BUSINESS BETTER ON NORTH SHORE

Lumber Business Brightening Up and Things Look Better in All Lines.

(Moncton Times.) Mr. Hal Adamson, of the Atlantic Unicever Co., and Mrs. Adamson, together with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cairns, of St. John, returned last week-end from a ten days' motor trip along the North Shore and the St. John River. During the trip they experienced fine weather throughout, and made the circuit of the province without mishap.

Speaking to a Times representative last evening Mr. Adamson said the trip had been a most enjoyable one and that the party was highly pleased with the beauty of the scenery along the route and especially the scenery along the Bay of Chaleur and the Restigouche River. The route taken was from Moncton to Matapedia by way of Newcastle, Bathurst, Dalhousie and Campbellton. On the return trip they turned off at Newcastle and proceeded to Fredericton thence down the St. John River to St. John, from which Mr. and Mrs. Adamson returned to Moncton by rail.

While away both Mr. Adamson and Mr. Cairns combined business with pleasure, transacting business on behalf of their firms at the various towns on the route. In this way they were enabled to get a good idea of the business prospects in the places visited. With regard to the North Shore, Mr. Adamson said that the outlook was very optimistic. The lumber business is improving and the fishing season has been good. On the Miramichi there were half a dozen or more ships loading lumber for export. Three steamers were loading lumber at Campbellton, and a four-masted schooner was loading at Cross Point, opposite Campbellton. It appears that most of the heavy stocks of lumber that many of the companies have been carrying for the British Government have been greatly reduced and it would seem that there would be considerable cutting of timber this winter.

According to Mr. Adamson, the lumbermen state that the work in the woods this winter would be greatly increased but for the adverse stumpage rates existing in this province. It was claimed that a great deal of harmful competition existed between the lumbermen of New Brunswick and those of Quebec to the detriment of the former because of the fact that the stumpage rate in Quebec was only $1.50 and the scale amounted out approximately 100 per cent whereas in New Brunswick the rate is $4.00 and the scale pans out only about 85 per cent. Business in Campbellton, said Mr. Adamson, is thriving and the town will soon put on a much better appearance due to the fact that the Main street is being paved, a much needed improvement. A new hotel is also being erected there, and when completed it will be a first class house with all modern improvements.

At the same time, the invention of a new type of steam propelled engine, designed to burn "water gas" as disclosed. The model already constructed has only twenty-six operating parts, and was designed to operate a motor delivery truck. The average automobile truck has 375 parts. A steam airplane engine, consisting of only eleven parts, as against 2,800 in the Liberty motor, is being constructed.

The fuel and the engine were designed and assembled by Joseph Watrous Prosper, born 57 years ago in Carolina, R. I. is a former Rhode Island school teacher who turned automotive engineer. Prosper is emphatically confident of the possibilities of his invention. Equally confident was Elbridge Gerry Snow, president of the Home Insurance Company, who said that he and a number of unnamed business and banking associates were backing Mr. Prosper.

"I consider," he said, "that we have one of the greatest inventions since the time of the revolution, one which is revolutionary in power, heating and lighting."

Mr. Snow said that options had been taken on several patents, one near Newark, N. J., for the purpose of turning out the "automatic siphon fuel burner," as the oil-water fuel maker is called, and the "duplex steam motor engine," in large quantities. He added that engineers and officials of several big corporations had witnessed tests of the fuel and engine, but that efforts to purchase the rights to the invention were not being considered.

"I desire to add," said Mr. Snow, "that the use of the use of coal may be regarded as in sight, and the public need not worry over the fuel conditions, as cheap fuel made of oil and water for all purposes is in sight."

OUR ROADS GOOD.

A St. John man recently returned from a motor trip to Nova Scotia says he will never again complain of the roads in this province after having driven over those in the sister province. He said that while many of our roads were in bad condition and could stand rebuilding, the roads in Nova Scotia as a whole were in much worse condition than ours and that we did not know what bad roads were. ### EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Graphic,
Campbellton, N. B.

Dear Editor:
In reading our local Canadian History, in helping my children to prepare their school lessons, I think I find an error on the part of the historian, which should be of local interest. If I am correct. On page 280, the following occurs, "The French vessels driven up the Restigouche to Petit Roche nearly opposite where Campbellton now stands, were captured or destroyed." This no doubt refers to "Petit Rochelle," a village of 1500 souls, situated on the site of the farm now owned by Mr. Babcock, but better known as the Pat Smith farm. Any history I have read, touching events of that day, July 1669 always spelled the name as I have written it, and local writers, in referring to that settlement always make it as I have. If Petit Rochelle is right, why teach the children it should be Petit Roche. Perhaps you can enlighten the readers, or refer it to the Supt. Mr. Carter. Yours, etc., DAD.

HATS.
FERGUSON & WALLACE.

PAINT NOT SEIZED.
The Canadian government paint said to have been stolen from one of the C. M. M. steamers and sold to a local contractor was not seized, but the local collector of customs was informed by the contractor that he had been paid, and offered to send it to the Customs, just as soon as it was discovered that there was any doubt about its source of supply.

Enthusiasm Over Coal Find in Sudbury District at a High Pitch.

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 27.—A seam of pure anthracite coal with slate above and below was reached, twenty inches below the surface in the Larchwood area, about twenty-two miles from Sudbury by A. F. A. Coyne, the Toronto geologist, and his gang of experts and miners Friday afternoon. Samples of the coal were brought to this town by Coyne and are on display. It is claimed that the quality is identical to the one as is found near the surface in the Pennsylvania fields. Mr. Coyne claims that he will be able to supply coal for the people of Sudbury within the next two weeks. Enthusiasm in the district has reached a high pitch.

The geologist left this town last night with several bags of the new found coal, samples of which will be sent to the leading universities and to the continent for analysis. Work will be continued in the coal area on Monday.

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Choking and Gasping for Breath
Relieved by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

"In 1919, I was taken with Bronchial Asthma and no one knows what I suffered with it during the winter."

My husband, Mr. J. M. PENNINGTON, said he could do nothing for me.

"In the spring of 1920, I was taking 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a few days, the choking spells stopped."

"I have now wanted to tell other sufferers who have the same trouble about 'Fruit-a-tives' for I know how they must suffer."

Some thought the Asthma would come back on me as winter came on, but it has not, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives'.

Box a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

It's Only Fair.

In the wild and woolly west a game of poker was in progress. A tenderfoot, looking on, saw one of the players deal himself four aces from the bottom of the pack. The tenderfoot whispered indignantly to another onlooker:

"Did you see that?"

"What?" asked the other.

"That swindler dealt himself four aces!" the tenderfoot hissed.

"Waal," was the astonished reply, "wasn't it his deal?"

ARE EAGER TO CONVERT BOND

Drive Started by Finance Minister Likely to be a Big Success.

Ottawa, Aug. 30.—"Canadians for Canada" seems to be the slogan in the conversion loan drive, for it is a drive on the part of investors to get an opportunity to extend their credit to the dominion in these times when money is so hard to come by.

On Aug. 15 an invitation was extended to all those who held Victory Loan bonds of the 1917 issue, which were due this fall, to convert their paper into new bonds which would be given by the government at the same rate of 5 1/2 per cent. The new bonds to mature either in five years or ten years.

The total sum of the 1917 issue was $175,000,000. It is now confidently believed by finance officials that at least 90 per cent of the holders will extend their loans to the country.

Small holders all over Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific are asking for the new bonds and now the big holders are coming in in carloads the individual applications running as high as $200,000 and most of them are asking for the ten-year bonds.

Those who are asking for their money and the redemption of their 1917 bonds are apologetic for doing, explaining that their financial circumstances prevent them from

On Sept. 1, when the books close, a splendid response by the Canadian people to assist in the financing of their government will have been completed.

POSTAL C.O.D. PARCEL DELIVERY

Another Step Forward in the Services Will Start on October 1st.

October first will see another step forward in the service which the post office department of the Dominion is rendering the public at large, for on that date the new C.O.D. delivery of parcels will be started. This will be a great convenience to the purchasing public and to the business men as well. It will enable the merchant to do business with any and every one, regardless of whether he knows the rating of the party ordering, and the buyer can do his purchasing by long distance, and pay for the goods when they arrive.

The instructions for the new service were received yesterday at the local post office. The C.O.D. privilege will be available only at post offices which conduct a money order business and on rural free delivery routes which start from a money order office. For instance, those living on the R.F.D. route to St. Martin's, may avail themselves of this service as the mail is made up from St. John, a money order office. Amounts up to $100 will be collected in this way, the charge for the service being 15 cents on amounts under $50 and 20 cents on all amounts from $50 to $100. This must be paid by stamps, by the sender of the parcel and the cost of the money order, by which the amount is remitted to the sender of the parcel is paid by the recipient. The payment of the amount for sending the parcel C.O.D. does not really cost the sender very much, as it covers the insurance or registration, as the case may be. Insurance in the case of parcel post and registration in the case of other classes of post matter.

A special tag has been provided for these C.O.D. parcels which is in effect an address label and receipt in one. It is printed in four sections. One is a receipt for the sender, the second is for the office where the parcel is mailed, the third for the office receiving the parcel and the fourth section for the money order department.

WAVE OF UNREST SWEEPING WORLD

Hon. Arthur Meighen Sounds a Warning at Regina Canadian Club.

Regina Sask. Sept. 1.—"The superstructure of the present civilization is being supported by an ever-narrowing column of intellectually powerful individuals," declared Hon. Arthur Meighen in an address to the Regina Canadian Club and the Women's Canadian Club, yesterday.

The former Premier sounded a warning that serious thought should be given to the present wave of unrest sweeping the world if the present civilization is not to be swept downward into the ruins of former ages.

He did not touch on political questions.

The death of Mrs. Maymie M. Crockett, wife of Mr. H. M. Crockett took place at Lowell, Mass., on August 28. Deceased who was twenty-nine years of age, was a daughter of Michael M. This was strongly evidenced by the many and beautiful floral tributes.

She is survived by a bereaved husband, her father, Mr. Michael M. Ferguson, four sisters, Mrs. Wm. Ryan, Sellarville, P. Q., Mrs. Erving Bigelow, Mobely, Missouri, Adelaide at home and Mrs. Stewart Kelly of this town; and eight brothers, Fred of Vancouver, Jeffrey of Saskatchewan, David, William and George at home and Guy and Winston of this town, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

CALL AT FRASER MILL

Said to Have Been Drinking and Lay Down on Carriage to Saws.

Newcastle, Sept. 5.—A fearful warning was given those who are tempted to stray from the straight course of sobriety in a narrowly averted accident at the Fraser mills of Saturday evening. The mills have been running night and day and were shut down for temporary repairs for two hours. In that interlude one of the workmen quenched his thirst with something stronger than a soft drink and when he returned to work he was drowsy. Not being particular where he took his slumbers he lay down on the chains which feed the main slasher saws and was soon sound asleep. The mill machinery was started and the chains had carried the sleeper to within a bare inch or two of the saws when he was seen and snatched from certain death. So deep was his sleep that he did not waken when rescued and it was some time before he was informed of how close he had been to a horrible death.

QUEEN PATCHEN AND
CECIL McKINNON
TOOK THE HONORS

(Special to Graphic).
The horse races held on Labor Day were not all that they should have been as there were only two outside horses. The track was in excellent condition but the time values slow. It was a gala day for Cornier who drove two winners. We wonder how he would look on horse back as the galloping races proved as exciting as any.

Lady Carr was not in her best form she should have done better. Queenie Patchen was in the able hands of Cornier and she did not lift her nose. Major Brennan is an old timer that should be given a rest.

The Milligan horse was not called upon to exert herself as the Cool horse would not keep his feet. We wonder what he would do if he had his hobbles. The McKinnon mare was at her best. In the running race Caporecco led all the way chased by Prohibition and King Tyler; but when they reached the quarter King Tyler had a puncture or perhaps he thought he was delivering bread for he would not go any further.

LABOR DAY EVENTS.

Horse races and two fine exhibitions of baseball constituted the chief events here on Labor Day. A large crowd visited the race track and although the event was not especially engaging, all hands were amused.

A strong baseball nine from Mont Joli met the locals on the O'Leary diamond in two interesting contests at 10.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m. respectively. The Dickie-Roy battery handled the pill in the morning game, while Cyr, Pelletier, Boulay, Lavoie, McLean, Lloyd and Dobson completed the lineup. Dickie pitched a fine game while Roy was as dependable as usual on the receiving end. The other players all rendered good support. The home men were alive to almost every opportunity while the outfielders thrilled the crowd with their skill in stopping long drives. The visitors put up a fine fight contributing some very pretty work.

MONT JOLI VS CAMPBELLTON
Morning Game.

The morning game scheduled for 10.30 opened favorably for the locals for they chalked up one score in their first after Mont Joli, first at bat, had played a no-run inning. The visitors scored once in their second but Dickie, well supported, held them at that. The locals began to find Dube better for in their half of the second they got three snappy hits which resulted in bringing two men home. The contest now began to pick up speed. The visitors began to show more spirit and the Campbellton fielders began to exhibit some snappy plays. Dickie on the mound began to warm up in good shape but his opponents got one safe hit in the first half of the third section and chalked up another run.

In the last half of the third the locals failed to find Dube to advantage and consequently hoisted their first goose-egg. In their fourth inning, Mont Joli contributed some heavy hitting and with two batsmen down a honest effort in their last inning but a worked two men around the circuit.

Dickie's good work in the box made the next inning a short one for the visitors and although two grounders got men on bases, no runs resulted. The last half of this section was equally short but the locals got one man home on hits to centre and right field.

The next chapter opened with a doubleplay by the Campbellton battery which disposed of Mont Joli's first batter at the first sack. McLean helped the visitors when he failed to catch an easy fly and two hits off Dickie brought two runners home. The feature of the last half of this section was a two-base hit by Roy which allowed Pelletier and McLean to score. Roy himself, however, blundered and was tagged at second.

In their seventh the visitors succeeded in getting a man on first. Then Levesque slammed out a three-bagger which brought the runner home while he gained the platter through an error by Roy. The local fielders fumbled the ball badly in this inning but Dickie's good work averted danger. When the locals came to bat in their half of the seventh Lavoie made first on a grounder to left field, stole to second and then made home on a hit by Cyr who got to second but died there. The first of the eighth was a short episode and availed the visitors nothing. McLean scored for the locals in the last half of this inning but two snappy double plays sent Campbellton back to the field. With two men down Mont Joli made an honest effort in their last inning but a worked two men around the circuit.

MONT JOLI 7—C'TON. 10.

Afternoon Game.

The afternoon game was even more engaging than the morning one and was more closely contested. The bleachers were crowded to capacity and left field was bordered by a host of automobiles. Then there was a goodly gathering of supporters stationed behind the platter. The Rattray-Allingham battery held the visitors under control but that was only in average form recording only five strike outs. However he had excellent support from both basemen and outfielders. Pratt played at third in place of Boulay in the afternoon game while Dunham relieved Lloyd and Matthews attended second base instead of Lavoie. The contest was replete with thrills including those supplied by Dunham and Cyr who effected several sensational catches. The visiting nine gave an exhibition of good snappy ball. A. Thibault on the mound and M. Dube as backstop kept the locals from running away with the chalk. When at last they kept the local players on edge for every member of their squad seems to be endowed with the ability to hit the pill on the nose unless luck is dead against him.

Cyr opened proceedings in the afternoon contest by promptly establishing himself on first. McLean knocked out a two-base hit and sneaked to third while Cyr stole home. Dunham brought McLean in. Levesque swung the stick first for the visitors but his fine drive to centre field was bagged by Dunham who made a very pretty catch. Nadeau followed with a two-bagger. Dupere was also caught by Dunham but Rousseau slammed out a double which brought Nadeau home. In the first half of the second nothing was achieved by the locals, for although Allingham got to second, Dobson was tagged, Rattray fanned and Cyr was caught out in left field. The last half of this section was also short and fast for Michael fanned, R. Thibault was caught neatly by Cyr in right field and Dube caught at first. In the first half of the third inning Pratt got to first on a hit and stole second but died there when the third man went down. The chief features of the last half of the third were a two-base hit by Thibault and a snappy double play by the locals which put Nadeau out at first. The visitors played well in this inning and brought three men across the home plate before Allingham ended the fun by smothering a fly by Michael. Mont Joli now led by two runs and suspense ran high in their fourth. Campbellton scored once on an error by their opponents. Heavy hitting by Levesque and Nadeau forner were responsible for the eau and sensational base-stealing by two runs secured by Mont Joli in their half of this section. Dunham again smothered a long drive to centre field by Dupere.

The locals put over some nice work in the fifth bringing home three men. The chief features of this section were a two-base walk by Matthews and some clever base-stealing by McLean. The visitors failed to score in their half of this chapter for a neat double play ended the inning at a promising moment. In the sixth Rattray walked and stole to third, while Cyr was endeavoring to get a walk at the nigger. But the visitors were equal to the occasion and no runs resulted. In the second half of the sixth a two-base hit by Lamontagne assisted in bringing one man home. Rattray struck out the third man at a critical moment but Mont Joli again led by one run.

Pratt opened the seventh with a single. McLean was tagged at first while Pratt stole second. Dunham's double allowed Pratt to score. Matthews fly was swallowed by Levesque at first base. Dunham made third while Dobson got to first on a heavy grounder to left field. While Allingham was at bat Dunham scored on a timely steal from third. Dobson reached second but died there when Allingham's drive to right field was neatly stopped by R. Thibault. The locals now led by one run and when Rattray followed this by two strikeouts in the last half of the section and A. Thibault lost a nice clout in right field the visitors seemed to lose all confidence although they worked gamely till the last minute of play. Moreover they were somewhat handicapped by having to keep Michael in the line up as he had injured his leg in the previous inning. The visitors failed to score again and having tasted victory, the locals began to sweep the field, bringing home two more runs and ending the game with a 10-7 score in their favor.

THE PROBLEM OF

THE MENTALLY DEFECTIVE

(Dr. J. G. Shearer.)

The mentally defective constitute, by no fault of their own one of the greatest and most perplexing of social problems. This fact is all too little understood and appreciated.

It is usually estimated that from 1 1/2 to 2 percent of the population are below par mentally. On that basis there are in Canada from 135,000 to 180,000 of these unfortunate. Some are idiots, utterly helpless and unable to care for themselves. Others are imbeciles, a grade higher than idiots but unable to support themselves, and requiring constant oversight and protection. Between the imbecile and the normal are the much larger proportion who because they are not easily detected constitute the greater menace. After they reach adult years they remain mere children in mentality and self-control, yet possessed with all the passions, propensities, and desires of adults.

It is easy to see what a menace this combination constitutes, to themselves and to the community. Their sexual propensities are unusually strong, and they have neither mental vision to foresee the consequences of indulgence, nor moral self-control to govern their passions. They multiply twice as fast as normal folk, and always reproduce their own kind and this quite regardless of whether they are married or not. In the Board of Education offices in Vancouver, a family chart showing that some years ago an alcoholic man married a feeble minded woman. Twelve children were born. Three fortunately died young. The nine who grew up are all feeble minded. One of these is a young woman now in her twenties, is the illegitimate mother of five children all feeble minded. Fourteen mental derivate, each one a social problem from one marriage that never should have been allowed.

It is estimated that 1/1000 best qualified to judge that two-thirds of all prostitution is due to feeble mindedness. Moreover a large proportion of children born out of marriage have feeble-minded mothers. These women living in promiscuous sexual indulgence soon develop venereal diseases, and infect all their male associates. Many of these associates are normal young men who afterwards marry, and infect their innocent wives, and pass on the dread heritage of these terrible diseases to their children. It is estimated that not less than forty percent of venereal disease is due to this source.

At least fifty percent of all crimes in general are committed by these unfortunate. Their uncontrolled passions lead to assaults, common or violent, to incendiarism, to murder, to burglary, to banditry, to the demoralization of children of both sexes. Many of the epidemics of vice in schools is due to the presence of these children born out of marriage, and the prevention of the reproduction of such a group of feeble-minded girls or boys is both a social and a public health problem. A subsequent article will show how the remedy and the evil rapidly spreads. Miss- for this great social evil.

CHAPTER I

When John Stuart Webster, an engineer and hick-up-of-dust at that time, flagged the S. P. L. S. L. Limited at a blistered hour in Death valley, California, had definitely resolved to do something. To begin, he would invade dining car at the first call to d and order approximately twenty large worth of ham and eggs, providing as, as all who know certify, the pinnacle of epicurean light to an old sourdough coming of the wilderness with a healthy roll and a healthier appetite.

Following the ham and eggs Webster planned to saturate his from soul to vermillion appendix nicotine, which he purposed obtaining from tobacco with nicotine in a week since he had smoked nothing with an odor even remotely tobacco, for the August temperature Death valley is no respecter of persons in any man or his tobacco, arrival in Salt Lake City his would really begin. Webster does chartering a taxicab and proceeding forthwith to a hotel where he engaged a sunny room with a bath, the bathroom, climb blithely in and for two hours at least, for it was eight months since he had a regular bath and he purposed in the most of his opportunity. His drawn ablutions at length over would don a silken dressing gown slippers, order up a barber and proceed to part with enough hair whisksers to upholster an auto and upon the completion of his social adventures he would secure person in a suit of mauve-colored pajamas, climb into bed and there for forty-eight hours, meeting long enough to take another order up periodical constipation ham and eggs, and incidentally, certain that a friendly side-whiskerwalla hadn't crawled under blanket with him.

So much for John Stuart Webster. Now for the gentleman he No one—not even the Pullman I shrewd judge of mankind that he could have discerned in the ch that flagged the Limited the bu of fashion that was to be. A shony George raised the vestibule form, opened the car-door and out, he had no confidence in the sun-baked big man standing in train. ## CHAPTER I

When John Stuart Webster, mining engineer and lick-up-of-dust on distant trails, figured the S. L. A. S. L. Limited at a blistered board station in Death Valley, California, he had definitely resolved to do certain things. To begin, he would invade the dining car at the first call to dinner and order approximately twenty dollars' worth of ham and eggs, which provender is, as all who know will certify, the pinnacle of epicurean delight to an old sour-dough coming out of the wilderness with a healthy bank-roll and a healthier appetite.

Following the ham and eggs, Mr. Webster planned to saturate himself from soul to vermiform appendix with alcohol, which he purposed obtaining from tobacco with nicotine in it. It was a week since he had smoked anything with an odor even remotely like tobacco, for the August temperature in Death Valley is no respecter of moisture in any man or his tobacco. Upon arrival in Salt Lake City his spree would really begin. Webster designed chartering a taxicab and proceeding forthwith to a hotel where he would engage a sunny room with a bath, fill the bathtub, climb blithely in and soak for two hours at least, for it was nearly eight months since he had had a regular bath and he purposed making the most of his opportunity. His long-drawn ablutions at length over, he would don a silken dressing gown and slippers, order up a barber and proceed to part with enough hair and whiskers to upholster an automobile and upon the completion of his tonsorial adventures he would encase his person in a suit of mauve-colored silk pajamas, climb into bed and stay there for forty-eight hours, merely waking long enough to take another bath, order up periodical consignments of ham and eggs, and incidentally, make certain that a friendly side-winder or chuck-walla hadn't crawled under the blanket with him.

So much for John Stuart Webster's plans. Now for the gentleman himself. No one—not even the Pullman porter, shrewd judge of mankind that he was—could have discerned in the chrysalis that figured the Limited the butterfly of fashion that was to be. As the ebony George raised the vestibule platform, opened the car and stepped out, he had no confidence in the lean, sun-baked big man standing by the train. Finally the fellow was asked, a first-class passenger but a wandering prospector, for he was dog-dirty, a ruin of rags and hairy as a tarantula. The only clean thing about him was a heavy-calibered automatic pistol of the army type, swinging at his hip.

"Day coach" he coughed up in front of the knight of the whiskers, and announced in disparaging tones and started to close down the platform.

"So I perceived," John Stuart Webster replied blandly. "I also observed that you failed to employ the title 'sir' when addressing a white man. Put that platform back and hop out here with your little stool, you saddle-colored son of Senegambia, or I'll make you a hard porter to catch."

"Tassah, yassah!" the porter spluttered, and obeyed instantly. Mr. Webster handed him a disreputable-looking suitcase and stepped aboard in state, only to be informed that there wasn't a vacant first-class berth on the train. "Yes, I know I'm dirty," the late arrival announced cheerfully, "but still, as Bobby Burns once remarked, 'a man's a man for a' that'—and I'm not unsanitary."

"I'm very sorry," the conductor replied perfectly and endeavored to pass on, but Webster secured a firm grip on his lapel and frustrated the escape.

"You're not sorry," the ragged wanderer declared, "not one little bit. You're only apprehensive. However, you needn't be. There is no wild life on me, brother, I assure you. 'But I tell you, the train is full up. You'll have to root in the day coach or the tourist. I'm very sorry—'"

"Nevertheless, despite your deep grief, something tells me you're speeding, so while I must, of necessity, accept your suggestion, said acceptance will be but temporary. In about two hours, you fellow, you're going to make the alarming discovery that you have bits in your belly." And with a whiskey grin which, under the circumstances, was charming in its absolute freedom from malice, Mr. Webster departed for the day coach.

Two hours later the conductor found him in the aforementioned day coach, engaged in a mild game of poker with a multi-skinner, a Chinaman, an aged prospector, and a half-breed Indian, and waited until Mr. Webster, on a bob-tailed flush, bluffed the Chinaman out of a dollar-and-a-half pot.

"Are you Mr. John S. Webster?"

"Your assumption that I am that person is so eminently correct that it would be a waste of time for me to dispute it," Webster replied quietly, "and I'll just prove that you're not the only clairvoyant on this train. I'm going to tell you something about yourself, in your pocket you have your pay-check originates; it is short, round and comprehensive, containing an order which you are going to obey. It reads somewhat as follows:—"

"My friend, John S. Webster, wives me from Blank that he boarded train at Blank and was refused first-class accommodation because he looked like a hobo. Give him the best you have in stock, if you have to throw somebody off the train to accommodate him." Signed, "Sweeney."

"Do I hit the target?"

The conductor nodded. "You win, Mr. Webster," he admitted.

"Occasionally I lose, old timer. Well?"

"No offense, Mr. Webster, no offense. I can let you have a statement—"

"That's trading talk. I'll take it."

The conductor gave him his receipt and led him back to the stateroom in the observation car. At the door Webster handed him a five-dollar bill. "For you, son," he said gently, "just take the sting out of what I'm about to tell you. Now that I possess your receipt and know that ten men and a boy can't take it away from me, I'm going to tell you how Sweeney is."

Already he suspected he had been out-generaled.

"Sweeney," said Mr. Webster, "is the chief clerk in one of Chicago's most pretentious hotels and a young man who can find all the tangles of a situation without working it out in logarithms. I wired him the details of my predicament; he heard the Macedonian cry and kicked in. Next, is it not?"

The conductor grinned. "I hate to take your money," he declared.

"Don't. Just at present I'm very flush. Yes, sir, I'm as prosperous as a yearling burro up to his ears in alfalfa and the only use I have ever found for money is to make other people happy with it, thereby getting some enjoyment out of it myself. When I'm broke I'll make some more."

And Mr. Webster retired to his hard-won sanctuary, where he removed as much alkali and perspiration as he could, washed his long hair and whiskers, manicured his finger nails with a jack-knife, changed his shirt, provided five minutes of industry for George, with his whiskers and brush, and set himself patiently to await the first call to dinner.

Presently a pink-jowled, well-curried, freshly dressed big man, of about Webster's age, passed in the corridor, going toward the head of the train. An instant later a woman's voice and very distinctly:

"I do not know you, sir; I do not wish to know you, and it is best of you to persist in addressing me, if you do not stop your annoying attention, I shall call the conductor."

"Ah! Beauty in distress," John Stuart Webster soliloquized. "I look so much like an Angora goat I might as well butt in." He stepped to the door of his stateroom. A girl stood in the vestibule, confronting the man who had just passed Webster's door. Webster bowed.

"Madame, or mademoiselle, as the case may be," he said, "upon other said blip, my sole purpose in presuming to address you is to suggest that there is not the slightest necessity for taking this matter up with the conductor. I am here and very much at your service."

The girl turned—and John Stuart Webster's heart stopped twice in rapid succession, like a trout newly grassed. She was as lovely as a royal flush. Her starry glance began at his mine's boots, traveled up his old soiled, whipcord trousers, over his light blue chambray shirt and found the man behind the whiskers. She favored him with a quick, curious scrutiny and a grave, sweet smile. "Thank you, much, sir," she answered, and passed down the corridor to the observation car.

"Well, old timer," Webster greeted the fellow who had been annoying her, "how about you? What do you think we ought to do about this little affair?"

"The sensible thing would be to do nothing," Webster declared.

"That's just what I want," Webster declared brightly, "and wasn't the immortal Huckleberry Finn who remarked that anybody that'd take a dare would suck eggs and steal sheep?" He was silent a few seconds, appraising his man. "I suppose you commenced operations by moving into her section and asking if she would like to have the window open and enjoy the fresh air. She refused you, but being a persistent devil, you followed her into the observation car, and in all probability you egged her at lunch and ruined her appetite. And just now, when you met her in this vestibule, you doubtless justified her, begged her pardon and without waiting to be introduced asked her to have lunch with you and was refused."

"Well, the fellow asked better, didn't he?"

"It's all bad form. You shouldn't try to make a mark on a lady. I don't know who she is, of course, but she's not common and for the sake of the other hat bore she I always respect and protect a good woman and while I'm out of these that do not."

"—out of these that do not," Webster replied quietly, "and I'll just prove that you're not the only clairvoyant on this train. I'm going to tell you something about yourself, in your pocket you have your pay-check originates; it is short, round and comprehensive, containing an order which you are going to obey. It reads somewhat as follows:—"

"My friend, John S. Webster, wives me from Blank that he boarded train at Blank and was refused first-class stop five minutes for water and order."

"Remain right here and let me off as soon as the train comes to a stop."

When the train alid to a grinding halt and the porter opened the car door, Webster pointed. "Out!" he said.

"This is no nice place to pull off a swap."

"See here, neighbor, I don't want to have any trouble with you. I know it. All the same, you're going to have it—or come with me to that young lady and beg her pardon."

"All right, I'll apologize," and he started forward as if to pass Webster in the vestibule, on his way to the observation car, neither the subject of his annoying attention had gone. Two steps brought him within striking distance of his enemy, and before Webster could dodge, a stinging right-handed blow landed on his jaw and set him back on his haunches in the vestibule.

It was almost a knockout—almost, but not quite. As Webster's body struck the floor the big automatic came out of the holster, swinging in a weak circle, it covered the other.

"That was a daisy," Webster mumbled. "It's more before I head clear, I'll put four bullets into you before you reach the corridor."

He waited about a minute, then with the gun he pointed to the car door and the man stepped out. Webster handed the porter his gun and followed; two minutes later he returned, dragging his assailant by the collar. Up the steps he jerked the big battered hulk and tossed it in the corner of the vestibule, just as the girl came through the car, making for the diner up ahead.

Again she favored him with that calm, grave, yet vitally interested nod, nodded appreciatively, made as if to pass on, changed her mind, and said:

"Who is he?" the conductor queried. "You are a very courteous gentleman."

"You are a very courteous gentleman," Webster bowed.

"There was nothing else to do, nothing that he could say under the circumstances. To use his chivalry as a wedge to open acquaintance never occurred to him—but his whiskers did occur to him. Hastily he backed into his stateroom and closed the door, presently he rose and surveyed himself critically in the small mirror over the washstand.

"No, Johnny," he murmured, "we can't go into the diner now. We're too blamed disreputable. We were bad enough before that big swine hung the shanty on our right eye, but now our physical and personal feelings, far be it from us to parade our irreducible orb in public. Besides, one look at that queen is enough to do us for the remainder of our natural life, and a second look, minus a proper introduction, would only drive us into a suicide's grave." He sighed, rang for the porter and told him to send a waiter for his order, since he would find breakfast in the privacy of his stateroom.

And when the waiter came for the order, such was Mr. Webster's mental perturbation that ham and eggs were furnished for his thoughts. He ordered a steak with French fried potatoes.

"John Stuart Webster passed a restless night. Sleep came to him in hourly installments, from which he would rouse to ask himself whether it was worth while to continue to go through the motions of living, or alight at the next station, seek a lonely and unrequited spot and there surrender to outrageous fortune. It was altogether damnable. In a careless moment, Fate had accorded him a glimpse of the only woman he had ever met and desired to meet again—for Webster was essentially a man's man, and his profession and environment had utilized against his opportunities for meeting extraordinary women; and extraordinary women were the only kind that could hope to challenge his serious attention. Fate had accorded him a signal opportunity for highly combat in the service of this extraordinary woman, and in the absence of a formal introduction, what man could desire another opportunity for getting acquainted? If only their meeting had but been delayed two weeks, ten days, a week! Once free of his ugly cocon of rags and whiskers, the butterfly Webster would not have hesitated one brief instant to inform himself of that young lady's address, following his summary disposal of her tormentor.

But in all things there is a limit, and John Stuart Webster's right eye constituted a deadline beyond which, as a gentleman, he dared not venture; so with a heavy heart he bowed to the inevitable. Brilliant and mysterious as a meteorite she had flashed once across his horizon and was gone. In the privacy of his stateroom Webster had ham and eggs for breakfast. He was lighting his second cigar when the porter knocked and entered with an envelope.

"Lady in the observation-car asked me to deliver this to you, sah," he announced importantly.

"The distressed lady desires to thank the gentleman in stateroom A for his chivalry of yesterday. She is profoundly sorry that in her service the gentleman in stateroom A was so unfortunate as to acquire a red eye with blue trimmings."

"The distressed lady desires to thank the gentleman in stateroom A for his chivalry of yesterday. She is profoundly sorry that in her service the gentleman in stateroom A was so unfortunate as to acquire a red eye with blue trimmings."

"The distressed lady desires to thank the gentleman in stateroom A for his chivalry of yesterday. She is profoundly sorry that in her service the gentleman in stateroom A was so unfortunate as to acquire a red eye with blue trimmings."

John Stuart Webster swore his mightiest oath. "By the twelve apostles, Simon Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James, Jude and Simon, and not omitting Judas Iscariot, the scaly scoundrel who betrayed his Lord and Master!" He searched through an old wallet until he discovered a fairly clean professional card, across the bottom of which he wrote, "Thank you, J. S. W." and sent it to the no-longer-distressed lady.

"The most signal adventure of my life is now over," he soliloquized and turned to his cigar. "For the sake of my self-respect, I had to let her know I'm not a hobo! And now to the task of framing up a scheme for future acquaintance. I must learn her name and destination; so as a preliminary I'll interview the train conductor."

He did and under the unflinching influence of a five-dollar bill the conductor bent a respectful ear to the Websterian message.

"In Car Seven," he began, "there is a young lady. I do not know what section she occupies neither do I know her name and destination. I only know what she looks like."

"The conductor nodded. "And you want to ascertain her name and destination?"

"I do."

"All right. I have the unused portion of her transportation to return to her before we hit Salt Lake; her name is on the ticket and the ticket indicates her destination. I'll make a mental note of both as soon as I've identified her ticket."

A few hours later the conductor came to Webster's stateroom and handed him a card upon which was written:

"Dolores Toney. From Los Angeles, via San Pedro, Los Angeles & Salt Lake, to Salt Lake City, Denver & Rio Grande to Denver, Burlington to St. Louis, Illinois Central to New Orleans. Stop-over at Denver."

John Stuart Webster studied the name after the conductor withdrew. "That's a Spanish name," he soliloquized, "but for all that, she's not a parasite and her destination, I'll guess I'll take a chance and investigate."
