of us feels a responsibility to provide some protection to particular sectors of our economies which may be in distress or are for other reasons deserving of governmental assistance. We have taken some actions of this sort. So has Canada.

Oil imports into our country contribute a case in point. We believe that to ensure adequate supplies of oil in an emergency, it is necessary that exploration to develop oil reserves be carried forward with vigour. This means a healthy oil industry for the continent. A healthy domestic oil-producing industry is vital to our national security. We recognize that our security and yours are inseparable. We have been keenly sensitive to that fact in considering the nature of the voluntary restrictions on oil imports that have been put into effect by oil companies in the United States, and have minimized their impact on your economy.

Our restrictive action with respect to oil is not in any sense reflective of a change in the fundamental trade policy of the United States. Such actions must be viewed in perspective.

For example, since the so-called "escape clause" was incorporated in our trade agreements legislation in 1951, there have come from industry in the United States a number of requests for the imposition of quotas or higher tariffs. In about a dozen cases Presidential approval for some relief has been granted. In only one of these cases was Canada directly affected as an exporter. We have always conscientiously sought to take account of your interests as well as our own in seeking the best remedy to these intricate problems. I believe that a study of the record will bear out the truth of this statement.

Next, the flow of investment funds from the United States into Canada has led to expressions of concern on your part. These funds have been attracted to your country by the business opportunities Canada has offered. Though they may raise questions in specific cases respecting control of an industry by United States citizens, these industries are, of course, subject to Canadian law. Moreover, these investments have helped you to develop your resources and to expand your industrial plant at a far faster rate than would have been possible had you relied wholly on your own savings. They have thereby helped to provide employment, tax revenues and other direct benefits. These funds have also helped Canada to finance with ease its recent surplus of imports from the United States, a fact that is testified to by the premium of the Canadian dollar over the United States dollar.

I am confident that if there are some defects in this investment process, ways will be found to correct them because that is in the interests of both our countries.

One final word on the foreign trade policy of the United States. In 1934 the United States took an historic decision to embark on a positive policy of fostering trade with the launching of the reciprocal trade agreements program. This policy we continue to support and to practise. The Government of the United States, after a public searching of soul at times of renewal of the Trade Agreements Act, has consistently reaffirmed this policy. Have no fear that the United States will abandon a policy so well established. The problems I have been discussing concern our economic lives. Our points of economic contact are varied and numerous, as they of necessity must be under our chosen system of private enterprise.

Our Governments have a responsibility to help to compose difficulties, but we must not forget that thousands of individual citizens of Canada and the United States must themselves find in their diversified activities the answers to many of these problems.

Finally, there is no cause to be surprised or disturbed to discover that occasionally differences arise between us. The distinguishing character of the peoples of the free world lies in the fact that differences between them can develop, can be expressed and then amicably resolved.

We in the United States have no more desire than you have to seek in our relations with other nations the silent, sullen unity that elsewhere has been purchased or imposed. The hallmark of freedom is the right to differ as well as the right to agree.

I have spoken to you today in the knowledge that through you I address a nation strong in the tradition of freedom and vigilant in its defence. You and we are alike convinced, by our history, our religious faith and our common heritage of freedom, that economic well-being and political liberty both depend upon the efforts of individuals and on their willingness to accept the responsibilities of freedom. Today, I assure you once more of the pride and gratification that we of the United States feel in our long and friendly association with you, our sturdy northern neighbour.

We stand together at a pivotal point in history. All that we Canadians and Americans, and those who went before us, have built, all that we believe in, is challenged, as it has never been challenged before. The new horizons of competition range from the polar areas, and extend to the infinity of outer space.

It is for us, all of us, to bring to the challenge a response worthy of ourselves and of our two nations.

As we do, we shall know the satisfaction of having built, in friendship, a safer and ampler home here on the earth for this generation and those that shall come after us.

I thank you very much for your kind attention.

Honourable Mark Robert Drouin (Speaker of the Senate):

(Translation):

Mr. President, it is indeed a privilege to welcome you, on behalf of the Canadian Senate, to a body so dedicated as we are to justice, to freedom and to a belief in Canada's future.

Your presence among us recalls those fine hours when our two peoples made the sacrifices, which had to be made if they were to maintain those great ideals which are still, today, as precious to them as they were then. Your visit also focuses attention on the deep feeling of friendship which binds our two countries in these difficult times, when it is not easy to draw the dividing line between peace and war.

Our two countries are, so to speak, family relations. We freely refer to you as our cousins to the south, and through the centuries, a true family bond has developed between our two peoples. True, we have our occasional squabbles, we have our differences, we disagree; but it amounts to nothing more than the mere family spats such as are likely to occur in the best regulated families. But once we find ourselves faced with a common danger, we are quick to forget these growing pains and, closing ranks, we join forces, and heartened by our bonds of friendship, we confront the enemy; and, with God's help, we have been known to emerge the victors.

Mr. President, you come as the head of a powerful democracy in which the peoples of the free world have, to a large extent, placed their rightful hopes. This privilege is not without its heavy responsibilities. While you must no doubt, on the one hand, be the guardian of your national interests, your guardianship, on the other hand, of the whole of the free world impels you to have a constant regard for the hopes and the needs of the nations joined in alliance. Never must these hopes and needs be confused, still less brought into conflict; most vital of all, they must be brought ever more closely together and reconciled. This heavy task can only be accomplished through the utmost clarity, impartiality and strength. In you, Mr. President, we find embodied all these qualities, and we beg of you to rest assured of our confidence and understanding.

Yet despite all the crushing burdens which are your lot, you have accepted to spend a few days in our midst. Undoubtedly you have been struck by the many contrasts of language, tradition and procedure between our two countries. Our political institutions are not built up in the same way; our ties with the nations are not all identical; our individual interests do not necessarily call for a like approach. But you must have found, in Canada, a spirit undistinguishable from that which inspires your own country—that of a free people, vigorous and aware of the paramount importance of moral values.

What we have, through the Grace of God, we mean to hold; but no longer can nations do this alone. We feel comforted at the thought that we have the United States as our neighbour, and we are pleased to feel the warmth that comes with the knowledge that we stand together in front of the common danger.

Mr. President, please allow me to express to you, as well as to your charming wife, our hearty congratulations on the occasion of your 42nd anniversary of your marriage; and to wish both of you many more happy years together. Your union is symbolic of the bonds of sympathy and of brotherliness which bless the relationship between our two countries.

We are deeply grateful, Mr. President, for the kind words you had for us, and we ask you, on behalf of both the Canadian Parliament and the Canadian people, to accept our heartfelt thanks for your visit, and to assure your compatriots of our sincere and loyal friendship.

Honourable Roland Michener (Speaker of the House of Commons): (Text): Mr. President, the French language as spoken by my colleague of the Senate is so distingué and in this case has been so expressive of our gratitude for your visit and for your address to us today, that it would be an anticlimax to repeat his words in English. Even to add to them may be what the Presbyterians would call a work of supererogation. But I must take that risk in the interests of preserving the bilingual rights of my English-speaking colleagues and you, Mr. President, must therefore submit to be thanked twice. Furthermore, my thanks and good wishes are expressed more particularly on behalf of the House of Commons in whose Chamber this auspicious meeting is taking place.

You will be pleased to know, at once, that your message to our two Houses has evoked a response of complete and unanimous concurrence. You may find it useful, Mr. President, to cite this example to our legislative counterparts in Washington and to remind them that it would be unseemly for them to be outdone in this respect by their Canadian cousins.

We are deeply conscious, Sir, of the great consideration which you have shown to our country in your visit to our Capital, accompanied by your gracious wife and by your distinguished Secretary of State, Mr. Dulles, and of the honour you have done to our Parliament and people by the sincere and friendly message which you have just given us. Your words have reassured our minds but, more than that, they have rekindled in our hearts those ancient and enduring sentiments of friendship, which have characterized our relations for the last century and a half.

It is clear that our objectives are the same, that we think alike and want to act together; nevertheless, as our affairs become more closely interwoven in this shrinking world, more effort is required by each of us to keep them from becoming entangled.

The effort to this end which you are now making we deeply appreciate, more especially because of the constant demands upon your time. Your great office combines in its responsibilities some of the duties of our Governor General in his capacity as representative of the Head of the State and Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, and some of the duties of our Prime Minister (Mr. Diefenbaker) as chief of the Executive Branch of Government. One cannot carry this dual comparison too far; our Prime Minister has some duties in this Chamber which you may be glad, or on occasion sorry, not to share. In any event this duality of your functions, by our standards, makes it more difficult for you to leave Washington and makes us doubly grateful for your presence with us in Ottawa.

I trust that your reception here this morning and the enthusiastic response to your message will leave no doubt of the success of this part of your mission. We offer you our best wishes for the continued success and enjoyment of your entire visit and express our hopes that, by coming to us a second time, you have established a firm precedent for the future.

Upon your return home we trust that you will convey to your countrymen the respects of the Parliament of Canada and will advise them that we shall long remember this significant session. We also ask you to express to them our neighbourly thanks and best wishes.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Ottawa, Canada,
July 11, 1958.

Dear Mr. Speaker:

Before I leave this lovely city and this friendly country, I want once again to thank you for the privilege of appearing before a Joint Session of Parliament and, in particular, for the warmth of the comments you made on my talk. Fortunately I can understand French a little better than I can speak it (the latter deficiency I have fully demonstrated) and I was indeed touched by the sentiments you expressed.

For my part this visit has been both valuable and important. I return to Washington with a renewed conviction that our countries are strong in our friendship and that we have the good will and understanding necessary to work out any differences that may arise between us.

And, of course, not the least of the pleasure of my contacts with you was on the golf course yesterday. I thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon, although I do wish I could have exhibited a little better game.

With my personal thanks, once again, to you and to the members of the Senate for the courteous and cordial reception you gave me, and warm regard,

Sincerely,

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

APPENDIX

of

DR. KWAME NKRUMAH

PRIME MINISTER OF GHANA

TO

IN THE

HOUSE OF COMMONS CHAMBER, OTTAWA,

ON

MONDAY, JULY 21, 1958, AT 11.00 A.M.

Dr. Nkrumah was welcomed by the Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, and thanked by the Honourable Mark Robert Drouin, Speaker of the Senate, and the Honourable Roland Michener, Speaker of the House of Commons.

Right Honourable J. G. Diefenbaker (Prime Minister of Canada): Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons and Members of the Parliament of Canada: Dr. Nkrumah, on behalf of the Parliament and people of Canada, I extend a warm welcome to you and your Ministers who are associated with you on this occasion, Honourable Mr. Botsio and Honourable Mr. Baako. I welcome you as the Prime Minister of the first truly African state to attain dominion status within the Commonwealth.

I first met Dr. Nkrumah at the Prime Ministers' Conference in London last June, a few short months after his country had become an independent nation within the Commonwealth. I think the emergence of Ghana to equal status within the Commonwealth is symbolic of the commonwealth concept as it develops to meet change and changing conditions. Canadians have pride in the role that Canada has played in the evolution of this commonwealth. In this commonwealth, nations, equal and independent, join together in their dedication to freedom through the practice of parliamentary democracy in the tradition of the Mother of Parliaments at Westminster, thereby bringing peace, progress and prosperity to peoples everywhere in the world.

It was Sir Robert Borden who in 1919, following the sacrifices of the First World War, secured for Canada recognition of her sovereign status as a signatory of the Peace Treaty and as a member of the League of Nations; further steps along that pathway have been taken by succeeding Prime Ministers of Canada. The Commonwealth to me represents an institution which, in its inherent greatness, gives hope to mankind. A world organization of many races, beliefs and religions, we have no political uniformity without law or by law; its unity is in the dedication of its peoples to freedom; its glory is that all share in a common heritage; its purpose, peace for all mankind; the bonds of its unity maintained by the good sense, good will and good faith of its diverse peoples.

Because of this principle it does not stagnate in formalism. It is ever growing; it is living. From time to time in the years ahead other nations will join its ranks and two confederations, that of Nigeria and that of the West Indies, have not long to wait for membership.

If I might I should like to say a word as to the constitution of Ghana, for it illustrates what I have placed before you, namely that there is no uniformity in the political systems of the various portions of this commonwealth. Ghana has a unicameral Legislature. Five regions comprise the State which came about through the uniting of the Gold Coast with Togoland. Each region has an Assembly with powers which are not unlike those of our provinces. Each region has a House of Chiefs with power to consider any matter referred to it by a Minister or the National Assembly.

Mr. Prime Minister, the achievement of full self-governing membership in the Commonwealth to which you led your people was a swift, orderly and constitutional march, a tribute to your devotion and a credit to the United Kingdom, which in its finest and best traditions paved the way for the emergence of your nation as a new nation within this commonwealth. Indeed, in little over half a century the commonwealth concept, adapted to the needs of your country, has brought about the transition of a land of diverse peoples with traditional African culture into a modern state with a new and energetic economic life whose purpose it is to raise the standards of its people and develop its resources and the talents of its people.

I betray no state secret, Mr. Prime Minister, when I say that last June and July I was deeply impressed by your ability and by your personal character, and we became friends. I say that as a foundation necessary to the relationships which prevail as between those of us who have responsibilities in all parts of the Commonwealth. We have something in common. We were both born on September 18, though you were born a little bit later than I was.

Your life, Sir, is an Alger story. Born in a humble home, educated in your own country, you went abroad in order to widen that education in the United States of America, were graduated from Lincoln University and the University of Pennsylvania, and later attended the London School of Economics. I know your philosophy of life from personal conversation with you. However, I prefer to quote your own words on one occasion when you said this: "In truth the burden of my life can be summarized in 'The Memoriam' quoted by Cecil Rhodes—"So much to do, so little done'".

You have done much. You have much still to do in order to bring about that unity among peoples, without regard to colour or race, which has been your life work. It is thus my pleasure to welcome you to Canada, and as a representative of an older partner of the Commonwealth to welcome your country as one of the latest in the family of nations within the Commonwealth.

I introduce to you the Prime Minister of Ghana, Dr. Kwame Nkrumah.

Dr. Kwame Nkrumah (Prime Minister of Ghana): Mr. Speaker of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House of Commons, Mr. Prime Minister and Honourable Members of the Parliament of Canada: It is a great pleasure for me to address this august assembly today. I wish to express the gratitude of the people of Ghana and my own appreciation for the honour your Prime Minister and his Government have done our country by inviting me to pay this visit to Canada. I wish to thank you very sincerely, Mr. Prime Minister, for the kind words with which you have just welcomed me.

We in Ghana have a strong feeling of pride in our Commonwealth membership. I had the privilege of attending the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference in London last year, when for the first time in history the first African state entered that great and free association of states stretching across the world. The meeting provided an invaluable opportunity for establishing personal relationships with other Prime Ministers and political leaders, and I am particularly happy that I have been able to renew my friendship with your distinguished Prime Minister, Mr. Diefenbaker, for whom I have had great admiration since my first meeting with him.

On attaining our independence we in Ghana chose to become a member of the Commonwealth of our own free will. We enjoy the same institutions of parliamentary democracy and the same climate of politics and public morality as the other members. We have the same respect for tradition and the same regard for ceremonial. We place the same value on the human individual and appreciate the dignity of restraint. We accept the sovereignty of law and the sanctity of the pledged word.

The family relationship between members of the Commonwealth which we have already experienced and which brings together countries widely differing in race, religion and social background, is an example of international association which we shall always support so long as it continues to be based on sound democratic principles and respect for the sovereignty of the member nations.

Canada is in a sense the founder of the Commonwealth, for it was in the conception of a free association between Canada and the Mother Country that the foundations of the Commonwealth were laid. Canada has made a great contribution to the world by the successful working of her institutions, her Government, the spectacular development of her national resources, and the constructive initiative taken in international affairs. The spirit of tolerance and mutual confidence among peoples of different racial groups that has evolved in this community is an achievement which is a shining example to all of us. Canada also serves as an invaluable link between the great North American continent and its people and the rest of the world.

We believe that Ghana, as the first truly African state to join the Commonwealth, also has a contribution to make to the enrichment of the life of the world community. Just as you in Canada have given the world the benefit of your experience and views arising out of your position on this great continent, so we in Africa hope that we will also be able to contribute our views for the common benefit of the community of nations. We feel that through us and through other African nations a general understanding between the African continent and the various members of the Commonwealth will be developed. We realize the great responsibilities that this position imposes on us, but we are ready and prepared to take up the challenge.

Recently we took the initiative in convening a conference of independent African states, a conference which proved to be most successful. I myself have recently returned from a tour of the capitals of the other states which participated in the conference. We are endeavouring to establish among ourselves in Africa a fundamental unity on domestic and foreign policy which is, I think, of special significance to the role of the African nations in world affairs. We are determined to work together in the economic and cultural fields, with the object of raising the standard of life of our peoples and making a distinctive African contribution to international discussions and the achievement of world peace. We are determined that through mutual co-operation and collective leadership we free and independent African states shall not only safeguard our hard-won independence but also use all the means available to us to emancipate those of our brethren who are still under colonial rule.

I find nothing incompatible with our effectiveness as a member of the United Nations and the Commonwealth in pursuing an African objective and projecting an African personality. On the contrary I see in it great possibilities for good, because we should be able to bring to our deliberations in the United Nations and the Commonwealth a better understanding of the African point of view, and make a distinctive contribution toward reaching acceptable solutions to our many problems.

I should like to take this opportunity to comment on certain aspects of our foreign policy. Basically the policy of our government is one of non-alignment and positive neutrality. I have emphasized on several occasions, however, that this should not be interpreted as a purely negative neutralism. On the contrary, we will always adopt whatever positive policy will do most to safeguard our independence. We have a vested interest in peace, and we will do everything in our power to support the United Nations.

Like many other small countries we have appealed to the Great Powers to suspend nuclear bomb tests. We pray that progress can be made in achieving some degree of disarmament, thus permitting part of the vast resources now applied to the barren task of producing still more terrible weapons of destruction to be transferred to the constructive and hopeful task of assisting the peoples in the less developed countries to eliminate disease and poverty from their lives.

I have come to Canada at a time when great international tension has been generated by recent developments in the Middle East. The attitude of my Government to this situation was made clear in the statement issued on July 16, just before I left. We believe that any attempt to pass judgment on what has happened would at this stage simply heighten tension, and the task now is to secure a workable solution for the future. This, we suggest, could be based on three principles; the substitution of a United Nations force for the American troops now in Lebanon; the holding of free elections in that country under United Nations supervision, and the subsequent establishment of Lebanon as a free and independent state with a status of neutrality, internationally guaranteed on the analogy of Austria. As to the immediate situation, I am confident that I express the views of the leaders of the other independent African states when I say that all of us pray that the leaders of the great powers will come to an understanding which will spare us, who are not parties to their disputes, and the rest of mankind from the unbelievable horrors of modern war. Today, so it seems to me, the fate of mankind rests in the hands of a few men. I pray that they are fully aware of their vast responsibilities.

May I say how greatly we in Ghana have been impressed and inspired by Canada's record in the field of international affairs in recent years. We feel that common sense, decency and reasonableness have invariably reinforced the admirable attitudes you have taken in the United Nations and the wise counsel which you have contributed to the Commonwealth.

One other aspect of our international relations on which I wish to touch is that of economic development. Like any other less developed country, we wish to banish disease, ignorance and poverty from our land. We realize that we can only do this in co-operation with other countries and governments. We are the world's greatest producer of cocoa, but like other one-crop countries we are at the mercy of world prices. As you know, the recession of the last year has already had disastrous political consequences quite apart from its economic effects for several of the governments of those less developed areas.

In our own case I attach the highest importance to increasing the productivity of our agriculture, and to starting the industrialization of our country. The cornerstone of our future development is the successful implementation of our great Volta river project for the production of aluminum. Here again the recession has affected our basic plans most profoundly for aluminum producers are now naturally reluctant to increase capacity. Like everyone else, I trust that this recession will end very quickly and that the expansion of the North American economy, which can so decisively affect our own hopes for the future and the hopes of all less developed countries, will soon be resumed.

It is this situation which to me most vividly illustrates the community of interest and common purpose which should exist between the dollar and sterling areas on the one hand and the less developed countries on the other. The sustained development of the resources of the less developed countries would not only reduce their economic vulnerability and thus consolidate their vitally important political independence, but at the same time raw materials would continue to be produced for the more advanced industrial nations, thus ensuring the maintenance of high levels of employment and the expansion of world trade, a process which of itself is essential for the survival of the Western economies.

In recent years I believe that the common interest and identity of purpose between the wealthier nations and the less developed areas has not been adequately recognized. I hope the forthcoming Commonwealth Economic Conference will give adequate consideration to this basic truth, and in particular pay far greater attention than in the past to the political implications of economic development.

All of us in our separate ways, both as individuals and as nations, desperately seek for a world of peace where men and women may bring up their children in security and with confidence in the future. I believe that apart from general disarmament and the abolition of nuclear tests nothing could do more to achieve this hope than that all like-minded countries should gather together and co-operate in achieving sustained and balanced economic development among themselves, thus expanding world trade and improving the common welfare of all people.

Before I conclude I should like to express the appreciation of my Government and the people of Ghana to this great country of Canada for the many manifestations of interest which you have already demonstrated in our affairs since independence, and for the very welcome assistance in a number of fields, economic, social and cultural, which we have received from you. We can best show our appreciation of this assistance by ensuring that it is used for the maximum benefit of all people.

May I thank you once again for the honour and privilege of addressing this great assembly. I pray that this occasion will always be remembered as the beginning of an enduring friendship between Canada and Ghana, a friendship based on a common belief in the dignity of all mankind and in the right of all people to control their own affairs, dedicated to the pursuit of peace. Thank you.

Honourable Mark Robert Drouin (Speaker of the Senate): (Translation): It is on behalf of the Canadian Senate, Mr. Prime Minister, that I have the great honour of welcoming you to this House which, in your country as in ours, symbolizes the respect of our two peoples, Ghana and Canada, for parliamentary democratic institutions, those pillars upon which, notwithstanding differences in culture and tradition, rests the close unity of Commonwealth nations.

This union of different peoples under the banner of parliamentary democracy is no mere gesture. The Canadian people which as you have seen, is made up of various racial communities, have managed, through democratic institutions in their federal form, to fashion and pursue a common ideal and to respect each other's essential characteristics. It is with an equal respect for their diversity and an unshakable faith in their common ideal that Canada looks upon the nations of the Commonwealth, whether they be African, like yours, Mr. Prime Minister, Asiatic or Anglo-Saxon.

You are the head of a new African nation, independent within the Commonwealth and called to a high destiny, not only on your own continent, but in the whole democratic world as well. Heir to the traditions of ancient Africa's civilization and to British parliamentary institutions and conscious of the responsibility implied by that privilege, your country has already undertaken to give them dynamic and positive expression. Since your recent accession to independence, your Government, with astonishing courage, has already started to develop the natural resources of your beautiful country.

Apart from your great love for Africa and your deep understanding of that country, you yourself, Mr. Prime Minister, have brought to your role of nation builder, an extensive knowledge of the North American continent gained during your studies in the United States. It is, therefore, with very special interest and understanding that Canadians look upon the unfolding of Ghana's destiny. Just as each of the two racial groups who inhabit both our countries are equal partners, enjoying the same rights and privileges, so each and every one of the nations of the Commonwealth are equal partners jointly and severally pursuing objectives of peace and happiness.

Straight away and by right your country has become a full member of this great and noble Commonwealth family. You are welcome into it and beyond the Atlantic and the African continent, we extend a friendly hand to all the citizens of Ghana whose beloved Sovereign, it seems only fitting to point out, is the same as ours.

The people of Canada appreciate your having made us this visit in spite of your pressing responsibilities. On my own behalf and on behalf of the Senate of Canada, I ask you to accept our thanks for your kind words and to convey to your compatriots the expression of our sincere admiration and faithful friendship.

Honourable Roland Michener (Speaker of the House of Commons): (Text): Prime Minister Nkrumah, in bringing this memorable session to a conclusion may I add a word of thanks on behalf of the House of Commons. I assure you, Sir, that our meeting today has been all too short, having regard to the significance of your visit and the interest you have inspired in us, and in all Canadians, in our brother country of Ghana. We should gladly have given you the unlimited time which is accorded in this Chamber to a prime minister or a leader of the opposition, as against the few minutes which you have taken. It would have been a pleasure, too, to hear from the distinguished members of your Government who accompany you, and whom we are so happy to welcome.

May I express a personal regret that we are not able to meet the remarkable man, Sir Emmanuel Quist, the former Speaker of your Legislative Assembly, whose contribution to the establishment of parliamentary methods in your new Legislature must have been indispensable.

Your visit, in your capacity as representative of the youngest member of the great and growing family of nations which make up the Commonwealth, is not only appropriate but it is a touching recognition and furtherance of our fraternal relations. It gives to your older Canadian brother another opportunity to inspect and dote upon the new baby. I hope the metaphor will not be offensive. As Sir Winston Churchill might have said, "Some baby". In fact your phenomenal growth in political stature from the cradle to majority and independence in the last ten years is in contrast to our own unhurried but steady evolution over a century from colony to independence.

From 1791 to 1867 we had three constitutional advances to self-government, and took another 50 years to exercise independence in external affairs. In your case, if we leave out of account the Burns constitution of 1946, which within 18 months was described as outmoded at birth, you rapidly outgrew two new constitutions, those of 1951 and 1954, and reached full stature on March 6, 1957. Then you donned the constitutional garment which you now wear with so much apparent comfort and sophistication.

Apart from this contrast in the rate of our political growth there are many similarities in our history in the Commonwealth family. As has been said, we gave the lead to the original four British dominions, with the United Kingdom, made up the British Commonwealth. You have given the lead to the African states. Your democracy, like ours, is modelled on that remarkable British invention of responsible parliamentary government. As I have said on other occasions, this common use of parliamentary institutions which runs throughout the nations of the Commonwealth today gives us all an understanding and a confidence in each other's policies and politics which is a solid basis for future friendship and co-operation.

From what I read, you in Ghana have already mastered the parliamentary art. Your great speech in the independence debate, with its understanding of British policy and African needs, its eloquence and its sincerity, its apt quotations from Burke, Aristotle and Tennyson, was in the highest tradition. I am told, too, that if you had any notes on that occasion they were not the copious notes the Speaker hears about in some other Houses.

Some other of your new parliamentary practices will endear you to our members. For example, you are reported once to have advised an exasperating member to go have a drink of orange juice. Your Ministers, too, seem to follow familiar patterns in dealing with questions before the orders of the day. This example comes from John Gunther:

Mr. Kusi asked the Minister of Agriculture and Natural Resources—
(a) What is the estimated population of the tsetse fly?
(b) Is there any evidence that the number is increasing?

Mr. Casely-Hayford: (a) There is no available record of tsetse fly population.

(b) In view of the answer to part (a) of the question, the answer is no.

We thank you, Sir, for your visit and your message. It has been said that the darkest thing about Africa has been our ignorance of it. You are doing much to dispel this ignorance. We honour you for the outstanding leadership which you are giving in Ghana. We honour your country for its assumption of the responsibilities of self-government. So much depends in West Africa on its success and its example. Please bear with you when you return to Ghana the heartfelt good wishes of the Canadian Parliament and people for all your high endeavours.

APPENDIX

— REPORT OF THE STANDING COMMITTEE ON FINANCE —

THURSDAY, August 7th, 1958.

The Standing Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the Report of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1957, reports as follows:—

On May 20, 1958, the following order of reference was adopted by the Senate:

“That the Report of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the fiscal year ended 31st December, 1957, be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance for consideration and report.”

Subsequently the Committee held eight meetings and heard evidence from the President of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, Mr. Stewart Bates, and other bodies interested in the building of houses. The evidence adduced was sufficient, in the opinion of your Committee, to justify the early adoption of the recommendations set forth herein.

1. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation

A study of the evidence given by the President of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and other witnesses shows that the position of the Corporation is one of major importance to the economy of this country. Your Committee feels that the creation of conditions which will encourage a vigorous house-building programme is one of the prime duties of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. At the present time, this duty is, in the opinion of the Committee, being fully discharged.

It is evident that attention is being paid by the Corporation to the requirements of efficiency and economy in the use of public funds. Your Committee feels that the reduction in staff, without loss of efficiency or service, and its consequent saving in money is singularly praiseworthy.

As the interpreter and administrator of the Federal Government's housing policy, under the National Housing Act, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is, in the opinion of your Committee, diligently discharging these duties.

The Annual Report for the year ended December 31, 1957, which has been under study by your Committee, is a full and frank statement of the housing activities carried out during the year 1957.

Exhibit 1 shows the various reserves available for Mortgage Insurance, Home Improvement Loan Insurance and Rental Guarantees. From the evidence given on this subject, there appears to be some doubt as to whether the reserve fund for mortgage insurance is adequate or excessive. The Committee feels that a closer study of this fund is warranted. At the same time, it is the opinion of this Committee that an adequate margin of safety must be accumulated before any reduction in the mortgage insurance fee is contemplated.

Your Committee therefore recommends that an actuarial study be made of the Mortgage Insurance Fund, with a view to ascertaining the point at which a reduction in the mortgage insurance fee might be warranted.

2. Mortgage Insurance on Existing Residential Real Estate

Throughout the proceedings, frequent mention was made of the desirability of providing home ownership facilities for people of low income (See Exhibit 2). One method by which this could be partially achieved would be to extend the facilities of the National Housing Act to modest existing houses.

Such an extension does not appear to be appropriate at the present time. The Committee feels that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation should keep this subject under constant study with a view to advising the Federal Government of a suitable time for such an amendment. It is suggested that if and when the time for such an amendment arrives the facilities be limited to home owner loans and that a modest loan limit be applied.

3. Loans for University Students' Dormitories

The Committee listened to evidence presented by the National Conference of Canadian Universities of the growing need for providing accommodation to resident students.

At the present time, the Federal Government is facing increasing demands for financial assistance for various housing purposes. The Committee is of the opinion that housing people, particularly those of low income, deserves the utmost priority. To this end, the largest percentage of available mortgage resources, both federal and private, are presently required. The provision of hostel accommodation for universities is both desirable and necessary. At the present time, however, the federal funds available under the National Housing Act are fully required for housing purposes.

While sympathizing with the University authorities in this problem, your Committee does not feel that a recommendation for an amendment to the National Housing Act permitting the use of federal funds for financing such accommodation is merited at the present time.

However, as the evidence given to the Committee was to the effect that there is now no source for borrowing money for the construction of university residences, in the further study of this subject consideration might well be given by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation in conjunction with the educational institutions and the provincial departments concerned, to a suggestion that loans on such residences by approved lending institutions be qualified, subject to reasonable conditions, for insurance under that part of the National Housing Act providing for insurance of loans.

4. Financing of Municipal Services

Your Committee heard evidence with respect to this matter but is not prepared to make any recommendation on the subject.

5. Low-cost Housing

The Committee feels that a proper definition of the terms "low-cost housing" and "low income groups" is appropriate at this time. It is recommended that the following definitions be adopted:—

Low-cost Housing

Any single family dwelling, the cost of which, including structure, land, services or septic tank and well, does not exceed a total cost of $9,000. Such a house must conform to the minimum housing standards for National Housing Act construction (See Exhibits 3 and 4).

Low-income Groups

Any family, in any area, whose annual income falls in the lower third of the local income group.

(At the present time, the national average family income at the top of the lower third, amounts to $3,600 per annum.)

Your Committee considers that home ownership for this group of our population should be encouraged as much as possible. A greater provision of houses at a cost not exceeding $9,000 would provide homes for many people of modest income. An example of such a house follows hereunder:

Cost of house and land	$9,000
Down payment	900
NHA loan	8,100
Insurance fee	162
	8,262
Monthly repayments at 6% over 25 years	53.00
Assumed taxes	15.00
	68.00
Total monthly payment	68.00

At a repayment ratio to income of 27%, a home owner earning $3,022 per annum could afford to acquire such a house.

The Committee heard, with interest, of the plans of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to prepare designs for modest dwellings in the remote and outlying areas. It is to be hoped that this work will be extended to encourage a better standard of construction in these areas.

Evidence has been heard on the need for providing low rental accommodation. The Committee feels that the present facilities offered under the National Housing Act are adequate and that amendment for the purpose of extending these facilities is not warranted at present.

The Committee hopes that the fullest possible resources of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be directed toward encouraging the provision of low-cost homes, the expansion of low rental accommodation, and the raising of standards of construction in the remote areas.

6. Shortage of Mortgage Funds

From the evidence presented, it is apparent that the flow of mortgage funds during the last few years has been both insufficient and erratic. Concern has been expressed by various witnesses about the future supply of mortgage funds. It is evident that there is a need for a close study of the problem of increasing the supply of mortgage funds and stimulating the sale of insured mortgages.

Your Committee recommends, therefore, that an organization be set up under the leadership of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to carry out a close study of this problem. This body would contain representatives of the Bank of Canada, the Department of Finance, chartered banks, life companies and other approved lenders. Its terms of reference should be confined to two aspects:—

- (a) Increasing and stabilizing the flow of mortgage funds.
- (b) Stimulating the sale of insured mortgages and encouraging the resultant sale funds back into the mortgage market.

7. Private Lending in Remote Areas

Evidence was given which suggested that a reluctance exists on the part of many approved lenders to lend in the remote areas. It appears that, although these loans carry the same guarantee as insured loans in urban centres, the administrative costs and greater difficulty of resale do present greater problems to a lender than loans in the urban centres.

While direct loans by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation are, of course, available in these areas, the Committee does not consider that the Corporation should provide facilities which can be equally well supplied by a private institution.

Your Committee recommends that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation initiate conversations with representatives of the approved lenders, in an attempt to influence the lenders to extend greater lending opportunities to the remote areas than exist at present.

8. Urban Development

The Committee was impressed by the evidence given of the growing need for slum clearance in many of our cities. Greater use of the facilities available under the National Housing Act will have to be made during the next ten years if this problem is to be dealt with.

From the evidence presented, it appears that municipalities are not taking adequate advantage of the opportunities for financial assistance in redeveloping the substandard areas of our cities.

It is to be hoped that possibly Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, in co-operation with the Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, will provide more detailed information on the facilities available under the National Housing Act directly to municipal officials.

9. Co-Operative Housing

Evidence was given of the success of co-operative housing projects in many parts of the country. Inasmuch as this has provided economical and worthwhile housing, your Committee feels that efforts by co-operative groups to build their own houses should be encouraged as much as possible.

It is suggested that much wider publicity be given to the opportunities for co-operative housing under the National Housing Act. The Committee feels that the method of disseminating this information should be left to the discretion of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

10. Research into new methods of Construction

Evidence was given of the initiation of research projects by the Corporation (See Exhibit 5). It is felt that this is to be highly commended. Your Committee would like to express the hope that the utmost priority be given to further research work into finding new methods of construction which will reduce the cost of housing, new methods of sewage disposal, and new materials suitable for construction in the northern areas.

It is hoped that the resources of private industry will, at all times, be sought and that the present close co-operation which exists between Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation and the Division of Building Research, National Research Council, will continue.

Conclusion

The Committee has been impressed by the calibre of the witnesses heard and the quality of the evidence given. In such a complex field as that of housing the present and future population of the country, it is inevitable that differences of opinion exist on the best means of solving the problem.

Nevertheless, your Committee feels that the various organizations engaged in housing activities are to be commended for their effort and enterprise. In Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the Committee is of the opinion that the Federal Government has a housing agency of the highest quality. It is gratifying to note that the private interests with whom the Corporation co-operates in housing, building and financial matters hold the organization in the highest esteem. Your Committee expresses the hope that this close liaison and co-operation will continue to flourish in achieving the common aim of improving housing conditions in Canada.

All which is respectfully submitted.

C. G. HAWKINS,
Chairman.

EXHIBIT 5Description of How an Individual Household Sewage Disposal Unit Might Work and Description of the Experimental Foamed Plastic Hut*DESCRIPTION OF HOW AN INDIVIDUAL HOUSEHOLD SEWAGE DISPOSAL UNIT MIGHT WORK

The best known individual sewage disposal unit is the septic tank and disposal tile bed. This method has been in use for over 100 years with little improvement and sometimes does not function well in congested areas.

In the septic tank the solids are reduced by settling out and digestion by bacteria called anerobes. The residue in the tank is called digested sludge. To purify this septic sludge requires the action of another bacteria called aerobes. These require large quantities of oxygen which is provided by allowing the sludge to flow through a tile bed set not too deeply in the soil so as to permit the penetration of oxygen. This action will purify the sludge quite well.

There is a unit available which uses these same principles but does much of the operation by mechanical means. The waste is flushed through a grinder which reduces the solids much as the septic tank does and the waste is then deposited into a tank containing water. Air is bubbled through this water continuously to provide oxygen for the aerobes which then purify the effluent. This process is called "activated sludge" and has been used for years in mass disposal sewage plants.

Such a unit is now available but it seems to have many limitations when used as a closed circuit re-using the same water again and again. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has financed a project to study this action and encourage improvements to make it operate satisfactorily.

This description of a possible individual household sewage disposal unit is based on the use of bacteria. There may be other methods and C.M.H.C. is trying to encourage additional work towards the elimination of mass sewage disposal pipes and plants.

One of the first things C.M.H.C. did when it was decided to study this problem was to have a literature search made. This search disclosed that very little research was or is being done on this subject.

The literature was checked carefully and letters were written to every major country in the world. It appears that the only country in which any work of this kind was done is the United States of America. Other countries appear to have discouraged such work because of high population densities and fear of pollution of the soils and waters. In the U.S.A., however, two units are now on the market. Both of these operate on the activated sludge or aerobic principle.

DESCRIPTION OF THE EXPERIMENTAL FOAMED PLASTIC HUT

In the attempt to find some revolutionary approach to new construction methods Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation together with the Division of Building Research encouraged the development of a foamed plastic hut. The floor, walls and roof of this consist of various types of foamed cores with different type skins. The floor also includes water pipes and electrical conduit built-in in such a way that the jointing of the panels automatically connects the pipes. The objective is to develop materials which will provide structural strength, insulation, water resistance, rigidity and appearance, and the services, in one and which can be assembled on-site with a minimum of field labour.

A second hut is planned to be built of a material which may ultimately permit foaming in place.

If these are successful it is hoped to encourage further development along these lines.

If successfully developed such a method of construction would be particularly useful for northern construction. If the experiment is successful, it is possible to envisage two cans of liquid shipped to a site and then foamed in light weight moulds up to 20 or 30 times its volume. Transport by air would be eased very much. Further, unskilled on-site labour could erect such houses easily.

APPENDIX

—Third Report of the Special Committee of the Senate on Land Use in Canada—

WEDNESDAY, August 20, 1958.

The Special Committee of the Senate on Land Use in Canada make their third Report as follows:—

On Thursday, June 12th, 1958, the following Resolution was adopted by the Senate:—

“That a Special Committee of the Senate be appointed to consider and report on land use in Canada and what should be done to ensure that our land resources are most effectively utilized for the benefit of the Canadian economy and the Canadian people and, in particular, to increase both agricultural production and the incomes of those engaged in it;

That the Committee be composed of the Honourable Senators Barbour, Basha, Bois, Boucher, Bradette, Cameron, Crerar, Emerson, Gladstone, Golding, Hawkins, Horner, Inman, Leger, Leonard, MacDonald, McDonald, McGrand, Methot, Molson, Pearson, Power, Smith (Kamloops), Stambaugh, Taylor (Norfolk), Taylor (Westmorland), Turgeon, Vaillancourt, Wall and White;

That the Committee have power to engage the services of such counsel and technical and clerical personnel as may be necessary for the purpose of the inquiry;

That the Committee have power to send for persons, papers and records, to sit during sittings and adjournments of the Senate, and to report from time to time;

That the evidence taken on the subject during the two preceding sessions be referred to the Committee.”

The procedure adopted by the Committee was to call witnesses to give verbal and written reports in their particular field of land use. Since the hearings began in February 1957, 38 witnesses have provided a great deal of information on the scope and problems of land use and in some cases suggestions for a more effective use of land. Those giving evidence were senior officials of federal and provincial governments, farm leaders, technical workers in agriculture, forestry authorities, aerial survey specialists and engineers in land use planning, water use and conservation. A list of these appears in the appendix.

More than three hundred and fifty pages of evidence were recorded and published and in addition much reference material was provided to the Committee by the witnesses.

The Submissions

It is difficult to summarize adequately the material presented at the hearings. However, the essence of the submissions may be stated as follows:

Our Land.—Within the settled areas and those to which it is believed settlement can be extended, the soil has been developed under either a grass or forest cover. The latter is by far the most extensive and covers the whole southern part of Canada except the more arid region of the southern parts of the Prairie Provinces, the soil here being developed under a grass cover. The forests consisted of both the deciduous and coniferous species of varying densities, depending upon soil and climate. Likewise, for the same natural reasons, the grass cover varied in species and density.

Determinants of Land Use.—Apart from urban sites for various purposes, in general, agriculture provides a more profitable use of land, than do other uses. But there are many factors which determine the profitability of land in agricultural use. Climate, which determines the kinds of crops that can be grown, location in respect to markets, soil and other physical characteristics are a few of these factors. If, on account of any of these factors, the productivity of an area is so low as to preclude the possibility of establishing a healthy agricultural economy, then for land where the soils were developed under a tree cover, it would seem advisable to leave in forest, or if the trees have been cleared, an effort be made to re-establish the forest and develop an economy based upon the products of the forest. The same is true of the grass lands. Unless these can be more profitably used in cultivated crops, such lands should remain, or be re-established, in permanent grass.

Relation of Land Use to Changing Economic Environment.—Utilization of land like other human activities is a continual process of adjustments. The economic environment changes and land which at one time could be farmed at a profit is no longer capable of such use. The reason is not likely to be wholly in the relatively inferior soil compared to other areas, but combined with the location of industries elsewhere, shifting of people, changes in demand and the introduction of new farming techniques which the partially deserted area is not able to readily adopt in order to compete, may account for the emergence of marginal and submarginal farms.

The nature of these adjustments and their incidence vary. To some they create hardships; to others they mean gain. It is believed, however, that national and provincial policies can and should be established which will coordinate and develop the application of measures to lessen the hardships in the adjustments and diminish the losses both human and material.

Problem Areas in Land Use.—Already the Committee's attention has been directed to a number of problem areas in land use by representatives of provincial and national organizations who have given evidence. A few of these, common to all provinces, are listed here:

- (1) Areas, where on account of an unproductive soil, lack of markets, or absence of non-farm employment, it is impossible to maintain an acceptable living without continual assistance from outside sources. These conditions create what might be described as rural slums. The remedy may be to assist the occupants to locate elsewhere and the land use in forestry and/or grazing.
- (2) Areas where small inefficient farms prevail for which there is a reasonable chance of aiding their occupants to increase their efficiency through facilities not presently available to them, and thus help them to raise their level of living.
- (3) Areas of soil erosion and depletion of fertility vary according to the contour and character of the land, and cultural practices. Even in more successful farming areas problems in soil erosion and the depletion of fertility are found. While the direct responsibility for solving these problems is that of the farmer, his circumstances may be such that he cannot adopt effective practices and it may be desirable to provide assistance for him to do so.
- (4) Problems in water resources and control are also problems in land use. Drainage may be required to increase productivity, dyking to reduce hazards from flooding; or, on the other hand, structure to impound water to raise water tables, or for storing water to irrigate.

- (5) From the time man commences to use these resources for his own betterment and that of mankind, he disturbs the balance of nature and then arise problems of soil erosion, fertility maintenance, flooding and decreased water supplies, and a whole host of others related to land and water use. In too many cases there is a delay in the application of corrective measures until the land becomes noticeably less productive. Such occur even in the better farming areas. It is in the interests of all to assist the users of our land into husbandry practices which maintain its productive capacity.

Co-ordination and Expansion of Further Study and Action.—The evidence indicates considerable work has been done and is underway by various government departments and also by private enterprise in the field of land use and water conservation, both in investigational phases, (soil, land use and economic surveys) and to a lesser extent in action programs. It has also been represented to the Committee that the efforts have fallen far short of what is required and moreover there has been some duplication. A plea has been made for a centralized co-ordinating agency to give encouragement and direction in the research into land and water use problems and in action programs designed for their solution.

The Committee's Job

It is essential that the Committee continues to study a number of phases on the subject of land and water use and related aspects in production, marketing, financing, etc., for the better informed it can become, the sounder the judgement it can render and wiser the decisions it can make. However, the Committee believes the task at hand is to determine:

- (1) What problems in land and water use can be most effectively handled in an overall national policy, and,
- (2) What form or organization should be established to give leadership to such a national program.

It would seem that the Committee's activity should be directed along the following lines: Study achievements of significance in a number of existing systematic programs designed to bring about better land and water use.

Examples are:

- (1) Development of soil improvement associations by farmers themselves.
- (2) Agency programs in restoring tree cover to non-arable lands.
- (3) Agency programs in re-grassing of lands.
- (4) Work of River Valley Authorities of Ontario.
- (5) Work of Maritimes Marshland Reclamation.
- (6) Certain phases of the work of P.F.R.A. in Western Canada.
- (7) Land use and conservation Committees of the Western Provinces.

Mechanics of Enquiry.—It would appear advisable that at least one achievement in a land and water use project from each province be studied. It may be advisable to study achievements in better land and water use in the United States and other countries, and possibly also the experience where like projects were not so successful. It is suggested that the procedure of such studies be as follows:

That sub-committees be named:

- (i) to study an achievement in each province;
- (ii) to visit sites of projects, and interview provincial, municipal and local interests responsible for same;
- (iii) to prepare reports and with or without personnel responsible for achievements, report to the Committee as a whole.

Machinery for National Leadership in Better Land Use.—If as a result of the Committee's studies, the Committee is encouraged to suggest that machinery be established on a national scale for co-ordinating and assisting in programs designed to bring about better land and water use, the Committee should give attention to another phase of the study in land use, and that is the nature and form of the national machinery required. It has been suggested by one of the national organizations appearing before the Committee that an act required for such a national undertaking should be framed to be as broad and flexible as possible to ensure the greatest possible co-operation with the provinces in necessary programs.

"Flexibility is important so that Federal participation in provincial programs may vary according to the manner in which provinces wish to carry on their program and the emphasis they wish to give to the various aspects of the land use program."

Recommendations for Action outside of the Committee

While, at this time, the Committee feels it has neither covered the scope of the inquiry on land use requested of it, nor adequately assessed the submissions heard, nevertheless it is prepared to recommend:

(1) That the soil survey being co-operatively carried out by the Federal Department of Agriculture, the Provincial Departments of Agriculture and the Colleges of Agriculture be speeded up and expanded not only in order to complete the soil mapping of the whole settled area of Canada, but also of the unsettled areas.

(2) That it be called to the attention of the proper authorities the need of a systematic land use survey based upon appropriate factors to provide for an economic classification of the land according to its use suitability.

(3) That the work of various agencies in the study and management of our water resources be expanded,—specifically that relating to drainage and erosion problems, condition of water-tables and of present and likely future requirements.

(4) That more emphasis be given studies which designate requirements respecting farm size, organization and practices according to the physical characteristics of the land and economic conditions which prevail.

All which is respectfully submitted.

ARTHUR M. PEARSON,
Chairman.

PART III

PENSTOCKS AND POWER DEVELOPMENT

12. (1) If Saskatchewan proceeds with construction of the works described in paragraph 2 of Appendix "A" Canada and Saskatchewan will enter into an agreement pursuant to which

- (a) Canada will pay to Saskatchewan twenty-five per cent of the cost computed in accordance therewith of constructing and installing such number of penstocks within the diversion conduits in the main dam and connecting the diversion inlets with the power-house, each of a size, length and capacity and in a location approved by the Minister, as may be necessary to produce, at minimum operating head, 200,000 horsepower,
- (b) Saskatchewan may construct and install such additional or enlarged penstocks within the diversion conduits of the main dam and connecting the diversion inlets with the power house, each of a size, length and capacity and in a location approved by the Minister, as may be necessary to produce, at minimum operating head, power in excess of 200,000 horsepower, any increase in cost due to such additional or enlarged penstocks to be borne solely by Saskatchewan,
- (c) Canada will transfer to Saskatchewan on demand, without charge (except as provided in Part I) free from all encumbrances, such of the land, including minerals, as Canada or Saskatchewan has made available for the reservoir under Part I and will grant to Saskatchewan such rights in or over other lands owned by Her Majesty in right of Canada as Saskatchewan requires for the purposes of this Part, and
- (d) except as provided in paragraph (c), Canada will not be required to bear any cost or furnish any work, labour, services or property in connection with the construction of the works described in the said paragraph 2 of Appendix "A".

(2) Canada will, if the Premier so requests and the Minister is satisfied that it is feasible, provide for the enlargement of the diversion inlets in the main body of the dam in size and number beyond the capacity necessary for the construction, operation and maintenance of the reservoir under the other provisions of this Agreement, and the cost of such enlargement shall be borne solely by Saskatchewan.

(3) An agreement made under this Clause may provide that Saskatchewan may construct works for the conveyance of water alternative to the penstocks mentioned in this Clause in which case Canada will pay to Saskatchewan twenty-five per cent of the cost computed in accordance with the agreement but not in any event exceeding the amount, as determined by the Minister, that Canada would be required to pay under paragraph (a) of sub-clause (1).

(4) Canada may discharge its obligation under this Part by payment to Saskatchewan of such sum certain payable in such manner, as may be agreed upon by the Minister and the Premier.

PART IV

(2) Upon the transfer of the reservoir to Saskatchewan under sub-clause (1) of clause 7, Saskatchewan will

(a) use its best endeavours in co-operation with the engineers and contractors of Canada to fill the reservoir, as soon as practicable consistent with the use of the water for power, the rights and interests of downstream users of water and sound engineering practices, to minimum irrigation level and such higher levels as the Minister may require to complete construction and testing of the reservoir, and

(b) before the expiry of one year from the day on which the reservoir is filled to minimum irrigation level, as determined by the Minister, or of three years from the date of transfer of the reservoir to Saskatchewan under sub-clause (1) of clause 7, whichever is earlier, complete construction of the Irrigation Works to the extent necessary to provide full irrigation to not less than 50,000 acres of land.

14. (1) Subject to sub-clause (2) Saskatchewan will bear the full cost of constructing the Irrigation Works and will purchase, acquire and provide all lands required for the purposes thereof.

(2) Canada will transfer to Saskatchewan on demand without charge (except as provided in Part I) free from all encumbrances, such of the land, including minerals, as Canada or Saskatchewan has made available for the reservoir under Part I, and will permit Saskatchewan to use such other lands owned by Her Majesty in right of Canada for the purposes of access to the Irrigation Works as Saskatchewan requires for the purposes of this Part.

15. Saskatchewan will provide and carry out all financing, legal, administrative, engineering, surveying, designing and supervisory services necessary to the acquisition of land and the construction of the Irrigation Works, and will file all appropriate plans with the appropriate Land Titles Office and Water Rights Office.

16. The Irrigation Works will be operated and maintained and the cost thereof defrayed pursuant to arrangements to be made by Saskatchewan.

(2) Canada and Saskatchewan may each appoint representatives to report on all phases of construction of the project and they may make any inspections, enquiries, tests and appraisals.

19. (1) On or before December 1 in each year, Canada will submit to Saskatchewan a statement, certified by the Minister, exhibiting from the commencement of the project, and subject to clause 2 Saskatchewan will on December 31 next following, pay to Canada the amount of Saskatchewan's share as so certified less the amounts previously paid to Canada by Saskatchewan on account thereof.

(2) On or before December 1 in each year, Saskatchewan will submit to Canada a statement, certified by the Provincial Auditor of Saskatchewan, exhibiting from the commencement of the project,

(a) the amounts that have, on or before March 31 in that year been paid or become due and payable by Saskatchewan in respect of the project and that represent cost to be shared under this Agreement, and

(b) the share of the said amounts to be borne by Canada under this Agreement, and Canada will, on December 31 next following, pay to Saskatchewan the amount of Canada's share as so certified less amounts previously paid by Canada to Saskatchewan on account thereof.

(a) not less than fifty per cent thereof in cash, and

(b) the balance thereof by the delivery to Canada of obligations of the Province of Saskatchewan payable at the expiry of twenty years from the day on which the payment is due and payable under this clause, bearing interest at a rate determined by the Minister of Finance of Canada as representing the then current cost to Canada of long term borrowing by the Government of Canada together with a carrying charge of one-eighth of one per cent, the said interest to run from the day on which the payment is due and payable by Saskatchewan under this clause, except that Saskatchewan may, at the time of making the payment, pay any part of the amount specified in paragraph (a) by delivery of such obligations if the total amount of the obligations that Saskatchewan has delivered under this clause is not thereby caused to exceed fifty per cent of the total amount that Saskatchewan has become liable to pay to Canada under sub-clause (2).

(4) Canada may, at the option of the Minister, offset against any amount that is payable by Saskatchewan under paragraph (a) of sub-clause (3), any amount that is due and payable by Canada to Saskatchewan under this Agreement and such offset shall, for the purpose of this Agreement, constitute payment by Saskatchewan and Canada to the extent of the amount offset.

(5) Saskatchewan will inform Canada of its intention to deliver obligations under sub-clause (3) at least fifteen days prior to the day on which the payment is due by Saskatchewan to Canada in respect of which the obligations are to be delivered.

(6) Where the Minister and the Premier agree that Canada may discharge its obligations by payment of a sum certain pursuant to clause 6 or clause 12,

- (a) payment of the said sum shall be made in accordance with the agreement between the Minister and the Premier,
- (b) the cost of which the said sum is to be paid shall not be included in the statements submitted under sub-clause (2) and

(2) Where at any time it appears that an overpayment has been made by either party to the other in respect of cost to be shared under this Agreement, the amount of the overpayment shall be adjusted, at the option of the party that made it,

- (a) by payment in cash on demand, or

After which the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General was pleased to close the First Session of the Twenty-Fourth Parliament of Canada, with the following Speech:—

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

The Twenty-fourth Parliament has commenced with a most active and noteworthy session.

We have been glad to welcome this summer Her Royal Highness the Princess Margaret on her visit to Canada. We look forward with great pleasure to the presence in Canada next year of Her Gracious Majesty the Queen on the occasion of the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

During this present session you have welcomed and heard in Parliament the President of the United States, the President of the Federal Republic of Germany, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and the Prime Minister of Ghana. These visits have provided a valuable and timely opportunity for discussions of problems of mutual interest and for an exchange of impressions on broader issues.

My Government has been encouraged by indications of progress during the last few months in the field of disarmament and by recent developments in the Middle East situation but the general outlook remains uncertain and in particular, the current tension in the Far East is a source of deep concern.

My Government took an active role at the emergency special session of the General Assembly of the United Nations in promoting measures that would serve as a basis for a comprehensive effort to reduce tension and improve conditions in the Middle Eastern area.

My Ministers have welcomed the announcement by the United States and United Kingdom Governments of their readiness to suspend tests of nuclear weapons for one year while negotiations for a political agreement take place; they hope that as a result there will emerge an effective agreement among the nuclear powers continuing the suspension of testing under effective international supervision. The prospect of further technical talks to examine possible safeguards against surprise attack gives ground for hope of additional progress in this important field of disarmament.

My Ministers welcome the approval you have given to the important agreements for the integration of the air defence of North America. Measures are being worked out to ensure that such defence is maintained on an efficient and economical basis consistent with the rapid technical changes in this field. Furthermore, arrangements have been initiated for closer consultation by Ministers with members of the United States Administration in the field of defence policy.

Your support of programmes to provide practical assistance to the peoples of the less developed regions of the world through the medium of the United Nations, under the Colombo Plan and under special arrangements for the West Indies and Ghana has been further evidence of the desire of Canadians to participate in international programmes of economic as well as humanitarian importance.

You have had laid before you a report on the International Conference on the Law of the Sea held in Geneva early this year and the five Conventions agreed upon by that Conference. My Ministers will support the early convening of a second International Conference on the Law of the Sea to deal with the important questions left unsettled at Geneva.

My Government has been gratified to observe the improvement in the general economic conditions in Canada. It will continue its effort to increase employment and ameliorate the condition of those temporarily unable to find work.

During the present session you have enacted measures of major benefit to the people of Canada.

You have authorized an increase in the public funds made available under the National Housing Act to ensure the further progress of our housing programme.

You extended for a further six weeks during this year the period during which seasonal benefits were paid under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

You have provided for increases in the pensions of former members of the Civil Service, the Armed Forces and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

You have reviewed and improved the Veterans Insurance Act, the Returned Soldiers' Insurance Act and the Children of War Dead (Education Assistance) Act, and increased the benefits payable thereunder.

As a further interim measure to meet the needs of the grain producers in the Prairie Provinces, pending the working out of long term measures, you have provided an acreage payment to such producers. The Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act has been revised in the light of experience in its operation. The benefits of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act have been extended to an increased number of farmers. The lending power of the Canadian Farm Loan Board has been enlarged. The Canada Agricultural Products Standards Act has been amended, and the amounts payable under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act have been increased.

You have approved the necessary arrangements with the Government of Saskatchewan for carrying out the South Saskatchewan Project and provided for the immediate commencement of construction of the main dam in this important undertaking.

You have made provision for the establishment of an office to assist small business in Canada.

You have provided a needed increase in the support furnished by Parliament for the universities of Canada.

The Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Act has been amended to set a definite and earlier date for the commencement of the payments authorized by it.

You have completely revised the legislation relating to taxes on estates, making it more equitable and practical as well as alleviating the burden on smaller estates. You have revised the Income Tax Act, and increased the exemptions from sales tax under the Excise Tax Act.

The National Capital Act which you have passed will make possible the more effective continuation of the long term development and improvement of the National Capital and its immediate environs.

You have passed an important Act to provide for the regulation of broadcasting in Canada and to ensure the continued operation of a national broadcasting system that will furnish a varied and comprehensive service of a high standard that is Canadian in content and character.

In the Parole Act you have created an orderly and permanent basis for the reform and rehabilitation of those confined to penitentiaries and their integration into society as useful citizens.

There has been placed before you a Bill of Rights for the recognition and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms in Canada coming within the jurisdiction of Parliament. There will now be an opportunity for this measure to receive careful study before action on it is finally taken by Parliament.

Other measures enacted at this session include Acts to approve the income tax conventions with Belgium and the Belgian Congo, the Canadian National Railways Financing and Guarantee Act, the British Columbia Coast Steamship Service Act, an Act to incorporate the Lakehead Harbour Commissioners and an Act to authorize the construction of a bridge between Campobello Island and Maine. You have also amended the Railway Act, the Indian Act, the Criminal Code, the Penitentiary Act, the Lake of the Woods Control Board Act, the Loan Companies Act, the Trust Companies Act, the Maritime Coal Production Assistance Act, the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act, the Customs Tariff, the Customs Act, the Judges Act, the Financial Administration Act, the Yukon Act and the National Parks Act.

Members of the House of Commons:

My Ministers welcome the approval you have given for the operation of a simultaneous translation system in the House of Commons.

Your Committees have been more active than for many years past and show promise of contributing to the greater effectiveness of Parliament in the future.

I thank you for the provision you have made for all the essential public services and payments in the current fiscal year and in addition for the approval granted for the payments made under special warrants last year.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

I pray that Divine Providence may continue to bless, protect and guide our nation.

The Honourable the Speaker of the Senate then said:

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

It is the will and pleasure of the Honourable the Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General that this Parliament be prorogued until Thursday, the sixteenth day of October next, to be here holden; and that this Parliament is accordingly prorogued until Thursday, the sixteenth day of October next.
